ANNUAL MEETING OF THE EAST LINCOLNSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

The Fourth Annual Meeting of the above Association was held at Kirton on July 14th, and was numerously attended by ringers from various parts of the district. There was, however, a very short attendance of clergy, a circumstance which provoked expressions of deep regret and disappointment, for Kirton being conveniently situated to several villages, it had been hoped that the clergymen from adjoining parishes would have honoured the association with their presence, and given a practical expression of their appreciation of the invaluable services rendered by the ringers. The popular president, the Rev. H. J. Cheales, of Friskney, was present, and for colleagues he had the Very Rev. the Dean of Lincoln, president of the North Lincolnshire Association, the Rev. S. Staffurth, of Frieston, and the Rev. C. B. Bevan, of Kirton. The proceedings consisted of bellringing, a special service and sermon in the parish church, a public luncheon at the "King's Head" Inn, and the annual meeting of the Association, concluding with further performances on the bells. The belfry was entered about ten o'clock, and the ringers at once commenced work, and rang 720 of Bob Minor, fourteen singles, four bobs, in thirty minutes. The ringers were—T. Cheatham (East Keal), 1; G. F. Clow (Sutton), 2; W. Vickers (West Keal), 3; J. Green (West Keal), 4; H. G. Daulton (West Keal), conductor, 5; and J. Sharpe (Frieston), 6. Later in the day 720 of Bob Minor, eighteen bobs and two singles, were rung in twenty-eight minutes by J. Sharpe, 1; A. O. Barber (Frieston), 2; T. Sharpe (Frieston), 3; F. Clow (Sutton), 4; G. F. Clow, 5; and E. Mason (Boston), conductor, 6. Subsequently 720 of Bob Minor, fourteen bobs and two singles, was rung in twenty-eight minutes by E. Mason, 1; J. A. Hand (West Keal), 2; A. O. Barber, 3; J. Sharpe, 4; T. Richardson (Kirton), 5; and G. F. Clow, (conductor), 6. A touch—168 of Grandsire Tripels, was rung by T. Richardson, 1; F. Mawer (Sibsey), 2; F. Devoto (Boston), 3; Rev. H. J. Cheales (Friskney), 4; E. Mason, conductor, 5; G. Clarke (Skirbeck), 6; G. F. Smith (Friskney), 7; and G. Clow, 8. Three 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles were rung by T. Meeds (Skirbeck), 1; G. Clarke (Skirbeck), 2; W. F. Harwood (Boston), 3; T. Routen (Skirbeck), 4; A. O. Barber, 5; G. Goodwin (Boston), conductor, 6. Three 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles were also rung by C. Harrison, 1; J. Oldacre (Algarkirk), 2; G. Clarke, 3; T. Routen, 4; S. Steeper (Frieston), 5; F. Devoto, conductor, 6. Early in the morning a company drove to Sutton, and several touches of Grandsire were rung by A. O. Barber, 1; J. Mawer, 2; F. Devoto (conductor), 3; Rev. H. J. Cheales, 4; E. Mason, 5; G. Clarke, 6; and G. F. Smith, 7. During the day a visit was paid to the church at Frampton, and six-scores of Grandsire were rung on the five bells by, C. Harrison, F. Clow, G. Oldacre, J. Sharpe, and S. Steeper (conductor).

At half-past twelve o'clock a special service was conducted in the parish church at Kirton by the Rev. C. B. Bevan. The lessons were read by the R. H. J. Cheales, and an appropriate sermon was preached by the very reverend the Dean of Lincoln. The choir, which was under the direction of Mr. T. Hand, of Algarkirk, rendered Stainer's Anthem "Sing a song of praise" in a capable manner. Miss Dickinson presided at the organ. The congregation was not very large. A collection was taken at the close of the service on behalf of the funds of the Association.

The Dean of Lincoln took for his text the words contained in the 42nd and following verses of the 12th chapter of the Gospel of St. Mark, "(42) And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites which were a farthing; (43) and He called unto Him His disciples, and saith unto them, 'Verily, I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which cast into the treasury; (44) For all they did cast in their abundance, but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living!'" He said:—

The Lord does not weigh man's gifts with the amount given—He does not weigh the smallness of the offering. What He looks to is the size of the store from which that offering comes. Well then, dear brethren, here, as it seems to me, we have a very important lesson for our gathering together here. We see plainly how all can, if they will, make an offering; there are none so poor but they may even give more than the richest people in the world. Here especially the last may be first, and the first last. God measures, you observe, our gifts, not by the amount of the gift, but by the sacrifice we make to give it. And a great point to remember is that our Lord Jesus Christ is now just as He was then, He knows what none can tell but Himself. He knows exactly what our gifts are—exactly what our opportunities are. He knows how much we offer, and the mind with which we offer it—it is not that which we give, but that which we keep back that tests our love for the Lord. It is not enough to offer to the Lord of that which costs us nothing. We may not be able to give much, but much or little, the real proof of our love is to give up for the sake of our Lord Jesus Christ, something—it matters not what; it may be money, it may be time, it may be care of others, but something we are glad to give. And so apply this to the matter which brings us here together to-day. Why are we here? We are met as brother-ringers in order that we may keep a festive day, and rightly we begin it by gathering ourselves here together in the House of God. We are met here together to take counsel how best to carry out that work which we have undertaken to do. And what is it we wish to do? You answer, it may be, to ring church bells. True, but then in what spirit are we to ring those bells? With what aim before us? Are we going to do our work merely for our amusement? Are we going to do the work merely because we have keen eyes and quick ears, and strong arms? Surely not, dear brethren. So to ring would indeed be to lose the very preciousness to our ringing. No; I trust, dear brethren, that you who are here gathered together this day have a higher and nobler aim before you. I trust you desire to offer up your strength and your skill to God's glory and for your fellows' weal. O, what a wonderful instrument, when we come to dwell upon it, is that small piece of metal which we call a bell. Think what the bell has to do. It speaks to us with sounds of joy when young hearts go forth from the House of God pledging their faith one to another to continue faithful unto life's end. It speaks to us at times of sorrow, when those whom we love are laid in their last resting-place. And above all it is, as it were, the very voice of the Church, inviting God's people to the House of God. It is a great and wonderful instrument, that Church bell, and what a great responsibility depends upon those who handle it. It is a great charge. It brings a very great reward if handled rightly, but only, dear brethren, believe me, by self-sacrifice. Let us not offer to the Lord of that which costs us nothing. What does self-sacrifice imply with regard to those who handle the church bells? First of all, surely it implies the maintenance of a high standard of moral life. Any one who handles these bells of God should consider that he is one specially set apart for a holy purpose. What does the Prophet say? "Be holy ye that handle the vessel of the Lord, be clean ye that handle the vessel of the Lord;" and those who have the great privilege of ringing the church bells should ever keep in mind that they belong to the House of God. In all society, in all places, that should be impressed upon their minds. They should say, "I am no common person: God called me for a special purpose—to invite my fellows into the holy house, and therefore my conversation and my behaviour must be above reproach; I must take care that no evil communications proceed out of these lips of mine; I must be careful that I bring no scandal upon the House of God by any impure or evil action; where the drunkards congregate together I must never be; where God's word, or God's sacrament, or God's Church, or God's people, or God's ministers are evil spoken of if I am there, I must lift up my voice and earnestly protest; and I must bring myself regularly to worship in the House of God." I remember the time when the ringers, shameful to say, where the last of all people to enter into the House of God. They rang their bells, and then passed away, just as if they were the bell ropes themselves, and had no connection or communication with the holy services in God's house. They who go into the belfry must go further—they must enter into the house of God. They must come to pray and to give praise—they must come to lead the congregation in as well as outside the church. Always maintain this—those who have the solemn office entrusted to them of inviting God's people to enter into His holy house ought to lead them further. They ought to lead them to the church and lead them to God's holy table, and never rest until they have fulfilled our dear Lord's own command—"This do in remembrance of Me." Never rest until you have fed upon the heavenly food yourselves. Unless you eat of the flesh and drink of the blood there is no life in you. How careful, how precious, how solemn, dear brethren, should the life of such as you become. And then in regard to the work itself. It must be done thoroughly. "Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Each body of ringers should never rest until they are thoroughly masters of their profession—not merely of tanging the bells, but of grasping the whole theory of the bells, of mastering the whole of the changes rung, and everything that makes the practice perfect. This is how the ringers should be, and this, let me tell you, is one of the great characteristics of English ringers. We do ring our bells. If you go abroad, as I have many times done, you never hear a bell decently rung. It is merely a kind of jangle—they never pull the bells up, and there is no real ringing—just a sound and that is all. Is it not the glory of the English ringers that they ring so well? The bells are well pulled up, the sounds are distinct and clear, and different kinds of change-ringing, with one variation and then another of the changes rung, becomes not a mere pulling of bells, but a science. And this is what must be the work of bellringers—a science; to learn these changes—to make themselves acquainted with the art of bell-ringing and to do the thing thoroughly. Again another point: those who handle the bells should never fail to remember that punctuality in attendance is of the greatest importance. How grievous is it when, with a peal of six or eight bells, four or five men are waiting for either of the others, who never appears and never takes the trouble to send an apology for his non-appearance. How disheartening this is. How it puts the whole of those wishing to do their best, had they the opportunity, out of love. Oh, dear brethren, that is another point that should be most carefully kept before you—to be punctual in all you do. And when you are engaged in bell-ringing the greatest attention should be given. The great rule in the bell-chamber is, "Listen, look, and hold your tongue," and that is a good rule for the bell-chamber if ever you wish to make bell-ringing worth anything. Get the ropes set, get the bells in proper order, hear the sound and don't talk. Nothing is more injurious in a company of bell-ringers than one who chatters. This is most important. Then again, maintain the character of your belfry. Allow none to enter except those interested in the science you profess. Don't let the belfry be a place where rough words are uttered, or where intoxicating drinks are admitted, or where careless people come in, just to look and see what is going on, the same as at one of the parish lounges. Keep it as it is—a portion of the Church of God, where the tongue is to be quiet, and the head is to be bared. Always remember that the belfry, like all portions of the Church has been solemnly set apart, consecrated and dedicated to a special purpose—the gathering of ringers together to bring people to the House of God. If you carry out your work in such a spirit as this it will be a great blessing to you. I take it for granted that those whom I am addressing are not for the greater part greatly blessed with worldly goods, but, like the poor widow of whom I spoke first, you may give what you have to give, and that is what God will accept, not what the amount is, but that which he has. You may give your skill, and you may give your time, and you may give your labour in the spirit of that poor widow, and believe me, God will accept it. Your ringing will be a help to us and He will give you your reward. He will make you more and more His own. He will help you and guide all those around you. For every person here—we are young some of us here, in full vigour and strength, and others are gradually tottering to the grave—there lies before us one great reward, one great blessing for all good and faithful servants—for the hour snatched from our homes to give in faithful labour to God—yes, for all who make a sacrifice of any kind, Jesus stands on the eternal shore holding in His precious hand the crown of glory that fadeeth not away.

At two o'clock a public luncheon was provided at the King's Head Inn by Mrs. Cade, between forty and fifty persons being present. The chair was occupied by the Rev. H. J. Cheales, and he was supported by the Very Rev. the Dean, the Rev. S. Staffurth, the Rev. E. B. Bevan, Mr. E. Mason, (hon sec.) Mr. J. Taylor, Mr. J. Bellamy, Mr. T. Hand (Algarkirk), Mr. J. A. Hand (West Keal), Mr. Robinson (Old Bolingbroke), Mr. Mawer (Sibsey) Mr. T. Rodgers (Boston), and others. At the conclusion of the luncheon the Dean was compelled to leave the gathering to return to Lincoln, but before departing he expressed the pleasure it had afforded him to be present, and tendered a cordial invitation to the members of the Association to visit the county town and ring the bells of the Cathedral.

The CHAIRMAN subsequently proposed the usual loyal toasts, and in course of his remarks expressed sympathy with the Queen and the Princess Royal in their sad bereavement.

After the toasts had been honoured the CHAIRMAN said that before all things they were church workers, and they must ring out a true church sentiment from their words and opinions as well as from their bells, and he would ask them to consider what a great thing it was that the centre of church life, authority and dignity in that diocese identified itself with them in their work. The Dean had that day represented the Cathedral, and he was very sorry that circumstances prevented him from thanking him (the Dean) for the honour he had done them. Two years ago they were very much indebted to the Bishop for one of the greatest meetings, and a meeting that had done them more good than anything since the formation of the Association. It was his first public act on his first coming into the diocese, and the words he spoke on that occasion showed that he took a keen interest in the subject of ringing and the welfare of the ringers. He (the chairman) asked them to show as ringers, as well as members of the diocese, their admiration of the holy life, and piety, goodness and excellence of that great good man, the Bishop, and at the same time to shew a feeling of indignation at the indignity at present being put upon him by those who had nothing to do with the diocese. If there were any complaints from their own people it would be different, but when strangers were amongst them stirring strife, they as churchmen ought to express their indignation against it, and he asked them to give three hearty cheers for the Bishop. The appeal was enthusiastically responded to.

The CHAIRMAN proposed the health of Mr. C. Bevan, the incumbent of the parish, for having given them the privilege of ringing the bells of the church, and for having provided them with such an interesting service. He also thanked Mr. T. Hand, for assisting in the musical part of the service.

Rev. C. B. BEVAN said it had been a great pleasure to him to see the ringers present that day. It was very important that they should emphasise on such an occasion the fact that the church did not consist entirely of the clergy—that it depended upon a large organisation made up of many. The clergy were as dependent upon the ringers, as the ringers were on the clergy, and the association to which they belonged was a very valuable one. In the first place bell-ringing was a science worthy of every man's learning. It was a manly science, and as they had heard that day, especially an English one, because it involves hard work. It was also an honorable science, and ringers enjoyed a great privilege and a great responsibility. He was not a ringer but merely a learner. He had, however, been much interested in what he had heard about bells and bell-ringing, and hoped that would not be the last time they would visit Kirton.

The CHAIRMAN said he wished the clergy would attend in larger numbers on occasions of that kind to show that they took an interest in their work. He was very much obliged to Mr. Staffurth for taking the trouble to come so far, and he proposed his health.

The Rev. F. STAFFURTH replied, and said the sooner the Association paid a return visit to Frieston the better they would be pleased. This concluded the toast list.

The Hon. Sec. (Mr. E. Mason, of Boston), then read the Annual Report.

The CHAIRMAN congratulated the association upon the state of their finances and said the balance was the result of the arduous and faithful work of their worthy secretary. There was no doubt that he had been the life and the backbone of the Association, and as he positively refused to take any salary, he thought they ought to make him a suitable present to shew their regard for him, and to recognise the able way in which he had conducted the matters of the secretaryship and the benefit he had done. Such a course was recommended by the committee, and he asked the meeting to confirm the wish of the committee. It was unanimously resolved to present a testimonial to Mr. Mason, and we understand it is to take form of a timepiece. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President: Rev. H. J. Cheales, rural dean, vicar of Friskney. Vice-Presidents: Rev. Canon Blenkin, rural dean, vicar of Boston; Rev. Canon Disbrowe, rural dean, rector of Benington; Rev. Canon Bond; Rev. Canon Fisher; Rev. T. W. Sale, rector of Halton-Holgate; Rev. F. Besant, vicar of Sibsey; Rev. R. E. Roy, rector of Skirbeck; Rev. D. J. White, vicar of Burgh; H. J. Atkinson, Esq., M.P.; The Right Hon. E. Stanhope, M.P.; F. Higgins, Esq., J.P., Alford; F. H. Booth, Esq., West Ashby Manor. Hon. Treasurer: Thomas Cheney Garfit, Esq., Boston. Hon. Sec.: Edward Mason, A.S.C.Y., 26, Castle Street, Boston. Committee: Mr. J. Mawer, Sibsey; Mr. H. Daulton, West Keal; Mr. G. F. Smith, Friskney; Mr. G. F. Clow, Sutterton; Mr. G. Clark, Skirbeck; Mr. A. O. Barber, Frieston. Messrs. E. Mason, G. F. Smith, J. Mawer, and A. O. Barber were appointed instructors. After some discussion it was resolved that the next quarterly meeting should be held at Halton Holgate.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Mr. John Jaggar's address will be 230 Goodman Street, Burton-on-Trent, after Saturday, July 28th.

NOTICE.—By the kind invitation of the Rev. Canon Bridges, the Beddington ringers will celebrate the nineteenth anniversary of the opening of the bells on Bank Holiday, August 6th. The tower will be open at 2.0 p.m., when every effort will be made to suit the convenience of old and new friends. Mr. Trappitt has again kindly consented to provide tea for those who may require it.

THE ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY, DERBY.

On Saturday, July 14th, the above society had their annual outing. At 4.30 a.m. a start was made for Blackpool, and after riding through the beautiful scenery of the Peak of Derbyshire, they entered some of the great manufacturing centres, contrasting considerably with the green fields and trees. They reached their destination about 9.30, and the first thing they did was to find a place for breakfast. After satisfying the inner man, they had a very enjoyable walk along the beach, where they visited the Aquarium, aviary, menagerie, etc., and after viewing the animals, fish, and birds, they next visited the swimming baths of sea water, it being thought too cold to bathe in the open sea. After having a good swim and splash with each other, which felt very refreshing after somewhat long and close confinement in the railway carriage, they then began to think about dinner, and returning to the place at which the order was given, they found everything ready for immediate attack, and in a few minutes every man was at his post. All being right, the word "go" was called, and so they did in fine style for some five or six courses without a hitch, for what with the sea breeze and salt water bath, they felt in first class nip for that sort of work. "Stand" being called, they began to make ready for another short journey to St. John's Church, where arrangements had been previously made for a ring on the bells, which are certainly a very musical little peal of eight, in F, tenor about 14 cwt. Arriving at the church gates they found Mr. Worthington awaiting their arrival. Among other short touches they rang a 386 and 503 of Grandsire Triples. W. Shardlow, 1; T. Alon, 2; W. B. Midgley, 3; R. Clitheroe, 4; J. W. Thompson, 5; A. E. Thompson, 6; C. E. Hart (conductor), 7; T. Albutt, 8. They wish to thank the above-named gentleman for so kindly assisting them, and also the Vicar for granting them permission to ring on the bells.

Afterwards they made their way to the Sacred Heart Chusch, where they found Mr. Nelson and his friend ready to receive them. They visited the belfry and rang 260 of Bob Minor on the bells, which are a peal of eight steel ones. After they had partaken of a substantial tea they had a splendid drive along the promenade to Uncle Tom's Cabin and back, and then into the Winter Gardens. By this time it was getting dark, and they had to begin to think about their return journey. They visited one or two of the fancy bazaars to buy a few presents for those they left behind, and then made the best of their way to the station as it was near train time. They found the train ready, and they were ready for it. They started at 9.10, and passed a very pleasant evening in singing songs and a few recitations, and thus brought to a close one of the most pleasant days they had ever had. They wish to take this opportunity of thanking the Vicar and Churchwardens for their kindness in providing the outing, and hope that the next they have, they will be favoured with their company.

THE NEW CHURCH CLOCK, BURTON LATIMER, NORTH HANTS.

A public tea, on behalf of the fund for placing a new clock in the church tower, was held in the Assembly Room on Thursday last, July 19th. It had been announced that the tea would be held in the Hall Field, but owing to the uncertainty of the weather this project was abandoned and the repast was provided in the building named above. The cost of the new clock and the fixing of the same is estimated at from £130 to £140, and towards this about £66 has already been subscribed. The new clock is to have two dials, one of which is to face the north, as is the case with the old one, and the other will be placed in the western side of the tower. The proposal has been warmly received, both by churchpeople and dissenters. The tea tables were graced with vases of flowers, and a number of flowering plants were placed in convenient places around the room. At the conclusion of the tea an adjournment was made to the Hall Field, where an American fair, dancing, and other amusements were announced to take place, but the proceedings were greatly interfered with by the rain, which fell heavily during the evening.

WANTED by a change-ringer, aged 20 years, a situation as Shopman or Book-keeper in Corn and Milling trade preferred; has had 6 years' experience in above Trades with present employer. Can ring the following Methods—Bob, Grandsire and Stedman. Apply to G. BAKER, Jun., Orchard Place, Arundel, Sussex.

THE ST. MARY'S GUILD, TAUNTON.

On Saturday, July 21st, the members of the above Society had their first annual outing, the place selected being Plymouth. The party which numbered fifteen, left Taunton Station at 6.22 a.m. And on arriving at Plymouth, which was reached at 10.15 a.m. at once proceeded to St. Andrew's Church, where hangs a heavy ring of ten, tenor 35 cwt. Then the front six was raised, in peal, and a fairly s'rick 6-score of Grandsire Doubles was rung. F. Burge, 1; G. E. Harbour, 2; T. Doble (conductor), 3; C. E. May, 4; J. Maddock, 5; T. Radford, 6. Having raised the heavy bells (not being able to do so in peal owing to their getting in back-stroke, evidently wanting to be thoroughly overhauled by a bell-hanger), some rounds were rung by G. E. Harbour, 1; F. Burge, 2; C. E. May, 3; T. Radford, 4; W. Wakelin, 5; J. Summerhayes, 6; J. Burge, 7; J. Maddock, 8; T. Doble, 9; E. Wyatt, 10. Next followed a plain course of Triples on the heavy eight, two of our Plymouth friends taking part. T. Doble, 1; F. C. May, 2; G. E. Harbour, 3; Taylor, 4; J. Burge, 5; J. Maddock, 6; F. W. Batchelor, Esq. (Plymouth), 7; E. Wyatt, 8. Having lowered the bells in peal, Charles Church was next visited, when some more Triples was rung by F. Burge, 1; W. Wakelin, 2; ——— (Plymouth), 3; T. Radford, 4; J. Burge, 5; J. Maddock, 6; T. Doble, 7; E. Wyatt, 8. After falling the bells the party adjourned to the "Globe Hotel," where a splendid dinner was supplied by Host Watts, after which various amusements were indulged in, some taking a trip on the water, some taking a walk around Plymouth, Stonehouse and Devonport, when at the Royal Dockyard Gates at 5.0 p.m. they met the Dockyard Church Ringers, who having heard that the Taunton ringers were visiting Plymouth, sent a very kind invitation to them to visit their belfry, one of the prettiest belfries the Taunton men had seen. Here everything being ready, the heavy six was raised in peal, and a well struck six-score of Doubles brought round, standing in the same order as at St. Andrews, next followed two or three courses of Grandsire Triples. F. Burge, 1; G. E. Harbour, 2; C. E. May, 3; T. Radford, 4; J. Burge, 5; J. Maddock, 6; T. Doble, 7; E. Wyatt, 8. After having seen the bells, which are a light peal of eight, tenor, 12-cwt. and go splendid, the company went on top of the tower, where they had a magnificent view of the dock-yard below, the training ships, the Royal Albert bridge at Saltash, &c. Having thanked their Devonport friends for such a hearty welcome, they had to hurry off to catch the train, which brought them to Taunton at 9.45 p.m., here ended a day that every one enjoyed, not a single hitch of any kind having occurred to mar the days proceedings. The ringers wish through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS," to thank their Plymouth friends who had made such an excellent arrangement for them, especially to F. T. Batchelor, Esq., who spared no pains to make their short stay at Plymouth a pleasant one, also the Royal Dockyard team, who met an hour earlier than usual, to enable them to have a pull on such a handy little peal.

Review.

"DUFFIELD": A Musical Method for Eight, Ten, and Twelve Bells.—(Bemrose; London and Derby.)—As a sequel to his articles on the Duffield Method in "THE BELL NEWS" some few months back, Mr. Heywood has now published a complete treatise on that recent and valuable addition to the science of ringing. The book consists of 119 pages, in a tasteful binding, published by Messrs. Bemrose and Sons, and is issued at the price of 1s. The contents are most exhaustive. Dedicated to the change-ringers of England, the main body of the work, following a preface setting forth its scope and intention, commences with a complete Glossary of Terms peculiar to the method. This glossary, which is most concise and definite, should be well perused. Mr. Heywood is most happy in his invention of the new technical names required for his new method—notably so in the case of "after-bell," and "double-bell." It would be well, too, if the terms "odd" and "even" used by him for in-and-out-of-course were more generally adopted. After the glossary comes an introductory chapter, shewing the need of such a method as Duffield, and more than justifying its author for submitting it to the Exercise. Then there are two chapters (I. and II.) occupying thirteen pages, with complete instructions for ringing and pricking the method, shewing at the same time how the bells may be brought round at any required number of changes. In these two chapters, as throughout the rest of the book, reference is made to appendices at the end, which the reader should peruse when referred to them; but for the purpose of the reviewer they may be left till later. Chapters III. IV. and V. treat exhaustively of the proof as applied to eight bells. These chapters leave nothing to be desired. They are everything that a proof should be. A short chapter on "extents and qualities," points out among other things the possibility of obtaining a whole peal of Major with the 6th at home. When this fact was first published in "THE BELL NEWS," we were very curious to know how it could be effected, but the mystery is easily explained, when we read in the author's words that "6, 7, 8 never fall into a duplicate position in any one course." There is in fact only one "even" (i.e., "in course") 6, 7, 8 in each course. Having given a chapter (VII.) of touches the author proceeds to peals. These he divides into two classes, viz., those with the 6th undisturbed, and those with that bell called away from her home position. These peals are calculated to shew the great flexibility of the method. Eighteen are given with the 6th at home, varying in length from an exact 5000 to 5760. These are followed by ten examples with the 6th a working bell ranging in length from 5000 to 8640. They form the conclusion of part I. The next part, consisting of chapters IX.—XII., and comprising twenty pages, is occupied with the subject of Royal, which is treated in the same thoroughgoing manner. The headings of the chapters will shew the line taken by the author—"How to ring the method"—"Pricking, proving and extents," "touches of Royal," "peals of Duffield Royal." Among the last occurs what the author truly denominates Mr. Bulwer's "magnificent" peal of 10,800, containing the entire extent of Duffield Royal, with the four heavy bells together in 180 "even" courses. Part III. treats of Maximus. In chapter XIII. are given "General Directions" as to Maximus. Here on page 93 the author says: "The greater the number of bells, the more seriously does any parting of the heavy ones affect the beat; and in 'Duffield' alone among methods is all parting avoided, while such can never be the case in any system having a hunting treble or alternating quick and slow work." Mr. Heywood is here of course thinking only of music, and so far as music alone is concerned, Duffield unquestionably admits of no superior. But the great charm of the work or "duty" in Stedman (putting music for the moment out of the question) undoubtedly consists in the very fact of the existence of the alternating quick and slow work taken in connection with the dodging, which comes as a pleasing variation between them. It is no small pleasure after a long spell of dodging (and the dodging in Cinques is little short of wearisome) to find oneself once more in front where the real fray is going on, and the momentous question of "quick or slow?" gives an additional interest to the whole. The loss of this is the only weak point that we have been able to detect in Duffield. But nothing is absolutely perfect, and the many exceptionally good qualities of Duffield render it capable of sustaining far more than the weight of a small flaw such as this, if indeed it prove to be a flaw at all. The hints to conductors in Chapter XV. are excellent, and will afford by analogy many useful lessons for conducting in other methods. Passing over the conducting chapter we come to the Appendix. For this part of the work Mr. Heywood has reserved some of his most interesting observations. With the main argument of Appendix I. we thoroughly agree, but we are inclined to contend for the old word "course-end." It is quite true, as Mr. Heywood says, that it is the proof of the following course that is founded upon it, but at the same time the "course-end" is the row at the distance of one course (or multiple of a course) from rounds, and it represents the effect of the calls that have preceded it. We think that the distinction on page 113 (Appendix IV.) as to the propriety of a peal starting or concluding with a row produced otherwise than by the strict rule of the method is rather a fanciful one. Such a thing is to our mind equally objectionable when occurring at either of those places as it would be if the peal were varied and the irregular row brought into the body of the composition. We are sorry for Mr. Lockwood's gr20 Treble Bob Major, but such has always been our opinion. From this it will be seen that we more than agree with and heartily re-echo the author's observations as to date touches. What we have just said may be taken as referring not only to date touches, which at the best are mere sentimental concerns, but also to peals on eight bells and upward, where the choice is of large extent. But in peals of Triples, where the only alternative lies between all the changes or no peal at all the case is different. Here therefore we incline to make an exception in favour of Holt's singles. These give a very great variety of peals, rendering the fabrication of other new calls quite inexcusable, and indeed may be said to have deservedly won their way to be the Grandsire singles par excellence. It must not be forgotten that till the publication in recent years of the five-part peals with two common Grandsire singles in each part, there was no peal extant, with the exception of those on the bob-and-single plan, that would have been admitted by Mr. Heywood as a peal of genuine Grandsire. Of Appendix VI. we can only say that it seems to be most weighty and conclusive, and we strongly commend every word of it to the careful consideration of composers. The work that Mr. Heywood has done in connection with the musical properties of Major compositions entitles him to speak with weight on the musical properties of other branches of the science. We have spoken of the matter contained in the book under review. It only remains to be said that Mr. Heywood's manner of conveying his meaning is exceedingly pleasant. The reader is carried along by the author's easy and graceful style. Mr. Heywood is so thoroughly at home in the subject of which he treats that his language is at once simple and effective, while at the same time it never degenerates to anything approaching prolixity.

THE CHURCH HOUSE.

The inauguration of the Church House took place in London, on Saturday last, in a marquee erected on a grass plot in the centre of Dean's-yard, the site selected by the committee for the building. Prior to the formal meeting service was held at the Abbey, the words of the anthem that was sung being selected by the Rev. S. Flood Jones, vicar of St. Botolph, Aldersgate. At the meeting the Primate presided, supported by the Duke of Westminster, Lord Justice Cotton, the Bishop of Wakefield, Mr. H. H. Gibbs, Mr. H. C. Richards, &c. On the proposition of Lord Justice Cotton, seconded by Mr. J. G. Talbot, M.P., it was resolved, "That the Archbishop of Canterbury be requested to declare the Corporation of the Church House to be in occupation of the site chosen for the said house." In making the declaration the Archbishop said that since the list was first opened subscriptions to the amount of £53,000 had been received. Other resolutions were also agreed to, the Benediction pronounced by the Archbishop closing the proceedings.

The handbell peal rung by the Holt Society recently, reads "5040 changes." It should have been "5039."

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1888.

THE statements of the antiquarian, Mr. SEWELL, have this week received a further refutation, and that, it is believed, from a quarter where he least expected. It will be remembered that this gentleman boldly stated that the Vicar of St. Mary-le-Tower, Ipswich, was compelled to vacate his residence near that church on account of the noise of the bells; and also that the vibration caused by ringing them had done considerable damage to the tower. These statements the Vicar—Rev. CANON TURNOCK—in a letter to the Guardian absolutely denies; and adds that the real cause of the latter is of a nature "more serious and unsatisfactory." Thus we have another instance of flagrant misrepresentation by an uncompromising opponent of change-ringing brought to grief.

The letter of Mr. PAPILLON, also in the same issue of the above-named paper, clinches to a great extent our remarks upon the instability of towers which are made to carry bells. A great many cases could be mentioned where the towers are no more fit for the reception of bells than the pigeon-house of a farm-yard, owing to the failure or neglect of those responsible to provide for their accommodation either at the present or remote future. It sometimes happens—in fact rather too frequently—that in the erection of a new church the building of the tower is left for posterity to undertake, that part of the sacred edifice not being considered a necessity, and thus we find in many places churches whose outward appearances have nothing to distinguish them from the meanest puritan conventicle. In other cases, where the absence of a steeple would be felt by the erectors as a want of such distinctiveness, a mere shadow or skeleton of a tower is built just to relieve the conscientious scruples and feelings of those concerned. In the course of few years, may be some charitably disposed member of the congregation desires to add to the church in which he worships the distinctive appendage of the Church—a peal of bells. The want of bells—not as a bare feeling of sentiment—becomes to be felt when comparisons are made with other churches, and the very natural wish that "our church ought to have a peal like our neighbours" waxes greater and greater. Such a desire is most praiseworthy. The preliminaries being adjusted, the architect is called into consultation, and he, after recommending a little patching here, and a little clamping there, receives his fee and departs. By and by a crack in the tower is discovered, and "Stop the bells" is at once the cry. And in such a case the ringers come to be looked upon as the chief authors of the disaster, and the fracture of the edifice, if fracture there be is laid at their doors, and they have to suffer a sort of ostracism in consequence.

It is to be hoped that this correspondence in such a leading paper as the Guardian may lead to more care being taken in the erection of church towers. Architecture is among the learned professions, no doubt, and it may be necessary that architects in the practice of their profession, should have carte blanche to a certain extent. But they ought not to be allowed to have everything their own way. There is reason in all things, and those who are apt to fortify themselves behind every sense but common sense, and remain deaf to every entreaty of those who possess the latter, should be taught a severe lesson, whether they be antiquarians or architects.

THE WINCHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.

The Annual Festival of the above Guild was held at Leatherhead, on Thursday, July 19th. Ringing commenced at the parish church at 10.30, when a 360 of Bob Minor was rung by the Bagshot band, a 450 of Grandsire Doubles by the Shalford band, and a short touch of Grandsire Caters by a mixed band. The service began at 11.30, consisting of a shortened form of Matins with special lesson, psalms, and hymns suited to the occasion. The prayers were said by the Vicar, the Rev. F. E. Utterton, the lesson was read by the Rev. R. F. Tompkins, of Arundel, and a very practical sermon was preached by the Rev. J. C. Tyler, Vicar of St. John's, Richmond, from the text Ephesians iv. 1—"Walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." He exhorted the ringers to bring credit on their calling as Church workers by consistent lives, and to show a good example to their congregations by being constant attendants at the services for which they rang their bells. At the conclusion of the service the ringers adjourned to a large tent on Mr. Loxleys ground, where about 150 sat down to dinner. The chair was taken by W. W. Moore, Esq., of Bournemouth, the President of the Guild, who was supported by the Rev. H. C. Spyers (Purbrook), Rev. F. E. Robinson (Drayton), Rev. T. G. Tyler (Richmond), Rev. F. E. Utterton (Leatherhead), Rev. R. F. Tompkins (Arundel), Rev. F. Whyley (Alton), Rev. C. Buston (Ashe), L. Proctor, Esq. (Benington), F. W. J. Rees, Esq. (Guildford).

The CHAIRMAN in giving the loyal toasts, mentioned that the Duke of Connaught was a patron and life member of the Guild, and that the Winchester Guild was the only Association of ringers directly connected with the Royal Family. In proposing "The Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese," he thanked the Rev. F. E. Utterton heartily for the loan of his Church and belfry, and for the service that morning. The Vicar having been suddenly called away previously, the Rev. F. Whyley responded.

In giving "The Winchester Diocesan Guild," the Chairman said the Guild was now entering upon its tenth year, and they had 393 performing and honorary members. Ten peals had been rung in the district during the year, and he especially referred to the progress recently made by the Bournemouth band.

The Rev. H. A. SPYERS, who was received with applause, responded. Speaking of the doings of the members, he said since the publication of their report, a long peal consisting of 10,080 changes had been rung by the Capel band in 5 hrs. 18 mins. He believed that this was a performance which had not yet been equalled in six-bell ringing, as the peal was rung in fourteen different Treble Bob methods, nine of them being Surprise methods. He spoke with satisfaction of the good assistance which he had received from the local secretary for Hampshire, there being a prospect of several bands joining the Guild on the western side of the main line of the South Western Railway. He thanked the late local secretary for Surrey for the good work done in and around Bramley, but as the Rev. S. E. Budge had now left the district, he was glad to be able to say that he had secured the services of a good substitute in the person of F. W. J. Rees, Esq., of Guildford. He spoke of the strange refusal of the St. Nicholas, Guildford, to join the Guild, after all the assistance they had received, but said he was pleased to hear that Mr. Rees had altered all this, and he hoped that before long, Guildford would become a centre of scientific change-ringing. The officers for the year were then elected, which were the same as in the previous year, with the exception of the new local Secretary for Surrey.

The members then dispersed to ring at various churches in the neighbourhood. The Basingstoke, Alton, Havant, Weybridge and Guildford bands went to Ashstead where a 120 of Stedman Doubles and a 360 of Grandsire Triples were rung.

The Bagshot, Hambledon, Shalford and Catherington bands went to West Clandon, where a 630 of Bob Minor and a 720 of Grandsire Minor were rung by W. Harding, 1; T. Gould, 2; F. Francis, 3; H. Stapleton, 4; E. Spooner, 5; H. Houlton (conductor), 6. Here an excellent tea was provided in the Schoolroom. The 'go' and the tone of the West Clandon were much admired. The Bramley and Twyford bands with the Rev. C. Buston went to Betchworth. The Capel and Hursley bands went to Esher and were hospitably entertained to tea. The Hursley men rang 600 Grandsire Doubles called differently. Touches of Oxford Treble Bob were rung by the Capel men.

The Farnham and Privett bands went to Dorking where a 336 Grandsire Triples was rung by W. Paice, 1; F. G. Ayling, 2; H. Gasforth, 3; A. Baker, 4; H. Sutton, 5; T. Housford, 6; G. H. Barrett, 7; T. Baker, 8; and a 504 of the same by E. Dodd, 1; H. Boxall, 2; H. Gasforth, 3; A. Baker, 4; H. Sutton, 5; C. Fry, 6; G. H. Barnett, 7; H. Curtis, 8.

At Leatherhead during the afternoon several touches of Grandsire Caters and Stedman Triples were brought round, including a 305 of Grandsire Caters by H. Newnham, 1; E. Hull, 2; L. Proctor, 3; C. Want, 4; J. Hewett, 5; R. Jordan, 6; W. Marks, (conductor), 7; Rev. F. E. Robinson, 8; G. Williams, 9; J. Lisney, 10. A 168 of Stedman Triples by J. Hewett, 1; J. Whitney, 2; G. Russell, 3; R. Jordan, 4; G. Grafton, 5; Rev. F. E. Robinson, 6; S. Brooker (conductor), 7; J. Lisney, 8. A 204 of Oxford Bob Triples by G. Williams, 1; — Lindoff, 2; E. Hull, 3; R. Jordan, 4; H. Chandler, 5; F. Wickens, 6; S. Brooker, 7; J. Lisney, 8. Also three leads of Treble Bob Royal by J. Hewett, 1; G. Williams, 2; G. Russell, 3; — Lindoff, 4; R. Jordan, 5; E. Jordan, 6; H. Chandler, 7; F. Wickens, 8; Rev. F. E. Robinson, 9; S. Brooker, 10.

CHURCH BELLS AND CHANGE-RINGING.

The following additional letters have appeared in this week's Guardian—

SIR—Your "deeply moved Protestant reader," Mr. Sewell, in laying upon change-ringing the blame of damage to the fabric of towers, forgets another side to the question—viz., the responsibility of architects and builders to make towers, which are intended to carry bells, strong enough to bear their vibration. If the architect who designs a new tower troubles himself but little about the bells (as is too often the case), or if the contractor "scamps" the work, the tower will very likely prove too weak; and, if I mistake not, it is more often in the case of new towers, such as that of St. Mary-le-tower at Ipswich, that we hear of such complaints. I know nothing about St. Peter Mancroft at Norwich, to which Mr. Sewell also refers; but I was not long ago at St. Mary-le-Tower, Ipswich, and what I heard on the spot does not altogether agree with Mr. Sewell's letter.

Mr. Sewell speaks of the art of change-ringing as "scarcely one hundred years old." The "Ancient Society of College Youths," in London, is said to have been established in the sixteenth century; and the Royal Cumberland Society, organised under that title in 1746, had existed as the "Society of London Scholars" prior to the year 1702. The author of one of the most scientific of change-ringing methods, Mr. Fabian Stedman, was born in 1631. I hope that these facts are a sufficient answer to your correspondent's chronology.

The support of such an authority as Mr. Percival Heywood more than counterbalances any amount of ill-informed criticism. I can assure those who may read his letter that no man in England is more qualified to speak on the subject of change-ringing.

T. L. P.

SIR,—Mr. Sewell, in a letter which he is kind enough to inform me he did not intend for publication, makes two statements relating to myself and my church at Ipswich which, with your permission, he must kindly allow me to correct.

He is entirely mistaken when he says that the clanging of the bells of my church compelled me to leave my vicarage for another residence. I simply required a larger house. Nor is it the case that the vibration caused by our peal has necessitated the reconstruction of several of the buttresses of our church tower. The real cause I am sorry to say, is one more serious and more unsatisfactory. Nevertheless it is one not at all likely to "imperil the entire structure."

THE ELY DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

There will be a meeting at Wisbeach on Bank Holiday, August 6th; St. Peter's, ten bells. Members intending to be present, kindly write to the Hon. Secretary, stating station from which they propose to travel—at once.

EARLS BARTON, NORTH HANTS.

By permission of the Rev. R. R. Cobbold, seven of the Wellingborough parish church ringers visited Earls Barton on Saturday evening, and rang several six-scores of Grandsire Doubles on the bells in this old Saxon tower. These bells go remarkably well, it is quite a pleasure to ring them. The ropes formerly fell to the pavement, but the bells are now rung from the clock-room. They are a rather light peal of six, the tenor measuring $41\frac{1}{2}$ inches across the mouth, and weighing about 14 cwt. The treble is a sweet-toned little bell. Messrs. Taylor & Son, of Loughborough, rehung these bells in the old frames three years ago. There was some talk at that time of increasing the peal to eight. There is plenty of room for additional bells. When the tenor was recast in the year 1761 the founder (Eayre, of Kettering), made the bell somewhat too light, he therefore (according to a tradition in the village) reduced the diameter of the fifth bell by chipping away its lip in order to tune it to the defective tenor. The mutilated "skirts" of the fifth bell seem to verify the truth of this tradition. The treble, second, fourth, and fifth, were all cast by Penn, of Peterborough, in the 1720. The third was recast by Arnold, of St. Neots, 1775. Penn was the founder of the peal of ten bells placed in Peterborough Cathedral in the year 1709, five of which have since been removed. He also cast the "Priests Bell" or "Ting Tang" at Wellingborough, 1708. The inscriptions on Barton Bells were given in a recent number of the Parish Magazine, as follows:—The English translation of Latin words is given in brackets:—(1) Beati Pacifici [Blessed are the Peacemakers]. Robert Whitworth, Senr., Benefr., 1720. (2) Si Deus Pro Nobis Qvis Contra Nos [If God be for us who can be against us]. (3) Edward Arnold, St. Neots Fecit, 1775. John Smit and William Kemshead, Churchwardens. (4) Ihs Rex Ivdeorum Fili Dei Misere Mei [Jesus, King of the Jews, Son of God have mercy on me]. 1720. (5) Vera Jvdicet Ecclesia Fixvs Adversa Sperno [Let the Church determine the truth, being firm I despise adversity] 1720. John James, Henry Wine, Churchwardens. Henry Penn, Founder. (5) To The Church The Liveing I Do Call and To The Grave I Summon All. John Warren & John Smith c. ws., 1761. Thos. Eayre Vincent Barker, Benefactor. In the year 1700 (according to Bridges) there were five bells.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

On Sunday, July 15, six members of the Loughborough branch of the above Association visited Wymeswold to ring a muffled peal at the funeral of Mr. John Gutteridge, for over fifty years the respected parish clerk of Wymeswold, and well-known locally as a change-ringer. The service was impressively read by the Rev. R. C. Green, vicar, and was attended by a large congregation. After the service a 720 of Kent Treble Bob Minor was rung. A. Cresser, 1; E. D. Taylor, 2; W. A. Tyler, 3; J. W. Taylor, sen., 4; S. Smith, 5; J. W. Taylor, jun. (conductor), 6. And a 720 of Plain Bob Minor. J. Brooks (Wymeswold, conductor), 1; S. Smith, 2; W. A. Tyler, 3; A. Cresser, 4; R. W. Charles, 5; J. W. Taylor, jun., 6. Afterwards a 720 of Grandsire, by the same band as in the Treble Bob. Within a few days of his death, Mr. Gutteridge had performed his duties as usual, and after the briefest illness he peacefully passed away on the 10th inst., at the ripe age of eighty-four.

HINDLEY, NEAR WIGAN.

On Sunday morning, July 22nd, a very large chiming clock was started in St. Peter's church by the Rev. Peter Jones, the first vicar of this church, who came purposely for the ceremony. The clock has four dials each six feet across, of very chaste but simple design. The quarters are chimed upon four bells, and the hours struck upon the largest bell in the tower. The movement is constructed with every modern improvement, so to maintain perfect accuracy, and chiefly to the designs of Lord Grimthorpe. It has a gravity escapement with a compensated pendulum. The whole of the work has been carried out by John Smith and Sons, Midland Clock Works, Derby, who have also in hand a similar but somewhat larger clock for Rawten-stall church, Lancashire.

Correspondence.

[While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.]

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

QUICK PEALS.

SIR,—Some time back the members of the Oxford Diocesan Guild rang a peal of Stedman Triples at Drayton in 2 hrs. and 27 mins. A fortnight ago they rang another peal in 2 hrs. and 54 mins. in the same method, same place, and called by the same man. Why this difference in time? In answer to a paragraph of mine at the time of the quick peal, Mr. Washbrook informed me that if I liked to visit Drayton, he would show me they would ring a quicker one. I now take the opportunity of thanking Mr. Washbrook for his kind invitation; at the same time beg to decline his proffered offer for two simple reasons, firstly, when I go for a peal I do not go in for racing; secondly, to have the audacity to doubt the veracity and accuracy of the unique performances of the Oxford Guild, I might get a hard knock for my trouble, and they might have the courtesy to ask me where I should like to be hit. I will now repeat an observation made by a gentleman at the house of my friend, Mr. Mash, viz.; when the members of the Oxford Guild are on a week's ringing tour in the country, the captain's advice to his colleagues if they get into a mess is "Don't stop, Washbrook will put you right." If these spasmodic ejaculations are accurate, and I had the honour to be in one of these marvellous achievements, I should be under the excruciating necessity of telling them to put one half of the peal in their hat, and the other half in their boots.

THE PEAL AT TUE BROOK.

SIR,—With all due respect to Mr. Pritchard I cannot quite see in what way the disclosure of my name and address will affect the matter of this peal in question: it will neither make it right or wrong, so I must beg him to be content with a nom de plume for once. With regard to the comments of "Free Lance" upon my letter, I may say that I did not declare the composition of the peal to be false through the tenor dropping out, in fact I did not say a word about the composition. But what I tried to shew, was, that I did not consider it ought to be claimed as a peal so long as the eight bells having once started, one of them dropped out before the conclusion of the peal, though I will own as far as I know through no deliberate fault of the ringer.

JUVENIS.

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—I am informed that a peal of Grandsire Triples was rang at St. Thomas' church, Douglas, Isle of Man, by the St. Peter's company, Liverpool, on their visit to open the bells on December 7th, 1852. Therefore the peal of Treble Bob recorded in "THE BELL NEWS" of July 14th, should read the first peal in the method rung on the Island. The same sentence is also applicable to the peal of Stedman Triples.

C. H. HATTERSLEY.

P.S.—The bells at Douglas are now only a peal of six.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Honi soit qui mal y pense."

After your remarks, Mr. Editor, on the correspondence from the Guardian, which you publish, I feel almost ashamed to be found referring to it here. I trust, however, that I may be excused if I venture to remark that the thanks of the Exercise are due to our two well-known and respected brethren who have so ably championed our cause in the "Bishop's organ." They have thus added one more to the many services rendered by them to us, and if they are not rewarded with thanks ostentatiously by those whose cause they maintain, they will at any rate have the satisfaction of knowing that they have the hearty sympathy and goodwill of us all.

* * * * *

The last letter of the trio is certainly, as you say, "very little short of a gratuitous insult to the whole Exercise." It, however, is to my mind, another evidence of the ignorance and intolerance too often displayed by men who have confined their studies to one object, and allowed their mind to become warped around it to the exclusion of everything else. Mr. Sewell's jaundiced epistle has evidently emanated from one who can see nothing except through the fossilised spectacles of an effete and bigoted mind, which the owner fondly imagines to be antiquarianism. His charge against us as to the mischief we have done "to fine towers all over England" is so utterly absurd as to be calculated merely to rain a contemptuous and pitying smile from those who—unlike him—understand the question at issue.

* * * * *

I would here leave this subject, but for the few words which prefix the signature of this high-souled individual, who subscribes himself as "your deeply moved Protestant reader." What in the name of common sense has Protestantism to do with this matter? But this observation, I am rather inclined to think, displays the "cloven hoof" in the whole affair. This individual must surely be a descendant of those Scottish fanatics who for years opposed the introduction of organs into their churches—designating these instruments as the "deil's kist o' whistles." If so, we may quite understand his opposition to bell-ringing; and be willing to let him go along in his own small way, while we are content with the fact that his genus is so scarce amongst us; and that such oppositions as his will but serve to do good to the Exercise in many ways. As the Yankee would say—"Let him slide."

* * * * *

The correspondence on the disputed first peal of Stedman Triples has been, I think very properly, brought to a close by the Editor. I say "very properly," because I certainly do agree with the words of the footnote that "an overwhelming amount of evidence exists in favour of Mr. Cooter's assertions." The only course left for us, then, is to accept what is evidently the truth of the matter, and like sensible men "adapt ourselves to the altered circumstances."

* * * * *

I really must compliment Mr. "Twyford" on his extraordinary prowess of penetration, and his faculty of discovering things which have no existence. He speaks of my "sarcastic manner" in reference to their report. I am totally at a loss to know where the sarcasm of my note comes in, as I certainly had no intention of anything of the sort. Had I been so inclined, I might have hinted that instead of thanking the clergyman for "allowing them to view the church free of charge" they ought to have thanked him for—in effect—giving them sixpence apiece on that occasion, which, according to their first account it simply amounted to. But I did nothing of the kind; I simply objected as disagreeable to the term "free of charge," which implies a stated fee for admission into the sacred edifice, which is to my mind very repugnant, and—to say the least of it—un-English. A voluntary subscription from visitors in aid of the restoration fund is quite another matter; and had Mr. "Twyford" given his latest explanation in the first instance, as ought to have been done, there would have arisen no cause for my note. Perhaps he and his band will be a little more careful next time.

* * * * *

I am sorry to see personalities cropping up again in the correspondence columns of last week. Some time ago I referred to this unpleasant feature of controversy in ringing matters; and have been much gratified of late to observe its absence. My friends, when we are discussing subjects in connection with our work, what need is there for us to lower ourselves in the opinion of outsiders by indulging in personal remarks one towards another, just for the sake of saying something which we imagine to be "smart" or "cutting." Such line of action does not affect the real point at issue, and simply detracts from the weight of any other arguments or statements which may be adduced. These personalities may be allowable in a common pot-house or tap-room, but they are most certainly out of place in the columns of "THE BELL NEWS." Whenever you are tempted to err in this manner, think of our national motto—"Evil be to him that evil thinks."

MELBOURNE, DERBYSHIRE.

Friday, July 13th, was the first anniversary of the opening of the peal of eight bells in the tower of the above church. Since the opening, five peals have been rung on them by the Melbourne society, viz., one of Bob Triples on September 24th, 1887, two of Bob Major, and two of Grandsire Triples. It was intended to attempt a peal on Friday, but as the day was not convenient for all members of the band, the idea had to be abandoned, and short touches of Grandsire Triples only were rung. J. R. Wood, 1; F. W. Cook, 2; J. W. Warren, 3; H. Hollingworth (conductor), 4; G. C. Tunnichiff, 5; G. A. Fish, 6; T. Hollingworth, 7; M. E. Fryer, 8. On Saturday, the Melbourne ringers were honoured by a visit from five gentlemen from Derby, Messrs. Woodward, Ward, Maskery, Mottashaw, and Draper. On their arrival at the church they were met by the Melbourne ringers, and a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples was rung. C. Draper, 1; H. G. Woodward, 2; A. B. Ward, 3; H. Hollingworth, 4; G. C. Tunnichiff, 5; S. Maskery, 6; G. Mottashaw (conductor), 7; G. A. Fish, 8. Afterwards a short touch of Bob Major. An adjournment was then made to the "Blue Bell" Inn, where an excellent tea had been provided by Mrs. Holmes, to which sixteen sat down. After tea, through the kindness of W. D. Fane, Esq., the famous Melbourne Hall gardens were visited, and a course of Grandsire Triples was rung in front of the hall in a very creditable manner. G. Mottashaw, 1-2; A. B. Ward, 3-4; H. C. Woodward, 5-6; S. Maskery, 7-8. All the places of interest were visited, and on arriving at the part known as the "four seasons," some more handbell ringing took place. The gardens which looked at their best, were greatly appreciated by all. A move was again made to the church, where a well-struck touch of Grandsire Triples was rung by the Melbourne ringers, and listened to by all the visitors, except Mr. Mottashaw, who rang in the touch. The return journey to Derby was commenced at 9 p.m., all expressing themselves highly pleased at the enjoyable afternoon spent at Melbourne.

THE OXFORD DIOCESAN GUILD.—ANNUAL FESTIVAL AT WITNEY.

Witney was this year selected as the place for holding the Annual Festival of the above Guild, which came off on Monday, July 16th. The science of campanology never seems to lose its popularity, but the ways and manners of church bellringers have undergone a decided change for the better during the last quarter of a century. Whatever decorousness might be thought due to the interior of a church, the belfry was regarded more as a place of festivity and amusement than anything else, and not unfrequently was used as a convenient hiding place. Local traditions avers that the dark recesses of the old belfry of St. Mary's, Witney, have concealed many a haunch of venison brought from Wychwood Forest, and old ringers from country belfries could doubtless tell tales of strange uses to which the dark corners have been put in days gone by. All this is now changed, and, thanks to a better tone of Church feeling, and the influence of the Diocesan Guild, belfries have been rescued from profanation as drinking places, and the ringing is carried on under more wholesome rules, subscribed by ringers on joining the Guild.

The proceedings on Monday began with morning service at St. Mary's, the sermon being preached by the Rev. W. Foxley Norris, rector of Witney, and rural dean, from Col. iii. 23—"Do it heartily as to the Lord." Observing that the Bible, like God its author, had a boundless reach as well as a particular application, he said the text spoke on a great subject, Intention. That day's festival represented to the members of the Guild the conduct and work of the past twelve months. Let them lay hold of that word "Intention," carry it away with them, and put into their prayers. The clergy had been grossly in fault about bells and bell-ringing years ago, and no wonder the ringers were so too, but a reformation had taken place in the condition both of the belfries and the ringers through the instrumentality of ringers' guilds. He left with them three thoughts on the spirit in which they should perform their duties, viz: in the power of feeling, the power of will, and the power of influence. Influence was an electrical force amongst mankind, springing from the mystery of the Incarnation, which made men meek while manly, and courageous while modest—and what a responsibility was this influence when exercised on the side of reverence towards God's house and His worship! It had been said that "reverence is the highest joy of this life," and this brought them back to the thought of Intention, with which they started, and suggested the highest conception of church bell-ringers' work—that of calling souls to God, to worship at His altar, and to sing His praises.

The special psalms chosen for the day were the 48th, 98th, and 150th; the special lessons, Numbers, x. and 1 Cor. xiv; and the hymns, "When morning gilds the skies," "Hark, hark, my soul," and "Bright the vision that delighted."

After the service the members of the Guild adjourned to St. Mary's parish room at Croftdown, for the Annual Meeting, their numbers being continually augmented by fresh arrivals until nearly 200 had assembled, coming from all parts of the Diocese. The Rev. F. E. Robinson, Master of the Guild, presided. The first business was the confirmation of the minutes of the last meeting, and the election of officers. The Master was unanimously re-elected amid cheers, and a similar compliment was paid to the Secretary, the Rev. Dolben Paul. Six outgoing members of the General Committee were also re-elected, and six members of the Change Ringing Committee, substituting Mr. W. Napper for Mr. Field (Oxford), resigned. The Secretary reported that since the last Committee meeting forty-three change-ringers and twelve probationers had been enrolled.

It was unanimously resolved that Mr. Washbrook should be appointed permanent instructor to the Guild, and Messrs. Newell, Haworth, and Smith, supplementary instructors, and that the Secretary should send a copy of the resolution to those who had occasionally acted as instructors, but whose services were not at present required.

The notice calling the meeting contained the following addition to rule X. to be moved as a resolution by the Rev. A. H. Drummond: "To insert after the word 'Clergyman,' but unless he qualifies as a change-ringer within two years of his election, he shall cease to be a member of the Guild." It was moved by the Rev. P. Newhouse, Mr. Drummond not being able to attend, and duly seconded, but called forth strong opposition.

The Rev. Dolben Paul, Hon. Sec., said the first object of the Guild was to enforce the recognition of the ringers as Church officers; the second, to qualify them as change-ringers; and the third, to promote belfry reform. The resolution would convert the Guild into a change-ringing society. There were eighteen towers in the Guild where all the ringers were probationers, and there were about 300 members who were probationers and not change-ringers. Carrying the resolution would probably lose them all. He had received a letter from Archdeacon Randall, most energetically protesting against the motion, saying it would split the Guild in two, if it did not smash it up altogether.

The Chairman said his opinion was totally different. He held that almost every member could qualify in two months, and the motion allowed two years, and he thought it would elevate the Guild to make all its members, in due course, practical change-ringers.

After a short discussion the motion was negatived by a large majority.

The Secretary reported that since January, ninety-two new names had been added to the Guild, which now numbered close upon one thousand members, and was the largest ringers' guild in the island. He urged that the clergy and churchwardens of every parish connected with the Guild should become honorary subscribers—the churchwardens were supposed to take special interest in all that belonged to the fabric of the church. Mentioning that he had received no report from the University branch of the Guild, and that letters to the secretary remained unanswered, he asked that information on the subject might be sent him by any member who could give it, and also wished it to be known that, as through some misunderstanding all members had not been able to get tickets at railway stations on the terms agreed to by the Great Western Railway (a fare and a quarter), he would endeavour to get any overcharge refunded if members would furnish him with particulars.

After the meeting, the company adjourned to the large hall of the Corn Exchange, where a substantial spread had been put on the tables, Mr. Boddington, of the Fleece Hotel, being the caterer. The Rector of Witney presided, in the unavoidable absence of the Archdeacon of Bucks. On the cloth being removed,

The Chairman said he had the first toast to propose—one which he knew they would all receive heartily, viz., "Church and Queen." As time was limited and they wished to be off somewhere else, he thought it advisable for them to have few speeches and short ones. With this idea he would set an example of brevity. The toast represented a principle which was dear to the hearts of all present, for he believed the State was established by the Church and not the Church by the State, and he hoped he should never see the day when their position would be changed. The toast also included their most gracious Sovereign, who set an example which they would do well to follow. He gave them "The Church and Queen."

The toast was heartily drunk with loud cheers.

The Chairman next proposed the toast of "Prosperity to the Diocesan Guild," and coupled with it the name of Mr. Robinson. He said he was very pleased to see such a large company of ringers at Witney, and also to see such a good number of junior members present. They had now a membership of over 800, which he thought was very good for a Guild which was only eight years old. Referring to the motion passed at the meeting, the speaker said, with all due respect to Mr. Robinson, he quite agreed with the decision arrived at. They should do everything to extend rather than to contract the work of the Guild. He thought that any movement which would do good to the work in the villages, was a healthy movement. In conclusion, he wished all success to this ancient art and science, and prosperity to the Oxford Diocesan Guild. He coupled with the toast the name of one who could ring for eight hours without fatigue, and could give his whole heart to it.

The Rev. F. E. Robinson thanked them for the way in which the toast had been drunk. As to the prosperity of the Guild it might be desirable to say a few words. They had been fast increasing in numbers, and now had a membership of nearly one thousand. As to what the Guild was doing, he considered that one of the most important features of their work was going about and giving advice about ringing and about the towers. He wished it to be known to all present and to those who were absent, that although he was Master of the Guild, he was to each one "your obedient servant." They appeared before them that day with four distinct feathers in their caps, although one had been slightly lowered. It had all been done by the Guild during the first three months of the year. He did not want all the credit himself, but he would here mention the name of their able conductor, Mr. Washbrook, whom they all admired. He thought they ought to be congratulated on the number that had mustered this year, especially as the day had opened so stormily. He thanked them once again for the way in which they had received the toast.

The Rev. DOLBEN PAUL, Hon. Secretary, in proposing the health of the Chairman, said he was thankful to see such a large number present. They came from all parts of the diocese, which included Oxon, Berks, and Bucks, and they had had the pleasure of worshipping in one of the most beautiful and interesting churches in the diocese. They had also the pleasure of listening to a most splendid sermon from the lips of the rector, their present chairman. He had formerly held the opinion that no one but a ringer was able to address a congregation of ringers, but the rector's sermon had quite changed that opinion, and he was thankful for the words of advice and counsel which they had listened to. They had also to thank the rector for preaching that day, and he hoped Mr. Norris would feel equally gratified with them, and that he had received a favourable impression of the Guild, which would help him to take a greater interest in it.

The toast was received in a hearty manner, with cheers.

The RECTOR, in responding, said they had that day had two disappointments—one in a preacher, and another in a chairman—and they had borne them very patiently. He thanked them for the way in which they had received his name. He hoped they were all enjoying themselves, and that they would come to Witney again whether he (the speaker) was alive or not. With the help of his three curates and the Witney ringers, he hoped to do all in his power to promote bell-ringing in the adjoining towns and villages.

The Rev. F. E. ROBINSON proposed the health of the Secretary (the Rev. Dolben Paul), who briefly responded, after which the proceedings terminated.

After dinner the members of the Guild made up several parties to visit the towers in the neighbourhood—one brake load going to Woodstock, another to Bampton, Brizenorton, and Burford, and another to Aston, Northmoor, and Standlake. Another ascended the belfry of St. Mary's, and rang a touch of 504 of Stedman Triples, 336 of Grandsire Triples, 252 of Stedman Triples, and two touches of 336 Double Norwich Court Bob Major.

THE HEREFORD DIOCESAN GUILD.

THE first Annual Meeting of this Guild was held at the historical town of Ross on Monday, July 23rd. The Guild, which owes its existence mainly to the efforts of the Rev. G. M. Custance (the Hon. Sec.), the Rev. Prebendary Phillott (Hon. Treasurer), and G. H. Phillott, Esq. (Master), has twenty-four towers in the diocese affiliated to it. The president is the Lord Bishop of Hereford, the vice-presidents being the Dean of Hereford and the Archdeacon of Salop.

Many of the members and their friends came by the morning train to Ross, and were welcomed by the sound of the bells, which were well struck in several short touches of Grandsire Triples by the local band. The following towers were represented on this occasion: Burwarton, Colwall, Much Dewchurch, Fownhope, Foy, Goodrich, Holme Lacey, Linton, Lugwardine, Upton Bishop, Weston-under-Penyard, Ross, and Hereford Cathedral. Several towers from the Shropshire district were unable to attend because of the distance and of the very uncertain state of the weather.

Divine Service took place at the parish church at 11 o'clock, a fair congregation being present, comprising several of the clergy of the neighbourhood. The Rev. G. M. Custance intoned the prayers, and the lessons were read by the Rev. Canon Phillott and the Rev. R. H. Cobbold. The service was choral, and very effective. The hymns used were 356, 223, and 508 (A & M.).

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Canon Musgrave, who took his text from Psalm xciii. 5, "Holiness becometh Thine house, O Lord, for ever," and upon this passage he founded an impressive and appropriate discourse.

At 1 o'clock, a dinner was laid at the town hall, to which about eighty sat down. The Rector of Ross occupied the chair, On the termination of the repast,

The Rev. R. H. Cobbold, after alluding to the first part of the sermon that morning, thanked Canon Musgrave (the preacher) on behalf of those present, for the admirable way in which he had put forward the subject, and the useful things he said in the sermon delivered to them.

Canon Musgrave, after expressing his obligations for the kind way in which he had been referred to, said that as they had heard enough of him already, it was not for him to make any lengthened remarks on the present occasion. He must confess that when he was asked by their secretary to preach on this occasion, he felt somewhat loth to know what to preach about. He had preached about many things, but had never preached about a bell-ringing guild; and he was not sure that he had not exposed his ignorance; if he had he trusted they would excuse him. He hoped, however, that he said nothing to offend any ringer who might be present, but if his sermon met with their approval, and they could point to it with satisfaction, he should feel that it had not been uttered in vain.

The Rev. R. H. Cobbold next proposed "Prosperity to the Diocesan Guild of Church Bellringers." He hoped that the Guild so happily begun would flourish vigorously, that the bells would go on in goodness, and to the betterment of the ringers.

The Rev. E. B. Hawkshaw proposed that the thanks of this meeting are due to the Rev. R. H. Cobbold for the use of Ross church, in which they had assembled that day. Perhaps Mr. Cobbold would repudiate the statement that any special thanks were due to him for allowing them to meet there, but they were all agreed that there was no place in the world where they could better assemble than inside a church, as they had done that day, to listen to an admirable sermon like that of Canon Musgrave. A great deal of the work done in every parish during the past year had had something to do with the church bells, and it was a curious and pleasing thing in connection with the Jubilee year of the Queen that the first thought in most of the parishes was to see whether the church bells could not be put in order. Almost, if not all the parishes surrounding Ross had had something done to the church bells. And now they met together in harmony in that room it was pleasing to notice the different ages of the men, and all conditions of men. This was the object of bell-ringing. It created a real brotherhood. And as the various sounds of the bells were sent forth in combined voice up to heaven, so should the hearts and feelings of the ringers be combined in this heavenly work, while the sound which never died crept through space and time and all eternity. He regarded the Guild as doing important work in this diocese, but not so much as was required. Now that they had made a fresh start, every man could have great influence in his own neighbourhood as a church bellringer: and if the rules were carried out they would have scientific ringing, and a great improvement in the ringing throughout the diocese. After an appreciative reference to the discourse of Canon Musgrave that morning, Mr. Hawkshaw went on to say that the work was not for any time. It was for ever.

Mr. Hebb proposed thanks to the Rector of Weston and the Vicar of Foy for the use of their towers that day for the purpose of practice.

The Rev. G. F. Custance, as Secretary of the Guild, returned thanks for the toast proposed by the chairman, and related an amusing incident how a lady in Ross, in reply to his application for pecuniary assistance to the Guild, had stated that if he would institute guild for the suppression of bellringing she would be glad to subscribe handsomely. That was very encouraging. After mentioning a few details in connection with the organization, he passed a high compliment on Mr. W. H. Fussell, the able instructor of the Guild, and referred to the remarks made by Canon Musgrave about the conduct of the ringers. Church ringers, he said, ought to be church goers, and when they go out of the tower they ought not to cut the service. In reference to the financial department, he hoped the Guild would meet with the help it required. Money they must have or they could not get on, and he particularly urged upon those to whom he forwarded letters to reply to them. In conclusion he said he should always be glad to lend a helping hand in any way he could.

The Chairman, in regard to what Mr. Custance had said about the lady in Ross and the bells, explained that she did not object to church bell ringing, but it must be admitted that even the most ardent admirer of the science, having a class to attend to, whose open windows were not a hundred yards off, would at times be fairly beaten, dispirited and disheartened by the poor bells when the wind was in a certain direction. He had interested himself on her behalf in this matter on one or two occasions, for she was a most generous lady, who gave largely in the town, and her letter was more an amusement than anything else, for she told him what she had written.

Three cheers being given for the Hon. Sec., the meeting dispersed, some of the members of the Guild visiting towers in the neighbourhood, and during the remainder of the day touches were rung upon the bells of the parish church, Ross.

THE GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

The annual festival of the above Association was held on Monday, July 30th, at Bristol. Divine service was held in the Lady chapel of St. Mary Redcliffe church, a good number of members being present. The hymn, "O God, our help in ages past," was sung, after which the Litany was read. The Rev. A. C. C. Anstey then delivered an address to the ringers, which he founded on Ecclesiastes xi., 1—"Cast thy bread upon the waters." Bell-ringing, he said, was like seed-sowing, for, as the peals rang out of the belfry, they reminded some of their careless lives, and warned them to prepare to meet their God; whilst they brought to the minds of scenes of sorrow and pain, the lonely home, with its attendant desolation, and taught them the duty of charity. These messages were carried by the bells, the ringers being all unconscious of their import. Bells spoke in varied tones. To some their sounds were those of joy, inviting them to come up to the house of God. To others, however, the sounds of the bells were painful, speaking in voices as of anger. In this respect their message was like every Divine message—of love and joy to some, of gloom and regret to others. One of the objects of the society was to have bell-ringing properly taught, and to benefit socially and morally the ringers. The work was important, but in order that the members may reap the full reward of their service, they should consecrate their work to God. They should never enter the belfry without prayer, and profane language and improper thoughts should be banished therefrom. If they did this they might expect that their service would be acceptable to God, and they would meet their reward. The service concluded by the singing the hymn, "Hark, hark, my soul," and the pronunciation of "The Blessing," by Rev. Pitt Eykyn, as chaplain of the association.

The members then adjourned to No. 1, Colston-parade, to transact business. The Rev. A. C. Anstey was voted to the chair. The Rev. Pitt Eykyn, the hon. sec., read the minutes of the prior meeting, which were confirmed. The election of officers was then proceeded with. Mr. P. E. Ward, of Cheltenham, was re-appointed master. Mr. Ward observed that he thought it scarcely fair to the Bristol end of the diocese that the master should be selected from the neighbourhood of Gloucester. He would gladly yield in favour of anyone else. As no other name was proposed, Mr. Ward was confirmed in his office. The Rev. Pitt Eykyn, of Magor, Newport, Monmouthshire, was re-appointed hon. secretary, Mr. H. Hatherly, of Gloucester, was again chosen hon. treasurer. The Right Hon. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Bart, M.P., and Sir John Dorrington, Bart., M.P., were re-elected lay vice-presidents. It was moved and seconded that the members of the committee, thirty in number, as they appeared in the printed report of the previous year, be re-elected. An amendment was proposed and seconded that it be left in the power of the officers of the association to revise the list of committeemen, and on the matter being put to the vote the amendment was adopted.

On the proposition of the Rev. Pitt Eykyn, seconded by Mr F. E. Ward, it was resolved that the committee meetings in future be held alternately in Bristol and Gloucester.

The Rev. Pitt Eykyn said that in order to get greater interest in the society a scheme had been devised by himself for obtaining the aid of local secretaries. In the printed report they would see that in each deanery there was what was called a provisional local secretary. He hoped the meeting would ratify that scheme so, that in the next report the word "provisional" might be erased. He proposed that that be done. Mr. Ward seconded the motion, which was carried.

The members further resolved that the business of the annual meeting be transacted at the anniversary meeting held in January, and the wording of the fifth rule was altered accordingly.

Several honorary and performing members were then elected. This concluded the business of the meeting, the proceedings ending with a vote of thanks to the Rev. A. C. Anstey, on the motion of Mr. C. E. D. Boutflower, seconded by Mr. Ward.

The members afterwards dined together at the Ship Inn, Redcliffe-hill, under the presidency of Mr. F. E. Ward, the master. After which the loyal and other toasts were duly honoured.

After the dinner several touches of Grandsire Triples and Caters were rung by the members present. The meeting was the most successful and the best attended that the Association has held for some time.

THE ST. MARTIN'S SOCIETY, BIRMINGHAM.

This society held its annual outing at Hagley on Saturday, the 21st ult., when members assembled from Birmingham, Aston, Handsworth, West Bromwich, Tipton, and Sheffield. A capital dinner having been partaken of at the "Prince of Wales" inn, the members adjourned to the church, permission for ringing having been kindly given by the vicar (Rev. W. C. Gibbs), and touches of Stedman and Treble Bob were rung upon the light but pleasant peal of eight which this society inaugurated in November, 1885.

During the ringing several of the members enjoyed a ramble through the beautiful Hagley park, wherein is situate the mansion well-known as the seat of the famous Lyttleton family.

It was necessary to assemble at the station at 8.30 p.m. for the return journey to Birmingham, which the majority of the members reached in due course, having thoroughly enjoyed their eminently pleasant excursion. They take the opportunity, through the medium of this journal, of thanking the Rector for the use of the bells.

TYDD S. GILES, CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

The old peal of five bells hanging in the detached campanile at Tydd S. Giles (the tenor of which had been cracked for nearly 50 years), has been re-cast and made into a light peal of six by Messrs. Mears and Stainbank, London. Tenor $8\frac{1}{2}$ cwt. The new peal was opened on June 4th, last, when 720's of Oxford Treble Bob and Bob Minor; and several 6-scores of Doubles were rung by the Walpole St. Peter's, and Spalding companies. The tone of the bells and the 'go' was everything that could be desired. The old peal of five were a trifle heavier than the new one, the tenor weighing about 10cwt. This bell and the old treble were cast by Henry Penn, of Peterborough, in 1726 and 1710 respectively. The other three old bells were cast by the Norrisses of Stamford.

The new bells are thus inscribed:—

Treble.—"Omnia fiant ad gloriam Dei."

2nd.—Sigismund Trafford, of Dunton Hall, Tydd St. Maries, 1710

3rd.—I. M. John Scott, Rector, 1862–1868.

4th.—I. M. James W. Berryman, Rector, 1868–1877.

5th.—I. M. Samuel Charlton, Rector, 1877–1882.

Tenor—Gordon Woodgate, Rector.

Henry Smith Ward, Churchwarden.

1887.

The old peal was re-cast.

WINCHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.—DEDICATION OF BELLS.

A very fine ring of eight having been put up at St. Saviour's-on-the-Cliff, Shanklin, Isle of Wight, by Messrs. Mears and Stainbank, a dedication service was held on Friday, July 27th. The local band have been diligently practising for some weeks past, but they have not been allowed to disturb those living near the church by their first attempts at the art. But the clappers of the bells have been kept fastened, and, as they have Seage's apparatus attached to the bells, the work of learning to handle the ropes has been carried on in silence. The bells were heard for the first time on the morning of the Dedication day, when they were raised singly at 11.15 a.m., preparatory to the service at 11.30. They were found to have a rich mellow tone, the tenor is 18 cwt. in E. After a short service had been held in the body of the church, the choir and clergy went to the base of the tower at the west end, where the dedication prayers were said by the vicar, the Rev. C. I. Burland. At the conclusion of these prayers, the Ven. Archdeacon of the Isle of Wight delivered the ropes to the vicar, and said:—"Receive these bells as a sacred trust committed to thee, as the appointed minister of Christ in this church and parish, and take heed that they be used only in His service and for the benefit of His people." As the clergy and choir returned to their places in the chancel, the bells were rung for two or three minutes by the band selected for the opening of the bells. The Archdeacon then preached an eloquent and interesting sermon, describing the history of bells from the earliest days of Christianity, and reminding the congregation of the various occasions on which their new bells would help to raise their minds to the full enjoyment of the services of the church. After the service which was hearty and bright throughout, the bells were set going and a well struck touch of (504) Stedman Triples was brought round in 18 minutes. J. Hewett, 1; J. W. Whiting, 2; G. Grafham, 3; F. Hill, 4; W. Marks, 5; G. Williams, 6; S. Brooker, 7; G. Passingham, 8. After partaking of slight refreshment and a walk through the beautiful Shanklin Chine, the ringers again ascended the tower and rang several touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples during the afternoon.

The Brading and Newport ringers also took part in the afternoon performance. A 447 of Grandsire Triples was rung by J. Hewett, 1; G. Williams, 2; F. Hill, 3; Rev. H. A. Spyers, 4; W. Marks, 5; G. Passingham, 6; J. Whiting, 7; G. Grafham, 8. And a 840 of Stedman Triples by J. Hewett, 1; J. Whiting, 2; G. Grafham, 3; F. Hill, 4; W. Marks, 5; G. Williams, (conductor), 6; S. Brooker, 7; G. Passingham, 8. At half-past four, the local band and selected ringers were entertained at the parish-room to a substantial tea by the vicar and the churchwardens, and the Guild ringers were then obliged to hurry to the last train which took them to meet the six o'clock boat for the mainland.

Great satisfaction was expressed by everyone at the beautiful tone of these new bells, which reflect much credit on the White-chapel foundry, and the Guild hope before long to be able to send a band to try for a peal on this "harmonious ring."

ST. PETER'S CHURCH, GREAT TOTHAM, ESSEX.

On Saturday, July 21st, the ringers of All Saints', Maldon, paid a visit to the above town, and rang several touches assisted by some members of the Great Totham band. A 720 of Plain Bob. W. Last, 1; — Aust, 2; C. Taylor, 3; J. Newman, 4; G. Mansfield, 5; W. Mansfield, 6. And another 720. — Aust, 1; W. Chalk, 2; W. Mansfield, 3; W. Last, 4; *E. Ballard, 5; *J. Janner, 6. *First 720, and members of the local band. Also a touch of Oxford Treble Bob. C. Tabor, 1; R. Hutson, 2; J. Mansfield, 3; G. Mansfield, 4; W. Chalk, 5; W. Mansfield, 6. And on Sunday, July 22nd, at the invitation of the vicar, the Coggeshall band came for their annual visit, and rang several touches of Plain and Oxford Treble Bob, and a 720 of Plain Bob. *S. Rushen, 1; — Aust, 2; J. Sadler, 3; J. Newman, 4; Jas. Sadler, 5; J. Janner, 6. *First 720, and member of the local band.

HOW TO LEARN CHANGE-RINGING WITHOUT AN INSTRUCTOR.—By Charles Pearson, M.A. Price Threepence, by post Fourpence.—WILLIAM POLLARD AND CO. Printers, Exeter.

CHRIST CHURCH, BACUP.

The ringers of the above church had their annual outing on Saturday, July 21st, the place selected being Waddington, Yorkshire. Leaving Bacup at 5.35, the party arrived at Clitheroe at 9 o'clock, where breakfast was awaiting them which was fairly dodged in until "that's all" was called. A wagonette was here awaiting to convey them to Slaidburn, through the noted villages of Chatburn, Sawley, Bolton-in-Bolland, and on arriving at Slaidburn, an ample dinner was served up. After full justice had been done to the good things provided, the ringers made for the church, permission having been obtained to ring, they soon set to work; two 360's of College Single and Oxford single being done by the following:—A. L. Hardman, W. Ormerod, J. Hardman, A. A. Downiug, L. Lord, A. Chew, A. White, G. Smith, and W. Smith, conductor. The bells are a heavy ring of 6 tenor 18 cwt. Time being short they had to make their way to their destination, which was reached shortly after 6 o'clock. After partaking of a substantial tea, the ringers wended their way to the belfry for a short touch. A meeting was afterwards held at the "Buck Inn," where recitations and singing was the order of the evening, the company dispersing at ten o'clock, and the ringers putting up at the above Inn. Sunday morning found them ringing a peal for service, and in the afternoon a 720 of College Single. The party then made their return journey at five o'clock. Arriving at Blackburn, and having some time to wait for a train, the ringers made for Trinity Church which has recently been fitted with tubular bells, but these will soon be replaced by a heavy ring of six, by Taylor. Loughborough. Resuming their journey they arrived safely at Bacup at nine o'clock, having spent two happy days. The thanks of the ringers are due to the vicars of Slaidburn and Waddington, and to all who contributed to make it such a pleasant outing.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Many hands make light work."

The excellent address of the venerable Dean of Lincoln to our friends of the East Lincolnshire Association, coming as it does so closely after the correspondence which I referred to last week, seems quite in keeping with "the eternal fitness of things." It deals in a kindly manner with the position, the duties, and the responsibilities of the ringers; while the first-named letters so ably point out the obligations and the duty of the clergy.

* * * * *

There can be no question about one thing, that with the growth of a better understanding and good feeling between clergy and ringers, there has also grown up simultaneously (I might say equally on both sides), a keener perception of the duties devolving upon us all. There can be no doubt as to another thing, namely, that during the years past while the good work of improvement has been going on if the ringers have not fully understood their duties, it has been through no fault of the clergy, for at every meeting we have been treated to the same old theme, till it has almost become monotonous through its oft repetition. But do not misunderstand me; I am not referring to this in any disrespectful or carping spirit. On the contrary, no one can be more gratified than myself that such has been the case. Although of opinion that we should busy ourselves looking forward and providing for the future, rather than content ourselves with reflecting on the past, yet a momentary glance at our previous history will be sufficient to shew that all these addresses, these injunctions, and these pleadings, have been every one of them required—that they have been in very deed "water to a thirsty land." I could not, therefore, regard them with aught but feelings of thankfulness for the good which they have assisted in accomplishing.

* * * * *

But, as the old and well-known saying goes, there are two sides to every question. While the ringers have been constantly reminded of their duties, little—very little indeed—have we heard of what ought to be done by the clergy. The last few weeks have, however, given us a few bright exceptions in this respect; and now that "the ball has started rolling," I shall look forward to a pretty free and extensive expression of opinion on the part of my brother laymen of the belfry. Those of us who are honestly and unceasingly endeavouring to do our duty with regard to ringing matters according to the circumstances under which we are placed, have a right and exceedingly just cause for calling upon our clergy to do likewise.

* * * * *

Unless and until the clergy as a body "put their hand to the plough" the work of reformation will of necessity go on at a comparatively slow rate. As Mr. Heywood very forcibly remarks: "By comparative indifference to the interests of their ringers, the clergy, with few exceptions, are seriously hindering the progress of that belfry reform which was so successfully initiated by the Rev. H. T. Ellacombe. In his footsteps here and there an individual incumbent is earnestly following, and here and there a churchwarden or influential layman. But the great strides—and they are great—that have been made in the art by which alone the beauty of our church bells can be fully manifested, the art of change-ringing, are mainly due to the energy of the ringers themselves, who, as a rule, receive but a half-hearted support from the parson." These are the words of one who can lay claim to a quarter of a century's experience as a ringer, and to whom Mr. Papillon truly asserts that "no man in England is more qualified to speak on the subject of change-ringing."

* * * * *

Indeed, the whole of this lately-written letter is a serious indictment against our clergy; it is all the more forcible and emphatic because of its truth, as we, most of us, will be able to bear out from our own personal experience. Is it strange, then, that much as it is to be regretted, "the large majority (of ringers) have a very lukewarm interest in the Church," when it is "the rarest thing to see a clergyman in a belfry!" Can it be wondered at that "The ringers are not habituated to connect their office with the service of the Church?" that "they grow to concentrate their regard upon the bells entirely, to the exclusion of the ultimate object for which they and the bells are there?"

* * * * *

A very great responsibility, then, in this matter rests upon the clergy themselves; and while not shirking our own duties in one iota; we may fairly claim the right to call upon them to help on this work of reformation amongst us, not half-heartedly, but honestly and with all their weight and influence. If they do this, I am convinced that they will not only find efforts warmly seconded by those for whose good they thus strive; but they will also find in their parishes a body of Churchworkers and Church-defenders who will prove a valuable help to them in their parochial labours.

* * * * *

I wish the two last issues of "THE BELL NEWS" could have been sent to every ringer, and every clergyman in the land who has a ring in his tower: as I believe that by such means many would have been reminded of their responsibilities, as well of the celebrated words of the great naval hero—"England expects that every man this day will do his duty."

* * * * *

That "deeply moved Protestant," I opine, will by this time have heartily wished his untruthful and absurd effusion had been consigned to the flames before it reached the Guardian office, for a more complete expose of statements made I think I never saw than was contained in the two replies quoted last week. That individual will probably hesitate before he again runs the risk of burning his fingers, and especially in reference to bell-ringers.

* * * * *

I am pleased to note more ringing performances by lady friends. But a very short time back such events would have been regarded by "the sterner sex" with considerable surprise; and if they are more frequent, they will on that account lose none of their pleasant features.

* * * * *

By the way, Mr. Washbrook, you're 'on your mettle this time. The correspondent, who is evidently our old friend Mr. Muskett, gives you a nut to crack. Let us see you crack it satisfactorily, and not entirely ignore it like you did the accusation of a very doubtful peal of Grandsire Triples in Herefordshire.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1888.

THE REV. F. E. ROBINSON, at the recent meeting of the Oxford Guild, supported very telling resolution, having for its object certainly the extension of the science among the members of that Guild. The rev. gentleman is an ardent ringer, as every one knows, and the fact that there are among the members of that body of which he is the chief ornament many who never intend perhaps to become ringers has made him apparently impatient of their connection with it. His resolution, we cannot help thinking, would, if carried, have eliminated a most influential number of members, and therefore it is as well, perhaps, that it was defeated, and Mr. ROBINSON will have to be content with the raising of the question, and that by itself will no doubt lead to some good results in the very direction wished for. It has often been felt that some effort should be made by which the honorary members of our Guilds and Associations could become more useful to the science than they are. We cannot expect they all can become efficient, but many of them could, and would no doubt if some little pressure was brought to bear upon them.

This pressure must not be of too severe a nature—the remedy must not be too drastic. We are afraid if the worthy master of the Oxford Guild grasps at too much, he may lose all. His object, however, merits the sympathy of every one, and as we have said, the fact that such a proposal has been made, will no doubt have all the effect which he expected.

CHURCH BELLS.

The following letter appears in this week's Guardian :—

SIR,—Your correspondents in the present issue, in noticing the insecurity of church towers from the action of the bells, have omitted what I consider to be one of the most important reasons. I will borrow from Lord Grimthorpe the account of the injury to which towers are exposed from the improper frames on which the bells are too often hung :—

"Every architect, as well as every bell-founder, knows that a bell-frame ought not to touch the walls and that many a tower has been seriously damaged by parish carpenters making the frame 'steady' by wedging it against the wall. And I notice the point here in order to remind clergymen and churchwardens that there is no part of their fabric in which the maxim that a 'stitch in time saves nine' is more true than in the bell-chamber, and moreover that they should see that the stitch they take is the right one, add taken under good advice.

"The bell frames themselves are often made too slight ; for in this as in other church work the unscientific construction of the old builders has been carefully copied, while the massiveness, which made it of little consequence, has been omitted. Thus we see bell frames which bend and vibrate in every direction when the bells are ringing, because the timbers are neither thick enough to resist the bending force, nor stiffened with any diagonal bracing to make up for it."—[E. Beckett Denison, Lectures on Church Building, Lon., 1856, pp. 272-3.]

There is more to the same effect well worthy of careful notice. Sandford St. Martin, July 27th, 1888. ED. MARSHALL.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

THE WINCHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.

SIR,—One important matter was brought forward at the annual festival of the Winchester Diocesan Guild of Ringers held at Leatherhead, July 19th, it was the question of having a die sunk for casting a medal or badge to be worn by change-ringers at their outings and other occasions, so that those who are strangers may the more easily recognise one another. It is a question that I have advocated for some time past. The time at our disposal at the meeting was limited, so we could do nothing more than adopt the principle of the thing, which was agreed too unanimously, the question of detail to be left for further consideration. The day before the meeting took place I called at the firm of Wyon, Regent Street, and they strongly advised me to put the idea before the Exercise and see if any other association would take it up as well as that of Winchester. They gave me to understand the name of any association or guild could be cast from the same die. I will not go into the question what the design should be till I see if any others are likely to take it up.

SAMUEL MERRITT.

22, Holdenhurst Road, Bournemouth,
July 28th, 1888.

SIR.—I see in the report of the meeting of the Winchester Guild of ringers held at Leatherhead on July 19th, special mention was made by Mr. Spyers to the withdrawal of the St. Nicholas Guildford band of Ringers from the Guild, and the strange refusal to join the Guild after all the assistance they have received. I should like Mr. Spyers to explain the nature of the assistance rendered to the band by the Guild, for I am at a loss to know what all the assistance means. That gentleman's answer to my question through your valuable paper, will oblige Guildford, July 31st, 1888.

ONE OF THE LATE BAND.

A QUESTION.

SIR,—In your issue of "THE BELL NEWS" for July 21st, there is a peal of Stedman Caters by me which Mr. Washbrook, of Oxford, says is very false. May I ask him to state in what part of the peal the very falseness occurs.

London, August 1st, 1888.

J. H. BARRETT.

FALSE PEAL.

SIR,—I very much regret the peal of Double Norwich Court Bob Major turns out false—hopelessly false, and I am indeed vexed that it has been rung. I therefore tender most sincerely my apologies to the gentlemen of Ipswich Society, and more particularly those who took part in the performance. The figures of this same peal appear on page 24 of the late Mr. Snowden's treatise on this method.

147, Barnsbury Road, 31st July, 1888.

H. DAINS.

"QUICK PEALS."

SIR,—I see Mr. Muskett is still very dissatisfied with the peal of Stedman Triples being rung rather quicker than he is used to them. What does that gentleman say about the quick peals rung at West Bromwich? One of Triples in 2 hrs. 23 mins. amongst them, and I think I heard Mr. F. Pitstow of Saffron Walden say they have turned their bells about at over 30 to the minute in Stedman Triples. Permit me also to say that had we had the luck to have finished the recent attempt for a peal of Stedman Caters at Chelmsford, in which several well-known ringers took part, the peal would have been completed in 2 hrs. 50 mins, with a tenor over a ton, and most excellent ringing, that was allowing time to get slower, which I don't believe we should have done. The peal was stopped by the churchwarden. And how about the famous peal of Stedman Caters rung at the Cathedral, Oxford, in 3 hrs. 7½ mins., which was listened to by Mr. N. J. Pitstow, and said by him to be some of the finest ringing he had ever heard. Tenor 42 cwt., rung single-handed. Why does not our friend object to all these performances? Oh, I beg pardon, they were not all members of the Oxford Guild who rung these peals. I made a mistake, by mentioning them. Ah, well! we are all liable to mistakes, and that is the reason people have to be put right, both in ringing and criticising others. From now we shall consider Mr. Muskett answered, since he will not take part or even listen to a repetition of the said performance. Will he give us permission to ring another quick one?

Obituary.

On Tuesday, July 24th, Charles Underwood, late a ringer belonging to the York Minster branch of the Yorkshire Association of change-ringers departed this life, after a long illness, at the early age of 34 years. As a ringer he has rung at several churches ten peals of 5000 changes and upwards in Grandsire, Treble Bob, and Stedman, and not least three peals on hand-bells retained in hand, viz: one of Grandsire Triples, one of Grandsire Caters, and one of Treble Bob Royal in the Kent variation, and promised to be a good conductor till his illness came upon him. His funeral took place on Thursday the 26th, at the cemetery, his remains being carried to the grave by four of the company, and after the office for the burial of the dead (which was rendered impressively by the chaplain, the Rev. G. H. Hewison), a course of Grandsire Caters was rung on the hand-bells in the presence of a numerous gathering of friends, by the following members: W. H. Howard, 1-2; A. C. Fearnley, 3-4; G. Breed, 5-6; J. Thompson, 7-8; and Wm. Morrell, 9-10. The coffin was covered with wreaths and flowers, and suspended on each side were two hand-bells, indicating that he was a lover of the science of ringing in all its branches. In the evening was rung on the bells of the Minster several touches of Caters with the bells muffled, as a last parting tribute to an old friend and comrade.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Monday, July 23rd, the ringers of the parish church, Poslingford, Suffolk, held their first annual outing. Being a rural district, the first thing was to walk down to the ancient town of Clare (where hangs the only peal of eight bells in Suffolk that are unringable, tenor 28 cwt.) to find two conveyances awaiting them. Starting from Clare at 8.45 they reached Hartest about 10.15. The peal of five were soon seen set in motion, and three 6-scores of Grandsire and one of Bob Doubles were rung by:—W. Atkinson, 1; G. Basham, 1; D. Gridley, 3; H. Burling, 4; C. Howe, (conductor), 5; also another 6-score, with C. Rawlinson, 3; the others standing as before.

The next tower on the list being Shimpling, they made a start at 11.45, and in about fifteen minutes they were in the churchyard, but now a difficulty arose as to where to find the sexton, for the church stands quite out of the village, but after a good deal of running here and there, he was discovered working about two minutes' walk from the church. The bells, five in number, were found in rather a poor condition, not having been rung for several years, but after a little perseverance two 6-scores of Bob and one of Grandsire were rung by:—W. Atkinson, 1; G. Basham, 2; D. Gridley, 3; H. Burling, 4; C. Howe, (conductor), 5.

A move was then made to Stanstead, Suffolk, but as it was time for dinner, "a peal on the knives and forks" was first thought about, and successfully "brought round," at the White Hart. After which, they were joined by Mr. S. Slater, of Glemsford, and they at once bent their steps toward the church, which possesses a nice little ring of six, tenor 12 cwt., upon which they rang, at the second attempt, their first 720 of Bob Minor, in 30 minutes, by:—W. Atkinson, 1; D. Gridley, 2; G. Basham, 3; S. Slater, (conductor), 4; H. Burling, 5; C. Howe, 6; also some touches with C. Rawlinson on the 5th.

At they had yet another tower to visit, namely, Glemsford, (six bells, tenor cwt.) they lost no time in reaching it, and there they rang another 720 of Bob Minor, as follows:—W. Atkinson, 1; S. Slater, (conductor), 2; G. Basham, 8; D. Gridley, 4; H. Burling, 5; C. Howe, 6. After which, some touches were rung with F. W. Hicks (who had just arrived from Clare) on the 4th. Messrs. C. Adams, Z. Slater, and W. Downes, of the Glemsford company, also took part during the evening. After a friendly chat the party returned home at a seasonable hour, having thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROSSENDALE BRANCH.

The next ringing meeting of the above branch, will take place on Saturday, August 11th, 1888, at St. Saviour's Church, Bacup, bells ready at 2 o'clock. Meeting in the School at 6.30.

J. T. SROTT, Local Sec.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Thursday, July 26th, seven members of the Dalton-on-Furness parish church company had their first outing, starting from Dalton by the seven o'clock train they arrived at Coniston about nine. After an hour's good walk they got to the village of Hawkshead, made their way to the church, and having received permission to ring and finding all ready they raised the bells and rung a 120 of Grandsire Doubles. T. Watson (conductor), 1; T. Townson, 2; G. Spencer, 3; M. Cuddy, 4; T. R. Jackson, 5; J. Burrows, 6. A start was then made for a 720 of Grandsire Minor, but it came to grief after ringing 500 changes. T. R. Jackson, 1; T. Townson, 2; J. Spencer, 3; M. Cuddy, 4; J. Burrows, 5; T. Watson (conductor), 6. Tenor about 10 cwt. After lowering the bells, the time being limited, the company adjourned to the "Red Lion" for dinner, which was served up by the hostess, Mrs. Latterwaite, in her very best style. Dinner being over an enjoyable walk was made to Brathay, where all was in readiness. Raising the bells another 720 of Grandsire Minor was attempted, but came to grief after over 400 changes were rung. T. R. Jackson (conductor), 1; T. Townson, 2; J. Spencer, 3; M. Cuddy, 4; T. Watson, 5; J. Burrows, 6. Tenor 9 cwt. Also a 240 Grandsire Minor. T. Jackson, 1; T. Townson, 2; T. Watson (conductor), 3; M. Cuddy, 4; T. R. Jackson, 5; J. Burrows, 6. Time being short the bells were dropped and the company wended their way to the "Water Head," Wandermere, and took the steamer for Bowness. Arriving there a refreshing cup of tea was obtained at the "Commercial" Inn, and having only a short time to stay they proceeded to the church, raised the bells, and rang a few short touches of Grandsire Minor on the middle six. The bells are a peal of eight. Tenor 12 cwt. T. Jackson, 1; J. Spencer, 2; T. Townson, 3; T. Watson (conductor), 4; M. Cuddy, 5; T. R. Jackson, 6; J. Burrows, 7; ———, 8. After lowering the bells the homeward journey was commenced, Dalton being reached about 9.30, everyone having thoroughly enjoyed himself. The ringers take this opportunity of thanking the vicars of each of the above churches for their kindness in permitting them to ring.

THE BIRMINGHAM AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The members of the above society held their annual outing at the ancient village of Salford Priors, on Saturday last, July 28th. On arriving there by train about 3.30 p.m., they made their way to the "Bell" Inn, where a most substantial dinner awaited them, being served up in grand style by the worthy hostess, Mrs. Houghton. After doing ample justice to the good things provided for them, they adjourned to the church tower, which contains a fine peal of eight bells. Tenor 16 cwt. A start was made for a peal of Grandsire Triples, but after ringing about 900 changes, the conductor, Mr. Carter, brought the bells round owing to the bad go of the tenor. After which touches of Stedman Triples, Bob Major, and Bob Triples were rung. After falling the bells the company returned to the "Bell" Inn, where hand-bell ringing and joyous songs were indulged in till time was up for the return home, where after 1 hour and 35 minutes ride they arrived safely well pleased with their outing, and they take this opportunity of thanking the vicar and churchwardens for their kindness in granting them the use of the bells.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

The quarterly meeting of this Association was held on Saturday last, at the Parish Church, Blackburn; the attendance of ringers was good, considering the state of the weather. Members were present from Manchester, Bolton, Southport, Heywood, Bury, Colne, Church, and Ramsbottom. Very little ringing was done, owing to the serious illness of a parishoner, who resided very near the church. The meeting was subsequently held, over which Mr. Hill, of Southport, presided. A few short speeches were delivered in furtherance of the act of ringing and the development of the work of the Association in the East Lancashire district. Eleven new members were elected. Votes of thanks were accorded to the vicar and wardens for the use of the bells, etc.

In response to enquiries we beg to state that Mr. J. Redford, of 9, Portugal Street, Bolton, is secretary of the Lancashire Association.

THE ST. STEPHEN'S SOCIETY, HAMPSTEAD.

On Monday, July 23rd, the members and friends of this company had their annual excursion. The day fortunately turned out fine, and this added considerably to the enjoyment of the party. The town of Hertford was the place selected, and there the visitors were met by Mr. Ellsmore, who conducted them to the "Black Swan" inn, the chosen head quarters for the day. After refreshing themselves, a move was made to All Saints' tower, where a short touch of Grandsire Caters was rung. A start was then made for a peal in that method in honor of the silver wedding of the Rev. Canon Wigram, who was married at Hampstead on July 23, 1863. All went well for 2 hrs. 20 mins., when the 2nd bell became deranged somehow, bringing the peal to an untimely end. The ringers were S. Clarke, 1; T. F. Stephens, 2; B. Paine, 3; G. Newson (conductor), 4; H. Tyler, 5; D. W. Greggs, 6; B. Foskett, 7; N. Alderman, 8; E. Chapman, 9; W. Arscott, 10. It was afterwards found that the rope had become fixed in the pulley-wheel, caused by a piece of wood, which was found between the wheel and frame. The usual expressions of disappointment having been allowed full play, the church of St. Andrew, which has a peal of eight, was visited, a short touch of Grandsire Triples being brought round. At two o'clock dinner was held at the above-named inn, and judging by the general appearance of the dining table, this was the most important event of the day. After dinner, the tower was again visited, and a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples rung, while some of the company enjoyed a gentle row up the stream. All Saints' church was again visited, and a touch of Grandsire Caters rung, and the bells lowered. Some of the local band now joined the company, and a touch of Stedman Triples was attempted, but without success. This brought a very enjoyable day to a close, the visitors being accompanied to the railway station by their Hertford friends. They wish to thank the incumbents of both the above-named churches for the use of their bells, and Mr. Ellsmore and the steeple-keepers for their kindness on this occasion.

THE ARMLEY SOCIETY, YORKS.

On Saturday afternoon, July 21st, the members of this society, accompanied by a friend, paid a visit to Woodlesford, near Leeds, and there met several of the local ringers. They being two short, two of the Armley company preceded the remainder, so as to assist them to ring for a special service of the Girls' Friendly Society, for which service they rang a 720 of Oxford. Afterwards, the remainder of the band turned up, and a mixed company ascended the tower and rung two 720's of Oxford Treble Bob Minor, and, also touches of Violet and Woodbine, the "go" of the bells being very good. The ringers returned to Leeds at 8.24, having enjoyed a very pleasant outing.

The Armley company wish through this paper to thank the vicar, the Rev. A. J. Irvin for allowing the use of the bells, and also the ringers for having things in readiness, and the hearty welcome received at their hands.

ST. MICHAEL'S AMATEUR SOCIETY, BRISTOL.

ON Monday, July 16th, the members of the above society had their annual outing, Bournemouth being the place selected. They left Bristol at 7.5, and Bournemouth was reached a little before eleven. After indulging in a sail in the bay, a little campanology was resorted to as a variation to the day's proceedings. Accordingly by the kind permission of the rector, several six-scores of Grandsire Doubles, with 4, 6, 8, as cover, were rung on the bells of St. Peter's church. G. Webley, 1; A. Isaac, 2; G. Sheppard, 3; W. Lea, 4; J. Weaver, 5; W. Lewis, 6; F. Price (conductor), 7; E. Lea, 8. After the ringing was accomplished, tea was partaken of at the "Quadrant," shortly after the party wended their way to the station, and after a journey of four hours, Bristol was reached at 11.30., which terminated a most enjoyable day.

ROCHDALE AND DISTRICT ASSOCIATION.

The Quarterly Meeting will be held at Healy Parish Church on August 4th. Bells ready at 2; Meeting at 4.30 in the schoolroom. J. HOGGARD, Hon. Sec.

THE HOLT SOCIETY, ASTON-JUXTA-BIRMINGHAM.

This Society held its annual picnic and dinner on Saturday, the 28th ult., at Sutton Coldfield, Warwickshire.

Having gathered together from different stations along the line, the members, numbering between twenty and thirty, arrived at their rendezvous, the "Emmanuel College Arms," about 3.30, where they were met by Mr. Holmes of Burton, who had availed himself of the opportunity to listen to and examine the fine peal of eight bells in the tower of the parish here.

The weather being decidedly damp, the interval being arrival and dinner was enlivened by the minstrelsy of a cast-iron-throated troubadour, who afforded as much amusement by his brazen effrontery as by his vocal efforts. A crude mixture of cast-iron and brass, however, affords but indifferent music, so that the prompt summons to dinner was doubly welcome.

Setting to work with that grim but radiant determination so characteristic of the change-ringer, the knives and forks rattled merry music, each course-end coming up with the distinctness and regularity peculiar to well-struck peals and hearty dinners.

The cloth having been cleared, that veteran ringer, Mr. John Day, of Harborne, was unanimously and enthusiastically elected to preside over the further proceedings, and that no time might be lost, immediately proposed, in a few well-chosen words—"The Queen," which toast was duly honoured. Then followed, "Success to the Holt Society," by the Secretary; and "The Health of our Visitor, Mr. Johnson, sen." Mr. Hemming, in a brief speech, referred to Mr. Johnson's well-acquired fame as a composer, and explained how much Mr. Johnson had forwarded the science, not only by the truth and symmetry of his compositions, but by the example of his unflagging zeal and life-long devotion, beginning as a young man when change-ringing was under a cloud, and its votaries despised, and still continuing during its present happier days, although he was now in his 80th year.

Mr. Johnson having suitably responded, a start was made for the tower, when the Master of the company having divided his forces in such a way that all might have the pleasure of ringing on the bells, touches of Double Norwich, Stedman, Treble Bob, and Grandsire were duly brought round. The ropes were then taken in hand by the Sutton ringers, who under the tuition of Mr. Kent made their start in scientific change-ringing some six months ago, and the listeners, many of whom have themselves profited by Mr. Kent's instructions, were astonished and delighted at the proficiency arrived at in so short a time.

The members again gathered together, their number augmented by the presence of the Sutton ringers, and the rest of the evening was enlivened by pleasant converse, singing, and handbell ringing. Ever-welcome old time reminiscences of ringers and ringing were given in that racy style so familiar to all who have the pleasure of an acquaintance with the veterans, Mr. H. Johnson, sen., and Mr. John Day. Touches of Stedman Cinques and Caters were rung on handbells by Messrs. Russam, Wittchell, Miller, Bastable, Kent, Johnson, jun., and Buffery; and appropriate songs were capitally rendered by Messrs. Day, Miller, Johnson jun., Bastable, Reynolds, and Matthews.

Not unmindful of services rendered, hearty votes of thanks were passed to the Chairman for presiding, and to the hostess for her capital catering. "Success to 'THE BELL NEWS,'" the healths of the founder of the society (Mr. W. Kent), the secretary (Mr. W. H. Godden), and the master (Mr. H. Bastable), having been drank and suitably responded to, the proceedings were closed by the singing of the National Anthem, and at a seasonable hour the members dispersed to their several homes.

We cannot help thinking that such pleasant gatherings as these do much to foster and keep up an interest in our science, as well as to encourage that friendly feeling and mutual understanding which is so necessary to its development.

THE KENT COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

The next District Meeting is fixed to be held at Tenterden on Thursday, August 16th. It is also the Tenterden Cricket week. It is intended to visit Rolvenden (eight bells), Benenden (eight bells), and Woodchurch (six bells). All who wish to attend are requested to communicate with Winsted Court.

R. KNATCHBULL-HUGESSEN, Hon. Sec.

CROYDON, SURREY.

On Monday, July 23rd, the ringers of the parish church were invited by the Vicar, the Rev. J. M. Braithwaite, to spend the evening in the Vicarage grounds. Arriving about 7 o'clock p.m., the ringers were cordially received by the Vicar and the Rev. E. D. L. Harvey. A stroll was taken through the gardens, and Dr. A. B. Carpenter, the Hon. Secretary of the Surrey Association, having arrived, the ringers sat down to a splendid dinner served on the lawn. Several change-courses occurred, but stand was not called until they had all been brought round.

After grace the Vicar rose and said that although he hoped everyone present would enjoy themselves, they could not help thinking with sorrow that Mr. Holman, who last year had been with them apparently a strong man, had since gone to his rest. Mr. Holman had been greatly missed by everyone connected with the belfry, and as it had pleased God to call him, it behoved them all to be prepared to follow him, for no one could tell when the time would come for them to meet their God. The Vicar also expressed his approval of the advance made in the science, three peals in three different methods having been rung at the parish church since he met them here last year. He was also very pleased to see so many young members overcoming the difficulties of change-ringing. In conclusion, the Vicar said he had read with much pleasure the last issue of "THE BELL NEWS," with every word of which he fully agreed, and regretted very much that a standing engagement prevented him visiting the tower on the regular practice night, but he was sure his place would be efficiently filled by the Rev. E. D. L. Harvey, who, he heard, had already won his spurs in the belfry.

The Churchwardens (Dr. A. Carpenter, J.P., and R. Flint, Esq.), now arrived, and some churchwardens provided by the Vicar, being filled and lighted, subjects bearing on belfry reform, etc., were discussed, and the Churchwardens kindly promised to visit the belfry and see if they could not carry out some improvements there.

During the evening touches of Grandsire Caters, etc., were rung on the handbells, and the Vicar also brought out his telescope, through which the beauties of the heavens were seen that were quite invisible to the naked eye.

Dr. A. B. Carpenter on behalf of the ringers then thanked the Vicar for his great kindness and hospitality, and the Vicar having responded, a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROSSENDALE BRANCH.

On Saturday, July 14th, a ringing meeting of the above branch took place at St. James's church, Waterfoot, when about twenty-five ringers from Christ Church, and St. Saviour's, Bacup, Newchurch, Waterfoot, and Helmsford, attended and took part in the ringing during the afternoon and evening. A splendid knife and fork tea was provided by the Waterfoot ringers, the tea tables being presided over by the ringers' wives and sisters. At the meeting in the schoolroom, presided over by the Rev. C. Wilson, vicar, it was resolved that the next ringing meeting be held at St. Saviour's, Bacup. The Chairman in addressing the ringers, said he hoped that the present good feeling existing between the clergy and ringers of the various churches would continue, and showed what great good ringers' associations had done in the past. Votes of thanks to the vicar for presiding, to the wardens for the use of the bells, brought the meeting to a close, after which the ringing again commenced and was brought to a finish about 10 o'clock by a well-struck 720 of Plain Bob. J. Bolton (conductor), 1; W. Maden, 2; J. B. Taylor, 3; A. L. Hardman, 4; G. Lord, 5; W. Whittaker, 6.

NOTICE.—By the kind invitation of the Rev. Canon Bridges, the Beddington ringers will celebrate the nineteenth anniversary of the opening of the bells on Bank Holiday, August 6th. The tower will be open at 2.0 p.m., when every effort will be made to suit the convenience of old and new friends. Mr. Trappitt has again kindly consented to provide tea for those who may require it.

THE DEVONSHIRE GUILD.

ON Saturday, July 28th, a District Meeting of the bands affiliated to the Devonshire Guild, which will be recorded in the annals as one of the most successful and pleasant of its kind, was held at Exeter. The head-quarters for the day was the St. Sidwell's Institute in Summerland Crescent, kindly placed at the disposal of the Guild by the Rector of St. Sidwell's (the Rev. S. W. E. Bird). The bands met at 2 o'clock, and formed parties to visit the following belfries: St. David's, St. Sidwell's, St. John's, St. Petrock's, St. Thomas's, and Alphington, all of which had been kindly thrown open. At 4 o'clock the majority of the ringers wended their way to the Cathedral, where, by permission of the Dean and Chapter, they were allowed to view and ring upon the notable peal of ten. The former privilege, it is almost needless to say, was taken advantage of, and those interested in change-ringing were not slow to express a hearty wish that the bells could be speedily rehung so as to be rung according to scientific methods. As many as possible had a pull, and the ringing concluded with a 6-score of Grandsire Doubles on the Cupthorne six in capital style by —. Mudge, 1; S. Binfield, 2; E. Shepherd, 3; F. Shepherd, 4; J. Moss, 5; T. J. Lake and B. Mundy, 6. It was many years since half-pull changes were rung at Exeter Cathedral, the last occasion being by a party of the College Youths, from London.

After leaving the Cathedral the bands proceeded to St. Sidwell's church, where a short service was held, the Rev. S. W. E. Bird and the Rev. E. C. Spicer officiating. The Ven. Archdeacon Sandford delivered an appropriate address, in the course of which he said:

It was not very easy after the excitement of bell ringing for them to attune their hearts to the quietude of prayer and worship. And yet it was a good thing to make the effort, for it was not a thing impossible to do. He remembered one who tried to teach him the lesson of the connexion between hard work and real worship long years ago. He remembered how a true teacher of young men used to bring them, very often from the excitement of a hard game at football from the playing fields to the communion lectures. He wanted to teach them the good lesson of how a man could work hard and well, and, while doing it, serve God. He (the Ven. Archdeacon) thought that was a lesson needed in these times. They had heard some of them of the phrase "muscular Christianity." It was a good thing, "muscular Christianity," if they took heed both to the muscularity, and also to the Christianity. It was a good thing to remember that Christianity might be muscular. But there was another side to it. He wanted them to remember that manhood and strength must be Christian. They knew, perhaps, that there was a fear in these days that the working-men of England should go away from God. He wanted them to feel and say, "I will raise my protest against this; I will bring my manhood and my strength to God." And that, he took it, was just the lesson, and, indeed, the motto of their Guild. But he wanted to give them one or two words of warning, and he was sure they would take them in good part, because they knew that there was very often a vast difference between the ideal and the actual—what they professed to be and what they really were. And so he wanted them to remember, firstly, that they must not be high-minded; that they must be humble. They were reformers, as he took it, and it was their province to improve the condition of the belfry. But probably they knew the danger which beset all reforms. It was the danger of parting company with the past, of thinking that there never was any good thing in the past, and this new man born into the world was going to set everything right. It spoiled all reform, and was absolutely fatal to all religious reform. They had done something to clear out the baser things of the church belfry. But did they believe that a man who went into the belfry with the thought that he was much better than the old ringers used to be, that he understood methods which they did not, did they believe that that kind of man was really purging the belfry? He knew of nothing which was more contrary to the good God above than the spirit of pride. And it was because he wished well to their ringing and to their Guild that he wanted them to remember that the foundation of the Kingdom of God was light in the humble spirit. They knew that there was a tendency in all human systems to deteriorate. Reforms began, and began well generally; but the reforms of one day sometimes became the abuse of the next. The old heathen poet used to say that all things were ever tending towards decline. And so it was true in regard to all things human. But it was not true in regard to the Church of God. And if they wanted to preserve their Guild from this fatal tendency, they must try to regulate it by the true laws of the Kingdom of Christ. There must be a penetrating power from without. He meant this—that if they wanted their Guild to go forward they must let the lessons of the Guild work down into the depths of their own souls. They must not only fly, as it were, the temperance flag, but they must be themselves, in their own lives and hearts, temperate men and true Churchmen. If their scientific ringing was to be of any real service to the Church of God, it must be because the scientific ringers themselves were true Churchmen. And there must not be only the penetrating power from without to what was inward, but there must also be the growth, the advance, year by year, in their own lives if they wanted their Guild to go forward and prosper. They were respectable young men; they must become religious men, or else, little by little, the law of deterioration was sure to begin to work. There must be progress, there must be growth. It was one of the principles of bell-ringing, as he understood, that there should be no monotony, but constant changing. Yes, constant changing was a beautiful thing when it went along with progress. Progress was a beautiful thing if all the time there was the steady power of a diapason, and the harmony of Christian love and steady labour for God. As there must be no monotony in the ringing, so there must not be any monotony in the life. They must go forward, or else he could predict for them an absolute certainty that before long the scientific ringers of the present day would be no better than the ringers of the past.

After the service the ringers proceeded to the Institute, where a substantial tea was awaiting them. There were nearly eighty present, the bands represented being St. David's, St. Sidwell's, Kenn, Whitstone, Tiverton, Upton Pyne, Clyst St. George, and Bradninch. Among those present were the Hon. and Rev. J. S. Northcote, the energetic and obliging Hon. Secretary of the Guild, who made the arrangements for the day, Colonel Hobart, the Ven. Archdeacon Sandford, the Rev. S. W. E. Bird, the Rev. R. Porter (Kenn), the Rev. S. H. Berkeley, and Mr. R. Jerman. The tea-tables were presided over by Mrs. F. Shepherd, Mrs. E. Shepherd, Mrs. B. Mundy, Mrs. T. J. Lake, and Miss Mundy, who carried out their duties in the most pleasant manner.

In the course of a few remarks at the close of the tea, the Hon. and Rev. J. S. Northcote, who was cordially received, thanked, on behalf the ringers, Archdeacon Sandford for his address. He also mentioned that the Ven. Archdeacon had allowed his name to be put down as one of the Vice-Presidents of the Guild. Continuing, he said he wished in their name to offer their best thanks to the clergy who had been so kind as to allow them the use of their towers, and to the Cathedral ringers for so kindly assisting them to ring what was the finest peal of bells in the world. He also desired to express their thanks to those ladies (Miss Norman and Miss Woolcombe) who had so kindly arranged the tea, and to those ladies who had presided at the tea-tables. He expressed regret that the President of the Guild (Colonel Troyte) was unable to be present, and read a telegram which he had received from him to that effect.

The Ven. Archdeacon SANDFORD said he took a great interest in bell-ringing. In his early days, being of an ambitious turn of mind, he caught hold of a bell rope and was very nearly drawn up to the ceiling. Since then he was afraid his ringing was not of a practical kind. He nevertheless took a great interest in it, and if they would accept of such support as he could give it, he could assure them that he should be most happy. He wished to express, in the most hearty way, his great desire that the Guild of Devonshire Ringers might go forward and prosper with the work it had begun.

MR. GRATER, of Tiverton, in a few suitable words proposed a vote of thanks to the Hon. and Rev. J. S. Northcote, which was carried by acclamation.

The hon. and rev. gentleman having replied, the ringers adjourned to various belfries, and later in the day proceeded homewards, having taken part in a district meeting which will be remembered by them as one of the most enjoyable ever held in connexion with the Guild.

Considerable dissatisfaction was expressed that St. Edmund's belfry should have been closed to the Guild, but it was stated that the tower was not closed to the Guild, but only to a few individuals of a particular band.

THE KENT COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

The next District Meeting is fixed to be held at Tenterden on Thursday, August 16th. It is also the Tenterden Cricket week. It is intended to visit Rolvenden (eight bells), Benenden (eight bells), and Woodchurch (six bells). All who wish to attend are requested to communicate with Wrinstead Court.

R. KNATCHBULL-HUGESSEN, Hon. Sec.

THE ST. LUKE'S SOCIETY, LIVERPOOL.

The members of the above had their Annual Outing, on Monday, August 6th, the place selected being Chester. The party which consisted of Messrs. R. S. Mann, J. R. Pritchard, W. James, F. W. Moore, P. Barton, R. Gowans, J. Aspinwall, T. Hammond, W. Booth, W. Davies, G. Fisher, and J. Martin, left Liverpool at 8.45 a.m. arriving in Chester shortly after 10 a.m., and at once proceeded to the village of Christleton. Arrived here we were met by the genial clerk of the church. Mr. S. Mayers, who had everything in readiness for us. After raising the bells, touches of Stedman and Grandsire Triples, Kent Treble and Plain Bob Major were rung, conducted by Messrs. Hammond, Mann, Pritchard and Aspinwall respectively. Having dropped the bells, the whole party proceeded to the village inn where a pleasant half-hour was spent; on the motion of Mr. F. W. Moore, seconded by Mr. J. R. Pritchard, a cordial vote of thanks was accorded to the Vicar for placing the bells at our disposal, and also to Mr. Mayers for having everything in readiness for our comfort.

Leaving Christleton we returned to Chester, reaching there about two o'clock. An adjournment was then made for dinner. This having been concluded to the entire satisfaction of all, a move was made to the Cathedral, when we had the pleasure of listening to the music of a touch of Stedman Triples on this grand peal of bells. On reaching the belfry we found it crowded with ringers from all parts of Cheshire, who had come to attend the meeting of the Chester Diocesan Guild. On the completion of the Stedman Triples which was rang by a mixed band, the courteous conductor of the Cathedral Ringers, Mr. Freeman Ball, at once placed the bells at our disposal, when we rang short touches of Stedman and Grandsire Triples, conducted by Messrs. Hammond and Mann. Descending the tower we proceeded to the new church of St. Mary-Without-the-Walls, which contains a fine new peal of bells, tenor about a ton. Here we found the belfry in the same manner as at the cathedral, literally packed with ringers, Mr. Bethell, the conductor here, working his hardest to see everyone was obliged with a pull.

On getting possession of the ropes we rang a touch of Kent Treble Bob Major, followed by touch of Plain Bob Major, Mr. Ball taking part with us in both, conducted by J. R. Pritchard. After having had tea, we joined our friends at the "Coach and Horses," and spent the remainder of the evening in handbell ringing, singing, &c., until the time came for departure, Mr. Ball and Mr. Bethell accompanying us part of the way to the Railway station, which we left shortly after 11 p.m. arriving at Liverpool soon after midnight, highly gratified with our day's pleasure, and we now take the opportunity through the "THE BELL NEWS," of tendering our sincere thanks to all kind friends who contributed to our enjoyment.

P.

A TRIP TO THE MIDLANDS.

Being in Derbyshire for my holidays this year I thought I should like to try their bells, and accordingly made arrangements with Mr. J. W. Taylor, Jun., of the well-known firm of bell-founders for a peal at All Saints, Loughboro', on the Friday night, July 20th (Grandsire Caters), which was lost after ringing just over an hour, when to complete the evening, touches of Stedman Triples and Grandfire Caters were brought round, and after lowering the bells in peal, I returned to the "Bell," one of the head hotels in Loughboro', where accommodation had been kindly engaged by the above-named gentleman for the night. On the Saturday, having had breakfast, I visited Messrs. Taylor's bell-foundry, which is quite a picture for anyone to see. Mr. Taylor, sen., who is a farmer in a very unique way, as well as a bell-founder, then took me for a drive to his farm which is some little distance out of Loughboro', and the morning being fine, this was a great treat to one who is accustomed to indoor work. Our next order was for dinner, at the house of Mr. Taylor, sen., and after the last course-end had been brought up, two traps were waiting to drive our band to Quorndon, a village about two miles out, for a peal of Stedman Triples on the beautiful light peal at St. Bartholomew's Church, hung by Messrs. Taylor in an iron frame the same as at Loughboro', which go splendidly. This peal, however, was lost, after ringing about 1,500 changes. Not having time to start for it again, a short touch or two was rung and the bells were lowered in peal, after which the handbells were brought into requisition. We were then ordered to take our seats and drive back to Loughboro' where we took tea, and I went on to my destination quite satisfied with what I had done, although not successful at either place. I wish through the columns of "THE BELL NEWS" to express my best thanks to the Messrs. Taylor for the very kind way they entertained a stranger.

THE ROYAL DOCKYARD DEVONPORT BRANCH OF DEVONSHIRE GUILD.

On Saturday, July 21st, this band met an hour earlier than usual, viz., 5 p.m., to welcome their brother-strings from St. Mary's, Taunton. A report of the proceedings may be read in "THE BELL NEWS" of July 28th. Mr. Doble may be congratulated in having such a promising band of all young men under his care. We wish them every success. While they were leaving the tower the Dockyard band rang a 420 Grandsire Triples.—E. Ross, 1; G. Broderick, 2; A. Richards, 3; J. Steed, 4; Walter Marsh, (conductor), 5; W. Pyne, 6; J. Eastabrook, 7; T. Batten, 8. We then had a very pleasant surprise in the form of a visit from the vicar of Dockyard Chapel, the Rev. W. Dickson, LL.D., who informed us he had become an hon. member of the Guild. He told us he was pleased to see our society thriving, and asked if he could do anything for our comfort. He also asked us to ring on the following Sunday, on the occasion of a volunteer church parade, in accordance with which, the band met on that day and rang several short touches of Grandsire Triples. It was arranged to visit Revelstoke, near Plympton, on Saturday, July 28th, where there is a nice peal of eight, but the secretary having received a communication from the rector, the Rev. H. F. Roe, that there was illness near the church, the visit was postponed, and a meeting convened for the Dockyard instead, when the first part of Holt's ten-part peal of Grandsire Triples was brought round by the following members:—E. Cross, 1; Walter Marsh, (conductor), 2; E. Hendy, 3; J. Steed, 4; A. Richard, 5; W. Pyne, 6; J. Eastabrook, 7; P. Manning, 8. Also a 504 in the same method, with nine 6-7's. E. Cross, 1; G. Broderick, 2; A. Richards, 3; J. Steed, 4; Walter Marsh (conductor), 5; W. Pyne, 6; J. Eastabrook, 7; T. Batten, 8. Also some six-scores of Grandsire Doubles, with 6-7-8 covering.—T. Murch, 1; G. Broderick, 2; E. Hendy, 3; J. Steed, 4; W. Marsh, 5; T. Batten, 6; N. J. Friend, 7; Chas. Richards, 8. Brother-strings' heartily welcomed every Saturday at 6 p.m., at the Dockyard gates.

BANK HOLIDAY AT DRAYTON, BERKS.

On Monday, August 6th (at the invitation of their genial master, the Rev. F. E. Robinson), members of the Oxford Diocesan Guild, visited Drayton for a day's ringing. As arranged all met at the tower at 6 o'clock, and at 6.20 a.m. a start was made for a peal at Cambridge Surprise, and all went well till 8.35, when the third bell slipped wheel and upset our equilibrium. After pausing a few minutes in conversation, we were invited by the Master to partake of breakfast, after which, nothing daunted, we were into the sweet intricacies of Cambridge again at 9.30. This time we had the pleasure of welcoming "that's all" to a well-struck peal in 2 hrs. and 40 mins. No time to be lost, the inner man was again replenished, and at 2.0 o'clock we were again enjoying the sweet music of Superlative, and was again crowned with success in 2 hrs. and 40 mins. This brought tea time, and after that very refreshing repast, we repaired to the tower once more for the final touch, and 6.15 we were off for Double Norwich, and again had the pleasure of finishing another good peal at 8.57 p.m. By this time everyone seemed to have had enough ringing for one day, as we had rung nigh upon 20,000 changes, altogether ten hours and a quarter. We hope some day to be able to score London, Superlative and Cambridge. See peal column for peals.

LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROSSENDALE BRANCH.

The next ringing meeting of the above branch, will take place on Saturday, August 18th, 1888, at St. Saviour's Church, Bacup, bells ready at 2 o'clock. Meeting in the School at 6.30.

J. T. STOTT, Local Sec.

THE STOKE ARCHIDIACONAL ASSOCIATION.

This Association had its Annual Meeting at Leek on July 28th. Members were present from Leek, Stoke, Wolstanton, Horton, Norton, Cheddleton, Uttoxeter, Brickwall, and Ellastone Towers.

Ringling commenced in the tower of St. Edward's church at 2.30 p.m., and was continued until 4 o'clock, when a service was held in the church, and an admirable sermon was preached by the Vicar, the Rev. C. B. Maude, M.A., from the text, 1 Cor. x. 31., "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." The preacher addressed a few hearty words of welcome to the visitors, and then proceeded to speak in a very sympathetic way of the office of ringers, whose work he described as that of angels, and exhorted his hearers to make the text their guide and aim in their work.

After the service the members proceeded to the Leek Coffee Tavern, where an admirable tea was provided. That being concluded, the Annual Meeting was held, at which the Rev. B. Blakeway, Vicar of Horton, took the chair, in the absence of the Bishop of Shrewsbury and Archdeacon Lane, who were kept away by an engagement in London.

The Rev. W. J. Smith, Hon. Clerical Secretary and Treasurer, read the report, in which the Committee regretted more general interest was not taken in the work of the Association, and begged the clergy and churchwardens who have bells under their care to do what they can to encourage the work of the belfry being carried out in the best spirit. The Treasurer's report showed a decrease in subscriptions, and only a very small balance in hand, but on the other hand a larger sum than usual had been spent to assist in giving instruction in towers from which appeals for help had been received.

The Right Rev. the Bishop of Shrewsbury was elected a patron of the Association; the new Archdeacon of Stoke, president; and the Rev. H. C. Turner, Vicar of Horton, and the Rev. C. B. Maude, Vicar of Leek, vice-presidents.

It was decided after a warm discussion to continue the monthly ringing meetings at various centres. The meeting was a very hearty one, and apparently the members separated for another year's work with a revived interest in their labour.

THE RAWMARSH CHANGE AND HAND-BELL RINGERS AT PETERBOROUGH.

On Tuesday, July 24th, at the invitation of the Hon. Thomas Fitzwilliam, the Rawmarsh Society went to Peterborough to give performances on the hand-bells, at a grand fete, held in Milton Park, in aid of the Royal Agricultural Benevolent Institution. After viewing the beautiful scenery of the park, they proceeded to a tent and partook of an ample lunch which had been provided. At two o'clock they began to ring, and rang at intervals during the afternoon. At 7 o'clock a coach was procured to convey them to the station, but, when change-ringers get to a place where there is two peals of bells, they like to have a pull; so it was resolved to stop over-night and have a pull next morning. The company stayed at the "Bedford" coffee tavern, and the next morning, at 8 o'clock, they rang at St. Mary's Church, on that beautiful peal of six, tenor 8 cwt., and, in the afternoon at St. John's, a peal of eight, tenor, 28 cwt., which evidently wants a thorough overhauling with a bell-hanger. The ringers wish to take this opportunity of thanking the vicars, churchwardens, and others, for their kindness in granting them permission to ring. The ringers were—S. Whitworth, R. Whitworth, W. Whitworth, T. Whitworth, J. Farmery, J. Ensor, J. Hawkins, V. Hawkins, and J. Schofield.

The annual party of poor residents of Lambeth and its neighbourhood was given by the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mrs. Benson on Wednesday, August 1st, when the recipients of the Archbishop's weekly "dole" and "coursy" (between forty and fifty), beside a large number of blind people and children, spent a happy evening, in spite of the inclement weather. After tea, at which Mrs. Benson and several ladies assisted, a selection of songs were sung.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Onward and Upward—
Keep moving."

Our friends of the Oxford Guild will have had every reason to be satisfied with their annual festival at Witney. The mere fact of their meeting at a place which is in itself a living witness of the good work done by the Guild must have been specially gratifying; and the large number of members who attended will no doubt be most encouraging to those of its officers who have to bear the brunt of the work. I must, however, confess my astonishment at the proposal of the Rev. A. H. Drummond to compel all to qualify as change-ringing members within a given time or suffer expulsion. It appeared to me to go much too far in the direction of a "hard and fast line," which to my mind is very inadvisable for many reasons. While scarcely agreeing with the Ven. Archdeacon Randall in his contentions that such a resolution would "split the Guild in two," I am at the same time pleased to see that it has been rejected by a large majority. Mr. Robinson and the other members of the Guild who are endowed with the natural abilities which go to make good ringers, are perhaps—as ordinary mortals are prone to be—a little forgetful of the fact that such is not the case with many others who are doubtless quite as anxious for the success of the Guild and its work as even the Master himself. To adopt any plan which would virtually exclude such from membership, whatever may be advanced in its favour from a change-ringing point of view, would be to my mind a very unwise step to take. If it did not at the outset alienate many who are now earnest supporters of our work but who for various reasons might be unable to comply with the rule, it would at the least put them in such a position that the Guild would eventually—in all probability—lose them and their assistance. I am therefore pleased, for these reasons alone, that the motion was so emphatically defeated. But had it not been proposed at all would to my mind have been better still.

* * * * *

Passing over this point, there is one feature of the meeting which will be gratifying to us all, namely, the success which has attended the work of the Guild during the past year, ninety-two new names having been added to the list since January last, making its total number close upon 1000, thus becoming numerically the largest ringing organisation in the country. That in itself is no small matter for the members to be proud of. One cause of this success is, no doubt, the fact of the Guild having been well officered in the past, and the re-election of those officers, while denoting the confidence reposed in them by the members, is at the same time a good augury for the future.

* * * * *

The reports of two other annual meetings—the Hereford Guild and the Gloucester and Bristol Association—though not so large in point of numbers as the first named, and consequently not showing such great strides of improvement, are nevertheless equally satisfactory. They are evidences that our brethren throughout the land are alive to their work, that every year is an improvement upon the previous one. When this is the case we have cause to rejoice and heartily wish them "God-speed."

* * * * *

The perusal of these annual reports from time to time—I would remark en passant—has caused me to observe the growth of an ambitious desire on the part of some to get "big names" on their lists of officers. The Hereford Guild, for instance, has for its principals the Bishops, Dean, and Archdeacon of Salop. The Gloucester and Bristol Association, in a similar way, has re-ected as its lay vice-presidents, Sir M. Hicks-Beach and Sir John Dorrington. (I mention these two cases simply because of their being "the last in the field.") Of course, each County Association ought to be the best judge as to how to manage its own business; but, on principle, I think this plan of making their chief offices into sinecures is open to grave objection. On the contrary, I maintain that they should be filled by the very ablest and most energetic working members they possess. With the Secretary and Treasurer, they ought to be the very life and soul of the Society, its moving and guiding spirit, always on the look out for its welfare. These "big guns" are all very well in their proper place; if by enrolling them amongst us we can induce them to take some interest in us and our work, I say by all means get as many as possible; but I do contend that they are out of their proper sphere when filling such offices as Presidents and Vice-Presidents—offices which require that constant and active work which it is practically impossible for them to give. If some distinction is necessary or advisable in their cases, why not put them under the head of Patrons?

The Guardian correspondence on bells and ringing still continues, which is a very satisfactory item to note, as it cannot fail to do us good service. I am pleased to observe that it and coincident remarks in "THE BELL NEWS" are already commencing to bear fruit. The vicar of Croydon has led the way in a very happy fashion. Let us hope his worthy example will be extensively followed. Every vicar, it is true, has not the essentials absolutely necessary for a garden party wherewith to invite his ringers, but all could find ways and means of bringing them together for a social evening now and then, and by that means create and cement mutual feelings of respect and friendship which would be life-long, and could not fail to be productive of good.

* * * * *

Last Saturday's list of peals are of an unusually interesting character. Although only eight in number, they bristle with characteristics: two of them are "century" peals, two birthday peals, and two conductors' first, while of the performers no less than 16 figure in their "first peal in the method." This looks healthy.

* * * * *

Mr. Washbrook has in this way seen the celebration of his 24th birthday. I would compliment him specially on this event, as I fancy very few of us could boast of his record at that age. Whatever feelings he may have shewn—and we are none of us without our share—there can be no doubt that, young as he is, he has come to the front in a very marked and able manner as one of our most prominent ringers. The Oxford Guild is indeed fortunate in possessing him; and I trust they will ring very many more birthday peals in his honour as years roll on.

* * * * *

Turning overleaf from the list of peals, I could not help being struck with a paragraph recording some "goings on" at Chepstow. "Comparisons are odious," Mrs. Partington says, but surely thought I after reading it, we have come from the sublime to the ridiculous. These Monmouthshire worthies inform us that after ringing "several courses of Plain Bob Doubles, with 7-6-8 covering," they indulged in that very scientific method known as "stoney," after which they adjourned to the "Eight Bells," and partook of drinks with two visiting friends. Then, as their friends departed they rang a farewell peal (more stoney, I expect), and finished the evening with more drinks at the aforesaid pub. All this may be very interesting reading to them, but had I been a member of the Chepstow band, I should certainly have objected to see my name figuring in "THE BELL NEWS" in connection with such performances as courses of Plain Bob Doubles with three covers, and a selection of stoney by way of variety. Then if I was inclined to have a glass—parting or otherwise—I don't think I should care to publish the same to the ringing world in such an ostentatious fashion. The Chepstow men appear to have two "Eight Bells" at their command; the next time we hear from them let us hope that the the "Tower Eight" will be handled to something more creditable and scientific, even if the "Licensed Victualler Eight" is consigned to the background, or at any rate is less conspicuous than in this instance.

Mr. Samuel Merritt writes on what he styles the "important matter" of providing ourselves with a medal or badge of some sort to wear at our meetings, with the object of enabling us more readily to recognise each other. I am open to conviction, but at present I fail to see the need of this "trade mark," much less do I perceive how any importance can be attached to the subject. If Mr. Merritt is desirous of seeing his suggestion adopted, I imagine it will necessary for him to advance further and stronger reasons in its favour than what he gives in his letter of the 28th ult.

I scarcely think "the tenor ringer" has dealt with Mr. Muskett's letter in anything like a satisfactory manner. The real point at issue—the difference in time between the two peals—he ignores altogether, and confines himself to extraneous matters and generalities. Come now, Mr. "Tenor Ringer," if you are in earnest in thus taking up the cudgels on behalf of Mr. Washbrook, do not let his reputation suffer through your championship, but confront the point straight, and deal with it likewise.

The angel of death keeps busy in our ranks. This time it is a promising young ringer of the great City of the North—historic Eboracum—that has been called to his rest. May these oft recurring obituaries, while they remind us of the uncertainty of our sojourn here, incite us to even greater efforts for the good of the Exercise, that it may be said of all of us when our time of departure has arrived. "He did what he could."

FEEF LANCE.

ST. MICHAEL'S, COVENTRY.

On Thursday week the restoration of the tallest of Coventry's three spires was practically completed by the refixing of the top stone and weathercock of St. Michael's. About a dozen gentlemen took part in the ceremony, Mr. George Woodcock, a contributor of £10,000 to the fund, refixing the stone and assisting Mr. Thompson, the contractor, to poise the vane. There was a short religious service and some congratulatory speeches. The famous bells are not re-hung, but a set of Harrington's tubes were utilized prior to being despatched to Tonga, one of the Polynesian Islands, where they will be placed in King George's Royal Church. The work of restoring the far-famed church and steeple of St. Michael has occupied over three years, and has cost nearly £40,000. Some details yet remain to be done.

The majority of the readers of this paper, in all parts of the world, will be anxious to hear of the celebrated peal of bells—St. Michael's ten—being restored to their old position in the newly-built steeple. We cannot help indulging in a hope that the authorities of St. Michael's will obtain the best counsel and advice possible, with reference to their being re-hung, and that at an early date.

BRADFORD (Somerset).—On Monday, August 6th, three 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles. G. E. Harbour, 1; F. Burge, 2; T. Doble (conductor), 3; T. Radford, 4; J. Maddock, 5; J. Summerhayes, 6.

OXHEY, HERTS.

On Saturday, July 28th, a contingent from St. Albans met at St. Matthew's Parish Church, Oxhey, to place in the tower a tablet to commemorate the first peal on the bells, which was rung on Monday, 6th February, 1888, by members of the Ancient society of College Youths' and Essex Association. The peal board, which is the work of Messrs. W. H. Hurrell & Co., Lowth Road, Camberwell, London, is of Spanish mahogany, painted an olive green with gold lettering, and is very neatly executed. It bears a simple record of the peal, as follows:—

The Ancient Society of College Youths, Founded 1637.—On Monday, February 6th, 1888, eight members of the above society rang on these bells, Holt's original one-part peal of Grandsire Triples, 5040 changes, in two hours and forty-six minutes. Geo. W. Cartmel, treble; John C. Mitchell, 2; W. H. L. Buckingham, 3; Alfred Barnes, 4; E. Percy Debenham, 5; Challis F. Winny, 6; Thomas Waller, 7; Arthur Hull tenor. Conducted by John C. Mitchell. Newton Price, vicar; Robert Savill, Joseph Benskin, churchwardens.

The vicar accompanied the ringers to the tower, and pointed out the best place for the Board was over the doorway, where it was accordingly fixed. When this was done, the following band rung the last 1300 of Holt's Original, in forty-two minutes:—E. Hull, treble; R. A. Fowler, 2; John C. Mitchell, (conductor); A. Gibbard, 4; E. P. Debenham, 5; W. H. L. Buckingham, 6; T. Waller, 7; A. Hull, tenor. Mr. G. Derrick, of Ryde, I.W., attracted by the ringing, came up in the tower, and some more Grandsire Triples were rung with—G. W. Cartmel, 2; G. Derrick, 7; conducted by E. P. Debenham. After a short interval, 168 Bob Triples was rung by E. Hall, treble; R. A. Fowler, 2; John C. Mitchell (conductor), 3; G. W. Cartmel, 4; E. P. Debenham, 5; W. H. L. Buckingham, 6; T. Waller, 7; G. Derrick, tenor. A very good finish was made to the evening's ringing by the vicar's son (aged 13), ringing his first 120 Grandsire Doubles. G. V. Price, treble; John C. Mitchell (conductor), 2; E. P. Debenham, 3; W. H. L. Buckingham, 4; G. Derrick, 5; A. Hull, 6. The local band are making headway slowly but surely, and we hope soon to see the report of their first 120 Doubles, when they will not be long getting to the higher stages of the art.

WORCESTER AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday, August 4th, the rector (Rev. W. C. Gibbs), and the ringers of St. John the Baptist, Hagley, reinforced by a few fellow-ringers from Clent, had what they all wished without exception would be their annual trip to Bridgnorth. Starting from Hagley about eight o'clock they arrived at Enville by nine, and proceeded to the church to ring a touch of Grandsire Triples. Having raised the bells the first attempt was 560, by F. Wright, 1; H. Morris, 2; W. Short, 3; T. Lees, 4; C. Boughton, 5; J. Barber, 6; H. Martin (conductor), 7; J. Davis, 8. There only being time for a short touch a 180 was called. Journeying from there to Bridgnorth all enjoying the ever-varying scenery of the surrounding country till the "Six Ashes," was reached, when all dismounted for a little refreshment. Time being short, it was not long before the horses were again on the road, the pretty little town of Bridgnorth being reached at half-past twelve. Two short touches of 210 and 180 were rung at St. Leonards, before proceeding to the "Castle" Inn, where a substantial dinner was provided. After doing full justice to the repast, some went for a stroll through the town, while others went to St. Mary's and rang a 360 of Plain Bob and a 360 of Kent Treble Bob. W. Short, 1; T. Barber, 2; T. Lee, 3; J. Smith, 4; J. Barber, 5; C. Boughton (conductor), 6. Again meeting at St. Leonard's, a 360 of Grandsire Triples was rung by F. Molineux, 1; T. Barber, 2; J. Smith, 3; C. Boughton, 4; T. Lees, 5; J. Barber, 6; H. Martin, 7; J. Overton, 8. Leaving the town at a quarter-past six, they arrived at Kidderminster at eight o'clock, where a 532 of Grandsire Triples was rung by F. Wright, 1; W. Short, 2; J. Smith, 3; C. Boughton, 4; T. Lees, 5; T. Barber, 6; H. Martin, 7; J. Barber, 8. The "go" of the bells at St. Leonards is all that can be desired, and are a grand-toned peal of eight. Those at St. Mary do not go nearly as well. They reached Hagley at half past eleven, bringing to a close a long but thoroughly enjoyable day.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 11, 1888.

It is desirable to call the attention of our friends to the manner which many of them adopt in forwarding peals for publication. We should like the many footnotes which invariably accompany them to be as brief as possible, because they take up a large amount of space, and, in many instances, are not pertinent to a peal-record. Nothing really ought to go with our peal records but what would be proper on a peal tablet in the belfry. When the ringing of a peal is attended by some extraordinary circumstances, we shall have no objection to call attention to them in another part of the paper.

The above was rung on the occasion of the re-opening of the belfry, which has been thoroughly cleaned, the ceiling whitewashed, the walls painted, and the floor laid with linoleum cloth, while in the centre of the belfry is a few pots of choice plants now in full bloom. The whole of the work has been done by the local ringers, and great credit is due to them for the admirable way in which they have performed their task. The churchwardens also have not forgotten them, for they have had the bells (which are a very fine peal of six by Taylor and Co.) put in thorough repair, and they "go like fiddles," and have also added a centre light in the belfry, which is a great improvement.

Correspondence.

[While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.]

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

AN EXPLANATION.

SIR,—In answer to the man who signs himself "One of the late band of St. Nicholas, Guildford," I beg to state the following facts:—Some months ago a member of that band wrote to me saying that they wanted some instruction. I attended one of their practices, performing a journey of 80 miles at my own expense. After the practice I asked the head-ringer what they would wish done in the way of instruction. His reply was that they were not ripe for instruction, having no belfry rules and the attendance being irregular. I suggested that they should hold a ringers' meeting in a fortnight's time, which I would attend to discuss their new code of rules. In the meantime I sent them a copy of some rules which had been found to work well in other places, and which would form a basis for making their new code. The meeting was held under the presidency of the vicar, the rules discussed, altered to suit local needs, and agreed to unanimously. Soon afterwards I wrote to enquire whether they were ready to receive an instructor, offering to pay from the Guild funds half the cost, and suggesting a man as instructor who had done good work in the neighbourhood by bringing on his own band. I was informed that the Guildford men did not approve of my choice. I then suggested another instructor, whom I knew to be able and willing to undertake the work, but who lived at some distance away. This man was objected to because the travelling expenses would be too heavy. They then suggested that they would prefer to have as their instructor a man who lived a few miles from Guildford. To this I raised no objection, as the man was a member of the Guild and competent to instruct, still offering on behalf of the Guild to pay half the cost of instruction. A short time after this I received a letter saying that the Guildford band wished to withdraw from the Guild. As I had travelled some 200 miles on their account and had given them the benefit of my advice and experience, and had done all I could to help them on, I ventured to speak at our annual festival of their strange refusal to join the Guild after all the assistance they had received. By assistance I did not mean money received. One man may take a horse to the water, a hundred cannot make him drink.

JOHN R. PRITCHARD.

SIR,—If Mr. Barrett doubts the correctness of my statement, as regards his peal, I should advise him to compare the second six of the 5th and 11th and 9th and 19th course of each part. It would be good practice for him to find out the other false places (if any) himself.

J. W. WASHBROOK.

"QUICK PEALS."

SIR,—I think the Exercise are entitled to have some better explanation or answer to Mr. Muskett than the letter published in your last. Nobody wants to depreciate Mr. Washbrook's abilities, but unfortunately there is something more than tradition extant to show that abler men than he have not scrupled to "cook" performances. The peals quoted by Mr. Muskett demand a much better explanation than already given, and that gentleman deserves great praise for having the courage to call attention to them. Many ringers are apt from various causes to close their mouths when they hear of untrue peals being rung. The evil sir, is not decreasing, by any means, and I hope to see these defaulting conductors brought to book. Mr. Washbrook has never ventured one word in defence of the charge made against him some time back in connection with a reputed peal of Grandsire Triples at I think—Ross. This charge, if not explained away satisfactorily, must prevent him being looked upon in the same light as Mr. Johnson, Mr. Cooter, Mr. Hattersley, or the late Mr. Haley, is regarded. I hope to hear his explanation at once, and I may ask him to come to the point at once, without any unnecessary fencing or shirking of the question.

FAIR PLAY.

BELL MOUNTING.

[From "The Engineer," April 16th, 1880.]

Bell mounting, properly signifying the appendages and their mode of attachment to large bells so that they may be swung singly or in peal is often incorrectly called "bell-hanging," a very different phrase and properly applicable to the means by which bells, as domestic signals, are made to act. In the latter, though a very inferior branch of technical art, the improvements introduced during the last twenty years have been many and varied, and such refinements, some of them as in electric bell-hanging, have been drawn from amongst the best methods of applied science, that bell-hanging may now be said to possess quite a repertory of methods and appliances still in great part unwritten, and awaiting a literature of its own. Our present purpose, however, is confined to offering some considerations upon certain innovations on the ancient and long-established methods of mounting large bells which have been proposed, and, to a very limited extent, already put in practice, and some notices of which have from time to time appeared in our pages. Chief amongst these is to be found the proposed substitution of iron for wood-mounting; and the direct attachment of the bell to its mounting by a single iron bolt passing through a hole in the centre of the crown of the bell, the head of this bolt within the interior of the crown of the bell being so fashioned as also to sustain and keep in place the staple or axis about which the clapper, when the bell is swung, shall vibrate. By this arrangement the somewhat complex castings of "the cannons" upon the crown of the bell is superseded; and some economy both in bell-metal and in workmanship is produced. The most prominent advantages, however, promised by this method is that as the bell and clapper are only attached through the single central bolt to the mounting, so by slacking slightly the nut of that bolt the bell itself may be swivelled round through any desired arc of its mouth, so as to present at will new places upon which the clapper may strike when after long-continued percussion the old place of the blow may have become more or less indented. Then it is alleged also that bell-mounting entirely of iron is less costly—bell and mounting being both taken into consideration—and is much more durable than timber-mountings, as durable in fact as the bell itself. Some of these, at least, are certainly plausible advantages, but a little impartial consideration will, we think, cause most competent mechanicians to arrive at the opinion that some of the alleged advantages are nominal rather than real; while others are obtained not without some sacrifice of conditions the reality of the advantage of which does not admit of doubt; and that upon the whole the ancient and time-honoured method of mounting large bells is probably the best as yet devised. This applies whether the bells are to be swung or merely bolted to hard timber stocks carefully fitted to the cannons and pressed into contact and secured to these by several straps, bolts, which, with the hoops and pivots forming the axis of oscillation, are almost the only iron forming any part of the bell-mounting. It is a mistake, often repeated orally and in print, that timber was employed for bell-mounting—including the extremely ingenious and effective devices of joinery exhibited by the ancient timber bell-wheels, with their grooved rim for the bell-rope—from motives of economy. The earliest authentic examples of timber-mounted bells which have reached our time do not, we believe, date quite so far back as the twelfth century of our era. For our present purpose it is sufficient that it was not the costliness of malleable iron which evolved the prevalent method of casting bells with cannons upon the crown, and timber mounting secured thereto. As in the case of church organs, church bell-mounting was slowly elaborated and thought out by monks and secular clergy, who were not only the best educated men of their day, and almost its only intellectual life, but were also the architects and practical builders—the creators in short—of Gothic architecture, and often the military engineers and scientific soldiers, the road makers and bridge builders of their day. It would be wonderful, therefore, if the method of bell-mounting which they evolved was the mere issue of parsimony and ignorance. Indeed, that the cost of iron had nothing to do with the matter is evident when we consider the lavish use that was made of it between the fourteenth and the seventeenth centuries in mere ornamental smith-work. We should also bear in mind that iron, probably produced direct by the smith from powdered hemalite, as it continues to be at the present hour in the remote provinces of Southern Italy and Sicily, was cheap enough nearly 900 years ago, in the days of Duke William of Normandy, to be employed for horseshoes of every description. If, therefore, the sparing use of iron in bell-mounting was not the result of economy, its use in combination with timber must have been the result of choice. The modern innovator who proposes to supersede it by iron bell-mounting, into which no wood shall enter, should pause to consider whether his innovation may not be one in a wrong direction. The ancient cannons served the purpose of the bell-founder, in that there were so many "rising heads," tolerably uniformly distributed over the crown of the bell, so as effectually to enable scoriae and air bubbles to flow off, and yet, by their division into many small jets, to avoid the evil likely to arise from the production of hollow spaces, or "draws," due to the powerful contraction produced at the junction of the crown of the bell of one or more "rising heads" of large diameter. This evil is almost certain to arise in bells cast without any cannons, for some sort of "rising head" there must be, not only to clear away scoriae from the crown, but to secure for it the solidity due to the hydrostatic pressure of some head of metal at the moment of consolidation. This seems to suggest itself as an obvious objection to casting a bell with a plain crown from which one "rising head," or several, must be afterwards mechanically severed. An exact consideration of the weakening effects on any plate of metal, flat or dish-shaped, of either casting or drilling a hole in its centre, is fully supported by what is certainly known with respect to all metals consolidating from fusion, especially those which, like bell-metal, crystallise on cooling. Upon the system of iron-mounting, the head of the central bolt upon which the suspension entirely depends must be always held rigidly in metallic contact with the interior of the crown, which can only be effected by the draw of the bolt elastically elongated by the draw of its nut. As soon as this condition is altered, so that the head of the bolt has its contact loosened to however small an extent, the sound of the bell must be impaired, and if rung in this condition the risk is incurred of a piece being pulled out of the crown of the bell. The stock, if formed of well-seasoned and well-chosen timber, requires only a moderate pressure from the nuts of the suspending bolts to cause it to afford a fine elastic cushion-like pressure against the cannons, which, under the moderate vicissitudes of dryness and moisture to be found in a well-constructed belfry, may not require to be restored by tightening up the nuts of the suspending strap-bolts for several years. Every nut in contact with a bell is certain, after a certain lapse of time, to lose more or less of its firm bearing, if that be due to screwing up of one rigid metal against another by the mere effect of vibration, aided or not by the formation of rust. Instances in proof of this are afforded upon an immense scale by the well-known fact that wrought-iron viaducts, in cases where the stress of a rolling load exceeds a very low strain per square inch of section, are known to have their rivet heads, which have been closed at a red heat, shaken loose by the tremour of a few years' traffic; this, for example, proved to be the case with the Crumlin Viaduct, constructed of Warren girders, the rivetting of which had all to be done a second time after a few years' work.

There are some other points which would justify more extended remarks upon this subject; these we shall pass, except to remark that the assumed advantage of being able to change the striking place of the clapper seem at least to be over-rated. There are old bells in Germany, France, and Belgium which have been rung for centuries without the production of any such deformation at the spot struck as to be of material importance in any sense; but in any event it would not be difficult to devise such a suspension of clapper to a bell provided with cannons as should enable its striking place to be changed at pleasure. We have, perhaps, said enough to justify the thought that the substitution for timber of mounting wholly of iron may not be without some disadvantages.

On Wednesday, August 1st, the Bishop of Chichester, in the presence of nearly thirty clergymen and a very full congregation, consecrated the beautiful and spacious church of St. Andrew's, Worthing, his lordship having at an earlier service celebrated the Holy Communion in the building.

Obituary.

GEORGE BASDEN.

We regret to have to record the death of the above named ringer, who died at his residence, Farnham Royal somewhat suddenly, on Monday morning, July 9th. Mr. Basden has been connected with the belfry at Farnham Royal, ever since the commencement of change-ringing, ten years ago, and was the only one left with Mr. Parker of the original party. The funeral took place on Friday, July 13th, and the ringers followed him to his last resting place, after which they rang muffled peals, and on the following Sunday, the bells were rung half muffled for the morning and afternoon services, as a last tribute of respect.

WRAYSBURY, BUCKS.

On Saturday afternoon, August 4th, six members of the Farnham Royal Company, visited Wraybury to have a friendly ring with the local company, after ringing a variety of touches of Minor and Doubles the Rev. J. H. Hindson kindly invited the visitors to tea with him and his ringers on the lawn at the vicarage, after which they returned to the tower, and a nice clean touch of 432 Grandsire Minor was rung. E. Whatmore, 1; J. J. Parker, 2; H. Shanks, 3; J. Mills, 4; R. Parker, 5; G. Whatmore (conductor), 6; also a 720 Grandsire Minor in 28 mins. H. Shanks, 1; Rev. J. H. Hindson, 2; J. J. Parker (conductor), 3; J. Mills, 4; R. Parker, 5; C. Clarke, 6; Tenor 12-cwt. First 720 by all except 3rd and 6th men.

THE ST. JAMES' SOCIETY.

The annual election of officers will take place on Monday, August 20th, 1888, after the usual practice at St. Clement Dares Church.

J. BARRY, Hon. Sec.

27, Arlington Street, N.

MR. DAINS' 100TH PEAL.—In this performance, reported in the proper place, Mr. Dains rang his 100th peal, the number being made up as follows: 15 peals of Grandsire Triples; 6 peals of Stedman Triples; 7 peals of Double Norwich Court Bob Major; 29 peals of Treble Bob Major; 13 peals of Grandsire Caters; 10 peals of Stedman Caters; 11 peals of Treble Bob Royal; 2 peals of Grandsire Cinques; 6 peals of Stedman Cinques; 1 peal of Treble Bob Maximus. Forty-two rings of bells have been brought into requisition, in ten several counties, during a space of about 15 years. Eight of the foregoing peals were rung half-muffled, being one on each number of bells, and in each of the methods. In two peals only does he operate as conductor. After the peal the ringers were joined by Messrs. Wright, Strutt, and others of the local company. The old veteran, William Phillips, steeplekeeper, looks hale and well and seemed in high glee, to meet members of the Cumberlands under the circumstances.

The Yorkshire Post says the late Frank Holl, while painting the portrait of Mr. Bright, incidentally mentioned that he was about to perform the same operation on Mr. Gladstone, adding, "It must be a very painful thing for you, Mr. Bright, that after all these years you should have found cause to sever your connection?" "Indeed it is," responded Mr. Bright, with a sigh; "to think that after we have trodden the same path together, shoulder to shoulder and hand in hand, we should be forced apart in the evening of our lives. And by what? By a bogey that has risen up within him and his beckoning him away from duty and sense—by a Frankenstein. Do you know, Mr. Holl, I seriously fear that my dear old friend's mind has really become radically undermined?" When he was at Hawarden, painting Mr. Gladstone, the subject of the artist's portrait of Mr. Bright cropped up. "Ah!" said Mr. Gladstone, with much interest, "and how did you find him?" "Fairly well; and he spoke very affectionately of you, Mr. Gladstone." "Did he indeed?" replied the sitter, sorrowfully; "did he indeed? That was a cruel blow. That after a lifetime of mutual esteem and of good work undertaken and carried through together we should be divided on so clear a question. Tell me, Mr. Holl"—and here his mouth twitched, for he was evidently struggling with great emotion—"tell me, did you notice anything in the manner of my old friend which would lead you to believe that his reason was becoming any way unhinged?"

PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL.

In a letter to the Times of Wednesday last the Dean of Peterborough says that in making the excavations necessary for underpinning the interior of the north transept of the cathedral, the workmen came upon a richly ornamented slab, covering a grave, and evidently still lying in its original position. It is no doubt of the date of the second church—that in which Hereward was knighted—of which considerable remains were discovered a short time since after taking down and rebuilding the central tower. "The surface of the slab is about 1ft. 6in. below the level of the late floor, which, in its turn, was about 5in. above the Norman floor. Its length is about 5ft. 3in. with a top width of 1ft. 10in. and a bottom of 1ft. 6in. The surface is completely covered with the richest Saxon interlacing ornament, forming a design of a central band of ornament about 5in. wide, crossed at right angles by rather wider strips of ornament. Three of these are uninjured; the fourth, at the top, was almost entirely destroyed when the present transept was built by William de Waterville. The design was originally, therefore, a fourfold cross. Each of these crosses is outlined with a double roll border, the inner one being twisted work. There is thus left between the borders of the cross arms three oblong spaces on each side between the broad central strip and the outer edge of the slab. Three of these are filled in with finer interlacing work, two with star crosses, and one is plain, having been left unfinished. The slab is probably the most beautiful specimen of Saxon ornamental work of the kind that has come to light. We have decided to raise it, carefully keeping it on its present site, so that it may still mark the resting-place that it originally covered, but in such a way that it will be above the level of the new floor and properly guarded from injury. It was found close beside the spot where rest the remains of Bishop Dove, Queen Elizabeth's 'Dove with silver wings.' If any representative of the good Bishop's family still exist, they may perhaps be induced to erect a monument to his memory in place of the one which was destroyed by Cromwell's soldiers, and bearing the same inscription, Of Hereward's church the lines of the transept and the choir can be followed in the south transept, under the lantern, and in the nave of the present cathedral, but the nave of the Saxon church lay outside the present building. Measurements carefully made show that the present Norman cathedral is exactly double the size of the Saxon church, just as the Jewish Temple was double the size of the Tabernacle.

At a recent meeting of the Gosberton (Spalding) Burial Board, the question of consecrating a portion of the cemetery again came forward, the board having several times refused to accede to the memorial of the vicar and churchwardens praying for such consecration. At this meeting the vicar wrote stating that the Bishop of Lincoln had written, announcing that he would consent to come and consecrate the ground on the petition of the vicar and churchwardens, but his lordship required an assent from the burial board that no obstacle would be placed in his way on arriving at the ground. After a heated discussion, in which strong language was used, it was decided, by 6 votes to 3, to have the gates locked should the Bishop persist in visiting the ground. The board intimated that they would receive no more correspondence upon the consecration question.

On Saturday the Bishop of Salisbury presided at a meeting in his cathedral city which was attended by most of the foreign ecclesiastics who were at Farnham. In his address the right rev. prelate said he thought they would all feel that the news they had recently had from Italy made it very necessary for the Church of England to be strong on the subject of marriage. He confessed that he was very much distressed and pained, knowing what was said about Pope Leo as a reforming Pope and strong man, to hear that for £4,000 he had given a dispensation to the Duke of Aosta, to marry his own blood niece. They knew that these things were done in the Church of Rome. They knew that, unfortunately, that laxity had crept into the civil laws of the country, to a great extent in Germany, and to a less extent in Switzerland, where such a marriage would not be allowed. It was necessary in dealing with foreign Churches to remember that these evil precedents set by the Church of Rome had been followed by the States of those countries.

A VISIT TO BRIGHTLING, SUSSEX.

On Monday last, eight members of the Brighton Branch of the Sussex County Association paid a visit to the above village, for the purpose of attempting a peal on the historical bells which hang in the tower of the Parish Church of St. Thomas a'Beckett. These bells, or six of them, were hung in the year 1815, while two new trebles were added three years later. Bell inscriptions do not often allude to events of the time, but the inscriptions on these bells refer to the victories of the great Duke of Wellington, for the tenor bell tells us that their ring of six bells were hung in honour of the illustrious Duke of Wellington. His last six victories are here recorded, each of the bells bearing respectively these words:—"Talavera," "Salamanca," "Vittoria," "Pyrenees," "Orthes," "Toulouse." It was premature to say his "last," but, however, in 1818, two new trebles were added, each inscribed with the word "Waterloo." We are also told that the bells were placed in the tower at the expense of John Fuller, Esq., late member for the county, A.D. 1815. Mears, of London, are the founders of the bells; the tenor weighing about 14 cwt. But to return to my former subject. The party consisting of E. Butler, H. Cornwell, A. A. Fuller, J. Reilly, G. Thwaites, W. F. Vernon, H. Weston, and J. E. Worsell, left Brighton by the train at 7.15 a.m. for Hastings, being joined at Polegate by M. T. Hart, a Eastbourne ringer. Arriving at Hastings somewhat late, owing to the heavy traffic, a hurried visit was made to St. Clement's Church, where it had been intended to have a pull on the steel bells for which this church is noted, but in order to catch the 10.40 train to Robertsbridge, this had to be abandoned. Having arrived at the latter place, a waggonette was procured and the party at once drove to Brightling, some 4½ miles distant. This was, perhaps, the most enjoyable part of the day's programme, the scenery in this neighbourhood being exquisitely beautiful, embracing as it does a part of the great St. Leonard's Forest. On arrival, a hearty welcome was accorded the ringers, by the rector, the Rev.—Hayley, who kindly provided light refreshment previous to attempting the peal, and kindly allowed the party to take a walk through his beautiful garden, where the ringers found it no easy task to keep their "hands off" the fruit with which the garden was stored. A course of cake and wine having been brought round, the rector conducted the ringers to the tower, where preliminaries having been got through, a start was soon made for the first peal on the bells, which was successfully brought round in three hours and two minutes (particulars of which see peal column). It is, perhaps, needless to say that the band was heartily congratulated by the rector and a few of the local band who had listened to the peal. By the by, I regretted to hear that the local ringers contented themselves with practising on the bells, evenings in the week, while on Sunday the sound of these village bells were not heard, or if heard at all, only occasionally, when it seemed to suit them. I would wish to remind them here that ringing for Sunday service was the object for which the bells were placed in the tower. I deeply regret to make these remarks, but Brightling ringers may rest assured they are made with all due respect. A visit was next paid to Salehurst Church, where 504 of Grandsire Triples was rung on this peal, tenor 19 cwt., the ringers standing thus:—A. A. Fuller, treble; T. Hart, 2; J. E. Worsell, 3; G. Thwaites, 4; H. Cornwell, 5; J. Reilly (conductor), 6; H. Weston, 7; E. Butler, tenor. After a meat tea had been partaken of, a start was made for Brighton, which was reached about 12.15, a journey of forty miles, occupying about four hours. The thanks of the band is due to Mr. H. Weston, for so kindly arranging the visit—a visit to be repeated it is hoped, and to the rectors of Brightling and Salehurst, for so kindly placing their bells at the disposal of the ringers. J. E. W.

HOW TO LEARN CHANGE-RINGING WITHOUT AN INSTRUCTOR.
By Charles Pearson, M.A. Price Threepence, by post Fourpence.—WILLIAM POLLARD AND Co. Printers, Exeter.

THE SHEFFIELD RINGERS AT HULL.

On Saturday, July 28th, the St. Peter's Amalgamated Society of Sheffield held their annual outing, the town of Hull being the place selected. On arrival there the visitors were met by Mr. Charles Jackson, who immediately conducted them to the parish church of Holy Trinity. After ringing a 504 of Stedman Triples, and a similar length of Grandsire, a move was made to the church of St. James, where touches of Stedman, Grandsire, Treble Bob, and Plain Bob were rung. The whole party then adjourned to the "Alexander Hotel," where they partook of substantial refreshment. The next order of things was a general all-round discussion on ringing topics, the most noticeable remark being made by Mr. H. Jenkins, who expressed his opinion that ringers ought to make themselves more familiar with the theory of the science, which, he said, was altogether distinct from the practical part. His sound observations were much appreciated. Songs by Messrs. C. Jackson, C. H. Hattersley, T. Hattersley, and other friends, interspersed with tunes and change-ringing on the handbells, was next indulged in. Later on, Mr. Charles Henry Hattersley rose and said that it would be great remissness on his part and also on that of his colleagues, if he did not propose a vote of thanks to the Hull ringers for their kind hospitality, and their arrangements for the day. He could assure them that when it was finally agreed that he and his colleagues should visit Hull, it gave great satisfaction. Referring to the sensible observations of Mr. Jenkins, he said he hoped the science would continue to improve, although in recent years it had got pretty well wound up. It occurred to him how different it were the circumstances that afternoon to some of those which he experienced while out with his Birmingham friends the week previous. On the latter occasion him and his friends were visiting a beautiful village in the charming county of Worcester called Hagley, which place unfortunately did not possess a local band of ringers. The church itself was a neat building, situated in a large park, and had a musical light ring of eight. If those in authority there were to communicate with any of his friends at Birmingham, he did not doubt that change-ringing would soon become established in Hagley. He concluded his remarks by expressing a hope that their visit to Hull would further extend that amicable feeling which already existed between the two towns, and wished "Success to the Hull ringers," and he coupled with that sentiment the name of Mr. Charles Jackson.

Mr. Jackson, in acknowledging the compliment, said that one of the greatest pleasures he had was to know that he was pleasing his brother-ringers, and he could assure them that they in Hull were very glad indeed to welcome their Sheffield friends. He took that opportunity of reminding the company that the next general meeting of the Yorkshire Association was to be held at York, and that he looked forward to again have the pleasure of meeting with some of the members.

The Sheffield visitors shortly afterwards departed for home amid the good wishes of their Hull friends.

PRESENTATION.

On Friday evening, July 20th, the members of the St. Andrew's Society, Derby, gathered together at the "Locomotive" inn, to partake of supper, along with one of their eldest members, who is leaving the town and going to reside at Keighley, his native place. After supper, he was presented with an ebony walking stick, with polished buckhorn handle, and mounted with a beautifully chased silver band, upon which was engraved:—"Presented to W. B. Midgley, by the St. Andrew's Society of Change-Ringers, July 20th, 1888." Mr. Midgley, in reply, said he had no idea whatever of anything of this sort being done, nor did he think he was deserving of it; he had done what he could in forwarding the society, but that was very little. The rest of the evening was spent in hand-bell ringing and songs. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, the host and hostess, who kindly prepared the supper and attended to the wants gratuitously.

WANTED by a change-ringer, aged 20 years, a situation as Shopman or Book-keeper in Corn and Milling trade preferred; has had 6 years' experience in above Trades with present employer. Can ring the following Methods—Bob, Grandsire and Stedman. Apply to G. BAKER, Jun., Orchard Place, Arundel, Sussex.

STEDMAN'S PRINCIPLE MADE EASY FOR BEGINNERS.

BY WM. ALEXANDER BALDWIN.

In my opinion there are many promising youths hindered considerably in their progress, and in some cases, lost to the Exercise, because they do not understand the technical terms made use of by senior members, when they are asked to explain, or give rules for ringing this or any other method.

When I commenced change-ringing, I remember asking a senior member of the company to which I then belonged, to explain to me the work of a bell in Stedman. The explanations I received were so technical, that I derived no benefit from the information. I am inclined to think that my experience is not unique, and with a view of removing this difficulty for others, I have dwelt at length on the terms used, and laid down rules for ringing this method, in the hope that they will commend themselves to the minds of junior members of ringing societies, and encourage them to persevere in the study and practice of scientific change-ringing.

For convenience I have divided the subject into two parts. The first part will be on "the plain course," and the second part will be devoted will be devoted to "bobs and singles."

I. THE PLAIN COURSE.

Stedman's Principle is applicable to five, seven, nine, and eleven bells. On five bells the changes are termed "Doubles," on seven "Triples," on nine "Caters," and on eleven "Cinques."

One hundred and twenty changes being the extent on five bells, I do not see that much benefit is to be derived from the study or practice of this principle on that number, so I shall devote my attention exclusively to Stedman's principle on seven bells, or in other words "Stedman Triples."

Some of my readers may be aware that on three bells it is possible to obtain six changes, and that these six changes can be obtained two different ways. However, to meet all cases, both ways of obtaining these six changes are shown below, as they may be useful for reference.

EVEN OR QUICK SIX.

ODD OR SLOW SIX.

Before we go further I will explain a few terms which will hereafter occur under their technical names, viz:

1.—A whole pull right. 2.—A whole pull wrong. 3.—A half pull right. 4.—A half-pull wrong.

We will take No. 1. A whole pull right consists of striking two blows at the lead commencing at handstroke.

No. 2.—A whole pull wrong consists of striking two blows at the lead commencing at backstroke.

No. 3.—A half pull right consists of striking one blow at the lead at handstroke.

No. 4.—A half pull wrong consists of striking one blow at the lead at backstroke.

In the first six changes given, you will observe that all the bells come to lead the right way; i.e., handstroke first, and that they are whole pulls right. These six changes are therefore termed "even" or a "quick six."

In the second six changes you will notice that the treble leads half a pull right, and that the third leads a whole pull wrong, followed by the second doing the same and terminating by the treble leading a half pull wrong, thus finishing the half pull left undone at the commencement. These six changes are for this reason termed "odd" or a "slow six."

Now, Stedman's Principle consists of any three bells which may be in front, ringing first one and then the other of these six changes, which causes the bells in 4-5 and 6-7 to make a double dodge, or in other words all the bells above third's place are continuously double dodging. On the completion of each six, the bell dodging in 4-5 down comes in and takes the place of the bell which goes out to dodge in 4-5 up.

Before drawing your attention to the plain course of Stedman Triples, I must trouble you to commit the following rules to memory.

In this method every bell has to do the following work to do, viz.—slow work, dodging, quick work, and dodging. The "slow work" when coming from behind and entering the changes as "slow bell," consists of making 3rds place, and leading a whole pull wrong, strike one blow in 2nds place, and lead a whole pull right, make 3rds again (this is termed the "first whole turn"). Lead a half pull right, 3rds place again ("first half turn"). Lead a half pull wrong, 3rds again (last half turn). Lead a whole pull right, strike one blow in 2nds place, and lead a whole pull wrong (the "last whole turn"). Make 3rds place, and enter the dodging in 4-5 up.

So that shortly stated the slow work is 3rds and first whole turn, 3rds and first half turn, 3rds and last half turn, 3rds and last whole turn, 3rds and enter the dodging in 4-5 up.

I have before told you that all the dodging above 3rds place is double, so there is no need to make any comment upon it.

The "quick work" simply consists of hunting to lead from dodging in 4-5 down, and back again to the dodging in 4-5 up.

For the purpose of illustrating this work, a plain course is given above.

A bell is said to go in a "slow bell" when that bell performs the slow work previously described; and a bell is said to go in a "quick bell" when that bell hunts straight to lead from dodging in 4-5 down and back again to the dodging in 4-5 up.

For a full illustration of the slow work, see the 4th bell in the plain course.

I must impress upon my readers the necessity for committing these rules to memory before going further, as a full knowledge of them is indispensable.

I will now draw your attention to the work of the treble in the plain course. You will observe that this bell goes out "quick" into 4-5, dodges twice in that place and then hunts up into 6-7 (the fifth bell being the last bell to strike over, behind, forms the course bell to the treble), dodges twice in 6-7, lies a whole pull behind, which changes her position to 6-7 down—she dodges twice in that place, hunts into 4-5 down, dodges twice in that position, and then comes in as a "slow bell," makes thirds, and leads a whole pull wrong, strikes one blow in 2nds place and leads a whole pull right, hunts, out and makes 3rds place and back again to the front, leads a half pull right, out, and makes 3rds again, back again, and leads a half pull wrong, hunts up and makes 3rds, down, and leads a whole pull right, strikes one blow in 2nds place, and leads a whole pull wrong, hunts up, makes 3rds place, and then enters the dodging in 4-5 up, dodges twice in that position, twice in 6-7 up, twice in 6-7 down, twice in 4-5 down, and then runs into lead as a "quick bell" which brings the plain course to an end.

If you have followed me step by step, you will have noticed, that whenever you go out a "quick bell," you must come in the next time a "slow bell," and following the same reasoning whenever you go out a "slow bell" you must come in the next time a "quick bell."

It sometimes happens that one forgets which way to go in, i.e. whether a "quick" or "slow" bell. I will therefore give a rule by which you can always be certain which way to go in. If you remember the fifth bell was the course bell to the treble (see the 2nd six in the plain course). Now I want you to observe the work of these two bells from that point. You will notice that there is only one bell between the 5th and the treble whilst they are dodging behind, and that the treble hunts into 4-5 down after the 5th, and there the 5th bell ceases to be of any further use to the treble, inasmuch as the 5th bell has gone in "quick," leaving the treble dodging in 4-5 down—but you will also notice (and this is the point to bear in mind), that the treble strikes over the 5th the last blow in 4ths place, just as the dodging in 4-5 down is finished and then goes in a slow bell. It therefore follows that if you strike your first blow in 4ths place over your course bell, you go in "quick," because your course bell is then making 3rds preparatory to going in "slow," and if you strike your last blow in 4ths place over your course bell, you go in "slow" because your course bell has gone in "quick" and is coming out to dodge in 4-5 up.

The invariable rule is to go in the opposite way to that which your course bell goes in, and the rule I have given will always enable you to determine with absolute certainty whether your course bell has gone in either quick or slow.

If you study the work of the treble, or indeed any bell, you will soon overcome any little difficulty you may experience in understanding the working of your course bell, and why your course bell is indispensable to you.

It is worth remembering that whenever you go in a quick bell, you take your course bell off lead, and that when you go in slow you always commence to make 3rds at handstroke.

DISTRICT MEETING OF THE SALISBURY DIOCESAN GUILD.

The third meeting of the above was held at the "Wyndham Arms," Dinton, on Wednesday, August 1st. Mr. W. H. Gramshaw presided, and there were present, among others, the Rev. J. H. Audland (Vicar), the Rev. Josiah Mitchell (Barford), the Rev. A. D. Hill (Master of the Guild), Mr. J. R. Jerram (secretary), with about forty other guests, ringers from Salisbury, Barford, Broadchalk, Damerham, Dinton and Fovant. After ample justice had been done to the dinner.

The Chairman proposed the toast of "Church and Queen," remarking that the union of Church and State had been of great value to this country, and would continue to be so, provided neither party usurped the position of the other. The Church had rights with which the State should not be allowed to interfere, and equally the State demanded obedience from the Church in matters temporal.

The Rev. J. H. Audland replied for the Church, welcoming the Guild to Dinton.

The Chairman in proposing "The Diocesan Ringers' Guild," told one or two amusing anecdotes in connection with bells, and spoke of the much more pleasant sound of a peal of bells than a single one.

The Rev. A. D. Hill briefly responded, and a vote of thanks to Mr. Gramshaw, which was heartily responded to with musical honours.

The company then separated, Damerham and Barford divisions went to Fovant to ring, Fovant and Broadchalk to Dinton, and Salisbury to Chilmark, where the latter rang 720 Bob Minor. J. Short, 1; A. P. Goddard, 2; C. A. Clements, 3; S. Lawrence, 4; J. R. Jerram, 5; T. Blackburn (conductor), 6. Broadchalke division afterwards came on to Chilmark. The Rev. A. Earle provided tea for those who went to Fovant. Altogether a very enjoyable day was spent.

THE ST. SIDWELL'S SOCIETY, EXETER.

This Society held its annual outing on Monday, August 6th, and by the kind invitation of Mr. J. Richards, they visited Torrington, North Devon, where half-pull ringing was never believed in, the old round ringers saying it was a matter of impossibility for a peal of 5040 changes to be rung without stopping. The party left Queen Street Station at 6.50 a.m. and their destination was reached at 9.30, where Mr. Richards was in waiting to receive us. After a pleasant walk over the moor about a mile, we reached the pretty town. Mr. Richards then conducted us to the "Plough Inn," where he had prepared a very substantial breakfast, which it was needless to say, done ample justice too after so long a journey. About 11 o'clock a move was made to the church of St. Michael where hangs a very fine peal of eight in F sharp, which were augmented from six to eight in 1884, two new trebles being added, and the tenor recast by Warner, and the wholere-hung. The 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th are by Rudhall, dating back to 1716. After a short touch a start was made for a peal, but stand was called after 40 mins. then another start, and all went well for 30 mins. the conductor missing a bob. Nothing daunted, another start was made, being determined to get it if it was possible, and Hollis's five-part peal was successfully brought round in 2 hrs. 40 mins. The rest of the time was spent with some local ringers and an enjoyable day was brought to a close, by reaching home at 10.30 p.m. and leaving behind at Torrington the fact that a peal of 5040 can be done.

WORCESTER AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.

THE NEXT QUARTERLY MEETING of the above Association will be held in the Lyttleton Middle Class schoolroom, Malvern, at 5 o'clock prompt, on Saturday, August 25th. The Rev. Dr. Gregory Smith has kindly consented to preside. The bells of the Abbey church will be open for ringing.

JOHN SMITH, Hon. Sec.

Can ring the following Methods—Bob, Grandsire and Stedman. Apply to G. BAKER, Jun., Orchard Place, Arundel, Sussex.

THE ST. JOHN'S SOCIETY, LOUGHTON, ESSEX.

ON August 6th the above Society had their annual outing, the places selected being Hatfield and St. Albans, Herts. 5.30 a.m. found all astir, after breakfast, and a brake and pair ready for a start by 6.0, when "go" was called, and away they went through the beauteous and cool air of Epping Forest—quite refreshing so early in the morning. "Stand" was called at Waltham Abbey, at the "Three Tuns," to visit an old and esteemed friend—Mr. Powell—and refresh the inner man. No time, however, to lose, and away they went through the quiet lanes of Cufley, during which several touches were rung on the handbells, the folks seeming quite interested as they appeared at the doors and windows, rubbing eyes, watching the party. A halt was made at Cufley to bait horses and likewise themselves. Here a touch of Stedman Triples, on the handbells, was rung, while others were busy stowing away sandwiches and good ale. Then straightway to Hatfield, which was reached at 10.30, and the sound of the fine old peal in the parish church was heard, some of the local band being busy pulling them up. The visitors found their way into the ringing-room, and unharnessing, started off and rang several touches of Grandsire, when up came some of the St. Albans' men, and a short touch of Stedman and Bob Major brought the ringing here to a finish. A look round the grand old church and into the Marquis of Salisbury's grounds was enjoyed, and then off to the station to catch train for St. Albans, where dinner was waiting at the Temperance Hotel. Everybody seemed just fit for a good packing, and the party were soon busy with roast beef, and all such things that take away the appetite. All went on very nicely while the strains of the Salvation Army fell on their ears. The repeat being concluded, away to the Abbey, where everything was waiting. The bells here were soon in motion and "went" fine for a hearty peal of 30 cwt. tenor, although the circle is rather bad. Some good touches of Grandsire, Stedman, and Treble Bob were brought round, the bells lowered and then the top of the tower was visited, from which a splendid view of the ancient town and surrounding district is obtained. Reaching ground once again, a hasty look at the cathedral, and off to St. Peter's for a ring on the peal of ten. The bells being up, touches of Grandsire and Stedman Caters and Bob Royal were indulged in, most of the visitors never having pulled off in ten before. These bells go like tops, and the pull was thoroughly enjoyed. Here they had to take leave of the St. Albans gentlemen, who made their visit such a success, and make haste to the station to take train back to Hatfield, where everything was ready for the homeward journey, but feeling a bit low, they had a good tea at the hotel, and loading up, left Hatfield at 8, landing safe home just before 12, having spent a most enjoyable day. The company wish, through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS," to thank the clergy and churchwardens for the use of the bells, and all those gentlemen who so kindly assisted to make the outing so successful.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

Edward Wreaks, 25 Tweedale Street, Rochdale, or 42 Cleveland Road, Crumpsall, Manchester.

THE ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE SOCIETY.

ON Saturday last, August 11th, the members of the above society, in connection with St. Peter's Church, held their annual picnic, the place selected being Prestbury, near Macclesfield, Cheshire, the parish church of which contains a peal of eight bells, tenor 18 cwt. The party left Guidebridge for Macclesfield about 2.30 p.m. and after a tiresome journey got there about 4 p.m. After a lovely walk through the fields, Prestbury was reached shortly after 5 p.m. and a descent was at once made on the hostelry of ye "Black Boy," to refresh the inner man. This having been accomplished, a move was made for the church and a touch of Treble Bob Major, conducted by Mr. J. Thorp, and a touch of Stedman Triples, conducted by Mr. S. Wood were successfully brought round. An attempt was made for a course of Grandsire Triples with one of the local men, and while this was in progress, some of the visitors were looking round the church yard, and the dates on one stone, a family of the name of Newton, 1596, 1620, 1640, 1671, while on another stone was a date of the 14th century. In a glass case are the remnants of an old Saxon cross which were found during some repairs which were being done to the church, and which had lain there for 400 years. It is supposed to have been erected to commemorate the first preaching of Christianity in the village. There is also the lower portion of an old stone coffin which dates from 1250, and a gravestone showing the death of a person 104 years of age, also one containing the following inscription—"Also Sarah Pickford, sister to the above-named James Pickford, was here interred. August ye 17 Anno. Dom. 1705, and died a bachelor in the 48 years of her Age."

A short meeting was afterwards held at the "Black Boy" under the presidency of Mr. G. Longden, where it was resolved on the motion of Mr. Hopwood, seconded by Mr. Gillot, that—the best thanks of the meeting be given to Canon Wilson for the use of the bells. Also on the motion of Mr. Hopwood, seconded by Mr. S. Wood, that a vote of thanks be given to the wardens of St. Peter's Church, for their kindness in contributing so liberally to the picnic fund.

A move was then made for Prestbury Station to commence the return journey, which was accomplished by 10.30 p.m. all being highly satisfied with the few hours from home.

RINGERS' OUTING.

ON Monday, August 5th, a portion of the local company of St. Mary's and the local company of St. Mary's, Caldicot, near Chepstow, paid a friendly visit to Caerleon, Monmouthshire, which they reached at 10 a.m., and had a ring on the pretty ring of eight, tenor 7½ cwt. Afterwards the Caerleon band rang 168 and 360 of Grandsire Triples, also a plain course of Stedman Triples, and a plain course of Grandsire Major to please their visitors. After visiting the museum where they were much interested, they took a quiet stroll through the ancient town. They then bade a farewell to their Caerleon friends, and then returned to Newport, where the rest of the evening was spent in viewing the ancient church of St. Woollos, with a ring six bells, tenor 14½ cwt., but owing to a death near the church they could not ring, and all arrived home safely at 9.30 p.m., pleased with their day's outing. The visitors wish to thank their Caerleon friends for the use of their bells.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 18, 1888.

THE Master of the Oxford Diocesan Guild has satisfactorily answered the questions of Mr. GEORGE MUSKETT, relative to two peals rung at his church. The Exercise will rest content with Mr. ROBINSON's explanations, and accept, without hesitation, his assurances as to the truth of the performances under discussion. It is to be regretted that all such doubts cannot be met in the same way, and either explained in such a straightforward manner, or a confession made that the objectors have some reason for the belief that is in them. It is more courageous to meet an accusation face to face, than attempt to get rid of it by ridiculous bombast which is entirely beside the object. And a prompt settlement of all differences of opinion is the most speedy, as well as the most effective way of adjusting those feelings which become outraged in a prolonged dispute.

At present there appears to be further "trouble on the carpet" with respect to a performance at Ross, and other charges are made in this week's correspondence, in which the same ringer is said to be a prominent character. We hope these assertions will be contradicted, if untrue, in a manner that will admit of no ambiguity. Or, if there should be any ground for such charges, it is much better to admit it at once honestly, and prevent any further cross-fire of interrogatories. If this had been done in the first instance with respect to the peals rung at Drayton, the apparent ebullitions of feeling would have been prevented. It is not, we suppose, pretended that any member of the Exercise, whatever his status may be, deserves to be reproved should he happen to approach a distinguished conductor, and question him upon certain of his achievements. Yet it would appear so from the tenor of some of the replies which have been given.

It may be rightly held that there is scarcely any inquiry respecting the performance of a peal which may be regarded as impertinent. And, therefore, when such inquiry is made, it should be considered that those inquiring have a right to do so, and that their action is not to be pooh-poohed, or dealt with by attempts at sarcasm. We should counsel that the allegations at present afloat should be met boldly and effectively denied, as we believe they can be. But if there is the least shadow of truth in either of them, far better is it to honestly say so, and confess to the errors made. A great deal of unpleasantness may thus be avoided, and satisfaction and relief will be felt by the disputants on either side.

THE LATE DEAN OF CHICHESTER.

A correspondent of the Guardian sends the following reminiscence of the late Dean:—

"It was the custom for many years for the late Dean to spend several weeks during the summer at Turvey Abbey, in Bedfordshire, with his loved brother-in-law, Charles Longnet Higgins, and since his death, four years ago, with the widow, his attached sister. Near to this charming place and pretty village is the beautiful church, famous for having had the Rev. Legh Richmond for rector, and also the county reformatory, where about sixty lads are brought up to agricultural pursuits. At the annual harvest festival, with prize-giving, might always be seen Dean Burgon taking the most animated delight in getting the best half-a-dozen boys to recite a piece of poetry, for which he had been personally coaching them. Last year the 'rep' consisted of 'John Gilpin,' with a few primitive accessories in the shape of a home-made wig, &c., and winding up as the rewards were taken from the old-fashioned, silk-knitted purse with some hearty words of approval from the dignified-looking scholar and an expression of hope that the future emigrants on a long winter's night in the backwoods of America might amuse their companions with a recital, always remembering to suit the action to the word."

Correspondence.

[While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.]

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

THE QUICK PEAL OF STEDMAN AT DRAYTON.

SIR,—A line from me on this subject may be of service in reply to "G.M." and "Fair Play" and in defence of Mr. Washbrook. I solemnly declare that the peal of 5040 Stedman Triples rung at Drayton on April 13th, 1888, in 2 hrs. 27 mins., was true, complete, and well-struck throughout. There were no "scrambles" in it as "G.M." suggested; there was no "cooking" (vide "Fair Play"), nothing was omitted, and we are quite sure about the time, which was taken by the clock in the belfry. Seeing the first single come up at 1 hr. 14 mins. from the start, and knowing that the work was being done and had been done correctly—Mr. W. and I said several times in the latter part of the peal "keep them going," the result being that the whole peal was rung at racing pace, but I again solemnly assure the Exercise quite truly and completely throughout. Now if G.M. does not care to ring at the like rate and still doubts the possibility of the whole of the 5040 changes being correctly rung in so short a time, let him come or send some competent witness to hear us, and we will undertake to repeat the performance of April 13th. Will "Fair Play" please ask "G.M." why he did not meet the conductor of the said quick peal in London when asked to do so, in order to receive his testimony on the subject? Then as to the slower peal in the same method on the same bells, but not by the same conductor (G.M. should take care to be quite accurate in his assertions), rung in 2 hrs. 54 mins., on July 4th. The treble ringer in this peal being a novice required considerable help, and thus the peal was rung at a much slower pace than the other; but this peal also was true and complete without omissions or additions. We do not mean to ring our peals always at racing pace, nor do we see why the truth of our performances should be suspected when we occasionally shew how fast small bells can be rung. In any case it seems to me anything but "Fair Play" to asperse any man's character for truthfulness, and thus to discount the value of all his performances simply because he takes part in an unprecedented feat or possesses exceptional abilities as a conductor. F. E. ROBINSON, Master of the Oxford Diocesan Guild.

"QUICK PEALS."

SIR,—I see another correspondent signing himself "Fair Play" is in the field. If that individual is afraid to append his name to his epistle I am afraid he will fail in his purpose. The unknown critic, "Free Lance," too, is erring. I was not the conductor of the quick peal rang at Drayton, but simply the poor "tenor ringer," so I cannot see how I am to blame so much, as I should have been a poor tool if I could not keep her in her place, and in her place she was. Mr. Muskett should be reminded of this also. Poor man! he must have overlooked the fact. The other peal mentioned by the latter gentleman was perfectly correct, and the speed of the peal rests with the performers, and not with Mr. Muskett or anyone else; surely we are not obliged to ring at one speed always. If I wanted to find fault with a company of ringers, I should first of all go and listen to one of their peals before I opened my mouth in public. Now, Sir, here is a man, and I may say a clique, seeing a peal in "THE BELL NEWS," contradicts its truth, refuses to believe in any performance of the company, yes, and refuses to listen to another performance of exactly the same kind. He is afraid. Why? Because he knows it was done and can be done again. He knows from experience that people do not offer to do a thing which they know would be impossible. Bah! it is bigotry, selfishness and jealousy. He do not want people to do what he cannot do himself. Let him take a pattern from another well-known conductor in London, a gentleman to the backbone, who would pat a young one on the back and say "Well done lad." If he cannot improve in his ringing abilities, he can undoubtedly improve his feelings by that pattern. Now, Sir, in conclusion may I add, if there is a hundred more letters on this subject, I shall ignore them all, as I do all other valueless and ridiculous epistles. For we know this, that faultfinders only operate on their betters.

J. W. WASHBROOK.

WASHBROOK v. BARRETT.

SIR,—I am pleased to note through the columns of our paper that false peals are at once detected as soon as the figures appear. The assertions made in Mr. Washbrook's first letter regarding Mr. Barrett's peal were apparently not believed by the last-named gentleman, though by this time he has doubtless come to the conclusion that the peal is untrue. At the same time I think it would have shewn a little courtesy had Mr. Washbrook communicated direct with Mr. Barrett before rushing into print, and thus have allowed him the privilege of withdrawing his peal, and excusing himself as best he could. We must also credit Mr. Washbrook with apprising the Exercise of the existence of this false peal, though long before his letter appeared, it was well known all over Birmingham, being instantly discovered to be false by our able composer. I am likewise pleased to notice that Mr. W. has evidently been working Stedman up lately, and now that he seems to have mastered the proof-scale so well, we shall hear no more of him compiling and conducting worthless peals in this intricate method, as we heard of some time ago. It is well known to readers of our paper that one of his friends induced him to part with the figures of a peal he had conducted, and as it turned out to be false, he was remonstrated with, but he unscrupulously denied having rung that composition, and gave another set of figures, and this last turned out worse than the first. Not hearing any more talk of these affairs, I presume he has not yet been fortunate enough to find the one that was performed, if he has, it ought to have been acknowledged in some way that he had rung a false peal. This matter I should like to see properly squared up, as well as those other matters which correspondents are enquiring about. If such performances as these are acknowledged, what percentage must we take off the weekly list to arrive at what are true peals?

ASTONIAN.

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—I think that Mr. C. H. Hattersley should have made himself a little better informed of the real state of things at Hagley before he made the statement he did to his Hull friends. That statement does not look right as to Hagley not possessing a local company, when in the same number of your paper is the report of the said company's outing to Bridgnorth. That Hagley does not possess a full band of change-ringers we will allow, but that it is on the high road for it the following facts will show: that the company numbers nine members; of that number seven have rung 720s of Minor, six of them are able to take their stand in touches of Grandsire Triples, and that a quarter-peal was rang a few weeks ago, five of the performers belonging to the Hagley company. All this has been done since March last. More we hope to do in the future.

H. MARTIN.

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR,—Seeing in last week's issue a peal of Treble Bob Maximus rung at Norwich, said to be composed by Daniel Prentice, and has been published in "THE BELL NEWS," will Mr. Prentice please to tell me in what number the peal can be found, and at the same time will he please to answer my letter which appeared in "THE BELL NEWS" of Saturday, April 14th, 1888.

GEORGE HAYWARD.

TYDD ST. GILES, CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

SIR,—Seeing in "THE BELL NEWS" of August 4th, 1888, a report of the new peal of six bells, which were opened at Tydd St. Giles, Cambridgeshire, on June 4th, and of the Walpole St. Peter's and Spalding ringers ringing Treble Bob, Bob Minor, and Grandsire Doubles, would you allow me to correct a slight mistake. The Walpole ringers attempted a 720 of Treble Bob, which came to grief. The Spalding ringers then rang 720 London Single (eighteen bobs and two singles), in 25 mins., which was the first true 720 on the new bells. J. Peck, 1; J. S. Wright, 2; J. W. Jarvis, 3; G. Skeef, 4; R. Jarvis, 5; R. Mackman, 6. Conducted by R. Mackman.

THE WEST CITY OF LONDON SOCIETY.

On Monday, August 6th, the members of this society held their eleventh annual outing and dinner at "The Bush Inn," Horsham Road, Dorking. The party left London about 9 o'clock and arrived at Dorking about 10.45 where host Collins had provided waggonettes to convey them to their destination, and after a little light refreshment, a delightful walk was taken through the Glory one of the most picturesque spots in the neighbourhood. Dinner was served punctually at two o'clock, to which twenty-two members and friends did ample justice. The chair was occupied by Mr. Lovett, and the vice-chair by Mr. Wheeler, and the cloth being cleared a lengthy programme was carried out. After the usual loyal toasts, the first performance was a course of Grandsire Caters on the hand-bells by Messrs. H. J. Davis, A. E. Church, W. D. Matthews, R. French and J. Barry. The remaining toasts included "Prosperity to the Society," "The Clergy and Churchwardens of St. Sepulchre," and "The Visitors," which was responded to most ably by Mr. French. Several selections on the hand-bells were given by Messrs. Clarkson, Matthews and Lovett, and Messrs. Barry and Moore, and some excellent songs were song were rendered by Messrs. Clarkson, Church, Barry, Davis, Matthews, Chapman, Rumsey, and Milner. Mr. Holmes created great amusement by his song and representation of "The Countess." The final toast on the list (which was received with musical honours) was "The Host and Hostess," to whom great credit was due for the able and efficient manner in which they catered for the party. In reply host Collins congratulated the officers of the society, Messrs. D. Lovett (master), J. Wheeler (treasurer), and A. E. Matthews (secretary), also the steward, Mr. W. D. Matthews, for the able manner in which the arrangements had been made and carried out, and thus ended one of the most successful and enjoyable outings the society ever had.

REOPENING THE BELLS OF ST. MARY MAGDELINE, GILLINGHAM, KENT.

The bells of this, one of the finest churches in Kent, were once more set in order on Saturday, the 4th instant, being silent for about two years, having become unmanageable at that time, a move was made to get them rehung, but without success, however, after a lapse of time, another move was made, and thanks to the untiring efforts of Mr. Churchwarden Munchin and friends two concerts were given and a subscription opened, the sum of about fifty pounds were realised, of which Mr. Munchin collected about two thirds, finally the work was put in the hands of Mr. Snelling of Sittingbourne, he having fitted new gudgeons and bearings pulleys, runners and ropes, and repaired the wheels, &c. Saturday being the day appointed for the reopening, the newly formed band ascended the tower and rang a few rounds, after which, with the help of a few friends, a start was made for Holt's Original, after ringing about half through a shift course the bells came round. It is supposed that there has only been one peal rung on the bells, which was in the time when the two Trebles were added in May 27th, 1811. A peal of Oxford Treble Bob Major by following: W. Murray, 1; P. Aubrey, 2; W. Eversfield, 3; R. Evans, 4; F. Strange, 5; T. Connber, 6; E. Kittle, 7; J. Braner, 8—J. Yullet, 1; C. Wiltshire, 2; L. Conyard, 3; A. Haigh, 4; W. Baker, 5; J. Baker, 6; F. French, 7; W. Haigh, 8. Great praise is due to Mr. Snelling for the way in which he carried out the work, the go of the bells being all that could be desired.

THE SOCIETY OF TRINITY YOUTHS.

An interim meeting of the above society (for practice) will be held at St. Mary's, Woolwich, on Tuesday, August 21st, at eight o'clock p.m. Members are cordially invited to attend.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"I regretted to hear that the local ringers contented themselves with practising on the bells evenings in the week, while on Sunday the sound of these village bells was not heard, or if heard at all, only occasionally, when it seemed to suit them."

I am obliged to "J. E. W." for giving me a text this week, in the words above. The circumstance which is thus narrated opens out most forcibly a question which has often risen in my mind. What do we ring for? In the old days which we are prone to refer to as the "dark ages" of our history as ringers, when ringers and ringing were under the ban of "respectable society," when our predecessors in the art were not considered by the clergy and church officials as having risen to the dignity of even the organ blower, the gravedigger, or the church sweeper, and were thus left to their own devices, unrecognised and uncared for; there can be no wonder, I say, if in those times the ringers met and rang for their own pleasure alone, and with scarcely a thought for either the reason of the bells being there, or indeed anything else save their own amusement. But now-a-days, when we are said to have emerged from this slough of despond into a brighter atmosphere, when we are being recognised more as church officials and as individuals engaged in a distinct branch of church work in each parish, this question comes to the front with such force that it cannot be longer gainsaid, and must sooner or later be answered. What do we each and every-one ring for? Do we still meet week after week in our belfries, as our forefathers did, simply and solely to gratify our own pleasure, just in the same way as we should join in a cricket match or any other athletic sport, or do we take our part in ringing from a true sense of its real object? If this example of the Brightling band, as given in the words in my "text," were to be taken as an indication of our real purpose and aim in ringing—that of simply ringing for pastime—I fear we are yet a long way—a very long way off, actually occupying that position in the church which we are in the habit of claiming for ourselves. Were that so, I have no hesitation in saying that the look-out would be still dark indeed. But, although, happily, we have exceedingly good grounds for declining to accept this case as a fair example. I am much inclined to fear that after all the principle (if I may call it such) which underlies this deplorable state of things at Brightling operates to a greater or less degree in far too many instances amongst us. I am afraid that too often, as Mr. Heywood remarked recently, our brethren were apt to forget the true reason why the bells are in the tower. Nevertheless, believing in the truth of the good old adage, that "open confession is good for the soul," I would say to our friends with reference to this point, "come and let us reason together," that perchance good may come out of our deliberations.

Then how shall we answer this question, what do we ring for? In the first place, our bells are acknowledged to be "the outward voice of the church," proclaiming to the people the times of assembling for public worship, its season of rejoicing and of sorrow. That, I think, is so much matter of fact, so well-known and understood, as to be not even debatable. The great and primary object of our ringing is thus undoubtedly the calling together of the people to the House of God. This being so, it follows naturally that all who are engaged in the work should use their utmost endeavours so that they may perform this duty in the most efficient manner. Thus constant and unremitting practices are absolutely necessary. These practices consequently should be regarded as means to an end—that of promoting the excellence of the Sunday performances. Thus far our positions and duty as ringers is quite clear and intelligible; and when the ringing is engaged in with these motives, while there will be every reason to look for advancement in the science, and good striking a right answer to the question will be an easy thing to give.

But besides this, ringing for the public services of the church, we as ringers, have other duties to perform with our bells. We have to proclaim the varied seasons as they come round. As we should ring our jubilant peals on the great festivals and other times of rejoicing, so we should mark in like manner, the Church's solemn seasons, and the times of grief when the Church and nation suffers bereavement in the loss of its sons. As the old year dies out also, we should mark its departure with muffled tones, thus proclaiming the close of another era in our sojourn on earth—one more year added to our life's span, one nearer the coming of the Great Judge, of the quick and the dead, to whom we must all render account for our doings in the flesh. Then when we herald in the new year with our date touches so peculiarly commemorative of our Christian era, we should be likewise proclaiming that "sure and certain hope of a glorious resurrection" which the advent of the new year has brought us so much nearer to its accomplishment.

Then comes our peal-ringing performances. As the choir practices its anthem, week after week, until it is competent to sing it at the service in the church ad majorem Dei gloriam, so should we ring our peals. As excellence in the performances of the choir is praiseworthy so is excellence in ringing. To quote the beautiful simile of a late and beloved vicar of my old parish church; just as the parson preached the sermon, so should the choir sing the anthem, for the edification of the people and the glory of God. So with peal ringing, which should be engaged in with like motives. Just as our choirs endeavour to show their proficiency in their singing of anthems, so we as ringers should strive to mark our progress with peal-ringing performances, that the people may be gratified at the long continued sound of their bells, and likewise be animated with feelings of renewed devotion to their Church and heavenly Father.

Such, then, I venture to submit, are our duties as ringers. Such are the objects, in short, that we should ring for. But I would ask in all earnestness, is it this that we really do ring for? I admit that until recent years, we have had little or no encouragement from our spiritual superiors to regard our work in such a light. That state of things is undoubtedly passing away, and in the future this cannot be counted upon as affording an excuse for remissions on our part. Shall it then be said of us, now or in the time to come, that while our clergy have awoken, or are awakening to a true sense of their duties towards us and our work, we, on the other hand, still remain as our ancestors were simply ringers for amusement, without a due recognition of our work, or a thought as to the real object for which "we and the bells are there."

Surely we shall rise "to the situation;" and remembering that as is the preacher in the pulpit, the choir in the stalls, so should be the ringers in the belfry—living voices of the Church; then such examples as that of Brightling will vanish from our midst, and we shall "with no uncertain sound," be able to proclaim what we ring for.

THE CHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.

The first annual festival of this Guild was held at Chester on Monday last. The Guild originated at the Diocesan Conference in October, 1887, when a resolution that it was desirable to found it, was moved by the Archdeacon of Chester, and carried unanimously. In accordance with this resolution a meeting was held in the Old Refectory on November 12th, 1887, at which the Guild was established, rules were adopted, and a provisional committee was appointed to carry on the work until the first annual meeting. The Rev. Canon Greenall kindly undertook the office of secretary pro tem., and Mr. J. Tinsley that of treasurer, and to their exertions much of the success of the Guild will be ascribed. Local branches are established in various parts of the Diocese, and representatives from them are elected to the executive committee. The first object of the Guild is to secure the recognition of the ringers as Church officers, while it seeks to improve the art of change-ringing and to promote belfry reform.

The members of the Guild were invited to be present at the morning service at the Cathedral, and though the exigencies of Bank Holiday traffic made some of the trains bringing distant visitors to be late, there was a large congregation present. After the anthem, a short address was given by the Archdeacon of Chester, who took for his text Psalm xxix. 2.

At 11.30 the general meeting of the Guild was held in the Old Refectory, by kind permission of the Dean, who presided, and gave a hearty welcome to the Cathedral precincts to these church workers who had gathered together from the different parts of the Diocese. The report was read by Canon Greenall, and gave an account of the progress which had been made in the first nine months of the Guild's existence. From this it would appear that there are now seven local branches, containing forty-six honorary members, 235 change-ringers, and fifty-two probationers. The local branches are Chester, Wirral, Macclesfield, Bowdon and Stockport, Northwich, Runcorn and Frodsham, and Grappenhall; whilst it is hoped soon to establish others at Holmes Chapel, at Crewe or Nantwich, and elsewhere. A full discussion on some of the rules was raised by some suggested alterations moved by Mr. Pease, of Saltney, but the general opinion was that it would be better to give the rules a longer trial before making any change. The officers and committee for the ensuing year were elected, but no election was made to the office of Master, in the hope that ere long some influential person in the Diocese, who is a change-ringer, may be met with, and be willing to occupy that position. Mr. H. A. Heywood, of Caldly Manor, was elected secretary and treasurer, and the following were chosen as members of the committee:—The Rev. the Precentor, Rev. H. Grantham, Dr. Bridge, Messrs. R. Bushell, J. Tinsley, H. Hatt Cooke, F. Ball, Matthews, Dexter, Pease, Bithell, and T. Marshall. The following were approved of as instructors:—For Chester, Messrs. F. Ball, Bithell, and Pierce; for Frodsham, Mr. G. Rigby; for Grappenhall, Mr. Houghton; for Runcorn, Mr. Hoxworth; for Macclesfield, Mr. Walmsley; for Holmes Chapel, Mr. Johnson; for Wirral, Mr. W. Woods; and for Northwich, Mr. W. Forster. Arrangements were made for the distribution of the certificates of membership and the belfry prayers through the secretaries of local branches, and very hearty thanks were unanimously accorded to Cannon Greenall and Mr. Tinsley for their provisional work as secretary and treasurer respectively. On the motion of the Rev. H. Blogg, a vote of thanks to the Dean for the use of the refectory and for his conduct in the chair was passed, and after a graceful acknowledgment from the Dean, the Company adjourned to the school St. Mary's on-the-Hill (kindly lent by the Archdeacon), where a substantial dinner had been provided by Messrs. Baker. Nearly 190 sat down, and the room was well filled. After dinner was over the Dean proposed the toast of "Church and Queen," which was duly honoured; and Mr. Matthews, of Macclesfield, in cordial terms proposed the health of Archdeacon Barber, as the founder of the Guild. The toast was very warmly received. The Archdeacon, in reply, said that any efforts of his to establish the Guild had been amply repaid by the magnificent gathering that day, whilst they would have been useless and vain had he not been so heartily seconded and supported by many energetic workers. It had been a great pleasure to him to do what he had done, and he wished continued and increasing success to the Guild which had begun so auspiciously.

During the afternoon the towers of the cathedral, St. Mary's-without-the-Walls, St. Mary's-on-the-Hill, St. Michael's and St. Peter's were open to the members of the Guild, and there being no time for regular peals, touches of the following methods were rung: Stedman, Grandsire Triples, Treble Bob, and Plain Bob.

At six o'clock the members reassembled at St. Mary's School for tea; and the opportunity was taken of consulting them as to the best time and place for the next annual meeting. It was ascertained that a large majority were in favour of meeting at Macclesfield (D.V.) on the August Bank Holiday. The Rural Dean of Chester proposed a vote of thanks to Canon Greenall and Mr. Tinsley, which was most heartily accorded, and thus was brought to a close a festival which on all sides was pronounced to be most pleasant and successful.

THE ST. PAUL'S (BRIGHTON) GUILD.

On Monday, August 6th, the members of the above Guild held their annual outing at Mr. Turner's farm, near East Hoathly. The party, numbering about twenty-five, left Brighton by 8-17 a.m. train to Uckfield, and on their arrival proceeded by wagonettes to East-Hoathly. After partaking of refreshments they rang several 6-scores of Doubles on the bells of the parish church and subsequently indulged in cricket. At one o'clock the members sat down to an excellent luncheon provided by Mr. and Mrs. Turner. In the afternoon a visit was paid to Waldron, and touches of Triples were rung upon the bells of All Saints Church, including a well-struck quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples which was accomplished in forty-five minutes by the following ringers: P. Allfrey, 1; W. Allfrey, 2; W. Palmer, 4; F. W. Harding (Eastbourne) 5; E. Willoughby (Eastbourne), 6; A. Bennett (conductor), 7; George Murray, 8. The members then adjourned to Mr. Turner's, and after partaking of tea returned in their conveyances to Uckfield, en route for Brighton, highly satisfied with their outing. The thanks of the Guild are due to Mr. and Mrs. Allfrey, who journeyed from Brighton the previous day in order to make the necessary arrangements for the visits. So admirably had they arranged everything for the comfort of the ringers, that the day proved one of the most enjoyable the Guild has spent since its existence. The members also take this opportunity of thanking the incumbents of East Hoathly and Waldron parish churches, for kindly granting them permission to ring upon their bells.

BRISTOL.

On Friday, the 10th of August, a mixed band of the ringers of Bristol had great pleasure in meeting Mr. J. Dennis, of the St. Phillip's Society, Sydney, Australia, at St. Matthew's Church, Kingsdown, where several touches were rung in the Grandsire method, in which Mr. Dennis took part, after which they rang at St. Mary Redcliffe, and St. Peter's. The ringers comprised the following: Messrs. York, Salter, Knill, Dennis, Beak, Walters, Gordon, Chammings, Palser and Rooke. The band then adjourned to the "George Hotel," Narrow Wine Street, where a very pleasant evening was spent.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH, WEST BROMWICH.

ON Monday, August 6th (Bank Holiday), the ringers of the above church had their annual outing, the place selected being Coalbrookdale, Shropshire. The ringers were accompanied by the Vicar (the Rev. M. M. Connor), and Messrs. C. Price and J. Frisby, of the Christ Church band, and Mr. W. R. Small, of Tipton. They started in rather miserable weather from West Bromwich at 8.10 a.m., and reached Wolverhampton at 8.45. Here they had to change, and while they were waiting for the train, the party was joined by Mr. Rowland Cartwright, of Wombourn. The train coming in, every one had to make a rush for a seat, and some of the party had to content themselves with getting a place in the very special apartment—the guard's van. At Shifnal they were able to improve on it by being put into a second class carriage. Wellington was reached a few minutes before ten, and here there was a stop for an hour and a half, so it was determined to try the bells if they could gain permission. With this object in view, the Vicar at once set out to find the proper authorities. He first trudged off to find the vicar of Wellington, and having found him and obtained his permission, he had to jog off to the Churchwarden to get his. Then there was another journey to find the steeplekeeper, but "all's well that ends well," and at last they found themselves in the belfry, which contains a peal of six, tenor 23 cwt. Ringing at Wellington is at a very low ebb, and there is plenty of room for improvement. The "go" of the bells is very bad. The present Vicar of Wellington has only lately taken charge of the parish, and it is hoped that belfry reform will be one of the first works on which he will commence. We need only refer to one case to illustrate how sadly reform is needed when we mention that one individual came into the belfry with his pipe in his mouth and his hat on his head, and went on with his smoking till told by one of the party that smoking was not allowed in belfries. A 120 of Stedman Doubles was rung by S. Reeves, 1; W. R. Small, 2; J. Frisby, 3; R. Cartwright, 4; C. Price, 5; E. Woodhall, 6. Other members of the party tried the bells, but none seemed to care about ringing too long. At 11.10 all were again in the train ready to start for Coalbrookdale. On the way down, courses of Grandsire were rung on the handbells, which Mr. Small had kindly brought with him. On arriving at their destination, a move was at once made for the church, when the bells were raised, and ringing then became the order of the day. A 294 of Grandsire Triples was rung to test the bells and see if it would be safe to try for a peal in the afternoon. It was thought this could be done, and while the peal band went to refresh themselves, other members of the party rang various touches of Grandsire Triples. When the cravings of the inner man had been satisfied, the following members attempted Biddlestone's peal of Grandsire Triples, which came to grief after ringing 1700 changes, owing to a miscall. G. Griffiths, 1; S. Reeves, 2; S. Slater, 3; W. R. Small, 4; C. Price, 5; S. Smith, 6; W. Cooper, 7; R. Cartwright, 8. While the ringing was going on, other members of the party strolled about, enjoying the beautiful scenery with which this part of the country abounds. A visit was made to Ironbridge, to view the bridge, from which we suppose the place takes its name, and which is said to be the first iron bridge ever made in the world. Some wandered along the banks of the Severn, and others wended their way through beautiful lanes back to Coalbrookdale, and got to the Church in time to meet the rest of the party. Tea was provided in the schoolroom, which had been kindly placed at their disposal by the Vicar, the Rev. H. Harris. A good repast had been provided by Mrs. Beddoe, consisting of tea and coffee, beef and ham, bread and butter, cakes, watercress, salad, etc., to which full justice was done. After tea, the Rev. M. M. Connor, in a few remarks, said he was sorry the Vicar had not been able to hear the ringing that day, as he had to be away from home, and he proposed that a hearty vote of thanks be given to Mr. Harris for his kindness in allowing them the use of the schoolroom, and to Mrs. Beddoe for providing such an excellent tea. Mrs. BEDDOE briefly responded, and said she hoped it would not be the last time the West Bromwich ringers would visit Coalbrookdale.

Mr. WOODHALL said how pleased they were to see members from other belfries with them that day, and hoped such meetings as this would tend to bind ringers together more, and also further the art of change-ringing.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT in responding, said how pleased he was to receive the invitation, and to be present, and to do all in his power to help and forward the science.

Rambles by some, and ringing by others, till it was time to assemble at the station for home, brought a most pleasant and enjoyable day to a close.

The party wish through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS," to convey their thanks to the Vicars of Wellington and Coalbrookdale for their kindness in allowing them the use of the bells.

THE ORMSKIRK SOCIETY.

ON Monday, August 6th, the annual pic-nic of the above society (with a few friends), took place, Bromborough and Neston in Cheshire being the places selected. Leaving Ormskirk by the 6.50 a.m. train, and arriving in Liverpool about 7.30 a.m., a move was made to the underground railway to go by train to Birkenhead, the latter place being reached in good time, and enquiries made as to trains to Bromborough, etc. Leaving Birkenhead by the 8.55 a.m. train, Bromborough was reached, and the party alighted, and after a pleasant walk of a mile, arrived at the church. Keys being obtained, a move was made to the belfry, and having raised the bells, the first half of Holt's ten-part peal was rung in 1 hr. 30 mins. J. Prescott, 1; E. Prescott (Hindley), 2; W. Ellis, 3; H. Winrow, 4; W. Bentham (conductor), 5; W. J. Taylor, 6; G. Prescott, 7; P. H. Harvey, 8. Tenor about 25 cwt. The ringing-chamber is very noisy, almost making it impossible to hear the calls. The bells were cast by Messrs. Taylor, of Loughborough. On descending the tower the party found the rector waiting in the churchyard, who after a very pleasant chat showed the party through the church, which is a very pretty one, and explained to them the history of the various stained windows, etc. On taking leave of the rector, the ringers thanked him for the use of the bells, and having wished all the party a pleasant good day, a move was made to Bromborough station, and having booked to Neston, changing at Hooton Junction, the party arrived at Neston. During the walk from the station to the church, bells could be heard at intervals, supposed to be Chester Cathedral bells. The party then partook of refreshments, and obtained a rest for a short time, after which a move was made to the church, where touches of Grandsire Triples were rung. The bells are a musical peal of eight by Mears and Stainbank, and run very well. At this place the ringers stand on the ground floor to ring, and can just hear the bells in the ringing-room, the conductor having no difficulty in making himself heard. After lowering the bells the party dispersed in various directions, the place being quite en fete, being the annual club day. After a short walk the party came together again, they being enlivened by the comic anecdotes of "Tassier," who kept the party in roars of laughter. Leaving Neston, Birkenhead was reached, and then by boat to Liverpool, where a short stay was made to refresh the inner man. The party arrived at Ormskirk about 11 p.m., having had a very good day, and they wish through "THE BELL NEWS" to thank the ringers and all concerned for the kind manner in placing the bells of both churches at their disposal.

THE ST. JAMES'S SOCIETY, LONDON.

DEDICATION OF THE BELLS OF ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH, MINEHEAD, SOMERSETSHIRE.

For a great number of years, the parish of Minehead has possessed but a very poor ring of bells, which were certainly not a credit to the town, or in keeping with the fine tower and handsome old parish church. These bells were a peal of five, hanging in a cage totally unfit to stand the strain of heavy bells swinging in peal. Last year steps were taken in the parish to collect money with which to pay the cost of re-hanging the whole, and last summer a bazaar was held at Clanville and a considerable sum of money thereby raised for the same object. A leading part in the movement has been taken by H. A. Bosanquet, Esq. (one of the churchwardens), who, in fact, initiated the scheme and contributed most generously to the fund, and the Misses Bosanquet (3) have also each added a new bell to the old ring, increasing the number of bells to eight. Minehead now possesses one of the finest rings of eight in the county, and it is hoped that a band of young ringers will be found who are willing to learn the art of scientific change ringing, and so lend their help in the direction of belfry reform and towards furthering a science which is so little known and practised in the county of Somerset—Dunster, Old Cleeve, St. Mary's Taunton, and Milverton being almost the only places in the county where the scientific method is practised. Nearly every other county in England, too, has its county association or diocesan guild of change-ringers—societies which do immense good towards promoting scientific change-ringing and belfry reform, and it is hoped that Somerset will ere long possess an association or guild of this kind.

The following are the inscriptions on the bells:—Treble, "Cast by John Warner and Sons, London. Amy Louisa Bosanquet gave me, A.D. 1888. We give thanks to Thee." 2nd—Cast by John Warner and Sons, London. Edith Caroline Bosanquet gave me A.D. 1888. We bless Thee." 3rd—"Cast by John Warner and Sons, London. Mary Bosanquet gave me, A.D. 1888. We glorify Thee." 4th—"Cast by John Warner and Sons, London. This bell recast and enlarged, A.D. 1888. H. A. Bosanquet, W. Tarr, churchwardens." 5th—Soli Deo detur gloria, 1607," (then comes the figure of a bell followed by the letters T.P.) 6th—"Edward Lee and John Jenkins, churchwardens. Bilbie, Cullompton, fecit 1804." 7th—"Mark Walker John Richards, churchwardens, 1766. Cast by Thomas Bayley, Bridgwater." Tenor, "Edward Lee and John Jenkins, churchwardens. Thomas Bilbie, Cullompton, fecit 1804." The approximate weight of the bells, as supplied by Messrs. Warner and Sons, are:—Treble, 6½ cwt.; 2nd, 7 cwt.; 3rd, 8 cwt.; 4th, 8½ cwt.; 5th, 9½ cwt.; 6th, 11 cwt.; 7th, 15 cwt.; tenor, 21 cwt. The 3rd, 4th, and 5th bells of the old peal have been retained for the 6th, 7th and 8th in the present ring. The old treble bell, which was very badly out of tune with the rest, has been recast and enlarged (as will be seen from the inscription which it bears) and is now in very good tune, and Messrs. Warner are to be congratulated upon the very successful manner in which the "splice" has been affected. The 5th bell is 280 years old, and is a remarkably long waisted bell. The Rev. H. T. Ellacombe (who was one of the best authorities on church bells), in his "Church Bells of Somerset," says, respecting this bell, "If date of this bell is correctly given, there is no clue to name of founder. It is too early for either Thomas Purdew or Thomas Pennington." The lip of the bell has abundant signs that in days gone by the local smith or carpenter had been employed to tune it, and the manner in which he applied himself and his cold chisel to the work may be easily imagined upon examination of the lip of the bell; large pieces have been chipped off, and it certainly has a very "broken-mouthed" appearance. The 6th and 8th bells were both cast by Thomas Bilbie, of Cullompton in 1804, and are in a very good state of preservation. The 7th, which is older than either of the last mentioned, being cast in 1766 by Thomas Bayley, of Bridgwater, has an ornamental band of light tracery round its crown—a feature which neither of the other bells possess. The three new bells are very fine specimens of the bell founder's craft, and indeed nothing but the very best workmanship is seen in anything which Messrs. Warner and Son handle. The bell cage is a very massive English oak one, and rests on a set-off from the tower walls, which will prevent forcing out and cracking of the walls, as is often the case in towers where the cage is wedged against the walls to steady it. The frame is firmly bolted together with iron tie bolts and corner plates. The 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th bells have each been quarter-turned, and the whole are hung on the most approved scientific principles with wheels of oak, steel gudgeons, and bearings of gun metal resting in iron carriages, which are firmly bolted to the cage. A chiming apparatus on Ellacombe's principle, by means of which the whole of the bells can be chimed by one man, has been fixed.

On Monday evening, at six o'clock, service was held in the church. Proper Psalms, 122 and 150, were chanted, and the lessons read were Numbers x, and Revelation vii., verse 9 to end. After singing Hymn 242, at the end of the prayers, the Rev. A. A. F. Luttrell (vicar) and the Rev. C. Sainsbury (curate) proceeded to the west end, and, standing under the tower, a short dedication service was said by the vicar, after which the bells were chimed for a short time with the chiming apparatus, by Mr. H. W. Tomkins, of the Old Cleeve Guild of ringers. The service concluded with the benediction, pronounced by the vicar. Among those present in the church were H. A. Bosanquet, Esq., Mrs. and the Misses Bosanquet, T. Ponsford, Esq., Miss Hill, Dr. Ollerhead, Mr. W. Tarr (vicar's churchwarden) and Mr. R. K. W. Owen, of the Oxford Diocesan Guild of Ringers.

Directly the service was over, eight members of the Dunster Guild of change-ringers raised the bells in peal, after which they rang a plain course of Grandsire Triples, followed by a touch of 504 of Grandsire Triples very finely struck, standing in the following order:—R. Thorne, Treble; E. Hole, 2nd; F. Pitts 3rd; J. Tudball, 4th; R. Hole, 5th; J. Grabham, 6th; C. B. Craze (conductor), 7th; W. Thrush, Tenor. A plain course of Triples was rung with Mr. T. Doble, of Taunton, at the 7th. The ringing concluded with a well-struck 168 Grandsire Triples, and the bells lowered in peal. The "go" of the bells was very satisfactory. It was the general opinion of the ringers that in order to bring in the belfry with any degree of accuracy and comfort the floor between the belfry and the bells should be tightly packed with sawdust, tan, or something similar to deaden the sound of the bells, which at present is deafening, the conductor having to shout his loudest in order to be heard distinctly. The ringers then adjourned to the Feathers' Hotel, where an excellent supper awaited them, which was presided over by the Rev. C. Sainsbury, supported by Dr. Ollerhead and Mr. W. H. Lewry, with Mr. W. Tarr (churchwarden) in the vice-chair.

After the removal of the cloth the Rev. C. Sainsbury rose and thanked the Dunster men, in the name of the vicar, himself, and the people of Minehead generally, for their kindness in coming over there that evening and opening their new bells. He should, and he felt sure also that the vicar and churchwardens would gladly welcome them to ring on their bells at any time, and he hoped that when the young band of ringers had been formed at Minehead, the Dunster men would come over and help them to master the intricacies of change-ringing.

Dr. Ollerhead said he had great pleasure in seconding all that the Rev. C. Sainsbury had said.

Mr. C. B. Craze, replying on behalf of the Dunster Guild, expressed himself satisfied with the bells in every way, and said he and his brother ringers would at all times willingly come over from Dunster and give their assistance in pushing on the young band of ringers which he was pleased to hear was likely to be formed.

Several songs and touches on the handbells made the evening pass very pleasantly, and the party broke up after passing a hearty vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. W. Tarr, to the chairman for presiding.

THE BELL AND THE SEA SERPENT.

The ancient town or city of Hammer on the shores of Lake Mjosen, the large lake near Christeance in Norway, was once a place of considerable importance, as the ruins of a cathedral sufficiently testify. It is believed by the inhabitants of the district that there still exists an enormous Sea Serpent in Mjosen Lake. It is said to lie coiled about the great bell of the ancient cathedral, the bell having been thrown into the lake during the Seven Years' War, and now lying at the bottom, where, under certain light, it can be seen. Many attempts have been made to bring to shore that bell, but hitherto without success.

ALL SAINTS' SOCIETY, FULHAM.

The annual outing of the above society took place on Saturday last, when a very enjoyable day was spent at the historical town of St. Albans. The company consisting of the following members, viz; Messrs. Davies, Gale, Driver, F. Kelley, C. F. Winny, How, Nicholls, J. W. Kelley, Porter, Green, and a friend, started from Putney Bridge Station, by the 8.47 train for Willesden, and from thence to St. Albans. During the railway journey, the handbells were brought into requisition, and amongst other touches, 223 Grandsire Triples were smartly brought round at hand. On alighting at St. Albans, St. Peter's Church was "made for," and some very creditable ringing was indulged in, amongst which were 559 Grandsire Triples, 521 and 305 Grandsire Caters, conducted by Messrs. J. W. Kelley and C. F. Winny. By this time all were ready to do justice to the excellent dinner which was awaiting them at the noted hotel, the "Peahen." Here the company was met by the much respected President of the Society, viz.: Rev. F. H. Fisher, vicar of Fulham, who presided at the dinner in his customary good natured style. After thanks had been unanimously given to the vicar, a start was made for the "Cathedral," where the genial Mr. Battle was awaiting to conduct the company through the labyrinth of passages to the tower. Notwithstanding the weight of the bells and the beams in the belfry, touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples were successfully accomplished, in the latter method being assisted by some of the local ringers. An inspection of the grand cathedral was the next pleasure which all thoroughly appreciated. St. Peter's Church was again found to be the meeting place where the Fulham Company were met by Leonard Proctor, Esq., J. R. Haworth, S. Page, Messrs. Cartmel, Waller, Battle, Brewer and Buckingham, who, with four of the Fulham company rung some touches of Stedman Triples and Caters. Farewells were now exchanged, and the latter company soon found themselves on the way for Full-home (Fulham), which place was reached soon after ten. The members of the Fulham Society take this opportunity through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS" of thanking all those concerned in the making the day what it was, viz.: a very enjoyable one.

THE SURREY ASSOCIATION.

The next District Meeting of this Association will be held at St. Peter's, South Croydon, by the kind permission of the Vicar, on Saturday, September 1st. The tower will be open for ringing from 4 p.m. The tower of the parish church will also be open for ringing from 5.30 p.m.

ARTHUR B. CARPENTER, Hon. Sec.

WORCESTER AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.

THE NEXT QUARTERLY MEETING of the above Association will be held in the Lyttleton Middle Class schoolroom, Malvern, at 5 o'clock prompt, this day, August 25th. The Rev. Dr. Gregory Smith has kindly consented to preside. The bells of the Abbey church will be open for ringing.

THE LATE BISHOP OF MICHIGAN.—A funeral service on the remains of the late Rev. Samuel Harris, Bishop of Michigan, took place under the Lanthorn Tower, Westminster Abbey, on Wednesday afternoon. Dr. Westcott read the introductory psalm and lesson, and Dr. Thompson, Bishop of Mississippi, who spoke with great emotion, eulogised the deceased's services as a jurist, priest, soldier, and bishop, whose memory and good example would remain though his life's work was done. The service was intoned. The mourners were Mrs. Harris, Miss Harris, Master J. Harris, and Dr. McCarroll.

On Tuesday Lady Crossley started a new clock placed in the tower of St. John's Church, Lowestoft, as a memorial of the Queen's Jubilee. The clock was dedicated for public use for all time.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Saturday afternoon, August 18th, the Dewsbury Society left Dewsbury by the 2.5 p.m. excursion train en route for Gainsborough, arriving after a very pleasant journey at 3.30. At the station they were met by Mr. W. Tinker, who escorted them to the church, but on arriving there found that a service was being held, so a temporary adjournment was made for refreshment. Afterwards they proceeded to the tower, in which there is a splendid peal of eight bells, tenor 20 cwt. The bells were raised in peal, and a date touch of Kent Treble Bob Major was attempted, which was successfully brought round in 1hr. 11mins. The ringers were: J. Garforth, 1; J. H. Dixon (conductor), 2; J. Idle, 3; H. Robinson, 4; N. Hepworth, 5; G. H. Hardy (composer), 6; J. Buckley, 7; G. Taylor, 8. After the ringing the visitors started to have a look round the market and then wended their way back to the "Friendship Inn," where they spent the rest of the evening in a jovial manner. Their very best thanks are due to the local ringers for the way in which they assisted to make the outing successful. The return journey was commenced at 10.5, Dewsbury been reached at 11.45, being satisfied with the outing.

THE KENT COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

A District Meeting was held at Tenterden, on Thursday, the 16th inst., and was attended by about forty members from Folkestone, Mersham, Staplehurst, etc. The towers of Woodchurch, Rolvenden, and Benenden were visited and touches of Grandsire and Plain Bob rung. The experiment of more frequent meetings seems to be succeeding, the attendance of a smaller number making it possible for every one to have a chance of ringing.

ST. MARTIN'S SOCIETY, BIRMINGHAM.

A SPECIAL general meeting of this society will be held on Tuesday, August 28, in the tower, at 7.45 p.m. The attendance of members, for the consideration of important business, is earnestly requested.

ALFRED THOMAS, Secretary.

SALE OF AN HISTORICAL CASTLE.—On Tuesday last, at the Mart, Tokenhouse Yard, was offered by sale by auction the Devizes Castle Estate, Wiltshire. The property was described as unique, and in the particulars of sale the history of the castle was traced from its foundation in 1107, by Roger, Bishop of Salisbury, its first Governor. For several centuries it formed part of the dowry of the Queens of England, and until comparatively a recent date it had all the immunities of a Royal Castle. In 1645 it was besieged and taken by Cromwell, by whom the ancient castle was ruined. A certain portion of the foundations and the ruins of the Castle remain, the existing modern house having, the auctioneer stated, been built to accord with the character of the Castle which formerly stood upon the place. He added that the late owner, Mr. Valentine Leach, and his father had spent years of time and incalculable sums of money on making the estate what it now was. Apart from the Castle and grounds, an income of 170*l.* was derived from property let off, but that amount could be increased to 270*l.*, which at 30 years' purchase would be 8000*l.* The outlay on the residence would not be represented by 70,000*l.* or 80,000*l.* The first bid made was 4000*l.*, which was speedily followed by one of 6000*l.* The auctioneer said that they ought to have started at 60,000*l.*, jocularly adding that if some one would buy the Castle and present it to the nation, he would certainly be made a baronet, and possibly a peer. The last offer made was 8000*l.*, at which the property was sold, the name of the purchaser not transpiring.

NOTE TO THE PEAL RANG AT HORHAM, SUFFOLK.—The regular striking of this peal throughout reflected great credit on the performers. This is the first peal ever rung upon the bells, which are the oldest p 1 of eight in the Eastern Counties, if not in England, and also the lightest peal ringable. They are quite a curiosity, being hung as bells were three and-a-half centuries ago, four of them having but three-quarter wheels, the clappers working upon the old fashioned baldricks, with cow-hide and hempen string, so often described in old writings, with C hook and wooden busk tied round the stalk of clappers. The diameter of tenor is 2 ft. 8 in. and that of treble 1 ft. 8 in. The ropes hang in the belfry 1, 5, 6, 4, 3, 2, 7, 8.

BRINKBURN PRIORY.

Brinkburn Priory, beautifully situated on the river Coquet, Northumberland, was in ancient times hidden in so dense a forest that not a turret could be seen by the passer-by. There is a tradition that once upon a time—the date is uncertain—a party of Scottish borderers, laden with the spoils of a successful foray were on their way home by the Devil's Causeway, which crosses the Coquet a little below the priory. It was the intention of the marauders to make a raid on the monks, who were always understood to be well provided with the world's goods, although they had, of course, taken the usual vow of poverty. They entered the forest in search of the secluded pile; but, being unable to find it, they returned to the road, and so proceeded on their way towards merry Teviotdale. The monks, who had heard of the raiders' approach, naturally felt overjoyed at their discomfiture. So the great bell of the priory was rung to assemble the brethren to offer up thanks for their deliverance. But, unfortunately for the monks, the Scots had proceeded only a short distance from the spot, when the sound of the bell struck their ears, revealing the situation of the pious retreat. The band soon penetrated the thicket, broke in the doors, and put the monks to flight. Every corner of the building was searched, and every valuable taken. The Scots then fired the place, and the flames consumed everything but the solid walls.

The Brinkburn bells, tradition says, were sent to Durham after the suppression of the monastery. They are believed to have been possessed of great power combined with sweetness; but they cannot have been of any great size, since we are told they were dispatched on their way to their new destination in the charge of some trusty men on horseback, and that they were lost in the attempt to ford the river Font, when in high flood, and only recovered miraculously afterwards through the prayers of some holy men. But we are afraid there is some anachronism in this tale. Wallis, in his "History of Northumberland," affirms, indeed, that the Brinkburn bells found their way to Durham, and James Hardy, a good authority, tells us it is a saying in Coquetdale to this day that they are still to be heard there.

But Waller White, in his "Northumberland and the Border," says the deep pool where the bells were lost is yet to be seen in the river Coquet, while another good authority, Mr. Wilson, in the fourth volume of the "Proceedings of the Berwickshire Naturalists' Club," states positively that a fragment of one of the lost bells was found some years ago buried at the root of a tree on the hill on the opposite side of the river from Brinkburn. How much or how little truth there is in these contradictory stories we cannot tell.

OLD ST. JAMES'S PALACE.

King William IV. did not originate the clock which, with its lozenge-shaped tablet, appears in views of a much earlier date; but he caused the dials to be fresh gilded, and he has left the record in letters of gold. It was on this occasion, no doubt, that a little affair occurred with regard to the bell-turret that may give an interest to that little structure. That incident was the removal of the bell that had long given out the hours to the tradesmen of Saint James's Street. These last deplored the loss of their timekeeper, and ventured to call the king's attention to the matter. His Majesty inquired into the matter himself, and was told that the bell had been removed because the roof was insecure. "Insecure, is it?" said the king. "Then how is it that I see so many people on the top of it when there is any sight to be seen?" That little question settled the matter; the bell was returned to the turret without another word; and no doubt is the same that now chimes the hours.

NOTICE.

The members of the Midland Counties' Association are invited to a Garden Party, at Duffield Bank, on Saturday, September 8th, from two till six o'clock. Tea at half-past four. The Church Tower will be open from two till half-past four, and from half-past five till nine o'clock. Mr. Heywood will also be glad to see friends who are members of other associations.

A FORTNIGHT'S RAMBLE IN KENT.

In a recent number of the People's Palace Journal the Editor gives a gossiping article upon a ramble in this beautiful part of England, which is not unsuited for reproduction in "THE BELL NEWS." Many of our readers will remember the interesting sketches of Kentish churches which were contributed by Dr. Francis Grayling, of Sittingbourne, in former numbers:—

"First then, we will take the train to Rochester. There is a great deal to be seen at Rochester: the Castle, where the pigeons are so tame: the Cathedral, the old Alms-house for the Seven Poor Travellers: the Town Hall: the Dockyard at Chatham: the Medway with its shipping—one must go down by an early train, and stay the whole day at Rochester. A walk across a most lovely country brings us next day to Maidstone, where there is nothing at all to see, if I recollect aright; it is a comfortable quiet old town with a broad High Street and a general air of great respectability. From Maidstone one would walk or ride to Sheerness, just to see that quiet and picturesque old Dockyard. Then to Canterbury. Canterbury is really the most delightful of all old English cities. The Cathedral is, in some respects, the most beautiful, as it the largest and most venerable of all our Cathedrals. There are the City Walls, the School, the Close, St. Augustine's College, the winding old streets: the tutors and students of the College going about in their caps and gowns—everybody ought to see Canterbury. Thence we should walk to Whitstable, and from that quiet little place make our way along the coast of Herne Bay, the Reculvers, and Margate. Avoid, however, a stay at Margate during the month of August, when it is crowded, noisy and dear. The walk from Margate to Broadstairs on the edge of the cliff is one which, for pure and bracing air, and a delightful seaward prospect, is not to be beaten anywhere. Unfortunately it is only four miles round. Thence to Ramsgate, and from that pleasant place, which has the best fruit market in England, to Sandwich, partly by the cliff and partly by road. This way leads you through Richborough, the finest of the many Roman castles left in the country—Pevensy Castle and Rochester Castle, perhaps, excepted. As for Sandwich, it is so sleepy, so quiet, so deserted, that it seems a hundred years behind the times. It is a Cinque Port, but the sea has left its shores, and now there is nothing but a creek and a quay, and a little trading craft inside. From Sandwich to Deal there is a footpath across the sandhills by the sea shore. It is a wild and solitary walk: there are "rhines" full of brown and brackish water: water-rats plunge in as you pass: rabbits run about among the coarse strong grass: kingfishers flash their green wings along the surface of the water: you never meet a single person: and when you presently come upon a stone which commemorates a horrid murder wrought upon that spot, you feel that the place is indeed a likely one for the purpose. Then you come out upon the sea shore and the solid mass of ruin called Sandown Castle. Then terraces begin, and you are presently at Deal, where the houses have their backs upon the sea. Out at sea are the Goodwin Sands: at low tide you may see them: you may even land upon them: but remember that beneath your feet are buried hundreds of tall ships with their rich cargoes. The walk from Deal to Dover is along high road hot and dusty. But it is only about eight miles long. At Dover you change from the east coast to the south coast, and a noticeable difference in the air is felt immediately. Dover Castle, Shakespeare's Cliff, and the Harbour, are all worth seeing. You can see the coast of France quite plainly, and I hope you will not omit a grateful sigh for the twenty one miles of sea between us and that lively country. Further, I do hope that at every election, as long as you live, you will vote steady against any Government which would sanction the Channel Tunnel, and so not only destroy our insular safety, but convert yourself and all of us into soldiers instead of civilians.

"A very pleasant walk takes us from Dover to Folkestone, and thence to Hythe, which is full of officers, and is therefore an expensive place to stay at. Do not let us stay here: let us push on and walk to Lydd or the Romney Marsh. Here, if you please, we are as far from London and London ways as we are likely to get. A quieter and duller place does not exist. Next day to Rye across the Marsh. At Rye and Winchelsea there is plenty to see. We can stay a whole day here, and then—but I find we have got to the end of our fortnight, and I hope there is money enough left to carry us back."

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1888.

THE Secretary of the Ely Diocesan Association informs the members of that body that its Annual Meeting will be held at Cambridge. This announcement is accompanied by the portentous statement that "unless the members bestir themselves, the prospects of the Association are anything but cheerful." This confession does not redound to the credit of those ringers who are supposed to come under the jurisdiction of the Association, and for whose special benefit it was established. It certainly cannot be maintained that the majority of ringers in the Ely diocese possess any remarkable aptitude for great exertion, so far as the exercise of ringing is concerned. Neither do we find among them any sign of a movement which is calculated to give encouragement to the Honorary Secretary in his work—a work, by the way, he has manfully adhered to through good and evil report. Are the ringers of the counties concerned affected by any peculiarity of the soil therein? This part of East Anglia is believed to be of a "flat," marshy, and somewhat stagnant nature; if this is true, has it a corresponding effect on the people who inhabit it? The suggestion would seem tenable, so far as ringers are concerned.

Among the ringing Associations the one we are dealing with seems to be the most backward in every respect. The apathy of its members, or the neglect of ringers to become members, are no doubt the actual causes. The officers of an Association may work in the cause heartily, the subscriptions of honorary members may flow in, a galaxy of names may appear as Vice-Presidents, but all will be of no avail unless the rank and file of ringers give their co-operation. We would ask those dissentients who refrain from helping on the Association, what is the reason for their holding aloof? We are afraid that no satisfactory reply can be given. But—and the question is a painful one—do they hold aloof when there is a good fee in perspective?

We hope to see this Association yet to the fore. The recent meeting may give a fillip to it, and we may have the pleasure of noticing that our comment has done something towards a better state of things in the Ely diocese, so far as ringing matters are concerned.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

A PERTINENT ENQUIRY.

SIR.—In your paper of December 31st, 1887, was published "Date Touch," (1888 changes of Bob Major,) composed by F. Harding of Eastbourne. On the supposition of it being correct a company of ringers rang it on the 16th inst. but after the bells were brought round correct, we discovered it consisted of more than 1888 changes, viz.; 2336, also there are repetitions in both parts. Will Mr. Harding be good enough to explain the above facts? A. LAWRENCE PORTER

MR. PRENTICE'S REPLY.

SIR.—In reply to Mr. Hayward concerning the peal of Treble Bob Maximus rung at Norwich, I claim it to be the first peal composed on that plan, as it was composed by me in 1880. I shewed it to Mr. N. J. Pitstow, on board of the steam boat crossing from Harwich to Ipswich, August 29th, 1881; if Mr. Hayward had it previous to that he is the composer. My friend, Mr. C. Mee, received the same from Mr. A. Knights, October 12th, 1885. How did he come into possession of it? I sent all my compositions to the late Mr. W. Snowdon in the year 1882. DANIEL PRENTICE.

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR.—I should like to know through your paper why it is that there has not been any meeting held by the Sussex Association since their Annual Meeting at Brighton last Whit Monday, when it was proposed to hold more meetings than had been before, but I am sorry to say there has been no notices sent out or published in your valuable paper of which we read of many meetings to be held. Having appointed an assistant secretary, I am at loss to know why it is the meetings have not been held; I hope I am not trespassing on your valuable space by making these inquiries. Several members in the same mind as myself want to know. A MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATION.

THE CHEPSTOW RINGERS AND "FREE LANCE."

SIR,—In reply to "Free Lance's" comments on the ringers of Chepstow, and the doings of those worthies (as he is pleased to call them) I must say that he takes a lot upon himself. When he talks of Bob Doubles with 6-7-8 covering as ridiculous, if it only be a plain course, as we must all start at the foot of the ladder before we can ascend higher, "Free Lance" seems to have nothing else to occupy his time but passing his bigoted opinion on every one's work in change ringing. Let not us only but our brother strings throughout the country see what abilities he has in the art, but it seems his assumed named covers him very well, and as for the drinks we had, "Free Lance" did not have to pay for, as we always pay our own ourselves, and we hope that in a short time we shall be able to do something on the tower eight, and as the licensed victualler eight is not movable, I suppose we must put up with it being left where it is. PLAIN BOB.

ST. JOHN'S BELLS, PETERBOROUGH.

SIR.—I was surprised to read in your report of the visit of the Rawmarsh ringers to Peterboro, that the bells of St. John's Church, "required a thorough overhauling with a bell hanger." (I give the quotation as it appears in your report). On behalf of the vicar and churchwardens of St. John's, I wish to very decidedly contradict that statement; on the contrary, they go very well indeed, and visitors to our belfry always speak in praise of the "go" of the bells. I should not have troubled you, but you may readily see that the assertion is apt to cast a reflection on the churchwardens, who are always most willing to order any necessary repairs, and upon your humble servant, THE STEEPLE KEEPER.

MR. WASHBROOK'S ANSWER.

SIR.—It is quite correct that I called a false composition of my own which was duly struck out of the Guild Report. But "Astonian" should not append such statements as he did, as they stray from the truth, I did not absolutely deny anything, I only sent the wrong peal, which was replaced by the altered one with apology and unfortunate disaster. I am glad to say I did not take matters as the anonymous writer did, but in a good spirit, I hope to improve, and I hope others will do the same. A satisfactory reply is waiting to the other allegation on receipt of the proper name instead of a nom de plume. I can give a guess at this one. J. W. WASHBROOK.

THE ELY DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

A District Meeting was held at Wisbeach, on the Bank Holiday. The attendance was limited to members from Ely and Soham. At a business meeting held afterwards, a member of the Worcestershire Association, present as a guest, addressed some very sensible remarks to those present, upon the general apathy amongst ringers. Two members of the Eastern and Midland Association were also present. The annual meeting will be held at Cambridge, of which due particulars will be announced; but unless the ringers bestir themselves, the prospects of the Association are anything but cheerful. We shall hope to see ringers rally round us at the annual meeting in the course of September.

STEDMAN'S PRINCIPLE MADE EASY FOR BEGINNERS.

By WM. ALEXANDER BALDWIN.

2. BOBS AND SINGLES.

The plain course of Stedman Triples consisting of only eighty-four changes, it is obvious that to obtain a greater number or the extent of changes possible on seven bells (that is 5040), something must be done to change the coursing order of the bells. To effect this two calls are made use of, namely, a "bob" and a "single." Before we can take part in a peal, it will be necessary for us to know how these bobs and singles are made. We will therefore turn our attention to them, and draw out a few rules for guidance when ringing.

All bobs and singles in this method are made by the bells behind, so that the three bells in front are not affected by either a bob or a single being called, but go on with their work as if no call had been made.

We will take the "bob" first.

To make a "bob," the bell which is dodging in 4-5 up, makes 5ths place, dodges twice in 4-5 down, and then goes in the opposite way she came out; that is to say, if you came out a quick bell, you would go in slow and vice versa. The bell which makes the bob omits all the dodging in 6-7. The bell dodging in 4-5 down is not affected by the call, and simply goes in the reverse way she came out. The bells dodging in 6-7 up and 6-7 down make a triple dodge in addition to their proper work, and owing to this extra dodging work, which keeps them behind six changes longer than they would have been, had no call been made, they go in the same way they came out, that is to say, if you came out slow, you would go in slow, and if you came out quick, you would go in quick.

Shortly stated—at a bob the bell dodging 4-5 up makes 5ths place, dodges twice in 4-5 down, and then goes in the reverse way she came out, and the bells in 6-7 repeat the dodging of the last six for every bob called. The bell dodging 4-5 down is not affected by the call.

This brings us to the "single."

To make a single the bells dodging in 4-5 up and 4-5 down do exactly the same work as at a bob, so that I need not repeat the rule already given. In addition to this, the bell which is dodging 6-7 down, makes 6ths place, and commences dodging in 6-7 up again, dodges twice in that position, twice in 4-5 down, and then goes in the reverse way she came out. The bell dodging 6-7 up continues her course undisturbed by the call and simply goes in the reverse way she came out.

Briefly stated, the work of the bells at a single is precisely the same as at a bob with regard to the bells in 4-5. The bell dodging 6-7 down makes 6ths place and re-commences dodging in 6-7 up, and the bell dodging 6-7 up continues her course undisturbed.

In ordinary plain leads the whole pull behind is made over two bells—and you will find it will aid you considerably if you remember that whenever you are called upon to make 6ths place at the single, that you will be over the bell which is making 5ths a whole pull, and that when dodging in 6-7 at a single that the whole pull behind will be over the bell which is making 6ths place.

For convenient reference, illustrations of bobs and singles are given above. If the work of the treble and the fifth is examined, a thorough knowledge of the effects of these calls will be obtained.

In this method there are frequently several bobs called in succession to keep the big bells dodging behind so as to add to the musical effect. This continuous calling of bobs is sometimes very puzzling, because one is apt to forget which way to go in—but if you will make a careful study of the rule given in Chapter I. as to your course bell, you will always be able to ascertain definitely whether to go in quick or slow. However you must bear in mind that at each bob you change your course-bell. And now a few words as to course bells.

In case of bobs having been called, the bell which makes the 5ths place needs no course bell—she simply goes in the reverse way she came out.

The bell dodging in 4-5 up, goes up and finds her course bell in the bell she first dodges with when she comes behind.

The bell dodging in 6-7 down takes for a course bell the bell which makes 5ths place, or the bob.

The bell dodging in 6-7 up takes for a course bell the bell with which she dodges at the bob.

In case of a single having been called, the bell dodging 6-7 up will course the bell which makes 5ths place—and the bell which makes 6ths place will course the bell with which she dodges after making that place.

In this and the preceding chapter, I have endeavoured to explain in the simplest possible manner everything which is likely to prove a stumbling block to the beginner. If my remarks throw light upon the subject and serve to make this intricate method easy to the youthful members of the Exercise, my labours will not have been in vain.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Are we not men and brethren?"

The "Drayton time controversy" must now be considered a thing of the past, the plain and pointed letter of Mr. Robinson leaving no room for any doubt whatever as to the truth of the two peals in question.

* * * * *

It would be well for the Exercise if all our friends would follow Mr. Robinson's example when they write their letters to the Editor. His communication is brief, to the point, and without the slightest trace of anything approaching personalities or ill-temper. How seldom do we find this the case with our controversialists? Were his example to be more extremely followed, what heart-burnings and animosities would be prevented, and how much pleasanter would be our path in getting at the truth! My friends—as the Yankee papers say—"please copy."

* * * * *

But what does "Astonian" mean by accusing Mr. Washbrook of want of courtesy because he published the falseness of Mr. Barrett's peal in "THE BELL NEWS" instead of communicating direct with that gentleman? He surely must have written this hastily, and without thought of the consequences, or he would not have placed himself so completely on the horns of a dilemma. If Mr. Washbrook is guilty of being uncourteous in this, then what must be said of fully nineteen-twentieths of all the correspondence which appears in these pages? What indeed, must be said of "Astonian's" own letter itself? When anything is published, it then becomes public property, and whatever issues may arise therefrom should likewise be dealt with through the same source. That is an axiom which I thought we all understood; and the idea of private communications with respect to newspaper productions (as enunciated by "Astonian") is something novel to me. Apart from the interminable amount of correspondence which such a notion would entail, that modus operandi would prove unsatisfactory and objectionable for many reasons. Any person who cannot bear public criticism should be careful not to give the public anything which it has the power to criticise.

* * * * *

I certainly have no intention here of taking up the cudgels on behalf of Mr. Washbrook; that gentleman, I imagine is well able to take care of himself; but I do begin to suspect, sometimes, when I see the evidences of this hole-picking business, that the "green-eyed monster," jealousy, has more to do with the matter than it ought to have. Put your heel on the jaundiced reptile, my friends, and crush it out of existence.

* * * * *

Ye gentlemen of Cheshire, who don't stay at home at ease (excuse this parody on a good old song), I salute you. Although late in the field, you have at any rate made a good start now that you have entered on the road of reform and organisation. Your total of 333 members and probationers at the end of your Society's first year is in itself evidence that you have "meant business" and gone heartily to work during the past twelve months. Your record altogether is indeed one which older societies than yours might have good reason to be proud of. Having thus "put your hand to the plough," do not allow your first harvest, by reason of its abundance, to tempt you to indulge in any "rest and be thankful" policy, but rather let it be an incentive to further and greater exertions, so that while your influence for good becomes more and more felt throughout the diocese, you may be able to say with proud satisfaction—"Though last, we are not least among the brethren."

* * * * *

I was very agreeably surprised to see Mr. Baldwin's first instalment of his paper on Stedman's principle. Short articles like this, explaining the different methods in a short but lucid manner, I believe, would be of almost incalculable benefit to us—particularly to our young brethren just entering upon their studies in the art. I would suggest that when Mr. Baldwin has concluded this paper, either he or some other of our friends should follow suit and deal with other methods in a like manner; plain, understandable, and void of all unnecessary technical terms and other language which, however correct it may be, is likely to bewilder the young beginner.

* * * * *

A short time ago, I spoke about the (as yet) unpublished works of the Yorkshire composer, Mr. Sottanstell. Since then, in response to an invitation, a friend of mine to whom I am much indebted, has visited the old gentleman on my behalf. He tells me that he met the veteran in his home on the steep hillside of Sowerby, and found him, considering his years, fairly well and comfortable. My friend also informs me that Mr. Sottanstell has by dint of great perseverance gathered together and completed the "copy" of the remaining volume of his "Campanalogia," which he fondly hopes to see in print. The account given of the contents of these volumes fully bears out my previous remarks as to their great value to the Exercise. I therefore trust that before long some steps may be taken so that they may be published for the benefit of the Exercise. But more of this anon.

Members of the above are respectfully reminded that the financial year ends with the present month (August). Members owing subscriptions are requested to pay them to the undersigned as soon as possible. New members elected during the present year are also requested to pay their subscriptions if they have not already done so, otherwise their names and peals (if any), will not be inserted in the Annual Report. Conductors of peals will oblige by sending the compositions of such to Mr. A. Ed. Wreaks, providing the same have not appeared in the last Annual Report. To forward the business of the next Annual Meeting, members may send in nominations to fill the places of the following retiring officers, viz., the Rev. C. Lowe, President; Mr. J. Redford, Secretary; and Messrs. Horrocks, Nutter, Wilde, and Wood (Committee); and Messrs. Booth and Davis (Auditors), but who are eligible for re-election. Members proposing new rules or alterations to the existing rules must give notice of the same before the last day of the present month to the undersigned. Notice of errors in the ringing calendar must be also sent to Mr. Joel Redford, 9 Portugal Street, Bolton-le-Moors, or to Mr. A. Edward Wreaks, 25 Tweedale Street, Rochdale, or 42 Cleveland Road, Crumpsall, Manchester.

A REMARKABLE BELL.

In the Espamt tel Kroto, Japan, is a great bell, which swings in a huge wooden tower. The bell is a large bronze cup, with nearly perpendicular sides, and a flat crown; and it is sounded by bringing a big beam against the rim. It needs twelve natives to ring it. It used to be rung once a year, but, according to a cutting in my possession, it may now be heard twice or thrice a month. It is 18 feet high, 9½ inches thick, 9 feet in diameter, and weighs almost 74 tons. It was cast in 1633, rim upwards; and the gold that entered into its composition is estimated at about 1,500 pounds. The tone of the bell is described as magnificent, and when struck with the open hand the vibration may be heard a hundred yards off.

ST. ALBANS.

Now that this ancient town is through the energy and talent of its local society becoming an important ringing centre, the following brief sketch from the Midland Railway Guide may not be out of place:—

The site of St. Albans is thought to be nearly coincident with that of the primæval city which formed the stronghold of the Casii, whose king Cassivelaunus, made brave but fruitless resistance to the all-conquering legions of Julius Cæsar. This British settlement was enclosed within a large earthwork which can still be traced, starting from the Ver to the north-west of St. Albans, circling round the base of the town, and returning to the river below it, embracing a total area of nearly four square miles. The Roman fortification, Verulamium, named after the River Ver, was built on the hill to the south-west of the modern town, by the side of the famous Roman road to the north, known as Watling Street. Fragments of this the first Roman city built in Britain still remain in the form of mural ruins and huge tree-topped mounds, and from these and other memorials it is plain that the settlement was a very considerable one. It was stormed by the Iceni under Boadicea, and its inhabitants were mercilessly massacred; but after the warrior queen's defeat it rose from its ruins, and again became a place of considerable importance.

St Albans, as every one knows, takes its name from Britain's proto-martyr. About the end of the third century, when the Diocletian persecution was at its height, there was living at Verulam a young Roman named Alban, of good family, and of the ancient religion. One day a persecuted priest of the new faith, Amphibalus by name, sought refuge in Alban's house, and not in vain. While here, his earnest exhortations won the Roman soldier from his "gods many" to the religion of the despised Galilean. But the fugitive priest's hiding-place was discovered, and a guard sent to arrest him. Dismissing his guest in secrecy, Alban wrapped himself in the priest's robe and mantle, and was taken before the magistrates, where the ruse was detected. Called upon to die or to sacrifice to the gods of Rome, he chose the former alternative, and after cruel torments heroically borne, was beheaded, amid, according to the legend, earthquakes and other disturbances of nature.

The scene of Alban's execution and interment bore the name of Holmhurst, and is believed to be identical with the site of the present Abbey, which was founded in his honour at the end of the eighth century by Offa, King of Mercia, by way of salving his conscience for the treacherous murder of Ethelbert, King of the East Angles. Soon after the martyrdom of his convert, Amphibalus was captured, brought back to the neighbourhood of St. Albans, and put to death with exceptional cruelty at Redbourn, a village some four miles to the north-west of the town. His relics were long afterward discovered, and, like those of Alban, enshrined in the Abbey Church.

The Abbey was rebuilt by Paul of Caen, a relative of William the Conqueror, the ruins of Verulam—this town having been gradually deserted after the foundation of the minster—serving as a quarry. It has since undergone considerable alterations. The structure, seen from a distance, is not without imposing effect, but it cannot be said to be either symmetrical in design or picturesque in treatment. Its nave is longer than that of any other church in the country. The plan is a Latin cross, and the total length is 548 feet. The greater part of the nave, which has been undergoing restoration, dates from the thirteenth century. The shrine which enclosed the relics of St. Alban was destroyed at the Reformation, but when the work of restoration was begun pieces of sculpture were found built into the masonry of some of the arches. The discovery of many fragments was the reward of careful search, and these being carefully fitted together, the shrine was reproduced in tolerable completeness. The shrine of St. Amphibalus had also been re-constructed, though less perfectly than that of the Roman saint.

To the north of the Abbey, at the junction of two streets, stands the Clock-tower, dating from the beginning of the fifteenth century, and built chiefly of flint. It contains a bell, used in former days as a curfew, which bears the following inscription:—"Missa de celis habeo nomen Gabraelis."

The Monastery, which belonged to the Benedictine Order, flourished for several centuries, but was dissolved in 1539, when the fortieth abbot—a puppet of the monarch who became our first Fidei Defensor—delivered up the conventual seal, now in the British Museum, to the representatives of the Crown. Except the church and a massive gate-house the whole of the ecclesiastical buildings that once crowned the knoll of Holmhurst has disappeared. The Abbey itself would have gone the way of the rest when the monastery was dissolved, had not the burgesses purchased it as their parish church. The Abbey gate, formerly used as a gaol, is now the Grammar School.

In the church of St. Peter, which we see to our left as the train leaves St. Albans behind, lie the remains of Edward Strong, the mason who, under the supervision of Sir Christopher Wren, rebuilt St Paul's Cathedral. To the west of the city stands the little church of St. Michael—plain and insignificant in appearance, but always to be held in honour in virtue of its enshrining the remains of the founder of the inductive philosophy. Sir Francis Bacon, Baron of Verulam, Viscount of St. Albans, was entombed within its walls by his express desire, for it was not only the sole church within the precincts of the earlier city of Verulam, but also the resting-place of his mother. His marble effigy, with Sir Henry Wotton's memorable inscription, may be seen on the north side of the chancel. The ruins of the mansion inhabited by Bacon will be found near Gorhambury House, the seat of the Earls of Verulam, about two miles and half from the centre of the town. The estate was purchased by his grandfather, Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of Queen Elizabeth, and here Sir Nicholas was frequently visited by his Royal Mistress. One day, it is recorded, he was "under the hands of his barber, and the weather being sultry he ordered a window before him to be thrown open." Being corpulent, he fell asleep, and on awaking found himself "distempered all over," the effect of the draught. "Why did you suffer me to sleep thus exposed?" he demanded of his servant. "Because I durst not awake you," was the reply. "Then," said Sir Nicholas, "by your civility I lose my life;" and in a few days he was gathered to his fathers.

The scene of the first of the two battles fought at St. Albans in the Wars of the Roses is a place on the eastern side of the town, called Key Field, now built over. The second and more important engagement, in which Queen Margaret defeated the Earl of Warwick, took place at Barnard Heath, a short distance from St. Peter's, in the churchyard attached to which many of the combatants were interred.

In 1875 St. Albans attained to the dignity of a city, being made the centre of a new bishopric created out of the Sees of London and Rochester. Its staple trade—if so abrupt a transition from the sacred to the secular may be pardoned—is the manufacture of straw hats for male sconces. It is also celebrated for its water-cresses, which it sends in large quantities to London and Manchester and elsewhere.

WANTED by a change-ringer, aged 20 years, a situation as Shopman or Book-keeper in Corn and Milling trade preferred; has had 6 years' experience in above Trades with present employer. Can ring the following Methods—Bob, Grandsire and Stedman. Apply to G. BAKER, Jun., Orchard Place, Arundel, Sussex.

CHURCH SPIRES IN LOUISVILLE, U.S.

[From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

Louisville possesses many features which place her in the front rank of southern cities. Notable among these are the edifices erected by the various denominations for the purpose of religious worship. Church spires of different styles of architecture can be seen in almost every direction. As the many denominations vary in their mode of worship, so the spires of the churches vary in their style of architecture. The church spires here show many different specimens of the designer's and builder's art, and some of them were erected with great care, and are often taken as models for similar structures in other cities.

The Cathedral.—Perhaps the most attractive, as well as the most lofty spire in the city is that of the Cathedral of the Assumption, on Fifth street, between Green and Walnut. The cathedral is an exceedingly imposing structure of the best architectural design. The height of the spire is 287 feet. The lofty tower contains probably the largest and finest bell in the State. Its weight is said to be 4,500 pounds, and it cost originally 1,200 dollars. On the bell, in relief, is a beautiful figure of the Blessed Virgin, with the inscription in Spanish, "The Most Pure."

First Presbyterian.—The first Presbyterian church differs from the last mentioned in its architectural design as much as it does in religious doctrine. This church is situated on the corner of Sixth and Green streets, and is one of the most attractive in the city. The style of architecture of the spire is of the most improved plan, and the finish of the workmanship is complete in every respect. No church spire in the city or in the State presents a more imposing appearance than does that of the First Presbyterian church.

The Jewish Synagogue.—The Temple Adas Israel, at Sixth street and Broadway, familiarly known as the "Synagogue," aside from being one of the foremost specimens of architectural display in the city, is acknowledged to be one of the handsomest structures of its design in the United States. It is of a modern pattern, but it is as different in its general appearance from the other church edifices in the city as is the doctrine in contrast with the worship found elsewhere. The spires on either side of the building are low, but prominent and attractive, and the whole goes to give the church a handsome and pleasing appearance.

Christ Church.—Christ Church, on Second street near Green, approaches nearer the ideal Episcopal Church building, perhaps, than any other in Louisville, and while not of that broad, decided style of architecture calculated to attract attention, has an appearance which is at the same time pleasing and inviting. The spire on the left reaches an altitude of about seventy-five feet, and bears on the pinnacle the cross, symbolic of the Episcopacy. On the right tower, which ascends some distance above that on the left, a high-reaching spire will some day be erected, to compare in height with any other in Louisville.

St. Paul's.—St. Paul's church spire, situated on the corner of Sixth and Walnut streets, though not so tall as that of the Cathedral, is erected much after the same style. The spire of St. Paul's mounts to an unusual height, and upon the pinnacle is a cross, suggestive of the creed of the people who worship beneath it. The architectural beauty of this spire is equally as grand as that of any other in the city. Its general design, its minute finish, and the clearness of its outline make it one of the most interesting spires in Louisville.

Church of the Immaculate Conception.—The Church of the Immaculate Conception, on the corner of Eight and Grayson streets, was erected in 1848, and is one of the most elegant in the city. The spire reaches a height 160 feet. The pinnacle of the spire, like that of other churches of the same creed, is surmounted by a cross.

Second Presbyterian Church.—The Second Presbyterian church has the tallest spire of any church of that denomination yet spoken of. The spire is the loftiest in its locality, and consequently is very noticeable. The church is one of the beauties of Broadway, and to the stranger or visitor, always calls for expressions of the warmest admiration. It is constructed entirely of stone, and with its far-reaching spire constitutes one of the most attractive places of worship in the city. The architectural design is simple and modern, and it is said to have been suggested by the late Dr. Stuart Robinson, for so long pastor of the church.

Walnut Street Presbyterian.—The Walnut-street Presbyterian church was erected in 1854 and is somewhat similar in its designs to that of the First Presbyterian church. The general appearance of this spire here compares favorably with the one there, and ascends commandingly to an altitude of 100 feet. It has recently been repainted and repaired, and is now among the most imposing spires on Walnut street.

College Street Presbyterian.—The College street Presbyterian church, at the corner of Second and College streets, is of a much smaller size than the foregoing edifice, but is reckoned to be one of the handsomest churches in the city. Its architectural design is of a different character from any other here, and by recent improvements and additions, has been made even more imposing than ever. The entire exterior of the building has been prettily repainted, the interior revarnished and furnished, and other changes made which give the little structure the handsome appearance it now has. The spire is not very tall, but owing to its situation, stands in relief bold and prominent.

St. John's Episcopal.—St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, Jefferson street near Twelfth, was recently repainted and is now an imposing edifice. The spire was constructed over twenty years ago, and is a fair specimen of the architecture of that day. St. John's was the third church constructed in Louisville, and when new, the plain, modest spire was reckoned one of the first in the city.

German Protestant.—The spire of the German Protestant church at Clay and Market streets is a quaint-looking, unpretentious structure, and has an altitude of perhaps fifty feet. The four sides contain the dials of a large clock, which is kept regulated by the city hall clock, and which is looked upon as an authority by all residents of the East End.

Broadway Baptist.—Of the many attractive spires on Broadway, one of the most prominent is that on the Baptist church, near Brook street. It is over one hundred feet in height, and standing, as it does, on the front of the building, calls for much attention and admiration. The spire here has cost the church a great sum of money, and on three different occasions has been either completely or partially destroyed by fire. Many claim the spire to be the highest in the city, and there are few which can compare with it in altitude.

St. Peter's.—One of the most unassuming churches in Louisville is St. Peter's German Evangelical church, Grayson street, between Tenth and Eleventh. The spire, or, more properly, tower, is a modest superstructure, and is perhaps fifty feet in height. The church is a very old one, but still has a presentable appearance, and ranks well in every respect with the other churches of its age in the city.

Church of The Messiah.—The Unitarian church boasts of one of the handsomest and highest spires in the city. It was constructed upon a plain, agreeable English style, and occupying a position, as it does, on the fashionable part of Fourth avenue, has been more admired than any other spire in Louisville.

German Lutheran.—The spire of the German Lutheran church, Preston and Green streets, was constructed particularly with a view to its beauty and general appearance, and being of the Gothic style of architecture, is the subject of general admiration. The church building proper reaches quite an altitude, but the spire was not erected with a view to having it ascend to any high position, and consequently rests but a short distance above the top of the building.

German Methodist.—The German Methodist church, Market and Hancock streets, has a spire which even from a point of height ranks among the first in the city. It is commanding; of old English architecture, and gives an air of prominence to the entire building. The church was erected in 1880, and is consequently a new piece of workmanship.

ON SAUCES.

"Let good digestion wait on appetite."—Shakespeare.

"What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." So the old saying runs. This is of course intended to convey the meaning that the same condiment must be used when either the male or female bird alluded to is placed upon the table. There are people who in all probability will have it that the saying bears altogether a different meaning, or that there is some moral hidden beneath it. But I won't be so particular. Sauce is sauce, all the world over; and goose is goose, and gander is gander, as every one knows.

Then we are told sometimes that "hunger is the best sauce!" The people who are fond of saying this are those not accustomed to its pangs. Hunger, forsooth! Does the gourmand try it? Have any of those fortunate people, the bare thought of whom at once suggests champagne and turtle, ever tried its effect upon their palates? A little abstinence, perhaps, they sometimes find desirable, if not positively necessary; but to dignify this by the name of "hunger" is to make a travestie on the word. I will not believe for one moment that "hunger is the best sauce," and it's "sauce" to say it is.

This brings me to the consideration of another kind of "sauce." And this the dictionary interprets as "pertness" and "impudence." Some people say there is a deal of this "sauce" among the rising generation of ringers. That may be so. And is there not to be sometimes found towards these young people by their seniors the sauce of "overbearingness?" Individuals who are denominated saucy—and I can't deny knowing a few—have only their "sauce" to recommend them, or to put it better, only their pertness, impudence, or assurance to enable them to make any headway whatever through the world.

Now my dictionary gives also another interpretation to the word "sauce;" and that is "something eaten with food to improve its relish." "That's your sort," some of my readers say; "now tell us which is the best." There's a great many to pick and choose from, and in these days of competition and adulteration the public are gulled to buy a terrible amount of wretched liquid matter which goes by the name of "sauce." The "horny-handed sons of toil"—this is, I believe, the correct denomination for those who have to earn their livelihood—have as much right to have sauce with their poultry and game as any one else, I suppose. "What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," you know; or, in other words, and to make the moral plainer—"What's good for one is good for another," and vice versa. The cheapest sauce is always the dearest. Oh, says one reader, we can get capital sauce at threepence per bottle. Capital rubbish! made of doubtful ingredients, very doubtful ingredients indeed, which if fully known would bring the vendors under the provisions of an Act of Parliament. This stuff is generally sold in bottles which has the name of some respectable sauce-maker moulded in the glass, these bottles being purchased wholesale from itinerant collectors who deal in every description of merchandise, dirty or clean.

What then is the real and genuine article. Is it Harvey's sauce? We have that very often, some readers will say, while admiring the joke. Is it that of "Reading"? Both very well, and with hundreds of others I could name, admirable for special uses. But for general utility "Worcestershire Sauce" is the acknowledged article—a veritable multum in parvo. And what many others are not, it is a grand remedy for dyspepsia. I say this from experience. A small quantity in water gives relief in cases of indigestion. In asking for this sauce, the believer in genuineness must, however, be wary. The popularity of the real "Worcestershire Sauce" of the time-honoured house of Lea and Perrins has led to a host of imitations. Every conceivable art has been employed to foist upon the public a spurious imitation of Messrs. Lea and Perrins' manufacture, short of using their name. Therefore I may say, parodying the words of a popular advertisement—"When you ask for 'Lea and Perrins' Worcestershire Sauce,' see that you get it, as inferior kinds are often substituted. This sauce has been pronounced over and over again "as the only good one."

I do not know either of the gentlemen comprising the firm of Lea and Perrins, nor to my knowledge have I ever seen them. I am informed, however, by the respected Editor of our paper that Mr. Lea was Mayor and for many years Alderman and justice of the peace for the city of Worcester—that he was a most kind, generous, and charitable gentleman; that he built, in his lifetime, commodious almshouses for the deserving poor; that his name was to be found in every local philanthropic and charitable movement. He subscribed to the new clock and bells for the cathedral, and after the bells were placed in the tower, he gave two more outside the actual peal to make the carillon complete. And I am pleased to hear, from the same authority, that the son of the late Mr. Lea inherits the generous and charitable instincts of his revered father, as the list of benefactions to local institutions plainly show.

CRAWLEY CHOIRS v. BELLRINGERS.

This match, which was between the Crawley and West Green choirs and the bellringers of the parish church, was played on the recreation ground on Wednesday, the 22nd, and resulted in a victory for the choirs by the narrow majority of five runs. The batting was very feeble on either side, the first innings of the choirs being only remarkable by the innings of —. Extras, Esq. who made nearly one third of the runs, and principally through his exertions won them the match. The campanologists felt pretty confident of victory, and their defeat caused them no little surprise. The bowling on either side was good, being the only redeeming feature in the match, with the exception of Mr. F. Caffyn's carefully played not out innings for the ringers. A cold collation was served by Bowden, at the "Railway Hotel," and afterwards a very pleasant evening was spent.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1888.

THE letter from the Hon. Secretaries of the Bedfordshire Association with reference to our comment of last week, makes sufficiently plain that our remarks upon the apathy of ringers in some of the Eastern counties was not exaggerated. We give the greatest amount of credit to the Bedfordshire Association and its indefatigable Executive for the work they have carried out in the archdeaconry, and we think it hardly necessary to point out that what strictures our comment possessed did not concern them in the least. But while saying this we cannot recede from the position as regards two of the counties named—Huntingdon and Cambridge.

There are we know other portions of the country in as equally a deplorable state as regards change-ringing as these. But it is only by drawing attention to the fact, in plain language, that any movement becomes initiated, and the sluggishness of those concerned is disturbed. In doing this, it is just possible we may tread upon the just susceptibilities of those who have a right to complain.

But we hope in such cases that the error may be looked over, and merely laid to our zeal for the extension of the science. We have nothing to complain of in the Rev. W. W. C. Baker's letter; it is of that courteous nature which may have been expected. No doubt he will accept this explanation, and estimate it at its proper value.

UPTON PYNE, DEVON.

On Sunday, August 19th, by the kind invitation of the Hon. and Rev. J. S. Northcote, the St. Sidwell's Society paid a visit to this pretty village, about four miles from Exeter, and had a ring with the rev. gentleman on the pretty peal of six. Several 6-score of Grandsire Doubles were rung and conducted by the Hon. and Rev. J. S. Northcote, and afterwards the visitors were shown over the church, various things of interest being explained, including the beautiful stained glass window erected to the memory of the late Earl of Iddesleigh. All things having been seen, the rev. gentleman conducted them to the club-room, where he had generously provided a good tea, and this having been done justice to, a start was made for home, after many thanks for the rev. gentleman's kindness. The following were present: F. Shepherd, B. Mundy, E. Shepherd, J. Moss, C. Carter, T. J. Lake, T. Mudge, J. Bastin, S. Binfield, Hon. and Rev. J. S. Northcote.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROSSENDALE BRANCH.

On Saturday, August 25th, a meeting of this Association was held at St. Saviour's church, Stubbylee. There was a good muster of ringers present, and some excellent ringing done in various methods by mixed companies from the following churches: Christ Church, Bacup; St. Saviour's, Bacup, Newchurch, Waterfoot, Ramsbottom, Rawtenstall, and Bolton. The bells of St. Saviour's Church were set swinging soon after three o'clock and continued at intervals until half-past nine. The usual general meeting was held in the schoolroom, presided over by the Rev. William Johnson, M.A., Vicar of the church. After the business had been transacted, which was of a routine character, a cordial vote of thanks was accorded to the Vicar and Wardens for the use of the bells and the schoolroom.—The next meeting will be held at Helmshore, the date of which, however, has not yet been fixed.

NOTICE.

The members of the Midland Counties' Association are invited to a Garden Party, at Duffield Bank, on Saturday, September 8th, from two till six o'clock. Tea at half-past four. The Church Tower will be open from two till half-past four, and from half-past five till nine o'clock. Mr. Heywood will also be glad to see friends who are members of other associations.

THE SOCIETY OF ROYAL CUMBERLAND YOUTHS.

NOTICE.—This society's next meeting at headquarters takes place on Friday, September 7th, when the auditor's report will be presented, and officers for the ensuing year elected.

Meeting Room, 54 St. Martin's Lane. H. DAINS, Hon. Sec.

CURIOUS EPITAPH.—In Hendon churchyard, Middlesex, is one of those singular epitaphs which show that in former times compositions of this order were subjected to no very severe censorship. It thus describes the characteristics of one Robert Thomas Crossfield, a Doctor of Medicine at Spinnelhorn, Yorkshire, who died on the 8th November, 1802:—

"Beneath this stone Tom Crossfield lies,
He cares not now who laughs or cries,
He laughed when sober, but when mellow
Was a harem-scarem brainless fellow.
He gave to none a designed offence,
So Honi soit qui mal y pense."

ST. STEPHEN'S SOCIETY, BRISTOL.

On Wednesday, August 22nd, the above Society had their annual outing, the place selected being Trowbridge, where they arrived about 1.45 p.m. The first place visited was St. James' Church, where they were very generously received by the local band of ringers. The bells were already raised and they were asked to take possession of the ropes and have a pull. After having had a touch of Grandsire Triples and one of Major, a quarter peal of Grandsire Triples was decided on, which was brought round in forty-seven minutes by the following: G. Staddon, 1; W. A. Dowling, 2; C. H. Gordon, 3; W. McCaffrey (Trowbridge), 5; W. Parsons, 5; F. Price (conductor), 6; J. Hinton, 7; J. Palser, 8. First quarter peal by Messrs. Dowling and Gordon. They then adjourned to the "Swan Inn," where refreshments were partaken of and some handbell ringing, &c., indulged in till about five o'clock. It being Trowbridge Flower Show, they then made their way to the Show Grounds, where they spent most of their spare time, the weather being all that could be desired. After leaving the show, they had just time to see the illuminations, &c., in the town, before starting for Bristol, which place was reached shortly after eleven o'clock, one and all having thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

THE UNITED COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

The half-yearly meeting and six-bell competition will take place at Hayfield, Derbyshire, on September 22nd, commencing at 2 p.m. There will be no general dinner, but members and friends attending will find every accommodation at the several hotels and refreshment rooms. The officers and committee will sit at the Royal Hotel to enroll new members and receive subscriptions.

Correspondence.

[While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.]

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

THE WEIGHT OF TENORS.

SIR,—In looking over the report of the Essex Association for the past year, I came across two peals that were rung at St. Peter's, St. Albans, contained in pages 24 and 25 of that report. The weight of the tenor is reported as 21 cwt. and 22½ cwt., while for a peal of Caters rung on August 6th, we have here given as 20 cwt.; I myself have always understood her to be 24 cwt. Will some one kindly furnish us with the correct weight, else (seeing that the local band are taking to change-ringing), we may hear of peals being rung with the weight of the tenor still more varied. May I not suggest that the weight of the tenor (if not the other bells), might be posted in the belfry, and that conductors' attention be called to it, so that in future we may get one set weight (and that the correct one), else if anyone is attempting to compile the weights of tenors from the Annual Reports of the various societies, he might get perplexed with the different weights, whereas a little carefulness would avoid any such obstacles. Hoping this may catch the eye of the sexton or conductor, who by giving the correct weight will greatly oblige
AMPHIBALUS.

THE PEAL OF GRANDSIRE TRIPLES AT ROSS.

SIR,—I conclude by Mr. Washbrook's letter of last week that he has at last ventured an allusion to what you, Sir, termed "A remarkable allegation," concerning the peal of Grandsire Triples rung at Ross, published as the first peal by the Herefordshire Diocesan Guild. What I said then I still adhere to, and am prepared to stand by every word of it, that the peal in question was not rung true, being a patch-work affair after about 3000 changes of Holt's Original had been rung, there being nothing of Penning's one-part peal about it. Mr. W. says "he can give a guess who I am." If he does so I shall not be ashamed to own my name, but for the present I still withhold it.
TRUTH.

THE ELY DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

SIR,—I fail to express in the words of my pen my feelings after reading the report of the proceedings of the above Association at Wisbech on Monday, August 6th, and your remarks upon the same. I had intended to be there, as I should have been staying not far from that place, but could not get leave from my work for the occasion. I trust, Sir, that those who are holding aloof will come forward, and when the annual meeting is held we may see a better state of things reported, and the Association once more prospering in the art of change-ringing.
GEO. S. KING.

REPLY TO MR. PRENTICE.

SIR,—As my name has been brought up respecting the 5088 of Treble Bob Maximus, I may say that I composed it, with several others on the same plan, in January, 1883, and I gave them to Mr. John Fosdike, of Woodbridge, at Norwich, in October, 1885, and I believe Mr. Fosdike gave them to Mr. C. Mee on the same day. One of them is a 5280, which Mr. Hayward has since published in "THE BELL NEWS." I sent these compositions with others to the late Mr. J. W. Snowdon, in 1883.
ARTHUR KNIGHTS.

SIR,—I am not satisfied with Mr. Prentice's reply. Why did he not claim the peal when I published it in "THE BELL NEWS" two years ago? Why should he let my name appear to the peal and say nothing about it for two years, and why did he not answer my letter in "THE BELL NEWS" of Saturday, April 14th, 1888, concerning the peal, before it had been rung? Why should he publish the figures of the peal which appeared by me two years before him? Why did he not say something about it at the time? Now, Mr. Prentice, you know as well as I do that I was the first man that ever published a peal on this plan. As long as you did not answer my letter, and I could see by "THE BELL NEWS" that the peal had been rung, you must have thought that I should want to know something about it.
GEORGE HAYWARD.

THE RECENT PEAL OF BOB TRIPLES ON HANDBELLS.

SIR,—I was very much interested in a peal of Bob Triples in our valuable paper of last week, and no doubt many of your readers have noticed it. There are very few in that method rang with bells retained in hand; also the place in which the peal was rang in. Now may I call my readers attention to the proper place in which they have rung the peal? I hope many of our ringing, friends will take that as a good example for handbell peal ringing for this reason:

More attention will be paid to the art on both sides, ringers and referees, more so than in the meeting houses. At the same time there is no better place than the belfry to place their records for their good works, successfully accomplished.
A CONSTANT READER.

MR. SQUIRES' 1008 OF GRANDSIRE TRIPLES.

SIR,—The touch of 1008 Grandsire Triples by A. Squires, in your issue of August 25th, is the first part of Mr. T. Thurstans' five-part variation, omitting the bob at 2.
F. J. COPE.

P.S.—I have enclosed a copy of the peal, as I did not observe it among the collection of peals by the late J. W. Snowdon, Esq., published in "THE BELL NEWS" some time ago.

T. THURSTANS.

By omitting the bob at 2 in the first part, a touch of 1008, containing the twenty-four 6-7's, is obtained. In this peal there are 245 calls, seventy-five bobs and 170 singles. It will be noticed that the 6th is never called M. with a bob. First rung in 1848.

MR. HARDING'S REPLY.

SIR,—In your issue of the 25th inst. a Mr. Porter accuses me of publishing a date touch of Bob Major, of which he goes on to say is not a date touch at all, but a touch of 2336, and also that a repetition occurs in each part. Now would Mr. Porter kindly explain how he does it. The following is an exact copy of which he complains:—

2 3 4 5 6	W	B	M	H
3 5 4 2 6	3	I	I

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR,—I should feel obliged for information on the following subjects: First, the weight or diameter of the tenor of the ring of eight bells at King's Sutton, Northamptonshire. Second, steel bells. Are they a success from a musical point of view, and how many peals are there in England at the present time. Trusting some of your readers can enlighten me.
GRANDSIRE BOB.

DEDICATION OF BELLS AT ST. MICHAEL'S, MINEHEAD, SOMERSET.

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me space to enlighten the writer of the above article, and the ringing world generally. How he could have overlooked the chief town of Somerset I cannot imagine, but I am glad to be able to say that Bath and neighbourhood is not behindhand in the matter of scientific change-ringing. In our city, for many years there has been a company of change-ringers at the fine old Abbey, with its peal of ten bells, but for some time past they have not attempted much, and as late as the year 1880 they had the monopoly of all the towers. About that year, however, there sprang up several young companies, one at St. Mary's Bathwick (6 bells), St. Matthew's, Widcomb (6 bells), St. Saviour's, Larkhall (8 bells), and our own company at the towers of St. Andrew's and Christ Church (8 bells each), which by the by was the first formed of the young companies. St. Mary's and St. Saviour's were recently broken up, but I believe new companies are now being formed. All these companies ring the Grandsire method. Then again there is a good company at St. Michael's, Twerton-on-Avon, about a mile and-a-half from the city, where last Whitsuntide they rang a peal of Grandsire Triples, and I believe are thinking of going for a peal of Stedman shortly. At Weston, about half-a-mile from here, there is a peal of six, and a young company. Also at Batheaston, two and-a-half miles, Bathford, three miles, Newton St. Lo, three and-a-half miles, and Willow, five miles, there are change-ringers, and I hear a company has recently been started at Frome. I was at Wedmore some four years ago, and rang a few call-changes with the ringers there. The rector, the Rev. — Harvey, seemed to take a considerable amount of interest in them, and rang with them occasionally, so that by now I should think it very probable they had got hold of the method. In the year 1882 there was started at Bath, the nucleus of what, I hope, may someday be the county Guild. It is named "The Bath and Keynsham United Deaneries Association of Church Bell-ringers," having for its objects: 1, to recognise the true position of ringers as church officers; 2, to cultivate the art of change-ringing; 3, to promote order and good feeling amongst ringers, and greater reverence for God's House and worship. It comprises about twenty churches in the two Deaneries, and numbers between eighty and ninety members. Monthly ringing meetings are held at one or other of the churches. So that if there is not heard much about ringing in Somerset, there still is some useful work being done, and I hope that "Somerset to the fore" will be the cry for all ringers in the county. Speaking for our company, I may say that we are always pleased to give a welcome to any company of ringers, but as we have to obtain our Rector's permission for any extra ringing, anyone wishing to pay us a visit should write at least a week beforehand to 6, Abingdon Buildings, Bath. D. H. GOODMAN, Secretary.

THE ELY DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

SIR.—In your criticisms on the apathy of ringers in this diocese, you have, we think unwittingly, done injustice to one portion of them, and we shall be much obliged if you will give us space to reply to some of your observations. The Diocese of Ely consists of the counties of Cambridge, Huntingdon, Bedford, and the western division of the county of Suffolk. It is divided into four archdeaconries, with the Isle of Ely, which is under the peculiar archidiaconal jurisdiction of the Bishop himself. Now in 1888 the change-ringers of Bedfordshire formed themselves into a County Association, under the patronage of the Bishop of the Diocese, and the presidency of the Archdeacon of Bedford, whose archdeaconry is coterminous with the County, and since that time have continued to advance, if slowly, yet nevertheless with a yearly increase both of members and efficiency. When the formation of a Diocesan Society was first mooted, we attended the inaugural meeting at Ely on behalf of our association, and assured the promoters of our warm interest and co-operation in the matter; and at our next Annual Meeting proposed a motion which was unanimously carried to the effect that our County Association should be affiliated to the Diocesan Society as the Archidiaconal Association, and also made proposals which were favourably received for carrying this out with regard to subscriptions, etc. At the same time a strong feeling was expressed by the most influential members of our Association that it would be a pity to dissolve our executive, which was working successfully, and merge ourselves entirely in the new and larger scheme which was as yet untried. Events have proved we think that they were right. For though we were and are still willing to affiliate ourselves to the Diocesan Society, there has never yet been any Diocesan Society to affiliate ourselves to, and while our organization yearly increases in strength we fail to see any similar advance in other parts of the Diocese. We feel therefore that while your remarks are in a great measure justified you have failed to recognise that one quarter of the Diocese is organized, and organized on the basis of Ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and is in a position to fall into line with the rest of the Diocese whenever the desire for unity spreads sufficiently to allow of a general society embracing the whole Diocese. We hope that nothing we have said will be thought in any way to through cold water upon the energy and zeal of the Rev. K. H. Smith, of Ely, who is indeed deserving of the utmost praise for his untiring labours in the face of much discouragement. And we would here express to him our regret that previous local engagements prevented our presence at Wisbeach on the August Bank Holiday on the occasion of the last meeting of the Ely Diocesan Society. Will he be good enough to communicate with one of us as to the date of his proposed meeting in September, that it may not clash with our quarterly meeting which takes place on the last Saturday of that month. While however we unite with him in wishing to the whole Diocese organized, we are of opinion that local circumstances renders one Society for the whole impracticable. Cambridge is the only place at which it is possible to arrange a meeting accessible from all parts of the Diocese and even that involves a long journey say from here (South Beds.) or Sudbury, Suffolk. We are convinced that the true solution of the question is an Association for each Archdeaconry, with its own organization and Executive—with perhaps an Annual meeting for the whole once a year at Cambridge.

REPLY OF "ASTONIAN."

SIR,—In reply to "Free Lance," re Mr. Washbrook and myself, I thank him for his observations, but I can hardly see the force of his argument. I beg to differ from him when he says that the green-eyed monster, jealousy, had a great deal to do with this affair. Allow me, sir, to state that there is no jealousy connected with the matter, and it is hardly a hole-picking business, as he chooses to describe it. What we want is to have a record of true peals only, if it's possible to get them, and not false and cooked performances, and when we hear of these latter, it's better to have them settled up at once. I am very much obliged to Mr. Washbrook for his answer, but he does not clearly state it was the peal of Stedman that he apologised for. If it was so I certainly have lost sight of it. I remember a controversy some time ago over a peal of Grandsire, but that job was squared up, I presume, and this I suppose must rest the same. Allow me to state that I was not directly acquainted with the matter, but from what I heard it seemed to me that a man with the ability Mr. Washbrook possesses as a conductor, it was strange to have sent the wrong peal after conducting it so recently, when a glance at the figures would have been sufficient. The Ross peal I don't know enough about to go into it. However, to shew that there's no jealousy connected with me against Mr. Washbrook, if he shews up with some of his party who are about to visit Aston, he will have a hearty reception from

THE ST. DAVID'S SOCIETY, EXETER.

This society recently held its annual outing, and visited Dunsford, Bridford, and Christow. The party started from Exeter about nine o'clock in a convenient break drawn by a pair of horses. They had intended to ring a short touch at the parish church before starting, but were unavoidably prevented owing to the fact that an addition is being made to the six bells in the tower, in the shape of a new treble, thus bringing up the bells to seven, and which it is hoped speedily to increase to eight. The "ever faithful" city was quickly left behind, and under the welcome rays of a brilliant August sun, the little party shortly afterwards were rattling merrily along country roads and lanes, enjoying to the very full the magnificent scenery of some of the most favoured parts of Devonshire, which at the time presented one of the finest sights to be seen. Some of the party amused themselves by having a ring on the handbells, while the more advanced "strings" seemed to derive much delight from recounting odd and possibly unique incidents. But whatever might have been the ideas which predominated in each individual's mind, it was manifested in no unmistakable manner that no one's bodily wants were neglected, as the refreshments with which the party had taken care to provide themselves, were speedily and sensibly reduced in magnitude. Passing along the valley of the Teign, and taking a full survey of the scenery with which it is compassed, the company eventually arrived at about 11.30 at the parish church of Dunsford, where permission had been kindly given them by the new rector (the Rev. W. Tickell), to ring the pretty peal of six contained in the tower. Some six scores were rung but the party found, experientia docet, that two or three improvements of paramount importance needed to be made before the bells could be properly rung according to scientific methods. Through the kindness of the Rev. W. Tickell, who also proved an affable cicerone, the party inspected the charming grounds attached to the rectory, and, after many expressions of thanks to the rev. gentleman for his courtesy and attention, they shortly afterwards re-seated themselves in the break and proceeded to Bridford, some four or five miles distant, which was reached about 1.30. Dinner had previously been ordered at Mr. Sherman's, "Harriers' Arms Inn" for two o'clock. During the interval some of the company rang the handbells much to the delight of the villagers who congregated around the premises. Punctually at the hour named, "mine host" had ready a substantial collation which it is almost needless to say was attacked in a vigorous manner, the party, all of whom, however, discreetly bore in mind the Latin proverb—appetitus rationi pareat. Having satisfied themselves with food, some liquid was supplied to each member, not merely in order to put the finishing touch to the repast, but chiefly because it was necessary to do becoming honor to the loyal and various other toasts, which were proposed by the chairman (Mr. F. Shepherd), and other campanologists. Reference was made by the assistant secretary (Mr. A. W. Searle), in responding to the toast of "Success to the Society," to the progress made by the band in the art of change-ringing, recollecting especially that several of the members were ignorant of the principles of modern bell ringing two years ago, and that already three of its youngest associates had rung in peals. The toast list being over, the ringers adjourned to the belfry of the parish church, which was close at hand, where they knocked off some excellent 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles on the musical peal of six contained therein. The party subsequently proceeded to Christow, where they rang some fine 6-scores on the beautiful peal of six in the parish church. They also joined with the ringers of the place in some round ringing and call changes. The company wended their way about seven o'clock to the "Artichoke Inn," where they sat down to a substantial and exceedingly refreshing tea. Some changes were afterwards rung on the hand bells, to the intense gratification of the villagers. About nine o'clock the party started on the return journey, feeling satisfied that they had advanced the welfare of of change-ringing in the places they had visited. The party were delayed for some time through a waggon, the horse attached to which had fallen down and blocked the road. The driver of the break containing the ringers assisted with alacrity in putting the driver (who received rather a nasty wound near his right eye), and his steed straight. After this incident the company proceeded onward, and reached Exeter about eleven o'clock, thoroughly pleased with this, their first annual outing, and with many wishes that the next would be equally as pleasant. Before separating, it might be mentioned that the ringers awarded a very hearty vote of thanks to the clergymen of the different parishes for allowing them the use of their bells. They also warmly acknowledged the generosity of the parishioners of St. David's who had contributed towards defraying the expenses of the excursion.

THE GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

On Thursday, August 23rd, after assembling in the belfry of the parish church, Cheltenham, and ringing two touches of Grandsire Caters, conducted by Mr. J. Belcher, captain of the Cheltenham society, a supper was held at the "Eight Bells" Hotel, to commemorate the long peal of Stedman Caters rung at Cheltenham on May 21st last. About thirty ringers and friends sat down to supper. The chair was taken by Mr. Belcher, and the vice-chair by the Rev. Pitt Eykyn, secretary to the Association. The cloth being removed, the usual loyal toasts were given and duly honoured. The next two toasts were those of the ringers of the long peal, and Mr. W. T. Pates, the conductor; after which a very handsome peal tablet was presented to Mr. Pates, through the Chairman, commemorative of the long peal, it being also his first peal of Stedman Caters as conductor.

Mr. PATES having duly responded, expressing his thanks and saying what a surprise to him such a handsome present was,

The CHAIRMAN in an appropriate and feeling speech, presented Mr. Phillott, on behalf of his ringing friends in Cheltenham and various parts, with an exceedingly handsome gift on the occasion of his marriage. The present consisted of a splendid sewing machine, having on the case a silver plate engraved with the words "Presented to G. H. Phillott by ringing friends, June 26th, 1888." Together with this was also presented a beautifully illuminated address on vellum, which was read by Mr. Ward, giving the names of the donors, and wishing Mr. and Mrs. Phillott long life and happiness. The address and also the peal tablet were illuminated by Mr. Price, of Worcester, and reflects the greatest credit on him. In the interval between this presentation and Mr. Phillott's reply, the air, "Music cannot wake us," was given as a solo on the handbells by Mr. W. T. Pates, the chorus being lustily joined in. The next toast was that of the Rev. Pitt Eykyn, who replied in a humorous speech. After this, Mr. Phillott with much feeling thanked his numerous friends, one and all, both those present and others unavoidably absent, for the utterly unexpected, and not only magnificent, but useful present which they had given him: it being an especially graceful act on their part, as being appropriate not only to himself but also to his wife.

The health of "The Visitors" was then proposed, and afterwards that of Mr. Ward, who in replying proposed the health of "The Chairman," to whom the usual vote of thanks was given. The last toast on the board was that of the well-known veteran—Mr. W. Morris—now fast nearing seventy-nine, but who is still hale and hearty, and able to "make one" in a peal of Caters. The rest of the evening was agreeably spent in harmony, various courses and tunes being rung, and a solo performance of a well-struck touch of Kent Treble Bob by Mr. W. T. Pates, which was heartily applauded by all. Solos on the handbells were also given by Messrs. Brunsdon and Humphries, and courses by friends from Gloucester and Tewkesbury. The proceedings terminated with "God save the Queen," by Mr. Pates, on the handbells. It should be mentioned that the proceedings connected with procuring the testimonial and present to Mr. Phillott were entrusted to Mr. Pates and Mr. Ward, who most ably conducted the task assigned to them. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed, and the company separated, all expressing their opinion that the gathering had been a most agreeable one, and one which will be long looked back to with pleasure by all present.

NOTICE.—The Secretary of the Ancient Society of College Youths, would be glad to receive the addresses of Mr. R. T. Hibbert, of Reading and Mr. Harry Pearce, of Maidstone, at their reasonable convenience.—RICHARD T. WOODLEY, 40, Lillington Street, Pimlico.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Nothing without labour."

It would appear as if the Ely Association is suffering just now from apathy on the part of its members. We might well understand a disinclination at this holiday period of the year to enter into serious business arrangements, and a preference being given to pleasurable habits and resorts. But unfortunately it does not seem as if this was merely the cause of a temporary "cessation of hostilities;" it looks more like the existence of a chronic disease in the midst of that Association which needs eradicating. The first enquiry, then, in this case will be—what is the cause of this? And after that comes the question—how is this state of things to be dealt with and remedied? While commending these queries to the careful consideration of the officials, I would say to them: if things look gloomy, do not lose heart, patience and perseverance seldom go without reward. Remember that many of the greatest achievements of history have been accomplished only after a long series of disheartening circumstances, through the darkness of whose atmosphere the great results have emerged as bright and shining lights, the dense blackness around but serving to make them all the more brilliant. To use an old expression, "take the bull by the horns" manfully; face bravely your difficulties and the obstacles which now beset your path, then strive your uttermost to surmount them. If you cannot obtain that amount of success which you desire (as an old friend of mine used to say) get what you can on account, and keep pegging away until you get the balance of the remainder. But above all, keep heart and work on. Who knows but that even in the near future you may be blessed with such a return for your earnest and self-denying labours as you do not now even dream of? In any case, if you cannot be the architects and builders of a magnificent edifice, you may at least so lay the foundation, that those who come after will have reason to be thankful to you for leaving them such a firm basis to work upon.

* * * * *

I should be very ungallant were I not to compliment Mrs. Williams on the accomplishment of her first 720 of Bob Minor with a pair of handbells. That lady is undoubtedly making good progress in the art; and really I begin to have a lurking suspicion that one of these days we shall find a report of tower ringing by some of our energetic lady friends, in the columns of "THE BELL NEWS." That would make some of our "old stagers" rub their eyes and wonder! The gentler sex are now appearing as Municipal voters, as members of Boards of Guardians, School Boards, the medical profession, and various other roles in which the sterner sex were hitherto supposed to have a monopoly; and if they come out as ringers in the tower—well, we shall have to look out; that's all.

* * * * *

Another little circumstance I am pleased to note, namely, the ringing of the two trebles in a 720 on handbells by Ernest Herbert, a boy of but eleven years, at Woburn. Well done, lad! You have started young—much younger than most of us did, and that is all in your favour. Let us hope you have a long and useful life before you, and that you may eventually prove yourself a credit to the Exercise, both by your abilities as a ringer and your conduct as becoming a respected member of Society, and a faithful son of the Church.

* * * * *

"Plain Bob" seems to have been greatly exercised in his mind on account of my remarks anent the recent Chepstow "performances," and, as is usually the case with persons when they allow their temper to get the best of their judgment, he has succeeded in making an amusing exhibition of himself. On first reading his ejaculatory and pointless effusion, I could not refrain from a hearty laugh at the absurdity of the thing; but on afterthought I felt sorry for him that he had not left the writing of his rejoinder over until some calmer moment, by which means he might perhaps have appeared to better advantage. As would have been expected from such an ill-tempered rigma-role, he quite overlooks the real point of my note in question. I did not make use of one disparaging word respecting their ringing of the aforementioned courses of Bob Doubles. What I referred to was the publishing of such a small performance, and that too in so close conjunction with a repetition of drinks—ringing and drinking alternately with each other as if they were equally creditable performances. His puerile abuse I pass over with the remark that the Exercise is better calculated to decide as to the "bigotry" of my weekly remarks, than a man in a passion. As to my abilities as a ringer, which he professes to be anxious to know something about, I would add that it is many years since I rung my first course of Bob Doubles, and were I to give an epitome of my experiences and work in connection with change-ringing since that time, it is more than probable that "Plain Bob" would be considerably astonished. Let me, however, give him a piece of advice. The next time he is tempted to allow his temper to get the best of him in this manner, "sleep on it," my friend; or perhaps better still, indulge in the luxury of a cold water bath. For the present, Pax vobiscum.

WOOLHOPE, HEREFORDSHIRE.

The fine old peal of six bells in the church of St. George has recently undergone extensive repairs. They have been entirely rehung with new stocks, wheels, and clappers. The bells from constant use were found to be very much worn, and have been turned on the new stocks, so that the clappers now strike in an opposite direction. New bell ropes have been supplied, new guides for ropes to pass through fitted with turned ornamental bosses, and new troughs between the floors for the ropes to work in. The bells being turned are fitted with reversible crown staples passing through the crown of the bell and screwing on the top of the stock, and are all hung on gun metal bearings fitted into cast iron chairs, and fitted with grease boxes and covers. The gudgeons are all turned up in the stocks and fitted in iron bed plates to the under sides of the stock. The oldest bell bears the date 1649, and has the following inscription: "Honor and Praise be given to Thee, O Lord. J.B. A.D., Churchwardens." The work has given entire satisfaction.

RINGERS' VISIT TO PERSHORE, WORCESTERSHIRE.

On Thursday, August 20th, through the kindness of their Vicar, the members of the Clent branch of the Worcestershire Association had their first annual outing, the old and somewhat romantic town of Pershore being chosen for the purpose. Soon after eight o'clock in the morning the members assembled at Hagley railway station, and while waiting for the train the handbells were brought out, and that very popular tune known as "The Washing Day," played upon them, to the evident enjoyment of the occupants of the platform. A 6-score of Grand-sire Doubles having been well struck by the younger members of the party, the train steamed into the station, and soon were all en route for their destination. Very soon after eight o'clock Worcester was reached, and a delay of nearly an hour taking place, the party had an opportunity of taking a brief stroll into the "faithful city." Time not admitting of much sight-seeing, however, a return was made to the station just in time, and the route for Pershore was resumed, that railway-station being reached soon after ten o'clock. This station is about a mile-and-a-half from the town, the walk being at all times enjoyable, but especially so at this season of the year. The neighbourhood, through which flows the gentle and classic Avon, is very famous for every description of fruit. Testimony to this fact is apparent from the immense quantities of this kind of produce which is despatched to all parts of the kingdom, and the excellent fruit of Mr. Richard Butler, of Pressland House, Pinvin, have a wide reputation for quality and flavour. Now it is the plum season, and the visitors were fain to halt on their way for the purpose of viewing the rows upon rows of trees of that delicious fruit which was being carefully gathered by a numerous body of "pickers" from the heavily-laden branches.

The town being reached, and the journey having "whetted" the appetites of the visitors, the inner man was rendered comfortable, and ringing was the next object. For this purpose, a move was made to the old parish church of St. Andrew, where was found to be a ring of six bells, hung the reverse way. The greatest drawback to ringing here was the height of the ceiling from the floor, and without any intervening guides for the ropes. The bells were raised in peal, and a 720 of Bob Minor was attempted, which came to grief soon after the half-way had been reached. A 360 was then rung by the following: G. Workman, 1; C. Boughton, 2; W. Short, 3; W. Huxley, 4; J. Barber, 5; H. Martin (conductor), 6.

The visitors (in company with their Vicar, who had accompanied them from Clent) then repaired to the Abbey Church of the Holy Cross. The Vicar of Clent (who was formerly in charge here) pointed out to his ringers the several features of interest connected with the edifice, not the least of which was the stained glass window defining the history of the church. The ringing-chamber here is probably without a parallel. Entering underneath the tower the visitor is surprised to find that every floor in that part of the building, except the one immediately under the bells, has been removed, and the arch thrown open to the church. This of course necessitated, in the absence of any further provision, the ringers being brought down to the ground floor. To avoid this a light-looking cage of wood and iron was placed just beneath the bells, and in this cage the ringers officiate. The idea seems an ingenious one. The ascent to this unique ringing-chamber, is not however favorable to corpulence.

Permission to ring at the Abbey could not be procured until four o'clock in the afternoon, but during the interval some of the visitors were conducted through the gardens of several of the local gentlemen, who had kindly thrown them open for this purpose; while others enjoyed a row on the river Avon. At the time appointed they all met at the Abbey, and ascending to the "cage," raised the bells, and attempted a touch of Grandsire Triples, which came to grief through the bad "go" of the bells. These bells are without doubt the best ring of eight in the county, and it is surprising, therefore, that the good folks of Pershore are content to let them remain in such a sad state. They will have to be rehung by a professional bell-hanger before anything can be done on them.

Leaving the Abbey, at five o'clock the party found that by the kindness of their vicar a good tea was awaiting them at the music-hall, to which repast ample justice was done. Then a start was made for the railway-station on the return journey home, the latter place being reached about eight o'clock, every one of the party acknowledging the enjoyment they had experienced in this—their first—visit to the "land o' plums."

VISIT TO CALDICOT, MONMOUTHSHIRE.

On Saturday, September 1st, the Caerleon Society paid a visit to Caldicot, where they were met by Mr. Baynham, the steeplekeeper, and other members of the local band. The tower contains a fine ring of eight, in splendid going order. The tenor (about 16 cwt. in F) has no date, but an inscription in very indifferent church-text characters and the words divided at random by round shields or rosettes: "In honore Sancta Mari(h)a." The tenor has been quarter-turned. From the battlements a splendid view of the Bristol channel (which is one mile distant and three-and-a-half wide) is obtained. Directly across is the mouth of the Bristol Avon, and one mile south-west is the north end of the Severn tunnel. Within bowshot is the ancient castle, now restored and inhabited. The Rector, the Rev. E. V. Collins, came into the belfry to welcome the visitors, and the bells were set rolling, the visitors and local band alternately standing at the ropes. At 4.30 the Rector invited the ringers to tea, which Mrs. Collins had kindly provided on the lawn in front of the rectory. The Rector also took the visitors around the garden and greenhouse, calling attention to some of the curious plants which he cultivates. After tea some more ringing was indulged in until the time of departure, when we bade farewell to the Caldecot band and also to our friend "Plain Bob," whom "Free Lance" delighteth to honour, and who had walked from Chepstow to meet us (a very pleasant fellow by the bye, and eager to increase his knowledge of the science, though somewhat bold in trying to draw conclusions with "Free Lance.")

The company take this opportunity of thanking the Rev. E. V. Collins and Mrs. Collins for the kind reception they received at their hands, also Mr. Baynham and the local band for their kindness.

The largest bell is 25 cwt.

THE EXECUTION BELL AT ST. SEPULCHRE'S.

There seems to be some probability of the discontinuance of the practice of tolling the bell of St. Sepulchre's, Holborn, on the occasion of executions at Newgate. The practice has been observed for many years, and the cost has been defrayed out of a rent-charge on certain premises in Smithfield, known as Robert Dowe's Prison Charity. This Charity has now been scheduled by the Charity Commissioners, who propose to divert the money from its present use and give the rector and churchwardens of St. Sepulchre's, as trustees of the Charity, power to dispense it in the manner that they direct, namely, to benefit deserving and necessitous prisoners upon their discharge; or, in the case of youthful offenders, to provide them with clothing, to assist them to return to their homes, or to gain a livelihood. In selecting the beneficiaries the trustees will prefer such prisoners who have been committed in the Central Criminal Court district. The trustees may also pay over the income to a discharged prisoners' aid society. The question of the tolling of the execution bell will shortly come before the Vestry of St. Sepulchre's, out of whose funds the costs of maintenance will have to come.

In connection with the above the Standard has the following interesting remarks:—

"An old London custom, which, at the best of times, had never much more than antiquity to recommend it, is about to pass away. We refer to the practice of tolling the bell of St. Sepulchre's Church on the morning of an execution in Newgate. This doleful rite has now existed for the better part of three centuries, in virtue of a fund left for the purpose. The bequest of ROBERT DOWE, Citizen and Merchant Taylor, amounted in the year 1605 to the modest sum of fifty pounds, but it would not be rash to affirm that the fund, after the manner of such Civic gifts, has assumed proportions considerably larger. At all events, the size of the endowment, and the purposes to which it has been applied, have attracted the attention of the Charity Commissioners, who have duly scheduled it for the purpose of giving the Rector and Churchwardens of St. Sepulchre's, as Trustees of the Charity, power to apply it to a more appropriate purpose. This diversion they consider ought to be in the direction of benefiting prisoners more than usually necessitous, and as 'deserving' as a criminal who has undergone a sentence can well be. In the case of youthful offenders, the income of the bequest may be used to provide them with clothing, to assist them to return to their homes or to gain a livelihood. In selecting the beneficiaries, the Trustees will prefer such prisoners as have been committed by the Central Criminal Court, as this tribunal lies in their district, and is directly connected with the gaol which has hitherto, in a round-about way, 'enjoyed' the benefits of ROBERT DOWE's melancholy bequest. Or, if it so pleases the Trustees, they may pay over the income to the Discharged Prisoners' Aid Society, a mode of helping the unfortunate which is perhaps the readiest and the one least likely to be abused by those who may, in the distant future, have the patronage of the charity in their hands. In any case, the funds will no more be employed for their old purpose, for though the Vestry may, if it so please them—which is not very likely—pay for the performance of this office, the fifty pounds of the pious London citizen will be utilized for ends more in keeping with modern ideas of the fitness of things. It is quite possible that some injudicious laudatores temporis acti may regret to hear of the coming change. It is even within the bounds of probability that the Vestry may consider that the ratepayers ought to pay for a continuance of the ceremony. That, however, will scarcely be the opinion of any large number of people, since, in acceding to the wishes of the Trustees of the Prison Charity, the Commissioners have bereft St Sepulchre's of the least agreeable association with which it is invested.

"The tolling of the bell, and the fact that many a time the hangman has fixed the fatal hour by the clock in its tower, have led to a widespread idea that the name of St. Sepulchre's Church is in some way derived from the culprits' grave. In reality, St. Pulchre—as it is locally called—was dedicated to the memory of the Holy Sepulchre at a period long before its vicinity obtained so strange a history. The only reason why it was selected as a sort of subsidiary chapel to Newgate was that its position at the eastern end of Snow-hill, hard by Smithfield, makes it the church nearest to the Old Bailey. Founded some time in the twelfth century, it was renewed about four hundred years later, and after the Great Fire was almost entirely rebuilt by Wren, of whose handiwork, in spite of a great deal of 'restoration' and alternation, it is generally regarded as a favourable specimen. Nor is the church without a history. In its vaults are entombed some famous, and one or two infamous, men. There, for instance, repose Roger Ascham and the Captain John Smith, whose connection with the founding of Virginia is much better authenticated than his own romantic account of being preserved from the wrath of Powhattan by the fair Pocahontas. In St. Sepulchre's lie also Dr. Bell, the educationalist, and Sarah Malcolm the murderess—though it ought to be added that three centuries ago, when the body of Awfield, executed for 'sparcing abroad certen lewed, sedicious, and traytorous bookes,' the parishioners declined to permit the interment of such a scoundrel in the same earth with 'their parents, wives, children, kindred, masters, and old neighbours.' St. Sepulchre's has been peculiarly fortunate in attracting the favour of the pious founder. Few churches, indeed, have at different times received so many gifts. In pre-Reformation times it supported many religious sisterhoods and fraternities, and maintained several chantry priests for celebrating masses for the repose of divers benefactors. On St. Paul's Day, a discourse is, or ought to be, delivered upon the excellence of the Church of England liturgy, in virtue of a bequest of forty shillings per annum left by Mr. Paul Jarvis, who also bestowed other sums, the distribution of which is so onerous as, to necessitate the Vicar, Churchwardens, and Common Councilmen dining together on the evening of the day when they duly allot the Jarvis bequest. But of all the St. Sepulchre charities the one now on the eve of transformation is the best known. According to a tablet on the right hand side of the altar, the donor was Robert Dowe, who in 1605 gave fifty pounds 'for ringing the greatest bell in the church on the day the condemned prisoners are executed, and for other services for ever concerning such condemned prisoners.' In Munday's edition of Stow the name of this benefactor is given as 'John Dowe' and 'the other services' are particularised at considerable length. For example, on the night before executions the Clerk of the church had to ring a bell under the windows of the condemned felons, and then and there repeat a rhymed admonition appropriate to their approaching end. When the culprit was in the cart, the Clerk was to stand in front of the church as the procession passed, ready with the same bell, and, after certain tolls, repeat a prayer and exhort all good people to join in these exercises. Another duty of the Clerk was to present a huge nosegay to every criminal as he passed on his way to Tyburn, and lest these offices should be performed in a perfunctory manner, as they were apt to be when there were one or two executions every week, the beadle of Merchant Taylors' Hall was allowed an 'honest stipend' to supervise the ceremonial.

"In course of time, however, one after another of these functions dropped into abeyance. The presentation of the nosegay and the exhortation in front of the church ceased when executions were held in the Old Bailey. Then the admonition under the window of the cells came to be intermitted, until nowadays all that remains of the ceremonial so carefully enjoined by Robert Dowe is the tolling of the great bell when a wretched being is suffering the last penalty of the law. This function may likewise very properly be relegated to the past. It began in a time when everything was done to make the lot of criminals as severe as possible, and when the dismal tolling of a funeral bell while the man was still alive was regarded as conducive either to repentance or to humanity. In former days, it may be remembered, often only a day, or a few days, intervened between the man's sentence and death, and all executions were in public. It was for the purpose of impressing the rabble, quite as much as with the object of benefiting the culprit, that the bell was tolled, and the Burial Service repeated in sight of the unhappy wretch's grave was supposed to have a peculiar moral effect on all concerned. We know now, or we think we do, that horror is more likely to be the feeling on such an occasion than piety or sincere repentance. As for the mob outside the prison, it is notorious that they were little, if at all, influenced by the dread solemnity of the event. They ate, drank, and sang songs in the taverns opposite until, at daylight, the preparations began for what had brought them together, when speculation grew rife whether the criminal would "die game." Robberies were frequent in the crowd, and murders have even been committed at the foot of the gallows. Hanging in chains, burning the body, dissecting it in public, preaching the funeral sermon with the condemned culprit's open coffin in front of him, and a host of other inhuman proceedings, used to be advocated in the supposed interests of public morality. But, like the practice of breaking on the wheel, which the courtiers and fine ladies of the ancien regime used to consider a delightful divertissement, or burning at the stake, which attracted all the scum of London, these barbarous rites really tended to increase the amount of crime. Even the ride to Tyburn made a hero of a scoundrel, and, in common with the kindly attention paid him at St. Sepulchre's Church, intensified the popular notion that a highwayman, a coiner, or a murderer was a sort of public character, whose ill-fortune was to be sympathised with because he had been caught."

The Standard of Thursday published the following letter in connection with this subject:—

"SIR,—It is not so certain as assumed in your Article of yesterday, that no Bell will in future be tolled at capital Executions at Newgate. The instructions issued to the Sheriffs of England and Wales, by the Home Office, for the conduct of Executions of criminals, direct that the Bell of a neighbouring church, or of the prison, be tolled for a short time before the Execution. This is invariably done, and the sexton of St. Sepulchre's will doubtless, still perform this duty, but will be paid by the Sheriffs of London, instead of by the Trustees of Robert Dowe's will. Half-a-crown is, I believe, the usual fee in most places."

VANDALISM.

According to Dr. Jessop, the people of Cossey, a village four miles north-west of Norwich, have been guilty of a strange act of high-handed barbarism. The rev. gentleman writes to the Times:—"A fortnight ago I received a request by post that I would contribute towards the 'restoration' of Cossey church. Knowing nothing of what had been going on, I at once drove over to survey the ground, and was overcome by dismay. I remembered but imperfectly a beautifully proportioned structure, for the most part of early fourteenth century workmanship, consisting of a nave, with windows still retaining large portions of the old stone mullions and tracery, the roof in a rickety condition, the seating shabby, ugly, and inconvenient. There was a superb screen separating this nave from the chancel, and I found chancel and screen pretty much as I had seen them some years ago. Of the ancient nave its walls alone remain. Every record of the past, every vestige of anything that could suggest a reminiscence of that past, every faint hint that the life and faith of that past had any link of connection with the present, has been brutally obliterated. Everything of beauty has been swept away. The old stone mullions of the fourteenth century windows have been torn out, the very jambs hacked away; there they lie in a heap outside, doomed sooner or later to be utilised for the 'restoration' of a pigstye or the construction of a silo. In their place there are not honest sashes with weights and cords, but constructions of white brick, the ingenious moulders having set themselves to present the beholders with a fancy portrait of the ancient tracery and cusping in cooked clay. There were in the chancel five windows of rare ingenuity and beauty of design, containing considerable fragments of brilliant stained glass—the stonework in remarkably good preservation, one of the windows in the north wall presenting some characteristic features which, as far as I know, were unique. The roof was a trussed rafter roof of the early part of the fourteenth century, the moulding of the wall plate being exceedingly rich, and doubtless designed and executed by local craftsmen, the rude forefathers of the hamlet, whom we take such special pains to help their posterity to pity and despise.

The screen was thickly covered with white paint, yet not so thickly as quite to hide the exquisite carving of the spandrels, bearing upon its every line the evidence that a born artist had there given play to his genius, and worked at it as a labour of love. To 'restore' this chancel I had been asked to subscribe from my scanty means—to restore, mind, not preserve; and when I asked what was intended in this case by the term 'restoration' I was proudly told that it had been agreed by a large majority of the parishioners to substitute for those chancel windows others of a more slightly and convenient pattern to harmonise with the triumphs of brickwork in the nave. As for the screen, nobody wanted it: it was to be got rid of somehow; my informant did not quite know how. When I asked where the money was to come from, I was told confidently that the Trustees of the great hospital (for old men and women at Norwich, which own the tithes) had voted 250*l.* towards the completion of the work. Next week a representative of the society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings was sent down to the report upon the condition of affairs, and a very temperate letter was addressed to the trustees, and a representation was made to the Archdeacon to the effect that no faculty ought to be granted to anyone to meddle with the chancel without due notice, and without giving opportunity to those whom it concerned to enter objections to any plans that might be presented. But the money had been voted, and the Vandals were not disposed to lose time. They applied, it seems, last week for their faculty—(1) for replacing the windows with others 'of a similar character;' (2) for removing the present roof and substituting another similar to the nave; (3) for replastering walls and general repairs. Not a word about the screen. The surveyor for the county of Norfolk happens to be an inhabitant of Cossey; he gave notice of his intention to oppose the granting of this faculty, and was waiting quietly for the day appointed, when, lo! on Monday, the 27th of August, a contracting bricklayer with half-a-dozen labourers appeared on the scene, and forthwith the work of demolition began in earnest. Before the day was done the roof was more than half stripped off, the unique window in the north had been taken out bodily, and almost all the old stained glass destroyed. Before this letter meets the eyes of your readers the beautiful chancel of Cossey church will be a thing of the past, never—no, never—never to be restored. Meanwhile I understand that up to this moment no faculty has been granted—that is, no authority has been granted for this outrageous demolition. The Vandals laugh at faculties. Why should they not laugh? They have won the day. For myself, as a mere bystander, I have only one question to ask—How long is this kind of thing to go on?"

The Philadelphia correspondent of the Times sends a despatch received from Ottawa, which states that a Cabinet Council was held there on Monday. Lord Salisbury had asked for information as to the commercial relations of Canada with the United States since the confederation of the British North American provinces, enjoining the utmost caution on the Dominion Government. It is stated that several of the Ministers disagreed with Sir John Macdonald as to the course to be pursued in view of President Cleveland's message. Another meeting of the cabinet was to be held yesterday.

For Merthyr, where a vacancy has been caused by the death of Mr. H. Richard (G), Mr. J. T. D. Llewellyn is spoken of in the Conservative interest. The Gladstonian candidate has not yet been selected.

On Tuesday afternoon Lady Edward Cavendish opened a park which had been presented to the town of Keighley by the Duke of Devonshire. It is about nine acres and a half in extent.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"United we stand; divided we fall."

What a sudden falling off in the number of peals reported last Saturday! The appearance of the centre pages was calculated to make one instinctively turn over the leaves to see if others had not by some mischance or other wandered away from their time-honoured places. But the search was in vain, and if it had not been for the peals at Woodbridge and Beddington we should have had (for I believe the first time in the history of "THE BELL NEWS,") a "clean sheet."

* * * * *

But if there was such a reduction in the peals, the reverse was the case with Saturday's correspondence, which was pleasant reading, if only (by reason of the friendly manner in which the various points of debate were treated. Is not this feature far more pleasing and creditable to us as a fraternity than the fiery, abusive stuff to which we are treated sometimes? Let us hope we have seen the last of such.

* * * * *

"Grandsire Bob" wants to know if steel bells are a success from a musical point of view. He does not favour us with his locale, or I might perhaps have been able to refer him to some such ring within measurable distance of his habitation, so that he might have judged for himself. I have myself heard a few, but don't care to hear any more—unless, indeed, a mile or two away. From a purely musical point of view I consider the chiming of the new "tubular bells" infinitely superior.

* * * * *

The Hon. Secretaries of the Bedfordshire Association give us a very fair, and at the same time interesting account of the state of ringing affairs in that part of the country. The great difficulty in the way of a complete unity in that diocese appears to be mainly of a geographical character. But is this difficulty really insurmountable? With able and energetic officers and members in the various districts, I certainly think not. If distance is so great an obstacle to their friendly meeting together as one body, why not follow the plan of the Midland Counties' Association, and divide themselves into districts, each with its small working committee and local Hon. Sec., who with the President, Hon. Treasurer and Secretary would form the General Executive Committee of the Association? Thus, instead of having four small independent societies, with practically no bond of union, they might eventually raise one large and powerful Association, which, through its very numerical strength, would be better able to further the interests of our profession by stirring up the lukewarm, encouraging those eager to improve themselves, and likewise become of much greater influence for good in the diocese. Remember the old story of the bundle of sticks, and the well-known adage—"Unity is Strength."

* * * * *

I like the tone of "Astonian's" second letter, which I think is an improvement on his previous one, and particularly his disclaimer as to jealousy. But I fear he has slightly misunderstood my remarks anent jealousy and "hole-picking"—perhaps I did not express myself as clearly as I ought. In referring to this point I was speaking in a general sense, and not with any peculiar regard to his case. On looking over my note again, I can quite see how "Astonian" could reasonably have put his construction on it, but that was not my intention.

* * * * *

We too often find in assemblies of ringers a disposition to sneer at the accomplishments of others, particularly if they are of a somewhat extraordinary character; and to hear sarcastic remarks bandied about with regard to some absent member of our craft who has perhaps made greater strides of improvement than those present. That may be a failing of human nature, but it is nevertheless regrettable, and more so when these unkind and unworthy sentiments are "reduced to print" in the columns of our weekly organ. This was what I had in mind when I made use of the remarks on "hole-picking" and jealousy. May this blot on our escutcheon grow "smaller by degrees and beautifully less" until it vanishes altogether, and in its place arise a universal disposition to "give honour where honour is due," thus encouraging each other to greater efforts, and helping to bring about a higher state of efficiency all round.

* * * * *

I have been asked what is my opinion as to the desirability or otherwise of making another attempt to form a National Association. I only wish I could truthfully express that opinion in favour of such a course. Unfortunately, I believe that were the attempt to be made, it would but be followed with the same result which rewarded the previous well-meant and energetic effort in that direction. Whether it be that the Exercise at large does not sufficiently grasp this question, or whether it be that our friends have quite sufficient work on their hands with their own county affairs; of that I do not venture to express an opinion. But from whatever cause it may arise, I certainly should not dare to prognosticate anything but failure to a renewed attempt for this purpose.

* * * * *

Institutions like this National Association would have to be were it worth the name, are not formed in a day, or a year; they can only grow as it were out of the long continued thought and working of many minds, by means, so to speak, of a current of ideas travelling in one direction, every year gaining strength and force, till at length "the hour and the man" appears; these ideas then become moulded into solid practical shape, and the thoughts and aspirations of a lifetime are worked out and realised.

* * * * *

But if this National Association is a project impracticable at the present moment, the same thing cannot be said of the plans which would tend to move in the same direction, and by their results help to bring about eventually that united society which many of our brethren long for. What is there to prevent us having an Annual Congress in some convenient centre? There is scarcely a body of any note, from the Church downwards, that has not now its regular united meetings yearly, for the purpose of mutually reviewing progress, the interchange of ideas by means of speeches and papers, and in various other ways elucidating and helping onward the work they are interested in. Then why should we be lagging behind? There would need no complicated machinery, no great expense, and very little amount of labour, to carry out this scheme. Surely none of our county associations are so badly off that they could not find some of their members able and willing to devote a day or two annually for this purpose; or so financially poor that they could not afford to give something towards the reasonable expenses of some one or two of their members who were gifted with the necessary natural abilities of writing and speaking, but who, perchance, were not sufficiently endowed with this world's goods to defray the whole of their expenses themselves.

I need not enlarge upon the benefits to be derived by us from these annual conferences; we can see their good effects on those organizations which have held them regularly for years past, and as they have been useful to others, so I am convinced they would in like manner be to us. May I therefore venture to ask of our friends that they will give us the benefit of their ideas on this subject through the columns of "THE BELL NEWS," so that even if no practical result ensued, we should at any rate be able to gather one another's opinions, which in itself has at all times a beneficial effect.

FREE LANCE.

EASTBOURNE, SUSSEX.

On Sunday, August 26th, being Hospital Sunday, at St. Saviour's church, for the afternoon service, 968 of Grandsire Triples. W. Ticehurst, 1; *H. P. Bennett, 2; W. Lawrence, 3; *L. Huggett, 4; *E. Willoughby, 5; F. Fisher, 6; *T. Hart (conductor), 7; G. Ades, 8. It was intended to start for a quarter-peal, but meeting a trifle late, it had to given up. The grand sum of £117 13s. 6d., was contributed by the congregation of this sacred edifice during the day towards this local institution. The old town is situated about 1½ miles from the beach. The parish church of St. Mary (old town), is worth a visit, and dates back to about 1150. In 1851 it was partially repaired, and twenty years later it was again renovated, when about £6,000 was expended on it. The church boasts of one of the finest peals of eight in the county. The old parsonage is on the north side of the church, and is now portioned off into labourers' cottages. On Wednesday evening, August 29th, a well-struck and quick touch of 616 Grandsire Triples was rung. *W. Piper, 1; †W. Lawrence, 2; *S. Willoughby, 3; L. Huggett, 4; E. Willoughby, 5; *T. Lewis, 6; T. Hart (conductor), 7; G. Ades, 8. *Members of the Sussex County Association; †Members of St. Lawrence's society, Reading. Close to the church is the "Lamb Inn," probably one of the oldest inns in the county, and celebrated for a curious crypt beneath it. The workhouse is situated in the old town, and was designed as a cavalry barracks during the Peninsular war. Both All Saints' and St. Saviour's church towers are fitted with Seage's silent apparatus, so that the weekly practices are carried on, and the outside world none the wiser. Christchurch has a pretty little peal of six, which go splendidly, and the whole of the belfries are nicely kept, having matting and other comforts.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Saturday, September 1st, nine members of the St. Margaret's Society, Lee, Kent, had their first outing, the place selected being Brighton. Leaving New Cross at 8.35, they arrived at Brighton at 10.30. Previous arrangements having been made for a pull at St. Peter's, the first thing done was to find G. F. Attree, Esq., and Mr. Jay, and having done so, arrangements were made to meet at 3 o'clock at the above church. In the meantime some enjoyed an excursion on the water, while others preferred the beach. 1.30 found them refreshing the inner man, after which a start was made for St. Peter's, where they were met by the above-named gentlemen and several more of the Brighton ringers. After giving the younger members a few courses, a 500 Grandsire Triples was brought round with the assistance of four of the Brighton ringers. This being done they all returned to the beach. Leaving Brighton at 7 o'clock they reached New Cross at 9.45, one and all having thoroughly enjoyed their outing. They wish to thank the Rector and churchwardens, through the medium of this paper, for allowing them the use of the bells; also to Mr. Attree for having all in readiness.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

There will be a meeting of the members of the proposed branch for the Rochdale and Heywood District, on Saturday, September 22nd, at St. Alban's, Rochdale. Bells ready at 2 p.m.; meeting in the schoolroom, Drake Street, at 5 p.m.

Correspondence.

[While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.]

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

WEIGHT OF TENORS.

SIR,—On opening the pages of last week's "BELL NEWS," I was gratified to see the expression of kindly feeling towards the local ringers which prompted you to insert that interesting article on St. Albans, and I could not help noticing that the name of St. Amphibalus was by no means the least conspicuous in the article. It was a strange coincidence to find in the correspondence column a letter from this holy man of old, pointing out certain discrepancies in recording the weight of the tenor at St. Peter's church. It is quite true that different estimates of the weights of both the cathedral and St. Peter's tenors have been given from time to time. In Mr. Stahlschmidt's work, "The Church Bells of Hertfordshire," quoting from a list prepared by Mr. J. Briant, in 1806, of the bells cast by him, one would suppose he estimated their weights at 24 and 22 cwt. respectively, and later on the author states that the diameter of the bells are 52½ and 50 inches. Mr. Turner, the late sexton at the cathedral, told me that he considered the weights were 25 and 22 cwt., but in Kelly's Hertfordshire Directory they are asserted to be 30 and 24 cwt. The current opinion of the weight of the cathedral bell seems to coincide with the last statement, as evidenced by the reports in "THE BELL NEWS" of April 14th and August 18th, and the Saint and Messrs. Kelly likewise agree as to St. Peter's. When the St. Peter's bells were being rehung last year I enquired of Messrs. Warner's foreman the correct weight of the tenor, and was told 21 cwt. This I assume to be accurate. As regards the writer's suggestion, I may say that when necessity arises for the weights of tenors to be put up in every belfry, and conductor's attention called to the same, St. Peter's will not be far behind, but I hope I shall be excused in remarking that for an attempt to be made to compile the weights from Societies' annual reports, is a work for the distant future.

E. P. DEBENHAM.

MR. HARDING'S DATE TOUCH.

SIR,—Two days after I wrote to your paper I examined the Date Touch over again, and found it was perfectly true with the three bobs before called successively. When I called the touch I let it run the eight treble leads between the bobs before, hence the mistake, due to my inexperience. I must sincerely apologise to Mr. Harding for calling into question the accuracy of his composition.

Southport.

A. LAWRENCE PORTER.

OUR COMPOSITION PAGE.

SIR,—On looking over the peals given in your issue of the 18th of last month, I notice that the calling of the first peal of Treble Bob Royal, by Robert Williams, of Liverpool, is incorrectly given. The seventh course should be 2M, 2W, 1H, instead of 2W 2H, and that the second and third peals are simple variations of the first peal. Surely this is using valuable space for no purpose. At the bottom of this column I find a 5376 of Superlative Surprise Major, by John R. Pritchard, of Liverpool. This composition is false. On the top of the second column of page 269 a peal of Treble Bob (5056) appears. The calling of the third course should read 2M, B, 1H, instead of 2 home. I hope all those to whom these remarks concern will receive them in the same friendly spirit as they are given.

N. J. PITSTOW.

MR. PRENTICE'S REPLY.

SIR,—I am surprised that Mr. Hayward is not satisfied with my reply. As soon as Mr. Mee called my attention to it I claimed it as mine. If he liked to put his name to it how could I stop him? Now, Sir, I did write a reply under date of April 16th, 1888, but you may have mislaid my letter, and I asked Mr. Mee to call the peal so that I could clear this matter up. Why, Sir, had I not as much right to publish the peal as Mr. Hayward had? Why I did not say anything at the time was that I never saw it in print till I sent it. Who ever said that Mr. Hayward was not the first to publish it? I think, Sir, that one can be a ringer and a gentleman at the same time. If Mr. Hayward likes to chose two or three members of the College Youths or of any other society I will forward my books under date of 1880 and 1889 to them, and whatever their decision is I am willing to abide by.

DANIEL PRENTICE.

"USING THE PROPERTY OF OTHERS."

SIR,—The peal of Treble Bob Major (5056) by B. Shaw, Lindley, which appeared in your issue of August 18th, will be found on page 35 of Snowden's Treatise, part II., and was also composed by me forty years since.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1888.

THE season par excellence for ringers' festivities, such as excursions, picnics, "outing," and so forth, is we apprehend, nearly over. We mean of course the principal season of the year; for it is perfectly well understood that the absence of warm and genial weather does not entirely prevent ringers enjoying the innocent festive hour. In fact it may be said that climatic conditions are but a secondary consideration when the period of relaxation, combined with renewal of friendships formed heretofore, are concerned. The summer about to close upon us has been very prolific in this kind of enjoyment, as the numerous weekly accounts of the same amply testify. And some of these reports, though the phraseology in which they were couched were of a stereotyped order somewhat, gave evidence of a much better condition of things than formerly. It was a pleasure to read, in many instances, that the "outing" included the incumbent, who correctly thought that by accompanying his ringers he could enjoy a brief relaxation, while promoting the art of ringing. The present number has a report of this kind, where a vicar accompanies his band of ringers to the scene of his former labours, and hospitably entertains them there. Such instances as these are very encouraging and satisfactory. They show improvement on one hand, and appreciation on the other.

To day Mr. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD holds a garden party at his residence at Duffield Bank. This seems a fitting close to the summer's festivities. Doubtless Mr. Heywood's invitation will be accepted by a great many ringers of the neighbourhood, and many from other parts of the country will strain a point to be there. Here is another proof of the position we take up, viz.: that our art is gradually attaining that position to which its merits entitle it. The idea that a gentleman of wealth intended to hold a conversazione of ringers in his grounds would have been scouted years ago as bordering on insanity. While feeling no uncommon satisfaction at the state of the science as compared with it a few years back, we must be grateful to such as the above-named gentleman for the hearty manner in which they identify themselves with it. It is no half-hearted co-operation; their attachment and aid to its progress is not confined to the ringing-chamber and the hours of practice. It is a continual interest they feel in it, not for themselves alone, but for the art in particular, and their ringing brethren in general.

WE again call attention to the late period of the week which we receive communications intended for insertion in this paper. Several correspondents habitually reserve their reports till the last moment, and they come to our hands just at the time of going to press. It is impossible under such conditions to comply with the earnest request of the writers that what they send will appear in the current number. We repeatedly receive reports of touches and peals on Thursday morning which we could very well have had on the Monday previous. Late arrivals are always embarrassing, and we ask our friends not to add to our labours by refraining to send off their reports at the earliest possible moment.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO A BELLRINGER.—On Tuesday, August 28th, an explosion of fire-damp took place at Tong, Yorkshire, in which two men were killed, and William Bolland, the engine-man, was blown eight or nine yards from his post, and so severely burnt on his face and arms that his life has been in danger.

THE ABUSE OF HOSPITALITY.

An ex-Secretary of the Church Congress writes to the Pall Mall Gazette urging it to expose the spongers on free hospitality at the annual gatherings. Descending to particulars he says:—

I have been secretary for the Church Congress one year, and had to deal with the applications for free hospitality. They were shameless. Men with big livings (not the poor curates) wrote and demanded free hospitality for the week. One man with a living of nearly £1,000 a year, wanted it for himself and wife; another, well to do, wanted it for himself, because he had had it ever since Church Congresses began; others not only asked for hospitality, but dictated where they were to have it—in the country, near the Congress Hall, with nice people, and made as much fuss as if they were going to pay. I took the trouble of tracking one of these free spongers. He had had a week's free living at Church Congresses for five or six years in succession, and he also had each of these years a week's free living with one or other learned society at its annual congress: he never contributed a word to the edification of either congress or society; he was a bachelor, had a living better than most men have, had been a schoolmaster, and was supposed to have saved money. There are lots of such cases. I know many poor scholars and clergymen who cannot attend congresses without they receive free hospitality. They ought to have it, and no one grudges it to them; but such gentlemen rarely ask officials to put them on the free hospitality list; the spongers who contribute nothing to the meeting write early and peremptorily, and disgust their host by making his house a mere caravanserai (I've had them there to stay with me). Some of the learned societies, who held congresses, have of late years put a stop to the free hospitality list: but the sponger is not to be denied; he then writes direct to the mayor of the town. How great the evil is this will show: When I was secretary to a Church Congress, the permanent officials told us we must find two thousand beds, one thousand for the people who would pay, and one thousand for spongers.

For some time past outside luggage porters at Ramgate have been in the habit of purchasing of persons by the Sunday excursion train from London who did not intend to go back that day the return portion of their tickets for a nominal sum, and then selling them to people intending to go to London in the evening, the sum usually obtained being 2s., whereas the ordinary fare is 6s. 2d. On the 12th August, a railway inspector purchased a ticket in this way from Alfred Gore, a porter, who yesterday pleaded guilty to the offence, and was fined 5s. and 10s. costs.

BIDDING FOR A LIVING.

The advowson of and perpetual right of presentation to the rectory of Weston Bampfylde (otherwise Great and Little Weston Bampfylde), in the county of Somerset, and the diocese of Bath and Wells, has been offered by auction in London. Amongst those present were several clergymen, including representatives of the Curates' Protection Society and the Association for the Abolition of the sale of Church Livings; but owing probably to the precautions taken to prevent a renewal of the unseemly disturbances that took place at the Mart on former occasions when similar sales were held, no opposition whatever was offered to the proceedings, and there was no manifestation of feeling by those present. The auctioneer described the glebe lands as comprising two enclosures of most productive pasture land, containing about 21 acres, and let at £60 a year to a highly respectable and solvent tenant. So far back as 1842 the tithes, which were rectorial, were commuted at £174 6s. 6d. This sum was subject to variations by corn averages, and is paid by about six principal parishioners. In reply to a bidder, the auctioneer said there was no land-tax whatever. The parish had an area of sixty-three acres, with twenty-five houses, and a population of 104 souls, and amongst these at the present time there was only one case of parochial relief. The age of the present rector was about fifty years—(a laugh)—the parochial rates 2s. 3d. in the pound, and school rate voluntary. It was a healthy, pleasant locality, and required but little clerical duty. (Laughter.) In response to the invitation of the auctioneer, who suggested that £1000 would be a fair sum to start the biddings at, an offer of £300 was made, and this sum advanced to £510, beyond which figure intending purchasers did not seem disposed to proceed. The auctioneer said that, in the interests of the vendor, he should withdraw the property, as nothing like the reserve price had been touched. He should be happy, however, to treat privately after the sale with any person desirous of acquiring the living.

Bastable.

Our readers are informed that all compositions received for this page previous to this date are suppressed, most of them on hand being useless for any practical purpose. While wishing to gratify the ambition of all, we must beg that what is sent for insertion in future, must have a value of some kind. Copies of about 400 compositions, most of them of very little use, have been consigned to the waste-paper basket. When the publication of these peals was first instituted, we put each one to the proof before it appeared; this task, however, proved too arduous, and composers had to take the whole responsibility of their productions; as they will have to do in future.

ST. PETER'S PARISH CHURCH (BRIGHTON) AMATEUR SOCIETY.—ANNUAL OUTING.

The Annual Outing of the above society took place on Monday, August 27th, under very favourable circumstances, the weather (being the principal feature), being all that could be desired. Assembling at Brighton station at 8 a.m., the iron horse was shortly afterwards bearing the party away to the Kentish hop and cornfields, while during the railway journey the handbells were brought into requisition. Arriving at Groombridge the party alighted, and a waggonette being in readiness, the secretary taking the reins, they were soon on their way to Tunbridge and Tunbridge Wells, visiting on their journey hither the tower of Speldhurst, where they found a peal of eight, tenor 14 cwt. in G., by Mears and Stainbank, two of the bells having been added as a Jubilee Memorial in 1887. Having been conducted to the belfry by Mr. H. Edwards and B. Winn, two of the local band, a start was soon made for a 504 of Stedman Triples, but this unfortunately came to grief, when a course of Treble Bob was rung. In the tower is a peal board recording the first peal on the eight bells, having been rung in December last by the local company. On the belfry door is a notice requesting visitors to take off their hats, thus reminding one that here (at any rate), the belfry forms part of the sacred edifice (a fact too often entirely forgotten). After a stroll round the church, the journey was continued to Penshurst, where hangs a heavy peal of six, hung in the reverse order, tenor close upon 24 cwt. While some indulged themselves in ringing Grand-sire Doubles, others paid a hurried visit to Penshurst Place, a very historical mansion, dating from the fifteenth century. After a glass at the neighbouring inn, away to Tunbridge, which was reached at length, where luncheon was found waiting for them, which the reader may be sure was very welcome after such a long drive, some seventeen miles of road having been traversed. After luncheon a visit was paid to the church of SS. Peter and Paul, where was found a splendid ring of eight, tenor 21 cwt. Here a 504 each of Stedman and Grandsire was rung, some expressing a wish to go for a peal, but time prevented this, as they were to visit Tunbridge Wells, which place being reached it was found time allowed a hurried visit to be made to the belfry of St. Peter's church, where again a splendid ring was found, tenor 14½ cwt. in F flat. Here a 504 of Stedman was rung in very quick time, the bells going magnificently, a 168 of Grandsire bringing the day's ringing to a close, with only ten minutes for a cup of tea. The journey home was resumed, the train leaving somewhat early, and Brighton was again reached about 9 p.m. The general opinion was that one and all had spent a most enjoyable day, which in a measure was due to the forethought of their secretary, Mr. G. F. Attree, who had made all the necessary arrangements for the outing. The thanks of the society are also due to the vicars and churchwardens of the several churches for the use of their bells.

WORCESTER AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.

ON Saturday, August 25th, a Quarterly Meeting of the above Association was held in the Lyttleton Middle Class School-room, Malvern, which was well attended by members from Areley Kings, Bromsgrove, Belbroughton, Clent, Cradley, Dunsley, Malvern, Netherton, Stourbridge and Tipton. The Vicar, the Rev. Dr. I. G. Smith, who had other business of importance, could not preside as announced, the chair being occupied in his absence by the Rev. E. A. Ball, senior curate. The rev. gentleman, in opening the meeting, said he had been informed by his Vicar to give them a most hearty welcome on this their first visit to his parish, and hoped all would enjoy their outing. Speaking of the bells, he said they all knew that they had been augmented to a peal of eight, and he was pleased to say it was through his instrumentality that it was so, although at first his Vicar and a few others were against him, but with perseverance he overcame the few obstacles, and all gave him a willing hand, thus enabling him to add three new bells as a Jubilee offering to Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria. The rev. gentleman then gave all who wished a hearty welcome to his residence to tea, for which they thanked him most kindly, and were sorry they could not partake of his kind hospitality, as the time was so short, and they were anxious to have a ring on what are now a fine peal of eight bells in the Abbey church of Great Malvern. The usual business of the Association was then gone through, the Rev. Dr. I. G. Smith, vicar, and P. Armstrong, Esq., Hon. Sec. of "Probationer Ringers," becoming honorary, the local company and several others becoming performing members of the Association. A hearty vote of thanks to the rev. chairman for presiding, and to the vicar for the use of the schoolroom, tower and bells, brought the meeting to a close. The time being short for the visitors, a few short touches of Grandsire Triples, Kent Treble Bob Major, etc., were rung upon the tower bells. The Secretary of the above Association ventures to hope (as the vicar and his ringers have joined the Association), to hear of more ringing being done in Malvern, and to have the pleasure of recording peals rung there in the Association peal-book.

THE ANCIENT SOCIETY OF COLLEGE YOUTHS.

IT having recently dawned upon a few "Youths" of this Ancient Society that a peal of Grandsire Caters had not yet been accomplished on handbells in the metropolis, and bearing in mind their two silent peals, and a peal of Stedman Triples, all in hand—five members met in Pimlico at the residence of Mr. H. R. Newton, on Friday evening, August 17th, and "go" being called, a touch consisting of 1817 changes was rung. They again met on Sunday evening, August 26th, at the St. Stephen's (Westminster) society's meeting-house in Rochester Row, and in 1 hr. and 35 mins. they rang a further touch, consisting of 2807 changes. Mr. J. N. Oxborrow held the watch on this occasion, and there were also present Mr. W. Hovord (Royal Cumberland Youths), and Messrs. E. Duff, J. Reed, and J. Pryor, of the St. Stephen's society, and also promising young "Collegians." Now when to attempt the peal? Wednesday, August 29th, being the twenty-ninth birthday of the secretary of the above society, not a more appropriate day could be found for such an attempt, and accordingly these five persevering "Collegians" met at the St. Paul's meeting-house in the evening of that day. Of course, previous to starting, "9-10" was the recipient of the usual toasts and compliments, passed on such auspicious occasions. At 8 p.m. "go" was called, but alas the fates were against these five "Collegians," for after ringing one part, a mistake occurred, and the Secretary's initial birthday performance was ended. Notwithstanding this, a very pleasant evening was spent. In no wise daunted by their unsuccessful efforts, these still more persevering "Collegians" met again on Friday evening, August 31st, with the result recorded in this week's peal column. For their perseverance and also for their performance, two of these "Youths" consider they ought to receive free admission to an Association which has amongst its ranks certain ringers with a peculiar cognomen known as the "Unattached Esquires."

THE SOCIETY OF COPLEY SCHOLARS, BRADFORD. PRESENTATION TO MR. B. T. COPLEY.

On Saturday, September 8th, the members of this society had a special gathering at Saltaire. It was intended to have commenced the proceedings by a 720 of Bob Minor on the bells at the Congregational Church, to be followed by touches in various methods, but owing to a case of severe illness near the church, this had to be abandoned. The members then viewed the interior of the church, and the mausoleum of the late Sir Titus Salt, and spent a pleasant hour under the trees in the church grounds, and along the grassy slopes leading to the water-side, some of them meanwhile beguiling the time with courses on the handbells, the sound of which was especially pleasing, not only to those assembled in the grounds, but also to a very large number of residents and visitors who were leisurely strolling in the pretty little park across the river. About four o'clock the members, thirty in number, assembled in front of the church, where they were photographed in group by Messrs. Dewhurst and Dobson, of Shipley. This part of the proceedings being got over satisfactorily, an adjournment was made to the Saltaire House Refreshment Rooms, where they found a very substantial and appetising meat tea awaiting them, at which the Captain of the society—Mr. B. T. Copley—was an invited guest. Full justice having been done to the good things provided, a move was made upstairs into the large sitting-room, where the members were joined by several friends, the room being quite full.

Mr. B. T. COPLEY, on taking the chair, opened the proceedings by expressing the pleasure he felt at the large attendance, all the members being present that day except a few who found it impossible to attend, to their own disappointment as well as that of those present. He then referred to the great progress made by the society since its formation in June last, and the improvement which it had effected in the ringing education of its members, particularly the younger ones. He was confident that so long as they continued in the working out of the objects and principles of the society, change-ringing would never depreciate in their district, but, on the other hand, continue to improve, and gain a firmer footing.

The Hon. Sec. (Mr. J. HARDCASTLE, jun.) then read a letter of apology from Mr. W. SNOWDON, President of the Yorkshire Association; and he also stated that Mr. W. WHITAKER, the Hon. Sec. of the Association, who was present during the afternoon, had been compelled to leave owing to business engagements.

Mr. FRED LONDON (vice-chairman) then announced that they had a little business to transact which personally concerned their chairman, and after asking that gentleman's consent to vacate his position for a short time, moved that Mr. J. Broadley should occupy the post.

Mr. GEORGE TITTERINGTON seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. BROADLEY, on complying, said they were met together that day with more than one object. While they had looked forward to having a pleasant outing together, which anticipations had been fully realised; and to the pleasure of being photographed together, as they had been; and to entertain their respected Captain to tea, all of which had been satisfactorily accomplished; there was yet another object which they had in view, namely, to give honour where honour was due. They owed their positions and knowledge as change-ringers to Mr. Copley, and had resolved to show their full appreciation of his labours on their behalf. He regretted his inability to express fully his feelings on the subject, but asked them to take the will for the deed, and called upon

Mr. THOMAS POLLITT, who in the course of a very pithy and interesting speech referred in warm terms to the long period of his friendship for Mr. Copley. They had been boys at school together, they had sung alongside each other in the choir, and when Mr. Copley commenced his career as a bellringer at their old parish church at Bradford in the year 1871, with a young company, all of them totally ignorant of the art, he joined him there also. Like the ringing members of their society, he owed all as a ringer to their old friend, who through good report and evil report, and among all disheartening circumstances, kept on steadily and unwaveringly in his work of promoting the art of change-ringing. Another very pleasing thing also he could not help referring to, namely, the fact that through all their years of friendship not a single unpleasant word had ever passed between them; he believed this was also the case with all of them with regard to Mr. Copley, who as they all knew had spared no time or labour in his work. He was always to his time, caring not for weather or aught else; and in this respect alone he set them a good example to follow. He urged them to follow Mr. Copley's example in another way: that when anyone improved at a swifter rate than the others, he should not idly stand by until the rest overtook him, but should strive to help them on, as their Captain had done before them, so they might thus improve by means of one another.

Mr. HENRY RAISTRICK warmly supported the remarks of the last speaker, and could corroborate him in every particular. His friendship with Mr. Copley dated seventeen years back, and like Mr. Pollitt he could say that their friendship had not been only unbroken, but had strengthened as years rolled on. He was glad to be able to testify to Mr. Copley's abilities and earnest hard work through all those years, and looked forward to a long continuance of that friendship.

At the Chairman's request,

Mr. POLLITT, as the oldest "scholar," then uncovered and presented to Mr. Copley, in the name of them all, a magnificent brass-bound walnut writing desk, completely furnished with the usual stock of articles, and bearing on a plate the following inscription: "Presented to Benjamin Taylor Copley, by all his ringing scholars, 1888." Accompanying this was a "multiplier" copying machine, enclosed in a mahogany case. In doing this, he assured Mr. Copley that all his scholars had subscribed very heartily towards that little token of their regard, and they hoped he would be able to enjoy the use of it for many years to come.

This presentation, which had been kept a profound secret, came with such a surprise that the recipient was unable for some time to reply.

A course of Grandsire Major was then rung upon handbells, and Mr. Titterington charmed the company by his vocal powers.

Mr. B. T. COPLEY, on resuming the chair, was received with cheers. With apparent difficulty he expressed his thanks for the handsome present they had made him. He felt overpowered at this mark of their esteem, and it had come upon him all the more forcibly by reason of its being totally unexpected. Previous to its being placed on the table he had not the remotest idea that anything of the kind had been done, and he trusted they would under the circumstances excuse him if he did not make any lengthened remarks. They could not possibly have made the presentation in any other form so completely acceptable to him; and while thanking them most heartily for their present, and the good feeling which it betokened, he hoped the society would go on and prosper for generations to come.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a very happy fashion; songs being given by Messrs. Sugden and Cottrell, and courses of Minor, Triples, and Major on the handbells by several of the members present.

THE ESSEX ASSOCIATION.

The Report and list of Members for the current year, 1888-9, has been issued. Ringing members of the Association who have not received it should apply to the secretary or foreman of their respective companies; or in the case of "non-resident" members, to myself.

I regret the accidental omission of two well-known names: Mr. G. Newson and Mr. C. F. Winny, both of which, I am glad to say, remain on our books. The name of Mr. A. S. Barrell has also been omitted without reason. Where a member's subscription has remained unpaid for two previous years, it is assumed that he has withdrawn from the Association.

I venture to invite particular attention to the remarks on page 18 of the report with regard to the payment of subscriptions; and to request that all members—and especially those whose subscription for 1887-8 is also in arrear—will forward their subscription for the current year as early as possible.

HOW TO LEARN CHANGE-RINGING WITHOUT AN INSTRUCTOR.—

THE LAST DOOMED CHURCHES OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

The last day of the departed year, as duly notified by advertisement, was the latest on which application might be made by relatives or other representatives for the removal of the remains and memorials of the dead in the church of St. Olave Jewry. This, one of the two parishes to which the provisions of Bishop Tait's Act of 1860 have been last applied, is now amalgamated with St. Margaret's, Lothbury, best known beyond the bounds of the City as that in which the famous "Golden Lecture" is delivered. St. Margaret's now serves ecclesiastically for no fewer than seven civil parishes. The doomed church of St. Olave still stands on the western side of the thoroughfare which has for more than six centuries been known as the Old Jewry, the main artery of a district which must have extended considerably further westward; this appears from the designation of the Church of St. Lawrence Jewry, in the Guildhall-yard. Both these churches were rebuilt after the Great Fire by Sir Christopher Wren, and St. Lawrence, especially its interior, is a fine specimen of the Palladian style. St. Olave's is a very much plainer structure, but its east front is designated as "handsome and effective" by so competent an authority as George Godwin, in his early work, The Churches of London. There are few who need to be informed that the designation "Jewry" indicates the fact that here, in Plantagenet and later days, was the quarter assigned to Hebrews settled in the metropolis. It answered to the Ghetto of Rome and other Italian cities, the Parisian Rue des Juifs, and the Judenstrassen of Berlin, Prague, Strasbourg, and Frankfort. Doubtless many have beheld with interest the quaint old "Rothschild-house," stilled piously preserved in its old proportions and lineaments. But to some of these, as to others, the information may be novel, that even a portion of the Romes, the open space before the adjacent Town Hall of the old capital city of Federated Germany, there was, up till a date comparatively recent, a notification to this effect, "No swine or Jews allowed here!"

Although long before the time of Sheridan the Old Jewry had ceased to be either reserved for or specially favoured by Jews, who voluntarily selected the Houndsditch neighbourhood, we nevertheless find Crabtree in the School for Scandal, in reference to the practise of Charles Surface borrowing money from the Jews, saying, "If the Old Jewry were a ward, I believe Charles would be an alderman." Jewin-street and Jewin-crescent preserve the remembrance, not, as might be supposed, of a considerably further extension of the residential Jewish quarter, but of another given to them in the reign of one of the early Edwards for a burying-place without the City wall.

The hagiological designation of the church and parish points to Olave, or Olaf, Norwegian king and martyr, and commemorates a considerable Scandinavian settlement in the old City in the years immediately preceding the Conquest. This is further emphasised by three other City parishes being dedicated to the same patron saint, as well as a fourth Saint Olave in the civic appanage of Southwark. Tooley-street, in the last-named, preserves another designation under which this exceedingly equivocal Norse saint (whose remains lie under the altar of the metropolitan cathedral at Trondtjem) was familiarly known by his countrymen. Olaf, by the admission of his biographers, a pirate from his twelfth year, was yet a young man when he landed in Kent at the head of a band of marauders and plundered Canterbury, where he slew Elphege, or Alphage, a cleric with less questionable claims to sanctity, and to whom by a truly curious contiguity the adjoining church of St. Alphage, London-wall, is dedicated. The tablets and other memorials of the dead, which, with a solitary exception, present no other than local interest, are to be removed and set up in the church of St. Margaret. The exception is one to the memory of Mr. Alderman Boydell; its inscription records that he was born in 1719, at Donnington Hall, near the village of Woore, in Shropshire. "As an engraver," its proceeds, "he attained considerable eminence in his art; as a printseller, he caused its productions to become a source of commercial benefit to the country and of such profit to himself as to enable him to afford unexampled encouragement to the English school of historical painters, and to form that splendid collection of British art, the Shakespeare Gallery; as a magistrate, the conscientious discharge of his duties earned him the applause of his fellow-citizens; as a man, the singular simplicity of his mind and the pure innocence of his heart gained him the love and esteem of all that knew him; and as a Christian, he worshipped within these walls with exemplary constancy and fervent devotion.

Such was the affectionate and happily-expressed testimony to the personal characteristics and merits of a man who may be truthfully styled a national worthy, a credit at once to the land which produced him and the great City which was the arena of his efforts, vicissitudes, and triumphs. Grandson of a rector of Ashbourne, Derbyshire, a doctor of divinity, and described as "an excellent classic," who took an active part in the training of the future Lord Mayor, his father was a land surveyor, and John was destined to follow the paternal calling. Developing, however, an uncontrollable bent in the direction of art, he left home when just of age, walked to London, and at that unusual time of life apprenticed himself as a copperplate engraver. Having fulfilled the terms of his indenture, except that he purchased out of his savings his freedom at the end of the last stipulated year, he steadily rose in his calling until he became a producer of engraved works of the highest character. His great monument, the famous Shakespeare Gallery, engaged the pencils of Reynolds, Northcote, West, Romney and other artists of lesser repute. In the production of this magnificent design he expended no less than 350,000*l*. Unfortunately, the stoppage of foreign trade in consequence of the outbreak of the great war with France, prevented Boydell from realizing anything like the full fruits of his enterprize. It must, in fact, have proved his ruin, but that Parliament interposed, and granted him the altogether exceptional privilege of disposing of his enormous stock, including all the original paintings, by way of lottery. This re-established his otherwise imperilled fortunes, and the boon was well deserved by one who did more than any other man of his time towards the dissemination of pure and healthy art, and who left English achievement in that field on the road to the excellence which it has attained since. All that was mortal of John Boydell was laid in the vault of St. Olave Jewry.

The parish of St. Mary Magdalene, the church of which stands to the east of Doctors' commons, at the junction of Knight-riders-street with Old Change, has also been recently doomed to absorption with St. Martin, Ludgate. This church also was erected by Sir Christopher. Its doom was precipitated by its all but total destruction by a conflagration which suddenly broke out just before noon on a mid-winter day of 1886. The architectural claims of the edifice were even smaller than those of St. Olave. Godwin briefly dismisses it as "a substantial fabric, surrounded by timber, the whole plain and simple." Two of the rectors of this living, which is in the gift of the Chapter of St. Paul's, have been men of note. One was Hewett, who, accused of being concerned in a plot against Cromwell and the Commonwealth, of all share in which he nevertheless protested his innocence till the last, was beheaded on Tower-hill in 1658. The other was "Ingoldsby" Barham, who, like other incumbents of this living, owed his preferment to the fact of his already being a minor canon of the adjacent metropolitan Cathedral. With the utmost difficulty, and largely owing to the zeal of one of the churchwardens (Mr. Douglass) there was saved from the fire of 1886 the most valuable of the modest treasures of this church, a large picture of the Transfiguration, by Brown, an artist of repute in the reigns of Anne and George I. There perished in the flames a small brass tablet, in the ambulatory at the west end, bearing this inscription:—

"In God the Lord put all your trust,
Repent your former wicked ways,
Elizabeth, our Queen, most just,
Bless her, oh Lord, in all her days;
So Lord, increase good counsellors,
And preachers of His Holy Word.
Mislike of all Papistes' desires;
Oh Lord, cut them off with Thy sword.
How small soever the gifts shall be,
Thank God for him who gave it thee.
Three penny loaves for three poor folks
Give every Sabbath day for aye."

A figure of a man, having underneath the date 1586, stood at the side. This represented the pious donor, Thomas Beare, a merchant of the staple in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. This glorious monarch was herself commemorated in the old church by an effigy, with a subjoined metrical inscription. The lines are vigorous and high-spirited, and this notice of these two last doomed churches of the City, whose burghers proved themselves throughout her lifetime the most staunch and loyal supporters of Queen Bess, could not be better concluded, in a year which marks the centenary of the providential "dissipation" of the Spanish Armada, than by their citation:—

"Here lies her type, who was of late
The prop of Belgia, stay of France,
Spain's foil, Faith's shield, and Queen of state,
Of arms and learning, fate and chance;
In brief, a woman ne'er was seen
So great a Prince, so good a Queen.
Sith virtue her immortal made,
Death (envying all who cannot die)
Her earthly parts did so invade
As in it wrack't self-majesty;
But so her spirits inspired her parts
That she still lives in loyal hearts."

THE REIGATE SOCIETY, SURREY.

On Monday, September 10th, the above Society had their annual outing, the places selected being Guildford and Godalming. Leaving Reigate at 12.15, accompanied by Mr. J. Bashford, sen., of Bletchingley, they were met at Godalming by Messrs. G. Riddle, A. and W. Haigh, and J. Cooper, who had everything in readiness for them at the parish church. The bells were soon set in motion, and a 504 of Grandsire Triples was rung. W. Bone, 1; F. Hoad (conductor), 2; G. Croucher, 3; J. Bashford, 4; E. Moses, 5; W. Argent, 6; E. Kenward, 7; G. Riddle, 8. Also a 209 in the same method. G. Croucher, 1; F. Hoad, 2; J. Cooper, 3; W. Sadler, 4; T. Brown, 5; E. Moses (conductor), 6; A. Haigh, 7; W. Argent, 8. Also 252 Stedman Triples. G. Croucher, 1; F. Hoad (conductor), 2; F. Linter, 3; J. Bashford, 4; W. Argent, 5; E. Moses, 6; E. Kenward, 7; A. Haigh, 8. After having a look round and a parting glass, they proceeded to Guildford. Arriving there, about 5 p.m., they began to think that the inner man wanted a little looking to, so the first thing accomplished was to have a good meat tea. That being completed, a move was made to St. Nicholas Church, where Mr. F. W. J. Rees was in waiting with the bells up ready for them. A start was made for a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples (1260 changes), which was brought round in 47½ mins. G. Croucher, 1; F. Hoad (conductor), 2; J. Bashford, 3; F. W. J. Rees, 4; E. Moses, 5; E. Kenward, 6; W. Argent, 7; J. Howard, 8. Tenor 25 cwt. Another attempt for a touch came to an abrupt termination by the treble rope breaking. On leaving the church a friendly glass was partaken of, and a little vocal harmony. They parted with their friends, and was soon in the train for Reigate, which was reached about 9.40 p.m. Here they parted, each man going to his home well pleased with his outing. Messrs. Riddle, the brothers Haigh and Cooper, belong to Godalming. They wish through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS," to thank the vicars of Godalming and St. Nicholas, Guildford, for the use of the bells, and also the steeplekeepers and ringers at each church for having the bells ready for them, and giving them such a friendly welcome.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROSSENDALE BRANCH.

The next ringing meeting of the Rossendale Branch will take place on Saturday, September 22nd, at St. Thomas's church, Helmshore. Bells ready at 2.30; meeting at 6.30.

J. T. STOTT, Local Sec.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

There will be a meeting of the members of the proposed branch for the Rochdale and Heywood District, on Saturday, September 22nd, at St. Alban's, Rochdale. Bells ready at 2 p.m.; meeting in the schoolroom, Drake Street, at 5 p.m.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"An ounce of fact is worth a ton of theory."

Mr. Editor, for once in my life, I give you credit for pluck. Talk about "massacreing the Innocents," you have done it with a vengeance. The four hundred compositions which you have consigned to the waste paper basket must have made that indispensable editorial adjunct feel much like as if it had been indulging in an extraordinarily good feed—rather crowded in its interior, you know. I don't think it would have been any worse (both for us and the aforesaid waste-paper basket), if you had performed this summary consignment operation long ago. However, now that you have put your foot down, Mr. Editor, I hope you will take the advice of one, even if he is an irresponsible individual, and keep it there.

This page of "original compositions" I have had occasion to refer to two or three times previously, and unfortunately in every instance with regret, because of its far too numerous discreditable features. There can be no doubt about it, that while confidence was being lost in the truth or the originality of what appeared in it, some of the productions have been of a nature to make one feel thoroughly disgusted. Of course, the blame of this can in no way be laid to the Editor; while it would be literally impossible for him to carry out his original intention of examining and proving every composition sent up, it is hardly to be expected that the finances of the proprietors of the paper should be taxed with the engagement of a permanent official to do that which every composer should in common fairness take very particular pains to perform himself.

If this new regulation laid down by the Editor as to each composition having a distinct value of its own, and the proof and originality of each peal or touch be firmly established by every composer—or at least, if every composer honestly uses every endeavour in that direction—before sending such for insertion; although there may be a considerable diminution in quantity, yet the increase in quality will considerably more than make up for it.

Suppose some analysing friend like Mr. Attree were to tabulate and make a report of the compositions of say the past twelve months, as to their musical qualities, their truth, and their originality, what would be the result? Very—very far from creditable, to say the least of it.

As I write, if the arrangements announced on Saturday are carried out, the bells of St. Paul's, Burton-on-Trent, will be swinging to the tune of a 6720 of London Surprise Major. The next time I write, may I be able to congratulate the members of St. Paul's society on their accomplishment of a true and well-struck peal.

I was somewhat surprised to read that the 5039 of Grandsire Caters rung in St. Stephen's school, Westmnsnster, was the first peal in that method in the metropolis on handbells. Perhaps now that the "Ancients" have started the ball rolling, we shall before long find some other society in the "big smoke" beating, or attempting to beat this record.

Kent Treble Bob appears to be making its way in the south, which I do not wonder at. To those who have been accustomed to confining their efforts in the direction of that interminable Grandsire, this method will, I imagine, come as a welcome change in the programme, and if well rung, delight both ringers and listeners who have hitherto studiously kept the tenor from getting out of its own place behind.

That is a serious charge which is brought by Dr. Jessop against the church authorities of Cossey, and if correct in all its particulars, will doubtless lead to trouble for somebody. I am no stickler for the preservation of ancient buildings, merely on account of their antiquity, particularly when they become dangerous through decay; but in the case of our old parish churches, I maintain that wherever restoration is needed in these venerable buildings, which are without doubt the pride of our land, such work ought to be carried out in strict conformity with the original lines of the edifice thus restored. To pull down an ancient and architecturally-beautiful structure and replace it with an erection of some modern Jack-in-the-box style of building, and then call the proceeding restoration, is to my mind a gross abuse of terms. Such abominable work should be condemned not only by antiquarians, but by every lover of the Church, and every man who has any feeling of pride for his old country.

I may be asked, how does this matter affect us as ringers? To this I answer, that it concerns us in a particular degree. Our own particular portion of the church is specially necessary to be of a strong and well-built character. Our old towers as a rule have been built by our forefathers with that object in view: but how often do we find the reverse to be the case in more modern campaniles? How often do we see evidences of gross incapacity on the part of architects of the present day in designing towers intended for the reception of bells? Then I say that we as ringers, ought to be watchful of our towers. If we should find in any of our parishes that "modernising" spirit abroad which looks askance at the venerable old church and tower because may be it appears heavy and ponderous, and not in accordance with namby-pamby æsthetic notions of elegance; should such sentiments ripen into active efforts to "restore" it, we shall be grievously lacking in our duty if we do not strive by every means in our power to prevent the old and substantial building being substituted by a gimcrack pile of bricks and (substitute for) mortar, with perhaps a thin veneering of stone. This is no mere fancy picture. Such has been done in too many places already; and without careful watching will be done again. How many rings throughout the country are silent through this cause? In how many of these "restored" churches have the bells been compelled to cease their ringing because of these defects of construction through the ignorance of architects and builders? Then I say, we have need as ringers to be ever watchful and see that the modern Vandal does not attack our habitation; or if this rebuilding is finally determined upon, that the new erection is structurally fitted for the purpose for which it is, or should be, put up.

"A very pleasant fellow, by the bye, and eager to increase his knowledge of the science." Such is the character given of one of our brethren whom I had occasion to address somewhat plainly—perhaps more plainly than was agreeable—the other week. Nevertheless, I was right glad to read it. We have, happily, amongst us many such "pleasant fellows" who are, like "Plain Bob," eager to increase their knowledge. My own personal acquaintance, I am proud to say, includes a goodly number of them. On the older members of our craft, then, rests the responsibility of imparting to these younger ones that information which they seek. It is the bounden duty of the seniors to watch over their younger brethren, to help them on their path of learning by every means in their power, that they may not be lost to the Exercise, but on the other hand increase in knowledge and in excellence as ringers, so that the rising generation may at the very least equal in the future the exploits of their predecessors. I am happy in being able to say of myself without egotism that no young ringer ever applied to me in vain for any help or information which it was in my power to give him; and if there be any such who are so unfortunately situated as not to be within reach of that practical teaching which none but an old practitioner can give, or are searching for information whereby "to increase their knowledge of the science," they will not be disappointed if they ask for it from your humble servant,

FREE LANCE.

THE SOCIETY OF ROYAL CUMBERLAND YOUTHS.

In accordance with a notice in this paper a fortnight ago, the annual meeting and election of officers took place at headquarters on Friday evening, September 7th, in the absence of several old and otherwise noted members. The balance sheet was passed as read unanimously. Mr. George Wild was elected to the office of junior steward, and Mr. Daniel Lovett, by virtue of his previous office, becomes senior steward in the place of Mr. Albert E. Church, who, per rota, goes out of office, having completed his term of two years' duration.

A contest took place as to the choice of a Master for the ensuing year, which was decided in favour of the Master, Mr. James Hannington, retaining the office, and those who would delight in honouring the steeplekeeper of the Royal parish church, Mr. J. Mansfield, by electing him to that exalted position, cheerfully agreed to await yet another year. The Treasurer (Mr. W. Baron), and the Secretary were each re-elected to serve in the same offices as heretofore, and a hearty and cordial vote of thanks were given to officers for past services. Other routine business being disposed of, the most interesting to members assembled was brought forward.

A few months ago it will be remembered by your readers, although escaping the eye of your able correspondent of the period, that eight members of this society scored an extraordinary performance in the art of ringing viz., a peal of Cambridge Surprise. Of course we all know such performances are somewhat common in parts of the country of late. We know also that peals in Surprise methods have previously been accomplished in and near London, although not recently, but it is over one hundred years ago since a London band of ringers engaged in the intricacies of Cambridge, and that being so, this society decided on Friday night upon the form and inscription of a tablet intended to record this meritorious performance, and adorn the walls of the meeting-room in future, and hopes are entertained that that record may again be beaten by some enterprising members.

H. DAINS, Hon. Sec.

On Saturday week, at the parish church of Coston, Leicestershire, Bishop Mitchinson dedicated a new reredos of carved oak in memory of the Hon. and Rev. John Sandilands (formerly rector) and his wife, given by their children; and a new altar and altar rails in memory of the Hon. F. R. Sandilands, Commander R.N., the former given by his widow, and the latter by his brothers and sisters. A new tenor bell, in memory of the late Mrs. Rendell, wife of the present rector, was dedicated, the two original bells having been rehung and the belfry thoroughly put in order. The new bell was cast by Taylor and Co., of Loughborough, who also put up the new frames.

Correspondence.

[While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.]

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

A REPLY AND AN INQUIRY.

SIR,—In reply to "Amphibalus," re tenor at St. Peter's church, St. Albans, allow me to inform him that the diameter as given by the Rev. W. C. Lukis is 49½ inches. Your correspondent, E. P. Debenham, quoting from Stahltschmidt's work, says 50 inches. Assuming the latter to be correct, the weight could not exceed 21 cwt. In answer to "Grandsire Bob," re King's Sutton bells, the late Mr. North in his "Church Bells of Northants," gives particulars from which it appears that they were originally a peal of six:—Treble by Henry Bagley, 1722; Second—an ancient "Ave Maria" bell; Third and Fourth by James Keene, 1626; Fifth by Michael Darbie, 1655; Tenor by Bartholomew Attun, 1602. The two trebles were added by Briant, of Hertford, in 1793, making a peal of eight. Unfortunately Mr. North does not give either the diameter or weight of the tenor. As to steel bells, "Free Lance" has said all I could have done as to their merits (?) although I can scarcely agree with him in saying that tubes are better in a musical point of view. Having replied to these two correspondents, I should now like to ask for some information myself, viz., for the particulars and inscriptions on the bells of the following London churches:—St. Leonard, Shoreditch; St. Margaret, Westminster; St. Giles-in-the-Fields; St. Catherine Cree, Leadenhall Street; St. Olave, Hart Street; and St. Lawrence, Jewry. Also can anyone tell me the full inscription on the tenor at St. Saviour's, Southwark (I have all the inscriptions on the other bells there). Information as to any of the above would oblige me greatly.

J. R. JERRAM.

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—The peal of Bob Triples, which appeared by me in last week's "BELL NEWS," should read "the least number of calls a peal has been published in six parts."

GEORGE HAYWARD.

FALSE PEALS.

SIR,—The peal of Superlative Surprise in your issue of August 18th, and the peal of Stedman Cinques in the issue of the 25th ult., by me are both false. I tender my apologies to the Exercise, and also to yourself, for thus trespassing on your space.

JOHN R. PRITCHARD,
40 Lowther Street, Liverpool.

"USING THE PROPERTY OF OTHERS."

SIR,—I noticed in your composition page of last week's "BELL NEWS," a peal of Bob Triples by Mr. G. Hayward, of Bromsgrove. I wish to tell him that the peal was rung at St. Mary's church, Titchmarsh, for the first time on Whit-Monday, June 14th, 1886, composed by me, and conducted by Mr. C. W. Clarke, of Bedford. The only difference between them is that you have to use bobs at the w's in the fifth and tenth courses in each part, and I have used singles. But the peal was not published in "THE BELL NEWS" at the time it was rung, but it was published in Church Bells, so if Mr. Hayward will write to me privately, I will send him a peal card of it being rung, and the peal itself.

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR,—I have either read somewhere or been told a story to the effect that some time last century, or, it may be, the century before, all the ringers in a certain 5000 performed in London were noblemen, and that after the peal was finished they all drove away in their carriages and pair. I am not sure it was not their coaches and four. I shall be much obliged if any of your numerous readers could enlighten me, and say whether there is any truth in the story or is it a pure myth?

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1888.

In another column the Secretary of the Essex Association makes a request to the members of that body which certainly ought not to be required. We are sorry to say that such request does not possess by any means the charm of novelty. Unfortunately there is nothing new in the fact that a secretary has almost to implore backward and dilatory members to pay their quota towards the funds. Anyone would be apt to think from these continued appeals for some regularity in payment, that the subscription was a large amount, and necessitated the practice of self-denial in a great degree. But this is not so, as is well known. The real cause of the evil is neglect—neglect however which is totally inexcusable. It should constantly be remembered by the members of County and other Associations that the duties of their Hon. Secretaries are most arduous, and sometimes calculated to disturb the most serene of tempers. They should therefore be careful to discourage in every possible way anything which may have a tendency to create additional work for those gentlemen who regard it as a labour of love to serve them.

We have felt it our duty to allude to this matter more than once. The neglect to pay at the proper time the small contribution necessary for carrying on the concern, seems pitiable in the extreme, and bordering on meanness. It is necessary to get rid of this reproach. There is no hesitation in taking advantage of any boon the Associations offer, therefore there should be no backwardness in meeting their necessary but modest demands with promptitude. We could say a deal more on the matter, but we forbear, lest our observations should become more pointed than kindly. We hope this is the last occasion that it will be necessary to revert to it.

TIPTON, STAFFORDSHIRE.

On Saturday, September 1st, 1888, the St. Martin's Society of Tipton had their annual outing, Hanbury, Worcestershire, a village a few miles from Bromsgrove, being the place selected. A start from the church was made at 7.45 a.m. in a waggonette, a few of the ringers taking their wives with them. The route taken was through Oldbury, Harborne, and Selly Oak, each church containing a peal of eight, and through the famous Lickey Hills, reaching Bromsgrove at 10 o'clock, where they were met by several of the local ringers. A short stay was made at this place for refreshments and to give the horses a rest. They were here joined by Mr. H. Martin, of Bellbroughton, and Mr. G. Hayward, of Bromsgrove, and Hanbury was reached at 11.30, after a beautiful ride away from the black country smoke. Reaching the church of St. Mary the Virgin, permission having been previously obtained from the Rector, the Rev. C. W. N. Ogilvy, to ring, they were met by Mr. A. Moore with the keys, and a touch of 1008 Bob Major was rung. Alfred Moore, 1; George Hayward, 2; Harry Mills, 3; Edward Goodreds, 4; Henry Martin, 5; Samuel Jesson, 6; George Hughes (conductor), 7; William R. Small, 8. Afterwards some of the party betook themselves to the top of the tower, where a splendid view of the country for miles around was obtained, the church standing on the top of a high hill. A stroll to the village through the fields brought them to the "Compasses" inn, and a few courses were rung on the handbells. Ample justice having been done to a good knife and fork tea the company again adjourned to the tower and rang 504 Grandsire Triples. H. Martin, 1; E. Goodreds, 2; G. Hayward (conductor), 3; H. Mills, 4; A. H. Hill, 5; S. Jesson, 6; G. Hughes, 7; A. Moore, 8. Falling the bells, which are a nice peal, tenor about 14 cwt the party got on the road again calling once more at Bromsgrove, and rung two courses of Plain Bob Royal. E. Crump, 1; E. Goodreds, 2; H. Mills, 3; O. James, 4; A. H. Hill, 5; S. Jesson, 6; G. Hughes, 7; W. R. Small, 8; H. Martin, 9; W. Rea, 10. And a course of Grandsire Caters, with G. Hayward ringing the 4th. Taking a farewell of their Bromsgrove friends they started again on the road, and arrived home at a good hour after a day's enjoyment and pleasure.

ST. SEPULCHRE, SNOW HILL.

Apropos of your article on the tolling of the bell at St. Sepulchre's for executions, allow me to add the following remarks. St. Sepulchre's tower contains a ring of ten bells, tenor 32 cwt. All were originally cast by Samuel Knight, of Reading (afterwards of St. Andrew's parish, Holborn), in 1739. The treble was recast by Thomas Mears, sen., in 1807, and the seventh by him in 1804. The sixth was recast by Thomas Mears, jun. in 1830, as was also the tenor, which is thus inscribed: "T. Mears of London fecit. Joseph Hearn, Thos. Henry Fenton and Charles Thos. Dupree, churchwardens. Recast 1830." Of the remaining bells of Knight's, the second is un-inscribed; the third, fourth, fifth and eighth have simply "S X K X 1739" on them. The ninth has this record: "Samuel Knight cast us all, and Robert Catlin made the frame and hung us all, 1739."

Tablets in the belfry record the following performances: 5200 Oxford Treble Bob Royal by Society of Eastern Scholars, April 7th, 1741. Also on May 30th, 1741, 5000 Union Bob Royal, by College Youths. Below this tablet is:—

"When merits justly due, a little praise then serveth;
A good peal needs no frame, a bad one none deserveth."

Other tablets record 5111 Grandsire Caters, by Junior Cumberlanders, December 10th, 1793; and 5056 Stedman Caters, by the St. James's Society, January 24th, 1857. J. R. J.

BRISTOL CATHEDRAL.

The committee which is collecting funds for the restoration of the Bristol bishopric has issued a report showing that nearly two-thirds of the whole amount required has been subscribed or promised. The total so far amounts to upwards of £40,000, this sum including an anonymous donation of £10,000. The church-women's branch has subscribed more than £2,000, and £1,000 has been realised as interest on investments. The committee make an earnest appeal for additional subscriptions.

ST. PETER'S NEW CHURCH, WOOTON, NEAR LIVERPOOL.

On Saturday afternoon, September 8th, the members of St. Peter's cathedral church, Liverpool, by the kind invitation of A. S. Mather, Esq., churchwarden, had the pleasure of trying the new ring of eight, tenor one ton, cast by Messrs. Taylor and Co., of Loughborough, when touches of Grandsire, Stedman, and Treble Bob Major were rung. Great credit is due to the founders for the excellent manner in which they have done their work, the "go" of the bells being everything that can be desired, and the tone of them is much admired by the parishioners. The following members were present: Richard Williams, Robert Williams, Charles Williams, Henry Meadows, Edwin Booth, William Booth, John Brown, Thomas Hammond, William Woodhead, and Richard Diggle. These bells are now silent until the Harvest Festival, early in October. A young company has been formed, and Mr. Robert Williams appointed instructor. After partaking of refreshments at the "Elephant" hotel, the company strolled through the lanes to the ancient parish church of Childwall, and rang on the grand peal of six a 720 of Treble Bob Minor, in 28 mins. R. Williams, 1; E. Booth, 2; C. Williams, 3; W. Booth (conductor), 4; J. Brown, 3; T. Hammond, 6. After an hour's enjoyment at the old Abbey the company wended their way home, all highly pleased with their outing.

VISIT OF THE ST. MARGARET'S (KING'S LYNN) SOCIETY TO CROMER ST. PETER'S.

On Saturday, September 8th, eight members of this Society, with their respected captain, Mr. George Holland, paid a visit to this lovely little town, for the purpose of having a ring on Cromer's musical bells. The party reached Cromer at 2.45. They were met at the station by Mr. W. Lee, late captain of the St. Nicholas' company, Yarmouth, and after a stroll on the beach and refreshing the inner man the party rang a 720 of Bob Minor (thirty-bobs and two singles). W. Brown, 1; E. Lockwood (aged 79 years), 2; W. Lee (conductor), 3; J. Dodman, 4; W. G. Cross, 5; G. Holland, 6. The two last-named are members of the Eastern Counties Guild. Tenor 12½ cwt. in G. Several touches of Treble Bob Minor were also rung, assisted by Messrs. W. Curston, T. Giles and W. Crome, who rang the 4th bell in turns. The company then left the tower, and after bidding good-bye to their old and esteemed friend, Mr. Lee, whom they hope to see shortly and to always welcome at Lynn, proceeded to the station, reaching Lynn at 10 p.m., after having thoroughly enjoyed their outing. Several touches of Treble Bob Major and Bob Major were rung on the handbells both going to Cromer and also on the return journey. The company take this opportunity of thanking the Rev. F. Fitch, Vicar, for the use of the bells, and also the steeplekeeper, for having the bells raised and ready for ringing.

WORCESTER AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.

A ringing meeting of this Association will be held at Clent, near Stourbridge, on Saturday, September 22nd, 1888, to which all members and ringing friends are invited. The tower of St. Leonard's, Clent (six bells), and St. John's, Hagley (eight bells) will be open for ringing, through the kindness of the Vicar and Rector respectively. Tea will be provided at a reasonable price at "Fair View," Adam's Hill, Clent, for all who wish to partake of same. Members to take this as sufficient notice.

This peal contains the whole of the changes of the 4th, 5th, and 6th in 5-6, and is obtained by the use of only three bobs home with the 6th in that position. Like other peals of its class, if the home bobs bracketed are omitted, this peal is reduced to 5152 changes. By calling a before in the thirteenth course, the seventeenth course-end of the original peal is brought up, and a peal of 5056 changes is obtained. Again, by calling a before in the 4th course, the 8th course-end of the original peal is brought up, and another peal of 5056 changes is obtained, and in this latter case the whole of the changes with the 6th at home is retained. It is also noteworthy that the 2nd and 3rd are never in 6ths place at course-ends in either peal.

EXCURSION TO THE MIDLAND COUNTIES.

On Saturday, August 18th, Messrs. G. Newson and A. Jacob, two well-known prominent members of the Society of Royal Cumberlands, paid a visit to Burton-on-Trent. Mr. Jacob thus describes the incidents of the tour:—

"Arriving at Burton we soon made our way to the residence of Mr. W. Wakley, and were fortunate enough to find that gentleman at home. We were soon having a chat together over the tea-table, and after tea we very quickly got into the company of the noted Burton ringers. At 10.25 on Sunday morning we met at St. Paul's, and rang a touch of Superlative Surprise. In the evening, for Divine Service, we rung a touch of London Surprise, and also a touch of Cambridge Surprise in the Burton variation. On Monday morning Mr. J. Griffin escorted us to several of the most interesting places in the neighbourhood. In the evening an attempt was made for a peal of Superlative, but it unfortunately came to grief after ringing 80 minutes. A touch of London Surprise was then rung. Tuesday morning we took train for Derby, and having arrived there we soon found the church of All Saints, whose tower I should think is one of the finest in Derbyshire. We were not able to ring on the fine peal of ten, so we walked on to Duffield, the way there being through a splendid part of the county. Arriving there we were much disappointed to find that the Squire was from home, but we must take this opportunity of thanking Mr. Heywood for his kindness in providing a guide to show us over the grounds, and point out the interesting features of his estate. In the evening an attempt was made for a peal of Stedman Triples, but after ringing beyond midway, it came to grief.

"On Wednesday morning we returned to Derby by another road, and booked from thence to Barrow-on-Soar, that station being the nearest to Quorndon, where Messrs. Taylor and Son, the well-known bellfounders of Loughborough, and their men, welcomed us into the village by a touch on the back six. All being ready on our arrival in the tower, we were soon in the depths of a peal of Treble Bob Major, which was successfully brought round, and duly published in our own paper. Leaving Quorndon Mr. J. W. Taylor drove us to Loughborough, and we were soon ringing on the grand peal of ten at All Saints' church, a peal of Stedman Caters being accomplished in 3 hrs. 22 mins., the second peal we had rung the same afternoon. The company then adjourned to the "Bull's Head" hotel, being invited to supper thereto by J. Cartwright Esq. (Churchwarden) in honour of his wedding. The usual loyal, patriotic, and complimentary toasts having been satisfactorily disposed of, Mr. J. W. Taylor, jun., proposed "The Health of Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright" in felicitous and appropriate terms. This toast being heartily drunk, Mr. Cartwright in responding said that the hearty manner in which the toast had been received gave him much pleasure. Although not a ringer himself, it always pleased him to be in their company. He should be glad to do all in his power for the benefit of their art. He then proposed "The Visitors," which was responded to by Mr. Newson. The remainder of the evening was spent in pleasant harmony. I may add that Mr. Cartwright has promised a peal-tablet to record the peal of Stedman Caters.

"On Thursday morning we visited the bellfoundry of Messrs. Taylor, and were much interested in all we saw. Mr. Taylor had kindly arranged for a day's ringing at Leicester, and we enjoyed a ten-miles drive to that town from Loughborough. Arriving at Leicester our first pull was at St. Saviour's, a nice peal of eight bells, tenor 26 cwt. From here we went to St. Mark's, a peal of eight, tenor 23 cwt., and thence to St. Margaret's, a peal of ten, tenor 30 cwt. From Leicester we went to Belgrade, and assisted at the opening of a peal of bells, tenor 14 cwt., augmented to eight by Messrs. Taylor and Son. Here touches of Treble Bob Major and Grandsire and Stedman Triples brought our ringing to a close. We wish to thank the clergy of the various churches for their kindness in granting permission to ring, and also all those gentlemen who so kindly assisted to make our outing so enjoyable."

THE ST. STEPHEN'S SOCIETY, WESTMINSTER.

The members of the above Society held their second annual outing at Beddington, on Saturday last, September 8th, when, being favoured with fine weather, a very enjoyable afternoon was spent. About 2.45 p.m. the following members met at Victoria Station and journeyed to Beddington: Messrs. Newton (Master), J. M. Hayes, Oxborrow, Willshire, Pryor, Ellis, H. S. Ellis, Duff, McLaughlin, and Gohns (Secretary), where they were met by Mr. Mash (St. Saviour's, Southwark), R. T. Woodley, Dr. Carpenter and Mr. Russell (Croydon), Messrs. J. Plow and Trappitt, and a strong contingent of the St. Mary's Society. After ringing several touches of Grandsire Triples and Stedman Caters, an adjournment was made to the "Plough," and nineteen members and friends sat down to tea, under the presidency of Mr. Newton, Mr. Gohns occupying the vice-chair.

After tea, and before re-assembling at the tower for another touch, a very pleasant ceremony had to be performed, viz.: the presentation of a massive gold pin, bell-shape, and engraved with a suitable inscription (subscribed for by the members) to Mr. J. M. Hayes, "as a slight token of their friendship, and as a mark of their appreciation of his valuable services and advice as instructor to the Society."

Mr. GOHNS, after roughly sketching, for the benefit of the uninitiated, the causes which led to this pleasant ceremony, called upon Mr. Newton, on behalf of the Society, to make the presentation.

Mr. HAYES, in a few well-chosen sentences, thanked the members for their kind present, which had taken him completely by surprise, and for the kind feeling which had prompted it, and assured them of the pleasure it afforded him to know the respect and friendship in which he was held by the members, and, as they well knew, his services were always at their disposal to promote the interests of the Society.

After the presentation three more touches were rung, and a very enjoyable concert, in which the following gentlemen took part, brought the evening to a close. Songs were sung by Messrs. Pryor, Trappitt, Duff, Woodley, Gordon, Russell, Newton, and Mash. A touch of Grandsire Caters was rung on the handbells by Messrs. — Oxborrow, 1-2; — Newton, 3-4; — McLaughlin, 5-6; J. M. Hayes, 7-8; H. Ellis, 9-10. And a touch of Grandsire Triples by members of the St. Mary's Society. The health of the visitors was proposed by Mr. Gohns, coupled with the name of Dr. Carpenter.

Dr. CARPENTER, in reply, assured the members, on behalf of the visitors and himself, the pleasure it had afforded them to be present on that occasion, and the very pleasant evening they had spent together.

DEDICATION OF PIPE-CUM-LYDE BELLS.

A very interesting service was held at the Church of St. Peter, Pipe-cum-Lyde, on Friday, September 14th, when the bells, which have been recently placed in position in the tower, were solemnly dedicated to their office. There were originally four bells, which having long been in use had become worn and ill-toned, and those have been renovated, re-tuned, and fitted with new clappers and apparatus for ringing. Two new bells have been supplied: these first of these, the treble, being given by a former vicar, the Rev. Preb. F. T. Havergal, in memory of his sister, Miss M. V. G. Havergal, sister of the well-known writer of sacred poetry, &c., to whose memory Mr. Havergal has dedicated a bell in the church of his present parish of Upton Bishop. The tenor bell bears the inscription, in old English characters—

In Memoriam; M. V. G. H., A. D., 1817, D. D.
Francis T. Havergal, Vicar, 1861—1874.

The second bell was partly intended as a memorial of Her Majesty's Jubilee, and bears in plain modern letters—

"Gloria in excelsis Deo."
Victoria, 1887.
James Brown, Vicar.
J. Bosley, } Churchwardens.
W. Jay, }
Jubilate.

The total cost of the bells was £207 10s. 6d., towards which £185 11s. 2d. had been received, leaving a balance of £21 19s. 4d. to be obtained. The new bells were cast by Messrs. Mears and Stainbank, of the Whitechapel foundry. At the service on Friday £8 10s. 7d. was collected, which further reduced the debt. For this special service the church had been profusely decorated. The pulpit was showy with an elaborate arrangement of geraniums, marguerites and ferns; the steps behind, which led to the gallery now taken down, were covered with the feathery foliage of asparagus and spikes of scarlet gladioli and rushes. The chancel was decked with ferns, marguerites, and sunflowers, and the bases of the windows were decorated in the same way. The font was filled with beautiful white water lilies, and tastefully arranged round it were mosses and ferns, with coloured foliage and white Japanese anemones. The clergy present were: The Lord Bishop, the Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Hereford, the Rev. J. Brown (vicar), the Revs. R. Muckleston, R.D. (Dinedor), W. D. V. Duncombe (Custos of the College, Hereford), H. St. John (Dinmore), G. W. Voysey (Wellington), Donald Tait (Trowbridge), R. Powell (Withington), Preb. F. T. Havergal (Upton Bishop), C. H. Taylor (Moreton), T. H. Clutton-Brock (Marden), and J. Morgan (Holmer). The vicar had also received letters expressing regret for unavoidable absence from other clergy. The first part of the prayers was intoned by the Rev. J. Brown, the vicar, and the second part by the Rev. Preb. F. T. Havergal. The first lesson, from Numbers 10th chap., 1st to 10th verses, was read by the Dean, and the second, Rev. 5th chap., 8th verse, by the Rev. R. Muckleston. The psalms were 81, 148, 149, and 150, and after the third collect a hymn, appropriate to the occasion, commencing was sung with evident appreciation by the congregation. After this, the Bishop walked to the west end of the church—where, under the tower were the ringers—and read several prayers referring to the mission of the bells in calling to prayer, and announcing marriages and deaths, and asking for grace for the ringers. At the close of these supplications a short touch was rung on the bells, and the Bishop then ascended the pulpit. His Lordship preached a most interesting and edifying sermon from exodus. chapter 39, verse 43, "And Moses looked upon all the work, and behold they had done it; as the Lord commanded them even so had they done it, and Moses blessed them." This was in reference to the building of the tabernacle, and his lordship pointed out the marvellous amount of detail put before them as to the materials used in its erection. There was to be nothing common or second-rate used. From this he thought it likely that the late Bishop Wordsworth was quite right in considering that it was meant as a lesson to us as to how we should treat the houses of God, their services, and all connected with them. He had come amongst them that afternoon to rejoice with them on the completion of the work they had in hand, a work which was begun in faith, carried on in prayer, and completed with thankfulness to Him who had inspired them with a desire to glorify his house, and consecrated that day by the high office of thanksgiving and praise. In that service there was nothing superstitious. Time was in England when, as now in countries where less pure forms of Christianity prevailed, on such an occasion as that an elaborate ceremony would be used. The bells would be consecrated, anointed, and baptised with the name of some saints, and blessed by the bishop. But it was good that some public acknowledgment of that addition to the church should be made, some solemn dedication to God of these bells, something to remind them that they were church bells, and therefore not to be thoughtlessly employed. The Bishop, in the course of his sermon, gave an eloquent description of the various uses of the bells. Taking the inscription on the mouths of the bells at Strasburg, now familiar to all our readers, he spoke of the mission of the bells in each of these duties, dwelling with feeling on the associations called up by the passing bell. He exhorted the ringers to remember that when they rang they were engaged in a religious duty, and concluded by speaking of the sweetness of the sound of a peal of bells. The service concluded with hymn 303 A. & M., "When morning gilds the skies."

"Now, at length, our bells are mounted,"

THE DEVONPORT BRANCH OF THE DEVONSHIRE GUILD.

This Society, which was re-organised about five months ago, had its first annual outing on Saturday, September 8th, the place selected being Tavistock. All bands in union with this Guild are enabled to enjoy an outing every year, their travelling expenses being paid out of the funds of the Guild. The Hon. Secretary of the Guild (the Hon. and Rev. J. S. Northcote) having obtained the permission of the Vicar of Tavistock to ring, the party proceeded thither at 2.0 p.m. by South Western railway. Arriving at their destination, the first business was to place themselves under the hands of Mr. Allsford, one of their members, to be photographed in group. This was effectively done in front of the church porch. The ringing-chamber being gained, a touch of Grandsire Triples, 210 changes, was rung to try the bells. They are a splendid peal of eight, and go very fairly, in fact with two at the tenor (which weighs 28 cwt.) they are pealable. A start was then made for a quarter-peal in the same method by E. Cross, 1; G. Broderick, 2; A. Richards, 3; J. Steed, 4; W. Marsh (conductor), 5; W. Pine, 6; J. Eastabrook, 7; W. Condy, 8; but after ringing 840 changes, a mistake occurred. Another attempt was then made, and a "shift" again happened after 600 had been rung. A move was then made to the Temperance Hotel, where "high tea" had previously been ordered. Arriving there, and host Sheppard having got everything in readiness, "go" was called, and a capital start was made, the changes being well struck for at least half-an-hour, but whether the guests found the metal too heavy for them, or the oil (in the form of Devonshire cream) became too cloggy, cannot, says our deponent, be correctly ascertained, but it is a fact that at that period they began to look terribly fagged, and came to a sudden stop without the conductor calling "stand." A retreat was then made to the tower, where 420 of Grandsire Triples was rung, with Private E. Bampton, O.S.C. at the treble, E. Hendry, 3; A. Richards, 7. Then some call-changes by the juniors—Messrs. Manning, Allsford, Murch, C. Richards, Friend, and Batten. The local ringers being then assembled, the Devonport secretary handed to them copies of the annual reports of the Guild, given him for that purpose by the Hon. and Rev. J. S. Northcote. He urged them and also the Whitchurch band (a tower one-and-a-half miles from Tavistock) to join the Guild. An early train was then taken advantage of by the party, who arrived home at 10.0 p.m., great satisfaction being felt at the result of the first outing of the Devonport branch of the Devonshire Guild.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROSSENDALE BRANCH.

The next ringing meeting of the Rossendale Branch will take place on Saturday, September 22nd, at St. Thomas's church, Helmshore. Bells ready at 2.30; meeting at 6.30.

J. T. STOTT, Local Sec.

FINEDON CHURCH BELLS, NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

Finedon Feast has come round once more, and the ringers, as usual, announced the entry upon "Feast Sunday" with well-struck peals on the church bells. A few particulars concerning the bells may perhaps prove interesting. The musical ring of six now hanging in the beautiful tower of the church of St. Mary, were recast from the ancient bells in the year 1825, the tenor being again recast fifty years later. The old tenor weighed 19 cwt., but the present fine-toned bell weighs 24 cwt., and is full heavy for the front bells; it would make an excellent "cover" for a peal of eight or ten. Formerly the bells hung in two frames, but they are now placed all together in the bell-chamber proper. Below are the inscriptions as given in North's "Church Bells of Northamptonshire":—

Treble.—Ex dono Gilbert Dolben Armiger, 1688. Recast 1825. Call a solemn assembly. W. and J. Taylor, Founders, Oxford. Thomas Boddington and Peter Smith, Churchwardens. Diameter 34 in.

Second.—Holiness unto the Lord. Recast by W. and J. Taylor, Oxford, 1825. Thomas Boddington and Peter Smith, Churchwardens. Diameter 36 in.

Third.—Praise God upon the high sounding cymbals. Recast by W. and J. T., Oxon, 1825. T. Boddington and P. Smith, Ch. Ws. Diameter 39 in.

Fourth.—A voice from the Temple, a voice of the Lord. Rev. S. W. Paul, Vicar, Richard Vincent and Vincent Bailey, Churchwardens, 1779. Recast 1825. Diameter 40 in.

Fifth.—As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall be made alive. Cast by Watts, of Leicester, 1639, and recast by W. and J. Taylor, Oxford, 1825. Diameter 41½ in.

Tenor.—Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. This Bell cast by John Taylor and Co., 1875. Mrs. Mackworth Dolben, Lady of the Manor. Revd. G. W. Paul, Vicar. John Hawkes, Willm. Lea Hill, Ch. Wardens. Date of original Tenor Bell, 1613. Diameter 51 in.

These bells come very close in weight to the rings of six at Higham Ferrers and Middleton Cheney, but run rather lighter on the whole.

It is worthy of note that "Watts of Leicester," founder of the fifth bell, 1639, also cast Wellingborough "Great Bell" that same year.

Wellingborough Parish Church Ringers visited Finedon recently, and were much pleased with the "go" of the bells, the capital ropes, and the general tidiness and comfort of the ringing-room. The ropes of two of the bells pass over rollers, just above the ceiling, which makes a considerable rattle, rather annoying to strangers. Suitable oak blocks with sloped sides would be quite as effective and much less noisy.

On the South wall of the Belfry is a Tablet recording the ringing of 3000 changes and a Royal Salute on Thanksgiving Day, February 27th, 1872.

On the opposite side are portions of the old plaster inscribed with various names (enclosed in ornamented borders) of ringers, &c., of bygone days. In one case six names are given, concluding with that of the sexton and the date, 1636, which would lead one to infer that Finedon possessed a peal of six at that time.

The old custom of ringing a "Restoration Peal" is still kept up at Finedon; the bells being always rung half-muffled on the 29th of May.

The new Lych Gate at the entrance of the churchyard is designed in the Late Perpendicular period in strict accordance with ancient examples. It is built with English oak, and covered with ornamental tiles, surmounted on top with a gilt iron cross, and stands on a base of ironstone of substantial character with folding oak gates, the upper panels of which are filled in with ornamental ironwork. There is a side gate to match leading to the public path through the churchyard. In the spandrels of the arch are carved the arms of the Diocese of Peterborough, the Bishop of Peterborough, and the Rector. An inscription on the front beam tells us that "This Lych Gate was erected to the Glory of God, anno domini, 1888." The whole of the works have been most admirably carried out by Mr. George Henson, from designs, and under the superintendence of Messrs. Talbot-Brown and Fisher, architects, Wellingborough.

RINGERS' OUTING.

ON Saturday, September 15th, the Speldhurst branch of the Kent County Association visited St. Nicholas church, Sevenoaks. Starting from home at 2.30 p.m. in a splendid brake supplied by Mr. Hardwick, after a beautiful ride of 2 hrs. 15 mins., Sevenoaks was reached, where all preparations were made for the visit, and being met at the church by Mr. W. Ashdown, captain of the Sevenoaks team, who conducted them to the "Bricklayers Arms," where refreshments were partaken of, being much needed after the ride. From thence to the belfry (ringing not being able to commence before 5.30, owing to a short service), where a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples was rung in 55 mins. G. Card, 1; J. Baker, 2; J. Maynard, 3; G. Turley, 4; Frank Still, 5; F. Still, jun. (conductor), 6; C. Chapman, 7; H. Edwards, 8. Tenor 22 cwt. Also a touch of Major. H. Edwards, 1; J. Baker, 2; J. Maynard, 3; G. Turley, 4; F. Still, sen., 5; F. Still, 6; C. Chapman, 7; F. Still, jun. (conductor), 8. At eight o'clock the bells were lowered in peal by special desire of the Sevenoaks members by the Speldhurst members. Walking to the "Bricklayers Arms" both bands sat down to a splendid spread (ringers' fare), bread and cheese, etc., provided by host Honnywell, through the kindness of the Rector and churchwardens, who had agreed to "pay all." After supper the chair was taken by A. Laurie, Esq., people's churchwarden, supported by W. Johnston, Esq., (the vicar not being able to take the chair as was his wish). The Chairman proposed the first toast, viz., "Church and Queen," and after a few appropriate remarks, it was drank with musical honours. The Chairman next proposed "The Kent County Association of Change-Ringers," coupled with the name of Mr. Frank Still, secretary to the Speldhurst band, who in response pointed out several of the advantages of the Association, also telling the Sevenoaks members (who by the way are about to become members of the Association), that by joining the society they would see more of change-ringing than heretofore, and to finish, he would like to propose one toast before he sat down a toast which he hoped all would drink with musical honours, and that was "The Rector and Churchwardens of St. Nicholas parish church," coupled with the name of the Chairman, A. Laurie, Esq. The toast was drank with three times three.

The Chairman in response, thanked the ringers for the kind way he had been received that evening, saying he had great pleasure in being amongst them, and would do anything he could towards the welfare of the bells, or change-ringing, which he took great interest in. He next proposed "The Visitors," coupled with the name of H. Edwards, who in response thanked them for the way they had been received that day, and proposed "The St. Nicholas band," coupled with the name of their Captain, Mr. Ashdown, who ably responded. "The Ladies" having been responded to by a "single" gentleman, "The Press" was the next, and "The Host" having been responded to, brought one of the jolliest meetings to a close. The return journey commenced at ten o'clock, landing safe home about midnight, and thus finished another ringers' outing.

WARMINSTER, WILTS.

On the evening of the 7th inst. a meeting of the parishioners of Christchurch was held in the Sambourne Reading Room, the Vicar (the Rev. W. Hickman) in the chair, to decide whether the tubular bells, which had been on trial for several weeks, should be retained. It was stated that the majority of the inhabitants were against retaining the bells, and the chairman said that their sound had been described in the town as resembling bagpipes. Mr. B. W. Coates, one of the churchwardens, had been in communication with Messrs. Harrington, the makers, who advised that the bells should be rung slower. Feelings were, however, expressed against this, and the chairman said it would be no improvement. It was decided to await a reply from Messrs. Harrington on Saturday morning, and that if the committee was not satisfied with it the bells should be returned. The letter was duly received, and as it was not considered satisfactory, the bells are to be returned. The trial has cost £15. It is hoped that a peal of real bells will be obtained for the church.—Salisbury Journal.

THE PALACE OF THE SAVOY A CENTURY AGO.

Great part of the Palace called the Savoy in London was standing when Pennant described it a century ago, but was little better than a military prison. The palace of the potent Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, stood on this place. Henry III. had granted to Peter of Savoy, uncle to his Queen Elianor, daughter of Berenger of Provence, all the houses upon the Thames, where this building afterwards stood, to hold to him and his heirs yielding yearly at the Exchequer three barbed arrows for all services. This prince founded the Savoy, and bestowed it on the fraternity of Montjoy. Queen Elianor purchased it and bestowed it on her son, Edmund, Earl of Lancaster. It was rebuilt in a most magnificent manner by his son Henry. It was made the place of confinement of John, King of France, 1356, after he was taken prisoner at the Battle of Poitiers. After his release he made a visit to his brother in 1363, and died in this his ancient prison on April 8th following. He was a prince of the strictest honour; for he came over to apologise for the escape of one of his sons, whom he had left a hostage for the performance of certain treaties.

In 1381 it was entirely destroyed by Wat Tyler, out of spleen to the great owner, John of Gaunt. He set fire to it in several places. The rebels made a proclamation that no one should convert any part of the rich effects to their own use under pain of death.

They actually flung into the fire one of their companions who had reserved a piece of rich plate. They afterwards found certain barrels which they thought had been gold and silver, which they flung into the flames. The contents happened to be gunpowder, which blew up the great hall and destroyed several houses.

Devolving to the Crown, Henry VII. began to rebuild it with a design of forming it into a hospital for a hundred distressed people. He says in his will he intended by this foundation "To doe and execute VI out of the VII works of pitie and mercy by means of keping, susteynyng, and mayntenyng of common hospitalis, wherein if thei be duly kept the said nede pouer people be lodged, viseted in their sicknesses, refreshed with mete and drink, and if nede be with clothe, and also buried yf thei fourtune to die within the same; for lack of theim, infinite nombre of pouer nede people miserably dailie die no man putting hande of helpe or remedie." This building was in form of a cross, the walls of which are entire to this time. His son continued and completed the design.

The revenues at the suppression by Edward VI. amounted to above £500 a year. Queen Mary restored it, and her maids of honour, with exemplary piety, furnished it with all necessaries. It was again suppressed by Queen Elizabeth. In 1612 the Prince's wardrobe was at the Savoy. That illustrious nobleman, George Clifford, Earl of Cumberland, died here in the Dutchy house in 1605, as did William Compton, first Earl of Northampton, in 1630. A century ago part served as lodgings for private people, for barracks, and a scandalous infectious prison for the soldier and for transports.

The church of St. Mary-le-Savoy, originally the chapel to the hospital, but was made parochial on the impious destruction of St. Mary-le-Strand by the Duke of Somerset. It is engraven in Tab. xii., Vol. 11 of the Vestusta Monumenta. The roof is remarkably fine, flat, and covered with elegant small compartments cut in wood, and shields containing emblems of the Passion surround each with a neat garland.

Among the monuments in the chancel, that in memory of the wife of Sir Robert Douglas merits notice. The lady who died in 1612, is but a secondary figure, and placed kneeling behind her husband, dressed in a vast distended hood. Before her is her husband in an easy attitude, reclined and resting on his right arm, the other hand on his sword. He is represented in armour with a robe over it; on his head a fillet with a bead round the edge, a motto on his arms, "Toujour santaches" (see the inscription on the "New View of London" II., 402). She died in 1612.

The sculptor has much merit in this figure.

In a pretty Gothic niche on the opposite side, occupied probably in old times by the image of Our Lady, is now the figure of a kneeling figure, with a countess's coronet on her head. This commemorates Jocosa, daughter of Sir Alan Apsley, Lieutenant of the Tower—first wife to Lyster Blunt, Esq., and afterwards of William Ramsey, Earl of Dalhousie. Another fine monument of a recumbent lady in a great ruff and long gown, in her arms cut on it, attracts our notice, but, unfortunately, the inscription is lost.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

"The thirteenth session of the Telegraphists' School of Science, which was established in the Central Telegraph Office in 1876, is about to commence, and a good and useful programme is announced, embracing classes in telegraphy, magnetism and electricity, mathematics, chemistry, workshop and laboratory practice, and a new and special course of instruction in relay and cable manipulation, the raison d'être of this last class being the approaching transfer of the Submarine Telegraph Company's system to the Post Office. The principal of the school is Mr. W. Slingo, who is assisted by three of his old pupils. The school is now a recognized portion of the Central Telegraph Office, and has for some time received considerable support from the department, as indeed it should, seeing that it derives very material profit from the work carried on. Last year's classes were unusually successful, taking at the examinations of the Sciences and Art Department and the City and Guilds Institute 81 certificates, as compared with 41 in the preceding year. In the telegraphy examinations 22 certificates were gained by the school out of the 70 awarded throughout the kingdom. A valuable prize, consisting of a bronze medal and £3, was also gained. During the past five years 33 medals and £85 have been awarded as prizes throughout the kingdom; and of these, six medals and £24 have been gained by the school. In electrical instrument-making, the honours prize (consisting of a bronze medal and £5) was also gained by the school. Altogether more than 350 members of the staff of the Central Telegraph Office have passed through the school, and have gained upwards of 500 certificates.

Obituary.

JOHN FUDGER.

We have to record the death of the above-named ringer, an event which occurred at his late residence in Warmstry-slip, Worcester, on the 5th instant, at the ripe old age of 76 years. Deceased was a prominent member somewhat of the Worcester company, and was a steady Treble Bob and Grandsire ringer, having taken part in several peals in the latter method. Though he was a safe ringer at a bob bell, he almost invariably preferred to ring the treble, and at times indeed the tenor. On the 2nd of December, 1866, he rang the treble in a 5003 of Grandsire Caters at All Saints, Worcester, in which peal the 9th was rung by the Editor of this journal, the 2nd by J. Kershaw Slack, Esq., now or recently Churchwarden of Prescott parish church, near Liverpool, and the 8th by Mr. E. Moses, now of Reigate in Surrey. A few years previous to this, he at the same church rang the tenor to a peal of Stedman Caters which was conducted by Mr. John Day, of Birmingham, and in which the old veteran W. Chattell, also of Birmingham, rang the treble.

On Thursday, the 6th instant, the following members of the Worcester company rang at St. Helen's church, with the bells half-muffled as a last token of respect to the deceased, a touch of 504 Grandsire Triples, and the usual whole pull and stand: J. Clements, 1; H. Pheasant (conductor), 2; N. Wale, 3; W. Powell, 4; W. Pudge, 5; W. Blandford, 6; F. Owen, 7; T. Malim, 8.

THE CLOCK OF ST. MARGARET LOTHBURY.—Another complaint of the stoppage of this clock is made, this time in a letter in the Echo, signed "The Clock in Lothbury," in which the clock is made to observe that, though situated in the wealthiest part of the world—"bank in front of me, banks on either side of me, and banks in the rear,"—no one deems it worth while to spend a little money to set it right.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"If a good thought strikes thee—
Put it down in writing;
Does a kind thought fill thy mind—
Act upon it."

My first impulse on receiving the paper last Saturday was to see if my anticipations respecting the 6720 of London Surprise at Burton had been realised. But I looked in vain. Perhaps the pleasing news of its accomplishment is reserved for Saturday next. Let us hope so.

* * * * *

"The Royal Cumberlands" appear to have had a very agreeable and all but unanimous meeting. In fact, cordial good feeling and practical unanimity seems to be a characteristic of the "Royals," and I am tempted sometimes to wish that the seventeenth rule of my own "Ancient" Society was not in existence, so that I might have the honour and pleasure of belonging to them also. But the rule in question is a salutary one and without doubt serves well the purpose for which it was mutually agreed upon, namely, "keeping up a friendly rivalry, and promoting the art of Change-Ringing."

* * * * *

Their peal of Cambridge Surprise is well worthy of being recorded on something more substantial and enduring than paper. Apart from its intricacies or its musical qualities, the mere fact of its being the first rung by a London band for more than a century is quite enough to give it a more than ordinary character: it thus deserves a more than ordinary recognition, and I am pleased to read that they intend to perpetuate it by means of a tablet on the walls of their meeting room. I look forward to having the pleasure some day of paying the Cumberlands a visit, and of inspecting the tablet when it has been "mounted."

* * * * *

Well done, "Copley Scholars"! you appear to be a young Society, but have most effectively taught us older ones a lesson how to manage a large amount of business in a short space of time, and come out with great credit in the performance. First you have a pleasant outing, then you get photographed, after that you play the host and entertain your Captain to tea, then you finish up with a social meeting and present your old and respected teacher with a most substantial token of your esteem. All this within the limits of a Saturday afternoon. And more than this, you appear to have kept this latter part of your programme such a profound secret among yourselves that it seems to have come down upon the devoted head of your captain like a thunderbolt, "knocking the wind out of him" properly. A present always comes with more effectiveness when it is unexpected, and you evidently have been mindful of this fact by keeping your secret well. I have no doubt Mr. Copley will be as proud of his "Scholars" as they appear to be of him, and most assuredly wish their society every success.

* * * * *

By the way, as this society appears to be of recent formation and to be doing good work in promoting change-ringing, perhaps some of its officers or members might give us an outline of its constitution and mode of carrying on its work; so that perchance others may be induced to copy its good features with benefit to themselves.

* * * * *

During the same time as the events noted above were transpiring, another presentation was being made at Beddington to our old friend Mr. J. M. Hayes. As a brother "Ancient," I would congratulate him heartily; at the same time I cannot help remarking that he fully deserved it.

* * * * *

These presentation ceremonies are very gratifying from many points of view. Leaving out the pleasure which they give alike to donors and recipients, they are commendable from the mere fact of their indicating a disposition to give honour where honour is due. No one but those who have practically experienced it can comprehend the expenditure of time and thought necessary for carrying out any branch of our work. Whether it be the training of the young beginners, the composing and conducting of peals, the endeavour to instil more science and better striking into the minds of older brethren, or in the important work of organisation, I say, no one but those who heartily and ungrudgingly devote themselves to the work can possibly form anything like a correct estimate of the amount of time and anxiety which such a duty entails. Then, although one who devotes his time to it may be conscious in his own mind that he has the respect of those around him, although he feels confident of having gained the esteem of those for whom he labours, and may be, experiences a gratification at the thought that his work is appreciated; these tangible proofs of such sentiments cannot fail to be extremely pleasing to such a devoted worker, and to be an incentive to him to even greater exertions in the future. It is an old saying, that "familiarity breeds contempt," and while accepting and fully appreciating all the labours for our good, we are too prone to forget that some little recognition, more substantial than our own private thoughts, would often be to those whom we respect and honour an event of a lifetime, and, however small in monetary value the gift might be, that it would through its very spontaneity and the expressions of good feeling which would accompany it, give new life to the recipient, and nerve him to redoubled efforts for the good of those who have thus shown in a practical manner their appreciation of his labours. May this disposition to reward faithful services ever remain a trait in our character as ringers, as by so doing we shall not only be performing a pleasant duty, but also be helping on in a very material manner the work in which we are engaged.

* * * * *

Were it possible for me to be in Ashton-under-Lyne I should not fail to have a right good old English shake of the hand with Mr. James Wood and Mr. George Longden, and congratulate them—the former on his century peal and the latter on his hundredth of Treble Bob. But as I can't be there in propria persona, I would greet them with my pen, assuring them that my heart goes along with it.

* * * * *

I am afraid "One of the Exercise" will have to relegate the pretty story which he narrates of the aristocratic ringers to the category of such well-known and equally veracious narratives as "Cinderella," "Jack and the Beanstalk," and the like. Supposing the story to be true, and the peal to have been one of Maximus, what an exhibition of horse-flesh and vehicles there would have been round the church, to be sure! Quite large enough, one would imagine, to have warranted recording in Macaulay's History of England. But I fear that this story will have to be placed among the fairy tales to which we were regaled when youngsters. "Very nice reading, but sadly wanting in fact."

Before I write again, the hand-bell contest at Manchester for 1888 will be a thing of the past. Lack of time has prevented me hitherto joining in this pleasant pastime of tune-ringing, but I have many friends who take great interest in it, and consequently are much exercised in their minds just now as to the issue of this annual competition in Cotonopolis. While wishing all the competitors every success, from what I learn I very much fear they will have a hard nut to crack in the shape of the Liversedge (Yorkshire) band, who by the reports which reach me are in excellent form, and eager to carry off premier honours. Whatever may be the issue of this contest, it is to be hoped for our own credit's sake, that there will not be a repetition of the disgraceful scene which was enacted at the recent Brass Band Contest at that place, but that the decision of the judges will be received with that respect which it certainly should deserve.

I am not in the habit of "spinning yarns," but have been told a little story which I cannot help repeating. Somewhere in the "lake district" is a very pretty little spot rejoicing in the euphonious name of Silverdale. I paid a hurried visit to that place many years ago, so long ago, in fact, that I can scarcely describe its whereabouts, although I yet retain many pleasant memories of its picturesque beauty. I think it is about two years ago that I read of the opening of a ring of six in the tower of the charming little Church there, and felt a great longing to pay another visit, particularly now that I might have the additional pleasure of hearing the sound of a musical peal resounding through the pleasant vale, and of having the pleasure of a ring. Circumstances, however, have so far prevented me from indulging in that desire, but this story which has been told to me certainly mitigates the disappointment which I have felt in thus being unable to gratify myself in this direction. It appears that recently a band of ringers in the North—a band by the way which is competent to handle a ring of six with credit to themselves and pleasure to their hearers—chose this place for their annual outing, and as a matter of course a communication was sent to the rev. Vicar informing him of the same, and asking permission to be allowed the pleasure of a ring. Of course, nothing but a cordial consent was expected, and they therefore had an extra practice or two to get themselves properly in form so as to execute a few well-struck touches in various methods, thereby giving the inhabitants the opportunity of hearing some good change-ringing, which of course could not be expected from their newly-formed band at home. Imagine their astonishment on receiving in reply an intimation that the Church authorities had established a strict rule that no person should handle the bells but their own ringers. They might look through the church, and (but I will not even be quite sure of this) have a peep at the bells, but as for ringing them—"No! none but our own men shall ever do that!"

What a contrast does this "dog-in-the-manger" policy present to the hearty welcomes and generous treatment given by our clergy week after week to visiting bands of ringers! We all of us know that the visit of a skilled band to a place, particularly one where a young company is located, is always productive of good, to a more or less degree; it helps to stir up the local company; where they are young in the art they learn something; and the parishioners in turn have the pleasure of hearing their bells rung in perhaps a more scientific manner than usual. But what can be the cause or object of this exclusive mode of dealing with the bells? It surely does not arise from the fear of a mysterious disappearance of those denizens of the tower, or of any damage being done to them because strangers have hold of the ropes' ends. It should not be that the vicar and his local company are actuated by jealousy; that they are afraid of any one "taking the shine" out of their own performances; and I cannot think that it is from any motive of principle, for if such were the case, then the vicar should in all consistency apply this rule to all matters in connection with the church: he should not allow any visitor to sing in his choir or take the place of his own organist at any of the services, however talented such a man might be. In fact to carry out this rule to its logical conclusion, he would have to prevent any but his own parishioners from attending the church at all! So I am at a loss to find a sensible reason for this most extraordinary rule; one which if carried out universally would simply kill all our organization, and with it the science, so that bell-ringing would speedily become a thing of the past. We may congratulate ourselves, however, that the instance I have narrated is, if not absolutely unique, at any rate a very isolated case; and I don't think we have cause to fear that this example will ever be extensively followed.

GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL.

On Saturday, September 8th, eight members of the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association and the junior society of St. Michael, Gloucester, visited the above Cathedral, and attempted a peal of Grandsire Triples, in which they were unfortunately unsuccessful, because the band was not well arranged. It is now sixty-eight years since a peal was rung on these bells, which are a ring of eight, tenor between 25 cwt. and 25 cwt., in D. The band hope, however, to attempt the peal again shortly.

This peal of bells is one of the oldest in the kingdom, and one of the most interesting. When the Abbey of St. Peter was dissolved, and the church became the Cathedral Church of the Holy and Undivided Trinity, there were nine bells hanging in the tower. These were confiscated; but the last Abbot of Gloucester, William Parker—alias Malverne—had erected in the tower a clock and chimes, and the people of the city sent a petition to Edward VI. to spare the bells for the clock and chimes to play upon. Thus the old clock and chimes have saved for us these beautiful bells. The treble was recast, as the inscription shews, in 1598. The second is one of the old ring, and is supposed from the initial J.S., and the impression of a coin, to have been cast by John Sandre, or John de Gloucester whose bell mark was found in the Thames some years ago about 1350. It is thus one of the oldest ringing bells in the kingdom. The third and fourth were reheat by Rudhall in 1810, the third has been twice recast, for the predecessor of the present one bore the inscription "G u I Jane S.T.P. DE Anno Dom., 1666," (Bigland's History of Gloucester), but William Jane was not installed Dean until 1683, so that the date was probably 1686. The old fourth was the original bell, and bore the inscription "Sit nomen Domini Benedictum" (Bigland). Five and six are mediæval, and were probably cast in the beginning of the sixteenth century. The seventh was recast in 1626 by John Pennington, of Exeter, who preserved the old inscription "Missi de celio habeo nomen Gabrielis" but reversed it on the bell. The tenor was recast by Abraham Rudhall, of this city, in 1736. The ninth bell, or clock, weighs 65 cwt., and has this inscription: "Me fecit fieri con ventus nomine petri," in mediæval characters. Its date is uncertain, but it is older than the existing vault of the choir, erected in the fourteenth century, and is thus older than the thirteenth century tower, since it will not pass through the hole left for the bells in the crown of the arch. After the attempt for the peal, a touch of 336 of Grandsire Triples was then rung. H. L. James, Esq., 1; F. E. Hart, 2; R. Brunsdon, 3; R. J. Wilkins, 4; G. Brunsdon, 5; S. Romans, 6; W. J. Sevier, 7; E. E. Bewick, 8. The ringers then adjourned to St. Michael's vestry, and rang a course of Royal and Caters. A. Roberts, 1-2; R. Brunsdon, 3-4; R. J. Wilkins, 5-5; H. L. James, 7-8; F. Hart, 9-10. Then a course of Major and Triples by the last four, and a course of Minor and Doubles by the last three.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1888.

A very satisfactory incident is reported this week on the visit of a branch of the Devonshire Guild to a spot where hitherto change-ringing has not yet met with sufficient encouragement, if the ignoring of the County Guild is any criterion. The Devonport branch have had their first annual outing to the town of Tavistock, and if only from the humorous observations of the correspondent who sends the account of the proceedings, it can easily be imagined that they enjoyed themselves. Ringing, both of whole-pull and half-pull descriptions, was taken advantage of, and the customary repast, without which an outing would certainly be shorn of one of its most distinctive features, was apparently enjoyed to the full. Nevertheless the secretary of the Devonport branch had, amid all this, an eye to business. He had made himself acquainted with the fact that the Tavistock ringers did not belong to the Guild, so armed with copies of the last report, he distributed them to the Tavistock gentlemen, to reflect upon at their leisure, and urged them, no doubt with all the eloquence at his command, to come into the fold of the recognised County of Devon ringers.

If this action should be the cause of one person joining the Guild who previously ignored its influence, the act is one to be most highly commended. Energy and interest of this kind has over and over again been strongly advocated in this journal, and we are glad to see another instance of our advice being acted on. Members of our Guilds should be always on the qui vive to secure new members; they should in the pursuit of such an object be actuated with the determination of an inquisitor-general, or a disciple of Loyola. The distribution of reports in aid of such work is a wise and practical idea, which could however well be supplemented by the presentation of copies of a ringers' newspaper.

RICKMANSWORTH, HERTS.

On Wednesday, September 12th, the fine peal of eight bells, tenor 24 cwt.), at the parish church, were re-opened, after restoration, by Squire Proctor and his band of change-ringers. The proceedings commenced with touches of Stedman Triples, including a 504, in which the following took part: L. Proctor, Esq., Rev. E. W. Carpenter, S. Page, Joseph and John Kitchener, Nathan and Jabez Warner, A. Hobbs, C. Shambrook (Benington), J. R. Haworth (London), conducted by S. Page. By this time the company were augmented by the arrival of Messrs. Newson, Chapman, and Foskett, of Hampstead, Gray and Holifield, of Hertford, when an adjournment was made for dinner, which took place at the "Swan" Inn. This being successfully got through, a move was again made to the tower where a well-struck touch of Cambridge Surprise Major, 556 changes, was rung. N. Warner, 1; J. Kitchener, 2; John Kitchener, 3; B. Foskett, 4; S. Page, 5; A. Hobbs, 6; E. Chapman, 7; G. Newson (conductor), 8. After which a touch of Superlative Surprise was attempted, L. Proctor, Esq., — Holifield, and J. Warner, taking 3, 2, and 6, respectively, the rest as before; this was unfortunately lost in the last lead. Three courses of Double Norwich Court Bob Major, was then rang with E. W. Chapman and J. R. Haworth, in place of L. Proctor and A. Hobbs. Time being called, a move was made to the station, Messrs. Newman, Chapman, and Foskett accompanying the Benington ringers to Hatfield on their way home, where touches of Superlative Surprise Major, and Stedman Triples were rung, conducted by G. Newson.

Champagne drinkers, whether connoisseurs or otherwise, will gain some information and comfort from the article of the Times correspondent who has been on a visit to Epernay and Rheims. The wine, he says, is the fermented and expressed juice of the grape, and nothing else. There is no addition of water, nor sugar, nor spirit, with very few exceptions. There is no charging with carboic acid, as in the case of seltzer and other manufactured table waters. The whole of the gas is the product of the process of fermentation after bottling, the sugar of the grape juice being gradually converted into carbonic acid gas.—Dogberry, in the "City Press."

ANSWER TO INQUIRY ABOUT THE ARISTOCRATIC PEAL.

SIR,—I beg to inform "One of the Exercise" that the following account was published by me in my remarks on the Twelve Bell Steeple of London in "THE BELL NEWS" of December 1st, 1883, being copied from Old and New London, 1873.—"St. Bride's, Fleet Street. On Saturday, February 26th, 1726, the first peal of Maximus was rung by the following persons: Wm. Woodrove, treble; Robt. Catlin, 2nd; Edwd. Chadwell, 3rd; John Ward, 4th; John Hardham, 5th; Admiral F. Geary, 6th; J. Dearmor, 7th; Saml. Jeacock, 8th; Wm. Laughton, 9th; Peter Merrygarts, 10th; William Thompson, 11th; Mr. Benjamin Annable, tenor, who called the peal. This peal consisted of 5280 changes. All the persons who took part in it left the steeple in their own carriages. The ringers in those days were often persons of high position, and at that time Fleet Street used to be thronged with carriages full of gentry who had come to hear the music of the bells." J. R. Haworth published a similar account taken from the same periodical, in a contemporary, in 1873.

J. R. JERRAM.

A FALSE PEAL.

SIR,—The peal of Bob Triples in your last issue by me, was sent in a mistake, as it is a false peal. I tender my sincere apologies to the Exercise and to yourself, for thus trespassing on your space.

Brierley Hill.

W. F. HARTSHORNE.

TREBLE BOB MINOR.

SIR,—The 720 by Mr. C. W. Clarke, published in your issue of September 8th, is false; this will be observed by comparing both blows of the treble. I do not think it possible to compose a new peal of Treble Bob Minor.

JNO. F. PENNING.

A Canterbury correspondent writes to The Standard:—"The singular character of the present season is illustrated by a sight which can be seen just now at Hever, in Kent, where there is an apple tree with bright blossom on one part and fully-developed apples on the other portions."

THE WANSTEAD AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The members of the above Society had their annual outing on Saturday, September 8th, Brighton being the place selected. A meet was appointed for London Bridge Station at 8.15. Only ten members put in an appearance, under the guidance of the worthy Master, A. H. Gardom, Esq. Unfortunately the members who were deputed to look after the enlivenment of the journey cut it too close, and forgot the handbells, but notwithstanding this the monotony of the long ride was pretty well broken by their funny member, who entertained them with the Italian bagpipes. Arriving at Brighton they were met (in the unavoidable absence of Mr. Attree) by Mr. F. Vernon, of the St. Peter's Society, who most kindly piloted them throughout the day. After refreshing the inner man a move was made for St. Peter's church, where they ascended to the top of the tower and had a magnificent view of Brighton. Descending to the ringing-room (which by the way is the pattern of what a belfry should be), two touches of Grandsire Triples were then brought round, the following taking part therein: A. H. Gardom, H. Scarlett, G. Cornell, J. Priest, E. Barnett, J. Nunn, H. Nunn, sen., J. Marks, and F. Vernon. After a course of Treble Bob Major on the handbells a move was made for the beach, where some indulged in the briny, and some on the top of it to get an appetite for their dinner, which was done full justice to at Host Box's, the "White Eagle," the catering of which for quality, quantity and cheapness could not be surpassed. After dinner a move was made for St. Nicholas' church, where two or three touches were rung, along with members of the Brighton Society. Afterwards they had a general sail on the briny, which brought round tea time. After tea the return journey was commenced, everyone having thoroughly enjoyed himself. The company take this opportunity of thanking the clergy and churchwardens of the two churches for the use of the bells, also Mr. Attree, for the trouble he took to arrange everything for them.

NORTON, DERBYSHIRE.

On Monday, August 20th, the Norton company had their annual outing, the place selected being Hull. After a pleasant journey by train and water Hull was reached, and after refreshments had been obtained Holy Trinity church was visited, and 120 Bob Minor rung. G. Oates, 1; H. Ward, 2; G. Butcher, 3; J. Goucher, 4; J. Atkin, 5; J. Allen (conductor), 6. And 360 of Kent Treble Bob Minor, with the assistance of Mr. Pollard. G. Butcher, 1; H. Ward, 2; —. Pollard, 3; J. Goucher, 4; J. Atkin, 5; J. Allen (conductor), 6. Mr. Jackson having arrived 168 Grandsire Triples was rung. G. Butcher, 1; H. Ward, 2; —. Pollard, 3; J. Goucher, 4; J. Atkin, 5; J. Allen, 6; C. Jackson (conductor), 7; G. Oates, 8. An adjournment was then made to the "Coach and Horses," and the rest of the time was spent in handbell ringing, singing, and recitations. A very pleasant day was spent by all.

PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL.

Some splendid carving in church stone has been found in the interior of an old buttress against the north transept of Peterborough Cathedral. It doubtless belonged to the lady chapel, which was demolished in 1670 to repair the rest of the Cathedral. Upon the various pieces, some of which are of great size, are traces of very brilliant pigments, and would seem to have belonged to some elaborate shrine. For ornate workmanship they are stated to be unexampled. An attempt is being vigorously made to complete the peal of bells in the north-west tower of Peterborough Cathedral. There was originally a peal of ten, but five were removed, sold, and recast into a peal for Witham-on-the-Hill in 1830. This was done as the bell frames were dangerous. Rev. H. P. Gates has given £350 for the renewal of the frames, hence the desire to get the complete peal again. The cost of the five bells, which are the five smaller ones in the ring, is expected to be about £400.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

THE SECOND QUARTERLY MEETING of the year will be held at Nottingham on Saturday, October 13th, and the following towers will be open for ringing from 2 p.m., viz., St. Mary's (ten bells), St. Peter's (eight bells), and All Saints' (eight bells). The inhabitants of Chelmsford on Wednesday celebrated the receipt of the Charter of Incorporation granted by the Queen. The proceedings included a dinner in the Corn Exchange, and the town was illuminated at night.

ST. MARY'S SOCIETY, PENZANCE.

It was the intention of the above band to have visited the cathedral city of Truro for their excursion of 1888, and to have rung on the peal of eight at Kenwyn; but in this they were disappointed, through the sixth bell having cracked, which, with other repairs, will be rectified as soon as the required funds shall have been raised—all unnecessary ringing in the meanwhile being wisely stopped.

Nothing daunted, however, the advantage of an excursion to Plymouth was embraced by this small but united band, and rising early on the morning of Wednesday, the 5th of September, comfortable seats were obtained in the railway carriages, and the day being fine, though rather dull, the varied scenery along the route was thoroughly enjoyed. Skirting for a couple of miles the northern shore of Mount's Bay, where smooth waters reflect St. Michael's Mount in all its grandeur—

"He whose brow
Is crown'd with castles, and whose rocky sides
Are clad with dusky ivy."

After running a few miles through a district more or less agricultural, and catching a glimpse of the northern sea or Bristol Channel from Hayle with St. Ives, a quaint fishing town in the distance, the mining district of Camborne and Redruth presents a peculiar appearance to the traveller, a veritably weird one by night, with its numerous engine-houses studded here, there, and everywhere, all busily engaged in obtaining from the depths below the greater part of that metal which, after finding its way through the "stamps" and smelting-house, is converted by the bellfounders with their perfected art into—

"Those evening bells."

At Truro, from whose railway viaduct a good view of the Cathedral is obtained, the scenery changes to some of the most beautiful in the West, and delightful peeps are obtained of thickly-wooded valleys as one rushes along the side of a hill, or is conveyed over one of the massive stone structures now rapidly replacing the very frail-looking wooden viaducts, then into the utter darkness of a tunnel, to emerge, if possible, into more lovely scenery than before; such until the reach of water termed the Hamoaze, bursts on the view, with its "old heroes of the deep" peacefully enjoying their well-earned slumbers thereon; then again that marvellous engineering production of Brunel's, the tubular bridge spanning the Tamar at Saltash, demands attention, over which they are conveyed, and being quickly deposited at their destination—in truth the last half-hour of the journey demands all your "rope-sight" to take in what is presented to your view.

After slight refreshment, steps were wended to St. Andrew's church, where the bells were raised, and left set owing to there being service, and a short visit paid to Charles Church, when some short touches, including two 168s of Grandsire Triples, were rung with the assistance of the local men. The "go" of these bells might be considerably improved upon, although the ringers there do contrive to ring them very creditably, yet a party of strangers, we feel confident, will never be able to accomplish more than a short touch of half-pull changes in their present condition, unless they are exceedingly more fond of hard work than pleasure. A retreat was then made to St. Andrew's, when that noble ring of ten were sent off in rounds for a few minutes, causing many of the party perfect ecstacy at their melodious tone, the tenor being 35 cwt. 45 lbs in D. A representative of the peace, clad in blue, however, intruded his presence into the belfry, with the request from the Guildhall just below that the ringing should cease for half-an-hour, there being an important case on. That brief interval was not to be wasted, so the party, with some of their Plymouth friends, repaired to an adjacent refreshment saloon for the replenishment of the inner man, and felt much more in the humour to do justice to the bells after their meal. A touch of 336 Grandsire Triples was rung on the front bells, with 9, 8, 10, covering, and which was reported by the local men as having been creditably struck; afterwards a short touch was attempted on the heavy eight, with F. W. Batchelor, Esq. at the 7th.

After thanking the local ringers, Messrs. Batchelor, Taylor, Screech, and Widdicombe for their courteous reception and great kindness in getting everything ready, the individual members separated to wend their footsteps wherever their inclination led them—some by tram to Devonport, others on the Hoe to enjoy the unequalled view of the Sound and its shipping; the day drawing too soon to a finish when the muster-roll was called at the station at 6.20 for their homeward journey, which was safely accomplished about 11 o'clock p.m., after a most enjoyable and satisfactory day.

Great regret was felt by the band at not meeting with their old friend and adviser, Mr. Banister, whom they have since heard with much satisfaction was at the time in the country rapidly convalescing from a serious illness. They were also pleased to see Mr. Taylor able once again to take to the ropes, and hope he may soon regain that robust health which will enable him to espouse the cause he has so much at heart.

LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION OF SIX-BELL RINGERS.

On Saturday, September 15th, a Quarterly Meeting of the above Association was held at Eccleston, by the kind permission of the Rector, and was well attended by members from St. Andrew's Leyland, St. James' Leyland, Chorley, Standish, Blackrod, and Eccleston. Several 720s of Plain Bob and touches in other methods were rung during the afternoon and evening. The bells of this parish church have lately been rehung by Messrs. Taylor and Co., of Loughborough. They have been quarter-turned, had new clappers and new gearing of all kinds, and have been hung in one of their improved iron A frames. The treble, which was half a note flat, has been removed, and replaced by a new tenor a little over 11 cwt., which makes them a splendid peal of six. The new bell was given by Mrs. Talbot, the Rector's Aunt, and cast by the above firm, and the other work has been defrayed by subscription. Great credit is due to Messrs. Taylor for the excellent manner in which they have done their work. It was the general opinion of the ringers that the "go" of the bells was everything that could be desired. At 5 o'clock the company adjourned to the Schoolroom, and at the kind invitation of the Rector about thirty sat down to an excellent tea. The cloth having been removed, the President, Mr. William Bowling, opened the business meeting. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and unanimously passed, and other business having been transacted, four new ringing members were elected, whose names were received with pleasure by all present. St. James', Leyland, was selected as the next place of meeting in December. The chairman, replying to a vote of thanks, which was cordially passed to him (and to the Rector for so kindly providing them with a good tea, and granting them the use of the bells) brought the meeting to a close.

THE UNITED COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

The half-yearly meeting and six-bell competition will take place at Hayfield, Derbyshire, on Saturday, September 22nd, commencing at 2 p.m. There will be no general dinner, but members and friends attending will find every accommodation at the several hotels and refreshment rooms. The officers and committee will sit at the "Royal" Hotel to enrol new members and receive subscriptions.

CHELMSFORD, ESSEX.

ON Wednesday, September 19th, the town being en fête to celebrate the granting of a borough charter, the programme of arrangements announced that "peals would be rung on the Church bells at intervals during the day." As the St. Mary's Guild of Church Bellringers, whose services had been retained by the Committee to ring the said "peals," confine themselves to call-changes, it occurred to the Honorary Secretary for the Essex Association to attempt to get a volunteer band for something better during part, at any rate, of the proceedings. The consent of the Rector having been obtained, and the St. Mary's ringers having courteously waived their privilege of doing all the ringing in honour of the charter, the arrival of the charter and procession round the town was welcomed by a touch of Grand-sire Caters, 1349 changes, rung in 52 mins., the ringers being: W. Harvey (Widford), 1; A. J. Perkins (Romford), 2; A. Edwards (Writtle), 3; W. Rowland (Chelmsford), 4; H. F. de Lisle, Esq. (Galleywood), 5; W. Lincoln (Writtle), 6; W. Hawkes (Springfield), 7; Rev. T. Papillon (Writtle), 8; G. Newson (Hampstead), 9; J. Parmenter (Chelmsford), 10. All these, with the exception of Messrs. Newson and Perkins, reside in the immediate neighbourhood, and if only Chelmsford itself would cultivate change-ringing, Caters might often be rung upon these fine bells, now abandoned (except on rare occasions) to meaner uses. The blame for this state of things cannot all be laid upon the existing ringers. If but little encouragement is given by the authorities to change-ringing, and the performance of call-changes entitles men to regular payment and the dignity of a "Guild of Church Bell Ringers," it is only human nature that some of them should be content therewith; and till a leader arises among the clergy, or other influential parishioners, it is to be feared that ringing in the county town, upon one of the only two rings of ten in Essex, will remain at its present low ebb.

HANDBELL TUNE-RINGING CONTEST AT BELLE VUE GARDENS, MANCHESTER.

The thirty-fourth Annual Handbell Tune-Ringing Contest (open to all) took place at Belle Vue Gardens, Manchester, on Monday last, before many thousand spectators. The prizes were five in number, but of very small amounts, viz: £15, £10, £7, £5 and £3, this was the subject of much comment among the competing bands, and very great dissatisfaction was expressed thereon. The test pieces were the overture to the "Crown Diamonds" and the "Cuckoo Polka" the former of which required considerable executive skill in its performance. A period of nearly five hours was occupied in the competition, and the result as announced by the show of names and figures on boards was as follows:—Dewsbury, 1st prize; Mirfield, 2nd; Almondsbury, 3rd; Whitefield, 4th; Liversedge, 5th. This announcement was received with hooting and other marks of disapprobation, for the general opinion of musicians in the hall was that the Almondsbury band, was first and the Dewsbury band, if a prize-winner at all, was at the bottom of the list. However, the decision of the judges being final, the vast audience gave vent to its rage and disappointment by refusing to listen to the extra piece which is always played by the winning band, the consequence was a poor performance of the "Cuckoo Polka" amid a storm of yells and hooting. We quite agree with "Free Lance" of last week, that the judge's decision should be received with respect, but I must say in the same words as the Manchester Guardian used with regard to the Brass Band Contest, viz.: that the judgment was inexplicable.

ON Saturday, September 22nd, a ringing meeting, which was well attended by members from Birmingham, Belbroughton, Brierley Hill, Clent, Cradley, Dudley, Hagley, Kidderminster, Netherton, Old Hill, Stourbridge, and Mr. R. Cartwright, of Wombourn, was held at Clent. St. John's, Hagley, was visited, where a touch of Bob Major was rung, conducted by Mr. R. Cartwright. A walk through the beautiful park (the seat of Lord Lyttleton), brought them to the noted Clent Hills, which have become a great resort for pleasure seekers, and also for invalids, the air being considered very pure. Arriving at "Fair View," a splendid tea awaited them, which was very much enjoyed by all those who partook of the same. A kind invitation by the Rev. F. R. Lawson, vicar of Clent (to the party to visit his gardens, and which would have been a treat for all) had to be abandoned, owing to the shades of evening coming on so soon. Ringing was freely indulged in by the members, each one expressing themselves highly satisfied with the meeting. The following 720's were rung at St. Leonard's, Clent. A 720 of Plain Bob Minor in 25 mins. C. Barrell, 1; H. Mason, 2; J. Smith, 3; J. Meredith, 4; J. Barber, 5; C. Boughton (conductor), 6. And a 720 of Kent Treble Bob Minor. *J. Meredith, 1; T. RINGERS' EXCURSION.

ON Thursday, September 20th, the ringers of St. Nicholas, Guildford (members of the Winchester Diocesan Guild) made their Annual Excursion, being met by friends from Godalming, Farnham and Basingstoke—Messrs. Manfield, Barnett and White. They first visited Woking Church, where they rang some 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles and a plain course of Grandsire Minor. They then proceeded to Walton-on-Thames, and rang several touches of Grandsire Triples on the heavy ring of eight in that tower, among others a 504: J. Jones, 1; W. Groves, 2; H. White (conductor) 3; F. W. J. Rees, 4; F. Bennett, 5; G. Barnett, 6; G. Manfield, 7; C. W. Miller, 8; and 168 by J. Heathorn, 1; H. White, 2; J. Jones, 3; E. Bromham (Walton) 4; F. Bennett (conductor), 5; G. Manfield, 6; W. Groves, 7; F. W. J. Rees, 8. Next a charming walk to Weybridge. The bells are a light ring of eight, and their tone was much admired. A start was made for a 720 of Grandsire Minor, and all went well till 670 changes had been rung, when the tenor rope came into collision with the 7th man's neck. Another attempt was more successful, and the 720 was accomplished in 27 mins. J. Heathorn, 1; H. White, 2; G. Manfield, 3; F. W. J. Rees, 4; F. Bennett (conductor), 5; W. Groves, 6. Two covers were rung by Messrs. Colburn & Morgan. The proceedings ended with 360 Grandsire Doubles, and the ringers returned home, having spent a very enjoyable day. They desire through the "THE BELL NEWS" to give their thanks to the rectors and ringers of Woking, Walton and Weybridge, for the use of the bells, and the kind welcome they received.

THE YORKSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

The Annual Meeting will be held at York, on Saturday, October 6th. Divine Service at the Minster at 4.30, with special sermon by the Very Rev. the Dean. Tea at 6 and business meeting at 6.45. Members desirous of having tea provided for them are requested to send word to Mr. W. H. Howard, 43, Trinity Lane, York, on or before October 1st. Tea tickets, 6d. each, in accordance with the resolution of the Association. Further particulars will be given in the circulars.

A VOICE FROM THE ANTIPODES.

WE have received the following extract from the Hobart (Tasmania) Mercury, from Mr. Tregear, the Hon. Secretary of the Hobart society of ringers. In his letter to us he says "that as a great many copies of 'THE BELL NEWS' come to Hobart and other towns in the colony, the readers would like to read the following from it." It is with pleasure therefore that we yield to his request:—

BELLS AND BELLRINGING.

It is probable that persons who are accustomed to the sound of church and chiming bells never have taken the trouble, and in some cases not had the opportunity to find out how or when they first came into general use. This being so there can be no doubt that an article conveying a little general information on the subject will prove acceptable to many of our readers, and may, we trust, do something towards increasing the interest already taken in bell-ringing by a few, and thus lead to a more liberal appreciation of the efforts of the ringers. It will not, of course, be expected that within the space available in a newspaper we can give a full and elaborate history of bells, but we trust a short account of them as known in the past and at present, so far as our own peal is concerned, will be thought sufficient.

First, as to the composition of bells. They are, as one would naturally suppose, made of bell metal, but herein lies one of the greatest difficulties connected with their manufacture. The composition of bell metal consists of copper and tin fused together, but opinions differ as to the proportions of these two metals, and in different foundries the proportions vary, and are regarded as trade secrets. Some allow 4 parts of copper to 1 of tin, and others 3 to 1. The latter proportion may be taken as the average one, but old records show that in the reign of Henry III. of England it was as low as 2 to 1, and small bronze bells discovered in the palace of Nimrod were found to contain 10 parts of copper to 1 of tin. Handbells are often made of brass, antimony alloyed with tin, German silver, real silver, and gold. Bells have also been made of steel, but the tone of these, although almost equal in fineness to those made of the best bell metal, are deficient in length through having less vibration. Glass bells give an extremely fine sound, but the substance of which they are composed is too brittle to stand the continued hammering of the clapper. In early days it was customary to add silver to the copper and tin, with the object of sweetening the tone, but this has been found a popular error. The quality of a bell depends not only in its composition, but also on its size and shape, a matter which requires experience, taste, and skill on the part of the founder. The following is an approximate scale which may be taken as coming nearest perfection:—"Taking the thickness of the sound-bow or brim—a bell should measure in diameter at the mouth, 15 brims; in height to the shoulder, 12 brims; and in width at the shoulders, 7½ brims, or half the width at the mouth." The smaller the bell the higher the pitch, and to give the pure chord of ground tone (key note) in a peal of four bells, the diameters require to be as 30, 24, 20, 15, and the weight as 80, 41, 24, 10.

From a remote antiquity, cymbals and handbells were used in religious ceremonies, but the introduction of bells into Christian Churches is usually ascribed to Paulinus, Bishop of Nola, in Campania (A.D. 400). It is inferred that they were first made in Campania, from the name given to them—campanæ, hence campanile, the bell tower. They were generally brought into use in churches in the sixth century, being introduced into France in 550, and a little more than a century later (680) Benedict, Abbott of Wearmouth, England, brought one from Italy for his church. They were not made of a large size until the fifteenth century, although in the eleventh there was a bell cast and presented by a king to the Church of Orleans which weighed 2,600lbs. A bell cast in Paris in the year 1400 weighed 15,000 lbs., and another in 1472 weighed 25,000lbs. In 1501 the famous bell of Rouen was cast, and weighed 36,364lbs., but the largest bell in the world is the Great Bell or Monarch of Moscow, cast in 1734, over 21ft. in height and diameter and weighing 193 tons. A fire in 1737 caused the bell to fall, and the shock broke a piece out of it, but since 1837 it has formed the dome of a chapel made by excavating the space below it. Another large Moscow bell, cast in 1819, weighs 80 tons; the great bell at Pekin 53½ tons; a bell cast for the New Palace Westminster (but cracked), 14 tons; another cast for the Roman Catholic Cathedral at Montreal, 13½ tons; Great Peter (York), 13½ tons; Great Tom (Lincoln) 5½ tons; great bell of St. Paul's 5 1-10th tons.

Bells at one time acquired a kind of sacred character, they were founded with religious ceremonies, christened with a complete baptismal service, etc., and in many countries this practice is still observed. They were rung to terrify evil spirits and to dispel storms, as there was a mysterious belief in the virtue of their sound. They are still used for convoking congregations, but the custom of tolling for the dead is fast becoming obsolete.

The first regular peal of bells known to history seem to have been a peal of five, which, about the year 1456, was sent by Pope Calixtus III. to King's College, Cambridge, where they remained until about 1750, the largest peal in the Kingdom, the tenor weighing 57cwt. About the beginning of the sixteenth century eight bells were hung in a few churches, but towards the close of the same century the number was increased to 10, and soon after to 12. Some time during 1631 the system of ringing in changes or regular peals was invented, but it was not until several years had elapsed that peals were rung without a single. Eight bells, which form an octave, or diatonic scale, make the most perfect peals. The number of changes which may be rung on a peal of bells increases enormously with the number of bells, thus—Four bells allow 24 changes, which may be rung in the space of one minute; eight bells admit of 40,320 changes, which would occupy one day and four hours; 12 bells give 479,001,600 changes, for which the space of 37 years 355 days would be required. In this way it has been calculated that to ring the full changes upon a peal of 24 bells at the rate of two strokes to a second, the time occupied would be one hundred and seventeen thousand billions of years.

Campanology—as the art of ringing is called—is an ingenious art, and to use the words of an old ringer, "as an athletic exercise or amusement there are few of so noble a nature, so conducive to health, and employing so many facilities, both mental and corporeal." Time and persevering assiduity may perfect a set of men and qualify them to ring the most intricate peals, but special ingenuity and leisure is required to attempt the boundless variety which are described in books on change-ringing. A visit to the belfry at Trinity Church, Hobart, which may be arranged for by interviewing the master ringer, will demonstrate to the satisfaction of anyone what healthful and strengthgiving exercise bell-ringing is, and moreover the visitor will see that not only is it exercise for the physical but for the mental powers also. Each ringer has to keep his mind fixed upon his task in order to sound his bell at the right moment, and thus keep that perfection of time which is necessary to produce a really musical chime. The work is by no means easy until one gets thoroughly used to it, and absence for a time means stiffness after a return to it for a little while. The thanks of a community are certainly due to any body of men who undertake the task of learning to ring the bells, and by diligent practice attain a proficiency which renders their music joyous, merry, and ever welcome to the ears of the citizen.

It is with pleasure we draw attention to our own peal of bells at Trinity Church, and trust that all who hear them will take greater interest after reading the short history of them which we give below. No small amount of trouble has been taken to collate the facts which follow, and it may be that one or two little details are missing, but if so, they are likely to be brought to light by the publicity now given.

During the year 1144 the Reverend Philip Palmer, who held the office of rural dean, and was perhaps better known as Dean Palmer, went to England for the purpose of collecting money to build what is now Holy Trinity Church. His mission was attended with great success, and amongst others who gave substantial subscriptions to the fund, were Her Majesty Queen Victoria, her mother the Duchess of Kent, and the Earl of St. Germans. Dean Palmer, finding that he had collected more than enough to pay for the construction of the church, decided to apply the surplus to the purchase of a peal of bells. The surplus, however, was not sufficient for the purpose, but upon his (Dean Palmer's) return to the colony, the late Mr. William Champion took the matter up, and called a meeting, at which it was decided to open a subscription list to defray the residue of the cost, Mr. Champion himself heading the list with a very substantial sum. Indeed, we find in the obituary notice of this gentleman, which appears in The Mercury of September 26, 1871, the following sentence:—"Although he never mentioned the matter himself we happen to be aware that the Trinity bells which chime so sweetly over the city on gala days owe to his liberality something like £125, that sum having been contributed by Mr. Champion towards the expenses of their suspension, and never repaid to this day." Two days after the above-mentioned date The Mercury, in referring to Mr. Champion's funeral, wrote:—"Before and after the funeral service the Trinity bells tolled a muffled peal, and then the fine old man was silently left in his resting place." There is no authentic record of the cost of the bells, but they must have totalled over £700 for purchase, freight, and fixing. At the present time a similar peal would cost very nearly the same, as the selling price in England is £475. The bells, eight in number, are considered the best in the colonies next to the Ballarat peal. After they were hung in 1847, a bell-ringers' association was formed, and the bells were heard chiming week in and out for a number of years. Mr. C. B. Hardinge was the master ringer for many years, and after his resignation Mr. Bryant Webb took the mastership, but a few years ago the association collapsed, mainly on account of the dangerous state of the frame-work on which the bells are hung. They were silent for about two years, but an association was formed, and subscription lists started to pay the cost of repairing the frame. Mr. J. R. Meech was entrusted with the work, and he faithfully fulfilled his contract, the amount of which was about £70. A good deal of this was met by private subscription, but there still remains a balance of £26 to be paid. There is a good deal of work to do in cleaning and oiling the bearings, &c., and as the total weight of the bells is $3\frac{1}{2}$ tons (tenor alone weighing half a ton), it can be imagined that the friction on the ropes, wheels, &c., renders it necessary that great care should be taken of them. The duties of caretaker are performed by Mr. D. Scholes in a satisfactory manner. The master ringer is Mr. Edwin J. Rogers, and the assistant master ringer Mr. H. L. D'Emden. The other ringers are Messrs. A. F. and E. F. Lovett, C. Pender, F. Milson, A. Johnson, and V. D. Tregear. There are also two or three recruits, but as stated above, it is some time before they can take a place in a squad. These gentlemen and their confreres have been practising assiduously for some time past, and so ready are they always to ring the chimes on any important occasion, in addition to filling the air with sweet sounds one night each week, that they fully deserve the support of every citizen, and we trust that ere long the debt owing upon the bells will be wiped off, if only as a complement to the ringers and the president (Rev. G. W. Shoobridge), who takes a lively interest in the association.

THE HERTFORD COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

A DISTRICT MEETING will be held at Baldock on Saturday, October 13th. The tower will be open for ringing from 3 p.m. and at 5 o'clock. A tea will be provided at the "George and Dragon" Hotel, after which a meeting will be held for general business, and also to consider the new rules drawn up by the officers, and any amendments to the same. Railway tickets at cheap fares will be issued by the Great Northern Railway to members, by their informing the Secretary not later than Wednesday, October 10th, of the stations from which they propose to travel, and on production of their receipt for the current subscription at the Booking Office.

SUFFOLK RINGERS IN LANCASHIRE.

On Monday, September 24th, six members of the St. Mary-le-tower Society, Ipswich, with Mr. Hayward from Framlingham, and Mr. Ward from Woodbridge, availed themselves of the opportunity of a cheap excursion to Manchester by the Great Eastern Railway, the train leaving Ipswich at 12.5 a.m. on Monday morning, and proceeding by Bury St. Edmunds, Newmarket, Ely, Lincoln, and Sheffield, and on through the beautiful hills of Cheshire, to the city of Manchester, arriving there about 8.30 a.m. Resuscitating the inner man, the visitors afterwards inspected the various public buildings, including the Cathedral and the magnificent town-hall, greatly admiring the fine ring of bells thereto belonging, as the chimes played the "Last Rose of Summer." The sound of these bells created a longing desire within them to have the opportunity some day of ringing, as well as listening to them. In this frame of mind they wended their way to the Bell Vue Gardens, where at 3 o'clock in the large hall, they had the pleasure of hearing and seeing the handbell contest, an account of which will be found elsewhere. A walk round the gardens being had, a return was made to the Cathedral, where a peal had been arranged by the members of the Cathedral society. This peal was successfully rang in 3 hrs. 44 mins., and the visitors regret there was no time left for a social hour with their friends at Manchester, for they were only just in time to catch the train at 11.25 p.m., arriving safely home at 8.20 a.m. on Tuesday morning. They heartily thank the Cathedral authorities for permission given to ring, and Mr. A. E. Wreaks and other members of the Cathedral society for making arrangements.

KING'S SUTTON TENOR.

In connection with the weight and diameter of this bell "Grandsire Bob" says: "I beg to thank Mr. Jerram for his kind information concerning King's Sutton Bells. Since that reached me, I have written to the parish clerk of that town, who informs me that the diameter of their tenor is 42 (forty-two) inches, so that it will weigh probably about 15 cwt."

ON MATCHES.

NOT ringing matches, my readers. Though I do not share in the general wholesale condemnation of such bouts, I have no desire to say anything about them. My Matches are quite of another sort. I am going to have a gossip upon that very useful, though small article of domestic economy—the “match,” or, if you will, the “lucifer match.” But this qualifying adjective would be out of place in what I have to say. “Lucifer,” so I learnt at school, was another cognomen for the arch-tempter of mankind. Whoever applied the term to the household match evidently had the terrors of sulphur and brimstone before him. And no wonder; for a generation ago the household match certainly gave one a powerful idea of the potency of these ingredients.

Many of the readers of this journal do not recollect the somewhat primitive appliances of flint, steel, and tinder, for the purpose of “getting a light. I can just remember them, and can call to mind the temper-trying attempts, in the small hours of a winter’s morning, to procure a light by the aid of such implements, and the satisfaction displayed when after several minutes’ intense energy and perseverance the end in view was attained. Those who have lived long enough to remember such times, must also recollect the successful experiments of Dr. Congreve, which resulted in the time-honored tinder-box and its accompaniments being abandoned for ever. Congreve it was, I believe, who first invented a match that should produce a light when friction was applied to it. And though this seems to be the forerunner of the present “match,” yet from the improvements made in these later years, the invention of Congreve seems to have very little affinity with the article in use at the present day.

From little causes great effects arise. This is exemplified in the highest degree in connection with the little article now being dealt with. From the improper use of the match what disasters have arisen, and what loss of life has taken place. No doubt it was these results of the extreme carelessness in keeping the ordinary match that induced the chemists of the greatest match manufacturers in Europe—Messrs. BRYANT and MAY—to adopt some plan to render innocuous their careless handling, and to neutralise or in fact prevent any such calamity as loss of life in the future. If this could be effected at all, the above-named firm were the ones to effect it. And in fact we see that among their many wonderful and ingenious improvements in the means of “getting a light,” none is more wonderful than their renowned “safety match,” which it is impossible to ignite only under special circumstances.

A match manufactory is certainly one of the features of the present century, and especially that of the firm we have just mentioned. The Fairfield Works, as the factory is called, may reasonably claim to be the principal of the kind in Europe. They are situate in the Fairfield Road, Bow, London, within a stone’s throw, in fact, of that church known to my readers as “Bow-in-the-road.” The buildings cover about ten acres of ground, and their appearance both from interior and exterior surveys, may safely be said to be handsome, clean, and elaborate. Every workshop and store within the building is exceedingly well-built, and rendered fireproof. The most perfect ventilation is employed, the outlets of the various air-shafts are covered with moveable contrivances to regulate the admission of the air, according to the season of the year or atmospherical change, and other well-considered sanitary arrangements, with the roomy condition of the workshops, accounts to a very great extent for the healthy condition and appearance of the many workpeople of both sexes employed therein. This statement will be thought somewhat remarkable, perhaps, while having in view the popular error that the employes of a match factory are unhealthy and short-lived. The very reverse is the actual fact. When the trade was in its infancy, no doubt there was some ground for the supposition. The discoveries, however, which have been made in chemical science, and the introduction of elaborate machinery, has proved that the match factory in question is a much healthier spot than many places where even articles of food are prepared.

The manufacture of matches is a most interesting process, and I cannot resist the temptation of giving the following account of such processes which is taken from the Royal Album of Arts and Industries :—

A portion of the timber used by Messrs. Bryant and May is cut into splints in Canada, and sent over to this country ready for converting into matches; but the greater portion of the pine-wood is sawn and cut at their own saw-mills and box-works on Bow Common. No timber is cut or stored at the Fairfield Works, where the inflammable components are made and used. The wood is sawn into blocks to fit the splint-cutting machine, which consists of a guillotine knife and a set of lancets. When this wood is cut into splints it is tied into bundles, and thoroughly dried by being left in a heated chamber for a considerable time. The dried bundles of splints are then sent to Fairfield, where they pass through one of the prettiest automatic machines we have seen. The splints are filled into frames by this machine, and afterwards dipped into melted paraffin wax. They are then passed on to another hand, who strikes the splints in the frame, with a weight to drive the ends of the splints into a uniform position for dipping. Each splint is double the length of an ordinary match. The two ends are dipped in the composition, and, by another ingenious machine, the made matches are released and the splints or double matches are transferred to a girl, who picks up the right quantity to fill a couple of boxes; the bundle is first cut in two, and the matches are rapidly put into the boxes and passed on to the packing department, to be made up into parcels of one dozen. These parcels are packed in cases made to contain the required quantities of boxes of matches.

THE SAFETY MATCH.—The great reputation which this Firm enjoys is chiefly due to the introduction of the celebrated Safety Match, which was patented by Mr. Bryant, who had the monopoly of the manufacture of this speciality until the patent expired. So important an invention could not fail to meet with the speedy recognition of the public. Who has forgotten the suffocating sulphur match, which made the act of lighting gas or candles a positive torture? The substitution of other and inoffensive compounds for sulphur was an innovation and a boon to the public, but that improvement was quite eclipsed by the invention of the safety match. Many of us can recollect the accounts which frequently appeared in the newspapers of children who were burnt to death through playing with lucifer matches. As a match was a necessity of civilisation, and produced at a price within the reach of the poorest of mankind, it is not surprising that mischievous children possessed themselves of the match-boxes whenever they had an opportunity of gratifying their curiosity. The matches were frequently left in accessible places, and the Coroner’s Courts bore testimony to the dangers attending the unrestrained distribution of lucifer matches. Bryant and May’s Patent Safety Match effected a complete revolution in the trade. They produced a match which could not by any possible means be lighted by rubbing it over sandpaper or any other roughened surface; only upon the sides of its own box could the match be ignited. Fires have been caused by accidentally treading upon the ordinary match. No amount of stamping will light a safety match. To prevent accidents to children who are intelligent enough to know that the matches must be rubbed upon the sides of the box in order to produce fire, it is only necessary to keep the matches in one place and the boxes in another. The patent safety match was for some time the subject of controversy amongst the curious and scientific men, but it did all that the inventor claimed for it, and careful parents, and those having the care of large premises and valuable collections of treasures, soon adopted it, and refused to allow the use of any other kind of match. At the present time Bryant and May’s safety matches may be purchased retail at about sevenpence halfpenny per dozen boxes. They are also made up in various kinds of fancy boxes, with a reserve stock of prepared paper, so that these superior boxes can be refilled from time to time from the ordinary wooden boxes. It would be difficult to find a spot on the earth inhabited by a civilised race where Bryant and May’s safety match is unknown.

The manufacture of Wax Vestas at Fairfield Works is an important branch of the business. The cotton yarn is wound upon drums and passed through a bath of melted stearine, etc. The taper, after being waxed, is wound upon a huge cylindrical frame. Each length of taper measures 3,000 yards of taper, or 100 lengths of 3,000 yards each. The wax taper is cut by a very pretty and valuable machine into the requisite lengths. The match bodies so cut off are transferred to frames constructed of the required depth. They are then dipped into the igniting compound, and treated in exactly the same way as ordinary matches. After the dipping process they are dried, sorted, and packed in boxes of various sizes, patterns, and capacity. While we were inspecting the making of wax vestas, we noticed a number of girls filling small round fancy boxes, unlike anything we had seen in the shops of this country. These boxes were for shipment to the Fiji Islands. The Polynesian has cast aside his rude fire-drill for Bryant and May's wax-matches—a sure sign of his adoption of the customs of civilised races. Possibly the Fijian of to-day would as soon think of using the primitive fire-drill as of making a meal of a neighbouring islander. The cases used for packing the matches for the export trade are made up by Messrs. Bryant and May. In one enormous store-room we saw thousands of cases ready for shipment, each case containing several grosses of boxes of matches. There are other store-rooms at Fairfield Works, filled with thousands of reams of paper and great quantities of printed labels, etc. At the saw-mills and box-factory they make the boxes for the matches. We were shown here several other wonderful machines, many processes in the various manufactures conducted at this branch being performed by a single machine in an astonishingly short space of time. In addition to the extensive manufacture of matches, was vestas, and vesuvians, Bryant and May do a large business in those pretty tea-canisters, biscuit-tins, and fancy tin boxes of all kinds which one cannot help noticing in every grocer's window; these are constructed at Reading, many of them out of one piece of metal. The patterns are most artistic, indeed, they are almost too good for such low-priced articles. If the canisters and boxes were scarce and high-priced, they would be valued more than they are. English people, unfortunately, seldom judge a thing from an artistic standpoint. The first question usually asked is, "How much did it cost?" and, if the article is perfectly useless, and ugly into the bargain, it is highly valued if it cost a good round sum. Many of the designs printed upon the tin boxes by Messrs. Bryant and May's patent process are copied from rare works of art, and thus the poorest individual can adorn his cottage with articles which would, in the days of our grandfathers, have been deemed worthy of a place on the sideboards of the well-to-do.

This account of the process of manufacture of the match of to-day, brief though it is, is to the purpose. The invention of the safety-match is one that will especially commend itself to the readers of this paper, many of whom have immense interests committed to their charge as custodians of our churches, with all their interior properties (if the word may be allowed) and arrangements. This safety-match is also the proper article for use in the belfry, and a stock of them could be very easily kept in a suitable place in the ringing-chamber. Bryant and May manufacture very handsome metallic boxes to hold their safety matches, which are admirably adapted for this purpose. These boxes, or brackets, hold a good store of matches, and their appearance is neat and attractive. The tower of a church generally contains in some part or other "furniture" of some kind belonging to the Church; in fact, and with sorrow be it said, that this part of the sacred edifice is frequently used as a receptacle for the collection of what may be designated as useless lumber, the lower part being used as a storage-room for fuel. How necessary it is then that care should be observed, where such a collection of heterogeneous materials is allowed to coagulate. A thoughtless official may, and in fact frequently does, take an ordinary naked match, and igniting it within the walls of the building, thoughtlessly drops the ash close to where the light has been obtained, and there leaves it regardless of consequences. What a powerful element of danger this negligence begets is well known. Neither are the bell-chambers of our churches, be in what order they may, kept free from the admission of inflammable ingredients, and yet how seldom is this danger considered? The invention of the safety-match, however, enables us to make light of the danger. If Church authorities laid down a hard and fast rule that none but approved safety matches, such as those referred to above, should under severe penalties, be admitted into the buildings under their charge, the conditions of safety would be greater, and in time no doubt the premiums of insurance would be lessened.

I have spoken of the match as a valuable and in fact indispensable article of domestic economy; I have also quoted an interesting description of the manufacture of the article, and pointedly alluded to the principal "works" in the continent of Europe where their manufacture is carried on. A reference to the latter would at the present time be somewhat incomplete if, the recent commotion among the workpeople at that factory did not have a passing remark. "The strike at Bryant and May's" was a theme a few weeks ago which some organs in the press made a deal of. But the "strike," such as it was, ended more rapidly than the out-door agitators bargained for. The verbose mock-philanthropists who endeavoured to make a name for themselves out of this movement were put to confusion at the readiness with which the representatives of Bryant and May listened to the complaints of their workpeople, and adjusted, with a rapidity worthy of imitation in such cases, any cause for uneasiness that was supposed to exist. I say "supposed" advisedly, because the majority of these so-called differences between employers and employed vanished immediately they came to be reasoned out by the parties themselves; while the small concessions asked for were granted with alacrity directly the arguments in their favour were pushed to a logical conclusion. It would be out of place here to go into the pros and cons of the affair, but this may be said, that the foolish remarks which have been circulated from time to time about the "poor match-maker" are without rhyme or reason, or the least shadow of veracity. Those who doubt this should pay the factory a visit. There they would see as healthy a body of workpeople of both sexes as can be seen anywhere, and what is more, contented with their lot. Sympathy is misplaced upon them, they need it not, and maudlin philanthropy—the stock in trade of the street demagogue—is put to shame by a survey of the condition of the match-making lasses employed by Bryant and May.

THE UNITED COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

The second annual six-bell competition held in connection with the above Association took place on Saturday last at St. Matthew's, Hayfield, Derbyshire, when the Association cup was competed for (according to the rules of the Association) and other prizes, given by the Hayfield ringers and friends. The general conditions were that every competitor must have been a member of the Association six months; each company to ring a 720 of Minor; and the cup must be won three times before it becomes their own property. Until this latter condition is realised the company winning has the honour of holding it for twelve months, when it must again be competed for. It is worthy of notice that although the competitors were at liberty to ring any method they choose, they all rung Oxford Treble Bob. As was announced in "THE BELL NEWS," the draw for order of ringing took place at the Royal Hotel at two o'clock, with the following result: Saddleworth (limited), Saddleworth (holders) Chapel-en-le-Frith, Hyde, Royal George, and Mossley. A plain course was allowed each company before commencing. At 2.30 the first company ascended the tower, the others following on without loss of time. A very large number of ringers from various parts were present to listen to the ringing, which was of an excellent character, especially the ringing done by the companies gaining the prizes. Much excitement was manifested at the close, on account of the four prize-winners running so close together, and a large number of people assembled to hear the judges announce their decision from the balcony of the Royal Hotel, which was as follows: 1st prize—the Association cup and six sterling scarf pins the shape of a bell, Royal George; 2nd prize, Saddleworth United; 3rd prize, Saddleworth; 4th prize, Mossley. The judges were Mr. J. Green Hardy, of Huddersfield, and Mr. B. Dodson, of Birstall, and their decision gave general satisfaction. The committee of the Association desire to publicly thank the Vicar of Hayfield for placing the bells of St. Matthew's at their disposal, and the Hayfield ringers and their friends for their generous subscriptions and hearty co-operation, and also the courteous judges.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1888.

WE heartily commend to our readers this week the words of our correspondent, "Free Lance," respecting the work which is before us during the now opening "working season." Without a doubt we have, as he well observes, much to do in every direction before we cease our efforts for the good of the Exercise. From whatever point of view we look at our position, we cannot fail to see how lamentably we are yet "found wanting." It will be well, therefore, for us to act upon our contributor's advice; take stock, so to speak, and when we find—as we most certainly shall—that there is so much good work to be done, "so much ground to encompass," it is our bounden duty to set ourselves resolutely to work and endeavour to heal our breaches. There is one phase of this question which our correspondent has not touched upon, but which we are quite certain that he is perfectly alive to, and that is the great need of more education among our members. No man is likely to "rise to the situation" until he is educated up to it; and we should act foolishly were we to try to shut our eyes to the fact that we have great need of "the Schoolmaster abroad" among us. Whether we look at ourselves from a scientific, a religious, or a social standpoint, the same gaunt fact will stare us in the face that there is a great lack of that education which is absolutely necessary to raise us to the position which we desire to hold in the Church and State. Like everything else, we must move with the times, and keep pace with the march of improvement which is going on continually around us. The question next arises—How are we to set about this work of educating our backward brethren? By shewing the ringers of stoney, call-changes, and such-like inartistic performances, the great benefit of being able to ring proper scientific methods; by urging the careless, the lukewarm, and the openly antagonistic, to "mend their ways," come into our Associations, and shaking off their supineness and antagonism, while helping on the work of progress be at the same time most effectively helping themselves. There are, in fact, as many different modes by which we may help forward our lagging friends, as there are differences of circumstances; thus if every ringer who is anxious for the good of his craft, takes care to seize each opportunity of doing good work when it arises to his hand, and—like a clever workman—turns it out in a finished manner, we can have no hesitation whatever in predicting the ultimate result.

Another mode of helping this on, we venture to submit, should not be forgotten. The press is undoubtedly a powerful educational force, and that power shews unmistakable signs of strengthening as time goes on. Without laying ourselves open to the charge of being egotistical, we dare to assert that, so far as the Exercise is concerned, "THE BELL NEWS" has played no unimportant part in the struggle for improvement which has been going on amongst us of recent years. And shall we not be speaking with a strict regard to the truth if we say that no small amount of that improved state of things which we now see is due in a more or less degree to this paper? We therefore feel that we are acting in the best interests of the Exercise when we ask for the increased support of the ringing world. The judicious distribution of copies here and there among those we seek to improve, or who are still outside our organised ranks, could not fail to act like seed planted in many places, which will bring forth fruit in due season. It is not from motives of personal aggrandisement that we plead, but for the good of that art and work for which alone this journal exists, and in which work the greater our success the more extended will be our means of usefulness.

FROME, SOMERSETSHIRE.—A RINGER'S WEDDING.

On Saturday morning last, a very interesting marriage was solemnized at the parish church of St. John the Baptist, Frome, by the Rev. F. Vinning, M.A. (senior curate), between Mr. William Brewer and Miss Emily Moore, both of Frome. Owing to the bridegroom's various connections with the church and its kindred societies, great interest was manifested in this happy event. Numerous small groups of people assembled in the churchyard, to await the arrival of the happy couple, and to gain a "peep" ere they entered the sacred edifice. The college boys, who assist in forming the church choir, also determined to display a feature of interest in the marriage festivities, so took possession of the ringing chamber and chimed the bells for some time previous to the time appointed for the arrival of the wedding party, and thus forestalling the ringers who rang during the day as a mark of esteem to their brother string. The service was a choral one with choir and organ, and consisted of two hymns and a special exhortation, in addition to the ordinary marriage service. It is needless to state that the happy couple has the best wishes of all who know them, also of the writer, who trusts that the new duty and responsibility Mr. Brewer has undertaken, will be one of life-long happiness, and that his happy union may not fall short of the prophetic "three score and ten," or "four-score years," and that he will continue his allegiance to the Frome Guild of ringers, and thus strengthen the indefatigable efforts of the captain (Mr. John Rebbeck) to establish a guild of change-ringers for this grand old parish church. NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Look to the items; the totals will take care of themselves."

The days are now shortening fast, and as a natural consequence, evenings are lengthening. With this diminishing length of sunlight, our work will commence once more in right good earnest. We have evidence of this fact in the numerous notices of Association Meetings which appear in last Saturday's issue. These notices are also indicative of another fact, namely, that our brethren throughout the country are thoroughly alive to their duties. While this sign of renewed activity is without alloy, very pleasing, it will not be time wasted if we spend a few moments in the consideration of the question—How shall we spend the coming months with the best advantage to the Exercise generally? Shall we content ourselves with jogging along in the old humdrum fashion, thinking of victories already achieved, and successes already accomplished; or shall we not rather brace ourselves once more to the work, and be determined that the progress of the future shall not merely equal but exceed that of the past? We are yet far from our goal; our work is in reality but little beyond its initial stages; we have therefore much—very much—to accomplish before we can "fold our arms in repose over the breast of contentment."

In the first place let us ask ourselves—How do we stand? Scientifically, although we may refer with pride to the very many meritorious achievements recorded in the past, have we not at the same time almost numberless failing places amongst us? Do we not see around us even yet too many instances of lethargy; too many cases if not of downright opposition to progress, at any rate of unwillingness on the part of our brethren to improve themselves? In how many places do we yet see the local companies still wasting their time Sunday after Sunday with performing selections of Stoney, or perhaps a few call changes, and never meeting for practice in order to rise to something better? And, further than this, how often do we yet find companies of change-ringers contenting themselves with ringing week by week the same method which they have rung for years, without so much as an effort to break out of the old rut, and in the interests of themselves and the science meet during the week to practice some other system, and endeavour to improve their striking. We have thus, from a scientific point of view, "much ground to encompass."

Then as to our position as ringers of the Church? Can it be said that we have accomplished all our desires in this direction? Far from it. Although we have, happily, raised ourselves considerably during the last ten years, we are yet a long way off where we ought to be. Our recognition as church workers is not of that universal character which we desire, and which is legitimately our due. While too many of our clergy fail to see our work in its proper light, and do not give us that encouragement which we contend they ought to, it must also be said that far too many ringers do not themselves rise to their proper positions, and act as co-partners in the work of the church. It is no use blinking this fact; that if ringers will not themselves "rise to the situation," they will look in vain for any efforts on the part of the clergy to pitchfork them into it. Nor can our clergy be blamed for this: take them as a rule, I believe we shall always find them ready to help their ringers when they show a desire to help themselves and take their proper part in the offices of the church. But the initiative in this matter must come from the ringers themselves. There is much work for us, therefore, in this direction.

We come now to our organisations. Successful as we have been in the past, is there one amongst us who will dare to assert that we are not sadly lacking even in this respect? Numerically strong though our County and Diocesan Associations are have they gathered within their ranks as yet even a majority of the ringers of the country? They may—generally speaking—have got the best men, scientifically and otherwise, that I do not question; but have they absorbed the main rank and file, as they ought to have? I fear not. This is a point, then, well worthy of our attention; this is an effort to which we should direct our energies, so that outsiders may be brought in, and we may all join together in prosecuting our good work of raising the Exercise in every way possible.

With these facts before us, let us, I say, enter upon our winter campaign with redoubled energy, and a determination to leave no stone unturned which will conduce to a better state of things in the future. By this means, when the summer holiday season once more draws upon us, and we relax our efforts for a time in order to get that rest which is necessary, we shall be able to look back with pleasure, and reflect that not only have we done our best, but that our efforts for good have been amply rewarded, as without doubt such would be the case.

It is to be hoped that the attempt now being made to restore the ring at Peterborough Cathedral to its original complement of ten will meet with every success. Seeing that the expense of the frames has been already provided for, surely it should require no great effort to raise the £400 needed for the bells. The restoration of this magnificent edifice will be sadly incomplete if it does not include this augmentation. But I have faith in the liberality of the Churchmen of this diocese, and look with confident anticipation for a notice that the work of replacing the lost five bells has been placed in the hands of one of our great founders.

I was sorry to read that the attempted peal of London Surprise came to grief after over one half of it had been rung, with "a clean smash up." Better luck next time.

But if the Midland Counties' Association were unfortunate in this instance, they certainly show to some advantage last week with their peals—four, and each in a different method. Perhaps the visit of the Revs. F. E. Robinson and C. D. P. Davies had something to do with it.

It appears that after all, there is some modicum of truth in the story of the "aristocratic" ringers of the great city. The story related by Mr. Jerram had quite escaped my recollection; if the ringers of that peal were not "real lords," at any rate they appear to have been sufficiently endowed with this world's goods to have been able to drive home in their own carriages. We ringers of to-day, unfortunately, have to content ourselves with trams and cheap 'busses; too often "shanks' pony" is our only available mode of getting to our domiciles. But what matters a long walk, when a good ring has been at the end of it? I remember an old ringer (since dead) of rather eccentric habits, who set off one Sunday morning, walked eight miles to a neighbouring town and rung for morning service; he then journeyed nine miles to another town and rung in the afternoon, after which he set off to see some ringing friends of his at another place twelve miles distant, and after spending the evening with them, returned to his home, six miles away. That was something like a Sunday's journey, and no mistake!

I have of late taken up more space than hitherto in my notes, but the approach of the cold season tells me I shall have to draw in a little. One or two other matters I wanted to allude to, but must defer them.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING AT MAGOR, MONMOUTH.

Thursday, September 27th, will long be remembered in the quiet country parish of Magor, Monmouthshire, whose massive old Priory church hard by the railway station is so well known to travellers between Bristol and Cardiff on the South Wales section of the Great Western Railway. The Vicar, the Rev. Pitt Eykyn, Hon. Sec. to the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association, assisted by his energetic wardens, has, amongst manifold other improvements to the church, lately procured a good serviceable quarter striking steeple clock, upon which rested a small deficit. The occasion of this years Harvest Festival was thought a good opportunity to endeavour to wipe this out, and so a committee was formed to organise some afternoon amusements in a field adjacent to the village, in addition to the ordinary religious services in the Priory church. The Magor ringers ushered in the day with repetitions of the plain course, and soon after the 8 a.m. celebration, four of the St. Michael's Gloucester Juniors, accompanied by Mr. Johnson Hern, of Newnham, and Mr. T. Brown, of Elmore, arrived, on the invitation of the Vicar, and soon the old five bells with the recently added treble, to make six, were hard into a 720 of Plain Bob Minor. T. Brown, 1; F. E. Hart, 2; S. E. Romans, 3; R. J. Wilkins (conductor), 4; Johnson Hern, 5; W. Sevier, 6. At the 11 a.m. service the Rev. E. V. Collins, Vicar of Caldicot, preached, and there were a number of local clergy in the long procession of white robed choristers. After service a 720 of Grandsire Minor was rung. W. Sevier, 1; F. E. Hart, 2; S. E. Romans, 3; R. J. Wilkins, 4; J. E. Hern, 5; T. Brown (conductor), 6. The sports commenced at 2 p.m. to the strains of the Caerlon band and the bells combined, and between eight and nine hundred persons passed into the field. In the tower a 720 of Canterbury Pleasure Minor led off the afternoon's work. T. Brown, 1; F. E. Hart, 2; S. E. Romans, 3; R. J. Wilkins, 4; J. E. Hern, 5; W. Sevier (conductor), 6. Also three 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles. T. Brown, 1; F. E. Hart, 2; J. E. Hern, 3; R. J. Wilkins, 4; Thomas James, 5; W. Sevier, 6. The above was Mr. T. James' first 6-score, and he is a member of the local band.

Whilst some six or seven hundred were being "tea'd" in a big tent, the Gloucestershire friends rang several courses of Grandsire Triples and Caters, tunes, etc. on the Vicar's set of handbells, presented to him by the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association some few years ago, and which greatly delighted those presented.

For the evening service at 7 o'clock several six-scores were rung. The church was packed long before the hour fixed for evensong, and after filling all the gangways the churchwardens had to send a large crowd outside away. The processional hymn in consequence could not be sung up the church as is customary here. Six clergy followed the choir of fifty-four strong. The prayers were intoned by the Vicar; the first lesson was read by the Rev. John Singleton, Vicar of Yarnscombe, and the second by the Rev. E. V. Collins, and an excellent sermon was preached by the Rev. Reginald Horton, Vicar of Dymock, Gloucestershire, from the words "Render unto God the things that be God's."

The Gloucestershire men greatly enjoyed their day's outing, particularly as it was a pleasure to find the "go" of the renovated ring of bells, so easy. They desire to thank the Vicar and churchwardens of Magor for their hospitality to them on this occasion.

THE HERTFORD COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

A DISTRICT MEETING will be held at Baldock to-day, Saturday, October 13th. The tower will be open for ringing from 3 p.m. and at 5 o'clock. A tea will be provided at the "George and Dragon" Hotel, after which a meeting will be held for general business, and also to consider the new rules drawn up by the officers, and any amendments to the same. Railway tickets at cheap fares will be issued by the Great Northern Railway to members, by their informing the Secretary not later than Wednesday, October 10th, of the stations from which they propose to travel, and on production of their receipt for the current subscription at the Booking Office.

St. Albans, September 25th. E. P. DEBENHAM, Hon. Sec.

ST. PAUL'S, WEDNESBURY.

The progress made in the improvements to St. Paul's Church during recent years, is creditable alike to the Vicar (the Rev. G. Tuthill), and parishioners. Some three years ago, by the bequest of Mrs. Richards, a peal of bells was presented to the Church, and for the first time on Monday week, they were rung under very favourable circumstances. The bells have been hung in the belfry, erected at the expense of Messrs. Elwell, by Mr. Taylor, of Loughborough, at a cost of about £600. After a service in the church, at which the Rev. G. Tuthill officiated, some merry peals were rung on the bells by eight sets of ringers. A luncheon was served in a marquee erected in a field near to the churchyard, at which there was a large attendance of the parishioners. The Rev. G. Tuthill presided, and amongst those present were the Mayor (Alderman R. Williams), Councillors A. Clews and E. Butler, the Rev. R. B. Stoney (Mayor's Chaplain), Rev. W. H. Horton, the Misses Handley, Mr. J. Handley, Mr. and Mrs. Job Edwards, Mr. John Knowles, Mr. B. C. Knowles, Mr. G. R. Knowles, Mr. I. Aston, Mr. and Mrs. R. Newson, Mr. A. Tonks, Mr. Taylor, Mr. T. Pritchard, Mr. D. Tonks, Mr. W. H. Turner, Mr. A. F. Brookes, Mr. E. Wilson, Superintendent J. Holland, &c., &c.

A number of speeches were made by several of the company, Mr. Alden proposing the health of Mr. Taylor, of Loughborough, the bell founder, and bearing testimony to the excellent manner in which he had carried out the work.

Mr. Taylor responded, and gave a number of hints to the bell ringers for their guidance in future ringing.

Mr. E. Wilson in a neat and appropriate speech presented "The teams." Their festivities that day had excited curiosity far and wide, even in authorities perhaps more important than themselves, for the bell ringers of the neighbouring towns were amongst them, and their functions had been well discharged. (Hear, hear). Their suburban church could now be regarded as complete, and for the first time the inhabitants of Wood Green had had the opportunity and privilege that day of hearing some of that music nearest heaven. (Hear, hear).

Mr. Small acknowledged the toast, dwelling upon the position and work of bell ringers, remarking that their position was now better than it had ever been, and was regarded as an office in the Church. (Hear, hear).

The Wednesbury company raised the bells, and started with a touch of Grandsire Triples, under the conductorship of Mr. T. Foster, but were unable to finish. Two courses of Treble Bob Major was given by a mixed band, under the conductorship of Mr. J. W. Taylor, the bell founder. A date touch of Stedman Triples, containing 1888 changes, was rang in 1 hr. 7 mins.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting will be held on Saturday, October 13th, at Holy Trinity Church, Bolton, service in the church at 3.30 p.m. Preacher, Rev. Charles Heath, M.A., Vicar of Walkden. Tea will be provided in the schools at 5 p.m. Tickets 1s. each, may be purchased from any member of the committee, and they trust that any member who intends to be present will acquaint his own local secretary before Tuesday, October 9th, in order that proper arrangements may be made. Ringers not members of the Association will be heartily welcomed. Ringing will take place at the various churches through the kindness of the authorities. The secretary will be in attendance at the schools to take subscriptions previous to the services. Any other information required may be had from the undersigned.

E. PARKER.

GAMBLING AND BETTING.

This week has seen the meeting of the Church Congress in the city of Manchester. The subjects for treatment by those assembled are many and varied, though unfortunately none of them have the remotest connection with bells or ringing. A paper read by the Dean of Rochester (Dr. Hole) on the above subject, is however one that we have thought it proper to re-produce it, as the subject is of much greater importance than a mere cursory glance at the above title indicates. The Dean commences thus:—

I. When I travelled, not long ago, with a number of betting men, and one of them looked up from his newspaper, in which I saw afterwards a programme of the Church Congress to be held at Manchester, and when he inquired angrily, "What can a parson"—he prefixed an epithet which seemed to me to be appropriate only to a clergyman who had cut himself in the act of shaving—"what can a sanguinary person know about gambling and betting? What can 'e know about an 'oss?"—I had no time to apply to the question, because the train was just stopping at a station, and the inquirer left it for the race-course.

My answer would have been that, in this matter, we parsons have a very large and sad experience. If, in our "salad days, when we were green in judgment," at college, and in society, we ourselves escaped without harm, we can all of us remember instances in which the evil spirit of gambling and betting not only separated many friends, long and happy attachments broken for ever on the night when one lost to the other more than he knew how to pay, but far worse than this, we have in sorrowful remembrance many companions and contemporaries, of whom it might have truly been said, when they "went upon the turf," that it had been better for them had they gone under it—noblemen, gentlemen, men of honour and integrity, but gradually contaminated by the atmosphere in which they moved, first dupes and then deceivers.

And ever since those days, in our intercourse with all grades of society, with all sorts and conditions of men, we, whose vocation it is to warn against the temptations and fascinations of sin, to expose its delusions, and to oppose its power; we, who are distressed to hear so often the history of human weakness, of human sorrow and shame; we, who are permitted to rejoice so often when we minister to minds diseased the only true consolation and cure; we, always and everywhere, are witnesses of the disastrous injury, temporal and spiritual, the misery and disgrace, which are wrought by gambling and betting.

Wherefore, when I am asked what the parson knows of these things, I reply that we speak that which we know, and testify that we have seen when we affirm—

1. That gambling and betting are directly opposed to the teaching of Divine revelation, of the law and the Gospel alike; and that they prevent a man from fulfilling the gracious purpose for which God made and redeemed him.

2. That being accompanied, as a rule with rare exceptions, by other vices—extravagance, sensual indulgence, (1) and idleness, they detract from our national honour, our industrial prosperity, and our domestic happiness.

3. That the excuses made are contemptible, and that—

4. It is the duty of all Christians, patriots, and philanthropists, to denounce this evil, and to unite in prayerful, thoughtful, practical efforts to suppress and to expel it.

II. First, then, I maintain that gambling and betting are directly opposed to those revelations of the Divine will by which we are taught our duty to God and to each other.

It has been said that men may gamble and bet without breaking any one of the Ten Commandments; but the author of this statement would be hopelessly perplexed to illustrate it by an example. We shall find, on the contrary, if we go through the Decalogue, referring to our experience, and remembering the public records, that these habits are fraught with special temptations to transgress them, one all all.

Consider those of the first Table, which command our entire obedience to Him Who has declared Himself to be "a jealous God," and Who says to every one of us, "My son, give Me thine heart, and set up no idol there. Reverence My name, and when thou hast done thy six days of work—for this is My immutable law, 'In the sweat of thy face shall thou eat bread,'—then keep the seventh as a day of holy rest, and delight thyself in the Lord."

Is there not proof, as abundant as it is sad, that the fascinations and excitements of habitual gambling and betting lure men's hearts from this holy allegiance and absorb them in things of the earth, earthly. May not the prophet's words be applied to them that they are "mad upon their idols"—idols of silver and of gold?

Do they keep the door of their lips? Is the tongue, given to us for prayer and praise, for wise and merciful words, the best member that they have? or is it an unruly evil, loving to speak all words that may do hurt? Is it used as by those who believe that He will come to be their Judge, Who has said, "By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." "Swear not at all."

"Six days shalt thou labour." What labour, what honest, manly work, honourable to themselves or beneficial to their fellowmen, is done by those who gamble and bet? Do they keep the Christian Sabbath, the Lord's Day, holy? Is the betting-book exchanged for the Bible? Are the cards and dice put away? Would the men who run horses for the Prix de Paris, who go to see or bet upon the race, have any scruples as to the Prix de Manchester or the Prix de Sandown taking place on the Sunday, if others made no objection?

III. Passing on to the second Table of the law, to those Commandments which teach us our duty to our neighbour, to the Fifth Commandment, "Honour thy father and thy mother," I appeal to your own observation, it may be to your painful experience, how many sons have been led to disobedience, to that spirit of discontent in which the prodigal said to his father, Give me my portion of goods; how much enmity, privation and disgrace has been brought into homes, where there had been only love and plenty and fair fame, by those first temptations to gamble and to bet? And these vices seem almost always to induce a selfishness which eliminates the purer affections. Some few years ago a gentleman, going through the work-house at Sheffield, was greatly surprised to see among the inmates an old woman he had known in a comfortable home of her own. He expressed his sorrowful astonishment to the master, and added, "I know for a fact that one of her sons is earning at this time between £4 and £5 a week." On this information the master sought and found the man referred to, and when he remonstrated with him this was the reply he received, "If you had lost £40 on that cursed handicap last week, you'd not be so fierce about paying for other folks."

But our righteous indignation gives place to far more powerful emotions, and the spirit within us is oppressed and awed, as we repeat the words, "Thou shalt do no murder," and think of the number of those broken hearts, in which life has not only been embittered, enfeebled, and gradually crushed out by fierce excitements, by terrible anxieties, and by actual want; but in an agony of wild despair has been ended here by those who could no longer endure it. How often have we read in our newspapers (there were two instances last year in the same month), "Suicide of a betting man." Frith's picture of the youth with the pistol in his hand is no mere sensational fancy. The number of deaths at Monte Carlo may have been exaggerated, but there were two, if not three, when I was in the neighbourhood not many years ago. Of one case I had full particulars. The purser of a Russian man-of-war, anchored in the bay of Villa Franca, came ashore and went to the gambling-room at Monte Carlo. At first he won, then he lost, staked a large sum belonging to the ship, lost that, and destroyed himself. More recently, seeing in one of the most reliable provincial newspapers, that there had been fifteen suicides within six months, I wrote to the editor, whom I knew personally, and asked him kindly to send me proof of the information. He wrote immediately to his correspondent, a Frenchman resident at Nice, and received from him and forwarded to me minute details of the last four miserable deaths. A young officer in the gendarmerie, having lost 12,000f., shot himself in the grounds of the gaming-house, first in the throat and then in the head; a man of sixty-five, having, after many days of play, lost all he had, 55,000f., hung himself in one of the kiosques of the garden; a lady, the mother of a family, also lost all, and threw herself from the fourth story of an hotel in which she lodged; and a

Captain Wolff, of the Prussian infantry, shot himself in his bedroom. The four sous which they found in his purse dispelled all doubt as to the impulse of this ruined man. Nevertheless ladies and gentlemen go from Cannes and elsewhere to this Aceldama and stake their Napoleons, "just for the fun of the thing," side by side with those who may recover their rouleaux, but never again their reputation; and it was well said by an old man to a youth, boasting in a railway carriage that he had been to Monte Carlo and brought back thirty napoleons, "You don't know, sir, whose money you have won; your thirty pieces may have belonged to a suicide, and so be the price of blood."

On Commandment VII., "Thou shalt not commit adultery," I will only say that it has been publicly affirmed, the writer giving as his authority the police employed in the neighbourhood of St. John's-wood, on racecourses, and elsewhere, that a large proportion of "kept women," as they are called, are supported by those who gamble and bet, and that a majority of the most important cases brought into the divorce court have a similar association.

Repeating Commandment VIII., "Thou shalt not steal," I think you will endorse my conviction, that the gambler who cheats and the betting man who bets on a certainty are mere robbers, although the professional thieves would hardly condescend to recognise them as worthy of enrolment in their society, seeing that they have neither the courage of the burglar nor the adroit activity of the prig. These fifth rate petty larceners are not many nor dangerous, as they are soon found out and relegated to the mixed company of card-sharpers, thimble-riggers, and welsers, and other uncertificated poachers who hover around the outskirts of the great preserves; but there are numerous sportsmen, having licenses to kill game within the covert, who have no scruples about shooting a hen-pheasant in a tree or a hare on her seat, if they are sure that nobody will see. I mean that there are many men who gamble and bet who will take every advantage, short of actual dishonesty, to over-reach others. So far from being condemned they are lauded and envied for their ingenuity, and that which the severe moralist might denounce as a conspiracy to defraud is not seldom designated as "a good thing," and the good men who arrange this little game and complete it—I beg pardon, "bring it off," "pull it through,"—are admired by those whom they have not "let in" as wise and happy in their deed. We inferior mortals, who cannot raise our appreciations to these sublime heights of sagacity, are apt to appreciate, as dullards do, and to make some such comments as that of the negro speaking of a brother black—"I shall not call 'im a tief, but if I were a chicken and saw that darkie a loafing round, I'd roost 'igh—dat's all."

AN UNRULY CHORISTER.

At the end of a vestry meeting at St. Sepulchre's Church, Holborn, on Thursday, Mr. S. G. Lidstone requested the chairman to explain how it was that there was no service in the church the previous Sunday morning. Mr. Herbert said that three weeks ago the vicar (the Rev. James Jackson) received a letter from the curate-in-charge (the Rev. Kennedy Bell), stating that the writer had received from one of the choir boys an insult which no apology could wipe out. The churchwardens consented to withhold the boy from the choir on the following Sunday if the curate would undertake to specify a particular charge. A week later the curate sent a letter which amounted to this—that the writer had no personal feeling against the boy, but complained that his general conduct was bad. The boy was withheld from the choir for another Sunday, so that the churchwardens might have the opportunity of considering the matter. The vicar refused to take the responsibility upon himself of sending the boy out of the choir, and left the matter in the hands of the churchwardens. After consideration the churchwardens resolved to reinstate the boy in the choir, a specific charge not having been made against him. On Sunday week Mr. Bell told the churchwardens that he should refuse to officiate unless the boy was put out of the choir. He (the chairman) had therefore to take upon himself the responsibility of dismissing the congregation. In the evening, at the request of the vicar, the boy agreed not to go into the choir; so that there was no repetition of the unpleasantness. Since then the churchwardens had put themselves into communication with the Bishop, who wrote:—

Gentlemen,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th. The same post has also brought me a letter from Mr. Bell. Mr. Bell was wrong in refusing to officiate; but his claim to control the choir and to say who should sing in the choir and who should not was a valid claim, and could only be set aside by the vicar himself. I have written to him to point out his error, which I have no doubt he will not repeat. But I hope you will be good enough to see that no one sings in the choir without his leave when he is conducting the service.

Mr. S. G. Lidstone then moved that the vicar be respectfully requested to desire Mr. Kennedy Bell to resign. He remarked that the disgraceful occurrence which took place in the church was the outcome of the wretched state of affairs which had existed in the church for a considerable time. Two years ago their worthy and respected vicar unfortunately met with an accident which had prevented him ever since attending the church services. The senior curate (the Rev. T. Pugh) was entirely past work, and the church was in charge of the other curate, Mr. Kennedy Bell. In any other denomination there would be power to punish such a failure in duty. He had thought there was such a power in the Church of England before he was undeceived by this unhappy occurrence. Mr. Simpson seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously. Mr. J. C. Crump moved a resolution asking the Bishop to investigate the matter, and make such arrangements as he may think fit to further the unity of the parish and the spiritual welfare of the parishioners. Mr. W. H. Woodhill seconded the resolution, which was also passed.

It seems to us that the "unity of the parish" would not have been disturbed had the churchwardens meted out some punishment, if only a reprimand, to the offender. Clergymen, "if they be but curates," are entitled to respect from precocious choristers.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROCHDALE BRANCH.

A Meeting was held at St. Alban's church on Saturday, September 22nd, the object in view being to form a branch of the above Association in this district. Previous to the meeting, touches were brought round in the following methods: Grand-sire Triples, Grandsire Major, and Stedman Triples. An adjournment was then made to the schools, and Mr. A. E. Wreaks was voted to the chair, when he read a letter from the Committee, who submitted the name of the Rochdale branch to the members, so that they might not clash with the Rochdale and District Association, whose district is a radius of ten miles round Rochdale. A discussion followed on the name of the branch, when it was unanimously carried to accept the name submitted to the meeting, the objects of the branch being to get new members, and also meetings at different churches at the members' convenience, and trying to get out of the old Grand-sire groove, and learn new methods.

Mr. F. Birtwistle was elected Hon. Secretary. The district will include Radcliffe, Bury, Heywood, Rochdale, Milnrow, Newhey, Moorside, and Oldham. The district contains eleven peals of eight and one of twelve, surely enough if every member will do his duty to get a good support for the Association. A vote of thanks was given to the Vicar and wardens for the use of the bells and schools, and to Mr. Wreaks for presiding.

Mr. WREAKS thanked the members for their vote, and assured them it gave him great pleasure to do his best for the Association. Moorside church was named for the next meeting of the Association, if permission could be obtained, on Saturday, October 27th.

A District Meeting will be held at Aldington, on Monday, October 22nd. Those who wish to attend are requested to communicate with the Secretary. Mersham (about three miles) will probably be visited. Allowance 2s. and 1s. 6d., which will be paid up to 1 p.m. at Aldington.

RINGING WITHOUT ROPE-SIGHT.

In "THE BELL NEWS" for March, 1885 there was an interesting paper on ringing copied from an old book called "The School of Recreation." In 1701, it appears, the young change-ringer was taught first to distinguish the notes of a peal of bells, imitating them with the voice, and, if necessary, getting the help of a singing master. He was then to ring by ear and eye, the ear giving him the order of the bells in the last change, and the eye finding the rope which he must follow in the next. This is much the same thing as pricking changes upon paper, and seems a good plan for ringing five or six bells slowly, as was then the fashion. But the ear is not so quick or sure as the eye, and, for one reason or another, rope-sight has come to be the ringers' principal guide. However, I have nothing to say on this point, though I should like to make some remarks upon another system of a different kind.

A change-ringer has to know the course of his bell, and must be able to pick out from the maze of moving ropes the one which he has to follow. Now, the bell which precedes him in each change is not there by chance, and if there is any easy rule for knowing which it must be, it is worth while to learn it. A ringer who can say beforehand in what order the other bells should pass him has a valuable aid to weak rope-sight, he can ring on steadily when others are blundering, he can practise a new method by his own fireside, and if there are only five or six bells in the tower which he frequents, he can hang up his hat and coat to represent extra ropes, and drill himself in a course of Triples with lashed clapper. But it is hardly necessary to enlarge upon the advantages of the system if it can be learnt without much trouble. A well-known ringer once said to me that the plan was easy enough, but was of no use for other methods. This is true so far as it goes, but a new method always requires some study, and in those methods in which the treble has a plain hunt one has only to observe the variations which occur at the treble leads. The rule in Stedman Doubles is not so obvious, and I have doubted whether it is worth while to attempt to learn it. I have, however, solved the problem to my own satisfaction, and I should like to give an outline of it for the benefit of any one who may feel inclined to work it out for himself.

The figures in the margin represent the work of treble in the plain course of Stedman Doubles according to an old system which I have explained elsewhere. The short lines (—) are for leads, and the figures left and right represent the bells followed at handstroke and backstroke respectively. Letters a, b, c, d, ought perhaps to be used instead of figures, to shew that the rule is true for any bell, but it is not usual to ring by algebra. When the peal begins treble is leaving a quick six. It will be observed that the first pair of bells, 2, 3, are taken again in the dodging behind as shewn by the brackets, and the second pair, 4, 5, in the slow course, in a manner which is easily remembered. In fact, they occur at hand or backstroke exclusively several times in succession. So much being premised, the other bells are easily found. There are some other points to be noticed, but they need not be mentioned here. All that is required is a little practice with pencil and paper, which should at least furnish an agreeable diversion for winter evenings.

THE SOCIETY OF TRINITY YOUTHS.

ST. ALPHEGE, GREENWICH.—Until further notice, meetings of the Society for the transaction of business are held after ringing on the first Tuesday in each month, in the vestry-room of this church, by kind permission of the Vicar and churchwardens.

FREDK. W. THORNTON, Secretary.

WANTED by a Change Ringer, aged 22 Years, a Situation as Gardener, Single-handed Place preferred. Good character. Can ring the principal Methods. Apply T. Stedman, Capel, near Dorking, Surrey.

THE BEDFORDSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

A Quarterly Meeting of the above Association was held at Houghton Conquest on Saturday, September 29th. There was only a small attendance of members, owing probably to the fact that there is no railway station within some miles, and those who came had to face some distance by road. The Church is a fine one, and exceedingly well-cared for. In the tower is a ring of six bells, tenor about 14 cwt, cast at the Whitechapel Foundry in 1840. A short time ago they were overhauled and put into good order, and the going is now all that can be desired.

A contingent from Bedford drove up soon after half-past three and were met in the churchyard by the Rev. S. P. Jones (Curate), and Rev. W. W. C. Baker (Secretary). No time was lost in getting to work, and the bells were raised in peal.

Then followed a 720 Bob Minor with nine bobs and six singles by the following: F. Sharpe 1; F. Smith 2; F. Keech 3; Rev. W. W. C. Baker 4; I. Hills 5. C. W. Clarke (conductor) 6.

Also a 720 Oxford Treble Bob Minor with nine bobs. C. Pass 1; F. Smith 2; I. Hills 3; Rev. W. W. C. Baker 4; C. W. Clarke 5; W. G. Biggs (conductor) 6. During the ringing the Rev. E. W. Bowling, Rector of the parish, came into the belfry and welcomed the members of the association.

Then followed a 720 Oxford Bob Minor: 30 bobs and 2 singles. W. G. Biggs 1; F. Sharpe 2; F. Keech 3; C. W. Clarke (conductor) 4; F. Smith 5; I. Hills 6. An adjournment was now made for tea, after which a 720 Grandsire Minor was brought round with 38 bobs and 22 singles. C. Pass 1; F. Sharpe 2; F. Smith 3; I. Hills 4; C. W. Clarke 5; W. G. Biggs (conductor) 6. Then followed two 120's of Grandsire Doubles in which four of the local ringers took part, this being their first essay in half-pull ringing. It is to be hoped that a branch of the association will soon be formed here—change-ringing actively prosecuted. Those present wish to take this opportunity of thanking the Rector for kindly placing the bells at their disposal, and the ringers for having everything in readiness. It was resolved to meet at Leighton Buzzard for the next quarterly meeting if permission be granted.

ST. JAMES' SOCIETY, BRISTOL.

On Saturday afternoon, September 8th, the members of this society paid a visit to the little town of Thornbury. Starting from Bristol at 2.40, a very pleasant drive by brake of about ten miles through Gloucestershire was much enjoyed. Thornbury was reached at 4.10., and Mr. Frank Howell, who had all things in readiness for a pull, welcomed the party upon their first visit to this place. The Rev. E. H. Rogers (Curate of St. James' Bristol), then put in an appearance, having come over from Bath with a party of the British Association. Upon arriving in the belfry a 504 of Stedman Triples was rung. The party then adjourned to the "Swan Hotel," where tea was partaken. An attempt at a date touch of Bob Major was decided on, but previous to starting for it a touch of Grandsire Triples was rung, then a ramble through the gardens of Thornbury Castle. An attempt at a date touch was then made, but unfortunately came to grief after a few courses had been rung. A couple of courses of Grandsire Major with Mr. Frank Howell brought a very pleasant half-holiday to a close. The ringers wish to thank the Vicar for allowing them the use of the bells, and Mr. Howell for the arrangements he made for them.

THE ESSEX ASSOCIATION.

A DISTRICT MEETING will be held at Loughton to-day, Saturday, October 6th. The tower of St. John the Baptist (eight bells), will be open to members during the afternoon. Chigwell tower (five bells), two miles distant, will also be open. Tea (price 6d. each to members), at the "King's Head," immediately after the business meeting, which will be held at 4.30 p.m. Loughton station, on the Epping and Ongar line, may be reached by frequent trains from Fenchurch Street or Liverpool Street, and from stations on the North London Railway.

Writtle, Chelmsford.

T. L. PAPILLON, Hon. Sec.

ERRATUM.—In the peal of Grandsire Major rung at St. Stephen's, Rochester Row, on Saturday, September 22nd., and recorded in following issue of "BELL NEWS." George C. Hammond rung the second, and not Charles Hammond as stated.

ST. NICHOLAS SOCIETY, GREAT YARMOUTH.

On Saturday, September 22nd, the members of the above Society had their first annual outing, the place selected being Redenhall. The party, which numbered twelve, including the Rev. James F. Hastings, left the Southtown Station for Harleston at 8 o'clock a.m. On the journey the handbells were brought into requisition, and as the train steamed into the different stations the sound of Bob Major and Grandsire Triples soon brought a company of smiling faces to the carriage door, and all seemed to be interested in watching the bells passing up and down. At 9.50 we steamed into Harleston, and were soon on the road to Redenhall, where we found Captain Moore waiting our arrival with everything in readiness. The Captain having pointed out to his visitors the several features of interest connected with the church and belfry, the ropes were taken hold of by the Yarmouth band, and a well struck touch of Grandsire Triples was brought round, also some Oxford Treble Bob, in which Captain Moore and Mr. Prime took part. Time was up to catch the train for Bungay, having reached here safely, the secretary soon found out Mr. Adams, who soon had all ready, whilst the company dropped into the hotel opposite the church, for dinner, to which ample justice was done. Having rang some touches of Triples and Major, another move was made for Beccles where is a peal of ten, tenor 28 cwt. Again welcomed by our friends who were waiting our arrival, but who had unfortunately forgotten to grease the bells, the result was that every body got uncomfortably hot in pulling the back bells especially. However, all spent a very enjoyable day, and we heartily thank one and all for the kind manner in which they received us throughout, and hope soon to have the pleasure of seeing some of them at Yarmouth, where they know there is a grand peal of ten in good going order.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Sunday September 22nd, Messrs J. H. Hardcastle, J. Broadley, H. Raistrick, James Angus, J. Hardcastle, Jun., and S. Clark, of the Bradford Parish Church Company, accompanied by M. G. Titterton, of St. James' Bolton, Mr. Fred London, of Shipley, and Mr. Jesse Naylor, had their annual outing. Journeying by an early train to Sowerby, they rang for morning service a touch of Grandsire Triples; service being over they were entertained to dinner by Mr. D. Culpan, after which they once more set the bells going to the tune of Kent Treble Bob. This touch having been successfully brought round, a move was made down the hill, the visitors having the pleasure of an interview with the veteran Mr. Sottanstill, who looked much better than might have been expected. They reached Halifax about four o'clock, and after partaking of tea, proceeded to the tower of the Parish Church, where they rang a touch of Grandsire on the light eight, and afterwards a service peal of Kent Treble Bob Royal. They wish to thank their brother strings of Sowerby and Halifax, and also Mr. Culpan, for the kind arrangements made for their comfort during their brief stay.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1888.

A letter this week among our correspondence will strike the reader as being something out of the common. Certainly it is not often that a secretary of a junior society—a designation which is applicable to the "Copley Youths"—publishes with such aptness and non-reticence its history and constitution, and what it labors to effect. In this case we venture to believe that the letter will do an incalculable amount of good. The work of this society seems to be systematically carried out; the plan of operations, as sketched in the letter of MR. HARDCASTLE, jun.—by the way evidently a worthy son of a worthy father—is one to be imitated with great profit and advantage. The objects in view and the manner of attaining them are so described that it is difficult to select one for particular commendation. Societies about being established, or others who have under consideration the revision of their constitution, will do well to take a leaf from the book of the "Copley Scholars."

It is unfortunately too true that the ringers of many parishes throughout the country are without the least means of organisation whatever. We mean "local" organisation, for those whom we are now referring to cannot by any means be got to join a County or Diocesan Association. They meet only when they have a mind to, or when a fee is to be earned, in which latter case they are generally prompt in their appearance, and punctual to the minute. For a regular periodical meeting they have no liking. They are entirely indifferent to the progress of the Exercise; reading no journal of the Art, they are practically uninterested in its history, the relations of famous ringing achievements are to them stale, flat, and unprofitable. It is pleasing to know that such bands as these are fast giving place to others who take a pride in having the affairs of the belfry conducted with some degree of regularity, in other words, of having a properly-constituted society with necessary regulations and approved formalities. Whoever sets his hand to such an improvement is sure, sooner or later, to reap the reward of his perseverance. And we would impress, with all the power we are capable, upon young ringers the great necessity of a good organization. The ringers of every town and village should be organized societies, governed by laws of a simple though effective description. When these have become universal, we may "rest and be thankful." There is very little trouble needed to effect such a result even in the remotest village, and the incumbent would in most cases help forward the movement. Those who desire to so benefit themselves and the Art, cannot do better than shape their endeavours after the manner of the "Copley Scholars."

THE SOCIETY OF COPLEY SCHOLARS, BRADFORD.

SIR,—In reply to "Free Lance," while thanking him for his good wishes, have much pleasure in complying with his request for some information as to the above society. About twelve months ago Mr. Copley commenced a special practice on Friday evenings for the young ringers in Bradford and district. These practices proved so successful and satisfactory that it was proposed a few months ago to form ourselves into a society for the purpose of carrying on the work in a systematic manner. Several meetings were held, the project being taken up heartily, and on June 15th last we adopted a code of rules and gave the Society the name of "Copley Scholars," out of respect to our teacher. We have at the present time thirty members who are connected with the five towers of the district, containing one peal of ten, three peals of eight, and one peal of six. We meet every Friday evening at each of these towers in turn as arranged by the committee (formed of one representative from each tower in union) a list of the fixtures being posted in each belfry. That is in brief our history and constitution, the principle we work upon is that of self-help. When a young man wishes to become a ringer he specifies which tower he desires to connect himself with. Our members at that branch then undertake the duty of training him until he can ring his bell in rounds. As soon as he is able to do that to the satisfaction of the captain he is then proposed a member of this Society, and receives a card of membership and copy of rules, and joins in the Friday evening practices. At these practices we work upon the plan of the more advanced members helping forward the recruits, and as each one progresses he in turn takes his part likewise in helping on the new beginners. It is in fact a mutual improvement society in every sense of the term. We have found many advantages from our plan of operations; one is that any person desirous of learning to ring has every facility for so doing, and by reason of our not interfering with the practices of each company he is thus enabled to have two ringing nights a week. It also secures a continuity of practice, and through our plan of visiting each tower in turn, the members get accustomed to the "go" of all the rings in the district, besides being better able to ring with each other in mixed companies. There are many other advantages which I might mention were it necessary, but I trust I have stated sufficient to show that our Society is formed upon a good basis for promoting the art of change-ringing. We have every reason to be satisfied with the results so far, and look forward in future to even greater ones. I believe there are many districts where our plan might be adopted with advantage, and should anyone desire further information respecting our rules and mode of carrying on our work, I shall be most happy to furnish them with it.

A REASONABLE DOUBT.

SIR,—I notice the report in your issue of the 22nd inst., of the trial of some recently introduced tubes at Warminster, which are designated "bells." It has been a question in my mind for some time past, if these instruments can be truly called bells? and if by sounding one of such instruments can be a fit interpretation and exposition of the words of direction given in the preface of our Prayer Book: "the Curate that ministereth shall cause a bell to be tolled thereunto a convenient time before he begin, that the people may come to hear God's word, and to pray with him."? I wonder if the use of tubes is legal, even setting aside truth and conformity to ancient and common practice? be they ever so soft, musical, and pretty?

BASILDON CHURCH BELLS, BERKS.

In a belfry near Reading, the tenor of the above peal of four was the subject of discussion after the usual practice on a recent evening, one of the village ringers being of opinion that it rang as heavy as St. Mary's, (Reading) tenor, viz. 28 cwt.

Being in the neighbourhood of the village a few days ago, the writer took the opportunity of taking the note of each bell, as a quarter to four was chimed from the peal. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew, and is supposed to have been built in the reign of Edward II., it contains handsome monuments to Sir Francis Sykes, and family, formerly resident here. It was near this place that in excavating for the G.W.R. some beautiful Roman tessellated pavement was found near the surface, and on an elevated spot near the river Thames, several coins of Vespasian in good preservation with domestic utensils, several human skeletons, and a Roman sword. The Inscriptions on the bells are given below:—

HOW TWO RINGERS SPENT A PLEASANT HOLIDAY.

Messrs. C. J. Butterworth and Lancelot Newton, of the Durham and Newcastle Association, having agreed to have a fortnight's holiday together, they arranged it so that a portion of the time should be spent with their ringing friends. Having written to Mr. F. Birtwistle, of Rochdale, that gentleman was not long in setting the machinery in motion. We left Durham station at 8.0 a.m. on Saturday, September 8th, and booked to Rochdale, from which place we made our way to Heywood, where a peal of Grandsire Triples had been arranged. This peal came off successfully, and as it was Mr. Newton's first attempt for a peal, the result was very satisfactory. Afterwards Mr. Millett, senior, a local ringer, prevailed upon us to go and have tea with him, when he invited us to the Conservative Club, in the smoke-room of which we had a pleasant chat. As the evening was getting late we bid him adieu and made again for Rochdale, our then destination. The following morning we attended service at St. James's, and in the afternoon we went to Healey and rang a touch of Plain Bob Minor for service; in the evening we visited the Parish Church and for service rang a touch of Grandsire Triples.

On the Monday morning we were astir pretty early, as by 6.30 the iron horse was speeding on its way to Blackpool, that favourite resort for Lancashire people. The following day found us amongst our Oldham friends, and as per arrangement, we met at Milnrow at 6.30 in the evening and brought Mr. Thurstans' five part peal of Grandsire Triples to a successful issue. Wednesday we spent at the Agricultural Show, and on Thursday we had a ramble over the hills, and as per arrangement turned up at 6.30 in the evening at St. Alban's Church, when Mr. Wreaks conducted us through our first peal of Bob Major, neither of us having attempted to ring the method on light bells before. Our hands were now beginning to feel a little tender so we did not press for any more peals to be arranged for that week, but took ourselves off to Manchester to see the Australian Cricketers at Old Trafford; Saturday we spent in a convivial manner with our friends. Sunday morning found us at All Saints, Hamer, where we went through a 720 of Grandsire Minor for service; in the afternoon (we had arranged to have the afternoon with Messrs. F. Birtwistle and George Hoyle), we took the tram to Oldham, then walked on to Ashton, inspected the fine new tower which is now almost completed at the Parish Church, then made for St. Peter's where thanks to our friends, Mr. S. Wood had got the company together a little earlier than usual. We then went through our first touch (672) of Kent Treble Bob Major, then sat down and watched our companions and local ringers ring a few courses of Stedman Triples.

It hardly requires me to speak upon the merits of the Ashton men, for there are no ringers in the universe, I should think, who are not acquainted with them by repute at any rate. It only requires one visit to prove that we probationers have something to go through before we are proficient in the art of change-ringing. Mr. Geo. Longden took us in tow after we left the church, and we visited the meeting-house and saw the silver pewter presented to the Ashton Ringers in 1786, and I should say that the young blood intend to keep up that stamina, in the manner they handled the handbells is anything to go by. On the Monday following we had a night's practice at Hamer, when we rang a touch of Plain Bob, and a 720 of Kent Treble Bob Minor; on the Tuesday we made our way to Bacup and spent the practice night with the Christ Church Company, and enjoyed touches of Oxford Treble Bob Minor and College Single; on the Wednesday we spent a pleasant day in Manchester, visiting those popular grounds—Belle Vue Gardens.

Thursday morning saw us early astir again, and on our way to Southport, a pretty town on the Lancashire Coast, where Mr. Hill, the local steeple-keeper, had six men to meet us at Christ Church in the evening, when we made an attempt for a peal of Bob Major, but unfortunately the second rope broke, and as there was not time to make a fresh start a well-struck Date Touch was brought round in the same method in 1 hr. 7 min.

Our time being now limited we did not arrange for any more ringing; we got safely back to Durham on Saturday the 22nd, having spent a very happy fortnight, and we beg, Mr. Editor, through you to tender our sincere thanks to the secretary and various members of the Lancashire Association who did their best to make our visit to their district a very pleasant one, and one to be ever remembered.

CHEPSTOW CHURCH BELLS.

For some time past it has been known that the bells of the parish church of St. Mary have been in a bad, not to say dangerous, condition. The peal, which consists of eight bells, was cast by William Evans, of Chepstow, some 150 years ago, but the constant striking of the clappers in one place has worn the bells thin on those particular places, and render them liable to crack at any moment. Consequently the vicar some couple of weeks ago ordered that they should not be rung for service until something had been done to them. The bearings and spindles of the bells are also very much worn. A specialist from Messrs. Warner, of the famous Cripplegate foundry, inspected the bells and stated that they required to be quarter-turned, and that the estimated cost of putting them into a proper condition would be about £105. On Tuesday night a meeting of parishioners was held in the church school-room, when a committee was appointed to carry out the scheme of restoration, and subscriptions to the amount of some £56 were promised.—Local Paper.

FROME, SOMERSETSHIRE—THE CURFEW.

As usual during the winter months here, the Curfew began on Monday evening last at 8 o'clock. This old custom of ringing the Curfew was revived by the late venerable vicar, the Rev. W. J. E. Bennett, M.A., the 7th bell of the Parish Church being used for that purpose. It is to be hoped the younger members connected with the Guild of Ringers at St. John's will take the advice of "Free Lance" of last week as being particularly applicable to them, and make every effort for advancement in change-ringing, and thus acquit themselves as worthy members of the exercise, and a credit to their church, captain, and Guild, which latter now rests with them, seeing that everything has been done for their convenience, viz.:—the renovation of the frame work, and general machinery of the bells; and their (the ringers) reinstatement in the original ringing chamber, and by the possession of a set of handbells. Surely ere long "BELL NEWS" ought to contain an account of a touch (other than stoney) being performed by them. G.

INTERESTING RESTORATION AT MONMOUTH.

Soon after the date of the founding of the ancient Norman Church of St. Thomas, Monmouth (A.D. 1039) a cross was erected on the same lines in the adjacent square of St. Thomas, as may be clearly seen by the formation of the old base. The cross originally stood in the centre of St. Thomas' Square, and there is a very sad history in connection with it, and which, happily, was the last example of a most cruel and barbarous custom. On the first day of April, 1764, a young woman, only 18 years of age, was condemned at the Monmouth Assizes to be burnt to death for poisoning her mistress, and the dreadful sentence was carried out close to St. Thomas' Cross. Mr. Crompton Roberts, a local gentleman whose many deeds of charity has endeared him to men of all shades of opinion in Monmouth, has had in view for some years past the restoration of the cross, and he has now succeeded in having it restored. Mr. W. Simmonds, a local builder, was consulted as to the foundation and fixing, etc., and plans were drawn by Mr. F. A. Powell, Architect, Monmouth, on the lines of St. Thomas' Church and vestry. The ancient base, which is about 2 ft. 6 inches square, has been elevated by three steps, the bottom one being 10 ft. 3 in. square. From the centre of the old base springs a very fine panelled shaft, surmounted by suitable continuations in keeping with the base. The shaft is the work of Mr. Wall, of Newport, Monmouthshire. Mr. Crompton Roberts, with his usual generosity, defrays the whole of the expense. Eight years ago the same gentleman restored the church itself, where can now be seen a very fine Norman arch in stone that is a great attraction to tourists. Previous to the restoration at the Church the above arch, which is over the front door, was in Roman cement, which was taken down and replaced in brown sandstone.

ST. MICHAEL'S JUNIORS, GLOUCESTER.

On Thursday evening, September 20th, a meeting of this company was held in the tower of the parish church, for the purpose of unveiling a tablet to commemorate the first peal of the company rung at Upton St. Leonard's, on the 30th of June last. Proceedings began with a touch of 447 Grandsire Triples, S. E. Romans, 1; F. E. Hart, 2; R. Brunson, 3; F. E. Ward, (Cheltenham, conductor), 4; G. L. Brunson, 5; H. L. James, 6; R. A. Barrett, 7; E. E. Bewick, 8.

The RECTOR, the Rev. G. JAMES, then said, that it was with great pleasure that he was there, to commemorate perhaps the most auspicious event in the career of the society. He felt sure that the members of the society felt highly honoured by the presence of the Master of the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association, who had come to unveil the tablet. He was sure that no one was more proud of the success of the young society (founded September 6th, 1887) than he was, and no doubt there were feelings of pride in the minds of those eight young men whose names were to occupy so conspicuous a place in the tower; He wished the society success in their efforts, and asked Mr. Ward in the name of the members to unveil the tablet.

Mr. WARD in reply said that he wished to thank the members of the St. Michael's Juniors for asking him to come and officiate on that occasion. It was always a pleasure to him to be amongst members of the Exercise with whom he had spent some of the happiest hours in his life. He hoped that this first peal was the first of a series of peals, not in this particular method only, and also that they would be rung as true as this one. He then unveiled the tablet, which is a brass plate mounted on oak, and bears the following inscription:—

Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association.—St. Michael's Junior's rang at Upton St. Leonard's, June 30th, 1888, in 3 hrs. 2 mins. their first peal, viz.:—Holt's ten-peal of Grandsire Triples, (5040). H. L. James, 1; F. E. Hart, 2; R. Brunson, 3; R. J. Wilkins, 4; W. J. Senior, 5; S. E. Romans, 6; R. A. Barrett, 7; E. E. Bewick, 8; Conducted by W. J. Sevier.

A 420 of Stedman Triples was then rung. H. L. James, 1; E. E. Hart, 2; G. Brunson, 3; R. F. Wilkins, 4; F. E. Ward, 5; R. Brunson, 6; R. A. Barrett (conductor), 7; E. E. Bewick, 8. And a course of Bob Major, W. J. Sevier, 1; F. E. Hart, 2; H. L. James, 3; R. J. Wilkins, 4; R. Brunson, 5; S. E. Romans, 6; F. E. Ward, 7; R. A. Barrett, 8. Also two 168 Grandsire Triples, H. J. Brawn, 1; E. B. James, 2; F. E. Hart, 3; A. Roberts, 4; R. J. Wilkins (conductor), 5; H. Mitchell, 6; W. J. Sevier, 7; F. E. Ward, 8; and S. E. Romans, (conductor), 1; F. E. Hart, 2; H. L. James, 3; C. Jones, 4; R. J. Wilkins, 5; H. Mitchell, 6; R. A. Barrett, 7; W. J. Sevier, 8. The members then separated after spending a very pleasant evening.

On Friday 21st, eight members visited Longney, and attempted a peal there, but unfortunately, owing in a great measure to the sallies being too low, it came to grief, a touch of about 1500 Grandsire Triples was however brought round, A. Roberts, 1; H. L. James, 2; F. E. Hart, 3; R. J. Wilkins, 4; W. J. Sevier, 5; G. L. Brunson, 6; S. E. Romans, 7; E. E. Bewick, 8. Tenor 16½-cwt.

PRIMROSE LEAGUE OUTING: BRIGHTON.—On Monday week, the Wardens and Secretary of the Coningsby Habitation of the Primrose League had a pleasant day at Arthur's Seat, White Hill, the country residence of Mr. Claude Long, Ruling Councillor of the Habitation. On arriving at the grounds they were met by Mr. and Miss Long, the hon. secretary of the Dames Habitation, who gave them a hearty welcome. After a substantial repast had been partaken of, the party, accompanied by Mr. Long, visited the various places. During the afternoon Miss Long formerly started and named the bells of a handsome turret clock, which Mr. Long has just had erected. The three bells were named as follows:—1st quarter, Hartington; 2nd quarter, Balfour; and hour, Salisbury. Tea was then provided, after which Mr. Long was presented with an illuminated address, signed by the Wardens and Secretary, in which they expressed their appreciation of the Services that he and Miss Long had rendered to the Habitation and Conservative cause. Mr. Long suitably replied. The party arrived in Brighton about nine o'clock.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Call a Spade a Spade."

In writing my notes last week, I did not anticipate such an apt and speedy commentary on my remarks with respect to the work before us, as is given in the account of the ringing at Chelmsford on September 19th. Here in this county town is a ring of ten—one of the only two rings of that number in the county, the ringers of which dignify themselves by the name of a Guild of church bellringers. And what is the nature of their performances? Stoney and call-changes! Were it not for the account published last Saturday, would it have been believed that in a place like Chelmsford, with many and good ringers residing in the immediate neighbourhood, such a state of things was in existence? I disagree with the writer of the paragraph in question when he says that "the blame for this state of things cannot be laid upon the existing ringers." They are just the individuals who are to blame. If there is any blame to be attached to any one else, it is certainly to the church authorities for granting a salary to men for such a performance on their bells. But that does not afford one extenuating circumstance in favour of the ringers themselves. They style themselves a Guild of Church Bellringers, and although they have a fine peal of bells at their disposal, make no attempt to rise above the gutter of rounds and call-changes! What would be thought of a town's brass band which contented itself with practising the scales: or who would think of styling a man an organist who never did anything more than run down the octave on the keyboard? And yet this Chelmsford "Guild" by their action (or rather inaction) place them in a similar position. Who then is to be blamed for this? I cannot for the life of me understand how any but the ringers themselves. If the authorities, for the want of something better, are content to pay a stipend for such performances, I say, more the pity; and the mere fact of this payment is all the more discreditable to those who receive it, inasmuch as they do not appear to make any attempt to fully deserve it, and yet they style themselves a "Guild of Church Bellringers."

* * * *

Surely the Essex Association will not rest content with such a state of affairs in their midst; but now that attention has been called to it, will (as I remarked last week) "leave no stone unturned that will conduce to a better state of things in the future." It is of no use attempting to throw the blame—or any portion of it—on the church authorities; it is the ringers themselves who are culpable, and it is them and them only who should commence the work of reformation. In the absence of any "leader among the clergy or other influential parishioners," the County Association should bring their influence to bear upon the ringers, and endeavour to make them not in name only but in very deed a "Guild of Church Bellringers."

* * * *

It is quite a relief to turn from this subject to the more pleasant task of reviewing last week's list of peals, nearly every item of which is of a more or less noteworthy character. Last week I referred to the activity of our friends in the Midland Counties; this week the Oxford Guild is to the fore with its creditable total of five, which are in as many different methods. I imagine the respected master and instructor of that Guild will have enjoyed their rest on the evening of Saturday, the 22nd ult., after their experiences of that week. Grandsire Triples on the previous Saturday, Stedman Triples on Wednesday, Double Norwich on Thursday, Superlative on Friday, and Stedman Caters on Saturday, will surely have been a sufficiency for one week.

* * * *

Another interesting item in this list is Mr. A. Wakley's "Century Peal." These 100th peals are certainly becoming of more frequent occurrence as time goes on, but they do not from that fact lose any of their creditable features.

* * * *

Our friends of the College Youths have not allowed their first peal of Grandsire Caters on handbells to remain long "in silent solitude," but have within a month succeeded in placing another to their credit. It does not speak much for the handbell-ringing proclivities of the "Ancients" of former days when the first two peals of Caters rung by the members in the metropolis have both been accomplished after 250 years of the Society's existence. But "better late than ever," and if our predecessors have been negligent in this matter, these two peals show, at any rate, that the spirit of progress is abroad.

* * * *

The Ipswich men, too, have shown commendable energy in ringing a 5088 of Kent Treble Bob Major the second day after their visit to, and peal of Royal at Manchester.

* * * *

I notice that the Yorkshire Association purposes holding its Annual Meeting at York, on Saturday, the 6th. If my business arrangements will permit, I shall endeavour to pay one more visit to that "county of broad acres," and be present at the proceedings, in which case I will give you the benefit of my observations next week.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY, DERBY.

On Saturday, September 29th, seven members of St. Andrew's Society paid a visit to Birmingham. On our arrival we were met by Messrs. Carter and Jones. After refreshing the innerman we made the best of our way to Perry Bar, where arrangements had been made by the above gentlemen for a peal. After raising the bells, which are in splendid going order, a start was made for a peal of Grandsire Triples, which ultimately came to grief owing to a change-course. We then made way for Birmingham again, and after viewing some of the beautiful buildings and places of interest, we parted with our Birmingham friends hoping this would not be the last time of seeing them. We wish, therefore, to take this opportunity of thanking Mr. Carter and Mr. Jones for so kindly placing themselves at our disposal; to the vicar for the use of the bells, and also to Mr. Smith for having everything in readiness for us. THE YORKSHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ANNUAL MEETING AT YORK.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

The Annual Meeting of this Association was held on Saturday last, October 6th, at York. Special trains were run from various parts of the county, the result being a very large influx of members and visitors into the ancient city. Every practicable arrangement for the comfort and convenience of the visiting members had been made by the York branch, and particularly by its esteemed president, Mr. W. H. Howard. The grand ring of twelve at the Minster, the ring of eight at St. Martin's, Coney Street, and those of six at SS. Philip and James', Clifton, and St. Mary's Bishophill were placed at the disposal of the members throughout the day, which privilege was extensively made use of. At half-past four the annual service was held in the choir of the Minster, which was full choral, and—particularly the alto solo, "O rest in the Lord," and following chorus—evidently made a deep impression upon the large congregation assembled. After the singing of evensong, the hymn commencing—followed, during the singing of which the Very Rev. the Dean, A. P. Purey-Cust, D.D., ascended the pulpit, and delivered a most interesting and practical address on the subject of bell-ringing, concluding with an earnest exhortation to those present to keep pace with the improvement which was going on throughout the Church in every way. Efforts are being made to obtain a verbatim report of this address, in which case we shall have the pleasure of reproducing it for the benefit of our readers.

"Ye servants of the Lord"

Service over, the members adjourned to the St. Michael-le-Belfrey Schoolrooms, Stonegate, and to the number of 200 sat down to an excellent meat tea, the Very Rev. the Dean, and the Rev. F. Lawrence being amongst the party. An excellently-struck course of Grandsire Caters was rung at the conclusion of the tea, by the Hull members, and the business meeting followed, Mr. William Snowdon, President, occupying the chair, when, as the Dean was compelled to leave owing to another engagement,

Mr. W. SNOWDON proposed a very hearty vote of thanks to Dr. Purey-Cust for the kind arrangements he had made with respect to the special service, and more particularly for the excellent and practical address he had given them, the words of which he felt sure would have a good effect, and be long borne in mind by those who had been privileged to be present.

Mr. W. H. HOWARD briefly seconded the motion, which was carried with acclamation.

THE VERY REV. THE DEAN OF YORK, in replying, after expressing his gratification at the vote, said he was always anxious to see every part of the Church thoroughly efficient. Looking back on his thirty years' experience as a clergyman, he could not help being struck with the very great improvement which had taken place all round during that period. Every branch of Church work was now in a far higher and nobler position than when he first entered the Ministry. The Church was now thoroughly alive to its work, and where once was slothfulness and neglect was now vigour and a thorough appreciation of duties and responsibilities. In no portion of the Church had this improvement been more manifested than in connection with ringers and ringing. He had himself often noticed this change for the better, and rejoiced at it. Although he could not speak from practical knowledge, he was convinced that change-ringing was a remarkable science. It was always a pleasure to him to hear the bells ring, whether in joyful tones or in the solemn cadence of a muffled peal; they spoke out, as it were, the feelings of the time—of joy or sorrow. He therefore assured the members of his readiness to give whatever assistance he could to them and their work, and hoped at no distant day to be able once more to welcome them to their grand old city.

THE REV. F. LAWRENCE also replied in a humorous manner, convulsing the assembly with his remarks.

The rev. gentlemen then left the room amid hearty cheers.

Mr. W. SNOWDON read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were unanimously adopted, after which Mr. C. Jackson

(Hull) moved, and Mr. J. W. Stickney (Hull) seconded the adoption of the Committee's report, which was carried unanimously. Among other matters this report stated—

It is with considerable pleasure that the Committee, in presenting this the Thirteenth Annual Report, find themselves in a position to congratulate the members on the steady progress the Association makes, and on the solid basis on which its finances are gradually being built up, the value of which is now becoming conspicuously apparent.

The three General Meetings have each assisted in showing the good spirit in which the members continue to work together. That at Head-Quarters, Bradford—the annual—was attended by large numbers, notwithstanding a drenching rain, many of those present having left their homes sixty miles away in order once again to meet their brother ringers, no other attractions of any sort being down on the day's programme. The February Meeting was purposely arranged by the Committee in a district in which the Association is not up to its usual strength, and with the best results, as members have been gained thereby—this without laying stress on the pleasant outing and the hearty welcome received by those attending. At the June Meeting, in addition to the interest attaching to a visit to an historical town, the Association had the satisfaction of gaining, as Hon. Members, both the Rev. the Vicar and his Churchwarden, and this side by side with an exceedingly kind reception arranged by the local branch. Such Hon. Members as these greatly help the Association, inasmuch as their interest must necessarily gather round and encourage the local members. Keeping this in mind, the Committee trust that a New Rule, proposed at Pontefract, will be unanimously carried at the York Meeting—with reference to presenting our Annual Reports to such Hon. Members who are clergymen, whose churches are provided with rings of bells.

Referring to what was said in last year's report, as to the issue of an engraving of the memorial window, the Committee, acting for the whole Exercise, regret that they are only able to report slow progress. This has been caused by the great blow the Association received when Mr. Tuke—the esteemed Hon. Treasurer, and one of the Hon. Secs. of the Memorial Fund—left England to take up a residence abroad. The work-retarding severity of this loss was the more keen on account of the respected Hon. Sec. of the Association—on whose shoulders great additional Association work has been necessarily thrown—being now the only Hon. Sec. left of the Memorial Fund. The drawing of the window is, however, completed, and a special effort will now be made to get copies issued to the numerous subscribers, and this, together with a balance-sheet giving all financial details.

The total number of members as shown in last year's report was 545—made up of 22 honorary, 476 ringing, and 47 non-resident members. During the year 3 honorary and 66 ringing members have been elected; but 13 others have not renewed their Subscriptions. As the names of two new members were inadvertently entered twice in the receipt books of last year—see the last four names entered under CHESTERFIELD, 1886-7—the number of new members affecting this year's balance sheet has been reduced by two to rectify the error.

During the year three members have been transferred to the non-resident list, but as two non-resident members have recommenced paying, so as to qualify for life members, the number of non-resident members is increased by one only. We have lost four members by death. The numbers carried into the now opening year are therefore 25 honorary, 522 ringing, and 48 non-resident members, making a total of 595 members on the Association's books.

During the year 37 peals have been rung at 23 churches. Although in point of numbers this is a considerable falling off compared with last year, it will be found upon examination that it has been mainly brought about by fewer peals of Kent Treble Bob Major having been rung. This is satisfactory so far, as it shows that those engaged in peal ringing have expended their energies in keeping up the expanded list of methods now practised by the Association.

The Sheffield centre has added Double Norwich Court Bob Major to the list, whilst Calverley has added another Treble Bob variation by their performance of a peal of Prince Albert Major. These two peals, and also one of Grandsire Cinques by the Sheffield members, take their places in our tabulated lists as the first under their respective heads.

First peals by members of the Association have been rung at St. Thomas's, Duffield; Holy Trinity, Low Moor; the Parish Church, Halifax; St. Mark's, Glodwick, Oldham; the Parish Church, Skipton; and at the New Church, Peel, Isle of Man.

The ring at Skipton has lately been increased from six to eight, and a ring of eight is now now hung at the Parish Church, Settle. It is pleasing to be able to report the ringers at these two churches amongst our new members.

The Committee regret having to call attention to the fact that the composition of the peal of Grandsire Triples rung at Hull, on July 7th, 1884, No. 285, has since turned out to be false.

The balance-sheet, which had been duly audited and signed by the Rev. F. W. Sandford and Mr. A. C. Fearnley, the duly elected auditors, shewed that on capital account the Association had invested in the Leeds Corporation Stock £100, and in the Building Society £64. 11s. 2d., which with £2. 8s. 4d. interest, made a total of £166. 19s. 6d. The yearly account shewed (including £13. 3s. 9d. advanced by the Hon. Sec.) receipts £43 13s. 7½d., and the expenditure a like amount (including £14 17s. 5d. repaid the Hon. Sec.) On reading this balance-sheet, the President explained the items of cash advanced by and repaid to the Hon. Sec., stating that through Mr. Whitaker's kindness in thus advancing the money, considerable inconvenience was avoided in going through the necessary formula in drawing money out of the Building Society. The Association had not been able to bank any money during the past year owing to the necessity of obtaining a new supply of certificates, which had caused an outlay of £12. 8s. 4d., but which, under ordinary circumstances, would be a sufficient supply for four or five years to come; the succeeding years thus gaining the advantage of it.

On the motion of Mr. A. C. Fearnley, seconded by Mr. Robert Long (York), the balance-sheet was unanimously adopted.

THE PRESIDENT next read out a proposed addition to rule 2 (of which due notice had been given), to the effect that any clergyman being a honorary member who had a ring of bells in his tower should have the annual report sent to him free of charge; also a motion in confirmation of one agreed to some years ago, stating that all members partaking of tea at any of the general meetings should contribute sixpence towards the cost thereof. Both were unanimously adopted.

The election of officers was then proceeded with, the officers retiring being Mr. Geo. Bolland, Vice-President; Mr. B. T. Copley, Steward; Mr. W. Stainthorpe, Treasurer; and Messrs. John McKell, F. London, and J. Broadley, Committeemen. There was no opposition to the re-election of Messrs. Bolland, Copley, and Stainthorpe, while for the Committee four were nominated. The counting up of the voting papers shewed the result to be: J. McKell, 217; J. Broadley, 191; F. London, 183; T. Lockwood, 93. The first three (who were the retiring members) were therefore declared duly elected.

Mr. SNOWDON then called over the officers' roll, when it was found that with but three exceptions all were present. One cause of absence, he stated, was owing to train arrangements, another was through sickness in the family, while the third—that of Mr. C. H. Hattersley—was by reason of the sad event of the death of his wife on the previous day. He was sure that every member would warmly sympathise with Mr. Hattersley in his sad bereavement, a sentiment which evoked a hearty response from those present.

There being no invitation for the place where to hold the next meeting, it was left in the hands of the committee, as per rule.

Mr. B. T. COPLEY (Bradford) then proposed a cordial vote of thanks to the Very Rev. the Dean of York, and the Vicars of the three other parishes, for the use of their bells during the day; as well as for the use of the schoolroom for the tea and meeting.

Mr. J. T. HOLLIS (Wakefield) seconded the motion, which was carried with applause.

Mr. W. HABBISHAW (Rothwell) proposed, and Mr. J. HODGSON (York) seconded a vote of thanks to the officers for their services during the past year, which was unanimously agreed to, after which

Mr. W. WHITAKER (Hon. Sec.) proposed, and Mr. W. STAINTHORPE (Hon. Treasurer) seconded that the warmest thanks of the members be given to the York branch, and particularly to Mr. W. H. Howard, for their kind arrangements, also to the ladies who had presided at tea. This was carried amid loud applause, and after Mr. Howard had suitably replied, a vote of thanks to the president concluded the proceedings.

A move was then made to the various towers, and ringing kept up until the time of departure, this bringing to a close a very successful meeting.

Death.

On Tuesday, October 2nd, HANNAH ELIZABETH, the affectionate wife of CHARLES HENRY HATTERSLEY (of the Napier Works, Sheffield), in her 35th year. Interred at Ecclesall Church, Sheffield, October 5th; deeply regretted.

DEDICATION AND OPENING OF THE NEW BELLS AT SWANAGE, DORSET.

On Thursday afternoon, September 27th, Swanage was en fête to witness the ceremony of the dedication of the four new bells, presented by Mr. George Burt, ex-Sheriff of London, in memory of his late wife. The important improvements in connection with the tower are, practically speaking, completed, and a splendid ring of eight bells, tenor 20 cwt., are now ready for use. The work was decided upon at the last Easter Vestry, when Mr. Burt accepted the office of Churchwarden for the express purpose of superintending the undertaking during his year of office, and to which he has devoted much time and attention. The bell frame is constructed of oak, resting upon wrought iron girders, bedded on stone corbels. The four new bells, so generously given by Mr. Burt, have been cast by the well-known firm of Messrs. Taylor and Son, Loughborough. The four old bells (one of which has been recast), have been turned round so as to provide fresh places for the clappers to strike on. A new chiming apparatus has also been fixed. The four old wooden louvre windows have been reconstructed of stone, and a new floor, 3 ft. 6 in. above the old one, has been laid to the ringing chamber. The floor beneath the bells has been filled in with sand and sawdust to deaden the sound in the tower, and the ceiling under matchboarded. The ringing chamber is neatly matchboarded, and a new staircase has been provided.

At 11 a.m. the belfry was thrown open to the public till 2.30 p.m., and during that time a continual stream of people were going up and down the Belfry, all appearing to be well-satisfied with the work, and speaking in highest terms of Mr. Burt's gift to the parish. The dedication service was held at 3 p.m. The procession entered the church in the following order, the choir singing hymn 397 (A. and M.) churchwardens, choir, Lord Bishop of Salisbury, Rev. S. Flood Jones (preceptor of Westminster Abbey), Rev. Canon Bankes (Rural Dean), Rev. T. A. Gurney (Rector), Rev. O. L. Mansell (Church Knowle), Rev. Lester Leste (Langton Matravers), Rev. Gordon Stokes (Bournemouth), Rev. O. A. Hodgson (East Stoke), Rev. A. N. C. Storrs (Curate). After Psalm 31 had been chanted by the choir, the keys of the tower were presented to the Bishop by the Churchwarden. Then the Bishop, turning to the congregation, offered prayer and petition, immediately after which the bells rang a short touch of Grandsire Triples, the congregation remaining kneeling. The service of the day was then proceeded with in the usual order. The Lord Bishop, who preached, selected for his text Psalm cxlv. 4 and 5. Having spoken to the congregation of the praise due from us to God, he referred to church bells being like the voices of the past, reminding us even more than the walls in which we were assembled (the aspect of which changed from time to time), of the Divine principles and worship which our forefathers had left to our generation to carry on. The bells hung above us out of sight, yet they seemed to speak almost like angels' voices. They changed in tone but very little, and spoke to us with the same clearness as they spoke to our fathers; and so they went on calling together generation after generation of the faithful in the same manner and for the same purposes.

At the conclusion of the service the ringers from St. Peter's, Bournemouth, assisted by Mr. J. W. Taylor, jun. and Mr. Wm. Tyler, from Loughborough, and Mr. T. Blackburne and Mr. C. A. Clements, Salisbury, rang a half-peal of Grandsire Triples, under the conductorship of Mr. Thos. Blackburne, and standing as follows:—Alfred Grist, 1 (Bournemouth); Charles A. Clements, 2 (Salisbury); Harry T. Vivash, 3 (Bournemouth); William Tyler, 4 (Loughborough); Henry A. Garrett, 5 (Bournemouth); Thomas Blackburne, 6 (Salisbury); J. W. Taylor, jun., 7 (Loughborough); Tom Belvin, 8 (Bournemouth.) Great interest was evinced during the ringing by the parishioners assembling in the vicinity of the tower, and listening to it. Later on, through the kindness of the rector, churchwardens and friends, the ringers, choir, and others, were invited to a sumptuous supper at the National School, which was nicely decorated with flowers. During the meal the chair was occupied by the rector (Rev. T. A. Gurney), and the vice-chair by Mr. H. W. White, after which amid continued cheering, Mr. George Burt, the donor of the bells, took the chair for the rest of the evening. The usual toasts were dispensed with, the speeches having reference mainly to the occasion. The chairman first called on the ringers for a touch on the handbells, which was rung by Messrs. Taylor, Tyler, Blackburn and Clements, and loudly applauded. He then went on to say that they were always glad to welcome friends from Bournemouth. There was a time when it would take as long to get to Bournemouth as it did now to London, but times were altered, forty minutes now on water would bring Bournemouth and Swanage together. He thanked his Bournemouth friends very warmly for coming over to assist and also for throwing their belfry open on Saturday afternoons during the past summer for the Swanage men to practice on Seage's silent apparatus, and he hoped that at some future time Swanage would be as good in that respect as Bournemouth had been (applause).

Mr. H. A. Garrett, hon. sec. of the St. Peter's, Bournemouth, ringers, responded. He said that when their band heard that Swanage was to have a peal of bells, they thought as they had every appliance at St. Peter's to teach a young band, they would do well to come over occasionally and practice on Seage's apparatus, so that when their new bells were ready for ringing they would be in a position to ring them fairly well. He was glad to find that the young band had improved, and could now ring rounds well. He begged to thank their Swanage friends most heartily for the kindness shown them on that occasion. He hoped they would stick to change-ringing, for it was an art, and he would suggest that their Swanage friends should have an instructor in that art. The Salisbury Guild (in whose diocese they were), had an instructor, and he had no doubt that his services could be obtained for a month or so on very reasonable terms. They had had a beautiful peal of bells opened that day, and one that they might well be proud of; yet if they liked to come over at any time to Bournemouth they would receive a hearty welcome.

The Chairman thanked Mr. Garrett for his suggestion and said they would take it up, and show their friends at Bournemouth what they could do. He spoke briefly on his present of the bells, and said he had been told that the Swanage bells if properly used would be second to none in the county. He hoped the ringers would take up change-ringing in earnest and stick to it. The bells were of no advantage if not properly used, and if they were not used he would wish they had not been put there. Mr. Taylor had told him that handbells were a good help in learning the art, and he had no doubt Mr. Taylor would bring him in a nice little bill for what he had already done, but if the Swanage ringers would promise to use them he would give them a set of handbells. (Loud applause.) Mr. Blackburn had also just told him that it would take about a month to learn with an instructor, and he would ask the rector to write to the Salisbury Guild and make some enquiries. Young men, continued Mr. Burt, instead of idling about the streets, there is a nice belfry you can go up into, and with a little tuition it won't be long before we shall have our Bournemouth friends saying, Hallo! Give your minds to it and let us have some good bell-ringing, such as will be second to none. Allow me, on behalf of our ringers, to thank Mr. Garrett, who wrote to us for you to come over and use their silent apparatus, and saying that when ours were up they would come over and help us. Stick to it; let's have happy faces; the more we have of that the longer we shall live, and the happier we shall be. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. Rose (foreman of the Swanage ringers), thanked Mr. Burt on their behalf for his generous gift of a set of handbells. They would endeavour to use them to good advantage, and hoped soon to be able to do some change-ringing. He should like to thank Mr. Grist, and the other ringers at Bournemouth for their kindness in having the tower open and ready for them, and for their time and assistance on each of the Saturdays they had been over.

The Rector said they should always look upon the Bournemouth ringers as their friends in need. It was just the thing the Swanage men wanted, and he hoped it would establish a lasting friendship between the two bands of ringers. Shortly after this Mr. Burt wished all a very good night, and on leaving he was cheered with "three times three" most heartily. The Swanage choir sang several glees during the evening.

The Swanage and Bournemouth ringers expressed their thanks to the Weymouth and Bournemouth Steampacket Company (Messrs. Cosens and Co.) for their kindness in conveying them, free of cost, on each occasion of their trip, across and vice versa. After this the party broke up, apparently well-pleased with the doings of the day, and the next morning the ringers were again in the tower at 5.30 a.m., and some good touches of Grandsire Triples were rung previous to the starting of the boat at 9 a.m.

Tuesday, the 2nd October, being Mr. George Burt's birthday, the Bournemouth ringers again went over in the evening to ring in honour of the event, when several touches of Grandsire Triples was rung. An attempt was made for a peal, but after ringing 2,200 changes, it came to grief. They were assisted by Messrs. Blackburn, Wise and Lawrence, from Salisbury. After the ringing a sumptuous dinner was provided at the Anchor Hotel, at the expense of Mr. George Burt. Mr. Rose, (foreman of the Swanage ringers) occupied the chair, and Mr. H. Hardy (Mr. Burt's representative) the vice-chair. The usual loyal and patriotic toasts having been indulged in, the chairman gave the toast of the evening—viz., that of Mr. George Burt, which was received with musical honours and "three times three." Mr. Hardy responded, and the remainder of the evening was spent in harmony, songs being rendered by Messrs. Meachen, Toms, Garrett, Lawrence and Rose.

THE WINCHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.

On Saturday, October 6th, the Farnham (Surrey) band succeeded (with the assistance of Mr. G. Williams), in ringing their first peal of Grandsire Triples, particulars of which will be found in the peal column. Mr. Barnett, their respected captain, kindly stood out for G. Lindoff (R.E.), who has been practising with the Farnham men, while laying at Aldershot, and with whose assistance they rang their first quarter-peal a month ago.

After the peal the ringers were entertained to supper by Mr. Barnett, and after partaking of the good things provided for them, the handbells were brought out, and a course each of Grandsire Triples and Major, rang by Mrs. Williams, 1-2; G. Lindoff, 3-4; G. Williams, 5-6; G. H. Barnett, 7-8. A touch of Bob Minor was also brought round double-handed, and a very pleasant evening was spent. On Sunday, the 7th, for Divine service in the morning, 447 Grandsire Triples. R. Le Clercq, 1; H. Garfath, 2; G. H. Barnett, 3; G. Williams (conductor), 4; J. Hawkes, 5; C. Fry, 6; *A. Clapshaw, 7; T. Spreadborough, 8. Also 630 in the same method, A. White, 4; G. Williams (conductor), 7; the rest as before. *Longest touch with a bob bell.

HOLY TRINITY, OLD HILL, STAFFORDSHIRE.

An appointment has been made to this living, which has been vacant for over ten months, and the Rev. Edward Brewer, formerly of St. Thomas', Hemingford Road, Barnsbury, was inducted into his new living on Friday, September 28th. The induction was performed by the Archdeacon of the diocese (Worcester), who delivered an address upon the mutual duties of the vicar and his congregation. Six of the band of ringers met to ring for the service, which was at 4 p.m.; they failed in a 720 Grandsire before service, but secured a 720 Kent Treble Bob afterwards in 29 mins. W. Green, 1; C. W. Bassano, 2; H. Mason, 3; H. Cartwright, 4; W. Bird, 5; A. H. Bassano (conductor), 6.

On the following evening Mr. Brewer came into the belfry to see the practice, and a 720 Oxford Single Bob was brought round in 30 mins. A. E. Parsons, 1; H. Cartwright, 2; J. Palmer, 3; C. W. Bassano, 4; H. Mason, 5; A. H. Bassano (conductor), 6. The rev. gentleman is not a change-ringer, but is setting an example to those who do not consider the belfry or the ringers as part of the church. He was heartily welcomed, and a hope was expressed that he would continue to manifest an interest in the doings of his ringers, and would often cheer them on by his presence. Sunday, September 30th, being Mr. Brewer's first officiation as vicar, the bells were set going well before service, and a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples was secured in 48 mins. A. E. Parsons, 1; J. Palmer, 2; H. Cartwright, 3; R. Bird, 4; W. Bird, 5; C. W. Bassano, 6; A. H. Bassano (conductor), 7; W. Green, 8. For evening service 864 Kent Treble Bob Major was rung in 35 mins. J. Palmer, 1; R. Bird, 2; A. E. Parsons, 3; C. W. Bassano, 4; H. Cartwright, 5; W. Green, 6; H. Mason, 7; A. H. Bassano (conductor), 8. After the services, courses and touches of Grandsire and Plain Bob were rung. On the following Sunday, October 7th, 546 Union Triples, and 527 Grandsire Major were brought round. Thus the Old Hill ringers tried to show their warmest welcome to their new vicar, and they look forward to having his sympathy and interest to encourage them in their efforts, and to spur them on to fresh attempts. Let "Free Lance," and our other brethren, rejoice in another "tower-going parson," as being another step in the direction of unity and co-operation between the clergy and those who are generally ready to be their most devoted servants, when treated as belonging to the church, I mean the ringers. BRENTWOOD.—OPENING OF THE BELLS.

On Wednesday, August 3rd, the new ring of eight by Mears and Stainback, in St. Thomas' Church, were rung for the first time by a band of the Essex Association, selected by the Hon. Secretary at the invitation of the vicar and churchwardens of Brentwood. The bells have been in position for about a year, but it was not considered wise to ring them till the masonry of the new tower had become settled, and hitherto they have only been chimed. The party assembled in the ringing-chamber, tastefully decorated for the occasion by Mr. Baker, the steeple-keeper, soon after 2 p.m., and a touch of about 300 Grandsire Triples was first rung by R. Sewell, 1; W. Rowland, 2; G. C. Scowen, 3; W. Gifford, 4; H. Randall, 5; Rev. T. L. Papillon (Hon. Sec. of the Essex Association), 6; F. Pitstow, 7; Rev. H. A. Cockey (tenor.) At 3 p.m. the following band started for a peal of Treble Bob Major:—Rev. H. A. Cockey (late hon. sec. E.A.C.R.), 1; W. Rowland (Chelmsford), 2; A. J. Perkins (Romford), 3; W. Hawkes (Springfield), 4; H. Randall (West Ham), 5; E. Barnett (Wanstead), 6; G. Newson (Hampstead formerly of Romford), 7; F. Pitstow (Saffron Walden), tenor; conductor, G. Newson. The band had rung 4224 changes in excellent style in 2 hrs. 39 mins., when a message came that a gentleman in the neighbourhood was dying, and that they must stop at once. There was no help for it, but it was a great disappointment to lose a good peal so near the end, through no fault of their own. The bells are of very fine tone, and their go all that could be wished, tenor 19½ cwt. in E flat. The band were afterwards entertained at dinner by the authorities; the vicar presiding, Mr. C. Wallis, parish churchwarden, in the vice-chair. They hope at no distant date to be allowed the opportunity of securing the first peal on this fine new ring, of which one of them writes, "I consider it the finest new ring of eight that I have ever heard, as near perfection as possible."

THE ESSEX ASSOCIATION.—DISTRICT MEETING AT LOUGHTON.

A District Meeting of the Essex Association was held on Saturday, October 6th, at Loughton, where there is a good ring of eight, the tenor, however, goes stiffly, and some of the ropes want renewing. The business meeting was held at 4.30 p.m. in a room near the church, kindly placed at the disposal of the Association by the rector, the Rev. J. Whitaker Maitland; about 38 members being present. It was resolved on the motion of Mr. S. Hayes that in future no footnotes should be appended to the record of peals in the annual report, or in the peal-book. The provisional election of Messrs. F. W. Chapman, G. Dempsey, C. Honeybell, J. Carmichael, W. Weatherstone and G. Griffin, were confirmed, and the following were elected members—Honorary: D. W. J. Mason, Sudbury; Ringing members: Messrs. J. Campin, W. Cross, and M. Silvester, Sudbury. Tea was served afterwards at the King's Head, the Rev. T. L. Papillon, Hon. Sec., presiding, in the unavoidable absence of the rector, who had intended to be present. Touches in various methods were rung during the afternoon and evening, most of those present getting the opportunity of a pull.

The young band of change-ringers at Loughton, under the direction of Mr. W. Lebbon, have made good progress, and persevered under difficulties which might well have discouraged them; the tower on Sundays and on all special occasions being in the possession of an established set of call-change and round ringers, who bar the way as far as they can to those who are able and willing to make a better use of the bells.

THE KENT COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

A District Meeting will be held at Aldington, on Monday, October 22nd. Those who wish to attend are requested to communicate with the Secretary. Mersham (about three miles) will probably be visited. Allowance 2s. and 1s. 6d., which will be paid up to 1 p.m. at Aldington.

AN EARTHQUAKE DOOR.—Light is admitted into Japanese rooms, not by glass windows, but by a kind of wooden gratings, over which a white paper is pasted on the outside. This paper diffuses the sunlight about the room very pleasantly, but it is not proof against rain; in rainy weather, therefore, the shutters have to be put up which are used to close the verandah and house in the night time, and which are the only doors in a Japanese house that is thought necessary to furnish with a bolt. As the putting up and taking down of these shutters is a matter demanding some time, it is usual to have a small door made in them, which is called "the earth-quake door," to provide means of quick escape in case of emergency.—From "Cassell's Family Magazine" for October.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1888.

We have this week once more the pleasure of giving to our readers a report of the Annual Meeting of the Yorkshire Association. That event is, we doubt not, looked forward to with interest by our readers both in and out of that great country. As one of the principal pioneers in the work of organisation, its welfare cannot be observed otherwise than with feelings of peculiar regard. It is with much gratification, therefore, that we are enabled to report its continued success. With a total of 595 members, and a sum of £166 in the bank, there can be no fear of any instability in its structure. And when we take into account that the qualification for membership is the ringing of a 720 or a covering of not less than 1260, we can easily comprehend the powerfulness of the organization of this county from a ringing point of view. This Association does not—like some of its contemporaries—admit probationers or any but qualified change-ringers into its ranks, save as honorary members. Taking off, therefore, its twenty-five honorary or non-ringing members, we have a total of 570 members who have proved their right to the title of change-ringers by the qualifications aforementioned. Although in all probability it may be quite true that the Yorkshire Association has not yet embraced anything like the full number of change-ringers in the County, yet that total is in itself one to be regarded by all of us with pleasurable feelings, from a scientific standpoint. Its peal-ringing performances are certainly less numerous this year than previously, but, as the report remarks, "although in point of numbers there is a considerable falling off compared with last year, it will be found upon examination that it has been mainly brought about by fewer peals of Kent Treble Bob Major having been rung. This is satisfactory so far, as it shows that those engaged in peal-ringing have expended their energies in keeping up the expanded list of methods now practised by the Association." Another feature of the report also is (if possible) more than satisfactory, namely, the financial position of the Association. It is no small matter to be able to show a balance of £166 in the bank. Although, through their rule which causes subscriptions to cease after ten years' membership, the income will naturally become more curtailed than would otherwise have been the case, yet doubtless the continued admission of new members, and the subscriptions of those who have not completed their stipulated term of membership, will be sufficient, with the interest on the money invested, to defray all working expenses for the time being. The future of this Association, then, seems from a financial point of view, assured, and it is most devoutly to be hoped that in the years to come success will attend it both socially, scientifically and financially, so that it may be in the future as it has been in the past, a model for other societies, and a stronghold in the work of progression.

RINGING MATTERS AT CHELMSFORD.

SIR,—While agreeing in the main with "Free Lance's" strictures on the Chelmsford ringers, I may point out that he has slightly misrepresented the writer of the paragraph in your issue of September 30, by omitting the word "all" from the sentence quoted by him; which should run: "The blame for this state of things cannot all be laid upon the existing ringers." The writer, I take it, meant—not that no blame attaches to the ringers, but—that a share of blame is due to the system and the authorities who sanction it. As a matter of fact, a minority among the Chelmsford ringers are dissatisfied with and ashamed of the present condition of things; but at present I fear they can do little to amend it.

The Essex Association has done what it can by encouragement, by rebuke, and by example. Two years ago, it arranged and partly paid for the services of an instructor, which produced little result, owing to the irregular attendance of his pupils. Its annual meeting is held at Chelmsford, and the ringers of the neighbourhood occasionally arrange to meet for change-ringing in the Chelmsford tower, to show what can be done on the bells. And I myself, as Secretary to the Association, have said, both privately to the authorities of St. Mary's, and publicly in the local newspapers, all that I can venture to say without appearing to interfere in the affairs of my neighbours. If "Free Lance" can suggest any other course open to us, I shall be glad to hear it; for it is not pleasant to be obliged to confess that hitherto we have completely failed. The spirit of passive resistance is too strong for us. Writtle, Chelmsford.

THE EXTENT OF DUFFIELD MAJOR.

SIR,—Those of your readers who have perused my pamphlet on "The Duffield Method" will recollect that the extent on eight bells (8640) is not obtained without the use of singles, but that it is remarked (p. 68) that there is no apparent arithmetical reason against the accomplishment of the same result by bobs only. It is with great pleasure that I am now able, in justification of this statement, to present a truly splendid composition by the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer containing the whole 180 courses. This peal is on the same lines as Mr. Bulwer's extent of Royal and Maximus (No. 40), which latter, however, will not run true in Major. The present composition, which is appended, will answer equally for eight, ten, or twelve bells, and has the further merit of more regular calling. Its author may claim the credit, not only of a most valuable addition to the method, but of producing a peal which has required study as closely reasoned and as exhaustive as has been expended on any branch of the science. As those who possess "The Duffield Method" will probably cut out the peal and insert it in the pamphlet, I take the opportunity of giving a list of such errata of importance as have up to the present come to my notice.

A WARNING.—Mr. R. Guest, Secretary of the St. Mark's (Glodwick, Oldham) Society, writes to caution members of ringing societies against a military-looking young man, about 5 ft. 8 in. in height, with light complexion, whom he has every reason to believe an impostor. This person gives his name as "J. Manning," and the statement of Mr. Guest leaves no room for doubt that our Glodwick brethren have been victimised by him. A person answering in every detail to the foregoing description, called at our office about this time last year.

"GAMBLING AND BETTING."

A PAPER READ BEFORE THE CHURCH CONGRESS AT MANCHESTER,
BY THE DEAN OF ROCHESTER.

If gambling and betting are not actual peculations they most assuredly suggest and induce them. I have made inquiries and read reports from governors and chaplains of prisons, some of which I have personally visited, the last at Chatham, one of the largest in the kingdom, and these officers are unanimous in their declarations that an infinite number of prisoners, convicted for the first time of false entries, forgeries, and actual theft, have attributed their guilt to the results of gambling and betting.

Of Commandment IX., "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour," in its connection with gambling and betting, it may suffice to recall the evidence given on a recent notable occasion, and in several similar trials, by the betting fraternity. The variegated testimony, upon oath, of these witnesses, confuses the mind of the reader. He is perplexed, for example, in the last case brought into court, to know whether the person chiefly concerned is "a good jockey who would not, or a bad jockey who could not win;" and he is yet more bewildered to understand how, in either case, he had accumulated (as it was reported) the sum of £150,000.

Nor will you ask for arguments as regards commandment X., "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house . . . nor anything that is his," to prove the very simple fact that if there were none to covet their neighbour's silver and gold, his bank-notes, cheques, or I.O.U.'s, there would be none to gamble or to bet.

But religion is no mere code of prohibitory and penal laws. It teaches us not only to fear and to despise that which God has forbidden, but to find our happiness in doing that which He has commanded, and in loving one another, even as He has loved us. If, under the older covenant, men were not only warned to escape from the curses of Ebal, but to enjoy the "blessings" of Gerizim; if they were commanded by the Levitical law not to defraud but to love their neighbours, not only to eschew evil but to do good, how much more persuasively are we invited by the Gospel, how much more powerfully are we impelled by the Spirit of Christ to that charity which worketh no ill to its neighbour, but rejoices to provide things honest in the sight of all men and to do them good.

IV. Wherefore it is manifestly false to say that they who habitually gamble and bet, break no commandments; and they have far more consistent and plausible arguments who decline to be tested by Christian principles, because they do not believe them.

Then they assert that so long as they do not transgress the laws of the State they have a right to do what they will with their own. We have no king but Cæsar. But "no man liveth to himself," and though you may leave out religion, there are moral, political, social, and domestic obligations from which none are free. You cannot do wrong to yourself without doing wrong to others. You must help to hinder them. You make harmony, or you mar it, like a false note in an organ. Legally, no doubt, every man has a perfect right to lose his money or to waste it, to fool himself to the top of his bent, to reduce himself to that detestable condition of idiotic imbecility which Hogarth has drawn so wonderfully in the last scene of the "Rake's Progress;" but he can never have any right to do wrong to others, to injure those dependent upon him, those who have claims upon him, which none dispute. I remember hearing from my father at Doncaster, and just before the St. Leger was run, he heard the representative of an ancient and honorable family, a large landed proprietor in a midland county, exclaim, "Now it's"—I will not name the estate, but say, "Now it's home or no home." A few minutes after he had lost all hope of retrieving his property; it was sold to a stranger; and to this day his descendants have suffered in exile and poverty the result of his selfish folly. And this is only a sample from the bulk. How many of these grand mansions have been sold and let and mortgaged because their owners would gamble and bet! I saw recently one of the most extensive and ornate of these edifices. The roof and large portions of the floors had fallen in, the doors and windows were gone, and the rank weeds were growing where tapers gleamed and music breathed, and beauty led the ball. And all this desolation and ruin because the owner had gambled and betted. At the same time we may not forget that in all classes of society as well as in the highest, the same injustice, as cruel though not so notorious, the same misery and degradation, though the area of suffering is not so large, are inflicted by gambling and betting in the professions and trades and among those working men, who lose a week's wage on a race, whose wives come to them on a Saturday night and say "There's no more tick to be had, and the children are crying in their fireless rooms for food."

In brief, these vices seem, wherever they prevail, to induce more swiftly and hopelessly than any others hard, reckless, cruel selfishness. The selfishness of a miser is contemptible, but it is laudable generosity in comparison with his who wastes that which is not his own. There's an old story of a very rich man in this neighbourhood who, when he was invited to act as churchwarden, took some little time to consider the matter, and then informed the petitioners that "he had made up his mind that if ever he did ote for note he thought he should do it for sen." I pity that gentleman, but I abhor the gambler.

V. It is an argument very commonly urged for racing that it greatly improves the breed of horses. We need not discuss the question whether it would not be possible equally to improve the breed of horses by trial, by selection of the fittest. I never heard that Lord Ellesmere raced those magnificent, stallion cart-horses which I have seen at Worsley, and which would require jockies of twenty stone weight to steer; but, accepting the statement, and giving all honour to those men who have acted upon it—such men as the late Lord Derby, the Duke of Westminster, Lord Falmouth, the Duke of Portland, and others—I would ask how many of those who bet upon races ever think of improving the breed of horses? They improve him! Why he's infinitely the more noble, a thousand times the more beautiful animal. I have loved him ever since I rode a rocking-horse, and I could have told that fellow-traveller to whom I have referred, and who asked what can parsons know about horses, of many who, like myself, had tested their wonderful power and pluck over the clays of "the Rufford," the walls of "the Heythrop," the huge fences and green pastures of "the Quorn." What's the horse to him but a machine for making money? There is not a single point of resemblance between them, unless it be black legs!

I know, of course, that there are scores of highly educated, honourable noblemen and gentlemen, distinguished for their public services, dutiful and blameless in their private life (as those whom I have just named), who regard racing as a pleasant recreation and a manly sport, who never gamble, and bet little, if they bet at all. O, si sic omnes! for, if all were so, the racecourse might be a place of healthful enjoyment and of genial intercourse; and I, for one, should rejoice to hear of working men going there by thousands on their holidays; but until they can go without seeing that which they should not see, and hearing that which they should not hear, the impudence of the harlot, the disgusting degradations of drunkenness, the profane oath and filthy conversation, the attempts to rob and to cheat—until then, all who have the true welfare of those working men at heart must bid them, in God's name, to keep away.

I would not abolish racing, but I would have far more done than is done to abolish rogues—to expel those who despoil and disgrace humanity—men who, having in many instances abilities which would have made them prosperous and useful, concentrate their mental faculties on "morning tips," "to-day's betting in London," "latest scratchings," and "midnight odds," and who seem to think that the faculty of speech has been bestowed upon them that they may scream and yell therewith, "I'll lay 5 to one bar 1," or "10 to 1 bar 2."

They have but one subject of thought and conversation. John Leech told me that he travelled more than 100 miles with two members of the fraternity, who had just come from the racecourse, and that one of them repeated the same observation to the other, with slight variations and a profusion of profane embellishments, Leech thought about fourteen times! The remark was this, "As soon as ever that 'oss came into the paddock I says to Bob, U.P." Then, after a brief silence, or after he had smoked or slumbered, he would resume his story, "As soon as ever he come into the paddock I know'd they'd got him." Only once did he enlarge his reminiscences so far as to repeat the rejoinder of his friend. "And Bob said" (and it is pretty evident from Robert's language that he belonged to our County Palantine of time-honoured Lancaster—I say our, for I am a Lancashire lad) "and Bob said, 'He's welly bossened.'"

He's a poor creature, wherever you find him, the man who does nothing but gamble and bet—whether he's playing cards in his club on a lovely summer's afternoon, or shooting dove-cote pigeons out of a trap for money, or whether he's trying to overreach his juniors (often a little more than boys) in the taproom of a public-house, of which in too many instances the landlord is a professional betting-man.

The epitaph on the clumsy maid-of-all-work might be repeated upon the man who is all play—"Nihil tetigit quod non fregit." She broke everything she touched. He has spoiled racing, and he is trying to spoil boating, and football, and cricket. Oh, for the good old times, when the nearest approach to gambling upon the close-mown turf was grand old Fuller Pilch giving some friend a sovereign, to be repaid a shilling for every run he got!

VI.—And now, if gambling and betting are thus degrading and disastrous, "of all habits the vilest," as Ruskin writes, "because they unite nearly every condition of folly and of vice," and so far from exaggerating, I have purposely abstained from several details, with which, like he who drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, and told him half his Troy was burnt, or like the Fat Boy, when he gave notice, "I'm going to make your blood run cold," I might have produced sensational excitement; if I have spoken facts, which you can not only endorse but amplify, is it not our duty as Christians, as patriots, and citizens, to denounce these evils and to unite in prayerful thoughtful, practical efforts to expose and to expel them?

These attempts should be made in no intolerant or disdainful spirit, but with that charity which hopeth and endureth all things, though it be repelled with insult. While we enforce vigorously and impartially those wise and just laws which the State has enacted for the protection of the weak, and for the punishment of his assailants, and ask such further powers from Parliament as may seem to be required, we must rely far more on moral than on legal restraint, far more upon conviction than coercion; far more upon kindness than severity, far more upon patience than anger, for progress and for victory. Indeed, these gamblers, though they may despise and even curse our compassion, are of all men most to be pitied. Though they seem to be so free from care, to come into no misfortune like other folk, so lusty and strong, so boisterous in the jocund glee—even in laughter the heart is sorrowful, and the end of that mirth is heaviness. No men verify more signally the prophetic warnings, "Be sure your sin will find you out." "The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices make whips to scourge us." We clergy know how inevitably the time comes to these men, as to all who have persistently done despite to the spirit of grace, when they must think and suffer and "loathe themselves for the evil they committed." What men are so exposed as these to disappointments and reverses, to the sadness and the sickness which attend inseparably upon wild excitement and excess?

VII. It seems to me, concluding, that there are two primary and indispensable elements of success in a crusade against gambling and betting, example and sympathy. The beacons of war must be kindled on the mountains. The officers must lead the attack. "Noblesse oblige," and the English poet has well translated the Latin "Nobilitas sola est atque unica virtus," " 'Tis noble only to be good." It seems to me that a true nobleman, a true gentleman, should not condescend to take money from one whom he despises, money which has been obtained he knows not how, the loss of which may have caused ruin and disgrace. It seems to me that no true nobleman, no true gentleman, should pay large sums of money and have nothing to show for it, money which he might have relieved want and encouraged industry, might have gained the blessing of him that was ready to perish, and caused the widow's heart to sing for joy.

Cæsar, like his wife, should be above suspicion, but if he fraternises with the suspected the world will say, "Noscitur a sociis," "Birds of a feather flock together." The legislator must be the last man to suggest the accusation that there is one law for the rich and another for the poor, that you may gamble and bet as you please at the club, but not in the public house, that you may play for hundreds, but certainly not for half-crowns. A magistrate must not by any inconsistency provoke the sarcastic smile or wink behind his back of the policeman who receives his instructions. Tall men should brush their hats. If the public clocks of the town-hall, the infirmary, and the church (representing the three professions of law, physic, and divinity) go wrong, where shall the citizen set his watch? Then I would appeal to that mighty Hercules, the common sense (consensus) of public opinion, not to abolish, but to ablate the Augean stables; to Jupiter Tonans, the Thunderer, the press, not to advertise "tips" nor even "morals," to ignore the "odds," to allay the irritation of midnight "scratchings," and not to obstruct the pavement with a crowd of loafers waiting to know whether they have lost or won their money instead of honestly earning it; to Mars and Neptune, the military and naval magnates, to discourage gambling and betting among their subalterns; to Mercurius, the chief speakers, not only to denounce these vices in Parliament, from pulpit and platform, but to demonstrate to their hearers the more excellent ways of honourable and useful employment. I would entreat Vulcan, all who have power in the factory and at the forge, to come down upon this evil, like Nasmyth's hammer upon a nest of rotten eggs; and I would beseech Venus, our fair English damsels and dames, to withdraw their presence from the shooting of doves at Hurlingham and the plucking of pigeons at Monte Carlo.

VIII. We want more sympathy and less selfishness. We want union of hearts as well of union of trades. We want co-operation, which means something more than "Divi." We want more mutual respect and less mutual recrimination, more talk face to face and less behind each other's backs. Then we shall find that we have all of us our temptations and difficulties, and may combine in overcoming them. We should follow the example of the elder Wilberforce—"I have always tried," he said, "to see some good in my fellow-men, and have never failed but twice." When we see others in error let us remember the wise words of a Kempis, "If thou canst not make thyself to be what thou dost desire, how dost thou expect another to be exactly to thy mind?"

If gambling and betting are so injurious, the question which we have to answer to-night is, What are we doing, what are we going to do, to repress them? Hypocrites and cowards only cry, "How foolish they have been; they'll be drowned; they'll be burned—how I wish I could help them, but nothing can be done." Brave men man the lifeboat, and go up the ladder through the smoke. It's all very well, as far as it goes, to tell a poor fellow that you are sorry he is starving, but it is far more "gradeley" to send him a leg of mutton. We all deplore epidemic disease, but wise men and kind men not only send the doctor and the nurse, but they look to the drains, that they may prevent as well as cure. They go to the springs that they may purify the whole stream, instead of filtering it by the pint. A drunkard said to a philanthropist reproving him, "Come and live in our court, and you'll soon be glad of the whisky." So with gambling and betting. While there is no excuse for those who have healthful homes and occupations and amusements, the plea may certainly be urged by those who have them not; nay, in too many cases have but a small share in those free gifts which are meant for all—fresh air, pure water, and clear light. "We do not profess to be admirers of gambling and betting, we are not blind to the harm they do, but what do you propose in their place?" I am a gardener, and I know that if plants have not a good soil, light and air, they will quickly be infested by grubs, mealy-bugs, aphids, and all manner of flies. So with men; if they have not healthy homes, honest occupation, or social amusement, they will be attacked by parasites, by companions who will induce them to drink, to gamble and to bet.

When Sir Francis Crossley presented a public park to the people of Halifax, he said—"I attribute our prosperity in this place mainly to the simple fact that when we first went through the gates of the great mill yonder, my mother said, 'If the Lord bless us in this place, the poor shall taste of it.'" And how could they taste of it more sweetly than in peaceful rest, amid things pleasant to the eye, where there were no temptations to sin.

Yes, I am sure that Christianity alone can express us with a sense of these obligations and bring us the power to fulfil them. Religion alone can enable us to convince others, as we are ourselves convinced, that gambling and betting are degradations of the redeemed and regenerate man, vile abuses of those gifts and energies which were given us for nobler ends, and miserable failures to find happiness, where, sooner or later, there is but sorrow and shame.

Alas! this curse had never come to us had we but been true children of the Church—of the mother who taught us, as soon as we were able to learn, "not to covet and desire other men's goods," but to learn and labour truly, to get our own living, and to do our duty in that state of life to which it shall please God to call us."

WARNER'S MEMORIAL TABLETS AND MEDIEVAL BRASSES.—Messrs. John Warner and Sons, of the Crescent Foundry, Cripplegate, have just introduced some very effective Memorial Tablets in cast brass and other metals, in appropriate designs, for tombs, records of charity and benevolence, and other every-day purposes. This practical invention takes various forms, many of them unique, among which may be mentioned tablets of approved shape to take the place of the old, cumbersome, and perishable tombstone; medallions in any form or character; coats of arms of public bodies; records of public events; in fact their uses are many and varied. They are made, as we have just stated, in any conceivable design, and with every description of lettering. When the hideousness of many of the now existing records comes to be noticed, these inventions of the above firm will be most refreshing to the antiquarian and ecclesiologist, and their harmony, combined with their simplicity, will please the most capricious eye. The same firm have also devoted their attention to the manufacture of Iron and Brass Work, comprising every item of Ecclesiastical Art, so far as metals are concerned. This branch of Church work has been supposed to be only trustworthy in the hands of a few firms who have affected an exclusive knowledge of the manufacture of such articles. But that idea is now exploded; the Ecclesiastical Art-work of Messrs. Warner and Sons has demolished it altogether.

THE SURREY ASSOCIATION.

The next Quarterly Meeting of this Association will be held, by the kind permission of the Rector, at Beddington, on Monday, October 15th, when the tower will be open for ringing during the afternoon and evening.

The tea will be at the Plough Inn at 6.30 p.m. All who intend to be present at tea are requested to signify their intention to Mr. Trappitt, Church Lane, Beddington, near Croydon, not later than Friday, October 12th, in order that provision may be made for them. NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Be thankful for small mercies."

I am obliged to Mr. Hardcastle, jun. for his prompt and satisfactory response to my enquiry for more information respecting the Society of which he is Secretary. There are many points in his letter which I would like to dilate upon, but as you, Mr. Editor, have so well treated it in your leading article, I feel compelled—on the score of occupying too much of your valuable space—to pass over this interesting matter for the present. One thing, however, I must say, that I do think this young Society well worthy the support of the older members of the district in which it exists—a support which I have no doubt it receives—and is worthy of being copied in many places, a step which could not fail to be followed with advantage. May the "Scholars'" anticipations with respect to its future results be abundantly realised; and their work be rewarded with increased numbers, good ringing, and continued efficiency of organisation.

No doubt, in the same issue of this journal in which these lines appear, we shall be favoured with a report of the proceedings at the Annual Meeting of the Yorkshire Association. As I mentioned last week, I determined if possible to be present on that occasion, and happily my determination was rewarded with success, for after a long journey (one which would have been wearisome too, had I not been fortunate enough in getting into the company of some rather lively co-passengers to the North), about four o'clock I was stepping over the Lendal bridge in company with my Yorkshire friend, on the way to the Minster. Arriving in front of the two magnificent western towers (the bells being "chimed round" for service) instead of meeting the crowd of ringers which I had expected, the space seemed almost deserted. "Where are the ringers?" I asked. "Oh, you'll see them presently," replied my friend, with a smile. So after one more look at the towers, we passed along and entered by the south transept. I then found that my friend was right, for I did "see them presently," the transepts and nave seemed literally swarming, as they trod lightly and reverently by, preparatory to taking their places in the choir. There was no mistake about one thing; these Yorkshiremen are proud of their noble Minster; one could see it in their very faces; and I thought to myself as I watched them—surely the would-be despoiler of the Church will find more than a match for himself in the persons of such as these. But my ruminations were cut short by a whispered hint that it was time for us to be taking our places, so passing along the Lady Chapel we entered by a side opening into the spacious choir, with its splendid carving, surrounded by ancient and beautifully-stained windows of gigantic proportions. Then as the choristers entered through the rood screen, and there stood up a congregation which seemed to fill every portion of the vast place, my heart warmed at the thought that this once-despised bell-ringing had so well asserted itself as to bring together such an assembly in the grand old Mother Church of the North of England.

But I must not tarry. The service was worthy of the occasion; and the address which followed from the lips of the Dean, was in the best possible taste. Without any attempt at eloquence or "flowery rhetoric," the preacher placed before his hearers plain facts with regard to the position and work of the Church now and thirty years ago; and as he dealt with the particular object which had brought them together, he warmed to his subject; and his concluding exhortation to them as ringers to let their improvement in the science be commensurate with their increased diligence to their duties, will not, I imagine be readily forgotten by those present, or be barren of good results.

Like all our public functions, this occasion would have been incomplete without a "feed"; so on leaving the Minster, led by my friend and guide, I was soon dodging round corners and narrow antiquated streets till we arrived at a narrow passage, at the further end of which I found myself in a brightly-lit school-room well filled with persons evidently bent on the enjoyment of a good tea. Grace having been said by the Dean, we were not long in satisfying ourselves with the many good things provided. Up to this time I had nothing but commendation on the proceedings, but no sooner was tea over than there came an interregnum of what seemed to me of inordinate length between the tea and the business meeting. What with moving of plates, crockery-ware, tables, etc., every one seemed suddenly to be in everyone else's way for the time being, and the result was naturally that a large number left the place, and as far as I could see did not return to take part in the business meeting which followed. This unsatisfactory feature of our gatherings I have noticed many times before, and if any of our friends could bring forward a solution of the difficulty, how to combine the eating and the business with as little disturbance as possible, they would positively confer a great benefit on the Exercise.

Anyway, when business was commenced, there was no lack of system and energy about it; that was certainly one redeeming feature; and I was, I admit, surprised to see the amount of work done in so short a time. These hard-headed Yorkshiremen seem to go at high pressure in everything; and the result was that, after all, the business meeting was thoroughly efficient for the purpose. Then, to make my story short, I would just say that ten o'clock saw me on my road back home, well satisfied, taking things altogether, with my last visit to Yorkshire. There need be no fear that the Association which can proudly boast of the late Jasper Snowdon as its first President will ever lose the position which it holds in the ringing world; and as I travelled behind the "iron horse" homewards, I felt gratified that I had been privileged once more to mix among a body of men who are without doubt a credit to the Exercise, and in whose hands the work of progress will never, I am convinced, be allowed to flag.

I feel sure that I shall be but echoing the sentiments of us all when I tender most heartily my sincere condolence with our mutual friend, Mr. C. H. Hattersley, in his bereavement on the loss of his dear wife. As I once before observed, no one but those who have actually experienced such a loss can comprehend fully its depth. It will be, however, I think, some comfort to Mr. Hattersley to know that in his time of sorrow he has the heartfelt sympathy both of those who know him personally, and those who, less fortunate—know him only by repute. May I therefore tender to him on behalf of the Exercise our warmest sympathies, and assure him that though we may not give expression to our thoughts in a tangible fashion, our hearts are nevertheless joining with him in his great grief.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ANNUAL MEETING IN BOLTON.

Bellringers from all parts of the county assembled in Bolton on Saturday, on the occasion of the annual meeting of the Lancashire Association of Change Ringers, representatives to the number of about 150 being present from Manchester, Liverpool, Southport, Ashton, Bolton and district, Eccles, Heywood, Hyde, Milnrow, Newhey, Pendlebury, Prestwich, Radcliffe, Rochdale, Stalybridge, Walkden, Worsley, Bacup, Whitefield, Newchurch, Ramsbottom, and Waterfoot. The various belfries in the town were visited and some splendid ringing indulged in, and then the whole of the ringers assembled in Holy Trinity Church, where the Rev. Charles Heath, M.A., Vicar of Walkden, delivered a most appropriate sermon, dwelling upon the importance of the duties of the bellringers, and urging upon them the necessity of leading a life outside the belfry consistent with the Christian work in which they were engaged inside the various church towers abounding in the county palatine. At the close of the discourse, which was warmly appreciated, tea was served in the adjoining schools, the church choir and a number of friends waiting upon the visitors. Afterwards the business meeting of the Association was held. There was a large attendance, including a few ladies, and the Vicar of the parish presided by virtue of his office as President of the Association, being supported by the Rev. S. T. Williamson, M.A., his Curate; the Rev. H. J. Elsee, Curate of St. Andrew's Manchester; Mr. A. E. Holme, M.A., of Manchester, vice-president of the Association; and Mr. Joel Redford, the secretary. Several of the ringers present from different towns entertained the company with a clever imitation of the church bells on the handbells.

The Rev. CHARLES LOWE, M.A., said that as President of their Association it afforded him the greatest pleasure to welcome them to that schoolroom again; also to see so many of the Lancashire church bell-ringers in the adjoining sanctuary that afternoon. On their next visit to Bolton he should take care that the clergy of the town and district had a special invitation to join them in the afternoon service, believing that the ringers would be heartily glad to meet their clergy and the clergy to meet their ringers on such an occasion. A pressing invitation should also be extended to the congregation to attend, and he hoped it would be largely responded to. He said this because he felt it was important the bell-ringers should feel that they were members of a great body corporate. They were really a corporation among themselves. Throughout England, he took it, there were something like 50,000 bell-ringers; but whilst they were of themselves a great corporation, numerically they were still very small in comparison with the great corporate body of the church. He wanted to see the ringers closely united to them, for the ringers were undoubtedly engaged in God's work and strove to do it to His honour and glory. Therefore he maintained that the clergy should visit the belfries a great deal more than they did, the ringers being deserving of every support and encouragement in their important work. After these few preliminary observations he went on to say that it gave him great pleasure to congratulate them upon the satisfactory nature of the year's report. Financially they were sound, and numerically they had a substantial gain to show. He was certain an association of this kind was calculated to do and was doing a vast amount of good. It drew them, brother Christians and fellow workers, together in kindly and loving intercourse and enabled them to work in that spirit of harmony and unselfishness which ought to characterise all branches of Christian work. He had felt it a very great pleasure and privilege to have their confidence as President of their Association; but really the post had been almost a sinecure, though if called upon he should have been glad to have done far more than he had. With all sincerity he urged them to try and realise more and more that they were engaged in a serious and solemn work and a work of the utmost importance. It does one's heart good to hear the bells resounding through the parish, putting joy and gladness into the souls of those who realised the call aright. Sometimes, too, they rang forth the note of warning and condemnation to those who were about to mis-spend the Day of Rest in drives or excursions, totally forgetful at the outset, it might be of the Divine injunction "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it Holy." Thus while they cheered and encouraged the true child of God, the bells reminded the Sabbath desecrator of his duty, and the serious responsibilities he was taking upon himself in neglecting the Divine command.

Mr. JOEL REDFORD, the secretary, read the Committee's report, as follows:—"During the past year we may congratulate ourselves as being the most successful during the existence of the Association. Four honorary and 74 ringing members have been elected. Our numbers are now 43 of the former and 277 of the latter. We notice the satisfactory progress of the working of the Association in the Northern Division of the county; all the ringers of the Parish Church, Lancaster, and Dalton-in-Furness have been admitted. In the North-East Division matters are now assuming that which the officers have long desired, viz., the enrolment of new members. Two more branches have been formed out of the ranks of the Association, viz., the Manchester Branch and the Rochdale Branch. Thirty-nine peals of 5000 changes and upwards have been rung in various methods; 43 peals of 720's have also been rung. The balance in the hands of the Treasurer is £17 7s. 1d., which amount would have been considerably more but for the apathy of some members, who by not complying with Rule 4 have been struck off, but the Society is more than compensated by the increase of new members. Though greater activity has been shown during the year by the enrolling of new members, we would impress on the members generally the necessity of furthering the work of the Association in the many districts which have not been hitherto reached. We would also commend to the large districts the advantages of the formation of branches, which are being worked with great success." Suitable reference was made to the demise of Mr. Thomas Morris, a ringer of over 30 years' standing in Bolton. The report was unanimously adopted.

The Rev. CHARLES LOWE, was again proposed as the President, the mover remarking that no clergymen in Lancashire took a deeper interest in the Association. An amendment was proposed that the Rev. H. J. Elsee, a ringing member, be elected; but that gentleman intimated that having been in Lancashire a very short time only he did not feel justified in allowing his name to be put before the meeting.

THE CHAIRMAN said he should be pleased to give way, thinking that changes might be beneficial; but the meeting appeared to be highly pleased with Mr. Lowe's valuable services, and he was unanimsously re-elected amid applause. He said he was obliged to them for their kindness and confidence. He was not a "full" ringer, but for nine of the ten years he was at Kersley Moor, he rang the people to church daily. His services were entirely at their disposal, and he would do all he could to further their interests.

MR. JOEL REDFORD was re-appointed secretary by the unanimous vote of the meeting, the highest appreciation being expressed for Mr. Redford's diligent labours for the welfare of the Association.

MR. H. W. JACKSON, another Boltonian, was unanimously re-appointed treasurer; Messrs. Davies and Booth (Liverpool), auditors; and Messrs. Wood (Ashton), Nutter (Ramsbottom), Horrocks (Church), and Aspinwall (Liverpool) members of the committee.

A goodly number of new members were elected, including the whole of the ringers at St. Saviour's Church, Bolton.

By a majority of thirty-four to twenty-six, Bacup was selected as the town for next year's meeting, in preference to Manchester.

Heartly thanks were tendered for the use of the belfries in the town, to the Rev. Charles Heath for his sermon, for the excellent tea provided, and to the Chairman for his services.

The proceedings then terminated, several peals being afterwards rung from St. George's, the Parish, St. Saviour's, and the Holy Trinity belfries.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT ASSOCIATION.

The next Quarterly Meeting of the above Association will be held at King's Norton, to-day, Saturday, October 20th. By kind permission the Tower will be open for ringing at 4 o'clock, after which a meeting will be held. All members and friends are earnestly invited.

CHURCH CONSECRATION AT UPPER HELMSLEY.

THE village church at Upper Helmsley, near Stamford Bridge, which has just been rebuilt upon its old foundations of the 10th century, was reopened on Thursday, October 11th, by his Grace the Archbishop of York. The entire cost of reconstruction has been defrayed by Mrs. Anna Maria Herbert, wife of Colonel Herbert, of The Hall, Upper Helmsley. The style of architecture, which produces a pleasing effect, is in harmony with that of the Norman period. As a church rebuilt and furnished in memory of relatives of the benefactress, Mrs. Herbert has given three new bells, cast by Warner, of London, and hung by Mallaby and Sons, of Masham. The bells bear the inscription "Pro Deo, Pro Regina, et Patria, 1887," and are a memento of the erection of the new church and also of the Jubilee year of Her Majesty's reign. Much credit is due to the architect, Mr. Martin W. Lewis (of the firm of Messrs. William Lewis and Son, of York), upon the result of the work as a faithful reproduction of the characteristics of a Norman church. The former edifice was of brick, and stood also upon the old foundations. It was built by Mrs. Jane Wilmer, of Upper Helmsley, an ancestress of Mrs. Herbert, and its erection is recorded upon a brass tablet within the church. The date of the first church is nowhere more positively certified than in the stones of its foundations and other stones found figured with ancient scroll work. In "Lawton's Collectio" Over or Upper Helmsley, with its church of St. Peter, is given as being "an ancient rectory, formerly belonging to the patronage of the Mowbrays, and was given by Roger de Mowbray to the Hospital of St. Leonard, York, and at the Dissolution the patronage came to the Crown." The whole exterior of the new church is of Brecon Hill stone, and the interior masonry is of Ancaster stone, with Norman enrichments. The roof is of Westmoreland slates. The interior roofing, wood-fittings, and seats are pitch-pine. The floor is laid with marble mosaic, in keeping with the date of the building, the tracery and figuring of the mosaic being richer at the east end. The pulpit is in whitest Ancaster stone, circular and massive, corresponding fitly with the font, which is supposed to have been in use in the original church of the tenth century. The Communion rails, furniture of the retable, lectern, book-rests, and lamps are all in brass. The new edifice will comfortably accommodate about 100 worshippers, though considerably over that number assembled at the special service on Thursday afternoon. The procession of clergy and prominent lay residents of the district who walked in procession to the already crowded edifice at three o'clock, included, besides the Archbishop, Archdeacon Yeoman, Canon Randolph, the Rev. Sir George and Lady Cox, Revs. H. Puxley, G. F. Horner (the rector of the parish), F. Salmon, C. W. Trotter, A. C. Craig, A. Hughes, W. Gell, H. Willoughby, J. Farrar, R. Surtees, Colonel and Mrs. Herbert, Sir James and Lady Walker, Mr. George and Mr. E. Herbert, and Captain and Mrs. Key, York. The service, vocal and devotional, was appropriate to the occasion.

The Archbishop of York preceded his sermon by remarking that it was usually his lot in opening a new church, or a church that had been restored, to announce that after much struggling they had been able to carry out the work by means of the contributions of kind friends, and that there remained a debt of £200 or £300 for the congregation assembled to help to pay off. There was this consolation, however, that those debts were always paid. In the present instance he had no invitation of the kind he had mentioned to make to them, for that beautiful temple was the free gift of one whose name he need not indicate, who loved the people of the parish, and who identified her interest with theirs. The blessing which that free gift might be to the parish could scarcely be estimated. He had pleasure in accepting the valuable gift in the name of our Blessed Lord, for whose glory it had been provided, and he welcomed the people of the parish into their new house of prayer, hoping that it might be a blessing to them and to generations yet unborn.

His Grace's text was St. John, xvii. 19. In the course of his sermon, he said that far more work in the form of christian charity, the outcome of love for souls, was being done now as in any past time. All the loving acts, such as the gift of that church, were connected with the principle upon which they were represented in the text as sanctifying themselves for the sake of others. The amount expended upon that church might have been expended upon a picture or a yacht; but in choosing to bestow upon the parish a new church, the benevolent donor assisted in preserving the spirit of Christian charity. The sanctification of one's self for the good of others was more and more necessary in every department of life. For instance, let them consider the practice of betting, in which thousands indulged, especially in Yorkshire. The stimulus to bet was something very charming to the human mind, or betting would not be so general. Because there could not be found ten to resist the temptation, betting became the practice of a thousand. A man said to himself, "Surely it does not matter if I bet a shilling or sixpence; so here goes!" But suppose they found among betting people all manner of dishonesty, and that it led to great crime, to prison, and to damnation, there lay the serious aspect of the question. The risk of a shilling or sixpence made no essential difference to a man, but it made all the difference in the world whether he did that which, so far as his example was concerned, might ruin others. All the arguments of the clergy against betting would be vain until a few men would sanctify themselves and do the right thing for the sake of their brethren. One man who would oppose betting might face a thousand who were for the practice, so strong would his cause be. The same principle applied to the observance of Sunday, which was a great safeguard of religion in this country. Some men might ask, "Is it not rather superstitious to depend on one particular day in the week?" But were Sunday taken away how could the clergy reach men? They would be too much involved in their own affairs to be dealt with by the Church. Again, it was sometimes asked, "Why not open museums on Sundays?" The few librarians and other officials who take care of these places would have to work, but they must give way to the general good." But, after all, did the working classes want this concession? They had never said so. He had been assured at the Church Congress that working people did not desire to give up their Sundays to museums or occupations of that kind.

GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

On Tuesday, October 2nd, eight members of the St. Michael's Junior Society, Gloucester, journeyed to Prestbury to attempt Mr. J. J. Parker's one-part peal of Grandsire Triples, which was successfully brought round in 2 hrs. 50 mins., and was duly recorded in its proper place. On leaving the tower they were met by F. E. Ward, Esq., Master of the above Association, in company of Mr. Davies, churchwarden, who congratulated them on the excellent striking throughout the peal. Mr. Ward, with his usual courtesy, invited them to his house, where, after refreshments had been disposed of, the handbells were brought into requisition, and courses of Grandsire Triples, Major, Caters, Cinques, and Maximus rung. F. E. Hart, 1-2; S. E. Romans, 3-4; F. E. Ward, 5-6; H. L. James, 7-8; R. J. Wilkins, 9-10; W. J. Sevier, 11-12. Finding the time was drawing short they wended their way to the station, and arrived at Gloucester at 12.10, highly delighted with their first trip to Prestbury. They wish, through the medium of this paper, to thank their Prestbury friends for getting everything ready.

THE EAST LINCOLNSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday last, the quarterly meeting of the East Lincolnshire Society took place at Croft, but owing to the late harvest there was not a very large meeting. Divine service was held in the parish church at 12.30, the sermon being preached by the Rev. D. J. White, Vicar of Burgh, who impressed upon ringers how they should respect the office to which they were appointed. Having traced the ringers in olden times up to the present, the preacher observed that there was a marked improvement which was attributed to the formation of the different Associations, such as they were celebrating that day.

Dinner was provided by host Morley, of the "Angel" hotel, Wainfleet, in a very creditable manner. The Rev. H. J. Cheales presided, supported by the Rev. F. Besant, Mr. H. Harrison, and several ringers and friends. After dinner, the president called upon the secretary (Mr. Mason) to read the minutes of the last meeting, and this having been done,

The Rev. H. J. CHEALES said that at the last meeting held at Kilton it was unanimously resolved to present a timepiece to Mr. Mason for his services as secretary. He was very glad to say they were able to fulfil their intention that day. A very elegant timepiece was then placed upon the table amid cheers. In presenting it to Mr. Mason, the rev. chairman remarked that he hoped Mr. Mason would like it, and also long live to use it. It is a special design cast in the shape of a bell beautifully ornamented. Round the mouth were the words in Latin: "Our Father, which art in heaven. The Lord be with you; and with thy spirit." Upon the crown was engraved the following: "Presented by members of the East Lincolnshire Change Ringers' Association to their excellent secretary, E. Mason, July 14th, 1888."

A 720 of Bob Minor was rung at Croft by J. Seymour, 1; E. Mason, 2; Rev. H. J. Cheales, 3; G. Clarke, 4; H. Daulton (conductor), 5; A. O. Barber, 6. The company then drove to Wainfleet St. Mary's, but being some little time in getting the conveyances up, only 360 was rung, two having to catch the train at Thorpe.

Friskney was then visited, where tea was provided at the rectory; after which several 6-scores of Grandsire and Bob Doubles were rung by T. Rogers, G. Clark, Rev. H. J. Cheales, E. Mason, and A. O. Barber.

COLLEGE YOUTHS' VISIT TO COGGESHALL, ESSEX.

On Saturday last, six members of this Society from Ipswich, and two from London, visited this place as arranged, to meet the expressed wish of Mr. E. Carter to attempt a peal of Double Norwich Court Bob Major on these bells, the day chosen being a very auspicious one, as it happened to be the coming of age of one of the leading inhabitants of the place, O. B. Hanbury, Esq., of Holfield Grange, Coggeshall. Starting from Ipswich about half-past one, we reached Kelvedon just before three o'clock, having picked up at Colchester the big fat man who left the rest of the party looking rather disconsolate on the Ipswich platform, when they were apparently left behind, having to travel on by the second section of the 1.35 train. After a smart walk of three miles we were suddenly half-rounded by a "bob" being called loudly from the other side of the street by the well-known voice of one who don't often figure as a bob-caller. Having refreshed the bearings with grease, and the inner man with the necessary lining, we were soon in the tower ready to begin. "Go" being called at 4.52, and at 8.4 a first-class peal was completed, and the applause given as soon as the door was open, was a proof that others were as satisfied as ourselves. We soon found our way back to the Woolpack Inn, where to our great surprise an excellent meat tea had been provided at the expense of the vicar and churchwardens, to which ample justice was done. After thanking those present for their kind reception, we were obliged to make a hasty retreat to the station, arriving safely home shortly before midnight, thoroughly pleased with the visit. The company beg through the medium of this paper to thank the vicar and churchwardens for so readily granting their permission to ring, and for the provision made, and also thank the steeple-keeper (Mr. Nicholls), and the rest of the Coggeshall company for the manner in which they tried their best to make our visit a pleasant one. THE EXTENT OF DUFFIELD MAJOR.

BY THE REV. H. EARLE BULWER.

It may be interesting to students of the "Duffield Method" to know that the extent of Duffield published in your last number may be safely varied in the following manner:—

1 2 3 4 5 6 1 B O F

4 6 2 1 3 5 - -

Take the 19th course of original and proceed to the 28th—2 5 4 1 3 6 - -

4 2 5 1 3 6 - -

5 4 2 1 3 6 - -

2 6 4 1 5 3 - -

Take the 2nd course of original and proceed to the 15th—3 5 4 2 1 6 - -

4 3 5 2 1 6 - -

5 4 3 2 1 6 - -

2 3 4 5 1 6 - -

4 2 3 5 1 6 - -

3 4 2 5 1 6 - -

5 2 4 3 1 6 - -

4 5 2 3 1 6 - -

2 4 5 3 1 6 - -

Four times repeated.

This variation has two advantages over the original. (1) The sixth place bells are better arranged, and there is one less of them in each part. (2) Of the two courses in the original, having three consecutive calls, one disappears. On the other hand, the variation cannot, like the original, be brought round true in a few changes over the 5000.

THE ST. MARY'S SOCIETY, KIDDERMINSTER.

It is worthy of notice that the peal rung by this Society, and which which will be found in its proper place, was a well-struck peal throughout, and reflects great credit on the performers, Mr. Crane especially, for the able manner in which he piloted the seventh through. It is also remarkable as being the first peal rung by a Kidderminster band since the year 1765, when a peal, the first and only one recorded, was rung. The inscription on the peal-board in the tower is as follows:—

"On Monday, August 29th, 1765, was rung in this tower in three hours and fourteen minutes, the complete peal of Grand-sire Tripples, consisting of 5040 changes, by the following persons: Thos. Webb, treble; Frank Rook, 2; John Preen, 3; Willm. Pugh, 4; Thos. Little, 5; Andw. Peak, 6; Jos. Bradley, 7; Benjamin Horn and Edward Lewis, tenor."

There is no mention made in the above of either composer or conductor, so it seems very uncertain what peal it was, or whether it was a true peal at all, as no one at the present time can give any information regarding it or the performers. It may possibly have been the peal without a single (?) composed by the late Stephen Hill, of this town, living as he did about that time, but if so one would have thought he would have rung in it or called it. From this time change-ringing seems to have entirely died out, and call-changes were rung till within four years ago. About the year 1884 a society was formed mainly by the instrumentality of Mr. Edward F. Strange, for the study of change-ringing, with Mr. Crane as conductor, who has been the mainstay throughout. We were a long time getting through the first stages, but now we have a good band of about twelve members, and hope to do something better in the future. H. W.

WINCHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.—CAPEL BRANCH.

On Monday, October the 8th, six members of the above guild visited Esher, in Surrey, it having been arranged to attempt a 5000 in seven Minor methods of Treble Bob, but unfortunately on arriving at Esher, we were informed that the bells could not be rung on account of the serious illness of Dr. Guthrie, whose house adjoins the churchyard. The rector telegraphed to Capel, as early as he could to stop the proposed visit, but the party were nearly half-way on their journey by the time the telegram reached Capel. After finding we could not ring at Esher, we left our steed at Esher, and walked to Thames Ditton, a distance of nearly three miles, and finding the vicar of Ditton, who readily gave permission for us to ring for a hour on the Ditton bells, we soon set off to find Mr. T. Wells, one of the Ditton ringers, who accompanied us to the church, and after raising the bells a 720 of Oxford Treble Bob was brought round in 26 mins. J. Akehurst, 1; R. Jordan, 2; E. Jordan, 3; M. Jenkins, 4; T. Stedman, 5; D. Jordan (conductor), 6. Also 720 College Pleasure. J. Akehurst, 1; T. Stedman, 2; R. Jordan, 3; M. Jenkins, 4; D. Jordan, 5; E. Jordan (conductor), 6. And 120 Grandsire Doubles. J. Akehurst, 1; R. Jordan, 2; T. Wells, 3; E. Jordan, 4; D. Jordan, 5; T. Stedman, 6. The ringers wish through these columns to thank Mr. Wells for his kind attendance, also the vicar for the use of the bells. J.

PAINSWICK, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

The 96th birthday of the veteran ringer, Giles Mansfield, the oldest ringer living at the present time, was celebrated on Monday, October 15th, by the Stroud and Painswick Societies. The Painswick Society rang at 1 p.m. a touch of Grandsire Triples, containing 1344 changes, in fifty-three mins. A. Trigg, 2; D. Marment, 2; W. Ryland, 3; E. King, 4; J. Wager, 5; J. Everatt, 6; W. Hale (conductor), 7; T. Wright, 8. In the evening at the Parish Church, Stroud, a touch of 1344 changes was rung by the following. A. Trigg, 1; D. Marment, 2; C. King, 3; N. King, 4; G. Latham, 5; J. Everatt, 6; W. Hale (conductor), 7; F. Stephens, 8. Afterwards the house of the veteran was visited, and several courses of Minor and Triples were rang round his bed. He is perfectly conscious, and talks of the intricacies of ringing as well as though he meant to ring again. He is very feeble in body and cannot hold the bells this year. He is still dependent on the parish allowance, and a kind friend that may call and see him.

PRESTBURY, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

On Saturday, September 13th, the local band inaugurated the peal boards recording the "clerical" peal, which was rung on the occasion of the re-opening of the bells at this church two years since; and the first peal by the local band, which was rung in February, 1887, by an attempt at another peal, the same ringers as before taking the ropes, but unfortunately without success in this case, as a change-course occurred after an hour and three quarter's ringing. The peal attempted was Holt's Original, and the band stood as follows: D. Davis, 1; G. H. Phillott, 2; F. E. Ward, 3; T. Steel, 4; F. Musty, 5; W. T. Pates (conductor), 6; T. Davis, 7; T. Compton, 8. The boards are of a very handsome design, and surmount the photographs of the respective bands. The ringers finished up the evening as usual.

DURHAM AND NEWCASTLE DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

The Annual Meeting will be held at Newcastle on Monday, October 29th. The bells at the disposal of the members will be the peals of eight at All Saints, St. John's, and St. Stephen's. Divine Service at St. John's church at 2 p.m. Dinner, followed by the business meeting, at the "Crown and Mitre," Grey Street, at 3 p.m. Members intending to dine are requested to give a week's notice to the Secretary.

RINGERS' FEAST AT TWYFORD, HANTS.

On Monday, October 8th, the 131st anniversary of the Ringers' Feast, in connection with St. Mary's Church, was duly carried out with the usual honours to the memory of the late William Davies, Esq., who left a sum of money, producing a guinea a year, in order that the ringers of Twyford might continue to celebrate the same after his death. Mr. Davies, whose tablet in the church records the fact that he was of a benevolent disposition, also showed his benevolence by presenting to the church of Twyford, at the same time, a fine peal of six bells.

Several peals of Grandsire Doubles and Minor were rung at intervals during the day, until 7 o'clock p.m., when the ringers adjourned as usual to the residence of Mr. Thomas Carter (an old and much respected ringer of fifty years' standing), and with their friends sat down to an excellent hot dinner.

The Rev. C. Buston, well-known as a great enthusiast in campanology, again presided over a very large company, Mr. T. Carter, occupying the vice-chair. Ample justice having been done to the tempting viands set before them, the chairman proposed the "Health of the Queen and Royal Family," which was loyally received. Mr. Shenton was then called upon to propose the toast of the evening, viz., "The Ringers of Twyford," which was heartily drunk with musical honours. Other toasts, including the "Chairman," "Parish Clerk," "Visitors," &c. were also drunk and responded to, and the rest of the evening was devoted to harmony, some capital songs and recitations being given. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close, by all singing, "Auld Lang Syne."

BRADFIELD, BERKS.

On Wednesday, October 3rd, the ring of six bells at this parish church, which has lately been re-hung by Mr. Harry Stokes of Exeter, were rung for the first time by the Caversham band, this being also the service of thanksgiving for the ingathering of the harvest. The ringers arrived by brake at six o'clock, and the bells were soon set going, a 720 and a few touches being rung in good style. The church, which was very nicely decorated for the occasion, was well filled by a large congregation, and an eloquent sermon was preached by the Rector, the Rev. A. Standidge. As the choir (parish and college united) was leaving the sacred building the ringers ascended the tower which was soon full of parishioners, and rang another 720 of Minor, and lowered the bells in peal. After being congratulated on the fine striking by several present, they were taken to the Rectory, where a good supper was waiting for them. After a course or two of the good things provided, a peal of handbells was brought into requisition, and a few tunes, touches of Minor and Triples were rung, which greatly delighted the Rector and family. Mr. Newman having explained the meaning of a bob, etc., congratulated the Rector on the "go" of the bells, the ringers saying they had never handled bells to go so well before. The Rector thanked them for assisting him in opening the bells, and hoped at no distant date they would come and ring the first peal. It need hardly be said that this invitation was at once accepted, and will shortly be attempted. The ringers were T. Newman, G. Essex, H. Smith, J. Hands, E. Menday, and H. Simmonds, conducted by T. Newman.

WIDFORD, ESSEX.

The peal of six at the parish church has recently been augmented to eight, by the addition of two trebles. The following is the particulars of the work done: Four of the bells have been necessarily removed and rehung, and a new oak frame for two bells placed above the others. A complete set of new sallie rollers, also new iron guides, which are a great improvement to the handling of the ropes. There is a new chiming apparatus, so that one man can chime all the bells.

On Thursday evening, October 4th, four of the Writtle band, and four of the Widford band, met to try the bells, when a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples, taken from Shipway, was rung in 45 mins. W. Emery, 1; J. Dains, 2; A. Shuttleworth, 3; J. Everard, 4; W. Lincoln (conductor), 5; A. Edwards, 6; A. Tarbun, 7; W. J. Piper, 8. Also 168 in the same method, with Mr. Gray at the tenor; and a course of Bob Major. The new bells are the munificent gift of A. Pryor, Esq.

THE TEWKESBURY ABBEY SOCIETY.

On Thursday, October 4th, the members of this Society had their annual outing, Nottingham being the place selected. The party, ten in number, joined the train at Ashchurch at 7.50 a.m., this being an excursion from Bristol. On the arrival of the train at Nottingham about 11.20 they were met by some ringing friends of that place, and in less than five minutes it became known that the same train had brought up some ringing friends from Bristol, Mr. James Hinton being one of the party, and after some refreshments a move was made to St. Peter's church, where a 504 of Stedman Triples was rung. C. W. Dyson, 1; R. H. Witherington, 2; F. J. Moore, 3; J. Hale, 4; J. Wathen, 5; T. Devereux, 6; Jos. Wathen (conductor), 7; W. Hampton, 8. A short touch of Grandsire Triples was rung by a mixed band. After dinner a move was made to All Saints' church, and a touch of 504 Union Triples rung. R. H. Witherington, 1; C. W. Dyson, 2; F. J. Moore, 3; J. Hale, 4; S. Cleal, 5; T. Devereux, 6; Jos. Wathen (conductor), 7; W. Hampton, 8. Also 168 Stedman Triples, and a 210 Grandsire Triples, the latter by a mixed band. Later in the evening a meeting was arranged for at St. Peter's, to give those an opportunity of meeting whose business compelled them to be away during the day, and a 168 Stedman Triples was rung, and a short touch of Treble Bob Major was attempted. As time would not allow of a try again a move was made to the station, and in a short time they were homeward bound, arriving at Ashchurch about 11 p.m., where a conveyance was in waiting. The party arrived safely at Tewkesbury, every one having thoroughly enjoyed the day's outing. The company wish to thank the Rectors and churchwardens for the use of the bells, and also those brother-ringers who assisted in making their day's outing such an enjoyable one.

ST. MARY'S, WARWICK.

On Friday evening, October 12th, a meeting was held in the belfry of St. Mary's, Warwick, to promote the organization of a company which has lately been formed to learn change-ringing. The vicar was elected president, and the churchwardens, vice-presidents, an honorary secretary, and an instructor, were also elected. A code of rules was drawn up, mainly taken from those suggested by the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association. This is the first company that has been formed for change-ringing at this church, which contains a peal of ten (tenor 28 cwt. in D), and it is hoped that now a foundation has been laid for a change-ringing company here, it will be heartily carried on.

We trust that the progress of this new society will be sufficient to remove the reproach which has hitherto been cast upon the ancient town of Warwick, with reference to bell-ringing. No one will rejoice more than ourselves to hear of quick and satisfactory progress at Old St. Mary's, Warwick.

THE CHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.—MACCLESFIELD BRANCH.

A Quarterly Meeting of the above branch was held at Gawsforth, on Saturday, October 13th, when members attended from Alderly, Bollington, Gawsforth, and Macclesfield. The church bells were set going to the tune of Plain Bob and Grandsire, but only short touches could be rung owing to the tenors going so bad. About 5 o'clock saw twenty-two seated down to tea in a room close to the church, and it hardly needs to be said that full justice was done to the good things provided by Mr. C. Postles, one of the Gawsforth men, all being in good trim after a walk to such a picturesque place, and a pull on the bells. Previous to commencing tea a hymn was sung by all, at the request of the Rector, the Rev. J. T. Penrose, who is an honorary member. After tea the usual meeting was held, the Rector in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, and Prestbury was selected as the next place of meeting.

The Rector, on rising, gave all a hearty welcome, and said he hoped next time they came to Gawsforth he should have a new peal of bells for them ring upon; and after some well-chosen remarks and good advice to the ringers, Mr. Matthews gave some sketches of ringers and ringing in the olden times. After about half an hour's conversation together, a vote of thanks was accorded to the Rector, and thus ended an enjoyable gathering.

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—In the account of the opening of the bells at Swanage on September 27th, a mistake appears, a half-peal (complete) was not rung. A peal was attempted, but was unfortunately lost after ringing beyond the half-way.

THOMAS BLACKBURN.

A new church at Upper Helmsley, Yorkshire, has just been completed. It is built upon its old foundations of the tenth century, and the entire reconstruction has been defrayed by Mrs. A. M. Herbert, wife of Colonel Herbert. The new church is Norman in style, and three bells have been placed in the tower as a memento of the Queen's Jubilee, and of the re-building of the church.

GRANDSIRE TRIPLES.

In sending the first two of the following peals I should like to add to my previous remarks, by stating that Holt's peal and the following are the only six-part peals that are to be had with two singles, and the 7th, or any one bell, always called before. In spite of there being the result of a complete investigation of a table with the 7th always called before, the second peal is almost the same as Holt's, so much so, that it contains 120 of Holt's bob leads, with this difference, all the 7-5's are in the first half, and all 5-7's in the second half, but the first peal contains sixty new bobs. I have heard on one or two occasions that Holt's peal is objectionable on account of the plain lead singles, and I regret that these peals contain the same features, but if we depart from the plan of having the second half exactly the reverse of the first, the thing can be obtained with bob part-ends, and still retain the 5, 6, 7, fixed. Not considering the plan admirable, I have not given either peal in this form, for the simple reason that no doubt there are good irregular six-part peals to be had, such peals coming under the enquiry for three-part peals, of which there are several hundred problems not been included in my investigation.

Each part to be twice repeated, with a plain-lead single at the end of the third and sixth parts.

The next peal is upon quite a different plan to any that has yet appeared. It has no bell fixed, and yet the 2, 3, 4, do their old familiar work. Every bell is called before twenty times, and the peal has this peculiar feature, if the calling of the second half is taken first we get Queens and Tittums for part ends. I thought at first that this plan was going to open up a wide field, but it has turned out quite the reverse; like the plan with the 7th always called before there is only one peal to be had with 120 calls, but no peal with 150 or 180, although in both cases the thing will come in six separate parts. I hope I shall not be trespassing too much in asking you to give a three-part touch on much the same lines as the famous touch by Mr. Thompson; the missing leads can be inserted at two after the first bob in the touch as given, giving to my mind a peal with more suitable part-ends. Each bell is called before twenty times, and there are fifteen less calls than in Mr. Thompson's peal.

Having exhausted a number of plans which I shall ask you to kindly allow me to explain shortly when I have completed my investigation of six-part peals, at which time I hope to touch upon several points of the utmost importance.

THE HERTFORDSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

A District Meeting of this Association was held at Baldock on Saturday, October 13th, when there were present: Mr. Leonard Proctor, President; Mr. E. P. Debenham, Hon. Secretary; Messrs. H. Baker (Hertford), G. W. Cartmel, J. C. Mitchell, H. Brewer, and J. W. Brewer (St. Albans), S. Page, John Kitchener, Joseph Kitchener, C. Sharnbrook, W. Smith, N. Warner, and J. Warner (Bennington), W. Allen, A. Squires, and F. Furt (Hitchin), Robert Jackson, G. Spicer, J. Cawdell, T. Webb, W. Bidwell, and J. Smith (Baldock), and H. Rowe and J. Hollingsworth (Hatfield). During the afternoon and evening, touches of Double Norwich Court Bob Major, and Stedman and Grandsire Triples, were rung on the church bells, and Stedman Triples, Grandsire Caters, and Grandsire Triples, on handbells. At 5 o'clock the members sat down to an excellent tea at the "George and Dragon" Hotel, after which a business meeting was held under the chairmanship of Mr. Proctor. The provisional elections of Messrs. T. Waller, A. Hull, E. Hull, and R. M. Pratt, of St. Albans, and Mr. G. Cornell, of Wanstead, as members, were confirmed, and Mr J. Hollingsworth was elected a new member. The fresh set of rules prepared by the Officers was read over and discussed, and was adopted by the members. On the proposition of Mr. Baker, seconded by Mr. Allen, the next District Meeting was arranged to be at Hertford in the month of February. Votes of thanks to the President and Secretary for their services closed the business. The thanks of the members are due to the Rector, the Rev. W. J. Skilton, for granting the use of the tower, and also to Mr. Jackson for seeing that everything was in readiness.

Twice repeated. For 5040 these leads 635427, 746235, 527346 to be inserted at two after the first bob; with a plain lead single and bob-single. J. J. PARKER.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Many hands make light work."

There was, in sooth, no lack of interesting reading in last Saturday's paper. As I expected, we were favored by "your own correspondent" with a good account of the Yorkshire Association's meeting at York, and having been present, can testify as to the correctness of its details. I am glad to learn that it is intended to publish the Dean's sermon, for large as the congregation was, it deserved an even greater publicity than the walls of the Minster afforded.

* * * * *

It is to be hoped that the aspirations of the generous donor of the new bells at Swanage will be abundantly realised. This ex-sheriff of London must be a real good Englishman, and I like the tone of his remarks immensely. "He hoped the ringers would take up change-ringing in earnest and stick to it. The bells were of no advantage if not properly used, and if they were not used he would wish they had not been put there." This advice he followed up in a practical manner by the promise of a gift of a set of handbells. The Swanage men will be ungrateful indeed if they do not bestir themselves, and endeavour to fulfil the desire of their generous friend Mr. Burt. I have every confidence that they will do so, at the same time not forgetting his genial remark—"Let's have happy faces; the more we have of that the longer we shall live, and the happier we shall be." Here is good sound wisdom in a nutshell for you. Let us all act upon it.

* * * * *

I am truly pleased to read the account of the induction of another "tower-going parson" at Old Hill. While congratulating Mr. Bassano and his companions on their happy acquisition in the person of their new Vicar, I hope I shall not be deemed presumptuous, or "taking too much on myself," if I venture to advise them in the strongest manner possible to reciprocate their good parson's intentions in every way. Let them shew their Vicar that their work as ringers does not begin and end in the belfry, but that they are in very deed a body of Church workers and Church defenders; and that in his manifold duties as Vicar of the parish he will find in them a backbone of assistance. Thus while he is by his influence helping on the work of ringing, our brethren will, on the other hand, be shewing him that his ringers are in reality valuable church officials, and in the midst of it all, the Church will be the gainer thereby.

* * * * *

I cannot help condoling with our Essex friends on their "hard lines" with reference to the peal on the opening of the bells at Brentwood. But cases of sickness and death must always be treated with consideration, and no doubt under favourable circumstances the peal will be "pulled off" at no distant date, with additional credit to the performers.

* * * * *

It is with much pleasure that I accept the disclaimer of our esteemed friend, the Rev. T. L. Papillon, with reference to my note regarding the state of ringing matters at Chelmsford, and am glad to know that there is a redeeming feature present in that band in the existence of a minority "dissatisfied with and ashamed of the present condition of things." The vicar of Writtle says he would be glad of any suggestion how to overcome the difficulty. Of course he, knowing all the circumstances of the case better than your humble servant, a stranger to the locality, can possibly do, should be best able to judge. But if there is only a minority desirous of a better state of things, I cannot understand this confession of complete failure. I may be deemed over-sanguine, but the fact is, I never lose heart if there are but two or three in a company desirous of learning and improving themselves in the science. Why not take the willing one by the hand, or in other words (if I might use them without profanity), separate the sheep from the goats, help them on to better things, and by that way, if you cannot persuade the others to pull themselves out of the gutter, endeavour to shame them either out of it, or out of the places in the tower which they at present usurp? Thus this thing, like water, will assuredly level itself, and the best will ultimately be found at the top. Patience and perseverance are capable of accomplishing many things, and surely the good church-people of Chelmsford are not so dead to all musical feelings that they will go on for an indefinite period supporting such a state of affairs as is now existing if there is a sign of better things to take the place of it. If there is a portion of that band desirous of improving themselves and the art in their district, what is there to prevent them following the example of their Loughton brethren, who we are told have "made good progress and persevered under difficulties which might well have discouraged them." This devoted band appear to have had not only passive but active opposition to face, and if they can overcome that, why not the sensible few at Chelmsford? In my own ringing career, I have experienced both forms of opposition, but have almost invariably found that by steadily but surely plodding along these obstacles have one by one faded away. At the same time, I by no means shut my eyes to the fact that if these difficulties are to be surmounted, that can only be done by means of constant and hard work. If the minority at Chelmsford will make no efforts of themselves then I can quite understand Mr. Papillon's failure. Otherwise I cannot. Therefore, with all deference to Mr. Papillon and the Essex Association, I do think that by combined effort on the part of this minority and the County Association, this deplorable state of things might be altered. What may be impossible for one section to accomplish alone, might be comparatively easy work with both combined. "The bells are up; try again."

* * * * *

Reports of Birthday Peals are always pleasant reading, even if they do in such a forcible manner remind one of the rapid flight of time. But when a birthday is so celebrated with a peal composed by the person in whose honour it is rung, the event is more than ordinarily gratifying. Such is the case with the peal of Caters rung at Fulham, the respected vicar of All Saints' being the individual so honoured. May the good wishes of the ringers be amply realized, and they be long favoured to have amongst them a vicar who has proved himself such a genial brother-string.

* * * * *

My brother College Youths, I am glad to see, keep "pegging away" with their peals on hand-bells. This time it is one of Bob Major, a favourite method with me. Perhaps it is thus a favourite because it was the first I learnt. I only wish I could have been present at St. Albans to have heard it, but being many miles away in the north on that day, of course I was "otherwise engaged." I am glad to compliment my brother Ancients on its accomplishment, all the same. FREE LANCE.

ST. CROSS CHURCH AND BELLS.

The successful restoration of the tower of St. Cross Church, near Bungay, Suffolk, has just been completed in memory of the late Canon Smith, the former rector, and re-opening services held, when the Archdeacon of Suffolk, Dr. Woolley, was the preacher.

The tower dates from the early part of the 15th century, and is a plain, but excellent, specimen of a Suffolk tower of the time. A moulded arch, with carved capitals, into the nave, has been opened up by the restoration, a modern ringing floor originally cutting it in two and blocking the western window. The tower is 16-ft. 6-in. square, attains an altitude of 58-ft., and is placed centrally with the nave at the west end.

The restoration work includes a general repair of the walls and parapet and renewal of the stonework to the belfry windows, a large portion of which was missing, a new roof in oak covered with lead, the old timber of which was so far decayed as to be beyond repair. New oak louvres are inserted in the belfry windows, and the peal of five bells, which were in a dilapidated state, and quite unfit for ringing, has been thoroughly restored with new oak girders 12-in. by 12-in., and entire new frame of the best English oak. The bells are quarter-turned and hung on the latest improvements for change-ringing, the go of the bells being all that could be desired. Ringing before service consisted of six 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles, ringers stationed as follows: A. Bowell (Ipswich), 1; S. Bird (All Saints), 2; H. Bowell (Ipswich, conductor), 3; W. Aldous (St. Cross), 4; Captain Moore (Redenhall), 5. Tenor 12 cwt. in G. sharp. After service six 6-scores of Old Doubles was also rang with the Rev. — Hopper, of Starston after which all were entertained to tea at the rectory.

The new reredos and altar table are the gift of Mrs. John Mackie, of Tiggleston, Wakefield, sister of the late rector, Canon Smith. It is constructed in the best English oak, and rests upon a polished Devonshire marble slab, with sub-base in yellow magnesian limestone, and occupies the space between the jambs of the east window. Four of the seven spaces into which it is divided are occupied by figures of the four evangelists, set in niches, with carved and crocketed canopies, and resting on pedals emblematically carved. Flanking the figures on either side are buttresses, with moulded set-offs and crocketed finials, terminated at the level of the bottom of the cornice. Of the three remaining compartments, the centre has a canopy with canted sides finished as four centred arches, with pinnacles between, and crocketed with carved spandrils and tracery in two orders. The two others have centred heads richly traceried, crocketed, and finished at the apices by an angel, with partly extended wings, playing a musical instrument. The space between the buttresses and above the canopied niches is enriched with diaper work. The cornice is deep, richly moulded, and in three stages—the lower stage is carved with angels with elevated wings, playing instruments of music, the next stage is carved with the vine leaf, emblematical of our Saviour, and the third stage has a cresting of strawberry leaf of uncommon design, with paterae cut out of a deep hollow below. The style is 14th century. The communion table has open tracery work to the front, and generally harmonises in detail with the reredos.

About £2000 has now been spent on the church, a large portion of which has been contributed by the late Canon Smith and his relatives, and the whole of the work has been executed from the designs of Mr. Bisshopp and under that gentleman's supervision.

The present rector, the Rev. W. Morley Smith, is a nephew of the late Canon Smith, and he has devoted himself with the utmost energy to carrying out the reredos and the restoration of the tower. Both of these matters had the approval of the late Canon Smith; indeed plans and designs were drawn up for them before his death.

WHITCHURCH, OXON.

Through the kindness and consideration of the Rector, the Rev. Canon Slatter, great improvements have been made in this steeple during the last month. The ropes of the treble, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th till lately hung down in a perfect line in the centre of the ringing-chamber, and in a very awkward position with regard to the case of the clock, the ringer of the 3rd bell having to stand with his back to the tenor, thus making Minor ringing rather unpleasant. A large and heavy stage for the purpose of winding the clock has been removed, and made adjustable in a simple manner, the ropes of 2, 3, and 4 are brought down on the opposite side of the wheels, close to the north side of the chamber (which was impossible whilst the stage remained in its old position), this now gives as nearly a circle as possible, and each man has a good sight of the ropes. The general go of the bells have been much improved, wheels, bearings, and framework all tightened up and repaired, the panel-work of the ringing chamber picked out in two colours, the whole looking bright and comfortable. The work has been carried out by Mr. Lawrence, builder, of the village, and one of the ringers.

On Tuesday evening, several short touches of Grandsire Minor were rung, so that the members of the local company might make a trial of the ropes in their new position. They stood thus: J. Nicholls, 1; Wm. Pocock, 2; Wm. Lawrence (conductor), 3; C. Pocock, 4; A. C. West, 5; E. Bushnell, 6.

This ring of six are just a semitone higher than those of Pangbourne, across the river Thames, the Pangbourne peal being by far the finest tone. With the exception of the treble, there is not a maiden bell in the peal, whereas their Berkshire neighbours are clear castings from the foundry of Abraham Rudhall. The inscriptions on the Whitchurch bells are as follows:—

Treble.—John Warner, Founder, London.

2nd.—I AS SECOND WILL RING.

3rd.—I AS THIRD WILL RING.

4th.—I AS FORTH WILL SOUND.

5th.—As Tenor hum them round. L. W, T. F. 1658. This bell recast, A.D. 1858. Rev. Edward Moore, M.A., Rector. G. Mears. Founder, London.

6th.—Mears & Stainbank, Founders, London. LAUS DEO. D.D. E. J. BLYTH, 1878.

There are also inscriptions on the Pangbourne bells, but they have no particular interest.

The square brick tower of Pangbourne is all that now remains of the old building, the church being rebuilt about twenty years ago. In the south and western walls of the tower are several curiously-cut initials and dates in the long bricks near the angle. Near the organ, in a peculiar massive canopy, are a couple of well-carved stone figures of man and wife, somewhat similar to the celebrated effigies of Knights, at Aldworth, Berks. Some time ago this monument was in a very dilapidated state, but has been carefully restored by Mr. B. Warner, stonemason, of Pangbourne. The inscription on the monument is as follows:—Vnder part of this monu^t lieth ye bodie of Sr. Iohn Davis K^t. who was received ye hon^r. of Knighthood and Bannerett at ye taking of Cales in SPain in ye reigne of Q.Æliz. He died May ye 14 1625 in ye 63 yeare of his age.

THE SOUTH LINCOLNSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday, October 13th, an ordinary meeting of the above Association was held at Market Deeping. Ringing commenced at 9 o'clock a.m., and was kept up with great spirit until 9 p.m. During the day touches in five and six-bell methods was rang. At 1 p.m. dinner was served at the "George" Inn, presided over by G. Shillaker, Esq., who became an honorary member. After dinner the business of the Association was transacted, when several new members were elected, and Peterborough was selected as the next place of meeting. About thirty members rang during the day, and congratulated the Society on so successful a meeting, also the Deeping company for having the belfry in such good order. The Sunday before being Harvest Festival the belfry was decorated with a miniature stack of corn, and corn and fruit hung around the walls.

CHURCH CONGRESS NOTES.

The following Notes on the Church Congress, from a correspondent of the Guardian, will be read with interest:—

All seem to agree in thinking the Manchester Church Congress to have been a more than usually interesting one, and in many ways more successful than any preceding Congress. It began auspiciously. Not for hundreds of years, it is said, has there been such a procession through the streets of clergy, including forty bishops. The crowds lining the route were evidently greatly interested, and were eager to know where they all came from. The number of Bishops from foreign parts was a striking witness that the Anglican communion was no mere insular Church. If the twenty-eight Congress banners had been carried in the procession it would have been a still more imposing sight. It was to be regretted that college caps were not de rigueur; soft wide-a-wakes and surplices looked somewhat incongruous. The omission of any welcome from the Nonconformists has been commented upon. To my mind it is a distinct gain. There is something unreal about the part of a Congress, and the Congress of 1888 has been very real.

It has been truly said that nothing succeeds like success, and undoubtedly the enormous number of tickets disposed of (4,500 full members, 300 day tickets, 400 evening tickets, and 22,000 given to working men) increased the interest of outsiders. The natural perversity of human nature makes us often desire more to attend a meeting for which it is very difficult to obtain a ticket, or even with a ticket to obtain admission except at a very early hour. This was the case with many young men in business, little given as a rule, to attending meetings of any kind. Indeed, the numbers have made a profound impression on the whole neighbourhood and increased the respect of many outsiders for the church.

Those who have never been mixed up with the preparation for a Congress will hardly be able to realise the endless trouble and fatigue it involves. The committees and secretaries, but especially the latter, deserve the hearty thanks of the thousand who reaped the benefit of their unwearying labours during many months. No trouble was spared, from the choice of speakers and subjects down to the smallest detail, for the comfort of the strangers. To give an instance, every lodging on all sides of the town was carefully visited before it was put down on the list "recommended by the committee."

The Bishop (a very exceptionally able president), with keen foresight, appointed some of the busiest men of the diocese as secretaries, knowing that the work was more likely to be systematic than if the clergy with most leisure had been chosen. It is said that the Manchester Subjects Committee met and settled matters much earlier than is usually the case. Nevertheless, they might with advantage have met earlier still. It is quite true they had a greater number of interesting speakers than usual, but there was a good sprinkling of very dull ones. This is easily to be accounted for by the difficulty of filling up places as good speakers refuse. It is a well-known fact in these days that capable men are often engaged (even to preach a single sermon) at least a year beforehand, and why should any but picked men address such a huge assembly of Churchpeople? Far better reduce the number of speakers and increase the time for open discussion than invite a dull man because there is no one better to be had. Nor do people as a rule care in the least to hear papers read when the writers are unable to be present. Most of us would prefer to read them in the newspapers, in order that the meeting may be shorter or that there may be more time for open debate. I should like to suggest that the Cardiff committee be formed immediately, before the enthusiasm about the Manchester Congress has subsided, and that thoroughly capable men be invited at once. It would be easy enough to apportion their subjects later.

It is not rather a mistake to ask a man to speak on any subject upon which he has already addressed former Congresses? Canon Body is a great favourite, and can always secure a good audience, but I heard many express their disappointment at the subject of his address, for "they had so often heard what he had to say on 'Women's Work'." Nor do the speakers seem unaffected by it. "Sisterhoods" was very inadequately dealt with, and certainly it was not that the Manchester people did not want information on the subject, or that the general public had lost their interest in it. The papers on women's work at the second Congress held at Oxford were infinitely superior to those lately read at Manchester. As far as I know, Mr. Cleaver (of St. Peter's Sisterhood, Kilburn), Mr. Russell (formerly chaplain to the Sisters of Bethany), both excellent speakers, have never read a paper on this subject. An address from either of them, or others with a similar experience, would come with greater freshness, from the fact that the Congress has not yet heard what they have to say on this particular subject, and those who know nothing of the work of Sisterhoods will learn more from one who will not have the drawback of feeling he is repeating himself. We cannot in the nature of things have constantly fresh subjects, but it is always interesting to hear the views of different men upon the old ones. For the same reason it is to be regretted that Mr. Hoare is invariably asked to speak at the devotional meeting—yet this is the general rule of a Church Congress. Still the Manchester Committee were wonderfully fortunate, on the whole, in securing men and subjects new to the Congress. Another point to be considered is the tendency with many people who have often spoken on the same subjects to think careful preparation unnecessary; yet this is essential in religious questions, if the highest good is to be gained.

One plan I noticed for the first time at Manchester, which other Congresses would do well to note, was the appointment of gentlemen as stewards, who at each meeting helped to find people seats. Many inconsiderate people caused the greatest annoyance to those at the back of the hall by coming in or going out during the middle of an address, instead of waiting until it was time for the next speaker. Indeed, many remarks were made as to the lack of courtesy on the part of some of the clergy, and more than one was heard to say that there would not be found in any assembly of laymen so many men who ignored those unwritten laws of society which require some slight acknowledgement as they pass a lady, or a brother clergyman offers them a seat. It is too much to expect them to give up a seat to a woman which they have earned by an hour's patient waiting, but the unselfishness of the laymen, who it was noticed frequently did so, was all the more appreciated. Of course, there are numerous exceptions on the part of the clergy, but frequent criticisms of this sort were made by all ranks, and they must have some foundation. Nor are questions of precedence enough considered. Men are to be seen on the platform at every Congress who have no right to be there when clergymen of higher position and longer service have to scramble for a seat. These little matters cannot be disregarded without rubbing people up the wrong way unnecessarily, whether it be at a Church Congress, a procession in Church, or some social meeting.

The interest of the working men has been very great throughout, and I hear that the Congress has formed the constant topic of conversation in train and tram. One working man was heard to say "there would be no difficulty in getting men to church if the clergy would advertise interesting subjects like the Congress did, or put them on a blackboard outside the church;" and others said they thought it would be a good plan if the clergy were asked to choose working men who could speak, and send in their names as willing to take part in the discussion, many being too shy to do so without a little persuasion. Already some of them talk of fixing their annual holiday during Congress week, so much has their interest been excited. The Free-trade Hall, holding 5,000—crowded every evening except on Thursday, when it was to be regretted Gambling and Betting or Temperance was not the subject and Co-operation and Competition in a smaller hall—was a never-to-be-forgotten sight: the enthusiasm of the audience in welcoming any one they appreciated must have inspired that speaker to do his best. The singing of well-known hymns by thousands of men, and the saying of the Lord's Prayer, seemed to have impressed the working people very much, many of whom rarely go outside their own village.

It was easy enough to find out which of the speakers they liked, although no one received quite the same ovation as Mr. Balfour, the audience rising to their feet and waving their handkerchiefs in the wildest enthusiasm. This, however, was partly, though not wholly, as a recognition of the work he has done in the country. The Bishop of Ripon's was the best address to working men, and not only eloquent, but full of deep and sustained thought—a proof that working men can be thoroughly interested though tales and jokes be conspicuous by their absence. No one will deny that a speaker with a keen sense of humour is most useful at a Congress, all I maintain is that no speech should be without some serious point worth remembering. One that is all froth may be very witty and heartily cheered, but a grand opportunity is wasted. Friday's meeting was also a most enthusiastic one; the audience being dead against the opening of libraries or museums, therefore, Mr. Lebas's clear and concise statement of the question from his point of view did not obtain the applause it must have received from an audience who sympathised with his views. The Cardiff committee, in arranging for the working men's meetings, will do well not to issue more tickets than the Congress Hall will hold, and give strict instructions they are not intended for the clergy. Complaints have been made in Manchester that any should have been given except to working men, but as they were not to be bought except with a Congress ticket, surely it was wise to give some to clerks and others, who rarely, if ever, attend a meeting of the kind—a class we should make just as great an effort to get hold.

I think it is very common for Congress hospitality to benefit entertainers and entertained intellectually or spiritually. Anyhow, an interest is often created in the meetings with the most unlikely people. For this reason—and also because many clergy and Church workers would otherwise be unable to go—it would be a pity to see any considerable check placed upon Churchpeople sending in their names for Congress hospitality. It cannot, however, be too distinctly laid down that no one but readers and speakers have a right to expect hospitality. This indeed is a little too much, and yet I hear the secretaries have had the most indignant complaints that hospitality has not been promptly found for the additional thousands who flocked to Manchester. Nor is this all. At some Congresses people are not satisfied "with the situation of the house" where they are to be entertained by strangers free of expense, and at Wolverhampton some one was aggrieved that he was to go to a Dissenter. I would suggest to the Cardiff Committee that they ask for references in every case, which need not necessarily be always referred to; also it would simplify matters if it were understood that it would be no breach of etiquette to invite any clergyman to the Congress even though unknown personally to the would-be host. It should be a point of honour for no one to apply for hospitality merely as an opportunity to get a cheap holiday. They should, at least, be thoroughly interested in Church questions, and attend most of the meetings. In some cases, I know country clergy who have little intercourse with their fellows find the Congress refreshes them mentally for the whole year, and the good of it is extended far and wide, for they give a resume of the papers to their parishioners.

The meeting on Thursday morning, on "The Adaptation of the Prayer-book to Modern Needs," was in the Congress-hall, and crowded to excess. There must have been about 5,000 present. It was most refreshing to see the enthusiasm so unmistakably manifested by this magnificent audience for the maintenance of the old Creeds. It was a gauge of public opinion, for those who wish to tamper with the Prayer-book could have no doubt that English Churchpeople as represented at the Congress would have nothing of the kind, but wished it preserved intact; although the speakers who suggested elasticity in its use were enthusiastically applauded. Archdeacon Norris's paper on the Catechism was excellent, and the Rev. F. Slater carried the audience with him when he said the best way of adapting the Prayer-book to modern needs was to use it loyally, and pleaded for daily service as an act of obedience and intercession; also that the people might know the clergy were often on their knees. Mr. Foxley, who thought even the Apostles' Creed might be revised, so exasperated the audience, that he could not obtain a hearing at last, and had to sit down.

WANTED TO PURCHASE. A Set of Eight, Ten, or Twelve Second-hand Hand Bells. Apply, stating Price and Particulars to J. W. Watson, 15, Knight Street, Lincoln.

THE SURREY ASSOCIATION.

A Quarterly Meeting of this Association was held at Beddington, by the kind permission of the Rector, on Monday, October 15th. Ringers began to assemble soon after four, and were met by the Rector, the Rev. Canon Bridges, who accompanied them to the ringing-chamber. Among those present at this time were Squire Procter, the Rev. E. W. Carpenter, vicar of Bobbing, and Mr. Rees, of Guildford, who were very soon joined by ringers from all parts of the county. Tea was served at the "Plough" Inn at 6.30 p.m., and forty-seven members sat down and made a good meal. The Rector had most kindly sent a liberal supply of grapes and peaches from his hot-houses, which not only beautified the tables, but also subsequently gratified the palates of those present.

At the business meeting which followed, eight new members were elected, including Squire Procter, of Benington. The Rev. E. D. L. Harvey gave notice of his intention to propose an alteration of the existing Rule III. at the next Quarterly Meeting. The next District Meeting was arranged to be held at Newington, and the next Quarterly Meeting at Kingston-on-Thames.

ARTHUR B. CARPENTER, Hon. Sec.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

The Second Quarterly Meeting of the year was held in St. Mary's Schools, Nottingham, on Saturday, October 13th, immediately after tea. Thirty members of the Association were present, and the President took the chair. The minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed and signed, the President, in referring to the performances of the Association, stated that sixteen peals had been rung during the quarter, and congratulated the Loughborough branch on their success and the great support given by them to the Association. Leicester was fixed upon for the next quarterly meeting, and January 19th, 1889, was the date suggested for it to take place. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the clergy and churchwardens for the use of the bells that day, which brought the meeting to a close.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

AN APPEAL.

SIR,—I shall be glad if you will allow me, through the medium of your paper, to bring to the notice of all brother-ringers the case of Mr. William Doran, of West Ham, a well-known ringer in London and the surrounding district, who has not been able to do scarce anything this year, and being still unable to work, and as the bad weather is approaching, his medical man does not think there is much chance of his recovery this winter. He has a wife and family to support, and we are sure that those who know him will afford to him their sympathy under the circumstances. I can assure our benevolent readers that their kind assistance will not be thrown away in the case of William Doran. He is a member of the Royal Cumberland Youths, and the St. James Societies, also of the Essex Association, and has figured in various performances on eight, ten, and twelve bells. Should any of our friends feel disposed to assist him, it will be gratefully acknowledged in "THE BELL NEWS." Mr. Doran's address is 9, Major Road, Stratford New Town, Essex. I shall also be glad to acknowledge any sums sent to me.

24, St. Mary's Road, Plaistow.

HARRY RANDALL.

TO be Sold. A set of Handbells. In good repair, 3 octaves in chromatic scale 37 in number. C. 22 size largest bell. No reasonable offer refused. Apply R. Binns, 20, Mint, Low Moor Side, Holbeck, Leeds.

HOLY TRINITY, OLD HILL, STAFFORDSHIRE.

On Saturday, October 20th, the ringers of this church chartered a brake and drove to Hagley (Worcestershire), to try the ring of eight in the church of St. John the Baptist, which is prettily situated in the grounds of Hagley Hall, the residence of Lord Lytton. On the way they passed the vicar, the Rev. W. C. Gibbs, who gave instructions about the key, light, and cordially wished them success. In raising the bells it was noticed that the three top bells are nearly inaudible through being on a higher flat. It had been agreed upon to attempt the first Peal of Treble Bob here,—and with tolerable audacity, as the longest touch hitherto had been 864,—for the home peal were considered too heavy, and accordingly after two false starts (before the band had become accustomed to the trebles), a peal of Mr. Hattersley's was commenced and ran smoothly, with few exceptions, till the last course, when the conductor called the bob W. late, through not hearing the Treble, and the peal was lost after ringing 3 hours and 7 minutes. Yes, my friend, I know you would not have let it go at the eleventh hour—and—fifty—minutes like that, but please consider the newness of band and conductor to it, and the proportionate nervousness and excitement, and excuse their not "working it" round. The ringers stood as follows:—J. Palmer, 1; H. Mason, 2; R. Bird, 3; W. Bird, 4; C. W. Bassano, 5; A. E. Parsons, 6; W. Green, 7; A. H. Bassano, (conductor) 8. After lowering the bells the unsuccessful team managed to enjoy the brilliant moonlight drive, and reached home after midnight with the fixed determination to attempt the same peal on the following Monday. At nineteen minutes before 7 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 22, the bells of Holy Trinity, Old Hill, went off into changes; the band standing as in the peal columns this week, and at ten o'clock that most welcome of course ends, in which the numbers are consecutive, the treble being first and tenor last, came up. The striking was very satisfactory, considering that the tenor is about 24 cwt, and her ringer only "eleven stone odd," and much credit is due to the rest of the band for the cool way in which they helped each other at anxious moments, for, as we well know, the conductor does not know much about coursing orders, and had his hands full enough with the large bell. The rejoicing, as you may suppose, was considerable in spite of the "worn-outness" at the finish, and proposals for a peal supper were carried nem. con., since it had not been thought possible for so light a team to pull through 5000 Treble Bob on the Old Hill metal. The peal was the first in the method by all, and also on these bells.

THE KENT COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

A District Meeting of this Association was held at Aldington, on Monday, October 22nd, and was attended by members from Ashford, Boughton-under-Blean, Brabourne, Elmstead, Hernhill, Horsmonden and Mersham. Mr. E. Hyder, captain of the Aldington band, received the visitors at the church, and they were also provided with refreshments by the hospitality of the Rector, the Rev. G. J. Blomfield. An enjoyable day was spent, Mersham being visited in the afternoon, where the Rector entertained the ringers at tea. A committee meeting was held at Aldington, and the two next meetings were fixed to be held at Swanscombe and Elham. Canterbury was voted the best place for the annual general meeting next year, but this is subject to a further expression of opinion on the part of the bands not represented at Aldington. This the Secretary will be glad to receive, and if necessary he will call a committee meeting early in next year to decide the point.

England is pre-eminently the land of bells. For centuries past they have been a power and an attraction, and probably at no period in our history have so many peals been set up as during the last two years. There are in this county of Lancaster alone upwards of 120 peals. This week the parish church of St. Peter, Woolton, has added another peal to the long list, the tenor weighing one ton. The new clock and Cambridge chimes were started recently, and the bells rang out their first peal. The fine elevation of the church tower increases the charm and importance of the bells, as their fine musical sounds sweep across the wooded country for miles round.—Liverpool Courier.

HARDWYCKE, NORTHANTS.

The single bell hanging in the tower of the Church of St. Leonard in this little village is of considerable interest from an antiquarian point of view. Mr. North, in "Church Bells of Northamptonshire," classes it amongst the few remaining "ancient" bells of the county. It is inscribed, "Sum Rosa Pulsata Mundi Katerina Vocata," in well formed "black letter," relieved by the trade mark or sign of the maker, William Underhill. Like most very old bells it is not dated, but the character of the lettering and inscription clearly show that it was cast previous to the Reformation. Its diameter is 36 in., weight about 8 cwt. Until the year 1795 there were two bells. At that time one was sold to raise funds to take down the South aisle of the church, since rebuilt. The bell-frame and fittings are all sadly decayed; in fact the bell cannot be rung in a legitimate way, but is simply tolled by means of a rope tied to the clapper. This is a dangerous practice, likely to crack it, and not at all calculated to bring out the full and very musical tone of this valuable old bell. One would like to see it fitted with new wheel, &c., and "raised" and rung in regular ringers' fashion.

On the West wall of the tower is a tablet relating to the gift of a clock. It reads as follows: "To the glory of God. The Clock in this Church was presented by Ellen Sharman, in loving Memory of her beloved Father and Mother, William Binpoun and Frances Sharman, who await their glorious resurrection when time shall be no more. February 3rd, 1887."

PEEL, ISLE OF MAN.

A very large clock and set of carillon machinery has just been erected at the new church here by John Smith and Sons, of the Midland Clock Works, Derby. The Cambridge quarters are chimed upon four bells, the hours struck upon the largest bell, and the carillon machine plays seven tunes upon eight bells, one tune for each day of the week. The clock is of the very finest construction in every way, and has been carried out by the makers to the designs of Lord Grimthorpe. It has a double three-legged gravity escapement and compensated pendulum. All the wheels are of gun metal, with new teeth cut from the solid. Special apparatus is provided to keep the clock going while the weights are wound up. The weights are carried by steel wire ropes. The clock and chimes will doubtless be a great boon to the inhabitants of the neighbourhood, for it is the most complete clock and chimes in the Isle of Man.

DURHAM AND NEWCASTLE DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

The Annual Meeting will be held at Newcastle on Monday, October 29th. The bells of All Saints', St. John's and St. Stephen's, will be at the disposal of the ringers during the day. Divine Service will be held in St. John's church at two o'clock, which all members present at the meeting are respectfully requested to attend. Preacher—Rev. A. S. Wardroper, Vicar of All Saints. At three o'clock dinner will be provided at the "Crown and Mitre," Grey Street. After dinner the Annual Meeting will be held for the election of officers and other business. Dinner tickets 1s. to members, 2s. 6d. to non-members. The Committee will meet at St. John's vestry at 12.45 p.m.

G. J. CLARKSON, Hon. Sec.

NOTE.—By operation of Rule VII. all names will be struck off the list of members in every case where the subscription has been due for two years.

A Meeting of the above branch will be held at St. Thomas's church, Moorside, near Oldham, on Saturday, October 27th. Meeting in the Schoolroom at 4.30. Ringers residing in the Oldham district are earnestly requested to attend. All ringers will be made welcome.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1888.

Some of our friends have been much exercised of late by the special pleading of an individual who evidently holds to the belief that there is more got by scheming than by hard work. This person has apparently adopted an itinerant progress throughout the country, and traded, successfully it would seem, upon the good nature of those with whom he came into contact. The letter from Mr. GUEST, of Oldham, which we published in brief, has been followed by others breathing threatenings and slaughter against the deceptive mendicant. This gentleman's operations will no doubt impair the chances of the bona fide necessitous who may seek relief upon the road from their ringing brethren. The practice of giving help to persons travelling is certainly one not to be commended, if a better way can be found. Where the assistance of the benevolent is needed, it seems best to make such necessity public, as in the case which will be found in a letter from a correspondent in this number. Here we have the means of enquiry into the merits of the case upon the spot, the person for whom pecuniary help is asked is well known, and the names of those acting on his behalf is ample surety that the case is a genuine one.

With respect to this appeal on behalf of WILLIAM DORAN, we happen to know it to be a most deserving case. A long illness, of a character which gives practically no hope of ultimate recovery, is depressing in the extreme. But this is not the only drawback. The savings of weeks or even years soon become exhausted, and debt is sure to be incurred, thereby adding liabilities at a time when their liquidation becomes more and more difficult and disheartening.

We hope this appeal on behalf of a very good old Norfolk ringer will not be made in vain. As we go to press, our friend Mr. HENRY DAINS, the Hon. Secretary of the Royal Cumberland Society, informs us that he will also be glad to receive any sums to aid his necessitous confrere. Mr. DAINS' address is 147, Barnsbury Road, Islington, N.

WYMINGTON, BEDFORDSHIRE.

Harvest Thanksgiving Services were held in this Church on Thursday, October 11th, and on Sunday last. On Thursday the preacher was the Rev. Cannon Haddock, who took as his text, Psalm civ. 13, and spoke of the many advantages connected with country life, even to the children who were able to drink in the fresh air and sunshine during the harvest time, while many thousands of those dwelling in the confined courts and alleys of our great towns had never seen an ear of corn. On Sunday there was Holy Communion at 3.30, and at the 10.30 service the Rector preached from Proverbs xxv. 13, and at 3 p.m. the Rev. F. H. Bolingbrook, Rector of Bletsoe, from St. John xii. 24. The singing was very hearty, under Mr. F. Woollard's direction. On Thursday the service was read by the Rev. Prebendary Mason, Vicar of Christ Church, Birmingham, and the lessons by the Vicar of Irchester and the Vicar of Poddington. The offertories were very good, and were equally divided between the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, and the Additional Curates' Society. The decorations were, as usual, very tasteful and appropriate. The mellow tones of the bells added their share to the joyful celebration, though the labour of ringing is so great that lovers of campanology would do well to help towards their being re-hung, when they would be much more effective. Were Wymington Church restored, the strengthening of the tower and belfry would, no doubt, be one of the earliest portions of this much-needed work.

ROCHDALE, LANCASHIRE.

At Christ Church, on Tuesday morning, October 16th, on the occasion of the marriage of Rev. B. Minnitt, M.A., of Preston, late curate at this parish, and youngest son of the late Vicar, to Miss Cookson, eldest daughter of the Vicar of Marton, Blackpool, at Merton, the local company rang a touch of 1080 changes in several Minor methods, being the longest touch by them on the bells. Ringers: W. Lord, 1; J. W. Howarth, 2; J. T. Bartle, 3; J. Lord, 4; A. A. Stott, 5; J. Stott (conductor), 6. Several other touches, with some call changes and firing, were also rung at intervals during the day till nearly 7 o'clock in the evening, in which brother ringers T. Stott and E. Buckley, took part. The company wish through the medium of this valuable paper to publicly thank the rev. gentleman for the handsome gift he forwarded them in the shape of a £5 note, and to wish them both every happiness and prosperity in their new sphere of life.

ROCHDALE AND DISTRICT ASSOCIATION.

The above Association will hold a Quarterly Meeting at St. Mark's church, Glodwick, on Saturday, November 17th. Bells ready about 2.30; Meeting at 4.30, to be held in the School room.

SUTTON COLDFIELD (Warwickshire).—On Sunday evening, October 14th, for Divine service at the parish church, eight members of the local society rang six courses of Stedman Triples four bobs and two singles, in 19 mins. T. Matthews, 1; C. Dicker, 2; A. Bradshaw, 3; G. Roberts, 4; A. Woodcroft, 5; H. Wilkins, 6; W. Alsopp (conductor), 7; C. Huckle, 8.

NEW PEAL OF BELLS AT WOOLTON CHURCH.

A new peal of bells which has just been hung at Woolton Parish Church was rung for the first time on Wednesday, October 17th, and as the church has never previously had a peal the matter created in the village considerable interest, flags being hoisted on many of the buildings. The peal, which has been erected by public subscription, cost £700, and has been cast by Messrs. John Taylor and Co., of Loughborough. The tenor bell of the Woolton peal weighs nearly one ton, the diameter across the mouth being three feet eleven and half inches, and the note E. The total weight of the eight bells is about four tons, but this is the net weight of bell metal, and does not include clappers or fittings of any kind. A great specialty is the improved cast iron A framework. This has been adopted at Woolton, and has proved a great success.

Each bell has a firm bearing, as it were, on the crossbars of the A's, the tops or points of the A's being steadied by strong oak beams, and the bottoms or feet firmly bedded and bolted upon another strong oak framework. This constitutes the bellframe proper. Furthermore, instead of the bellframe standing on a boarded floor, a plan which is frequently but injudiciously adopted, it is placed immediately upon four strong oak beams, which stretch across the tower, and are firmly cemented in the wall at each end. These beams are further supported by a massive iron girder placed transversely underneath them. The floor is about three feet below the beams, thus enabling the steeple keeper to conveniently get about underneath the bells when they need attention in the way of screwing up the bolts, looking to the clappers, &c. In addition, all the bells are fitted with Messrs. Taylor's improved clappers, which are held by bolts passing through the headstocks. This is a much safer plan and more convenient than that in which the clappers are hung to iron staples cast in the crown of the bells. The gudgeons or pivots are turned, and fitted into planed and bored cast iron bedplates, whereby they are prevented from getting out of truth, which latter was so liable to be the case in the old plan when the pivots were bedded into the wood.

The peal was opened with a touch of Stedman Triples, and throughout the afternoon and evening touches of Stedman, Grandsire, Treble Bob, and Plain Bob, were rung under the conductorship of Robert Williams, the ringers being members of the Liverpool Cathedral Society. A local society of ringers has been formed at Woolton for the purpose of manipulating the new peal, Mr. R. Williams being instructor. The fine tone of the bells makes the effects at a distance very striking. The church tower has also been furnished with a clock, which cost £146. Cambridge chimes have been added at a cost of £90.

On Sunday morning and evening, October 21st, before and after service, the bells were rung, the ringers being entertained to dinner and tea, by the kindness of the Churchwardens, Messrs. Mather and Rimmer.—Liverpool Paper.

"The Lancashire Association of change-ringers" held their their annual meeting at Bolton on Saturday. Was there ever such impudent and flagrant presumption? Where were the police? The gathering was attended by about three hundred persons who boldly avowed that they were old hands at ringing the changes, and yet they were allowed to meet and separate without molestation. What next? Shall we have congresses of base coin manufacturers, or burglars at which papers shall be read by the most expert exponents of these nefarious arts? Considering that change ringers have an association, why should not housebreakers apply to Parliament for a charter of incorporation? Strange to say, the Bolton meeting was attended by clergymen, the church bells were rung, and sermons appropriate to the occasion were preached. All this is very improving, but why was so questionable a gathering countenanced by the church? Ah! we have it now. It was not an assemblage of the class of persons who are accustomed to diddle shopkeepers by "ringing the changes" on the coins they tender, but of church bell ringers, which of course, makes all the difference. Really these ambiguous names and phrases are very misleading.—Local Paper.

NORTH LINCOLNSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

The October General Quarterly Meeting of this Association was held on Saturday last, the 20th instant, at Market Rasen and Claxby, and there was a good attendance. During the afternoon the visitors were conveyed from Market Rasen to Claxby (a pretty village about four miles distant, situated at the foot of the Wolds) at the kind invitation of the Rev. Canon Andrews, where a few very pleasant hours were spent. Several 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles were rung by different bands. After partaking of some refreshments on the rectory lawn, and listening to a well-tapped course of Bob Major on handbells by Mr. T. J. Mallaby, of Hull, the party returned to Market Rasen, where an excellent spread had been provided at the "Aston Arms" hotel, and to which ample justice was done. Immediately the tables were cleared the business meeting commenced, the chair being ably filled by the Rev. Canon Andrews, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Association. Letters were read from the Dean of Lincoln and others regretting their inability to be present.

The Chairman, in the course of an encouraging speech, welcomed the Association, and congratulated the members on their last year's report. An animated discussion then took place as to the advisability of holding fewer business meetings, and providing refreshments for ringing members at such meetings, but it was eventually decided that the matter should stand over until the next annual meeting.

Ten new members were elected. The next meeting was fixed to be held at Gainsborough in January next. Votes of thanks were accorded to the clergy and churchwardens for the use of their bells, and to the chairman for presiding, which brought to a close one of the most successful meetings of the Association.

THE SUSSEX COUNTY ASSOCIATION.—MIDHURST BRANCH.

As will be seen in the peal column, the above branch have accomplished their first peal. Round ringing and call-changes were the only things done on these bells until about a year ago, when a well-known change-ringer, Mr. G. Williams, came to reside in the immediate neighbourhood, and soon made his appearance in the belfry, and after explaining the benefits of belonging to an Association, the above branch was proposed into the Sussex County Association, and obtained the services of the above-named gentleman as the Association instructor. A new peal of handbells was quickly purchased of Mr. G. Welsh, of Southwark, London, and armed with a copy of Snowden's "Rope-Sight," with four evenings a week for practice, they were soon enabled to get through a 120 of Bob Doubles on the church bells. After this a 720 of Bob Minor was accomplished. On Saturday, October 13th, an attempt was made for a date touch, and as will be seen in the touch column, was brought round successfully in 1 hr. and 2 mins. Elated with this success they determined to start for a peal on the following Wednesday, which was successfully brought round, the striking being good throughout. Touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples and Minor have also been rung on the handbells. They are now anxious for some kind friend or friends to come forward and add two more bells to the present six already there. Then the branch would soon add to the Association its full share of peals. A peal board is to be erected in the belfry to record this the first peal ever rung on the bells, which were cast by Lester and Pack in 1763.

THE ROMFORD PEAL.

The above peal, which had been intended to have been rung open, was rung half-muffled in consequence of the death of an old inhabitant and late churchwarden at St. Edward's church. During the rehanging, &c., of the church bells a band of youngsters was organised by Mr. A. J. Perkins, and under his instruction have learnt half-pull ringing, thus the 1st, 2nd, and 4th men, aged respectively 16, 16, 17, have rung their first peal. Great credit, however, is due both to the conductor of the lads as well, the latter of whom could not up to the early part of the present year ring a bell in rounds. Mr. G. Garnett rung the tenor instead of S. James, owing to illness. M.L.M.

HOLY TRINITY, OLD, HILL, STAFFORDSHIRE.

On Friday, October 26th, the ringers of this church had their annual outing, and as it had been unavoidably postponed through the summer, it was decided that the day should be given to ringing. Warwick was selected, as Mr. Washbrook had offered to secure the use of the bells and conduct a peal, and at 8 o'clock the band accompanied by their Vicar, the Rev. E. Brewer, started by train. Mr. Washbrook was on the platform on their arrival, and a move was at once made to St. Mary's church, where there are ten fine bells, tenor 28 cwt. The bells were raised and inspected, and a course of Caters was rung that the band might get the sight of the extra two ropes, as several of them had never heard ten bells before. A message was now brought that the bells were to be stopped, but it fortunately turned out to be a misunderstanding, as the St. Mary's Amateur ringers had very kindly consented to forego their practice on the previous evening, owing to only two ringing times a week being allowed. This point was just settled when the Rev. F. E. Robinson arrived, and without delay the bells were set going in the last 5000 of the long Grandsire Caters peal rung at Appleton. After a bad start it was commenced again, and was brought round about 3 p.m., this being the first peal on these bells (on record) since 1869, when a band from St. Martin's, Birmingham, rang a peal of Stedman Caters. The go of the bells was excellent, and the only thing left to be desired is the addition of two trebles, which would make this a very fine ring. After a late and much-needed refreshment some of the band, with the Rev. F. E. Robinson and Mr. Washbrook, proceeded to the eight-bell tower of St. Nicholas, and after an attempt or two to adjust the sound of the bells, 1008 Double Norwich was rung. C. W. Bassano, 1; A. E. Parsons, 2; H. Mason, 3; W. Bird, 4; Rev. F. E. Robinson, 5; A. H. Bassano, 6; H. Cartwright, 7; J. W. Washbrook (conductor), 8. Afterwards the eight-bell tower of All Saints was visited, and a 336 of Grandsire Triples was brought round. The ring is by Taylor, and will be a nice one when the sound is deadened by an extra floor; there is an eager band of learners here, who are making rapid progress under the tuition of Mr. Washbrook. After tea it was time to return to the station, and a journey home, enlivened with singing terminated a pleasant day. The Holy Trinity ringers wish to express their thanks to the respective vicars for the use of the bells, and to Mr. Washbrook and the Rev. F. E. Robinson for their trouble and kindness to the visitors.

THE CHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.—MEETING AT CREWE.

A meeting of ringers was held on Saturday, October 20th, at Crewe, where there was a good attendance of members from Christ Church, Crewe, Nantwich, Acton, Wrenbury, Marbury, Audlem, Barthomley, Wrenbury, and Warrington. There were also present the Rev. Canon Blackburn, of Warrington, the Rev. Canon Atkinson, of Audlem, the Rev. F. G. Blackburn, of Nantwich, the Rev. Norwood of Wrenbury, and Mr. H. A. Heywood, of Caldby Manor, Birkenhead, the general Secretary of the Association. The ringers from the above towers had the opportunity of showing their skill as change-ringers, and some merry touches were rung during the afternoon by the members at the above churches. The meeting was held at 5 p.m. in the Specification Room of the Mechanics Institution, where a very substantial tea was provided by the new Vicar of Christ Church, the Rev. G. Howson, M. A., of Overton, Flintshire, who has just been inducted into the new living, vacant by the resignation of the Rev. J. Nadin. About sixty-one ringers sat down to tea, which was done ample justice to. After tea speeches were delivered by the above clergymen, and it was proposed by Mr. H. Green, of Crewe, and seconded by Mr. Thomas of Wrenbury, to form a district to belong to the Chester Guild, of which district the Rev. G. Howson was unanimously elected chairman, and Mr. W. H. Boardman, Secretary. The Rev. gentleman was heartily welcomed by the members of the church, and a hope was expressed, that they would have his sympathy and interest to encourage them in their efforts, and that he would continue to manifest an interest in the doings of his ringers, and that he would cheer them on by his presence and kindness. The Rev. gentleman who is a ringer, is now taking an active part in the art of change-ringing, and has shown by his generosity and kindness that he is heart and soul in it, and it is hoped that by his presence amongst them it will be another step in the direction of unity and good will between him and the ringers, and those who are generally ready to be their most devoted and obedient servants, when they are treated as being members and belonging to the Church. Our correspondent adds: We rejoice at having the rev. gentleman as our Vicar, and hope that he may have health and strength to continue in his good work of providing for the needy, by which he is making and justly entitled to, a good name among the poorer classes of W. H. B.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROCHDALE BRANCH.

A meeting of the above branch was held at St. Thomas's church, Moorside, near Oldham, on Saturday, October 27th. About twenty members were present from Oldham, Moorside, Bacup, Heywood, and Rochdale. The Vicar said he hoped the visitors would give them a good ring, it being the old folk's tea party in the schools near. Touches of Grandsire Triples and Bob Major, and also a 576 of Kent Treble Bob was rung. The next meeting is to be held at St. Thomas's church, Leesfield, near Oldham. Six new members were elected. Mr. Hoyle explained the objects of the members in forming the above branch, which has proved such a success, as it is for the advancement of the members in the district. Votes of thanks were given to the Vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells, and also to the chairman, Mr. John Harrison, for presiding. After the meeting a well-struck touch of Grandsire Triples was rung at the meeting house by the following: Samuel Stott, 1-2; Fred Crosland, 3-4; James Priestley, 5-6; E. B. Shaw, 7-8. Also a 504 was attempted with Mr. Harrison, 7-8, the rest as before, but it unfortunately came to grief. A course of Caters was also successfully rung, which brought a pleasant meeting to a close.

AUGMENTATION OF CHRIST CHURCH (EASTBOURNE) BELLS.

The bells of this church, which originally consisted of only three down to the year 1883, when three new bells were added, have now been further augmented by the addition of a new treble and tenor. The work was entrusted to Messrs. Warner, of London (who have supplied all the bells) and they have succeeded in making a capital splice. The alteration of the old bells to make room for the new, has been a decided improvement with regard to the ropes, which now fall in a splendid circle. Further improvements are to be made in the ringing chamber, the churchwardens having kindly promised to put in a new ceiling, etc. When these are completed it will be one of the neatest in the county. The bells were first rung on Sunday, October 28th, for the eight o'clock celebration. For afternoon service a well-struck 1008 of Grandsire Triples was rung in 37 mins. On Monday, October 29th, an attempt was made for a peal of Oxford Bob Triples, but it unfortunately came to grief after ringing two hours and twelve minutes. This was rather disappointing, but the ringers are in no way disheartened, but intend shortly to make another attempt. The band stood as follows: R. Howse, 1; G. Howse, 2; H. Colbran, 3; P. Peters, 4; F. Harding (conductor), 5; J. Sharp, 6; T. Smith, 7; H. Knight, 8.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT ASSOCIATION.

The Quarterly Meeting of the above Association was held at Kings Norton, Worcestershire, on Saturday, October 20th. During the afternoon several touches were rung, after which the business part of the meeting was held at the "Bell" inn, Mr. C. Carmell taking the chair. There were several new members elected. The next meeting being the annual meeting it was decided to hold it at Birmingham. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the Vicar for kindly granting them the use of the bells, which brought the meeting to a close.

Obituary.

WILLIAM HARGRAVES.

On Saturday, October 20th, at 111, Stretford Road, Hulme, Manchester, of consumption, William John Hargraves, in his 38th year, lately a member of the St. Philip's and the Holy Trinity Societies, Hulme. Of an extremely genial and kindly nature, he was well-known and very popular in the belfries of Manchester and the surrounding district, being an enthusiastic change-ringer up to two years ago, when, on account of failing health, a voyage to New Zealand was determined upon. He returned in June this year, without, unfortunately, having obtained any benefit. His performances of 5000 and upwards are not many, but he will be better remembered for his eagerness to devote time and attention to the advancement of learners in the art of change-ringing. He was interred at the Ardwick Cemetery on October 23rd, and muffled touches were rung the same evening on the bells of St. Philip's and Holy Trinity churches.

ANCIENT ADVERTISEMENTS.

The following are taken from Crossgrove's Gazette of the year 1710. The kindness of a Norwich gentleman has enabled us to insert them.

"This is to inform the Publick that Charles Newman, Bell-founder of this City, has ever since January last been at Swaffham, in Norfolk, a casting of Bells, where he has had the good success of casting a Compleat Peal of 6 Bells for the parish of Snetsham, and another Peal of 5 Bells for the Parish of Castleacre, and 3 to make up 5 for the Parish of Hilborough, which are now a Hanging up, besides others to the Number of 29 since January last; but now is returned Home to his Office in Norwich, where he is ready to serve any Parish that has the like Occasion to new cast broken Bells, or design to make any alteration in their Rings, and he will perform the said work as well as any Pretender to that Art in England, and with as much expedition as can be desired.

"This is also to inform the Hotpressers of this City that have their Boxes out of Order, That they may have them new cast to Perfection, he having had better success in that Business than any that ever yet took them in hand to do. Likewise any sort of Brasses either for wind or water-mills, or any other Engines, are new cast by the said Thomas Newman, at his new erected office without Bear Street gates."

"JOHN GOLDSMITH, in Redgrave, in Suffolk, Casts and Hangs Bells more perfect than any have been for 50 years past, at very reasonable Rates."

"At Snetsham, in Norfolk, is a compleat Ring of Six New Bells all cast by Mr. Thom. Newman, Bellfounder of this City; who is also Casting a Peal of five for Castleacre and others that he hath taken to the Number of Fourteen."

TILEHURST, BERKS.—THE OXFORD DIOCESAN GUILD.

On Wednesday, October 31st, eight members of the above guild (Reading Branch), started for Taylor's six-part peal of Grandsire Triples, which came to grief through a mishap. As the time would not permit to ring the whole peal the members decided to start for half the peal, which was successfully rang in 1 hr. 30 mins., by the following members: H. Goodyer, 1; W. Holloway, 2; G. F. Tarrant, 3; W. Gosletine, 4; W. Johnson, 5; W. Newell (conductor), 6; J. Potter, 7; T. Harvey, 8.

CHURCH FINANCE.

The following letter on this subject appears in the Guardian:—Sir,—Mr. Thomas Hughes I think it was who told us at the Manchester Congress that we ought to teach the people the truth; the Church Defence lecturers, one of whom I had in my little parish the other day, have done an immense amount of good by teaching the people the truth as to the origin of the Church and her endowments; and, further than this, people ought to be taught the truth about the incomes of the Bishops and clergy, and if they are to understand thus neither Bishops nor clergy should be credited with what they do not receive.

We had a meeting in Manchester to consider the extension of the Episcopate. Only one speaker, who is, I hear, a Canon denied that more Bishops were urgently needed, but more than one objected to the large nominal salaries of Bishops. He was answered by Canon Venables, who pointed out the heavy calls on the Episcopal purse; but I am sure he was not convinced. People never do understand for long that what is called an income of £500 or £5,000 is really something much less. Then, why call it so?

I am speaking now of new bishoprics. It was proposed that they should be £3,000, and it was said that as they would not have such large houses to keep up, or such large dioceses to travel over, they could manage with that. Well, we will assume this to be enough, on the word of the proposer, Mr. Spottiswoode, and now I can only guess as to how much or little of this sum the Bishop would have for his own private expenses. But of this I am certain, that when an appeal is to be made to raise money to found a new bishopric, that, and that only, should be called his income. Suppose the Bishop has to pay £150 to a private secretary, £300 for travelling expenses, and that he helps good works in his diocese to the amount of £600. He has left £1,950 for his private use. No doubt this is really much over the mark, but let it stand so. Why not ask for an endowment of £2,000 for the bishopric, with £150 for a private secretary, and £300 for travelling? There is only £2,450 in all, and every one who was asked to give would see how much was for the Bishop's personal use.

But how about the £600 put down as distributed in the diocese in good works—is that to be lost? By no means! Let there be a Bishop's fund, collected on one Sunday in the year in every church under his control, and increased by the gifts of the wealthy laity, and let the Bishop have absolute control over this, distributing it where it is in his judgment most needed. Such funds are not even now unknown.

I have put down actual figures because they are more easy to deal with; but, however wrong the details may be, that does not affect the principle for which I contended at the Manchester Congress, and contend now, that in the future the necessary official expenses of Bishops should be provided for by allowances, and not in their nominal income. We cannot afford to do anything that shall make it easy for people to be deceived as to the riches of the Church. A Judge has allowances; why not a Bishop?

SAMUEL HOBSON.

THE NEST OF THE QUAIL.—The Quail does not spend much time or trouble in constructing a nest, but contents itself by scraping out a small hollow in the ground, and placing therein a few bits of hay, straw, dried grass and stalks. The number of eggs laid is about ten, but nests are occasionally found containing a larger number. The colour of the eggs is yellowish-white, or greenish, blotched and speckled with brown; they measure a little more than an inch in length, and not quite an inch in breadth. Wheat fields, or patches of clover and grass, are the places usually selected for nesting in. The young birds are able to follow the old birds very soon after they are hatched, and feed upon grain, seeds, insects, and small tender leaves. The flight of the Quail is straight and rapid. Generally the birds keep very close to the ground, and after being fired at or alarmed once, show great reluctance to take wing a second time. They are very fond of frequenting stubble fields, and many are killed by the sportsmen when in search of partridges.—From "Familiar Wild Birds" for October.

CHURCH ENDOWMENT.

At the York Conference, CANON MACHELL, who took the subject of glebe lands, approved of the Act which sanctioned the alienation of such lands. In the greater number of cases, however, he recommended some organisation whereby the Church could retain its connection with the land, while the clergy were relieved from the management of the soil and the necessity of pressing for an uncertain income from their own parishioners.

Mr. W. R. FAWCETT (Stainton) in a paper on Tithe Redemption criticised Lord Salisbury's Bill of last year. He held that the minimum term of purchase should be twenty-two and a half years, though twenty-five years would be better in the case of small tithes.

The REV. H. E. MADDOCK, who read a paper on the subject of tithes, proposed the following resolutions:—

"That this conference expresses its general approval of Lord Salisbury's Tithe Rent-Charge Bills, and desires to urge upon her Majesty's Ministers the extreme importance, in the interests of the Church, of their being passed into law during the present session;" and

"That this conference is of opinion that the gradual transition from a septennial to a triennial valuation of the tithe rent-charge is equitable and expedient."

The REV. H. LOWTHER CLARKE, in seconding the resolution read a paper on "The Maintenance of Curates." There were two ways in which the maintenance of curates might be improved—firstly by creating more vacancies in benefices; and, secondly, by establishing the unbeneficed clergy in a more permanent and less precarious and anomalous position. They were rapidly approaching the end in restoring churches; let, then, the needs of the ministry be pleaded with the same zeal as had been shown in renovating buildings.

Mr. J. NEWTON (Easingwold) having expressed a hope that Lord Salisbury's Bill would be passed this year, the REV. T. W. TREVOR spoke on the other side. He was afraid that Parliament was much more likely to accept the principle of the Bill and accept the small details to which they (the clergy) objected, and the effect of their resolution, if adopted, would be that they would be giving approval to a policy that was objectionable to them. Every one approved of the first Bill of Lord Salisbury, which imposed on the landlord the payment of tithe. That was the boon that the proposed legislation would confer. But what was the price to be paid for this boon? The price was a considerable diminution of their incomes. A sum of £1,145,775 would be transferred from the tithe owners to the tithe-payers. With regard to the redemption of tithe, he did not think this was the proper time to deal with it.

The REV. T. F. SCRIVEN, having had much experience of the tithe, advised that at almost any sacrifice they should convert their tithe into something else. Speaking on the maintenance of curates, he considered the best plan was to encourage the idea of clergy pensions—pensions as a matter of right to all clergymen who might no longer at a certain age be equal to their duties. He suggested also that when a man came up for ordination he should, among other requirements, be requested to find a certain amount for the purchase of a deferred annuity.

The PRESIDENT—Do you ask me that as a question? If so, I would say that it would be quite impossible to supply the dioceses on those terms.

The REV. J. N. WORSFOLD said they were threatened with what the Church had often suffered from—legislation by panic. He regarded Lord Salisbury's idea as being perfectly friendly, but while he would adopt the first Bill he would oppose the second.

The REV. G. B. HAYDON considered it would be a great mistake for the Church and for the clergy if they were to sell the glebe lands. As to the maintenance of curates, there were two sorts of curates; there was the vicar's curate and the people's curate. He said nothing about the former, but in regard to the latter he would say, teach the people that they needed curates and they would maintain them.

The PRESIDENT, in closing the discussion, said this question was one for the clergy themselves. There was a scheme which had been drawn up by a very able man, to which no reference had been made. Under that scheme there was to be no compulsion to redeem, except for sums of £2 and less, and any one who would contract with the Ecclesiastical Commissioners would receive from them, on their responsibility, a fixed annuity instead of the tithe. After a certain number of half-yearly payments—the term would be long—the tithe, according to the scale paid, would have entirely redeemed itself, and if the process was universally adopted the result would be, according to the calculation made, a considerable profit, which ought to go to those who paid for it, and the titheowners would have that profit. That was a scheme which it would be good for the clergy to consider, and probably adopt. There was another point which had not been given the value it ought to have. It was proposed to transfer the tithe from the occupiers to the landowners, and it had always been assumed that one great gentleman living on his estate would pay the tithe for the whole, and that the clergy would not have to deal with the small people. But there were parishes in this country where that did not apply. There were parishes in Lancashire where both owners and occupiers run into hundreds, and in these instances they would have to deal not with a fixed landowner, but with several hundreds of landowners who were not residents at all; and the clergy would probably be willing to consider the position in which they would be placed in such instances by parting with the power of distraint for the county court process. Another consideration was the expense they were put to at present in collecting tithe. An argument was founded upon the gross diminution of tithe to the amount of £1,145,755; but if they took the loss from distraints, the cost of tithe dinners, and the amount spent in agency, they would be disposed to say that the diminution was not so great as it appeared; and if it gave a clergyman a prospect of enjoying in peace without further diminution he would perhaps be disposed to incur it. He thought the clergy required to give more consideration to the matter, and he should like to know that the question had been discussed in every rural deanery Chapter, and that they should use their right of petition if deemed desirable. But he did think that at present there had not been sufficient preparation to decide upon the question.

In order to give conference as much time as possible to consider the question the voting was deferred to a later period of the day. Afterwards MR. H. E. MADDOCK, asked leave to withdraw his two resolutions, and submitted the following:—

"That the conference recognises in the two Bills of Lord Salisbury an important effort to remove the difficulties of the Tithes Acts, and recommends the clergy and others to observe and to aid as far as possible by an expression of opinion such parts of the proposed measures as shall be found to tend a fair and peaceful settlement of the tithe question."

ARCHDEACON BLUNT having seconded the resolution, it was unanimously adopted.

Discussions also took place on "Wholesome and Unwholesome Literature" and "Betting and Gambling," and the conference was closed by devotional meditation.

A SUGGESTION.

SIR,—From time to time you open your columns to appeals for help for brethren of the Art who have fallen into misfortune. In connection with this subject it has struck me whether it would not be possible to found a Ringers' Benefit Society for the whole country, I, for one, would gladly become an Honorary Member, and so doubtless would many others. Would not this, too, be a very practical and substantial solution of the much-vexed question of the National Association?

COAL.

[FROM THE Guardian.]

We have narrowly escaped a great calamity. A coal famine at the beginning of winter fully deserves that name; and it seemed likely last week that this would be brought about by a universal strike of colliers. Thirty thousand men were actually on strike; and notices had been given which would soon bring up the number to fifty thousand. Their claim was an advance of wages by ten per cent., and it was a claim which was in a fair way of becoming universal throughout the northern and midland coalfields. If it had been persistently urged on the one side, and persistently refused on the other, there would have been no alternative but for the collieries to stand idle while the strike continued, and for coal consumers to subsist on the limited stock already in hand, at whatever price the coal-owners, under such circumstances, could afford to sell it. The result would be that it would answer to import coals from Belgium and France, so that it would become a profitable speculation literally to carry coals to Newcastle. Such an inversion of the natural order of things has happily been averted by the timely concession of the coal-owners. So many of them have yielded to the demands of the men, that it is not likely that those who still hold out will be able to persist in their refusal. In Lancashire, Nottinghamshire, and Leicestershire the full ten per cent. has been generally granted. In Yorkshire the contest is still going on. In twenty-six pits, employing more than 10,000 men, the advance has been given; but in sixty-two collieries, employing about 30,000 men, who are consequently either on strike or under notice of strike, it has been refused. A few days will show whether, when the solidarity of the owners has been so greatly impaired, this refusal can be maintained. The southern districts do not seem as yet to have been affected by the contest. Perhaps this is due to better working arrangements. In South Wales they have a sliding scale by which wages are adjusted to prices. Under this the men will be entitled to an advance of 5 per cent. in January; and they appear much to their credit, to be satisfied with this prospective benefit. It is the first advance which they have had for five years; but that seems to be conclusive proof that the demand for coal during all that time has not been sufficient to warrant an advance. It may be that the sliding scale has secured for them higher wages than their comrades in the north have received during the slack time, so that they may really be placed on equal terms with the others by a small rise. In the Forest of Dean the 5 per cent. advance will take place at an earlier date—namely the 1st of November.

The effect of this will of course, be a rise in the price of coal. In London it has already risen 4s. a ton since July, and will probably continue to rise. If the owners pay higher wages to the men they will have to recoup themselves, wholly or partially from the consumers; unless, indeed, the increased demand is so great as to compensate for the smaller profit on each individual transaction. But the rise will, in any case, be compared with that which would have taken place if the great strike had gone forward and there had been a veritable famine of coal. And the rise of price will be still less felt if any means can be contrived for compelling the middleman to bear his share in the diminution of profit. Many coal-owners already give great facilities to the consumer for dealing direct with the pit. Every addition to the price of coal will set more persons on considering how this may be effected, so that the coal merchant may in time come in for a share of the discipline which, through the intervention of the "stores" system, has overtaken, or is overtaking the butcher, baker, grocer, and chemist. The tendency of the increased pressure of modern life is to squeeze out the middleman altogether.

The history of strikes is commonly a history of failure. After weeks or months of misery and sem-starvation, the men usually succumb and accept the terms which they might have had without all this suffering. The defence alleged for them is that they are prophylactic. The particular strike may fail to gain its end, but the fear of a strike is a potent engine to delay a reduction or accelerate an advance of wages. That this fear may be operative, it is necessary that from time to time a strike should actually occur. Whether it succeeds or fails, it has done its part if it keeps this apprehension alive. But it more often fails than succeeds. What are the circumstances that have secured the success in so many places of this particular strike? The success is an evidence that the strike was in some degree well founded. There is to some extent a revival of trade, especially of the iron and steel trade, which, more than all others, is dependent on coal. If this means an increase of profit to the masters, it is only fair that the men should have their share in it. That it does mean, if it continues, an increase of profits is certain. But it is by no means so certain that it means an immediate increase. The owners have in many instances accepted contracts on the basis of lower wages, which may turn into a loss if they have to be fulfilled when wages have become higher. All arrangements made on the former scale have to be re-adjusted to suit the latter, and this takes time. Not till this has been done can the owners profit by the revival of trade. Moreover, the effects of a depression of trade do not generally fall so heavily on the men as on the masters. The former have been earning wages all the time, though on a reduced scale; the latter say that they have often been working at a loss. They claim the right accordingly of enjoying a larger share of the improved profits until this loss has been recovered. They hold, therefore, that they are not bound to increase the wages of the men until the improvement in trade has continued some time longer. But they know at the same time that a quarrel with their men would crush their prospects just as they are beginning to brighten, and rather than incur that risk they are willing to surrender some part of what they hold to be their right. What the men have gained by their threatened strike is therefore an advance of wages some weeks earlier than it would otherwise have taken place. What they would have lost if the strike had actually occurred on the large scale, and for the long duration which seemed at one time possible, is beyond the power of calculation. If it had frightened trade into other channels their loss would have been far more terrible than that of the coal-owners. These latter could in many cases have lived on their capital, or employed it elsewhere: the men would have had no alternative but to starve for lack of work. But they risked their stake against that of the owners, and, as it happens, they have won. They showed themselves to be ready for the last resort of war, and the threat was found to be sufficient. But war, even on the bloodless field of commerce, is so frightful a calamity that it can scarcely be compensated by a rise of 10 per cent. in wages. That the workman should get his fair share of the profits of trade is a result that we should all desire. But then he ought also to take a fair share in its losses. It ought not to be impossible to secure this reasonable participation in its vicissitudes by methods less barbarous than a strike. An agreement to submit to arbitration or a sliding scale such as seems to have been established in South Wales are alternatives that offer at least a fair promise of success.

TITHE AGITATION.

The following resolutions were passed at the meeting of the clergy of Norfolk, held on the 20th inst., Archdeacon Perowne in the chair:—

"1. That this meeting regards with satisfaction the Bill entitled 'An Act to amend Section 80 of the Tithe Rent-charge Act, 1836,' and earnestly hopes that that bill, in which it has passed the House of Lords, will become law in the approaching session of Parliament."

"2. That this meeting approves generally of the principles of the Tithe Rent-charge Recovery and Variation Bill, and earnestly desires prompt legislation on the subject."

"3. That, in the opinion of this meeting, the Bill requires amendment as regards 'procedure' for the recovery of tithe rent-charge."

"4. That the special attention of the Government be called to the fact that in the Bill the word 'produce' ought to be substituted for the words 'net profit.'"

"5. That, in the opinion of this meeting, the Bill urgently requires amendment by the introduction of some method of gradual transition from the septennial to the triennial valuation."

"6. That this meeting desires not to separate without expressing its admiration of the way in which the tenant farmers of Norfolk have kept up their payments of tithe rent-charge during a period of very trying agricultural depression."

The Rev. S. Hooke, rector of Clopton, Woodbridge, has again intimated his intention of remitting five per cent. of the tithe rent-charge.

On Thursday the mountainous district around Helcyn and Cilcain, Flintshire (where disturbances have occurred before), was visited by Mr. Stevens, on behalf of the Clergy Defence Association. He was protected by five police-constables, commanded by a sergeant four emergency men armed with batons, and two appraisers. At three farms the tithes were paid, but at Fron Farm a crowd gathered, bearing an effigy of the rector, around which danced and blew horns, and then burnt it. At Grachin Farm they Mr. Blackwell was hooted for paying £2 due from him. At the next farm Mrs. Jones had chained up her gate, but after some conversation she paid what was due. Mr. Hughes, the next farmer, had stuck up triumphal flags on the top of the stack in his yard and an effigy of the vicar. The crowd says the Daily News, having thoroughly enjoyed the fun, the tenant farmer paid his arrears.

SEVENOAKS, KENT.

On Monday last the mortal remains of Arthur James Fowler, formerly a member of the Sevenoaks band of Ringers, was interred in the cemetery at St. Nicholas' Church, Sevenoaks. The deceased joined the old band at the age of sixteen, and up to three years ago was a promising young change-ringer, but ill-health failed him, and after being in one of the London hospitals for over twelve months was brought home incurable. He recovered for a time, and followed his employment, and the present band having been formed (the old band having broken up), he expressed a wish to join them which was accepted by the new captain, but the Rector, Rev. T. S. Curtis, who knew the nature of his complaint would not allow him to join them. He took great interest in the new band and their ringing, and joined them at supper on their opening night. He again failed about three weeks ago, and gradually got worse, and on Wednesday, October 17th, quietly passed away to rest respected by all who knew him at the early age of 21. The remains were borne to the grave by four of the single members of the band, four of the married ones acting as pall-bearers. The coffin was covered by wreaths and crosses sent by sorrowing friends, and was preceded by the staff of the Sevenoaks Chronicle, by whom he was employed. The Rector met them at the Church gates and conducted the service, at the conclusion of which the members retired to the belfry, where a muffled peal was rung with some of his favourite changes. May he rest in peace.

It is not probable the consecration of Canon Jayne, Bishop-designate of Chester, will be made before the beginning of next year, and that at present no date can be fixed for it.

INCREASE OF THE EPISCOPATE.

At the Church Conference for the Diocese of York, the Archbishop said:—The need of further Episcopal help in the diocese of York was obvious. Some time ago a suggestion was made to him by the Lord Chancellor that he should promote a scheme for procuring a Bishop of Beverley, to which place he has strong family ties, as well as great interest in its beautiful minster. For this purpose Lord Grimthorpe had offered £3000 in Beverley Waterworks stock, a security which, though its value is now small, would rise gradually to a considerable amount. The scheme which shaped itself to his (the Archbishop's) mind was that as soon as a fund should offer even a moderate income a Suffragan should be appointed in the usual way to assist the Archbishop; and that when the sum should increase so as to give hopes of a bishopric being founded after the manner of Wakefield or Southwell, application should be made to the Legislature for that purpose. The example of Wakefield has shown that to collect for many years for a new see without making any use of the proceeds of the money until a certain large sum should be raised was somewhat wasteful. Between the date of Lord Cross's Act and the appointment of the Bishop of Wakefield in the present year several years had passed. It was, of course, needless to observe that the nomination of the Archbishop of a Suffragan to assist him temporarily could only extend to the term of his own tenure of office. Figures were supposed to be a dry study, but this hardly applied to the remark, that exclusive of some gifts that might be counted upon, the sums he had mentioned amounted to well-nigh the interest of £1,000,000. About the same might be said of the sum annually given by the deanery of Sheffield alone for Church purposes, and if any one wanted a gauge of the liberality that prevailed in the Church at this moment, he advised him to look into the Diocesan Calendar at the large amount raised for Church purposes there tabulated in connection with the different archdeaconries.

THE CHESTER DIOCESAN CONFERENCE.

The sittings of this conference closed on October 31st with a discussion on clerical incomes, in the course of which Dr. Stubbs, the President, made some observations on the augmentation of the incomes of the poorer clergy. The subject was introduced by Mr. Glenn, who suggested that a sort of voluntary tax should be levied on clergymen with incomes of £300 a year and over. Mr. Williams (Birkenhead) ridiculed this proposal, saying that they should rather level up instead of levelling down, and that the burden should fall on the laity. The Bishop said that Mr. Glenn had gone on the principle adopted by some of their Socialist friends, that all men and all clergy should be equal. The most elementary principles had been overlooked by the very persons who were most ready to lay down the law for them in discussing this question at the recent Church Congress. A man who knew his powers and tried to use them deserved to be placed in the position worthy of those powers. These things rather sickened one of all discussions, and if it had not been that he really thought Mr. Glenn did deserve to have some consideration shown to him he would not have allowed it to be placed on the agenda. The same thing applied in other walks of life. In a lawyer's office one clerk could write better than another, and one man could understand Blackstone better than other. Why should all clergymen be put down at £300 a year, irrespective of their powers and opportunities? He could not really speak with any coolness or calmness on this question. He had been a clergyman for many years, and he did not know that in any one year his clerical income had met his clerical expenditure. During all those years he worked to support himself and family with his pen, and it was purely owing to the success which he had had in writing that he had been recognised as he had been, and placed in the position which he was now. He did not think those things ought to be left out of sight. There were hundreds, if not thousands, of clergymen who had to do the same thing now. He thought they must excuse the warmth with which he had spoken but he really did think he could expand it very largely by what he knew of the existing Bishops of the present day.

LORD BACON'S FALL.—Bacon, who has placed his name high on the scroll of immortality by his genius, was destined, like Lucifer, to become more notorious by his fall than by his standing. Brilliant as were his powers, superb as were his accomplishments, he had not hesitated to trail his finest qualities through the mire of Courts and corruption, in the eager quest of worldly distinction. He had risen, perhaps, more by his base flatteries, and his calumnious envy of his contemporaries, than by his abilities; and he had continued, whilst rising, to make enemies on all sides. The king and the Duke of Buckingham had both conceived a deep dislike to him. James hated all men of genius with the jealousy of a pendant, and was only rendered tolerant of Bacon by his abject adulation, and his services in carrying out relentlessly the fiat of prerogative. The Lords hated him for his upstart vanity and ostentation, and the Commons for his desertion of the public cause for that of the despotic king.—From "Cassell's Illustrated History of England" for October.

THE STATUE OF ST. PETER.—On the right side of the nave of St. Peter's is the celebrated bronze statue of St. Peter, whose extended foot has been kissed by generations of worshippers until it is worn out of shape. It is asserted by antiquarians, and others, that this is a statue of Jupiter adapted to its present purpose, the symbolical being placed in one hand and a halo over the head. One thinks of the joke of Dean Swift, that the only difference between the ancient and the modern city was that the one was the worship of Jupiter and the other the worship of Jew Peter. It is curious how the Roman Catholic Church has always had the knack of adapting what it finds to its own purpose;—this statue, for example, is only a transformed statue of Jupiter, executed in the worst days of paganism; the Column of the Immaculate Conception was an unfinished column of an amphitheatre, and lay for centuries in neglect, till Pius IX. found a use for it, to commemorate a dogma; and the very chair of St. Peter has carvings on the back representing the labours of Hercules, and an inscription in Arabic proclaiming that "there is but one God, and Mohammed is his prophet!"—From "Cities of the World" for October.

Church News.

The Bishop-Coadjutor of Antigua left England on Thursday on his return to his diocese, accompanied by his wife and daughter.

The Bishop of the Church of England in Japan has appointed his brother, the Rev. S. Bickersteth, vicar of All Saints', Belvedere, Kent, to be one of his commissaries.

Mr. John Walker, of Cheltenham, has given £5,000 to endow a canonry in Gloucester Cathedral, to be permanently associated with the offices of diocesan missionary, and to form a memorial of the late Mr. Gambier Parry.

The report that the Bishop of Southwell is less well is incorrect, being doubtless due to his lordship having said at the diocesan conference that his doctor only allows him now to undertake such work as does not involve his being out in the evening, and on condition of his leaving England directly after the Advent ordination. Bishop Ridding quite hopes to return after the spring months as strong as ever.

The east window of Temple Ewell Church, Kent, has just received some stained glass in memory of the late Mrs. Hobson. The large centre piece of tracery contains a representation of our Lord sitting on the rainbow, surrounded by the Evangelists. Beneath this, on either side, is an angel in adoration. The large central light has the Resurrection. The glass was executed by Messrs. Ward and Hughes, of Soho Square. The window is an offering by many poor, in grateful remembrance, as well as the rich.

The annual summary of British contributions to the fund of foreign missionary societies, just completed by Canon Scott Robertson, shows that, for the year 1887, the sum of £1,228,750 was voluntarily given by various religious bodies in the British Isles. Of this total the sum of £461,236, was given to the Church of England societies; £187,080 to joint societies of of Churchmen and Nonconformists; £367,115 to Nonconformist societies in England and Wales; 202,940 to Scotch and Irish Presbyterian societies; and £10,420 to Roman Catholic societies.

At the Harvest Festival on Tuesday week, the Bishop of Lichfield unveiled the east and south window in the chancel of Christ Church, Graily, which have been filled with stained glass by the liberality of Mr. and Mrs. Ward, of Rodbaston. They have also had the chancel itself panelled with oak. On either side is fixed a long canvas tablet, framed in oak picked out with gold, each containing the pictures of three of the Old Testament prophets, looking eastward towards the Crucified, and holding scrolls inscribed with passages from their prophecies. On the north side are Job, Hosea, and Jonah; on the south side, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Zechariah.

On Monday week the Bishop of Salisbury consecrated about five acres and a half of additional burial ground at the Salisbury Cemetery. On the arrival of the Bishop the petition of consecration was presented by Mr. Blake, chairman of the Salisbury Burial Board, and a procession perambulated the new portion of the cemetery, Bishop Wordsworth being preceded by his pastoral staff. The hymn "A few more years shall roll" having been sung, the ground was blessed, and on returning to a marquee the remainder of the service was said, and the sentence of consecration was read by Archdeacon Sanctuary and signed by the Bishop.

In distributing at Sion College, on Saturday last, the prizes to the successful students at the examinations held by the Rochester Diocesan Board of Education, the Bishop of Rochester said that what they wanted for the voluntary schools was justice—that is, that the board schools should be worked in such a manner as not to destroy those voluntary schools. They wanted the voluntary schools to be worked side by side with the others, and not to be pushed out of the field of education by large sums of money. This appeal for justice would, he said, be appreciated when it was seen how the public expenses would be increased if the voluntary schools were closed.

On Sunday last, the parish church of Millbrook, Bedfordshire, was in a state of wreck, through a portion of the walls and roof having fallen in a day or two previously. The chancel remains intact, and the Holy Communion was celebrated there, but the ordinary services had to be held in the parish-room. One of the octagon-shaped pillars separating the nave from the aisles had given way at the foundation, which consisted chiefly of sand, during some excavations for a new heating apparatus. A number of the old oaken pews were smashed, and the font, which was a very ancient relic, was broken into fragments; but three marble busts, standing on pedestals close by, being those of Lord and Lady Holland and Lady Ann Fox, who were formerly connected with the parish, were untouched.

Mr. Edward Young, J.P., late of Thornleigh, Richmond Hill, Bournemouth, whose personal estate amounted to £100,000, bequeathed by his will £100 each to the Church Missionary Society, the Church Pastoral Aid Society, the Bible Society, and the Liverpool Scripture-Reader's Society. Mr. William Adam, of 3, Tenterden Street, Hanover Square, whose personal estate amounted to £29,000, bequeathed £500 each to St. George's Hospital, King's College Hospital, the Middlesex Hospital, St. Mary's Hospital, and Charing Cross Hospital; £600 to the Hospital for Incurables at Putney; £400 to the Association for the General Welfare of the Blind; £300 each to the Hospital for Epilepsy and Paralysis, St. Thomas's Hospital, the Hospital for the Diseases of the Throat, the Infirmary at Forfar, and the Brompton Cancer Hospital; £200 to St. John's Episcopal Church (Forfar).

An application was made in the London Consistory Court on Thursday last for a faculty authorising some alterations in the church of All Saints, Edmonton, which dates from about the year 1450. The proposals are to take down the gallery and substitute for it an aisle on the south side for holding 200 persons, to rearrange the seats in the body of the church, and also rearrange the chancel. The vicar, the Rev. Robert Stewart, stated the alterations would not interfere with any graves. Let into the wall in the south aisle there is an old monument to the memory of "John Kerton, Esquire," who died in 1471; and this will be moved to a corresponding place in the new wall. The alterations have, it appears, been approved by the vestry. The Chancellor, Dr. Tristram, granted a faculty to authorise the alterations with a special proviso for the protection of existing monuments.

The parish church of St. Merryn, on the main road between Padstow and the famous Bedruthan steps, on the north coast of Cornwall, was re-opened on Tuesday week by the Archdeacon of Cornwall, after having undergone a thorough restoration. This church was for many years in a very dilapidated condition. Nearly all of the old windows were destroyed, and iron and wood sash windows substituted in their place. The architect, however, discovered several portions of the tracery of the original windows in the vicarage garden and elsewhere, and these have all been replaced in the church, and have served as models for the new windows. The east window was a wretched three-light one, placed there about twenty-five years ago. This has been removed to the south transept, and a striking five-light window substituted. The seats of the chancel and nave consisted of very lofty square deal pews, but the architect discovered four very interesting specimens of old oak bench ends of early fifteenth-century character, each with different types of traced panels. These have been preserved and again used, and have formed the type for the oak benches which have now been erected. The lower parts of the chancel and parclose screens were also discovered in their proper positions, and these have been preserved. The choir stalls are of elaborately carved oak. The chancel floor is of Roman and granite mosaic. The altar itself is unique of its kind in the county. The central panel of the front is rough marble, 5ft. by 2 ft., with an inlaid cross of jaune de var marble, and outside this are panels of Irish green marble, with a moulding between Sicilian marble, the whole being encased in an oak gilded mould. The reredos is of gilded oak, and contains panels representing the Crucifixion, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and St. John. The east end of the south has been utilized for a side chapel, and a neat little altar, made from the old oak of the church, has been placed there.

THE POPE AND THE GERMAN EMPEROR.

A special correspondent of the Daily Telegraph gives an account of a private audience granted him by the Pope on Monday week. Shortly after eleven o'clock he was conducted to the presence of his Holiness, whom he found in a small, somewhat dimly lighted room, at a right angle to the ante-chamber leading out of the Throne-room:—

"At the further end of this apartment, enthroned on a dais raised a few inches above the ground, sat Pope Leo XIII., his white robes and mozzetta and palid complexion cast into high relief by the dark crimson hue of the hangings covering the walls. On either side of the throne were ranged three chairs, to one of which—that nearest to him on his right hand—he motioned me after I had made the customary salutation. Then addressing me by my name, he said, 'I have been told that you represent a great and influential English journal, and that you wished to be received by the Pope. Your request, as you see, has been granted. What do you desire to learn from me? Ask, and I will tell you what I can.' Upon my observing that the state of his Holiness's health was a subject of deep interest to many millions of my fellow-countrymen, the Pope quickly rejoined, 'You may tell the English Catholics that I am well considering my advanced age and the multiplicity of my occupations. Yes, my health is really good, though I have had a good deal to trouble me of late, and have also worked very hard.'"

The correspondent then inquired as to a history of Rome in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries in connection with the Papacy, on which his Holiness was reported to be engaged. The Pope knew of no such work:—

"My time has been too fully occupied with the discharge of my duties as head of the Church to permit me to undertake a literary enterprise of such magnitude. Some time ago I instructed one of my most intelligent prelates—a very learned and industrious man—to write a history of the Roman Episcopate, not dealing, of course, with any century in particular, but with all the successive periods of the Episcopate, from its commencement down to present times. That history is written and finished, but by him, not by me."

The correspondent then speaking of the German Emperor's visit, the Pope replied:

"I cannot say that we are either satisfied or dissatisfied with the Emperor's visit. That he came to Rome was not at our request; nor was his object in coming favourable to us, but rather to those who are against us—to those who, for ten years past, have practically compelled me to restrict myself to this palace, from which I cannot issue. My dignity forbids me to do so. This young man, having acceded to the German throne, has been making a round of visits to European Courts; to St. Petersburg, Copenhagen, Vienna, and finally to Rome, where his presence was calculated to strengthen our adversaries and consolidate their position, not to benefit us. He came to see me; it was an act of courtesy, and I was glad to receive him. I had much to say to him; but just as I was beginning my discourse he interrupted me by calling in his brother, in order to present him to me. After that, I had no further opportunity of speaking privately with him. I did not find that the young Emperor resembled his late father, whom I personally knew and liked, and with whom I have conversed for more than an hour at a stretch. He was a wise and good Prince, very well read (molto istruito), intelligent, and large-minded. His manners were perfect. What he said was always full of good sense and kindness."

"With regard to our modus vivendi with Germany, in many respects I have good reason to be satisfied. From the German Government I have obtained many valuable concessions. Bismarck is a reasonable man; he can be convinced, and I have found him willing to accede to just requests. His son, too, who had a long audience of me on the evening of the 17th, seems very sensible and earnest. With our Episcopacy and clergy in Germany all is going smoothly and satisfactorily. The vacant offices has been properly filled up with the accord of Church and State alike, and to the contentment of both. Of our religious orders which had been expelled from Germany, three have been authorised to return to their spheres of duty—the Franciscans, Dominicans, and Benedictines. We are in negotiation about the withdrawal of the prohibitions affecting our educational orders; but there is great difficulty. The German Government desires to keep in its own hands the exclusive instruction of Catholic children. To this I cannot consent. The teaching rights of the Church must be recognised, and their exercise must be duly authorised by the State. With less than this I may not be satisfied; and, as you know, when the Pope is dissatisfied the Catholics are discontented. In the German Empire there are fifteen millions of Catholics, whose wishes and feelings must be respected, it being the interest of their temporal rulers to keep them contented. When civil authority is righteously exercised it is always supported by the Church. As the head of the Church I cannot countenance injustice done to those who are committed to my care, and whom I am bound to protect and defend."

The correspondent adds that the conversation lasted twenty minutes, his Holiness being fully aware of his interlocutor's purpose, and no restriction whatsoever being imposed as to the publication of anything:—

"In manner, as well as appearance, the reigning Pontiff offers a striking and in more than one respect advantageous contrast to his immediate predecessor, Pius IX., of whom, during his long Pontificate, I twice had audience. The late Pope, when I knew him, was a vigorous old man of burly presence and jovial manner, liking to question rather than to be questioned, and displaying a marked predilection for 'le petit mot pour rire'—of his own saying, of course, for what layman would dare to make jokes or even say 'good things' to a Pope? That Leo XIII. is one of the most amiable as well as intellectual of living potentates no one who has seen him smile and heard him speak can doubt. But consciousness of power and strength of will are no less manifest in the glance of his bright eye and the tone of his clear voice than his geniality of temperament."

At the Pope's reception of some Neapolitan pilgrims on Wednesday he delivered a long speech, in which, after reiterating former condemnations of the Italian Government, and stating that the hatred of all the foes of the Papal see was concentrated in Rome, he said:—

"In this city they do not hesitate to confirm [by new insults even on solemn occasions the usurpations and violence which are within the remembrance of the whole world, degrading Rome to the simple position of the capital of a kingdom while God predestined it to be the see of the Vicar of Christ, and it shall ever remain the capital of the Catholic world."

The Pope concluded by expressing his perfect faith in the triumph of his cause, but appealed to the pilgrims to support it. It has, however, been explained by the Osservatore that the above complaints were not meant to refer to the Emperor William.

THE EASTERN COUNTIES' GUILD.

This Society assembled at Lynn, on Saturday, October 27th, for its Quarterly meeting. There were present nine members of the Spalding branch of the Society, with the Rev. Canon Moore, president, the Rev. J. M. Coates, Secretary, and Mr. R. Mackman, captain; four from Pinchbeck, with Mr. G. Sadd, captain; five Walpole, Mr. H. Hill, captain; five Terrington, Dr. Seccombe, captain; and nine Lynn, Mr. G. Holland, captain. During the day the men rang touches of Bob Major, with 8th and tenor covering, and of Grandsire Triples, upon St. Margaret's bells; and 360 Bob Minor, London Single, Oxford Treble Bob, Bob Minor, and Grandsire Doubles at St. Nicholas. Several touches of Oxford Treble Bob Major and Bob Major were rung on the handbells, conducted by Mr. E. Lockwood. The visitors also inspected the various places of public interest in the town, and the whole of the local arrangements were ably carried out under the direction of Mr. G. Holland. At two o'clock the members of the Guild, together with a few friends, in all about forty, assembled at the ringers' well-known old house of call, "The Three Pigeons," St. James's Street, where host Borley served them with an excellent hot dinner. The room was decorated with flags and appropriate mottoes, and the tables with cut flowers. The Rev. Canon Moore presided, and was supported by the Rev. J. M. Coates, Dr. Seccombe, Messrs. E. M. Beloe, C. H. Ayre, W. G. Cross, R. Mackman, G. Holland, etc.

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing the toast of "The Church and Queen," said he was sure they would accept it as of the first importance that afternoon. The people of this country had now a Church which was esteemed and beloved. It had recovered from that state of lethargy which overswept it some fifty years ago, and since then nothing, according to his estimate, had advanced in proportion to the Church. In every respect he believed she was superior now to what she was fifty years ago. In proof, he not only pointed to her buildings, but to the fact that she had at heart what those buildings indicated. Bell-ringing by companies of men like those whom he saw present was one proof of the advance which was being made by the Church, and if she progressed in bell-ringing and in her buildings, they had no right to suppose that she was behind in other matters. He believed that in every respect the Church was advancing more than the times, and he trusted that at least she would always maintain the position she now held. With regard to the Queen, no doubt they were all familiar with her great virtues. The people of this kingdom had never enjoyed such a period of happiness and prosperity as during the fifty years that Her Majesty had occupied the throne of England. He trusted that she would long continue to reign over us, and that her successors might be as prosperous as she had been. He asked all present to drink heartily to the old toast of "The Church and the Queen." In former times, scarcely was there a public meeting when this toast did not rank first on the list, and he trusted that the members of that Association would never live to see it passed over.

DR. SECCOMBE said they had very little time for swinging animated clappers, because they wanted to get to the iron clappers and to swing them. There was one toast which he would propose and which he was sure every one present would accept with the greatest heartiness, it was the health of the father of that Guild, Mr. Lockwood. Some of them knew how long he had been one of the foremost ringers of this town. He represented many generations and he was the oldest amongst them that day. Mr. Lockwood was now eighty years of age, and it was not long ago that he took part in some ringing in which he (Dr. Seccombe) did his share, at St. Margaret's and St. Nicholas. The toast was drunk with "three times three."

MR. LOCKWOOD, in returning thanks, said he had been a ringer at St. Margaret's for forty-eight years. When he commenced there was a very good company; he regretted to say it was different now. He remembered assisting to ring a dumb peal upon the occasion of the death of the Duke of Wellington. They rang 1852 changes, according to the date of the year, and the touch was performed in eighty-three minutes, the age of the Iron Duke. Upon that occasion Mr. W. Hamerton conducted. He also assisted in ringing dumb peals for Lord George Bentinck, Lord Jocelyn, and the Prince Consort. There were only two or three ringers now living who were with him when the peal was rung for the Duke. He had not been well for some time, but his doctor had given him leave to spend a few hours with them that day, and he was pleased to have the opportunity. Last Christmas he took in hand the training of some young men for St. Nicholas' chapel bells, but since then the company had been considerably interfered with by removals, some having gone to America. They had lost half-a-dozen young men, and it was very hard to get others to fill their places. He could not do much more than he had done, but as long as he lived he would always do his best.

MR. R. MACKMAN said he had been asked to propose a resolution which perhaps might be surprising to many. It was this:

"That the members of the Eastern Counties' Guild of Change-Ringers, assembled at King's Lynn, desire most respectfully to offer their patron, the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, an expression of their sympathy with him under the vexatious persecution to which he has been subjected with respect to his manner of conducting Divine Service. Also their hope and belief that the spirit of intolerance which has been manifested of late is not widely prevalent among intelligent working men."

MR. W. G. CROSS said he had pleasure in seconding the proposition. The more they knew of the Lord Bishop of Lincoln the more they would regard him as a hard-working Christian gentleman. If a clergyman in his diocese was in difficulties the Bishop looked well after him and did his utmost to assist him out of his trouble. He was sorry that the prosecution was being proceeded with, and trusted that in the end an amicable settlement would be arrived at.

DR. SECCOMBE, in supporting the proposition, said they were met together as a company of Church workers. He thought they had a right to come forward and take their part in any subject which dealt with the interests of the Church. He could not allow a resolution like that which had been introduced to the meeting to pass over without his making a few remarks, and in doing so he would only state certain facts which would commend themselves to any one who had his senses about him. He regretted to say that he was living in a district where things relating to the Church were dead. If they wanted to see a healthy Church in his locality he hardly knew which way to look. He could assure the meeting that hardly a Sunday passed without the infliction of a pang, when he noticed the way in which the Church existed in this diocese. If they only crossed the river Nene and went into the adjoining county of Lincoln, they would at once see a difference. In his locality dissent was all alive, and it was not surprising that it should be so. He was a thorough Churchman, and his interests were bound up with the Church. Were they to allow her to remain dead? No. They had to thank God for the great enthusiasm which had been infused into the Church in various parts of the country, and especially in the diocese of Lincoln, during the last fifty years. Before the selection of the present Bishop, the diocese was controlled by the able, learned and pious Bishop Wordsworth, who prepared the work which was now being carried out by the present prelate of that see. The Bishop of Lincoln was a working man first—not a dummy, but a true prelate in every sense of the title—a Christian man and a Christian gentleman. Upon one occasion when a convict was under sentence of death in the castle at Lincoln, the poor fellow sought the ministrations of some clergyman, and what did the Bishop do? Did he send a delegate? No; he went himself, ministered to the man, administered to him the Holy Communion, and continued with him until the death sentence was carried out. He (Dr. Seccombe) did not know of another instance where a Bishop of the Church of England had ministered to an ordinary man under the sentence of death. It might be that there were some, but he was not aware of them. It shewed what sort of man the Bishop of Lincoln was. Wherever he went he manifested a kindly disposition towards all classes—the working man, the peer and the squire. That was the kind of man required to rule the Church. They wanted a man who was in sympathy with the people and who felt that the Church was the first interest of the day. There was no man in the church of England who would be more opposed to setting the law in motion against any of his clergy than the Bishop of Lincoln, unless it were in a case of moral delinquency. In any case of disputed opinion, his lordship would certainly be the last to move the law.

There were connected with the Church of England a class of men who called themselves its members, and who, unless they could have everything their own way, would do their best to create disorder. Many years ago he heard two men arguing in Salisbury about the difference between Roman Catholics and Methodists. The Romanist contended that his church never could do wrong, and the Methodist argued that his never did. He did not know whether the Church of England could go wrong or not; at any rate there was a class of people who professed to be her members, who contended that, like the Holy Father of Rome, they are infallible, and that it was their duty to put everything right. He did not like to be trampled underfoot by such people. The Bishop of Lincoln had expressed his determination to go on in his own way—in a way which, after much consideration, he evidently thought to be best. But there was a certain class of people who would interfere with him and other church-workers, and unless they could have their own way they would do their best to pull the Church to pieces. The resolution was one of sympathy with the Bishop of Lincoln, the patron of their society, and he trusted that all who belonged to the Church of England would stand up for that noble man as long as he lived.

The CHAIRMAN said he had had interviews with the Bishop of Lincoln, and could speak of him as a thorough man, a thorough Christian and a thorough bishop.

Dr. SECCOMBE proposed a vote of thanks to the vicar and churchwardens of St. Margaret's and St. Nicholas' for their kindness in allowing the bells to be used by the ringers that day. Their gratitude was also due to the venerable chairman for presiding over their meeting.

The CHAIRMAN seconded the vote of thanks to the vicar and churchwardens, and said it was gratifying to see the nice order in which the bells were kept.

Mr. BELOE returned thanks on behalf of the churchwardens, and expressed his regret that Mr. Burkitt was not present with them that day. He thought he ought to have been there. They had a nice peal of bells at St. Margaret's, which, by the liberality of Mr. Burkitt, had recently been made up to 10. St. Nicholas' had also a very good peal, and these had been placed there during his (Mr. Beloe's) wardenship and taken care of by Sir Lewis Jarvis and himself.

The CHAIRMAN having acknowledged the compliment paid him, the meeting ended, and the members of the guild repaired to St. Margaret's belfry, and there indulged in more change-ringing. The visitors left Lynn by the evening trains, well pleased with their excursion.

ST. PAUL'S HANDBELL RINGERS, CANTERBURY.

At a special meeting of the above body, held on Friday, November 2nd, it was decided to re-organise the same, and the following gentlemen consented to accept the various offices assigned to them: Rev. L. G. Goodwin, President; Mr. R. Goodbourn, Conductor; Mr. Geo. H. Bowden, Hon. Sec. and Treasurer. It is hoped that this band will be able to accomplish and record in these columns some of the intrigues of change-ringing, for which reason it is revived and hoped strengthened by new and young members. Several touches were attempted during the evening, and two 120's of Grandsire Doubles were successfully brought round.

GETTING READY FOR WINTER.—The return to health of muscle, mind, and nerve, after a summer holiday that has not been judiciously spent, must also be gradual, if one would not find the winter rapidly approaching, and feel himself but ill able to face its storms and changeableness. So I advise that, on a return to work, you—at some very calm moment, early in the morning, perhaps, before you have turned out of bed—quietly think of the labours that are before you in the coming busy months, and consider how you may most easily get through them. Make some plan, adopt a system of spending the day, especially the leisure hours thereof. Do not be in the least degree excited about your state or condition, although you may not feel as strong as you could wish. Health is sure to come if you keep calm.—A Family Doctor, in Cassell's Family Magazine for November.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

AN EXCELLENT PROPOSAL.

SIR,—I see in last week's number of "THE BELL NEWS," a letter by the Rev. C. D. P. Davies, touching on an idea, which, I for one have a long time been waiting for. I speak as the mouthpiece of the many ringers in the district of Oxford, who almost all agree as to the necessity of such an institution as this gentleman proposes. It would, as he says, solve the question of the National Association, mooted some time since. Why should we be without a Benefit Society? With the thousands of ringers in the country, I should think it would very soon become a strong institution. Here is the Oxford Guild alone with nigh upon 1000 members, and many are the ringers therein who would gladly avail themselves of the opportunity to belong to a benefit society of change-ringers. Let us pull together and make some effort to start such an institution, and I am sure the various gentlemen of our Exercise will, like Mr. Davies, do their best to help such a brotherly scheme into existence. J. W. WASHBROOK.

SALISBURY, WILTS.

The marriage of Mr. E. H. Hulse, M.P., for the Borough of Salisbury, with Miss Edith M. W. Lawson, was celebrated at Beaconsfield, on the 1st inst. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Cholmeley assisted by the Lord Bishop of Salisbury, and Hon. and Rev. Canon Gordon. The following ringing was done in Salisbury in honour of the wedding: the bells of St. Thomas', St. Edmund's, and St. Martin's Churches rang at intervals during the day, in honour of the wedding. HINDLIP, WORCESTERSHIRE

Special services were held at Hindlip Church, recently, on the occasion of the re-opening of the sacred edifice which has been closed since Easter for the purpose of restoration and enlargement. The work, which has cost several thousand pounds, has been carried out by the Dowager Lady Hindlip and her sons and daughters as a memorial to the late Lord Hindlip, who was for many years a worshipper in the church. The deceased nobleman always took a deep interest in the sacred edifice, which was originally built in the fifteenth century. Through his liberality it was thoroughly restored in 1864, and a transeptal chapel added on the south side for the accommodation of the family. Some splendid stained glass windows were also presented by his lordship. The additions and alterations just completed have been of such extensive character, and executed with such excellent taste that it is almost a new and certainly a very beautiful little church that was re-opened recently. Of the old building the only important part left standing is the fifteenth century tower. The extension has been designed to harmonise with the decorated style of the old church. It has comprised a new chancel, new south aisle to the chancel, and a new vestry, and organ chamber combined. The new chancel, it should be stated, is intended to be a memorial of the late Mrs. J. S. Chesshire, wife of the rector. The extension is in Bromsgrove stone, the material of the old building. The roofs are of oak, panelled and with carved bosses at the intersections of the ribs, and covered with tiles. The floors of the church are of marble mosaic, that in the sanctuary being composed of marble tiles supplied by Messrs. de Grelle, of London. The steps to the chancel and to the aisle are of Devonshire marble of four kinds. The nave benches and the choir are of English oak. The south aisle of the chancel is separated from the latter by an arcade of two arches filled in with finely carved oak screens. On the north side of the chancel there are two similar arches into which a few organ has been fitted, the handsome case which encloses the instrument, being designed to harmonise with the screens on the opposite side. On the choir stalls are placed brass desks of very good workmanship, supplied by Singer and Sons, of Frome, who also supplied the brass standards for the altar rail. The chancel screen is a very fine specimen of Italian marble work. Each side is divided into five bays, and the panels are filled in with onyx. Mr. Henry Martin, of Cheltenham, has executed all the sculptor's work, and also supplied the marble steps and the chancel screen. A very handsome altar cloth with ornaments has been provided. The tower is to be provided with a peal of eight bells and chiming apparatus complete. The church is lighted by gas furnished from the private gas works at Hindlip Hall. The heating is by a hot water medium pressure small bore pipe apparatus, supplied by Mr. Stainton, of Liverpool. The church will now contain seats for 138 persons, being forty more than before enlargement. Mr. Lewis Shepherd, of Worcester, has been the architect, and Mr. Collins of Tewkesbury, the builder.

In addition to the chancel already mentioned, the church contains special memorials of the late Mrs. Chesshire. The font, which is of Norman design, has been restored by her children and placed on a marble mosaic base, bearing the inscription, "The promise is unto you and your children." The reredos, the subject illustrated in which is the Last Supper has been restored and improved by the addition of a canopy and carved panels. This work was undertaken by Mrs. Swindell and Mrs. Pargeter, sisters of Mrs. Chesshire. Mr. Chesshire has placed a stained glass window, dedicated to the memory of his wife, in the south aisle. It is called "The Holy Women Window," and the illustration give examples of different female virtues—piety and humility, the active and contemplative life, the power of prayer, and the reward of faith and hope. There are five lights in the window. In the tracery is St. Ann teaching the Virgin. In the dexter light is Elizabeth the priest's wife meeting the Virgin: and on the other side Anna, an example of prayer. Below there is an illustration of the active and contemplative life in the figures of Martha and Mary; and the recognition of our Lord in Paradise illustrated by the meeting of Mary Magdalene and the Saviour in the garden. Appropriate texts are introduced at the top "Her children shall rise up and call her blessed," beneath the first two subjects "Blessed are the Pure in Heart, for they shall see God," connecting the other two illustrations, "His servants shall serve Him and they shall see His Face," and at the base "The heart of her husband does safely trust in her." In the chancel are two new stained glass windows dedicated by the Hindlip family to the memory of Mrs. Chesshire. The subjects of the illustrations are taken from the first and last verses of Cardinal Newman's hymns, "Lead kindly Light," In the first window on the left hand side of the altar, there is a representation of pilgrims walking through the desert led by the light of God's presence, priests bearing the ark, the symbol of His presence. In the second window are angels announcing the return of the Lord bringing the saints with Him. Two brass tablets described with the first and last verses of the hymn respectively, are placed one under each window.

At the opening service there were present: the Bishop of Worcester, the Dean of Worcester, Dr. Gott, the Ven. Archdeacon Lea, the Rev. J. Canon Claughton, the Rev. S. Chesshire, the rector of Hindlip, the Rev. Canon W. W. Douglas, the Revs. Dr. Quilter, J. L. Chesshire, A. S. Porter, T. G. Cutler, T. Littleton Wheeler, E. J. Houghton, S. G. Collier, and J. Amphlett. The congregation included the Dowager Lady Hindlip, and members of her family. A beautifully printed book of the service was presented to each person present. The Ven. Archdeacon Lea and the Dean read the lessons, the Rector said the prayers, and the sermon was preached by the Bishop. The hymns were, "We love the place O God," "The Church's one foundation," and "Lift the strain of high thanksgiving." Mr. Goldsmith (a pupil of Mr. C. H. Lloyd, of Christ Church, Oxford), the newly appointed organist of the church, presided at the organ. In future the musical portion of the services will be greatly improved, and the new choir includes several Worcester vocalists whose services have been secured through the agency of Mr. E. J. Spark, and who will attend at Hindlip each Sunday. It is understood that the additional expenses in connection with the services will be defrayed by the Hindlip family.

At the close of the morning services a large number of guests were entertained at luncheon at Hindlip Hall. There were present, in addition to the Dowager Lady Hindlip, Colonel the Hon. W. H. Allsopp, M.P., and Mrs. Allsopp, the Hon. G. S. Allsopp, M.P., the Hon. Percy Allsopp, M.P., the Hon. H. T. Allsopp, the Hon. F. E. Allsopp, the Hon. Mrs. Walker, the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Haywood, the Hon. Mrs. O'Keever, Miss O'Keever, Miss Norbury, Mrs. Oliver, Miss Higginson, Mrs. Philpott, Mrs. Gott, Mrs. Claughton, Sir D. and Lady Galton, Miss Galton, Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. Sale, Mr. and Mrs. Ames, Mr. Spark, Miss Chesshire, Mr. R. S. P. Chesshire, Miss L. M. Chesshire, Mrs. Gillott, Mr. and Mrs. Swindell, Mrs. Pargeter, Miss Pargeter, Mrs. Castle, Miss Castle, Mr. N. Castle, Mrs. Quilter, Mrs. Porter, Mrs. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Hughes, Colonel and Mrs. Stallard, Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. Winfield, Miss Amphlett, Mr. Woodhouse, Mr. W. Haynes, Mr. Lewis Sheppard, Mr. Gerrard, Mr. Barker, Mr. Masen, Mr. and Mrs. Rich, Miss Topping, and Mr. Wheeler.

There was a crowded congregation at the evening service. The prayers were read by the rector, and the Rev. E. J. Houghton read the lesson. There was no sermon. The psalms were rendered to chants by C. H. Lloyd. The processional hymn was "Onward Christian Soldiers," sung to Sullivan's well known tune; and after the third collect the hymn "Ten thousand times ten thousand," was sung. At the close of the service a selection of music was rendered by the organist and the choir, the vocal portions including Meadelssohn's "If with all your hearts" sung by Mr. R. Bradley, and "O Lord God of Abraham," sung by Mr. Pedley, both now permanent members of the choir.

AN UNSELFISH CITY ARAB.—Lord Ashley (afterwards the Earl of Shaftesbury, once told the House of Commons a touching story of the hardships of the "gutter children." He knew a boy, he said, who spent the greater part of his nights throughout the bitter winter in 1847 inside the iron roller in Regent's Park! Every evening this lad used to climb over the railings, and creep into the curious shelter which he had found from the biting blast. And then Lord Ashley went on to show how kind the very poorest are to one another.—From "Little Folks" Magazine for November.

THE ANCIENT SOCIETY OF COLLEGE YOUTHS.

THE ANCIENT SOCIETY OF COLLEGE YOUTHS celebrated their 251st Anniversary at the Bridge House Hotel, London Bridge, on Saturday evening, November 3rd. A first-class dinner was provided, and the complete arrangements made and carried out under the guidance of the Dinner Committee, was a credit to everyone concerned, no stone having been left unturned to make the comfort of those present perfect. It is to be hoped that the revival of the custom of holding the anniversary in such a manner will upon future occasions be still further better supported, and that the event may not be allowed to lapse. Mr. Woodley, the energetic Secretary, was well supported by the whole of the officers in giving a hearty welcome, and watching the comfort of all, and it is an undoubted fact that the success of the gathering is due to the hearty way in which the whole of the officers worked together. Members of the society, in fact any ringer who can possibly do so, should not, upon a future occasion, fail to attend if he desires to lose the opportunity of spending a delightful pleasant evening in the company of a genial body of ringers. The company present included Mr. S. E. Joyce (chairman), Master; Messrs. G. T. McLaughlin (vice-chairman), J. Pettit (Treasurer), R. T. Woodley (Secretary), G. Mash, sen., G. Mash, jun., R. Mash, W. Cooter, H. Springall (Junior Steward), F. E. Dawe, J. R. Haworth, —. Murphy, T. Coxhead, W. E. Garrard, J. W. Driver, H. Langdon, J. M. Hayes, C. F. Winny, E. Duff, W. Tyack, W. D. Smith, Lewis Green, A. S. Barrell, —. Cartwright, —. Harvey (St. James'), Bermondsey, G. Smith, Mead and Mumford (Ilford), C. Blackman (Arundel), B. Keeble (Essex Association), Romford, Messrs. Ludlow, Adams, and Trubb, and Messrs. H. S. Thomas, W. Baron, W. D. Porter, and H. A. Hopkins (Royal Cumberland Youths), etc.

Ample justice having been done to the excellent bill of fare provided,

The MASTER, who upon rising to commence the toast list was loudly applauded, said that in every company of Englishman the first toast to be honoured was that of the Queen. On the present occasion, they would add to the toast of Her Majesty, that of the rest of the Royal Family. As ringers, they were all loyal subjects, and he was sure that no words were necessary for the toast to be fully honoured by them all.

The toast having been duly pledged, and a verse of the National Anthem sang,

The VICE-CHAIRMAN, who gave "Prosperity to the Ancient Society of College Youths," said this was a toast which had been entrusted to him, and one which he was not sure that he could do justice to. He considered it a great honour for the toast to be put into his hand for proposing, and to be so well supported by some of the oldest members of the society. They as ringers were all members of some society, and whatever society it might be, they should endeavour to respect it. They should not only do so toward their own particular society, but they should respect other societies, as he was pleased to know the Ancient Society of College Youths was respected. Prosperity to the College Youths was a toast which he had pleasure in proposing, a pleasure which was increased by the fact that he was enabled to couple with the toast the name of Mr. J. R. Haworth, who he believed was the oldest living member of the society.

A stirring recitation by Mr. F. E. Dawe (who happens to be an enthusiastic auxiliary fireman), entitled "The Fireman's Wedding."

Mr. HAWORTH said he was pleased to be among them again, and to be able to respond to the toast. This was the 251st anniversary of the society, the 250th or fifteenth Jubilee having been celebrated last year. As to the society, everyone knew that it was known throughout the ringing world, and promoted sociability and geniality among all ringers. He rang his first peal in 1844, and another in 1884, so he supposed he was getting on. He was very pleased to be called upon to acknowledge the toast, and trusted that prosperity would not only attend the College Youths, but all ringing societies.

Song—"Dream of the Albert Hall."—The Chairman.

Mr. W. D. SMITH in proposing the Officers of the Society and the Dinner Committee, said whenever he had had the pleasure of meeting the officers of the society, he had found them very active in conducting the business of the society, and so far as he had observed, had given entire satisfaction. The arrangements for the dinner could not have been carried out without considerable trouble, and the great credit was due to the Committee. With the toast he would couple the name of Mr. Woodley, the energetic Hon. Sec. of the Society.

Song—"Eads in red."—Mr. Porter.

Mr. WOODLEY, in responding, said he considered that there were other members of the society present, that could have better responded to that which might justly be termed the toast of the evening. As he had however been entrusted to respond on behalf of the society, he could but do his best. No doubt some of those present would like to know what the society had done during the past twelve months. It might be thought by some that they had not done anything very particular. Well they had rung peals up to the present Tuesday evening to the tune of seventy-three, and during the year elected fifty-nine members, which he believed on Tuesday would be increased by an additional five. As to the finances, he was not in a position to say exactly what they were before next Tuesday, but he could assure them that such were in a flourishing condition. As to the officers of the society, as their mouthpiece it was a pleasure for him to say that they had been well supported by the worthy Master, and he might also add by the stewards. With respect to the Dinner Committee, it so happened that he was away just at the time when he should have been at home. It would however be satisfactory to learn that the dinner arrangements had all been carried out in a manner which met with the approval of those present. He would thank them one and all, and the toast of the officers and also for the Dinner Committee, as he knew that all would be gratified.

Mr. F. E. DAWE said it was suggested that as he sometimes went "steeple-chasing," that he should propose "The Provincial Members." It was no doubt easier to travel about now than it was a few years back, for the railways give us much greater facilities for doing so. He was not however the only one that went about, for their Hon. Sec. had been doing something in that line, and had been away. Yet strange to say they did not manage to be in the same districts. He had rung in 460 towers, and had, as a matter of course, met some of the best and worst of the ringers. The majority ring very well, but he preferred the abilities of the London men, being more at home among them. He had rung in all the noted "hot beds" of Stedman and Treble Bob, with peals that were faultless from first to last, all of which he was proud of. He was bound to say that at the greater number of places visited, north, east, south and west, he had received the greatest kindness and attention, from many of the country ringers, who seemed never to grow weary of doing their "level best" to oblige a visitor—no matter who he was, so long as he was able to ring and behave himself reasonably. In return he was quite certain that the London men were equally energetic in attending to the wants and wishes of those who honoured them from time to time with a "look up," but as everyone knew perfectly well, although there were so many towers in and about the metropolis, it was a matter of the greatest difficulty possible to obtain the use of the bells for peal ringing, owing to so many business premises, hospitals, etc., being in close proximity. Intending visitors should give as much notice as they could to the Secretary, but if it were possible to arrange so that they came in two's and three's instead of one's, and as near as possible about the same time, it would be much better, for at present it existed very nearly forty-eight weeks out of the fifty-two. People often after a banquet, or similar occasions, said what they did not mean, but all he was saying he did mean. He was glad (although he had hopes of seeing more) to see so many there, and pleased to be amongst them and trusted to be present at many more such meetings, and to see the same faces with additional ones. Many of his grandest achievements and happiest hours had been spent amongst ringers.

The toast was acknowledged by Messrs. Mead and Mumford, of Ilford, and Mr. Blackman, of Arundel.

Handbell Performance—a course of Grandsire Cinques. W. Baron, 1-2; G. T. McLaughlin, 3-4; W. Cooter, 5-6; H. Hopkins, 7-8; C. F. Winny, 9-10; R. T. Woodley, 11-12.

Mr. WOODLEY, who proposed "The London and Provincial Ringing Societies," said there were many other ringing societies in existence. Whenever members of the Ancient Society of College Youths met them, they were received with great cordiality. There is one society which might be termed an opposition one, and known as the Cumberland Youths. They were good ringers and good fellows. There was one present in the room—he referred to Mr. Thomas, of Battersea—who was a jolly good fellow and a good ringer, and one who won respect from all he met.

Mr. THOMAS, in responding, said he was very pleased to think that his name had been associated with the toast of that of other societies. If at any time any of the members could give the company at Battersea a visit, they would be welcomed. He wished to thank the Committee for the kind invitation to be present at the dinner; he had thoroughly enjoyed himself, and trusted that upon any occasion when they had a social gathering or meeting at which they could admit visitors, they would not forget to send him an invite.

The MASTER, in proposing "The Clergy," said they found the clergy at all times ready and willing to do whatever they could for the society in granting the use of towers, or otherwise, and the society was thus much indebted to them.

Mr. COOTER, in proposing "The Press," referred to his early ringing career, when it was the custom to record performances in Bell's Life, that was provided that no great racing event or the science of fists going on, if so, ringing did not find a corner. At the present day they had a journal which devoted its columns to ringing, and one which gave them part of its pages. This was a great change, for thus it was that ringing performances were sent wherever the English tongue was spoken.

A very sensational recitation was next given by Mr. F. E. DAWE, entitled "In the Signal Box."

Mr. B. KEEBLE (Romford), whose name was coupled with the toast, in responding, referred to the springing up of Associations and Guilds, some of which, as in the case of the Essex Association had been brought into existence through members of the society. The time appeared to have arrived when the Exercise was deserving of a journal, and he trusted the day was not far distant when there would be sufficient ringing information to fill double the number of pages which "THE BELL NEWS" now had, and that the Exercise would come forward with the determination to support it.

The Proprietors of the Bridge House Hotel, proposed by the Vice-Chairman, concluded the list. In addition to the names mentioned above, songs were sung by Messrs. W. D. Smith, G. Smith, Woodley, McLaughlin, Tyack, Hopkins, Murphy, and Duff, etc.

During the afternoon four courses of Stedman Caters were rung at St. Michael's, Cornhill. J. Pettit (conductor), 1; E. Horrex, 2; G. T. McLaughlin, 3; J. Barry, 4; C. F. Winny, 5; H. Springall, 6; A. S. Barrell, 7; S. E. Joyce, 8; R. T. Woodley, 9; H. Alford, 10. At the meeting-house previous to the dinner, a course of Grandsire Caters was rung. J. W. Driver, 1-2; S. E. Joyce, 3-4; G. T. McLaughlin, 5-6; C. F. Winny, 7-8; R. T. Woodley, 9-10.

PAINSWICK, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

The above society have been presented by Mr. A. Estcourt, of Gloucester, with a peal of thirteen handbells in case, all complete, in recognition of their perseverance in again being able to ring a peal, entirely composed of local men, which was rang in March last. They were rang for the first time on Monday, November 5th, when some Triples and Doubles were rang, and tunes, which gave great satisfaction. All the ringers are extremely pleased with the present, as they did not possess a peal, and their heartiest thanks were given to Mr. Estcourt, son of the late William Estcourt, for his great kindness to them, trusting to again soon be able to achieve another peal to show their gratitude for his kindness. The form of presentation and date is inscribed on the tenor bell.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROSSENDALE BRANCH.

The next Ringing Meeting of the above Branch will take place on Saturday, November 10th, at the parish church, Newchurch. Bells ready at 2.30; meeting in the School at 6.30.

EARDISLEY, HEREFORDSHIRE.

The tower of the above church has been amalgamated with the Hereford Guild of bell ringers. It contains a peal of five bells, which were cast by Rudhall, at Gloucester, in 1708. Tenor 9 cwt. The rector, the rev. C. S. Palmer, is an hon. member, and a company of about sixteen young men have joined the movement in favour of change-ringing. A set of handbells for the use of this company was kindly purchased by the rector, who will probably increase the tower bells to six, early in the coming year. Previous to the instructor's visit, this company only rang rounds, their first steps in the method commenced on the 18th October.

THE HORNSEY GUILD.

On Wednesday, October 31st, at the parish church, on the occasion of the marriage of Mr. W. Mosley, to Miss E. Aylem, of Ashfield House, Hornsey, the following members rang several 120's of Grandsire Doubles and two 720's of Plain Bob Minor, in 27 and 27½ mins respectively. L. Swift, 1; J. Ward (first 720 on a bob bell), 2; W. Dixon, 3; A. Howell, 4; J. Hannington (conductor), 5; G. Griffin, 6. Tenor 17½ cwt. These are the first 720's accomplished by the above Guild. Great credit is due to the captain, Mr. George Griffin for the able manner in which he has conducted the business of the Guild since its formation, also for his kindness and amiability to all members and visitors.

EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE.

The Conference assembled on Wednesday last, under the auspices of the National Society, to consider the report of the Royal Commission on Education, resumed and concluded its business at the Society's Rooms, Broad Sanctuary, Westminster, the Archbishop of Canterbury occupying the chair. Amongst those supporting his Grace upon the platform were the Dean of Chester, Lord Norton, Lord Addington, Sir F. Sandford, and Canon Gregory.

LORD NORTON moved, and the Dean of Chester seconded—
"That the recommendations of the Commission for the amendment of the existing law relating to the transfer of voluntary schools to School Boards be approved."

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The Dean of Chester moved, and Canon Machre seconded:—
"That this Conference, while generally supporting the recommendations of the Commission with regard to school staff and pupil-teachers, desires especially to affirm the importance of the value of untrained teachers not being altogether excluded from the profession. The minimum staff required by the code should be considerably raised; head-teachers should teach and not only supervise; the pupil-teacher system should be upheld; pupil-teachers should be allowed more time during school hours for their own studies, and the instruction received from the head-teacher should be supplemented by central-class teaching in the compulsory and additional subjects. Extra Government grants should be given for this purpose. With regard to the mode of paying the salaries of teachers, the Conference is of opinion that it should be left a matter of arrangement between the managers and teachers, but that it is desirable that the salaries of the teachers should not be to any great extent dependent on the grant."

 Correspondents who both this week and last have not received replies to their communications through the post, are informed that the reason for delay is the dangerous illness of the Editor of this paper. He was compelled to take to his bed last Sunday week, from which he has not yet risen, only for a very brief interval. His illness will no doubt keep him in bed another fortnight at least, and correspondents will we hope wait a little longer, at any rate till he is convalescent, when their inquiries shall be attended to.

GETTING READY FOR WINTER.—The return to health of muscle, mind, and nerve, after a summer holiday that has not been judiciously spent, must also be gradual, if one would not find the winter rapidly approaching, and feel himself but ill able to face its storms and changeableness. So I advise that, on a return to work, you—at some very calm moment, early in the morning, perhaps, before you have turned out of bed—quietly think of the labours that are before you in the coming busy months, and consider how you may most easily get through them. Make some plan, adopt some system of spending the day, especially the leisure hours thereof. Do not be in the least degree excited about your state or condition, although you may not feel as strong as you could wish. Health is sure to come if you keep calm. On the other hand, if you worry over matters, depend upon it that you only make matters worse.—A Family Doctor, in "Cassell's Family Magazine" for November.

THE RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF THE UPPER CLASSES.

A correspondent of the Guardian, writes as follows:—Sir, We are in the midst of much talk about the religious education of our elementary scholars; the question will make or mar some chances of election to the London School Board presently; it will certainly be soon again among the warmest Parliamentary debates.

But is it not time that we should give a little thought, too, to the question of the religious education of the children of the upper classes?

The present condition of religion among the young ladies and gentlemen of the world must make any one who looks at it anxious. Without reaching widely we may note the attendance at church, other than a formal once on Sunday; the observance of the remainder of that day; the level of personal morality accepted as sufficient in some society; or the books read and written for the drawing-room and the club; and the question presses, What are the causes of these things?

No doubt there are many—for instance, the loss of much teaching of sacrifice and duty as a necessity in a genteel life; but, perhaps, at the root lies not agnosticism, but a kind of semi-belief. And whence does this arise?

I believe distinctly in absence of accurate religious knowledge. Old fears of Romanism still linger unexpressed, and make parents dread teaching their children definite dogma; the loose teaching of Nonconformity and of emotional religion leads others to indifference, and so it falls out that when the time comes for the children to be intrusted to the governess no questions are asked, and no careful plans made with regard to the definite teaching of religion; the father very likely is engrossed in the duties of his profession, and the mother rightly or wrongly is much occupied in the requirements of her position, and so the governess becomes the educator; she, poor lady, driven by the press of requirements to be an expert in this and that, has worked for diplomas, and is she to be blamed if she has not found time for that science of religion for which there is no diploma?

Thus, with a shadowy hold on religious knowledge (I distinguish between knowledge and feeling), the boys leave the governess and go to school. Then the case becomes daily more hopeless, the crowd of subjects become the greater, and the attention to religion is probably less. A very good house-master, or in some splendid examples his wife, takes special care. Confirmation is generally well looked after, but what can be done in the time given for that preparation.

And so our sons go, often ill-prepared as far as definite religious conviction is concerned, to meet the temptations of the University or the town, to be sent into business and plunged into the temptations of suburban life, or to be shipped abroad in search of fortune.

If any fastness of life should supervene, where shall religion flourish?

Certainly many ladies and gentlemen know as little of the history and science of the Church as when they were in the nursery, and others know less than their servants who were brought up in the national Sunday schools.

And what are the preventions—What are we to do with the children of to-day so as to bring out a generation presently with deeper convictions?

You could not give me space for many suggestions, but have we not arrived at the time when we should make a point of asking from our governesses, our preparatory schoolmasters, and our house-masters as much attention to definite instruction in religion as they give to any other branch of education?

Further, Are we not ripe for gentry Sunday-schools wherever there are two or three such families in a parish? Pray do not let my brethren of the clergy wait for perfection before they begin these. Many of us consider that the ideal is for the children of rich and poor to attend one Sunday school; but however wise or unwise this may be we shall lose a generation if we wait for it. England has traditions which America has not, and we can ignore these in theory but not in practice. Any clergyman who perseveres with such a school knows how his level of confirmation candidate rises, and what Church-workers he educates.

THE ORIGIN OF CHURCH PROPERTY.

The following extract upon this subject from an old number of the Gentleman's Magazine, has been forwarded to us for insertion:—Notwithstanding all that has been written on the subject, a great misapprehension prevails on the origin and amount of Church property, in consequence of the representation of prejudiced persons. It is constantly alleged, and very generally believed, that her revenues are enormous, and that her Clergy are overpaid; charges and opinions which are untrue and erroneous, and which a plain statement of facts will sufficiently refute.

Ascending to the early institution of Christianity in our Island, we find that the Romish Associate Missionaries sought on their arrival the protection of the Heptarchal kings and that wherever they obtained this sanction, they immediately formed a settlement. A mandate from the Pope soon erected it into a diocese, and raised the Prior to the Episcopal order. They possessed but one Church, which became the Cathedral, in the precincts of which the Monks lived together as a collegiate body, and from whence they issued out to evangelize the neighbouring country. At this period the infant establishment was supported by the voluntary offerings of humble converts; and of what was thus collected one fourth was set apart for the Bishop, one for the maintenance of the Clergy, another for the poor, and another to defray the expenses of Divine Service. The conversion of one powerful Thane after another, led to the foundation of churches on their different domains, and the retention of a resident Priesthood.

Agreeably to the practice of the Jewish Church, succeeding Barons endowed the edifices which their forefathers had erected with the tenth of their income, and different Acts of Parliament confirmed what had been thus freely granted for ecclesiastical purposes. Hence it appears, that the first dioceses, in extent, bore some resemblance to the petty sovereignty; that the manorial limits became the first boundaries of the parish; and that the tithe was the surplus of the baronial revenue.

Up to the time of the Reformation, Ecclesiastical patronage seems for the most part to have continued in the hands of these noble families. The few livings in the gift of Monasteries, the Universities, and other public bodies, were either theirs in consequence of having been founded by them, or were attached to them by the bequest of private patrons. Those in the patronage of the Crown and Bishops, were in like manner by right of endowment, or were gradually acquired through lapse or forfeiture of nomination. Circumstances attending the Reformation operated a change most unfavourable to the interests of the church. The tithes of those livings attached to the religious houses were, by a rapacious monarch, at the dissolution of these establishments, alienated and conferred on his favourites. A stipendiary was appointed under the title of Vicar; he received the minor dues, while the lay Rector enjoyed the tithe.

According to a late survey, out of 10,693 Benefices in England and Wales, 5516 are Vicarages, and 5177 are Rectories. The total revenues of these two descriptions of livings are something less than three millions and a half, while the amount of impropriated tithes is rather more than a million and three-quarters. It appears, therefore, that more than half the livings underwent this spoliation, and that lay Rectors, persons no way connected with the priesthood or its duties, receive more than a moiety of the sum divided among the parochial Clergy. From the same estimate we learn that the average value of an English benefice, is £302 and of a living in the Church of Scotland, £275.

If then, such was the origin of church property, if a third of it has been thus sequestered,—and if the average stipend is so low, it is erroneous to suppose that the beneficed clergy, as a body, are overpaid, or that the burden of maintaining them falls on the community. And supposing it did, it could not then be said to fall upon one part of the community more than upon another. Estates and farms are continually changing hands, and we know that in all purchases and leaseholds the amount of tithes, as well as of taxes, is taken into the account.

But this is not the only deprivation which the English Clergy have sustained. It has been satisfactorily proved, that a great proportion even of Incumbents labour gratuitously. Almost two-thirds of the Benefices are in the nominations of private persons, and these are usually disposed of as a species of reversionary property. The annual value of the living, the probable period of possession, and other circumstances, are all exactly calculated, and made to correspond with the interest of the purchase money. So that what these ministers receive in the form of tithes, is not the proper emolument of their office; it is but the interest of their private property laid out in a life annuity. It is the same thing if some father buys it for his son, or if some individual should purchase it for himself through a friend; in both cases the living is bought with the property, which is, or will be his own. Transactions of this nature are become so general and notorious, that their is scarcely a newspaper but what contains among its advertisements, "a next presentation to be disposed of, by public sale, or private contract." Indeed, so much business is now done in this way, that the new employment of Clerical Agent is created, and these men are usually as dextrous in setting forth all that renders the bargain desirable, "aged incumbent, excellent glebe, and sporting country," as any auctioneer. All admit that the Curates in general are not sufficiently remunerated, and that without a private fortune they could not support a respectable appearance as single men, much less bring up a family; but it would seem that the case of the above Incumbents is even harder than that of the Curates; the latter does receive £60 or £70 per annum for his services, but the former absolutely nothing.

When this system of sequestration and sale has been of such long standing, and passed through so many hands, it is as hopeless to expect that the holder of presentations should dispose of his patronage freely, as that the present lay Rector should abandon his claim to the tithes. Both may be sensible that they are in possession of what belongs to another; but as they have not acquired it by fraud, so they presume they may turn it to their own account without impeachment of their honesty. Certainly we could not expect that the tithe impropiators should be dispossessed without compensation, though in the case of Heritants it might not seem altogether out of place, if the children would, as some have nobly done, restore a part of the pelf so ill-gotten by their ancestors.

If men of character, who love the welfare of their church, reflected, they would refrain from speculations which are illegal in their nature, and mischievous in the effect. But in regard to family preferment thus disposed of, a case of greater dishonesty can hardly be produced. If a guardian runs away with the property of the helpless orphan, every bosom rises indignant at the baseness of the theft, but no one attaches the same infamy to the conduct of private patrons, who, in making this "gain of godliness," are ten thousand more times criminal. In the one case a child is destituted, but in the other the spiritual interests of thousands are left to suffer. For who does not perceive that as far as this species of patronage is concerned, we enjoy a learned and pious clergy only as family interest and personal piety happen to be united in the same individuals? For the free appointment of worthy men, the noble ancestor left provision, but his degenerate successors, in selling the living, are, not ashamed of the meanness of the robbery, nor stagger at sacrilege of the blackest description. Meritorious men may in vain look up to such persons for preferment, for what they care; the indolent or the profligate may take place of the diligent and pious; the enquiry is not which is the most deserving candidate, but which is the highest bidder. An advowson may indeed be fairly sold with the estate attached to it, but the purchaser becomes thereby possessed of the same sacred trust which the direct descendant inherited, and is bound by every moral felling to administer it aright.

But if the conduct of the vendor is thus inexcusable, the transaction must be questionable in regard to the purchasing Clergyman. It is allowed that his intention is generally honourable and disinterested. He ministers at an altar of whose offerings he does not partake; and preaches a Gospel whereof he does not live. Thus it is, that conscious of the purity of his motives in this respect, he is the less scrupulous of committing what our Ecclesiastical laws term Simony, and of subsequent perjury in disavowing it. If the oath were less explicit than it is, the subterfuge by which it is usually evaded, viz., that we did not personally pay our money for the living, could not preserve our integrity.

MIDHURST, SUSSEX.

On Saturday, October 27th, a mixed band of ringers met at the above place to attempt a peal in seven different methods on the ring of six bells at the parish church. Four of the visitors arrived at Midhurst station at 4.20. by L.B.&S.C.R., where they were met by two of the local ringers who escorted them to the fine old town, which bears an history of very ancient date. After refreshing the inner man at the coffee tavern, it not being time for the other visitor to arrive, they proceeded to the tower, and rang a 720 of Bob Minor in 23 mins. F. Arnold, 1; R. Arnold, 2; C. Tribe, 3; W. Sadler, 4; G. Batts, 5; E. Jordan (conductor), 6. They were then joined by the other two men, and a start was made for the peal, which unfortunately came to grief after ringing 720 each of Violet, and Oxford Treble Bob, in 43 minutes, through it being so noisy in the belfry, the ringers not being able to hear the conductor call the method that was to be proceeded with. J. W. Whiting (Fareham), 1; R. Arnold (Betchworth), 2; F. Arnold (Betchworth), 3; W. Sadler (Betchworth), 4; E. Jordan (Capel), 5; G. Williams, (Midhurst, conductor), 6. A 720 of Kent Treble Bob was then rung. J. W. Whiting, 1; G. Williams, 2; F. Arnold, 3; E. Jordan, 4; R. Arnold, 5; W. Sadler (conductor), 6. Also 120 of Stedman Doubles. Dr. W. H. George, 1; E. Jordan, 2; C. Tribe, 3; W. Sadler, 4; J. W. Whiting, 5; G. Batts, 6. Messrs. George, Tribe, and Batts are local men. The party then adjourned to the house of Mr. Selby, where a supper was provided for them, the Rev. J. Lodes-Cotter occupying the chair, and Dr. W. H. George, the vice-chair. The knives and forks were soon at work, and after all being well satisfied with the good things provided them, the cloth was removed, and handbells brought into requisition, and Grandsire and Stedman Triples and Treble Bob Major and Grandsire Caters was enjoyed in until a late hour.

Next morning, Sunday, being the Harvest Festival, the ringers were again at the Church, and rang before the Early Communion Service, a 720 of Grandsire Minor. C. Tribe, 1; E. Jordan, 2; J. W. Whiting, 3; F. Arnold, 4; R. Arnold, 5; W. Sadler (conductor), 6. Also before morning service, a 720 of Oxford Treble Bob. J. W. Whiting, 1; G. Williams, 2; F. Arnold, 3; E. Jordan, 4; R. Arnold, 5; W. Sadler (conductor) 6. And before the afternoon service, 1260 changes, in 39 minutes, in four different methods, being 360 each of Violet, Oxford and Kent Treble Bob, and 180 of Oxford Bob, standing in the same order as before the morning service. Also before the evening service by the local band, a 720 of Bob Minor in 25 minutes. T. Ellis, 1; W. Court, 2; C. Tribe, 3; G. Batts, 4; W. Selby, 5; G. Williams (conductor), 6. The visitors wish, through the medium of this paper, to thank their Midhurst friends for the kind hospitality they received from them, and the way in which everything was arranged to make their visit a pleasant one, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. And also they were very pleased in the way they are getting on in change-ringing, and hope before long to hear of them enjoying themselves in ringing Treble Bob, as they have pretty well mastered Bob Minor by ringing two 720's of it.

ST. MARY'S, SLOUGH, BUCKS.

An improvement to the ring of bells of this parish church will soon be effected by the erection of a new 6th bell, in lieu of the present slightly discordant one, through the generosity of F. Charsley, Esq., who has entrusted the work to Mears and Stainbank, of London. The old bell, dated 1619, will not be destroyed but will be replaced in a suitable frame in the tower of the old parish church, where it originally came from with three others some fifty years ago, to make up a ring of six. The name of Mr. Charsley will readily be remembered in connection with the addition of two trebles, thus completing the octave, a year or two back. A few more generously inclined residents are needed in many parishes where the bells are unsatisfactory. We learn that Mr. Charsley is leaving Slough and its neighbourhood for a residence in Kent. He will certainly take with him the best wishes of the present ringers of that town, and the thanks of all ringers for generations to come.

BRADFIELD, BERKS.

On Saturday afternoon, November 3rd, the St. Peter's society, Caversham, visited the above place, and attempted a peal of 5040 changes in seven different methods, but after ringing a 720 of Violet Treble Bob, 720 of Kent Treble Bob, 720 of Oxford Treble Bob, 720 of College Single, and about 350 of Canterbury Pleasure, in 1 hr. 45 mins., it came to grief, owing to the bad go of the bells, which have not been looked after as they should be, since they were rehung. The bearings were found to be very hot. H. Simmonds, 1; Rev. G. F. Coleridge, 2; E. Menday, 3; G. Essex, 4; J. Hands, 5; T. Newman (conductor), 6. After lowering the bells in peal, the Vicar entertained the ringers to tea at the vicarage, ample justice being done to the good things provided. The table was cleared, and a selection of tunes were played on the handbells by F. Simmonds, E. Menday, J. Liddiard, G. Essex, H. Simmonds, and T. Newman. The tunes were the "Spanish Chant," "Blue Bells of Scotland," "Crocus Polka," "Men of Harlech," and "Caller Herrin," and a course of Grandsire Triples. F. Simmonds, 1; H. Simmonds, 2; J. Hands, 3; E. Menday, 4; G. Essex, 5; Rev. G. F. Coleridge, 6; T. Newman, 7-8. The vicar and his family thanked the ringers for the way in which they amused them with the bells, which are about fifty in number. The ringers thanked the Vicar for the use of the church bells, and the way in which they were treated. They then started for home, which was reached after a ride of an hour and half in a brake, all well pleased with the half day's outing.

Obituary.

THOMAS CARTER.

On Friday, November 2nd, in the pretty churchyard of the parish of Twyford, Hants, there was laid to rest one of the oldest inhabitants of the village. Mr. Carter, who had been a ringer for nearly fifty years, was beloved and respected by all who knew him, and during the time that he was a ringer was regularly at his post in the belfry, and although through failing health has been prevented from taking an active part in the ringing for some time past, was always pleased to hear of the success of the other members and longed to be amongst them. He was in his 74th year, and his many good qualities had endeared him to a large circle of friends. The funeral service was performed by the Rev. C. Buston and the ringers who had followed the deceased to his last resting place, rang muffled touches on the bells their late brother-ringer loved so well, the ringing consisting of Grandsire Doubles, each 120 called differently. A very large number of people followed him to the grave—friends and parishioners. The bells were also rang muffled for morning service, on Sunday, as a last tribute of respect.

JAMES YOUNGS.

The death of the above ringer took place on Saturday, October 6th, after an illness of over four years, during which time he had received no less than five attacks of paralysis. His remains were interred at the Norwich Cemetery, on Thursday, October 11th, being conveyed to the grave by six brother-ringers. There were present at the grave they Rev. N. Bolingbroke, secretary of the Norwich Diocesan Association, Captain A. P. Moore, Mr. J. W. Spratt, Mr. D. Hayward, of Yarmouth, and a great number of other ringers and friends. After the burial service a course of Grandsire Cinques was rung over the grave by six of the St. Peter's Society. In the evening the usual whole pull and stand was rung on the twelve of St. Peter Mancroft, also a touch of Grandsire Cinques, with the bells half-muffled, by the following members: W. Freeman, 1; J. Fiddament, 2; W. Beales, 3; P. Sadler, 4; E. Freeman, 5; J. Smith, 6; J. Spratt, 7; E. Francis, 8; F. Knights, 9; J. Skinner, 10; G. Smith, 11; Captain Moore, 12. Afterwards the age of the deceased (58) was tolled upon the large bell. Mr. Young commenced his ringing career at Kenninghall, when quite a lad, and remained one of the local company for about ten years, after which he removed to Norwich and joined the St. Peter Mancroft Society. The deceased had rung three peals—a peal of Treble Bob at Loddon, a peal of Bob Major and a peal of Treble Bob at Kenninghall.

HERTFORD.—PRESENTATION TO MR. H. BAKER.

On Saturday evening, November 3rd, the society of Hertford College Youths dined with the members of St. Andrew's Church Choir, at the Maidenhead Inn, Hertford, where Mr. Prior provided an excellent repast. The company numbered about thirty, including the Rev. Canon Wigram, in the chair; the Rev. J. H. Bloom; Mr. W. L. Randall, churchwarden; Mr. H. Baker, Mr. James Staples, Hon. Sec. of the Society; Mr. R. Jackson, organist of St. Andrew's; Mr. J. Gray, and others. Advantage was taken of the occasion to present a testimonial to Mr. Herbert Baker, who in addition to working his way up to the conductorship of the Hertford College Youths, has achieved considerable distinction as a campanologist and has made his mark in the ringers' world away from his native town, more particularly by taking part in the remarkable peals of 1888.

The testimonial presented to Mr. H. Baker consisted of a very pretty model of a church bell with all its fittings complete. The stand was of polished oak on which was fixed a plate with the inscription "Presented to Herbert Baker, October 31st, 1888, by the Hertford College Youths." The fittings of the bell, wheel, supports, stay, and slider, were of electro-silver plate, the stock of oak, and the bell itself of highly polished bell metal. Accompanying this was a splendidly written and illuminated address, the work of Mr. A. Stoddart, inscribed as follows:—

"To Mr. Herbert Baker, Conductor of the Hertford College Youths, October 31st, 1888. We have for some time past desired to mark our grateful appreciation of your unwearied services as our Conductor and we think that no more fitting opportunity could be found for the fulfilment of our object than the anniversary of your birthday, October 31st. We therefore beg your acceptance of the accompanying model bell as a token of our hearty good wishes on the occasion and especially as a sincere recognition of your skill, courtesy and patience, and an evidence of the pride we feel in having for our Conductor one who has assisted in the unsurpassed feats of the bands which performed the long peals of 1888. We are, dear sir, your faithful friends, the Rev. Canon Wigram, President; J. Staples, Hon. Sec.; W. A. Alps, W. Bennett, H. Bottrill, E. F. Crawley, M. Ellsmore, J. Cull, T. Gathard, F. George, W. Goodchild, J. Gray, E. Holifield, H. Holifield, J. Jauncey, S. Knight, H. Phillips, J. Phipps, J. Pomfret, W. L. Randall, R. Wilds, A. Wilsher.

The Rev. Canon Wigram commenced the toast list by proposing "Church and Queen" which, he said, appealed especially to ringers, who were always at their post on the anniversaries of important events connected with Her Majesty; nor was it less appropriate to the member of the church choir. The toast having been duly honoured.

Canon Wigram said it was now his duty to propose the toast of the evening and to bring before them what was not the least important part of the business. It was, in the first instance to ask them to drink to the health of their good friend, Mr. Herbert Baker, whose birthday it was. He was sure they would all join in expressing their cordial hope that Mr. Baker would live to enjoy a good many more anniversaries of his birthday. He also wished them to join with him in offering to Mr. Herbert Baker, an evidence of their respect and esteem—to ask him, as their conductor, to accept as a gift from his friends in the belfry, a testimonial which they would shortly place before him. He thought that every one of them would feel as he did that it is the misfortune of most bands to try the patience of their conductor; and he was sure they would all join with him that they had tried Mr. Baker's patience in various ways, and most of all, perhaps by "striking" in bad time; yet Mr. Baker had never failed in that kindness and courtesy which is most valuable in keeping a band together. He asked Mr. Baker to accept the testimonial as an expression of their esteem of the manner in which he had carried out his duties as the conductor of the company. He had also been engaged in the long peals of 1888, and they felt the reflected glory that one of their party should have taken part in the long peals of this year, and that he had been chosen to take part in the attempt to ring a long peal which was to eclipse all others. Canon Wigram also mentioned that Mr. Herbert Baker had, on his 21st birthday, conducted "Holts' Original"; it would take too long to explain to the young ringers there what that meant; but he asked them to take upon trust that it is a feat of exceeding difficulty. He asked Mr. Baker to accept the testimonial as an evidence of their appreciation of him as their conductor and as an expression of their personal regard and esteem, and also as a memento of this year, 1888, in which he reflected so much credit on this Hertford band of ringers by taking part in the famous long peals of this year. Canon Wigram then formally presented the testimonial and called on Mr. J. Staples, Hon. Sec., to read the address.

Mr. H. Baker who was very heartily applauded, said he could hardly find words to express his gratitude to his brother ringers for the very handsome testimonial they had given him in acknowledgment of his efforts to further the progress of change-ringing in this town. He had been confronted with many difficulties in learning the mysteries of change-ringing but none so great as in knowing how to thank them sufficiently for that handsome gift. In tendering his sincere thanks to them and to Canon Wigram for his kind remarks, he could assure them that nothing gave him greater pleasure than to render every assistance he could towards the progress and welfare of the Hertford College Youths, of which Society he was proud to be a member; and it gave him great pleasure to know that, in acting as their conductor and in endeavouring to make himself worthy of the name he had gained their good will and respect. The gift was of all the more value coming as it did from those with whom he had spent his happiest hours, and he would always value it, not only for its intrinsic worth, but also as a united expression on the part of his brother ringers of their good will and affection towards him. He could not accept that token of their esteem without alluding to the fact that when Canon Wigram came to Hertford change-ringing was comparatively unknown and it was owing to Canon Wigram's love of the art and his untiring exertions that their Society had been re-established and brought to its present state of proficiency. Canon Wigram had alluded to the fact that he (Mr. Baker) had taken part in the long peals at Appleton, but they must not forget that Mr. Edmund Holifield, another member of their Society, shared the same honours. Mr. Baker mentioned that since February 20th, 1882, when he rang his first peal at All Saints', he had taken part in 85 peals, of which 26 had been rung this year—a sufficient proof that he is as devoted to the society as ever, and he hoped Hertford would never be deficient of a good band of ringers. He was satisfied their Society contained the right material of making good ringers. If they would take a pattern from their chairman in perseverance, the only advice he would offer was—"Never wait until you get into the belfry to learn what you ought to learn at home." Mr. Baker alluded to the valuable services rendered to the society by Mr. J. Staples, their Hon. Sec. and to another member of their society, Mr. W. L. Randall, churchwarden, to whose united efforts he believed they were largely indebted for the excellent arrangements made for that evening. In conclusion he assured them he should never forget the kind manner in which they had received him that evening and that token of their esteem would always be as dear to him as the remembrance of the subscribers individually.

Other toasts followed:—The Rev. J. H. Bloom proposed the health of "the Hertford College Youths," coupled with the name of Mr. Jas. Staples, Hon. Sec. who, in replying, mentioned that he had been Hon. Sec. for the last twelve years but the society had never been in a better position than at present. Mr. W. L. Randall proposed "Success to St. Andrew's Choir," and Mr. R. Jackson, organist, responded. The health of the Chairman was proposed by Mr. H. Baker and the Rev. Canon Wigram briefly replied. Several songs were sung during the evening, Mr. Jackson kindly playing the pianoforte accompaniments and there were selections on the handbells by the Hertford Society and by the Ware ringers.

A RINGER'S? HOMING.

Ringer's outings being a rather prominent feature of our paper, and of which lucubrations, by the bye, the present writer is under the impression that he contributed the very first specimen, being an account of the visit of three Collegians to Sheffield, Ashton-under-Lyne, and York, at August Bank Holiday of 1882, it has occurred to me that a change of theme would be, possibly, agreeable to some readers, as it is well known that change-ringers abhor monotony, vide their non-appreciation of the harmonious Stoney, as nature abhors a vacuum. Hence the heading of these few desultory remarks.

Finding myself at Marseilles, with a few days on hand, free from the calls of business, I determined to take a run home, i.e. London, that being the place of abode of three individuals who maintain a constant pull upon one end of a strong cord, the other end of which lies under the region of my watch pocket, so went to Gaze's office in the Rue Cannibiere, one of the streets of the world, with a view of getting a return ticket to London Bridge, but I found that although the English Railway companies issue return tickets from England, the French companies will not do likewise, so got a ticket for Paris, second class, cost seventy-nine francs. Left Marseilles at 11.20 p.m., and was fortunate enough to have only one companion, a Dutch gentleman, travelling from Java to Amsterdam for his holiday. Myneer and I fraternised over a bottle of wine and a cold chicken from his sack, and then made ourselves very comfortable, one upon each of the well-stuffed cushions, and had several hour's sound sleep, the train running easily. Somewhere about 7 a.m. we made an attack upon my sack, and vanquished another bottle of wine and a regiment of ham and beef sandwiches, which had been cut and done up in dainty white serviettes the night before by my kind English hostess. Arrived at Lyons about 9 or 10, unfortunately in a fog, so that not much could be seen of the remarkable junction of the two rivers, Rhone and Saone, upon which Lyons, the second city of France, as its inhabitants proudly boast, stands. However, although the rivers were hidden, I managed to get a double handful of water from a tap on the station platform, around which the travellers crowded, to sluice my face, and this elaborate toilette being complete, made a swoop upon a well-spread table in the buffet, and got through the traditional "three courses," of soup, a nice cut of roast beef with mashed potatoes, and cheese with fruit, topped off by another bottle of wine, in about nine to eleven minutes, only twenty minutes being the time of stoppage here, of which several had been taken up awaiting turn at the toilet tap. Please understand that these frequently-mentioned bottles of wine are not fine crusted, and heady old port, or fiery sherry at sixty shillings a dozen, but modest half litres, less than a pint, of light French wine, costing each about sixpence. At Lyons we were joined by an Englishman, with an Anglo-Italian wife and little girl, and some hour or two after by a venerable French priest. So now we were three pairs to pass the tedious hours ere reaching Paris. The priest and lady discussed Church and State, the Englishman and Dutchman talked travels, while I and the little girl watched the flying country, made love, quarrelled and made it up again over chocolate drops and fruit. At Dijon another stoppage of some few minutes gave opportunity to stretch our legs, and there we found everything and everybody in a great turmoil it being the day of the visit of the President of the Republic, Monsieur Carnot.

Arrived at Paris at 6 p.m., nearly nineteen hours from Marseilles, a distance, I think, of about 580 miles. Having nearly three hours to catch the train for Dieppe, I elected to walk across Paris to the other railway terminus, and never having visited the gay city before thought it very probable that I should lose my way. In this I was not disappointed, after two hour's wandering, as I could not see anything of the station I took a cab, and was put down at my bourne within ten minutes, so that my topographical instinct had not let me stray very much out of the way. Found an English hotel opposite the station door, where I got a good dinner, or supper, with a whole p—t of bt—r, the first I had seen for about eleven months, and found it much more to my taste than one of those bottles of wine before mentioned. A ticket covering the journey from Paris to London cost thirty-five francs, and about a four hour's ride with a compartment full of Englishmen, brought us alongside the steamer Normandy at Dieppe about 1 a.m. It was a bit rough in the Channel, and much to my surprise I discovered myself paying tribute to Neptune, which after having traversed that potentates dominions for about eighteen years, free of toll, I felt to be rather mortifying. Landed at Newhaven about 7 a.m. and stepped out of London Bridge Station just as old St. Saviour's tenor was striking ten. I took this for a welcome home, as I supposed he had caught a glimpse of me through the louvres, but that tenor is a false old rascal, for I heard him mutter to himself after the last blow, "Ah! here, that fellow coming to pull and haul me about again, I suppose, and he never can strike." This rude remark rather cut me, so during my sojourn in England I never went near him.

Found the three individuals who pull that "strong cord" all well, so after another short railway journey out and home, stowed them all into a cab for Waterloo, thence to Winchester, reaching that cathedral city at 11.20 p.m., just forty-eight hours from Marseilles.

After two days and nights of constant travel, "Bedfordshire" had so great an attraction on Sunday morning, that I did not get a pull at the Cathedral for service as I thought of doing, but attended the afternoon service. Returned to London on Monday evening, and called on Mr. G. Mash, to remonstrate with him upon the rude remarks his tenor had made. He promised to grease his gudgeons for him, and that matter being settled I passed a very pleasant hour or two with my old friend and his family.

Tuesday, various calls of business and to see old friends in the city, took up the entire day, and a long standing engagement to dine, prevented me from taking my revenge out of Cripplegate tenor, for the insulting remarks made by his brother of Southwark.

Wednesday morning brought a fine old London particular fog, as thick as a blanket boiled in pea soup, but not too thick to prevent me from foraging out from his den behind the Bank of England, another old friend, Mr. G. Muskett, with whom I had a crack about old times and friends. Thence to Edmonton with the principal "cord-puller," to visit some old friends by the church.

Thursday morning some business calls, and in the afternoon to Walthamstow, to the printing establishment of Messrs. C. and H. Reeves, where I found our worthy and portly Editor and his sons up to their very ears in business, for as careful readers well know, "THE BELL NEWS" is printed on Thursday night. The two first-named gentlemen with pride proceeded to point out to me the wonders of the beautifully new machinery which they have not long since set up to print our paper, and a fine costly Gas Engine to work this machinery, but the description was much too abstruse for my thick skull; of course I could see a lot of beautifully polished rods and arms and wheels, and queer-shaped things, revolving and whirring about, and had to be content to take it for granted that the machinery was, and did all they said it did. Anyhow it is very fine and evidently costly machinery, but I was very sorry to hear that it was not the Exercise that kept up the circulation, but the Clergy. This is not very flattering to us ringers. We are enough to support our paper twice over, only I suppose it is so easily to borrow our friend's copy. Like the late Jasper Snowdon I never lend out my "BELL NEWS" "on principle." I purchase a copy and every ringer ought to do the same. For myself I would sooner give sixpence or a shilling a week for it than be without it: it comes to me weekly in my far away exile like the voices of old friends.

This finished my holiday. I left London Bridge (through ticket to Marseilles, £4 8s.) at 8 p.m. of Thursday, and reached Paris at 1 p.m. of Friday. Having some hours to spare, visited Notre-Dame, was much impressed by its beauty, but rather disappointed as to size. Climbed the 397 steps to top of towers for the view, and of course visited the great Bourdon bell, which was given by Louis XIV. in 1683. The dimensions as given by a very coarsely-printed card, sold by the modern Quasimodo for three pence, are diameter seven feet, height seven feet, weight 36,000 pounds, clapper 1500 pounds (which I very much doubt), thickness of sound-bow I suppose is meant one foot. Like all bells out of England, or English speaking countries, it is only swung through a small arc, and although two hundred years old has not had wear enough to necessitate "quartering." Beside it in the same tower, the south, hangs the "Great Sebastopol Bell," of, I should judge, about forty to fifty hundred weight. Squat and ugly as to shape and very much unlike other Russian bells of my acquaintance, which are generally long in the waist. I believe I could see a number of other bells through the louvres of the north tower, but Quasimodo was too busy with a throng of visitors, showing them the regulation shows to be bothered to show a single individual his other children. This individual is, or as I think, pretends to be very deaf, which, he would have visitors to believe is caused by the huge volumes of sound he is subjected to in his official capacity. This, I take it, is one of the "properties" of the post he fills, as the original Quasimodo was notoriously deaf. However, he is by no means death to the chink of coin; a visit to his belfry of two bells costs about eighteen pence.

My train for the south left Paris at 10 p.m., but alas, on this occasion we had a full compartment, so that what little sleep was obtainable was taken perpendicular. A much slower train, too, stopping at nearly every station as far as Lyons, but amusement was derived from watching the beautiful country, with its changing vegetation as we progressed to warmer latitudes. Through Normandy it had been apple and pear orchards, south of Paris came some of the same sort of fruit, then figs, grapes in the wine country, and south of Lyons, olives. The frequent stoppages gave ample opportunities to renew acquaintance with those sixpenny flasks before mentioned, coupled with such viands as are vended at French railway stations, so that the weary traveller could beguile the long hours by refreshing the inner man.

Most, or indeed all my fellow travellers who had left Paris with me had now left, but at Lyons I was joined by a young Englishman, who was travelling to Algiers to get a warm climate for the coming winter. He proved an agreeable companion, and having some one to converse with the time passed more pleasantly, and we arrived at Marseilles at 7 p.m., twenty-one hours from Paris.

After a long night between the sheets at the Hotel-de-Marseille, I embarked about ten on Sunday morning on an Italian steamer for Naples; as we were leaving the harbour of Marseilles, there being about four hundred Italian passengers on board, most of whom were looking over the vessels sides, we passed several French fishing and pleasure boats, the occupants of which boats gave us their blessing?; and expressed a pious wish that we might sink. The relations between France and Italy being rather strained just now, these kind wishes, were, I suppose, as the Cockney youth puts it, just to show there was no illfeeling! However, a fine run of two days along the coast brought us to Naples safely, despite the Frenchmen's holy aspirations, where we were delayed an hour in getting to our berth by the passing of the large Ironclad Re Umberto, which had been launched at Castellamare a few days before in the presence of the monarchs of Italy and Germany, and was now being towed to the Arsenal of Naples to complete her outfit.

Vesuvius was smoking away as usual, and the Bay of Naples looked very beautiful, as it always does. A few hours spent in visiting some of the lions, and then embarked on another Italian steamer for my destination, Sicily. Fine and very pleasant weather all the way down the coast of Calabria, calling every two or three hours at some coast town, generally perched up high among the hills of this precipitous coast, a constant change of passengers, from the fair dames dressed in latest Parisian style, to the swarthy Calabrian peasant in his goat skin garments, with music and dancing on deck, and the best of good living below, brought us at midnight to my destination, where the Custom House officers or Doriane's being too sleepy to give much trouble about searching for contraband, I slipped quietly ashore in a small boat, and knocking up a sleepy hotel porter was quickly between the sheets, and so ended my "Homings."

THE NATIONAL SOCIETY'S CONFERENCE.

(FROM THE Guardian).

It is to be regretted that those who were responsible for arranging the programme of last week's Educational Conference did not adopt a better method of procedure. In the first place far too many subjects were set down for a three hours' discussion. In the second place the mode in which the various subjects were presented, though admirably calculated to elicit different opinions, was not always such as to lead to regular debate and matured conclusion. This was especially unfortunate as regards the first question on the paper—the expediency of helping voluntary schools from the rates. That is a subject which excites intense interest throughout the country, and for the discussion of which a crowded and representative meeting of Churchmen had chiefly assembled. The discussion should, therefore, we think, have been ordered in the same methodical manner as is usual at the Church Congress. The initial question had better have been cast in the form of a definite resolution; the names of the selected speakers, and whether they were for or against, should have been made known beforehand to the conference; the permissible amendments or rider to the main resolution, and their movers, should have been arranged for; and when the discussion was allowed to become general, the speakers should have been limited to five minutes each. In this way the arguments on each side would have been laid more fully than they were before the meeting, the various questions raised more completely exhausted, and the ultimate conclusion seen more clearly to be the outcome of a genuine consideration of the subject. As it was, the discussion had throughout too academic a tone, and did not leave the impression of contributing very much to the formation of a sound and intelligent Church opinion on the questions at issue.

Nevertheless, though the method of discussion adopted might have been more effective, there was little doubt as to the general feeling of the meeting. However desirable it might be that voluntary schools should be aided from the rates, and however possible it might be to defend such a proposition on the grounds of justice, it seemed to be all but unanimously held that on grounds of expediency it must be given up. Many held the view which we have ourselves insisted on, that local aid must sooner or later carry with it local control, and thought it better that Church schools should sacrifice their existence than their independence; others were content simply to point out the hopelessness of expecting any political party to carry out the recommendations, upon this head, of the Majority of the Royal Commission. Mr. Nunn, of Manchester, who has convinced himself, and with good reason, that without aid from the rates, Voluntary Schools must parish in the large towns, stood almost alone in urging the meeting to take time and appoint a committee for the consideration of the subject. Other means of help, such as the increased grants which it is proposed to make to small rural schools, or any gain which may result from a better distribution of the grant as a whole, the conference was willing to accept; but of rate aid it would have none.

We think on the whole that the conference was guided by a right instinct in thus refusing to endanger the independence of voluntary schools. But we regret that those who took part in the discussion limited themselves so persistently to the actual proposal put forth by the Majority of the Commission, and did not enter upon the larger question as to the conditions, if any, upon which the Church could consent to receive aid for her schools from the rates. Whether the expenditure of school managers upon secular subjects can be clearly extinguished from that assigned to religious instruction; whether rate aid might be accepted for the former but not the latter; and whether ratepayers might not then be allowed their due share in controlling the "secular" expenditure—all these are points which might well have been raised, and points which would in all probability have been debated had the discussion been of a less desultory kind. Mr. Nunn, it is true, made an effort to raise them, but Mr. Nunn spoke when his audience were already impatient for a division, and his remarks attracted none of the attention they deserved. We cannot help thinking that the omission of such considerations had the effect of making the discussion inadequate and the conclusion premature; and this is to be regretted on two grounds,

A RINGER'S JUBILEE AT READING.

On Monday, November 12th, there assembled at the "Mitre," West Street, St. Laurence's "scruffe," the Reading handbell ringers, and Mr. W. Napper, of Hagbourne, by the invitation of Mr. W. Newell, captain of the St. Laurence's ringers, the occasion being the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the birthday of Mr. Newell, who successfully conducted his jubilee peal on Thursday, November 8th, as will be seen by referring to the peal columns. At 7.30 the company sat down to an excellent supper, served up in first-rate style, and kindly provided by the worthy captain. By 8.30 the cravings of the inner man was somewhat appeased, and then began the second part of the proceedings. Mr. Newell took the chair, Mr. Johnson the vice-chair, and Master W. Newell presided at the piano.

The CAPTAIN, in a short speech, said it gave him great pleasure to meet his brother-strings on all occasions, but more particularly that night, as it was not only his jubilee they were commemorating, but also his wedding day, as he was married on his birthday twenty-two years ago. He then handed round the loving cup to drink his health. This same cup was presented to him by the Reading Saxhorn Band on his wedding day, so it played an important part in the night's proceedings. After a few songs and a pianoforte solo,

Mr. EGBY proposed the health of Mr. Newell. He said he had not known that gentleman fifty years, yet he had known him for a long time, very near a quarter of a century, and he could testify to the indomitable courage and perseverance he displayed in advancing the art of change-ringing, more particularly when it was in its infancy in Reading. Mr. Newell had been called and really was the father of change-ringing in that town, and no little success had attended his efforts. Although it was such uphill work, he hoped he would long be spared to ring the art he loved so well, and that his ringing children would rally round him.

The Captain's health was then drank with musical honours.

Mr. JOHNSON next proposed "The Ladies."

Mr. NEWELL, replying on behalf of Mrs. Newell, said they had much to be thankful to the ladies, for he could not have entertained them there that evening but for the assistance rendered him by his wife, therefore he thought they ought to drink the health of the ladies. After the speeches some more excellent songs were indulged in, interspersed with a few glees, and the evening's entertainment was brought to a close by the whole company singing "Auld Lang Syne," followed by the National Anthem.

WANTED TO PURCHASE. A Set of Eight, Ten, or Twelve Second-hand Hand Bells. Apply, stating Price and Particulars to J. W. Watson, 25, Knight Street, Linsell.

RINGERS' OUTING AT PETERCHURCH, HEREFORD.

On Saturday, October 17th, a company of Hereford ringers had an enjoyable half-day's outing to the isolated parish of Peterchurch, twelve miles from Hereford. Arrangements by Mr. W. Lewis led to the provision of a suitable vehicle, which awaited its occupants at the "Spread Eagle," punctually at 2 p.m. From here the journey commenced, Father Davies acting as foreman, during a picturesque ride behind two useful quadrupeds, while a peal of handbells, kindly lent by Mr. H. Gaines, were handled in various tunes and changes, much to the wonderment of the country Herefordians, who gazed, hard and long, at the happy and jovial looking travellers to the golden valley, rightly named from its richness of soil and fertility, wherein their destination lay.

The ancient church dedicated to St. Peter (of its early history no trace can be found) was reached at four o'clock. Here the visitors were met by Mr. T. Walters, the owner of a good peal of twelve new handbell tenor 19 size in F. by Mears and Stainbank, and Mr. Charles Garrett the generous donor of a new 2nd tower bell some few years since, in place of the old cracked one. After an examination of the church and tower and a new north porch in course of erection, the bells were raised in peal and a series of Grandsire Doubles was rang, for the interest of a few local hands. Mr. C. Garrett who in his younger days, some fifty years ago, spent most of his time in Liverpool, and has rang with and remembers some of the old Liverpool ringers, was prevailed upon to have a pull, which he did well, considering that his age is only 82.

Tea was provided at the Vicaerge at 6 o'clock. The Rev. W. F. A. Lambert, the Vicar, and Mrs Lambert very kindly received the company, and well attended to them, Mr. and Mrs. Lambert, in return being very pleased with some simple tune playing and change-ringing given by Messrs. Lewis, brothers John Davies, W. H. Fussell, A. Baskerville and J. Phillips, on the new handbells.

A little more tower ringing was next indulged in, the old bells by Rudhall, of Gloucester, tenor 10 cwt., and the 2nd by Taylor, echoing far up the valley to some well struck six-scores by Messrs. T. Hobly, John Jones, J. Davies, W. Lewis, W. H. Fussell and J. Trystram.

At the village schoolroom more handbell ringing before a larger audience was given till 8.30 p.m., when homewards was the password passed around.

The best thanks of the visitors was heartily tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Lambert, Mr. C. Garrett and T. Walters for their welcome to Peterchurch. Hopes were expressed that the parish would boast, at no distant date, of the possession of a company of change ringers.

The new year will find the Vicar and Mr. Garrett, hon. members of the Diocesan Guild, and an energetic young band, now being formed, receiving tuition from the Guild Instructor.

Notwithstanding the darkness of the return journey, it was accomplished safely, thanks to the care of the driver, who was within twelve inches of turning over the whole party into a tolerably shallow pool. However, this was averted, and the band separated in the best of humour and satisfaction, at the reasonable hour of 10.30 p.m. W.H.F.

BREDENBURY, HEREFORDSHIRE.

The company of ringers at the above church, which has a pretty little peal of six bells, have joined the Hereford Diocesan Guild of ringers, and the rector, the Rev. C. Bridges. The church, tower and bells, are by Taylor & Co. The schools, and rectory were erected by W. H. Barnaby, Esq., of Bredenbury Court, who is a life member of the Guild. Towards the latter part of October, the Guild instructor gave the ringers several lessons, and it is to be hoped they will make good progress in the art during the winter months.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROCHDALE BRANCH.

There will be a meeting of the above branch at St. Thomas' Church, Leeds, near Oldham, bells ready at 2.30. Meeting at 5 p.m. in the belfry. F. BIRTWISTLE.

NEWS FROM ABROAD.

It is now a long time since you received any account of our doings in this part of Her Majesty's dominions, but the reason our long silence is we have been waiting in the hopes of sending you the welcome news of our having got the "first peal" in the colonies, but having recently received two months (June and July) numbers of "THE BELL NEWS," and reading therein, page 204, number 328, the good wishes of your contributor, "Free Lance" for our welfare in distant parts, I thought I would drop you a line at once, peal or no peal, just to let you know that we are still in existence.

I will just give you a condensed report of our Annual Business meeting. We have an annual meeting on Easter Monday, more for the purpose of entertaining a few friends, but our meeting for the election of officers, &c. takes place in the spring of the year (our spring I mean).

The Annual Meeting of the Victorian society of bellringers was held in the belfry of St. James's church, Melbourne, on Tuesday evening, October 2nd, 1888. The report shewed that the society had done a considerable amount of ringing, over forty thousand changes having been rung during the year, including the half-peal three times, the date touch twice, and many other touches of lesser numbers, but sorrow was expressed at our not getting the full peal, although it had been attempted several times, and twice getting half-way through the ninth part (Holt's ten-part peal of Grandsire Triples), but a hope was expressed that we should be more fortunate at the next attempt.

The Balance-sheet showed a satisfactory state of affairs, the income for the year, including a balance of £6 2s. 8d. from last year, was £46 8s. 8d., and the expenditure, £33 os. 4d., leaving a balance in hand of £13 8s. 4d. The following office bearers were elected for the next twelve months: President—Mr. C. Crang; Captain and Conductor—Mr. J. Guest; Secretary—Mr. Beechey; Treasurer—Mr. Shenton.

We ring on Sundays before service twice a day; if the men are there we ring Grandsire, or go back on Grandsire Doubles, with three covering bells, or sometimes Grandsire Minor, with two bells behind. We also ring on Tuesday evenings, for practice, but I am sorry to say we are not encouraged as we ought to be, in a large wealthy place such as Melbourne is. Ours at St. James' is the only peal in Melbourne in a Protestant church, and I am afraid it is likely to be so for many years to come. We are rather disappointed that none of the English bellfounders did not send a good peal out here to our great Technical Exhibition, as an exhibit, I mean. There is not even a peal of hand-bells there as I can see.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1888.

LAST week our columns contained a notice of a peal of London Surprise Major rung at Burton-on-Trent, and this week appears an announcement of the performance by the same talented band of the entire extent of the method, namely, 6720. This very remarkable achievement deserves special notice, for those of our readers who are posted up in past records will know that the 6048 rung at Benington in 1870 was the longest length up to the present. In September of last year, on the occasion of their first peal of London Surprise, we complimented the St. Paul's company upon having reached the top of the ladder of campanological fame. Sharing their elevated position were the bands of Norwich (1835), Woolwich (1849), and Benington. Now however, by their last performance, the Burton band may fairly claim a position hitherto unattained, that of having rung the extent of each of the three Surprise methods. Not that we presume to class a performance in Cambridge or Superlative with one of London Surprise, for the complexity of the latter is as much in excess of that of the other two as their intricacies are beyond those of ordinary Treble Bob. As the work, however, of one company, the achievement of the three extents is a milestone in the history of the art.

It was, we believe, in 1879 that the present St. Paul's Society was formed under the leadership of the well-known Mr. WILLIAM WAKLEY. Since that date there have followed in succession peals of Grandsire, Treble Bob, Stedman, Double Norwich, Superlative, Cambridge, New Cumberland, and finally London Surprise, to the aggregate amount of over a hundred, for a single peal in a method has never found favour at Burton, the members of the band rightly judging that to ring only one was to make but poor use of laboriously acquired knowledge.

With regard to the latest performance, it is acknowledged to have been in every way worthy of its proud position, for we are informed that the striking was excellent and regular throughout, no easy matter in so intricate a method. A word too should be said in admiration of a conductor whose abilities are so brilliant as to enable him to call London Surprise from a working bell, a task, we imagine which few would care to attempt.

Most heartily, then, do we congratulate our Burton friends upon their success, and most sincerely do we express the hope that the energy which has carried the St. Paul's Society thus far will not grow fainter after victory, but will continue to burn brightly as a standing example to others of the result of unity and perseverance.

HOW TO LEARN CHANGE-RINGING WITHOUT AN INSTRUCTOR.—By Charles Pearson, M.A. Price Threepence, by post Fourpence.—WILLIAM POLLARD AND Co. Printers, Exeter.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

THE CHURCH BELLS OF DUCKLINGTON, OXON.

SIR,—Would you allow me through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS," to bring to the notice of all brother-strings interested in the restoration of church bells, the dilapidated state of the church bells of Ducklington, Oxon. These bells are in almost an unringable condition, and the parish being poor, the amount required for their restoration cannot be raised without help from friends. Myself having learnt to ring on these bells feel a deep interest in their restoration. The ringers are very energetic, but their only drawback is the sad condition of the bells, which cannot be rung with safety. Should any of our ringing friends care to assist us in their restoration, the smallest donations will be most thankfully received and acknowledged by

Norfolk Hotel, Brighton,

PROPOSED RINGERS' PROVIDENT FUND.

SIR,—With regard to my proposal in your columns a fortnight ago—a proposal which was warmly taken up by Mr. Washbrook, and will I trust find many supporters—allow me to disclaim all originality in connection with it. Mr. Bulwer tells me that he suggested the idea at the time of Mr. Snowdon's death, but that the subject then dropped. My apologies are therefore due to Mr. Bulwer for publishing as new a "peal" of which he was the composer. Hoping to see other subscribers contributing their counsel in your columns,

CHAS. D. P. DAVIES,

THE CHURCH BELLS OF RYE (SUSSEX.)

SIR,—I should be extremely pleased for any information concerning the church bells of that interesting old Cinque Port Town, Rye. As a schoolboy, some twenty years ago, I remember its fine old church with its fine old clock taken from the Spanish Armada, the pendulum of said old time keeper swinging across the chancel arch in full view of the congregation. In a book recently published giving a history of the Cinque Ports, by Montague Burrows, it is stated that in the fourteenth century (1378), the French attacked Rye, and amongst other plunder took away the church bells. But the Rye men in conjunction with Winchelsea made a return raid on the French coast and brought their bells back in triumph. It would be interesting I think to know if any of these bells are in existence. Perhaps some members of the Sussex Association will give me the desired information. It is worthy of note that one never sees anything in "THE BELL NEWS" respecting ringing matters at Rye, Winchelsea and Hastings.

GRANDSIRE BOB.

P.S.—Whilst writing may I also ask for correct weights and diameters of the tenor bells at Melton Mowbray, Leicestershire, and St. Margaret's Church, Leicester. The Melton Mowbray tenor is said to be 35 cwt. in "North's Church Bells of Leicester," but Messrs. Taylor of Loughborough, gives its weight as 26 cwt. in a list published by them in 1870. Which is correct?

The Bishop of Auckland intends to leave England on December 1st, on his return to New Zealand, by the Tainui, from Plymouth. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Cowie and their three younger children. The Bishop's Commissaries in England are the Rev. A. R. Tomlinson, rector of St. Michael's Penkevel, and Canon Skelton, Hickling Rectory, Melton Mowbray.

The Bishop of Lichfield intimates that in future, or at least during his episcopate, his house will be designated as "Bishop-stowe" instead of the "Palace." The house overlooks the "Stowe Pool," by the side of which St. Chad took his "stand" when he began his work as Bishop of Lichfield.

Church News.

The Lambeth Conference Encyclical Letter was read in many of the cources in the diocese of Lichfield on Sunday week by the Bishop's desire.

The Vicarage of Great Staughton, vacant by the death of the Rev. H. Bristow Wilson, has been offered by St. John's College, Oxford, to the Rev. T. W. Gibson, secretary of the Clergy Orphan Corporation, and has been accepted by him.

At a meeting of the clergy of the archdeaconry of Macclesfield at Bowden on Thursday, the Rev. Edward Royds, rector of Brereton-cum-Smethwick, was re-elected a Commissioner under the Pluralities Acts Amendment Act, 1885, for the archdeaconry for the ensuing three years.

At a meeting of the beneficed clergy of the archdeaconry of Cornwall, at Bishop Phillpott's Library, Truro, on November 6th, to elect a beneficed clergyman of the archdeaconry as a Commissioner for three years under the Pluralities Act Amendment Act, the Rev. A. A. Vawdrey, Rural Dean of Kirrier and vicar of St. Sithney, was unanimously re-elected.

At Lechlade Church, on All Saints' Day, were dedicated three handsome chancel screens of carved oak. They were the gift of Mrs. Robbins, late of Clay Hill House, Lechlade, in memory of her husband, and were designed by Mr. F. S. Walker, diocesan architect, Gloucester.

While the Rev. W. H. Iggulden, Warden of Browne's Hospital, Stamford, was preaching on Sunday afternoon in little Casterton Church, near Stamford, he was seized with a fit of apoplexy. He was removed to the rectory, and died within four hours without recovering consciousness.

Another recent death is that of the Rev. Henry Beckwith, rector of Eaton Constantine, Salop. The deceased gentleman, who was born in 1806, graduated at Jesus College, Cambridge, and was ordained in 1830. In 1832 he was preferred by the Duke of Cleveland to the living of Eaton Constantine, which he has held ever since.

Two stained-glass windows and a memorial brass tablet have been placed in Lancaster parish church, as a memorial to the late Mr. J. Piers Chmberlain Starkie. The work was designed and executed by Warrington and Co., Fitzroy Square.

Two stained-glass windows have recently been placed in the chancel of the parish church of Brent Knoll, Somerset, by the vicar, Archdeacon Fitzgerald. In the upper compartment of the window on the south side is represented the Virgin and Child, after a drawing by Martin Schon, and in the lower part is a half-length representation of the Madonna and Infant. The inscription below is:—"In memory of Sarah Anne Fitzgerald, aged 21 years, and Sarah Anne, her infant daughter, buried together at Fledborough, Notts, February 13, 1841." In the upper part of the window on the north side is represented the figure of St. Theresa, holding the cross in one hand and the aced heart in the other. In the lower part, St. Ann teaching the Virgin to reae is represented.

A remarkably sudden death took place on Tuesday fortnight, at the Chester Diocesan Conference, in the person of the Rev. James Campbell Home, M.A., late Scholar of Clare, and for more than forty years Vicar of Rawcliffe, Lancashire. Mr. Home, who was held in the greatest affection among his parishioners, had only just resigned, and with his family had come to reside at Chester, where on Tuesday morning, walking hurriedly to the conference, he suddenly fell forward, and expired a few moments only after his entrance into the assembly. Dr. Roberts attributed his death to heart disease. The deceased gentleman, who was born at Malta in 1816, was a son of Captain David Home (35th Regiment) a nephew of John Home, author "of Douglas." He took his degree at Clare in 1840, and was ordained the same year. He was buried on Friday week in the churchyard of his old parish, amid the lamentation of relatives, parishioners, and clergy of the deanery who had come to pay this tribute to one whose kind hearted character and virtuous life are alike worthy of respect and of imitation. The deceased leaves a widow and four daughters.

The All Saints' festival has been celebrated this year with much earnest enthusiasm and many features of interest at St. Matthias's, Stoke Newington, where, notwithstanding the passing away of so many of the early workers, there lingers much of the original fervour and zeal which marked the first founders of the church. The first movement of the little band, headed by the late Mr. R. Brett and Mr. R. Foster, was made on All Saints' Day, 1849, when a school-room, previously licensed by the Bishop, was opened for Divine Service. It was felt that no surer way of securing solid and permanent Church work could be devised than that of establishing good Church day-schools, and, until a permanent church could be erected, of gathering in the people to a humbler building for worship. This year, in addition to the ordinary services, the dedications of a coloured window, by Messrs. Clayton and Bell, in loving memory of Ernest Kempster, the elder son of Dr. Monk, the Musical editor of "Hymns Ancient and Modern," and organist of St. Matthias's for more than thirty years, formed an impressive and beautiful incident; and a large congregation assembled to testify their sympathy with it. After the sermon at the high celebration, preached by the Rev. A. Wentworth Bennett, assistant curate of St. Matthias's, who had in past years been a choir boy with Mr. Monk, the clergy, headed by the sacristans, proceeded to the south chancel aisle, where a short service of dedication, drawn up by one of the Bishops, formerly a chorister of St. Matthias's, was used. The window consists of two lights, and is on the right-hand side of the organ chamber. The figure of David, as the sweet Psalmist, stands in one compartment, and our Lord is represented as the Good Shepherd in the other, whilst in the trefoil at the top there are crossed palm branches with "Attollite portas" inscribed in reference to a service held at St. Matthias's on Palm Sunday. On the following Thursday, the octave, at a friendly gathering of parishioners and congregation a presentation was made to Mr. T. A. Scott, the late head master of the boys' school, in recognition of his long and devoted service of thirty-nine years. Mr. Scott was one of the first workers and worshippers at St. Matthias's, having been appointed by the vicar and Mr. Brett. The Rev. F. Caudwell, the Bishops of Marlborough and Bedford, and others addressed the meeting. Mr. Scott could never be tempted away from St. Matthias's, though he might have gained considerably by listening to offers from other schools. During the octave sermons were preached by the vicar, the Revs. E. Ibbotson, Canon Lester, A. Wentworth Bennett, A. Ingleby, and the Bishop of Marlborough.

An itinerant Mission was held from October 27th to November 4th in the rural deanery of Brecon, Part III., the Missioners being Rev. J. P. A. Bowers, Diocesan Missioner for the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol, Rev. L. E. Peter, of Uplands, Stroud, Rev. T. J. Bowen of Llangattock, and E. T. Jones, of Whitchurch. Though the weather was in every way unpropitious, being exceedingly wet, and the nights unusually dark, large congregations assembled at the different centres, and were deeply impressed, many following the Missioners from place to place, and coming long distances through drenching rain, and along dark and muddy country lanes and pathways, which had been rendered almost impassable.

The opening of St. Saviour's, Roath, took place on the 30th ult. It has been built to supply the need of a large district in the parish of Roath St. German, Cardiff, which has sprung up very rapidly in the course of the last four years. Hitherto the services have been held in a temporary iron church and school chapel, which lately have been all too small for the accommodation required. The services on the opening day began with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 a.m., the Bishop of Llandaff being the celebrant. The consecration service took place at eleven, when more than fifty of the clergy of the diocese were present. The sermon was preached by Canon Mason, his subject being the Vision of Isaiah, described in Isaiah vi. Immediately after the service a public luncheon was held in the school, the chair being taken by the Rev. J. E. Dawson (curate in-charge). Among the speakers were the Bishop of Llandaff, the Dean of Manchester, the Archdeacon of Monmouth, the Revs. F. J. Beale, R. J. Ives (vicar of the parish), Lord Tredegar, Sir A. Mackworth, Dr. Sheen. In the evening there was evensong at 7.30, and a sermon was preached by the Dean of Manchester on St. Matthew xxi. 13.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Onward! be our watchword."

To quote the old familiar greeting of the pantomime clown when he puts in a re-appearance, "Here we are again!" Pressure of business cares and duties have compelled me—much against my wish—to suspend my weekly remarks during the last three weeks, but now that I am once more "on the job," I hope to have no more breaks yet awhile.

* * * * *

It is with very great regret that, on my resumption, I have to refer to the serious illness of our Editor. In any concern—and particularly in a newspaper office—the temporary deprivation of the chief while on a bed of sickness is a serious matter, and throws a large amount of extra work and responsibility upon the junior members of the staff. In our own case, while complimenting the subordinate officials of "THE BELL NEWS" on the manner in which they have met and tidied over their difficulties so far, I believe I shall be expressing the feelings of many besides myself when I give utterance to the earnest hope that he to whom we owe our weekly paper will soon be not only convalescent, but at his post once more in renewed health.

* * * * *

Our esteemed friend, the Rev. C. D. P. Davies, has "opened the ball on a subject which has been brought to my notice several times; one which I think is deserving the serious consideration of the Exercise. This idea of forming a properly constituted Benefit Society in connection with our fraternity is without doubt, in the abstract, a very commendable one; but at the same time, while abstract propositions are very well to be argued about and voted upon pro and con in a debating society, a suggestion like this, so thoroughly practical, must be dealt with in a different manner if it is to be worked out into a useful existence. That is to say, the mere agreeing with the proposition is in itself comparatively a small matter. We may easily declare that we do or not agree with it, but the doing that contributes nothing towards the accomplishment or the failure of such a scheme. What we really have to consider are the details and the difficulties which would have to be surmounted. In short—to vary an old saying—we must look to the items and the totals will take care of themselves.

Well, let us suppose, for argument's sake, that there is a consensus of opinion in favour of this proposal, what follows? In the first place, there is the question of receipts, which involves the amount of contributions to be paid, and also the manner of collecting this into one common fund, together with its proper investment. After that comes the problem (or, I should rather say, the series of problems) as to the expenditure. What are to be the benefits disbursed by this Society? Is it to relieve cases of distress, to afford payment to its members in case of sickness, or to make grants to the widows and orphans of members on their decease? The first point might be easily dealt with; the second would prove more difficult to work out, as all those who—like myself—belong to large and powerful friendly societies, will see at a glance. To give any stated amount per week during sickness would in addition to creating a vast amount of work on some one necessitate a subscription of not less than sixpence or eightpence per week to put it on a fairly-sound financial basis. Then if the third point alone was the object of the Society, it would require to be constituted somewhat on the plan of the many "death briefs" which are in existence throughout the country; but that, like the first, would be no very serious matter in itself.

After that comes the very essential question of management. And here comes the stiffest problem of all. How is the Society to be constituted and worked? We are not like a body of men located in one particular quarter; we are scattered about in small numbers here and there; which circumstance will of itself naturally tend to render this problem all the more difficult of solution. We should require, of course, a governing body of some sort, to manage the business. How is that to be formed? If one member lived in London, another at Newcastle, another at Manchester, and so on, it is obvious that their meetings would of necessity be "few and far between," if only on the score of expense.

* * * * *

It will be thus apparent to even a merely superficial observer that the problems to be solved and the difficulties to be surmounted, in bringing such a scheme into working order are neither few nor insignificant. My object in thus bringing these points to the front is by no means with the aim of "throwing cold water upon the scheme," far from it; my only purpose is that in dealing with the matter, we may look the whole thing in the face, and not content ourselves with merely considering it on a sort of general basis, without giving a thought as to how it is to assume tangible form.

* * * * *

By way of bringing about some practical result, I would suggest that Mr. Davies should draw up a rough plan on the lines of his suggestion; so as, in fact, to give us something "to peg at." It is always easier to come to an understanding with something definite before us, than it is if we are, as it were, fighting a shadow. Meanwhile, I would assure Mr. Davies of my hearty concurrence; and if I can be of service in the evolution of his scheme, it will afford me much pleasure.

* * * * *

I cannot close my remarks without congratulating my brother "Ancients" on their very successful anniversary celebration, and expressing the pleasure I have felt on reading the account of it. Next to joining in a fraternal gathering is the hearing or reading an account of it. My share in the happy meeting is of course the latter, but nevertheless I seemed to be amongst my brothers as I read the account, and particularly the various little speeches, breathing as they did all of them such pride in the Society, such hope for its future, and such expressions of good-will. If this spirit is constantly manifested along with an earnest desire for good ringing, and progress in the art, there can be no doubt that the future of the College Youths will be far in advance of its past history, brilliant though it has been. "May its shadow never grow less."

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROSSENDALE BRANCH.

On Saturday, November 10th, a ringing meeting of the above branch took place at the parish church, Newchurch, when about thirty ringers from Bacup, Rochdale, Shaw, Ramsbottom, Waterfoot, Rawtenstall, Heywood, Haslingden, Halliwell, attended and rung during the afternoon and evening, several 500's of Grandsire Triples, touches of Bob Major and Bob Minor. A meeting was held in the school-room presided over by the Rev. J. Barstow, curate, at which it was arranged to hold the next ringing meeting at Haslingden. Votes of thanks to the churchwardens for the use of the bells, to the chairman for presiding, brought the meeting to a close, after which the ringing was continued till ten o'clock.

ANOTHER WEEK'S RINGING IN HERTFORDSHIRE.

Readers of "THE BELL NEWS" will doubtless remember an account of "Eight peals rung in six days" in February last, and it will no doubt be interesting to many who read of a few details in connection with a similar week: the difference being "six peals in five days," which are recorded in the usual manner upon another page.

The week's ringing was organized as on previous occasions by the Rev. Canon Wigram, rector of St. Andrew's, Hertford, to whom great praise is due for bringing together such a distinguished company of ringers.

The visitors included the Rev. F. E. Robinson (Drayton Berks, Master of the Oxford Diocesan Guild), A. P. Heywood Esq. (President of the Midland Counties Association), the Rev. C. D. P. Davies (Ringmer, Sussex), the Rev. G. F. Coleridge (Caversham, Berks), the Rev. H. A. Cockey (Greenwich), Mr. J. W. Taylor, jun. (Loughborough), and Mr. J. W. Washbrook (Oxford). The six peals recorded were two of Stedman Triples, and one each of Stedman Caters, Double Norwich, Superlative, and Cambridge Surprise. It was intended as far as practicable two start for two peals a day, it will therefore only be fair to mention the failures as well as successes.

Operations commenced in the evening of Monday, November 12th, at All Saints, Hertford, where a 5035 of Stedman Caters was rung in first-class style.

Tuesday was set apart for a visit to the Squire, at Bennington, and was looked forward to by all as the day of the week, and so it proved to be.

Cambridge Surprise was to be the method, and a start was made for a peal soon after 11 o'clock, but although the ringing was good two attempts proved failures. After luncheon a slight alteration in the band was deemed necessary, and an excellent peal was then rung in 3 hours 1 minute. Being then too late for another peal, the rest of the evening was spent in practising Superlative, and Double Norwich.

Wednesday was looked upon as a hard days work, it having been arranged to visit Baldock and Hitchin, both being heavy peals of eight.

The party met at Baldock about 10 a.m., having picked up Mr. Heywood on the way, who had been the guest of L. Proctor, Esq., at Benington, the Squire himself also came to listen. The church was made for without delay, and before 2 o'clock a peal of Double Norwich had been rung, being the first peal of Major on the bells. On descending from the tower the ringers were met by the worthy Vicar, who had kindly had luncheon provided: this having been partaken of somewhat hurriedly, the party were soon en route for Hitchin, and by 4.30 Stedman Triples was under weigh. This peal was accomplished in 3 hrs. 14 mins., being the first in the method on the bells.

On Thursday a visit was paid to Braughing, and with the aid of three from Benington, a band was made up for Superlative, but after an hour and a quarter's beautiful ringing, the peal suddenly collapsed. A second start, however was at once made, and an excellent peal was rung in 3 hrs. 10 mins. It had been arranged to attempt a peal of Double Norwich at Hertford the same evening, but unfortunately the failure in the morning had placed the party in rather an awkward position, for there was no train home until late, and a service prevented another attempt being made at Braughing, so they had to be satisfied with one peal.

Friday was perhaps the most disappointing day of all. St. Albans was the place chosen to visit; the Cathedral for Stedman, and St. Peter's for Treble Bob Royal. After nearly half the peal had been rung at the Cathedral, it was found impossible to go on, as the tenor had suddenly become unringable.

The same band then went to St. Peter's, and again started for Stedman Triples, accomplishing the peal in 3 hrs. 16 mins. the tenor here also going very badly. On Saturday, those of the visitors who still remained, with several ringers from Hertford, proceeded to Waltham Abbey, for a last attempt at Double Norwich, but one or two being quite new to the method it was quickly abandoned.

The visitors having expressed themselves highly delighted with their week's ringing, and thanking the Rev. Canon Wigram for his kind hospitality, then dispersed to their several destinations.

WEST BROMWICH, STAFFORDSHIRE.

On Monday evening, November 12th, the ringers of All Saints parish church, West Bromwich, were entertained to supper at the Vicarage by the Vicar, the Rev. M. M. Connor. It has been the custom for some years past for the Vicar to give the ringers a summer outing, but this year, owing to the bad weather and other things over which they had no control, the trip did not take place, so he gave the ringers a supper instead. Eighteen sat down, including the Vicar, the assistant clergy, the Rev. J. Whiteley, and Rev. C. J. Swain, also Mr. W. R. Small and Mr. W. H. Godden, who had been invited as a guest, and the local ringers. A letter of apology was read from Mr. R. Cartwright, who was unable to be present. Full justice was done to the good things provided, and the cloth having been removed,

The Vicar said how pleased he was to meet the ringers and to see amongst them Mr. Small and Mr. Godden, and hoped such meetings would tend to bind them still closer together, and further the cause of ringing. He said he believed he had got a good band of ringers, who performed their duties regularly, not merely for the sake of ringing, but as a branch of church work. He then called on the Secretary to bring on the business which had partly brought them together that evening. A box having been brought in and placed on the table, Mr. Woodhall unlocked it and displayed to view a set of handbells, which had been purchased for the use of the ringers by voluntary subscriptions which he had collected. Each bell is engraved as follows: "1888, West Bromwich Parish Church."

In handing the bells to the Vicar (in the absence of the churchwardens), he said he had pleasure in presenting them to the churchwardens to become the property of the church for the use of the ringers at all times. The Vicar thanked him for the valuable gift, and said he hoped they would be the means of more progress being made, and good friendship existing between the ringers.

A move was then made, and everyone was eager to try the bells. Courses were rung by Messrs. Reeves, Small, Cashmore, and Cooper, and several others present tried their hands but did not get on very well. All were loud in their praise of the bells, which are a very highly-finished set, and do credit to the maker, Mr. J. Barwell, of Great Hampton Street, Birmingham. Our correspondent adds: I cannot close this report without thanking the donors for their liberality in enabling us to procure such a splendid set of bells, and also the Vicar for his continued kindness to the ringers.

THE DEVONSHIRE GUILD.

Members of St. Andrews, Plymouth branch of the above Guild visited Maker in Cornwall, on Tuesday, November 20th. The six bells were raised in peal, and six 120's of Grandsire Doubles, called differently, were rung, conducted by Mr. Taylor. Tenor 13 cwt. J. Peard, 1; Taylor, 2; Ellis, 3; Batchelor, 4; Widdicombe, 5; Screech, 6. Some call-changes were also rung, in which Messrs. W. Peard and J. Mallett, of Plymouth, and Mr. Legg of the local band took part. It was found that the bells go very well in changes, although they require some pulling at starting to rise in peal. The visitors observed with regret that a new chiming apparatus has been fixed. Few towers are free from this miserable invention.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE DURHAM AND NEWCASTLE DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

The Twelfth Annual Meeting of the Durham and Newcastle Diocesan Association of Ringers was held in Newcastle on Monday, October 29th. There were present members from Darlington, Durham, Chester-le-Street, Benfieldside, Consett, Heighington, Jarrow, Newcastle, North Shields, South Shields, Stockton, and Winlaton. During the morning the bells of St. John's, and All Saints, were rung by the Visitors, and in the evening a well-struck touch of Grandsire Triples was rung at St. Stephen's, the peal of six at St. Andrew's, and eight at the Cathedral, not being in a fit condition for practice, was not visited. At 2 o'clock Divine Service was held in St. John's Church, at which a sermon was addressed to the assembled ringers by the Rev. A. S. Wardroper, Vicar of All Saints. This was followed by the Annual Dinner and meeting at the "Crown and Mitre," Grey Street. The Rev. A. S. Wardroper, presided, and was supported by Mr. R. Story, President of the Association Mr. W. G. Routledge, Newcastle; Messrs. Thos. Hudson and R. Donkin, churchwardens of Bishop Wearmouth; and Mr. G. J. Clarkson, Hon. Sec. of the Association. The rev. chairman read letters from the Bishop of Newcastle, the Vicar of Newcastle, Canon Lloyd; Canon Blunt and the Rev. T. Bennett, regretting their inability to attend, and then gave the toast of the Church and Queen; the president then gave the Bishops and Clergy of the two dioceses. The rev. chairman in responding referred to the intended restoration of All Saints Church, when he hoped to welcome a large number of ringers. The Secretary's Report referred to the unsatisfactory condition of affairs in Newcastle, where there is not a single church which can claim as part of its organization an efficient society of change-ringers. Mr. Story in replying to the toast of "The President" said if there was not so much spirit in Newcastle for bell-ringing as they would like there were numerous signs that in the surrounding district the art was in a progressive condition. As to the state of the bells in Newcastle, he hoped after the exercise of a little more patience the necessary improvements would be effected. The officers for the ensuing year were then re-elected as follows: Mr. R. S. Story, president; Mr. F. Lees, Newcastle, and Mr. T. Clark, Ripon, vice-presidents; Mr. G. J. Clarkson, Hon. Sec. and Treasurer. At the meeting of the General Committee it was decided after a long discussion to add several names to the sub-committee, and to devote a portion of the funds to the promotion of peal-ringing, and it was decided to hold the February meeting at Hurworth, and the Whit-Monday meeting at Morpeth, the Annual Meeting going to Durham. Several new members were elected including the whole band at Lanchester, and the Rev. S. E. Pennecfather, Vicar of Jesmond, who expects shortly to have a peal of eight in his own church. Since the meeting letters have been received by the secretary from the Vicar of Newburn, expressing a wish to join the Association, and from Lord Boyne enclosing a donation of £5 to the Association, and expressing a wish that the members will attend the inauguration of the peal of eight bells now being erected in Brancepeth Church.

THE HEREFORD DIOCESAN GUILD.

CLUN (Salop).—On Monday evening, November 5th, in honour of the birthday of the Right Hon. the Earl of Powis, who is a life member of the above Guild, the local ringers met to ring the parish tower bells, but after several attempts at rounds this was abandoned, and Grandsire Doubles was struck with the clappers in hand, each ringer standing beside his bell, which was mouth upwards. Afterwards, in the ringing room, a 720 of Grandsire Minor was rung on handbells, in 22 mins. J. Davis, 1; W. H. Fussell (conductor), 2; W. Roberts, 3; J. Roberts, 4; W. Mead (Whitby), 5; J. G. Buchanan, Esq., 6. On Friday evening, November 9th, for practice, at the house of Mr. Roberts, on handbells, the local company had their third lesson in Triples, and completed a fairly well-struck touch of 368 changes.

CLUNBURY.—On Monday, November 12th, at the church of St. Swithin's by permission of the Vicar, the Clun Ringers were enabled to have a good tower bell practice. Owing to the badly going state of their own bells they cannot get "rope experience" without a journey of four or five miles.

THORNBURY, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

On Thursday, November 1st, for the wedding of Miss Wilkins, daughter of Mr. C. H. Wilkins, draper, of this town, several touches of Grandsire Triples were rung. An attempt was made to ring Holt's Original, but failed through two bells changing course, after over 1680 changes had been well struck, in 1 hr. and 5 mins. W. Davies, 1; C. Eddington, 2; J. Davis, 3; F. Symes, 4; J. Hinton (conductor), 5; T. Allsopp, 6; F. Howell, 7; J. Phillips, 8. Tenor 24 cwt. in E sharp. Messrs. J. Davis and Hinton, hail from Bristol. The local band hope to again attempt it at no distant date, as the bells have been well overhauled, and the bell cage well braced together with through bolts, and go very smooth and steady. The local band regret being hampered from making much progress, owing to loosing their members who leave the town for employment. As the bells are now thoroughly pealable, the vicar and his ringers will be pleased to welcome any band who should feel disposed to pay Thornbury a visit, and attempt a peal.

RINGERS SUPPER AT BEDFORD.

On Tuesday evening, November 13th, the Rev. and Mrs. Lambert Woodward very kindly invited the regular staff of ringers at St. Paul's, to the vicarage to partake of supper with them. After the good things provided were disposed of, a very pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent in social conversation interspersed with change-ringing upon handbells, and a very humorous and laughable reading by the vicar, a song by Mr. J. Spencer, brought the evening to a close. A hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Hills to the vicar and Mrs. Woodward for their kind and generous hospitality, seconded by Mr. Daizley. The vicar responded in a few well chosen and kind words. Our correspondent adds; I think an effort will be made to augment the present peal of eight to ten by adding two trebles. I.H.

ST. MICHAEL'S, COVENTRY.

The Coventry Times publishes a suggested design for a new bell-tower to be added to the west end of St. Michael's Church. Some time back it was discovered that the decay of the stonework had weakened the famous steeple to such an extent that it was no longer fitted to hold the bells. It is now proposed to build at the other side of the west end a new tower, repeating the design up to a certain height, but omitting one stage of the tower and the whole spire. It is suggested that with the addition of a western porch between the towers St. Michael's Church would then have a west front worthy of cathedral rank. Without discussing all the points raised by the proposal, we do not think that the idea of making a stunted copy of the present tower would commend itself to the original architect if he could be consulted, or to the experts of the present day.—Guardian.

MANCHESTER CATHEDRAL.

A Bill has been drafted for making "further provision respecting the Chapter and revenues of the cathedral church of Manchester, and for other purposes," which is to be introduced in the House of Lords by Lord Egerton of Tatton at an early date, and is under consideration by the clergy directly interested. It amends the Act of 1850, by which a rectory was annexed to each canonry, and provides that the rectories and parishes of St. Philip, Salford; St. George, Hulme; St. Andrew, Manchester; and St. Matthew, Manchester, shall on the next vacancy, cease to be so annexed. The future Canons, besides their spiritual duties at the cathedral are to perform such duties in giving higher religious instruction in the diocese as the Bishop shall from time to time approve, and shall not be absent from the diocese more than eighty days in each year except by leave of the Bishop. The residences of the Dean and Bishop are not in future to be provided by the Ecclesiastical Commission, but on the next avoidance are to be let or sold and the proceeds devoted to the revenues of the Dean and Chapter. After the next vacancy in the deanery, the income is to be £1500 (as now), besides £500 in consideration of his being charged with the cure of souls. The income of the Canons is to be £1000 (now £600 besides rectory), but they must not hold any benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment. Each chaplain or Minor Canon is to have £250, and £850 yearly in addition to sums that might be lawfully expended under the old Act, is to be devoted to salaries of singing men or education of choir boys or in otherwise promoting the efficiency of the choir. After the payment of these sums and the reservation of the sums spent on the necessary repairs of such parts of the cathedral as the Deans and Canons are now liable to repair, "and all such other necessary and proper expenditure as may lawfully devolve on the said Dean and Canons," the residue is to be paid to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Whenever such clear residue exceeds £20,000 in any one year the Dean and Canons may retain the surplus and expend it as follows:—(1) Not exceeding £1000 for the repair of the nave and such portions as they are now liable to repair; (2) an equal increase of the incomes of the chaplains or Minor Canons, not exceeding £100; (3) not exceeding £50 in increasing the stipend of the organist. It is further provided that any of the present Canons may resign his canonry and the benefice annexed, and be appointed Canon subject to the provisions aforesaid.

The following peals arrived too late for insertion in their proper place.

WORCESTER AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday last, a quarterly meeting of this Association was held in St. Martin's School-room, Tipton, between forty and fifty members being present from Areley Kings, Bromsgrove, Brierly Hill, Birmingham, Coseley, Cradley, Dudley, Hanbury, Hale-owen, Netherton, Old Hill, Stoulton, Stourbridge, Tipton, etc. In the unavoidable absence of the Rev. A. A. Cory, Vicar, through the death of the Archdeacon Iles, the chair was occupied by the Rev. H. N. Eales, senior curate, and supported by the Rev. R. H. O. Bankes, junior curate. The rev. chairman in opening the proceedings, said he had been instructed by the vicar to give the members of the Association a hearty welcome on this their first visit to Tipton, and hoped it would not be the last that would take place at his centre. As far as he (the chairman) was concerned in ringing he thought it a manly exercise, and one which he should very much like to take up if he had more time. He had made a beginning and hoped to have a little more of it in the future. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the usual business of the Association was transacted. Several new members, Hon. and performing were added to the list.

In the course of the miscellaneous business, the Hon. Sec. spoke of the advantages he thought might be derived by all Associations and Guilds taking up the suggestion of the Rev. C. D. P. Davies in "THE BELL NEWS" of November 3rd, and so handled by Mr. Washbrook November 10th, on forming a Benefit Society for ringers. He did not wish to offer any suggestion as to the form it should take, but ventured to say such a society might be worked with little expense, and so become a good financial success. If the various associations would take the matter up at their next meeting and appoint delegates from each call a meeting as central as possible, and there discuss the question as to the form it should take, the society would no doubt soon have an actual being. Several members also spoke of the benefits that such a society would bring with it, and all present heartily concurred in the remarks that had been made, and hoped ere long to see some steps taken in that direction. Votes of thanks were passed to the Vicar for the use of the School-room, tower and bells, and to the Rev. H. N. Eales for presiding. The chairman and the Rev. R. H. O. Bankes suitably responded, and the meeting terminated.

During the afternoon and evening the following touches were brought round on the tower bells: a 576 and 336 of Plain Bob Major, two 216's of Stedman Triples, 576 of Kent Treble Bob Major, and 720 of Grandsire Minor. A pleasant evening was spent at the "Court House" Inn, where courses of Grandsire Triples, Major, Caters and Cinques were gone through on the handbells.

ST. LAWRENCE'S CHURCH, SNAITH, YORKS.

ON September 20th, a meeting was called in the belfry chamber to consider the question of forming an Association of ringers and handbell ringers for the parish. Up to this date there have been only six officially paid ringers, who have made use of the handbells provided by the parish. It was therefore thought desirable to extend the body of ringers. The Rev. E. S. Fox, Vicar, was appointed President, and the Churchwardens, Vice-Presidents; Treasurer—Mr. G. Holmes; Secretary—Mr. E. Donkin. There are now ten members in regular practice, and the Association prospers. The Secretary would be glad to receive copies from other Associations or Guilds, as the members are anxious to be in touch with their brethren in the craft.

GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

Members who have not yet paid their subscriptions, are particularly requested to do so by December 1st, to ensure their names not appearing in italics in the report for the year, which will be issued as early as possible in January next. The Report for 1887 (48 pages) is given gratis to all who pay up their subscriptions, to the respective local Secretaries.

BRENTWOOD ESSEX.

On Saturday, November 17th, a band of four ringers from Romford, three from Writtle, and one from Chelmsford, met at Brentwood to attempt a peal of Grandsire Triples on the new bells of St. Thomas' Church, the first peal on which was rung by a band of the Essex Association on November 3rd. The peal selected was Hollis's Five-part; which after one failure in twenty minutes time, was fairly set going about 4.45. p.m. After about two hours and a half the tenor man was seen to be in difficulties; but encouraged by the others, he stuck to it manfully for another half hour and was then obliged to give in. When about 4800 changes had been rung and a quarter of an hour more, would have finished the peal. The ringers of the fifth, sixth, and seventh had also had as much as they could manage; and all the bells seemed to go stiffly. The ringing was rather rough, owing to the difficulty of striking the heavy bells properly; but it had gone without a hitch or shift of any kind, and the peal would have been a creditable one under the circumstances. The bells are a very fine peal, but will want much care and attention for a little while. The band was as follows: R. C. Burrell (Chelmsford), 1; W. Pegrum (Romford), 2; W. Nash (Romford), 3; A. J. Perkins (Romford), 4; A. Edwards (Writtle), 5; Rev. T. L. Papillon (Writtle), 6; W. Lincoln (Writtle), 7; S. James (Romford), 8. Conductor, A. J. Perkins.

Before leaving, the ringers by invitation of the Rev. T. L. Papillon, partook of an excellent and most welcome meat tea at The "Yorkshire Grey" Inn: The Rev. B. H. Wolley, the newly appointed curate, and Mr. Baker the steeple-keeper of St. Thomas' Church being also of the party.

WITHAM-ON-THE-HILL.

On Sunday, 11th November, 1888, a very pleasant gathering of ringers took place at Witham-on-the-Hill, Lincolnshire, the following brother strings, besides their Witham friends, being present: J. Stow, J. Rollinson, W. Wadsley and J. Alford, from Morton, W. Hudson from Bourn, G. H. Hollis and G. Hollis, jun. from Market Deeping, and T. Hollis from Wakefield. During the day, including ringing for service, a 720 Bob Minor was rung, with sixteen calls. J. Rollinson, 1; T. Allam (Witham), 2; W. Hudson, 3; G. H. Hollis, 4; J. T. Hollis, 5; T. S. Smith (Witham, conductor), 6. Also a 720 in the same method, with twenty calls. G. Hollis (aged 16 this day, and it being his first 720), 1; G. H. Hollis, 2; W. Hudson, 3; J. Rollinson, 4; N. Moxon (Witham), 5; T. S. Smith (conductor), 6. Also 360 Single Court Bob. G. Hollis, 1; J. T. Hollis, 2; W. Hudson, 3; G. H. Hollis, 4; T. Allam, 5; T. S. Smith (conductor), 6. A 360 Bob Minor was then rung, the ringers being stationed in the same order, and three 120's of Grandsire Doubles, each being called differently. T. S. Smith, 1; J. Stow (conductor), 2; J. T. Hollis, 3; J. Rollinson, 4; W. Wadsley, 5; J. Alford, 6. On the following evening, several from Witham, R. Clark, from Glinton, and G. Wells, from Deeping St. James, visited their brother strings at Market Deeping, and rang 720 Single Court Bob. R. Clark, 1; J. T. Hollis, 2; G. Wells, 3; G. H. Hollis, 4; T. Allam, 5; J. T. Hollis (conductor), 6. The company afterwards adjourned to the house of Mr. G. H. Hollis, the "George Inn," where a very pleasant evening was spent, the company separating at the hour of eleven. The best thanks of the visitors are due to Mr. T. S. Smith and their other Witham friends for the kindly manner in which they were entertained, and it is hoped that the time is not far distant when a similar gathering of old friends and new will take place in South Lincolnshire. BIRCHINGTON, KENT.—QUEX PARK BAND.

At a special meeting of the above Band, held at the "Powell Arms," on November 15th, 1888, it was resolved that Mr. T. B. Reed, be re-elected captain and treasurer. Mr. J. Bristow tendered his resignation as secretary, which was accepted. A hearty vote of thanks for his services was passed and carried unanimously, and Mr. E. Tibble was elected to fill the vacancy. A committee was also appointed to revise the rules and prepare a plan for the re-organisation of the band, which will be submitted to the members at an early date.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1888.

UNTIL some adventurous composer declares to the Exercise that he has produced a length in London Surprise greater than the peal announced in our last issue as having been rung at Burton, that achievement, as has been intimated, will head the roll of all eight-bell performances. The suggestion that such a composition may be attempted need not excite our risible faculties, for there are intrepid men to be found who consider it their mission to excel in all things, and to supersede anything and everything that has been done before. We should not be surprised to hear that the 6720 of London Surprise is to be beaten, and that already some individual, more ecstatic than profound has, by parting the tenors, and using perhaps half-a-dozen sixth-place bobs, with a few foreign calls thrown in for the sake of variety, nearly produced a 10,000 of this method, the only difficulty being that he is unable to bring the bells round without making the treble perform a variety of fantastic convolutions in the coming-home course. Such vagaries as these, however, would require that the "method" should be called by another name.

The Burton men having exhausted, as it were, the products of the Art on their limited number of bells, it seems a fitting time to again refer to the great desirability of increasing the number of St. Paul's bells to either ten or twelve. We have before pointed out such a desirable augmentation, but no effect, unfortunately, was produced by our comment on the matter. We should imagine that as the tenor of St. Paul's, Burton, is 26 cwt., an augmentation to ten at least would not be difficult; that weight of metal ought in fact to produce an excellent peal of that number. That being so, we should like to be informed what difficulty—if difficulty there be—stands in the way of such augmentation. Surely the great merchant princes of Burton-on-Trent—large-hearted Churchmen as they have on many occasions proved themselves—would willingly come forward to assist in so praiseworthy a movement as the augmentation of St. Paul's bells. The sum of money required to effect this good work would not be felt by any of them, and would add very little indeed to their "benevolence account." The inhabitants of the town, wherein feeling and sentiment is not hostile to the Church, would certainly favor the movement by their countenance and help. Difficulties may perhaps loom in the distance; but cannot they be overcome? We may ask, would the late beloved vicar have spared any efforts in overcoming them? We think not. Then we say, let our brethren of Burton take the matter in hand themselves. They must not wait to see who will take them under their wing, but commence themselves canvassing for subscriptions for the purpose. If they do, and work at this new duty with their proverbial energy, the attainment of the consummation we are looking too is not far off.

The removal of an accumulation of soil during building operations in Eastgate, Lincoln, has brought to light an important fragment of the eastern wall of the Roman city. This fragment, consisting of a large quadrangular block of solid masonry, with dressed facing, projecting inwards from the wall, is probably the basement of a quadrangular tower, midway between the north-east angle and the east gateway. Although large portions of the Roman wall exist in other parts of the circuit, this is the only place in which any of the ashlar facing has been found remaining.

Correspondence.

[While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.]

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

PROPOSED RINGERS' BENEFIT SOCIETY.

SIR,—In looking through the remarks of "Free Lance" on the above subject, I feel confident that the formation of a National Society for the benefit of distressed ringers, will be a very difficult task to accomplish; but on the other hand, if the managing committees of our various associations in this country would take the matter into their own hands, and each one form a benefit society for itself, then I think the desired object would be obtained. Suppose we formed a National Society: in the first place, the work of collecting the subscriptions into one common fund would be very difficult indeed, then in the next place I don't think we should be able to manage such a society without the aid of one or two paid officials, which of course would require some two or three hundred pounds a year for salaries alone. The first object, which "Free Lance" refers to is, to relieve cases of distress; but the most difficult part of this object would be in distributing the funds, so as to give general satisfaction to all those concerned. All societies with this object, have been sponged on more or less by persons who have not been entitled to relief, while those who have stood most in need of it have very often been left without. The second object, which is, to afford payment to its members in case of sickness would also be very difficult to work out, as "Free Lance" explains. The third object, namely, to make grants to the widows and orphans of members on their decease, would in my opinion, be the most suitable for our associations to take into consideration. The object could be worked, as Free Lance remarks, on the same principle as most death briefs. Take an association with about six hundred members (and I don't think there would be much difficulty in getting all members to join), and make a call of fourpence per member, this would realise ten pounds, thus enabling the society to make a grant of, say nine pounds, leaving a balance of one pound, which would more than cover the cost of working expenses, and in course of time would accumulate so as to pay these necessary expenses from the interest, which would then enable the society to raise the grant to ten pounds, the amount collected at each death. Then again, we have many members who would be willing to contribute to such a fund without any intention of their relatives receiving any benefit from it. Then as the funds increased, it would not be found necessary to make a call for subscriptions at every death. Then comes the question of management, which in the latter case would be no very serious matter. A sub-committee could be formed consisting of about five members of the general committee with the Secretary and Treasurer. When a death occurs, the captain of the company of which the decease is a member, should announce the same to the secretary who would then see that the money was forwarded. He would then have to make another call upon the members, which could be done through the captain or secretary of the various companies, and the subscriptions could be forwarded in the same manner. S.L.F.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Tempus fugit."

It has been my pleasure several times during the past twelve months, to remark upon the presentation of tokens of esteem to brother-strings for good services rendered. Another event of this nature I am glad to note this week, namely, the presentation of a model bell and fittings to Mr. Baker, of Hertford. I have watched the progress of the Hertford College Youths with peculiar interest, for some time back, and am thoroughly glad to see such services as those rendered by Mr. Baker recognised in such a manner. I need not add to my previous remarks on the praiseworthy character of these testimonials, but would content myself with saying that, like other events of a similar nature, while pleasing to the recipients, they are also in a very marked degree likely to prove a great incentive to others on our work, when they see that their efforts for good will sooner or later meet with some tangible recognition. Thus while we are rewarding faithful services rendered, we are at the same time offering an inducement to others to "go and do likewise."

While on this subject, I am also glad to note Mr. Newell's jubilee celebration at Reading. As the "Father" of change-ringing in that town, I can quite understand and appreciate his endeavours on behalf of the science, and form some idea of the extent of his work, and of his many anxieties and disappointments. He therefore, to my mind, is fully deserving of all the recognition which his services have received at the hands of those for whom he has laboured. One good point in his favour is that evidently he is blessed with a good wife who has given him that help and encouragement which no one but a wife can give, it was thus only reasonable that her kindly help should have been recognised. I have myself, fortunately, been blessed with such a good wife who has helped and encouraged me in my ringing work. I can therefore from experience shake hands with Mr. Newell, and wish him joy not only on the success of his worthy endeavours at Reading, but also on his happy possession of so good an helpmate.

It is to be hoped that the Hereford ringers' outing to Peterchurch will result in the establishment of a good company of change-ringers at that place. If the young band just formed there strive to repay their instructor's endeavours on their behalf, there need be no doubt that this outing will have borne good fruit.

What Englishman is there, who is not heartily glad to receive news of his fellow-countrymen abroad? I could not imagine a mortal so callous; and certainly do not think such a one exists among us. There is no need, therefore, for me to express the pleasure I felt on reading the letter from Melbourne. Mr. Shenton writes in a rather regretful tone, first because they have not succeeded in accomplishing their first peal, and second because they are not supported by the inhabitants. My friend, let these things trouble you little. The first desired event will come off in good time if only you persevere; and as for the second, well, perhaps the complaint is more fancied than real; we Englishmen are not a demonstrative nation at the best, and therefore it does not follow because of the absence of outward signs that there is no interest taken. Think of this, Mr. Shenton; most likely you will find, if you probe beneath the surface, that after all there is greater interest taken in the sound of old England's bells than you imagine. Remember the story of Mahomet and the mountain. When that "prophet" found that the mountain would not come to him, like a sensible person he went to the mountain. I leave the application of this narrative to yourselves.

We have once more our friend Mr. Attree's analysis of peals before us. Although nine months out of the twelve are now included, there seems to be very little change in the relative positions of the various associations. The College Youths are, as usual, at the top; that is as it ought to be. But what is the great Yorkshire Association doing that it remains so obstinately the eighth on the list? More than that, what is the reason that no less than seven Associations have only scored one peal each this year so far? Come, my friends at the bottom of the list, bestir yourselves; do not let the smallest unit appear opposite your names on the 31st of December. Nothing is more calculated to promote good ringing than continual practice, and although I am no advocate for getting through peals anyhow, with the mere object of scoring, I do think that the number of peals rung by an Association is indicative of the interest taken in ringing by the members.

While on the subject of peals, I cannot help noticing the interesting array of performances reported on Saturday, foremost among which is the 6720 of London Surprise Major by the Burton men, an achievement which fully deserves the encomiums passed upon it by our Editor in his leading article. If a relative value were put upon all peals rung, I fear many of our modest performances will look small by comparison. The report that "the striking was excellent throughout," enhances the credit of this performance; and shews that the Burton men are as proficient in the practical as in the theoretical part of their work.

The respected Squire of Duffield is no longer the only conductor of a peal in the method which owes its existence to his fertile brain: he now shares the honour of that performance with one of his men, who I have no doubt has before this been complimented by the President of the Midland Counties' Association. I imagine, the more numerous conductors in this method become, the more pleasing it would be to our esteemed friend, Mr. Heywood.

Thursday, November 8th, might have been a day of some importance, for I see that no less than five of the peals reported last week were rung on that day. Saturday afternoon peals we can quite understand, but this sudden outburst of peal-ringing in the middle of the week seems "passing strange."

Six of last Saturday's peals, also, I observe, have been rung in honour of birthdays of brother-strings. I do not wish to be invidious by singling out any of them, but would wish "many happy returns" to all whose anniversary of their natal day has been so honoured. We as ringers have most peculiarly a happy mode of celebrating these events, and it is most pleasing to see from time to time how our brethren make good use of their opportunities in this respect. It is many years since I first had my birthday honoured with a good ring; and although it has been similarly honoured several times since then, the pleasurable feelings aroused by the first have not faded from my memory.

It is an old saying that "a straw will shew which way the wind blows," so when I read these birthday celebrations, I always feel assured in my mind that concord and brotherly love exists in these places, and that all the band are animated with feelings of respect one to another. Am I right?

THE BELLS OF HOLY TRINITY, BLACKBURN DEDICATION OF THE NEW PEAL.

An interesting service for the dedication of the new peal of bells hung in the belfry of Holy Trinity church, was conducted on Wednesday evening, November 21st, in the presence of a large congregation. It was announced that the dedication would be performed by the Right Rev. Bishop Cramer-Roberts, but he was unfortunately indisposed, and in his unavoidable absence the function was undertaken by the Rev. Canon Champneys, vicar of Haslingden, and Rural Dean, who was also the preacher on the occasion. The cost of the bells is £700, and the committee and the congregation are pulling well together to raise the necessary amount. Close upon one half has already been subscribed, and by special services and other means it is hoped that the deficiency will grow smaller and beautifully less until it vanishes altogether. There is perhaps a doubt whether it can be accomplished without a bazaar, but that the debt will be wiped off before long is certain, so general is the satisfaction which the new peal gives in and beyond the parish. The Rev. Dr. Moffatt, the Vicar, was supported at the service by the Rev. Canon Champneys, the Rev. S. F. Harris (St. Michael's), the Rev. W. H. Palmer (St. James'), the Rev. A. Evington (curate of St. John's), and the Rev. G. F. Chevassut (curate of Holy Trinity). The Rev. Mr. Harris read the lesson, and special psalms and hymns were sung, in which the congregation heartily joined. The anthem, "The Lord is my strength," was taken from the 118th psalm, and was sung with great taste. When the sermon had concluded, the clergy repaired to the west end of the church, where the bells were briefly dedicated to God's service, and the first bell was tolled. The service in the church concluded with the singing of a hymn and prayer, and as the organ ceased the bells in the steeple were heard in merry peal. The bells have been cast by Messrs. John Taylor and Co., of Loughborough, the makers of Great Paul, and give every satisfaction. The tenor weighs 18 cwt. The massive tower in which these bells are placed is 14ft. square inside, and 140ft. high, the walls being 5ft. 6in. thick at the base, and 3ft. 6in. thick at the top. Very powerful English oak beams and trimmers, firmly bolted together, are let into the walls to carry this weight and strain. The bells are hung on the improved system of Messrs. J. Taylor and Co., being suspended on vertical iron frame castings, in which are fitted gun metal bearings with patent adjustable lubricating caps, which reduces the friction to a minimum. To mark an historical event the committee have had inscriptions cast upon the bells. The treble bears the name of "W. Walmsley, Sexton;" the 2nd that of "John Pye, Chairman of the Committee;" that on the 7th the name of "Robert Holden, Organist and Secretary to the Committee;" and on the tenor the names of the "Rev. C. W. Moffatt, L.L.D., Vicar; Rev. F. G. Chevassut, B.A., Curate; W. Stoot, Warden; and T. Longworth, Warden, 1888." The bells were subjected to a formal test on the previous evening and the ringers expressed themselves highly pleased with the ease and freedom with which they can be rung, the tone giving satisfaction to everyone who heard them. The preacher said it was very seldom that bells formed part of the original scheme of church building. They were looked upon as a parochial luxury, which when everything else had been provided some wealthy donor of the congregation by a supreme effort might present as a last and crowning gift. Bells were thus as non-essentials of church equipment the last in order, and the lowest in importance, and yet they had a very honourable place and a very definite function in the work which churches carried on. As the latest and crowning gift for the completion of God's House they witnessed to its completion; they shewed that nothing material was now wanting; and that God's House was now fitted with all things customary for the performance of His worship. They spoke with their melodious voice of the gloriousness of the religion of Christ and the fruits and consolations of His service. They roused the indolent, they reminded the forgetful, they reproved the careless; they stirred memories of the past and of the happy Sunday in the old country home, of the joys and hopes of the wedding day, of that bitter parting with some dear one gone to rest with Christ; memories which spoke with no uncertain power to the heart and conscience. They exerted as no other inanimate things could do that living force of sympathy which so wonderfully softened, soothed, and stimulated those who came within its reach, reflecting, as they did, our varying moods, so that in a very real way, "They rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep."

HARWICH, ESSEX.

An interesting event took place at St. Nicholas' tower, Harwich, on the 15th of November, being the unveiling of a handsome oak tablet, erected to commemorate the ringing of a peal of Grandsire Triples (Holt's Original) on the Prince of Wales' Silver Wedding day, at the above tower, by a band of young ringers. It is but a short period since they were taken in hand by H. W. Parker, Esq., late of Harwich, and received a little preliminary instruction in change-ringing, and by steady perseverance have now gained an insight into several methods, and should fortune favour them by causing a good instructor to settle in their midst, there is no doubt they would develop into a very fair band of ringers. Mr. Parker had promised them a peal-board on the completion of their first peal, and was pleased to hear of the accomplishment of that task, but being now a resident of Cardiff, was unable to be present himself at the ceremony of unveiling. He had, however, requested Mrs. Evans, of Harwich, to officiate for him, and that lady, with Mrs. Druce, after a few words from the Vicar, the Rev. G. W. Druce, and Dr. Evans, duly drew the curtains aside, and the tablet was dedicated for the future to the adornment of St. Nicholas' tower. A few touches were then rung, and the company adjourned to a Coffee Tavern, where they were entertained to a capital supper by Dr. Evans, the churchwardens, and other gentlemen. Previous to supper the ladies were entertained by some capital tune playing, and after justice had been done to the repast, the Rev. G. W. Druce, Rev. D. Horman, and Dr. Evans gave some good advice to the band, and congratulated them on their success in the past, advising them to practice and make further progress in the art and so become members of a society that could give great pleasure to the inhabitants of the town, at the same time deriving healthy amusement and pleasure themselves. General regret was expressed at the unavoidable absence of Messrs. G. Barclay and C. Mee, the conductor of the peal, from the meeting, but a very pleasant evening was spent, and hopes expressed of such another soon.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ROCHDALE BRANCH.

On Saturday, November 24th, a meeting of the above Branch was held at St. Thomas's church, Lees, near Oldham, only a few members being present. Touches of Grandsire Triples and Bob Minor were rung. It was agreed to hold the next meeting at St. Mary's church, Balderstone, near Rochdale, in January next. A very pleasant evening was spent at the meeting house afterwards, when tunes and changes were freely rung on the handbells. The best thanks of the members present were given to the Vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells, and to Mr. Samuel Stott for presiding.

THE CHURCH ASSOCIATION AND THE REREDOS AT ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

In July last a "rule nisi" was obtained in the Queen's Bench for a mandamus to the Bishop of London, directing him in effect either to transmit to the Archbishop the "representation" he had received with respect to the newly erected reredos in St. Paul's Cathedral, or to himself consider the representation with reference to the circumstances of the case. On Saturday, November 17th, this rule came on for argument before the Lord Chief Justice, Baron Pollock, and Mr. Justice Manisty.

The "representation" that was presented to the Bishop of London was as follows:—

"Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874.

"To the Right Reverend Father in God, Frederick, by Divine permission Lord Bishop of London, Visitor of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, in the City of London.

"We, John Derby Allcroft, of 108, Lancaster Gate, Paddington, in the county of Middlesex, justice of the peace, and Her Majesty's Lieutenant for the City of London, and residing within the diocese of London; James Houldsworth, of 36, Queen's Gate, Kensington, in the county of Middlesex, justice of peace for the said county, and residing within the diocese of London; and Sir Robert Phayre, K.C.B., of 64, St. George's Square, in the said county of Middlesex, a Lieutenant-General in her Majesty's Army, residing within the diocese of London; and John William Williamson, of 4, Stone Buildings, Lincoln's-inn, in the said county of Middlesex, barrister-at-law, residing within the diocese of London, being four inhabitants of your lordship's diocese and male persons of full age, who have signed and transmitted to your lordship under our respective hands the declaration contained in Schedule A under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, and who have and for one year next before taking any proceeding under the said Act have had our usual place of abode in your lordship's diocese, do hereby represent—

"1. That the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, in the city of London, within five years before the date hereof—that is to say, in the month of January, 1888—have introduced into the said cathedral church and set up upon the altar-piece or reredos therein an image or sculptured subject representing our Lord upon the cross, in a conspicuous position immediately above the Communion table, the figure of our Lord being of the height of 5ft. or thereabouts.

"2. That the said image or sculptured subject is constructed so as to have the appearance of such an altar crucifix as was used in the Church England immediately before the Reformation, and so as to answer the purposes for which such a crucifix was intended.

"3. That the said Dean and Chapter within five years before the date hereof—that is to say, in the month of January, 1888—have introduced into the said cathedral church and set up upon the said altar-piece or reredos therein an image or sculptured subject representing the Blessed Virgin Mary with the child in her arms, in a conspicuous position a few feet above the firstly herein mentioned image or sculptured subject, the figure of the Blessed Virgin being of the height of 5ft. 6in. or thereabouts.

"4. That each of the said images or sculptured subjects tends to encourage ideas and devotions of an unauthorised and superstitious kind and is unlawful.

"5. That the said images or sculptured subjects are respectively additions to the fabric, ornaments, or furniture of the said cathedral church, and are decorations forbidden by law.

"Dated this 4th day of May, 1888.

"JOHN D. ALLCROFT.

"JAS. HOULDSWORTH.

"R. PHAYRE, Lieutenant-General.

"JOHN WILLIAM WILLIAMSON.

Witness, T. J. Baillie, Staple-inn, W.C., solicitor."

The reply which was sent by the Bishop, and on which a good deal of the argument turns, was as follows:—

"We, Frederick, &c., having, in pursuance of the provisions of the Public Worship Regulation Act, considered the whole circumstances attending the above representation, are of opinion that proceedings should not be taken thereon for the following reasons: The proposed proceedings have for their object the determination of the question whether a reredos showing our Lord upon the Cross in a conspicuous position immediately above the Communion table, and also the Blessed Virgin Mary with the Child in her arms in a conspicuous position a few feet above, has any tendency to idolatry, and whether its erection is permitted by law.

"The main question of principle here at issue has been already decided in the Exeter case ('Phillpott v. Boyd'). In that case the reredos showed a figure of our Lord in the act of ascending to heaven in a conspicuous position immediately above the Communion table, and this reredos was held to be lawfully erected.

"The sole object of the proceedings now proposed is merely to determine whether there may be exceptions to the principle laid down in the Exeter case, and whether the reredos now erected in St. Paul's is such an exemption. It appears to me impossible to say that the difference between the two erections is of very grave importance, or that one offers serious temptation to idolatry and the other does not.

"Litigation in these matters is sometimes necessary in order to settle disputed points of grave importance. But even in such cases litigation is a necessary evil. It keeps up irritation and party strife, it embitters men's feelings, it inflicts much mischief on the Church and on true religion, and it is only tolerable as a preventive of worse mischief that would otherwise follow.

"It is always possible, after any great question of principle has been decided, to keep up litigation indefinitely by raising minor points, and such litigation becomes more mischievous the longer it is continued, while the results obtained from it are of exceedingly little value. I am satisfied that in the present instance the proceedings could not end in any result which would make up to the Church and to the religious life of the country for the mischief which must inevitably be inflicted on them by the litigation itself.

F. LONDON.

"Dated this 23rd day of May, 1888.

"London House, S.W."

Acknowledging the receipt of this statement the promoters wrote as follows to the Bishop on the 15th June:—

"As our object in making the representation, and our purpose in commencing legal proceedings was, and is, to obtain that redress to which we are by law entitled, and the removal of decorations and sculptured images forbidden by law, we feel bound to call upon you, as we hereby do, to proceed in the matter of the said representation in accordance with the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, and the law in that behalf."

To this the Bishop replied on the 18th June through his secretary that he had nothing to add to his statement of the 23rd May, and accordingly the matter must take its course.

The Public Worship Regulation Act, it may be noted, provides that in the case of cathedral or collegiate churches a representation may be made by any three inhabitants of the diocese, being male persons of full age who have and for a year next before taking the proceeding have had their usual place of abode in the diocese. They must, however, sign a declaration that they are members of the Church of England. Under sec.

8 they may make a representation to the Bishop if they are of opinion—

"That in the church any alteration in or addition to the fabric, ornaments or furniture thereof has been made without lawful authority, or that any decoration forbidden by law has been introduced into the church."

What is to follow thereupon is shown by sec. 9, which directs that—

"Unless the Bishop shall be of opinion, after considering the whole circumstances of the case, that proceedings should not be taken on the representation (in which case he shall state in writing the reason for his opinion), he shall, within twenty-one days after receiving the representation, transmit a copy to the person complained of, etc.

And then if both parties do not submit to the directions of the Bishop himself, he is to transit the case to the Archbishop, who is directed to forthwith require the Judge to hear the matter of the representation.

The counsel who appeared in the case were Sir Henry James and Mr. Moulton, Q.C., with Mr. Danckwerts, for the complainants in support of the application for a mandamus; the Attorney-General, with Mr. Jeune, Q.C., and Mr. Coward, for the Bishop of London; Sir Walter Phillimore for the Dean of St. Paul's; and Mr. Jeune, Q.C., and Mr. Coward for the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's.

Mr. Jeune had not finished his argument when the Court adjourned.

On Friday week the arguments of counsel were completed, and the Court reserved judgment.

57, Chorley Road, Blackrod.

The new church of St. John the Baptist, is now the populous district of Lower Caversham, Oxon, the foundation-stone of which was laid by Earl Percy a year ago, was consecrated on the 8th inst. by Bishop Mitchinson, acting under commission from the Bishop of Oxford. The vicar (the Rev. A. E. Molineux), churchwardens, and building committee received the Bishop at the west door. After reading the usual petition for consecration, the procession, headed by the choir and augmented by a large number of the local clergy, advanced up the nave into the chancel, singing antiphonally Psalm xxiv. The Consecration Prayers having been said by the Bishop, the sentence of consecration was read by Archdeacon Palmer, in the absence of the Chancellor. The sermon was preached by the Bishop from Mark xiii. 1, 2. The sum collected amounted to £118.

THE VICAR OF WOODSTOCK AND "HIS GRACE" OF MARLBOROUGH.

The Oxford Chronicle says:—The fact that the relations between the Duke of Marlborough and the rector of Woodstock (the Rev. A. Majendie) are greatly strained has for some time been publicly notorious. The immediate cause of the misunderstanding was the marriage of his Grace. Under the circumstances in which the union was consummated it is no matter for wonder that Mr. Majendie should have been unable to see any cause for jubilation, and that in the exercise of his discretion he should have declined to allow the church bells to welcome the noble pair on their return. The refusal, however, has cost the rector and the parish dearly. Shortly after their Graces had settled down at Woodstock Mr. Majendie was driving as usual through Blenheim Park to his chapel-of-ease at Bladon, when he was peremptorily requested by one of the duke's underlings to stop, and not to drive that way again. The consequence is that the rector has now, when he wishes to visit Bladon, to make a circuit of several miles. But this is not all. A heavier blow has been struck by the duke in closing the parochial schools, the control of which is in the hands of the Marlborough family, and in his withdrawal from the schools of his annual subscription of £100.

The Rev. A. Majendie writes to the Times:—"The duke has not closed the parochial schools of Woodstock, which are not under the control of the Marlborough family, but has simply withdrawn his subscription of £10 (not £100); but he has forbidden myself and my curates to give any religious instruction in the schools of Bladon, which is part of my parish. He has also, through his agent, withdrawn the privilege of driving through Blenheim Park from myself and my family."

A very nice Duke indeed, a noble-man with whom some of our readers would like to become acquainted (?). It is almost a pity that "His Grace" cannot be shown that a thoroughfare through Blenheim Park is not his exclusive right. He, at any rate, has not done the slightest act which should entitle him to an inch of land in the county.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT ASSOCIATION.

A committee meeting of the above will be held at the "Swan Hotel," Edmund Street, on Saturday, December 8th, at 5 o'clock, as most important business will be brought forward.

Park Road, Harborne.

E. PARKER.

A crypt is being formed beneath the south transept of Peterborough cathedral, so as to keep open for inspection in perpetuity the foundation plan of the early Saxon church. From the remains it appears that the church was cruciform, partly built of stone, with a plastered floor, and that it had nave, transepts, choir, and bell tower. The choir was discovered under the south transept of the cathedral together with the east walls of the south transept, and the east, west, and north walls of the north transept. It was a roomy church, with plaster seats; primitive in every way.

During some excavations for an enlarged heating apparatus at Sherborne Abbey, a leaden coffin was found about 10 feet beneath the level of the floor of the nave, and near the west door. It was placed east to west, the feet being to the east. The coffin was opened on Thursday, and was found to contain the remains apparently of a young girl, the outline of whose features was singularly clear, although entirely blackened by time. It was the opinion of a medical man present that the deposit was a thousand years old. Within the coffin was a wooden shell, much decayed, and the remains themselves presented the appearance of charred paper. They will be re-interred in the cemetery.

WICKHAM SKEITH (Suffolk).—On Wednesday, November 21st, at the parish church, a mixed company rung 720 Bob Minor (eighteen bobs and two singles), in 26 mins. E. Youngs, 1; G. Wilkins, 2; T. Davey, 3; J. Norlow, 4; C. Nunn, 5; G. Catermole (conductor), 6.

WARWICK.—Handbell Ringing.—On Saturday, November 24th, five six-scores of Grandsire Doubles. B. Jealous, 1-2; J. Hardy (conductor), 3-4; E. Brassington, 5-6.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"What is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

Another week's ringing tour. Six peals in five days. That is (to use a slang phrase) good business. And when we consider the character of the peals rung—two of Stedman Triples, and one each of Stedman Caters, Cambridge Surprise, Double Norwich Court, and Superlative, we might also add, very creditable business also. One can scarcely resist the exclamation "Well done!" At the same time, and without for a moment desiring to detract one iota from the credit due to these performances, I feel strongly tempted to ask how it is that the conducting of these peals is almost invariably left to our friend Mr. Washbrook? Why do not more of the others emerge from the rank and file on these occasions and try their hand at the premier position? Of course, we are not all of us endowed with those necessary qualifications which combine to make good and safe conductors, but it does appear to me somewhat singular that so few make the attempt. Mr. Washbrook has undoubtedly "won his spurs" in the matter of conducting, and (perhaps in consequence) when he takes part in a peal, it has become quite an understood thing that he shall conduct it, but, my friends, having proved your abilities as good ringers, let us see more of you coming out as conductors.

* * * * *

The peal of Stedman Cinques at Birmingham is deserving of special mention; not that it is at all surprising such an attempt should have come off successful, for when we look at the names of those who took part in it, one would have been surprised had it (barring "accidents") come off any way else; but it was a no less creditable performance for all that.

* * * * *

The Liversedge band, I see, have been successful in "pulling off" a peal of Violet Major. I am glad of that, for I have heard it asserted more than once that there is no such method on eight bells. The ringing of this peal, however, settles that question. But how is it that the report is not to hand until four weeks after it was rung? The news, although agreeable, is certainly late.

* * * * *

I trust the editorial remarks of Saturday on the augmentation of the Burton ring of eight will bear good fruit. It certainly does seem a pity that such a talented band as that at St. Paul's should be compelled to confine their efforts to Major performances, and particularly so when they have such a fine 26 cwt. tenor. My Burton friends, you who have the proud satisfaction in being able to boast of once having such a man as the late Rev. J. H. Fish as your vicar and one of your number in the belfry, take the words of our Editor to heart, go in manfully for four more bells, and then emulate the historic doings at St. Peter, Mancroft. It is quite within your power, if you try; there is, I am confident, quite sufficient ability and energy amongst you for the successful carrying out of the work; and I am equally sure that you are so well surrounded by good and wealthy sons of the church, that were you to make a start in good earnest we should not have to wait long for the first peal of Cinques or Maximus in the tower of St. Paul's.

* * * * *

I have just alluded to the comment of our Editor upon this subject. I forgot for the moment that he is on a sick bed, and quite unable to take the least part in the production of our paper; in fact he is rigidly excluded from attempting to do anything. I am sure all my readers wish him a speedy restoration to health, and will be glad to hear of his complete recovery. The complaint which has laid him low is of that order which brings with it an unusual amount of intense bodily suffering, so much so, I am informed, that at 2.0 a.m. on Monday last great fears were entertained concerning him, and his medical attendant was at once summoned to afford what relief he could. His condition, though improving, as I am glad to hear, will meet with all our sympathy.

* * * * *

"S. L. F." seems impressed with my remarks anent the difficulties attending the formation of the proposed Ringers' Benefit Society, and as a sort of alternative suggests that the County Associations should adopt the plan individually. This proposal is, of course, quite at variance with the original idea of a National Society, although, no doubt, a scheme easier of working out. I should be sorry to think that my previous remarks have had any effect in the way of "throwing cold water" upon Mr. Davies' proposition: they were certainly not written with any such motive. But I cannot think such is the case, and while refraining from further comment just now, would venture to press upon our friends to come forward in good earnest, and let us have their opinions upon it. After discussing the matter in private among yourselves, do not let it rest there, but write and tell us what you think about it. We shall thus more readily come to an understanding one with another.

* * * * *

I notice the Durham and Newcastle Associations has decided to devote a portion of its funds for the promotion of peal-ringing. How that Association intends to expend this money, of course, I am unable to say, but on the face of it, I think the decision a good one. There are, as we all of us know full well, many obstacles in the way of continual and successful peal-ringing, not the least of which (to a working-man), is the expense which it so often entails. Anyhow, I am pleased to see that our friends of Durham and Newcastle have resolved to "take the bull by the horns," and sincerely hope that the result will be commensurate with their efforts.

* * * * *

The name of Wakley is sufficiently well-known amongst us to need no introduction; and now that "brother Harry" has taken unto himself a wife, let us, with those who rung his wedding peal, wish him and his good lady happiness and joy on their entry into "the united state."

* * * * *

Another well-known name is to the fore this week in connection with a pleasant gathering at Witham-on-the-Hill, in the fen country. The name of Hollis does not appear likely to die out in the Exercise yet a bit, seeing that another scion of that family has made his appearance in a 720 of Minor at the early age of sixteen. Well done, George, my lad; keep up the reputation of your family, and endeavour to emulate the many abilities and good qualities of your worthy uncle "the Sergeant."

* * * * *

Let me likewise compliment the eight "century men" who rang a peal of Treble Bob together at Ashton on the 17th last. That the peal was a good one we cannot doubt, indeed, seeing that there were two Wildes, two Hattersleys, two Woods, and and Messrs. Thorp and Longden (of long peal fame) at the ropes' end, I think we may set it down to have been a remarkably good one. May they ring together again in celebration of their second "century."

Nor must I neglect a word of praise and encouragement to young Josiah Harford, who rung the tenor in his first peal at West Bromwich on the 17th last, at the age of seventeen. Now that you have scored your first, do not content yourself with ringing the tenor behind; but Josiah, my young friend, get into the middle, and let us see you soon figuring in another peal with a working bell.

* * * *

The ringers of Snaith (Yorks) make a request for copies (of rules, I presume), on the ground that they "are anxious to be in touch with their brethren in the craft." If such be their aim, have they communicated with the officers of their County Association, who will be the most likely persons to render them advice and assistance? If not, why not?

* * * *

How do our friends at St. Albans manage to ring two tower bells each for their Sunday services? But I forget—perhaps they chimed the bells. If so, they have neglected to tell us; and they need not have been ashamed of it by any means.

The inclination for hand-bell peals seems to be spreading. I see the Lancashire and the Norwich Associations have each scored their first. One point in connection with these peals I am glad to see, namely the presence of competent umpires. Although there should be no reason to doubt the veracity of the reports of these hand-bell peals having been properly rung, yet the mere fact that they have been umpired by some competent person is calculated to set aside any doubts. It is on this ground that I am pleased to see the presence of umpires becoming a regular and understood thing.

* * * *

The ringers of Clun appear to be an enterprising set of men, and fertile in resources. Finding themselves unable to keep their bells going in rounds even, in order to accomplish their purpose of honouring Lord Powis's birthday, they mount the bell frames and—clapper in hand—tap some Bob Doubles on the up-turned bells. Rather a singular performance. But how is it that the bells of Clun are in such a wretched condition that they cannot even be turned in rounds, and, in consequence, that the would-be ringers have to travel four or five miles to get a practice? Is it that the parish is too poor to afford the few pounds necessary to put the bells into ringing order? I cannot think they are so poverty-stricken as all that. My friends of Clun, although I must—and do—give you credit for perseverance under difficulties, I would strongly urge you for your own sakes even, to set about and get this deplorable state of things remedied. If your people are lukewarm in the matter, bring influence to bear upon them. Get the assistance of your Diocesan Guild; and then I confidently predict that before long you will be able to practice on your own bells with comfort, and get your "rope experience" at home, as you ought to, and will do, if only you display the same earnestness in this as you appear to do in your ringing.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—MANCHESTER BRANCH.

A Meeting of the above Branch was held on Saturday, November 24th, at the Manchester Cathedral. Ringers attended from Ashton-under-Lyne, Worsley, Walkden, Eccles, Northenden, and Huddersfield. Touches were rung in the following methods: Treble Bob Royal, and Major, Bob Major, Grandsire Caters and Stedman Triples. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Eccles, on Saturday, December 15th.

ST. NICHOLAS', SEVENOAKS, KENT.

Until a few months ago the fine peal of bells at this church had not been heard for some time, the old band having broken up, although the Vicar and churchwardens did all they could to induce them to keep together, and ring for Sunday services, at the wish of the parishioners. Finding their efforts were of no avail, they at once set about forming a new band. One of the old members having agreed to take the responsibility of forming a band, he got together fourteen young men, ten out of that number having never handled a bell. Tied practices were the order for several weeks, and having learnt how to handle their bell, they rang rounds for the first time on Sunday, July 8th, and great satisfaction has been given for the progress they have made since that date. Finding the ringers meant business, the churchwardens had the bells put in going order, and new ropes were supplied by Mr. Nicoll, of Bermondsey. The Rector, the Rev. T. S. Curtis, suggested that they should become members of the County Association, and at a meeting held in the vestry it was resolved that the band should become members of the same, with the Rector and churchwardens as honorary members. This having been done an instructor was appointed, and the band are making rapid strides under his tuition. The Vicar has kindly promised them a peal-board on the completion of their first peal.

THE SUSSEX COUNTY ASSOCIATION

A District Meeting was held on Saturday the 24th inst at Alfriston, being the first six-bell tower visited in East Sussex. Representatives were present from Arundel, Brighton, Eastbourne, Lewes, Alfriston and Seaford. The party sat down to luncheon at the Star Hotel, under the presidency of the Vicar, of Alfriston (Rev. J. Puttick), who was supported by the Rev. W. E. Richardson Rector of Southover, and Rev. R. F. Tompkins, of Tortington. A business meeting followed, when forty-eight new active members were elected, consisting of three new branches, namely, Horley, Milland, and Harting, the Rev. —Peebles, Vicar of Milland, also being elected an Hon Member. It was then decided that the next eight-bell tower District Meeting for East Sussex, should be held at Seaford, on the last Saturday in January, and the next six-bell tower meeting for that division of the county at Chailey.

Votes of thanks to the Vicar brought the meeting to a close. A special service was held during the afternoon, at which a short address was delivered by Rev. J. Puttick. During the evening the Local Branch decided to call in the aid of one of the Association Instructors to enable them to substitute change-ringing for call changes, which have held sway at Alfriston from time immemorial. The next District Meeting for West Sussex will be held on Saturday, December 1st, at Heene, Worthing.

THE BISHOP OF LINCOLN AT WHAPLODE.

The re-dedication of the bells of Whaplode parish church by the Bishop of Lincoln took place on the evening of Monday, November 19th. The ceremony took place at the conclusion of the hymn after the third collect at evensong. The bells were cast by Henry Penn, in 1718, and were rehung by a local builder from Peterborough. The service commenced at seven o'clock, but long before this the congregation began to assemble, and it was soon evident that it would be necessary to bring in benches and seats from the school. Several alterations and improvements have lately been made in the church by the Vicar, not the least of these being the conversion of the old Jacobean pulpit, which for so many years had done duty as a surplice cupboard, into a vestry at the end of the north aisle; while for the accommodation of the Bishop a temporary vestry had also been erected at the west end of the church. It was here that the clergy, after robing, assembled to form the procession at the commencement of the service, and among them were—the Rev. J. R. Jackson, the Rev. E. M. Sanderson, the Rev. Canon Hemmans, the Rev. Walter H. James, the Rev. F. Hatt, the Rev. E. H. Bree, the Rev. J. M. Coates, and the Rev. J. Collin, Vicar of the parish. The Bishop was attired in cope and mitre, and attended by his Chaplain, the Rev. W. Randolph. The hymn, "The Church's one Foundation," was sung as the processional hymn, a cornet, which accompanied the organ, being a great help to the voices, and rendering the hearty singing of the hymn by the vast congregation most impressive as the procession moved up the centre aisle. The service was fully choral, the choir doing their part excellently and carefully. Previous to the actual service of Dedication in the tower, the Vicar approached the Bishop as he left the Sacrament, and offered him an address of welcome, thanking him for coming to Whaplode, and asking his Lordship's permission to read a statement. The statement showed that the existing bell-frame is more than two centuries and a half old; that it had been allowed to get into a state of neglect and decay, and that the work had been efficiently done at the cost of £128 7s., towards which there was still required about £40. A good deal of the old wood had been used for various things in the Church, such as new seats in the chancel, a prayer desk used by the Bishop himself within the Sacrament, and an altar desk carved by the daughter of a neighbouring Vicar. Then followed the re-dedication itself, the Bishop going in procession to the tower, where he offered up a prayer of blessing, and saying the concluding prayers of re-dedication on his return to the chancel steps. Then was sung the special re-dedication hymn, in which the whole congregation joined heartily. After this came the Bishop's sermon from Exodus xxviii, 33—"Bells of Gold," in which his lordship pointed out first that God required the best to be given to His service, and then went on in spell-binding simplicity to speak of the different times and occasions, both religious and social, at which church bells are used; and in conclusion he spoke on the mottoes which are on each bell, and on which the Vicar had prepared and circulated some verses as a memento of the occasion. The sermon was listened to with rapt attention by the vast congregation. The alms of the congregation were afterwards received by the Vicar, and presented to the Bishop, who placed them on the Altar, and then gave the blessing. The collection amounted to £8 1s. 8½d.

ST. PAUL'S, SPALDING.

On Sunday last, the Rev. R. G. Ash, after the sermon at St. Paul's, remarked: I wish to call your attention to the three days' bazaar which is to be held this week on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, in the Corn Exchange, Spalding. The object for which it is proposed to raise a fund is (1) to rehang our peal of eight bells, and (2) to enlarge our Sunday School. With regard to the first, I may say that the opinions of three competent bellfounders—one of them perhaps the highest authority in this country—all unite in saying that the work must be done over again, owing to unfortunate faults of construction, which not only make it a physical impossibility to ring the bells, but which have already caused some injury to the tower and would finally endanger its safety. The estimated cost of this work is £195, plus carriage and refixing the clock hammer.

THE CHURCH BELLS OF THRAPSTON.

In this day of general restoration and improvement it is rather unusual to find a town belfry in the untidy and (from a ringer's point of view) unpleasant condition of that at Thrapston. A comfortless ringing-room, with ceiling open in places to the bells just above (rendering the operation of chiming or ringing anything but "soothing"), a much-worn newell stair, requiring very careful navigation, and lastly the bell-chamber itself, with louvreless windows, squeaking gudgeons and clappers, and an "out of order" state of things generally, is the impression left on a visitor to this belfry. Were these old bells rehung, it would not only be encouraging to the local ringers, but inviting to neighbouring teams, who might like to try for a peal on this little ring of five.

The bells are dated as follows: Treble, 1686, second, 1765, third, 1677, fourth (ancient), tenor, 1634. Diameter of largest bell, 35½ in.; weight about 9 cwt. The inscriptions are of no particular interest, except that on the fourth, which is in black letter, and reads thus: "Sancta Anna Ora Pro Nobis. J.S." This old sixteenth-century bell is rung daily at 1 o'clock.

THE SUSSEX COUNTY ASSOCIATION.—DISTRICT MEETING AT HEENE.

The fifth and last district meeting for the present year was held at Heene, near Worthing, and was well attended. Representatives from the following branches were present:—Angmering, Arundel, Balcombe, Brighton, Goring, Heene, Lindfield, and Midhurst. The majority of the ringing was upon the light eight in the tower of St. Botolph, the parish church of Heene, by Warner and Sons. The belfry at West Tarring was also visited during the afternoon. Luncheon was provided at the school-room, and between thirty and forty members sat down under the presidency of the Vicar of Heene, the Rev. H. McLeod Beckles, who was supported by the Rev. R. F. Tompkins, vicar of Tortington, the Rev. — Cowther, and Dr. George, of Midhurst. A business meeting was then held, but following so closely within one week of that at Alfriston, only one honorary (the Vicar of Heene), and five active members were proposed. Four towers were then proposed as suitable for holding the next eight bell District Meeting for West Sussex, at of which on being put to the vote, Bolney was selected by a large majority. It was then decided that the Angmering six-bell District Meeting should be held on the last Saturday in February, 1889. Votes of thanks to the Vicar of Heene for the use of the church bells and schoolroom, also for presiding at the meeting, and providing the special service (which was held in the church at four o'clock), were then carried.

The Chairman, in response, said he should have great pleasure in allowing any branch of the Association to have the use of the Heene bells at any time they wished to ring a peal or meet for a practice.

The performances consisted of touches of Stedman. Grand-sire, and Bob Triples, Treble Bob Major, Kent Treble Bob, and Plain Bob Minor.

The following is a list of the District Meetings as at present arranged for the early part of 1889:—January 26th—Seaford, East Sussex, eight-bell tower; February 23rd—Angmering, West Sussex, six-bell tower; March 23rd—Chailly, East Sussex, six-bell tower; April 23rd—Bolney, West Sussex, eight-bell tower; May (Annual Meeting), Brighton, Central, eight-bell tower.

FROME, SOMERSETSHIRE.

On St. Katherine's Day, the Frome-Selwood branch of the Church of England Working Men's Society, held their Annual Festival at the parish church. Amongst the members of which who joined in the procession at the close of the evening service was noticed the majority of the ringers connected with the church, wearing their medals of office, thus demonstrating the fact that they realised their position as officials of the Church and their pledge to the C.E.W.M.S., that they are prepared to stand up for the "rights and liberties" of their faith. At the entertainment which took place the following evening under the auspices of the same society, surely the ringers might have occupied a place on the well rendered and much appreciated programme by a touch on their fine set of handbells. Of late, Mr. W. S. Fricker has been unable through impaired health to take an active part in the belfry, and contemplates relinquishing his membership of the Guild at the end of the year. This it is hoped will not be the case, but that he may be restored to good health and strength as of yore, and in the coming new year continue his exertions to push on the cause of change-ringing. It possibly may be of interest to mention that the name of Fricker is well-known in the county, the late William Fricker (father to the above), being the recipient of many prizes at prize-ringing competitions, and as described by a local journal "holding a monopoly for his handbell visitations to the leading families of the town during the Christmas festivities," and for many years was captain of the Frome parish church ringers.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT ASSOCIATION.

A committee meeting of the above will be held at the "Swan Hotel," Edmund Street, on Saturday, December 8th, at 5 o'clock, as most important business will be brought forward.

WRITTLE, ESSEX.

On Saturday, December 1st, five members of the Writtle company with Messrs. Piper and Tarbun from Widford, and G. C. Scowen, from Brentwood, attempted Holt's ten-part peal of Grandsire Triples. A mis-call brought it to a close after three-quarters of an hour; but they started again, and all went well for two hours, when one of the strands of the tenor rope gave way below the sally, and gradually unwound till the sally itself untwisted and it was impossible to go on ringing the bell. This was very disappointing, as the peal was going well, and would have been the first for three of the ringers, and for the conductor as such. W. Emery, 1; Rev. T. L. Papillon, 2; G. C. Scowen, 3; F. Radley, 4; A. Tarbun, 5; A. Edwards, 6; W. Lincoln (conductor), 7; W. J. Piper, 8. On Monday, December 3rd, in honour of the silver wedding day of Mr. and Mrs. T. Osborne, 504 of Grandsire Triples were rung, and at 6 a.m. and in the afternoon 840 and 504 in the same method by a band composed entirely of residents in the parish, viz. W. Emery, 1; J. Everard, 2; A. Edwards, 3; F. Radley, 4; R. Wood, 5; Rev. T. L. Papillon, 6; W. Lincoln (conductor), 7; A. Bonnington, 8.

NORTH NOTTS ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday, December 1st, a ringing meeting of the above Association was held at the Abbey church, Worksop, when members were present from Everton, Retford, Shire Oaks, and Worksop. Ringing commenced at 4 p.m., and was kept up for several hours, the most creditable performance being a 720 of Oxford Treble Bob, which was brought round in 25 mins. S. Tomlinson, 1; E. Russon, 2; J. Swindm, 3; W. Hargreaves (conductor), 4; G. Brown, 5; R. Beestin, 6. The next performance was a 360 of Kent Treble Bob Minor. S. Tomlinson, 1; J. Swindin, 2; E. Russon, 3; W. Hargreaves (conductor), 4; G. Brown, 5; D. Russon, 6. And 360 of Violet Treble Bob. S. Tomlinson, 1; J. Swindin, 2; G. Barrowcliff, 3; W. Hargreaves (conductor), 4; D. Russon, 5; R. Beestin, 6. Several other methods were tried by mixed bands, but nothing worthy of reporting being accomplished. Messrs. Swindin and Brown hail from Everton, Hargreaves, Tomlinson, and Russons (2) hail from Shire Oaks, and Beestin and Barrowcliff are of the local company. At the business meeting after ringing it was decided to hold the next Quarterly Meeting at Retford, on Saturday, March 2nd, 1889.

GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

Members who have not yet paid their subscriptions, are particularly requested to do so by December 1st, to ensure their names not appearing in italics in the report for the year, which will be issued as early as possible in January next. The Report for 1887 (48 pages) is given gratis to all who pay up their subscriptions, to the respective local Secretaries.

A BURIAL CASE.

Mr. Burt asked the Home Secretary on Thursday week, whether he had seen in the Newcastle Daily Leader of November 19th, a copy of a letter addressed to George Felton by the Rev. R. W. Snape, vicar of Lamesley, Gateshead, in reply to a notice of a burial under the Act of 1880. This letter stated that the Act required the burial to take place between the hours of 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., and that the sexton was told to receive the usual fee of 8s. before beginning to make the grave. In reply, the Home Secretary said that the law did not require such notice to be given, but he was not aware that it was illegal:—

"There is nothing in the statute as to the manner in which the fee is to be collected. It is a question of ecclesiastical law whether the vicar acted legally in insisting on the payment of the fee before the opening of the grave, and I must decline to give an opinion on that point. It is one over which I have no jurisdiction. The statute says that he shall be entitled to the same fee as if the burial had taken place with the service of the Church of England."

Church News.

The Bishop of Dunedin and Mrs. Nevill left for New Zealand on Friday, December 7th, by the Orizaba. The Bishop's Commissaries in England are the Revs. W. A. Purey-Cust, Belton Rectory, Grantham; and W. H. Jervois, St. Matthew's, Westminster.

The Bishop of London, who was born at Santa Maura, in the Ionian Islands, completed his sixty-seventh year on Friday.

Canon Knox Little is leaving for Canada, where he is to conduct a series of Missions and visit his nephew in Manitoba. He will return to England in February next.

Bishop Cheetham, who has been vicar of West Cowes since 1882, but has resigned on account of ill health; has taken the chaplaincy of Trinity Church, Rome, for one year.

On Wednesday, the Bishop of London solemnly dedicated a fine new sea-going steamboat for the use of the Thames Church Mission to ply between London and Gravesend. The boat was named the Edward Auriol, and is steel built.

The Rev. James Terry Patch, late diocesan inspector, Exeter, now vicar of Cornwood, Devon, by a deed poll enrolled in the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice, has changed his surname from Patch to Mundy, and will be known as the Rev. James Terry Mundy.

The Rev. Thomas Edward Usherwood, Canon of Maritzburg, now at Rossmore, Parkstone, Dorset, has been appointed Assistant Commissary to the Bishop of Maritzburg.

The Bishop of Lichfield has appointed the Rev. Charles Bodington, vicar of Christ Church, Lichfield, and Rural Dean, and also Diocesan Missioner to the canonry vacant by the death of Archdeacon Iles. The canonry will thus be directly associated with the Mission work of the diocese. Mr. Bodington was previously rector of St. James's, Wednesbury, of which church he was curate on first coming to the diocese in 1865. Two years ago he was offered the bishopric of Bloemfontein, South Africa, which he declined.

The Bishop of Lichfield has appointed the Rev. M. H. Scott, vicar of St. Mary's, Lichfield, and a brother of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, to be Archdeacon of Stafford, in succession to the late Archdeacon Iles. Mr. Scott, who was a Scholar of Caius, took his degree in 1850 as Fourth Senior Optime. Having been vicar of Ockbrook, Derbyshire, 1852-72, and St. Andrew's, Littlechurch, Derby, 1872-8, he was appointed by the Dean and Chapter to St. Mary's, and has been Prebendary of Robenhale since 1877. He is a Proctor in Convocation, chaplain to the Bishop, and a commissioner under the Pluralities Act for the Archdeaconry of Stafford. An Evangelical and earnest temperance advocate, he is descended from Scott the Commentator. His cousin, Bishop Charles Scott, is a missionary Bishop in North China.

On St. Andrew's Day two Bishops were consecrated by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who was assisted by many Bishops, in Westminster Abbey, in the presence of a large congregation. The Bishops-designate were Archdeacon Sumner, Prolocutor of the Lower House of Canterbury Convocation, who was to be consecrated Bishop Suffragan of Guilford, and the Ven. Charles Frederick Douet, Archdeacon of Surrey, Jamaica, who was to be consecrated Assistant-Bishop of Jamaica. The Archbishop, the Bishop of London, and the other officiating Bishops were received by the Dean and the abbey clergy in the Jerusalem Chamber, and a procession was formed, which passed through the Dean's private doorway into the abbey. The Archbishop at once commenced the Communion Service, morning prayer having been said at eight o'clock. The epistle was read by the Bishop of Winchester, and the Gospel by the Bishop of Jamaica (Dr. Nuttall). The Rev. C. Grant, who preached, selected as his text 2 Tim. ii. 3. After the sermon the Bishops-designate retired to the Islip Chapel to put on their rochets, the choir in their absence singing "The Lord hath been mindful of us" (Wesley). On their return they were formally presented to the Archbishop, the Bishops of Winchester and Dover presenting Archdeacon Sumner and the Bishops of Rochester and Jamaica, Archdeacon Douet. The Queen's mandates for the consecration having been read, and the oath of canonical obedience administered, the Litany was intoned by the Precentor, the Rev. Flood Jones. At the conclusion of the questions, when the Bishops-designate retired to put on the rest of the Episcopal habit, the choir sang, "How lovely are the messengers" (Mendelssohn). The two Bishops, fully robed, were then escorted to the presence of the Archbishop, and the Veni Creator Spiritus was sung as they knelt before the altar. After the consecration the two newly made prelates took their places with their Episcopal brethren. A celebration of the Holy Communion followed, the Archbishop being the celebrant, assisted by the Bishop of London and the Dean of Westminster. The offertory was given to the Jamaica Church Fund.

On the 15th ult. the chancel of Atherstone church, formerly the monastic choir of an Augustinian Priory, was reopened after being alienated from its sacred purposes for over 300 years. For some time it was used as a grammar-school, and when the new school was built the chancel was sold, and it was purchased by the Rev. F. H. Riching (the late vicar), aided by subscriptions, and partially restored at a cost of £700. It was his great wish and endeavour to finish the restoration, which was all but completed at the time of his death in July last. Towards this object he had already collected a further sum of about £550, and the work has now been finished at a probable cost of £650, the architect being Mr. J. Oldrid Scott. The chancel is very long, lofty, and finely proportioned with oak waggon roof and oak stalls, the east wall of the sanctuary being decorated with beautiful mosaic work. The magnificent perpendicular east window forms a striking feature in what is now one of the finest churches in Warwickshire, being also one of the few examples in England in which the tower stands at the intersection of the nave and chancel, and of an octagon tower. Great historic interest is attached to this restoration, for Henry VII. knelt before its altar on the eve of the battle of Bosworth Field. On removing the plaster, traces of the Tudor arms, together with the white rose of York, could plainly be seen on the east wall. The opening sermon was preached by the Bishop, who was also celebrant at the Holy Communion. At the luncheon after morning service a noble tribute was paid to the memory of the late vicar by the Bishop, also by Mr. J. S. Dugdale, M.P., Q.C., Chancellor of the diocese, and by the new vicar, the Rev. W. Northcote, who stated that Mr. T. Richings had built the vicarage and church, enlarged the endowment, rescued the chancel from secular purposes, carried out the restoration, and though called away just before its re-opening, had left full instructions by will with regard to it, which are being faithfully carried out.

The foundation stone of a new Mission church in the rapidly growing parish of Cowley St. John, Oxford, was laid on Monday week by the Warden-elect of Keble College (the Rev. R. J. Wilson). The Vicar (the Rev. W. Scott), officiated, and the architect (Mr. A. Mardon Mowbray) handed a trowel to Mr. Wilson, who declared the stone to have been laid in the faith of Jesus Christ, and in the course of a brief address remarked that that building was being erected in no small degree by the little gifts of those who could give but little.

The church which has been erected by the corporation of Liverpool in place of the old parish church of Llanwddyn, the site of which is to be submerged along with the rest of the village by the waters of the lake Vyrnwy—the great artificial reservoir for supplying Liverpool with water—was consecrated yesterday week by the Bishop of Bangor, acting on behalf of the Bishop of St. Asaph, who is incapacitated by grave illness. The new church, which is dedicated to St. Wyddyn, is about two miles from the old church, and overlooks the great Vyrnwy embankment.

There is a project, approved of by the Bishop of Rochester for erecting a Mission church at Brompton, near Chatham, to meet the requirements of a populous district, and to perpetuate the memory of the late Canon Comnay. It is stated that for twenty-four years the clerical income of the deceased clergyman never reached £150 per annum, yet whilst the vicar of St. Nicholas's Rochester, he devoted no less than £13,000 for the building and endowment of a church at Brompton.

THE BLACK LETTER SAINTS' DAYS.

Mr. Gladstone is unsurpassed in the thoroughness with which he musters and the skill with which he sets out all that can be advanced to support any proposition which recommends itself to him. We therefore wonder that in his recent article on Queen Elizabeth and the Church of England he omits to mention the "Black Letter" Saints' Days. For the Calendars of 1549 and 1552 contained only those that are known as Red Letter Days, excepting indeed the names of St. George and St. Laurence. It was in 1561 that the Calendar was revised under authority of a letter from the Queen to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. And it seems rather significant that whereas the Royal Letter directed the Commissioners to "peruse the order of the Lessons and cause some new Calendar to be imprinted, whereby such chapters or parcels to be removed and other more profitable may supply their rooms," yet in fact only the First Lessons for Whitsunday were changed, whilst the leading feature of the new Calendar, if we except the "Tables," was the insertion of more than fifty names which now appear in our Prayer Book up and down the Christian year as those of "Black Letter" saints. That the subject was not thought unimportant seems evident also from the fact that three more names were added at the last Revision, in 1661—those of Bede, St. Alban, and St. Enurchus. Something might be said as to the principles on which the selection was made from the much larger number found in the mediæval Calendars; and something also as regards the rather unaccountable omissions. Why, for instance, are not St. Cuthbert and St. Aidan and St. Patrick in their places? But it is at any rate apparent, from an inspection of the list itself, that one object kept in view was, as Mr. Francis Procter says, to "evince that the English Church was still in spirit undis severed from the national Church of earlier years, and from the brotherhood of Catholic Christianity." This is the reason why so many great names from the earlier mediæval times appear, and why so many also from Gallican hagiology. The whole transaction, both in itself and the manner of its being effected, is characteristic. It was a double-edged stroke of policy at once anti-Papal and anti-Puritan.

We are led to make these remarks in part by Mr. Gladstone's article, in part also by a very striking sermon preached in Exeter Cathedral on Sunday, September 30, by the Rev. W. J. Edmonds, one of the Prebendaries. September 30th is St. Jerome's Day in our Calendar, and some telling sentences are devoted by Mr. Edmonds to the juxtaposition of St. Jerome with St. Michael and All Angels—"the most super-human of angels, the mightiest in all the hosts of God," and "the most human, the most historical, the most passionate, the most modern of all the Fathers of the Church;" "the faulty monk next to the flawless archangel." Mr. Edmonds lays out his chief strength, however, upon what he says about the Latin Bible. Jerome's great work, which for a thousand years represented the Word of God to the whole great West of Christendom. We call attention to it because it affords signal illustration of one manner at least in which the "Black Letter" Days may be turned to account in cathedrals. In those national sanctuaries at any rate some observance of these days might surely be introduced and combined with not a little that would be instructive and edifying.

ST. NICHOLAS, GUILDFORD.

The ringers of the above church have not been able to ring the bells for many weeks in consequence of a case of severe illness near the church. On Thursday evening, November 22nd, they rang 504 of Grandsire Triples upon handbells. C. W. Miller, 1; T. H. Colburn, 2; J. Heathorn, 3; F. W. J. Rees, 4; J. J. Jones, 5; F. Bennett (conductor), 6; W. Groves, 7; G. Sheppard, 8.

In the parish of Haslingden, Lancashire, a new ecclesiastical district is about to be formed, Miss Turner, of Carter Place, having made arrangements before her death, which took place on Wednesday, November 28th, for the endowment of the church of St. John, Stonefold, built by her in 1885, and consecrated in the following year as a chapel-of-ease to Haslingden.

ALLEGED ASSAULT BY A RECTOR.

The rector of Eaton Bishop, the Rev. Charles Burroughs, was charged at the Herefordshire Hall on Saturday with assaulting Mr. Washington Taylor, a churchwarden, on Sunday, November 4th. The complainant, who is a farmer, alleged that with a view to enforcing the Bishop's order as to the disposal of the offertory, he followed the rector down the church at the end of the service. On reaching the vestry, the rector, who was carrying the alms-dish, turned (he said) and pushed him, and slammed the folding-doors together. Subsequently the churchwarden entered the vestry, and the rector rushed past him to go into the church. The churchwarden admitted having written to the local paper comparing the rector to Judas Iscariot; and he now declined to withdraw the expression. For the defence the assault was denied; and it was argued that the churchwarden had no business in the vestry. In dismissing the summons, the chairman of the magistrates said there was no doubt that their jurisdiction was ousted by the question of title that had been raised. He also expressed his distress that the churchwarden had not withdrawn his most disgraceful and insulting comparison.

HARROGATE, YORKSHIRE.

On Friday afternoon the Bishop of Chester laid the foundation stone of a chapel-of-ease at Starbeck, to Christ Church High Harrogate, a parish which was, till the foundation of the see of Ripon in 1836, inside the border of the diocese of Chester. A school is to adjoin the building. Preaching afterwards at Christ Church, from Neh. ii. 18, Dr. Stubbs said that when he looked back for sixty years on the district endeared to him by the earliest and best associations of a busy life, those years covered the whole period of the extension and development of Harrogate from the small cluster of ruins and lodging houses which composed it in 1828 to the great corporate town of to-day, full of wealth and life and energy. He could, as few of those present could, remember the old chapel which stood near the site of Christ Church, and which had been for some eighty years approximately adequate to the needs of the permanent inhabitants, when the old church at Knaresborough was every Sunday afternoon crowded even to stifling by the summer visitors from Harrogate. He could remember the consecration of the church in 1831, and heard the first sermon preached in it. The little hamlet for which they were at work that day was composed of the Knaresborough Spa and inn, and the Harrogate Workhouse, and scarcely half-a-dozen other houses, and Stonefall the centre and source of religious light to the whole district, the home of the venerable and beloved family of the Vicar.

The Bishop of Leicester, presiding at Northampton on Thursday, in the absence of the Bishop of Peterborough, at the annual meeting of the Northamptonshire Education Society, said that the attitude of the Church in the matter of education should be one of defence and not of defiance, but Churchmen must at all costs maintain the principle of religious education. He thought that in the country at the present time things looked favourable, and was gratified at the attitude taken up by the School Board electors in the metropolis. A resolution was passed expressing general approval of the majority report of the Education Commission.

The Lancaster ringers wish to inform the Exercise that all correspondence to them must, in future, be addressed to Mr. R. S. Hirst, 17, Martin Street, Lancaster.

A "Charles Dickens" bazaar was held last week in the Drill Hall, Macclesfield, in aid of the parish church, of which Canon Turner is the vicar. The stalls represented places mentioned in the works of Dickens. The bazaar was opened by the Bishop of Chester, and the receipts amounted to £1,100.

WANTED a good Bell-ringer who thoroughly understands the methods of change-ringing, and capable of writing out changes. To go abroad to erect and ring Harrington's Patent Tubular Bells. Passage paid out. A Carpenter or Fitter preferred. To a steady man this would be an excellent opening Address immediately, stating Age and Salary required, to HARRINGTON & Co., Coventry.

THE SOCIETY OF TRINITY YOUTHS.

At a meeting of the above society, held in the vestry-room of St. Alphege Church, Greenwich, on Tuesday evening, December 3rd, Mr. Edward E. Richards, of St. Mary's, Woolwich, was unanimously elected to the post of Treasurer, vacant by the resignation of the Rev. Herbert A. Cockey, M.A., who has been appointed to the vicarage of Oldland, Bristol.

DATE TOUCHES IN THE STEDMAN METHOD FOR THE YEAR 1889.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

As date touches can always be obtained in Stedman in a legitimate manner without any irregular changes, this method is preferable to others for the purpose. The following compositions may tempt those who have not the opportunity of going for a peal at least to try for a touch in this most attractive of odd bell methods.

In the touch of Triples 6-7 are at home at every course-end, and the 4th being fixed in treble's place, both 7-4 and 4-6 come together behind in each course, thus producing the best obtainable music. The following instructions may be useful to conductors who are unaccustomed to call by the number of the six.

Call the 7th Wrong, Home, Wrong, Last whole turn, In quick, Home, Home with a double, Wrong. The first course-end will come up five sixes after this last call. The distance apart of the calls can be seen below. After the first course the 7th is a fixed bell; the bobs at 7 are called at its last whole turn, those at 12 when it is in quick. In the last course the bob at 9 is made by the 7th, when it has come out slow. After making the bob it goes in quick and the bells come round at hand four sixes later. The bells behind at the single are the treble and 2nd, of which the latter makes the 6th place.

The touch of Caters is throughout in the most musical position to be had, viz., with the 6th fixed in 2nd's place, and the 5th always either at home or in treble's place. The touch of Cinques is good music generally, and arranged in the ordinary way with the treble a fixed bell. As all conductors of Caters and Cinques are familiar with the usual notation by figures, further explanation is superfluous.

CLUN, SALOP.

INSTALMENT OF THE NEW ORGAN.—The ceremony of opening the new organ which has been placed in the parish church of St. George took place here on Tuesday last. The firm of Nicholson and Co., Worcester, was selected to build the organ, on recommendation of Sir Frederick A. G. Ouseley, canon, of Hereford Cathedral, and the Rev. W. Rayson (Lindridge), and was executed at a cost of £325, which amount, added to the expense of erection and carriage, will involve an expenditure of about £350. The specification was prepared by Sir F. Ouseley. The parishioners are at length in possession of an instrument which is worthy of their fine old church, and which will add to the already many attractions. A scheme to provide a better organ for this church was first set on foot some years ago by a number of ladies who devoted £117, the proceeds of a bazaar which they held, for the purpose of forming a fund. This sum together with its interest, now amounts to £125. The project seems to have been left dormant for a time, until last year, at a meeting held in the Town Hall to consider the best means of celebrating her Majesty's Jubilee in Clun, Mr. T. L. Brown (who officiates as organist in the parish church) proposed the organ scheme. The proposal was not very favourably received, but was ultimately adopted, and the arrangements were left with the proposer to be carried out. Mr. Brown at once set about the work with characteristic energy. The scheme met with general approval from the parishioners. The Earl of Powis headed the subscription list with £50, and the fund is now little short of £300. There was a large congregation on Tuesday, and the service, which was a fully choral one, was of a most impressive character. There were present, with the choir—The Vicar (the Rev. C. Warner), the Rev. Sir F. A. G. Ouseley, Bart., the Revs. W. Rayson (Lindridge), W. M. Rowland (Bishop's Castle), E. Brown (Clun), J. H. Brown (Bedstone), C. Borrough (Eaton Bishop), Baxter (Sibdon), and W. Glen (Wentnor). The prayers were intoned by the Rev. Rayson. The proper Psalms were 148th, 149th, 150th. The first lesson was read by the Rev. Mr. Baxter, and the second lesson by the Rev. C. Borrough. The anthem was the "Hallelujah Chorus" (Handel). The hymns were—processional 395, recessional 396, other hymns. 308 and 302, (A. & M.) Mr. W. Haynes (Malvern) presided at the organ, and the choir was conducted by Mr. T. L. Brown. The choir numbered about 40, not including the lady auxiliaries. The arduous work of training devolved entirely upon Mr. T. L. Brown, to whom the result (which reflected the greatest credit upon his instruction) must have been very gratifying. In the course of the service the Vicar read a deed signed by himself by which the new organ and brass lectern were declared to be dedicated to the use of the church for ever, and handed the same to the churchwardens—Mr. T. Gwillian (Clun) and Mr. J. Jones (Treverward)—in the presence of the congregation. An appropriate sermon was preached by the Rev. Sir F. A. G. Ouseley, who took for his text 2 Kings iii. 15. The collection which was in behalf of the deficiency in the organ fund, amounted to over £12. In the evening the choir were invited by the vicar to partake of an excellent spread provided at the schools. At 8 p.m. an organ recital was given at the church by Mr. W. Haynes, when there was a large attendance, and the performance of that skilled artist were greatly appreciated.

TITHE AGITATION.

In a postscript to his letter, in last week's Guardian issue, Mr. R. Jasper More, M.P., alluded to a scheme of redemption proposed in a letter to the Times of the 24th ult., by Mr. A. F. Jeffreys, the Conservative member for the Basingstoke division of Hampshire. We now subjoin the scheme as explained in that letter:—

"The reduction of the average from a septennial to a triennial is supposed to be a hardship and loss, to titheowners; but I think that is a great mistake, as if the prices of corn continue to rise as they have done this year, by a triennial system of averages we should quickly get into a high tithe again, whereas, under the old septennial average, we must have a low tithe for at least five or six years, and, therefore, this clause in the Bill is no relief to the tithepayers. But in my opinion there will never be a final settlement of the tithe question without a scheme of redemption, and with your permission I will shortly describe my plan.

"In the redemption scheme of Lord Salisbury last year it was proposed to redeem the tithes at twenty years' purchase at par—i.e., every £100 nominal value of tithe would be redeemed by a capital payment of £2,000—and the titheowners, I believe, quite agreed to this proposal; but for the tithepayer or landowner to find this money would cost him at least 4 per cent. or say, £80 a year, and as every £100 of tithe under the septennial averages for this year is only worth £84 2s 8½d., and the actual value calculated on the present prices of corn is not much over £70, it follows that no landowner of ordinary intelligence would think of redemption on these terms.

"But my plan would be—and I beg attention to this point—to redeem the tithe at, say, twenty years' purchase at par, but by means of a loan from the State at 3 per cent., to be paid of in fifty or sixty years by an annual sinking fund.

"And there is a precedent for this in the case of the loans advanced by the State to owners and occupiers of land in Ireland. This £100 nominal value of tithe at twenty years' purchase would amount to £2,000, which at 3 per cent. would cost the tithepayer £60 a year, being a very considerable and immediate relief from the incidence of the tithe; but I would also propose to pay off this capital sum of £2,000 in, say, fifty years by means of an annual sinking fund which, with the interest would only amount to £77. 13s 6½d. a year, which is considerably less than the present value of the tithe rent-charge.

"No doubt this State loan would amount to a large sum; but it would cost the country nothing, and be an excellent security as it would be a first charge on the land.

"I therefore venture to hope that the Government will introduce some measure of this kind next year, which will be fair and honourable to both titheowners and tithepayers, and will be a lasting settlement of this vexed question."

A determined resistance to the payment of tithes was made on Thursday, at Llanrhystyd, Cardiganshire. A body of men, acting for the vicar and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and supported by constabulary, attempted to collect tithes from a dozen farmers who are two years in arrears. Those who resisted included four freeholders, poor law guardians, and a county magistrate. Where animals had been distrained upon they could not be found. It was the same with hay. Ultimately nine of those who resisted paid the claims, but in three other cases a refusal was given accompanied by a threat to resist to the utmost. Large amounts for tithe are still due in various parts of the county.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1888.

At their late meeting the Worcestershire Association debated the proposal with regard to a Ringers' National Benefit Society, which was recently revived in our correspondence column. We need scarcely remark that we warmly favour the scheme, and shall be ready at all times to render the matter all the help in our power. No doubt there are difficulties to surmount; we do not deny them, nor do we wish to blind the eyes of our readers to the fact of their existence. With time and care we hopefully trust that they may be overcome. And the Worcestershire Association has taken a right step in this direction by talking on the subject. It must in the first instance be well ventilated. Ringers regard themselves as Church Workers, and in their business affairs they cannot do better than copy the action of their spiritual Mother. How has the Church been enabled to make the strides that we have seen Her make within the last two or three decades? Humanly speaking, by Her system of Diocesan Conferences and Church Congresses. These assemblies have no legislative power, but by shewing the condition and strength of the general feeling of the Church, they fortify the hands of Convocation and of Churchmen in the Houses of Parliament. Earnestly therefore we would recommend all Diocesan and County Associations to name the proposed Society as one of the subjects for discussion at their next Annual or General Meeting. Nothing will ever be done without discussion, and where is the raison d'être of our various Guilds and Associations if it be not found in mutual counsel and deliberation? The Church House was much derided, but it is founded. At least no opposition has been offered to the Ringers' National Benefit Society, and were it once founded there is no knowing, as in the case of the Church House, to how many good things it may not lead.

A CORRECTION.

SIR.—I see by your issue of November 24th, that I am credited with ringing the 2nd and tenor, and conducting a 720 of Single Court Bob, at Market Deeping, on the 12th inst. The ringer of the tenor and conductor should have been "T. S. Smith," of Witham.

A FALSE PEAL.

F SIR.—I am very sorry to say that Shipway's peal of Bob Major, 5120, which was rung at St. Martin's, Salisbury, and called by me on the 17th October last, is false. Mr. Arthur Knights, of Chesterfield has been kind enough to point this out to me. This composition appears in the "Shipway Reprint."
W. W. GIFFORD.

A memorial window, by Messrs. Burlison and Grylls, to the late Canon Lowe, for so many years vicar of Willingdon, near Eastbourne, has been dedicated in the church by Archdeacon Sutton, on behalf of the subscribers. The Archdeacon preached a most impressive sermon from Prov. x. 7, dwelling on the long and faithful services of the late Canon and the wonderful way in which he kept touch with all classes among his people. The church was well-filled, and there was a large number of communicants. The offertory was for the sick and aged in the parish. The memorial window, which is at the north side of the chancel, immediately opposite the window erected to the memory of the late Mrs. Lowe, consists of two lights, representing the Good Samaritan and the Good Shepherd. Underneath the window a memorial brass tablet has been placed, having upon it these words:—"To the glory of God, and in grateful memory of Thomas Lowe, M.A., of Oriel College, Oxford, Canon Prebendary of Chichester, thirty-seven years vicar of this parish (1850-1887), seventeen years Rural Dean of Pevensy Division I.; this window is erected by friends and parishioners who loved and revered him."

On one occasion the fourth rope broke; on another occasion after ringing over a thousand the sixth rope broke, at other times a mistake has happened. But on Saturday, December 1st, their efforts were crowned with success by accomplishing 1260 changes without a hitch in 42 mins. E. Cross, 1; G. Broderick, 2; E. Hendy, 3; J. Steed, 4; A. Richards, 5; W. Pine, 6; W. Marsh (conductor), 7; W. Condry, 8. This is believed to be the first quarter-peal by any local band since the days when their respected and esteemed President, Mr. W. Banister, took an active part in change-ringing. They hope yet to cheer his heart by accomplishing a whole peal. This quarter-peal contains twenty-four 6-7's, and was composed by E. Pitt, of Exeter.

LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—MANCHESTER BRANCH.

A meeting of the above Branch will be held at the parish church, Eccles, on Saturday, December 15th. Bells ready at three o'clock. A good attendance is requested.

JOHN EACHUS, Secretary.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Retgression is contrary to nature."

It would be difficult to peruse the pages of last Saturday's paper without being impressed with the idea that bell-founders, bell-hangers, and bell-ringers are alike busy just now. New rings are being opened, and old ones re-hung, while the list of peals accomplished swells out into page after page. This is a satisfactory "sign of the times." When we remember the doleful prognostications some years ago of the decay of our favourite art, through the indifference of Churchpeople and the public generally, these signs alone are evidence enough to dispose of those optimist notions, and to prove that the science of change-ringing never existed in more happy times than the present. If ever our art and work does degenerate and lose its hold on the public taste and sympathies, the cause of it will, I am fully convinced, have to be laid to the charge of ourselves, from our own lack of energy, and neglect to keep ourselves up to the standard. Happily there is no fear of that deplorable state of affairs. Present appearances bode in the opposite direction; and thus, without a great change for the worst takes place, bell-founders, bell-hangers, and bell-ringers may reckon on a continuation of busy times. May it be so!

As a contrast to this satisfactory state of affairs, we have an account of the condition of the bells at Thrapston: "a comfortable ringing-room, with ceiling open in places to the bells just above; . . . a much-worn newell stair, requiring very careful navigation, and lastly the bell-chamber itself, with its louvreless windows, squeaking gudgeons and clappers, and an 'out of order' state of things generally." Here is a pretty state of affairs for you. Are there any ringers at Thrapston? If so, they ought to be thoroughly ashamed of themselves. We are told that were these bells re-hung, it would be "encouraging to the local ringers." But what are these local ringers about that they do not of themselves make things more creditable and "encouraging?" Do they fold their arms and—Micawber-like—wait for something to turn up; Why do they not set to and remedy these defects in their tower? Squeaking gudgeons and clappers are easily enough remedied, when the will is there; a few shillings spent in slates or oak would soon furnish the "louvreless windows;" and if the ringers showed any energy in putting such things to rights as were quite within their power, I cannot but think that their efforts would be supplemented by those of the parishioners, so that the "much-worn newell-stair" would soon be repaired, and the re-hanging of the bells quickly become a fait accompli; and by those means the ringing of the bells of Thrapston become "inviting to neighbouring teams." Wake up, ye men of Thrapston; remember the good old saying, that "God helps those who help themselves."

Another evidence of the energy displayed in ringing matters is the large number of reports of touches rung, and peals and touches attempted. Now, while I am always glad to read of these touches—quarter-peals, 720's, and such like—having been brought round, and particularly when these have been the first of that nature by one of the company; but there are oft times reports of touches given which cause me to wonder what is the object in sending them up for insertion. Do they ring through love of the art, or from the vain desire to see their names in print? If every six-score of Bob Doubles, or 120 of Kent Treble Bob Minor were reported in this manner, what size would "THE BELL NEWS" have to assume in order to contain them all? Then again, look at the many reports we have week by week of short touches rung on some practice nights—or perhaps a series of practice nights—where the performers' names are iterated and re-iterated till the thing becomes positively nauseous even through its very monotony?

Take a case in point. In page 453 we have a paragraph of fifteen lines, recording the ringing done on a practice night at Charlwood (Surrey). On that evening were rung three 720's of Minor, and three 120's. That must have been a good practice, no doubt; but what earthly reason was there to make such an ostentatious parade of the ringers' names? In this short report, S. Jordan and T. Sparks appear twice; A. Ellis, three times; F. Wickens, five times; while G. Wickens, J. Akehurst, B. King, and M. Heffer appear no less than six times. And that in a fifteen-line paragraph.

Then again, the parading of very ordinary ringing for Sunday services, seems to me peculiarly objectionable. We meet during the week for the purpose of practice and of improving ourselves in the art, but on Sundays our object is—or should be—to do our best to perform that preliminary portion of the service which is allotted to us, to the very best of our ability. If in doing this we achieve something extraordinary—either through its extra length, the special object for which the service peal is rung, or otherwise, then there might be some justification for reporting the same in print. But when we see such trifling performances as a course of Bob Major, or a six-score of Bob Doubles, paraded before us with the names of the ringers, and which are rung for no special event whatever, it seems to me to be pointing very strongly in the direction of an absurdity. What would be thought of an organist who published week after week the voluntaries which he played on the organ before and after service? Or what would be the thoughts of the choir which in a like manner ostentatiously proclaimed the chants and psalm tunes which it had sung on the Sunday? They would be simply objects of ridicule; and yet they would only be doing what our friends are in the habit of.

I know I am treading on delicate ground in this matter; and that I shall doubtless draw down upon myself remarks of a not too complimentary character from those who are guilty of the habit which I thus condemn. That I cannot help; I do not willingly make use of disparaging remarks at any time; I would much rather be occupied in the more congenial task of complimenting my brethren on their progress and exploits. But I most certainly do think that the limited space available in our paper should be taken up with more creditable and useful matter.

The weekly bulletin I receive from the Manager of the office of our paper informs me that the Editor is somewhat better though unable to leave his bed. His family can hardly hope to have him up by Christmas even under the most favorable circumstances. His physician has just recommended that another medical man—a specialist in the disease—be called in for consultation.

MESSINA CATHEDRAL.

There are sound reasons for the belief that both Dogberry and Verges were, at a certain period, on the roll of the one Company, and that the "Sexton," who by virtue of his office, was also steeple-keeper at Messina Cathedral, but no ringer, was likewise a member of the same paternity. This latter worthy had been approached, in an underhanded manner, by some unscrupulous members of the (friendly) rival company, with a view to getting, or rather trying for, the first peal in a new method, name now unknown, just then becoming fashionable in the ringing world. Now the "Sexton" being a deep card, with an eye to the main chance, had decided in his own mind that the approaching marriage of Claudio with Hero, the daughter of Leonato, the Governor, was the opportunity to go for this peal, for, as he argued to himself, "the Governor, his daughter, being the first lady in the city, and, moreover, the darling and only child of her father, it will be but fitting that she should be greeted on her wedding with something more than the usual two peals of twenty minutes each by the scruffe. So they can go for their peal, and even if they get out early they are sure to try again and so ensure an hour or two of ringing, while if they get it, it will take them about three hours and a quarter, and either way I can tap Leonato copiously for the extra ducats; and at the same time no respectable and enthusiastic band will ever think of pay when ringing a first peal in the method in an opposition tower"; and then he winked.

This crafty scheme of the "Sexton," however, did not work out, as owing to circumstances too numerous to be detailed here, but which are given in full by one William Shakespeare, a member of the Stratford-on-Avon Band, the wedding did not, at that time, come off, although, happily, a few days later, the pair were made one, by special license it is to be presumed, in a room of Leonato's house, and at the same time and place, the lady's cousin Beatrice was united to Don Enrico Irvingi.

Now the "Sexton" had in a weak moment, confided to his cronies Dogberry and Verges, his contemplated treachery to the scruffe, and those worthies, although generally hanging together, had happened to take different views of the matter; this difference of opinion culminated in one of the twain stigmatising his quondam friends as "vagrom men," and joining the (friendly) rival company; and to this day, occasional specimens of their descendants, with all the distinguishing characteristics of their notable forefathers, may be found gracing ringers' meetings, both in town and country; while the children of the "Sexton" have by no means died off the face of the land, and still tread "the ways that were dark" of their common ancestor.

It is said that in 1643, or 1658, for the accounts differ this much, the great bell was taken down from the north western tower and shipped off to Naples, where it was melted down and from the metal made an equestrian statue of Carl IV., King of Spain, Naples, and Sicily. A ring of marble let into the floor at the western porch of the cathedral commemorates the size of this bell; the marble ring is nine feet eleven inches in diameter.

The great earthquake of 1783 demolished this tower amid the general destruction of the city, though the body of the Cathedral seems to have suffered but little, and since then two rather poor looking lantern towers have been added to the east end of the building, the northern one only of which has bells. These are six in number, ranging from 53 inches down to 16 inches in diameter. The three smaller are dated 1868, and are of ordinary modern shape, the larger three, which are of the same general shape, are very long wasted, the fourth, as to size, is very badly cracked, and the largest, which is worn very thin at the clappering on the soundbow, and has never been quartered, has the inscription:—

AVE MARIA GRATIA
PLENA
MDCXXXI

They are all hung, rigidly, on beams in the windows, and the clapper ropes let down to the ground floor.

At the foot of the ancient staircase that led up to the demolished tower, but which in itself still stands intact, within the main body of the building, is a large bell resting on wood blocks a few inches high, upon the pavement. This bell, which is a fine clean casting, is of the diameter, at the mouth, of 6 ft. 7. ins., at the crown, 3 ft. 2 ins., height 6 ft. 4 ins. At the crown are no cannons, but six holes of 3½ inches diameter, the crown being 5 ins. thick; there is also the running head of 9 inches diameter and 6 inches high, and which was evidently much higher when run and has been broken off at 6 inches, shewing sound, solid, metal, at the fracture. The sound-bow is 8 inches thick. It was cast to commemorate the great earthquake, as shown by its lettering, which runs thus: on the obverse

SD X SF X SI X MINIRE NOBIS.

Having got their big bell it proved to be, for many years, a white elephant, for the existing towers are evidently incapable of carrying it; so it stood on the cathedral floor, mute and inglorious and without use, until about twenty-five years ago, when a certain individual, evidently an offshoot of the house of that artful "Sexton," "struck a bright." A large iron-bound box was prepared, and fitted with double padlocks, one key of which is supposed to be held by the Municipality, and the other by the cathedral authorities. In the lid of the box is a small slit, and over the box is a printed placard, framed and glazed, setting forth a parable to the effect that the bell is cracked, and begging the faithful to contribute their cash towards the cost of re-founding it. Great is the power of Faith, for the coins fall in a perennial shower; but alas for human credulity, the only crack that can be found in the neighbourhood, is not in the bell, but is the crack or slit, in the lid of the box with the iron clamps, a crack just large enough to admit a silver dollar, that being the largest coin of the realm, should, perchance, any of the faithful feel faith enough to drop one in.

A document displayed alongside the placard, sets forth that the treasure chest was last opened in August, 1885, when the amount then found therein, added to previous sums from the same source, amounted to 2828 lire 44 centesimi, equal to in English money £113 2s. 6½. It is safe to prophecy that that bell will not be recast for a very considerable time to come.

The Cathedral is oblong in plan, with a rounded east end; the length 295 ft., breadth 98 ft., and height 105 ft. In ancient times a famous Greek Temple of Neptune overlooked the dreaded whirlpool Charybdis, at a distance of about four miles from the new site of the Cathedral. The remains of this pagan temple were utilised for the erection of the christian edifice, notably twenty-four huge pillars of granite or porphyry; these are of different lengths, but are equalised as to height, to support the roof, by the varying heights of the marble bases upon which they are set. Into the western front is built many lengths of white marble frieze, about twelve inches in width, carved in alto-relievo, showing the various agricultural and manufacturing processes connected with corn, wine, oil, and flax. In addition the vine is glorified to an extent commensurate, with its importance as a food in the old Greek economy, very many lengths of the marble frieze being devoted solely to the Divine plant. Very elaborate carved marble columns are also worked into the portals showing cupids, monkeys, and satyrs, sporting in foliage. Two exquisitely carved, slender, spiral columns of white marble, twisting opposite ways, and life-sized figures of lions or some such animals, but with the heads sadly damaged, are at the central western door. In addition to these spoils of the old Greek temple much mosaic of fine Sicilian marbles enrich this front. The floor is composed of an intricate mass of patterns in various coloured marbles; here are squares, circles, diamonds, lozenges of every conceivable shape, tre-foils, quatre-foils, cinque-foils, stars, half-moons, crescents, a bewildering array of shapes, all fitting and merging one into another and forming one harmonious whole. Lying at an angle across the floor is a Gnomon, or Meridian Indicular and perpetual diary, also of marble, about 80 ft. long by 5 ft. wide. The months and days of the months are each marked off, inlaid with vari-coloured marbles, and a hole in the roof of about one inch diameter, permits the sun, each day at noon, to shine upon the proper day marked on the floor. An inscription notifies that this remarkable contrivance was the work of the blind priest, Antonio M. Iaci, in 1804; and it is said that our Lord Nelson, who was also Sicilian Duke of Bronte, and then held Sicily against Napoleon, made splendid offers to the blind astronomer, to induce him to proceed to England to take a high post in the Royal Observatory; but in vain. Love of country was, with the blind philosopher, stronger than the love of self. Near the foot of the great altar, let into the floor, is a circle of purple porphyry, about three feet in diameter, regarded as a precious stone. The great altar itself is a most marvellous work of the most beautiful inlaid marbles in mosaic, the design being largely made up of tropical fruits, flowers, and birds, the rare and valuable lapis lazuli, verde antique, and rose marbles entering largely into this beautiful work of art. It is some forty feet in height and breadth, and not merely front show, for back and sides are all of the same costly material and workmanship. The stalls, numbering forty, are of exquisitely carved and various designs in a dark, hard, wood, several of them, however, are much decayed.

The domed roof over the altar has a gigantic mosaic portrait of the Archbishop Tabiat, by nationality a Greek, during whose sway the building was either created, or largely restored. His tomb bears the date 1336. There are many splendid tombs of various Archbishops and Cardinals, either natives of Messina, or who have held the Archi-episcopate. Two, of quite recent date, are magnificent specimens of the sculptor's art.

LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—MANCHESTER BRANCH.

On Monday, December 10th, eight members of the Manchester Cathedral Ringers, assisted by Messrs. Barratt and Grimshaw, of Eccles, attempted a peal of Grandsire Caters, 5021 changes, composed by the late John Cox, at the Cathedral, in honour of the marriage of Mr. A. E. Wreaks, which took place the same day at St. Mary's Church, Crumpsall, but unfortunately after ringing 1 hr. 45 mins. a change course occurred, and stand was called. After a short interval queens and firing were rang. The band afterwards adjourned to the meeting-house, Crown Hotel, Blackfriars Street, where the health and happiness of Mr. Wreaks and his bride was drank, and a very pleasant evening was spent with the hand bells. The band rang as follows: T. G. Downes, 1; Joseph Turner, 2; James Gratrix, 3; Thos. Thorpe, 4; Joseph Grimshaw, 5; James Barratt, 6; George E. Turner, 7; James Thorpe, 8; John Eachus, 9; Harry Chapman, 10.

EAST DERBYSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

This Association held its quarterly meeting at Heath, near Chesterfield, on Saturday, December 1st, 1888, when the Rev. Canon Cottingham gave a short address on Bells and Bell Ringers which was warmly responded to by the ringers present. After the meeting, thirty-eight members being present, a vote of thanks was given to the Chairman, the Rev. J. B. Nodder, of Ashover, and the Rev. Sanderson, of Heath, after which a few 120's of Bob Doubles and several 120's of Grandsire by the different churches represented were rung.

GEDNEY, LINCOLNSHIRE.

On Tuesday, December 4th, the ceremony of formally handing over to the churchwardens a new set of twelve handbells, the cost of which has been defrayed by subscription, was carried out. The churchwardens accepted the same as the property of the parish, and promised that an entry should be made in the vestry book to that effect. The new ringers rang some tunes and touches on the bells, and considering the short time they have had for practice, acquitted themselves in a highly satisfactory manner, and bad fare to leave the old style of handbell ringing in this parish far behind.

BIDDENHAM.—THE BEDFORDSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday evening, December 8th, the ringers of this parish, at the kind invitation of Mr. Chas. Howard, sat down to an excellent supper at the Manor House, the occasion being the farewell of Mr. C. R. Howard, who is leaving for Australia.

Supper being over, Mr. King, on behalf of the Vicar, Churchwardens and Ringers presented Mr. Howard with an appropriate address and also a dressing case, in recognition of his services in connection with the ringing.

Mr. Howard, in thanking the donors, expressed his sorrow at leaving, and handed each of the ringers a present in remembrance of his connection with the belfry. Afterwards a very pleasant evening was spent, the proceedings being enlivened by several touches on the handbells, interspersed with songs. Mr. Howard is a prominent member of this Association, and thanks mainly to his exertions, the Biddenham Belfry was some time ago thoroughly renovated, while the ringing under his leadership has been greatly improved, as the reports of peals which from time to time have appeared in these columns amply testify.

The ringers of Biddenham are to be congratulated on having in their belfry what, we believe, no other belfry in the county contains, namely, "The Church Bells of Bedfordshire," being a complete list of the parishes, with name of church, number of bells, weight of tenor, name of maker, and in fact, full particulars of all the bells in the county. This is written in "Church Text," and is the work of Mr. Howard, and will be a lasting memorial of his connection with the belfry.

Obituary.

JOHN VERNON.

We deeply regret to announce the death of the above member of the St. Matthew's Society, Hayfield, who died November 22nd, aged 38 years, and was interred at the above place, on November 27th. The funeral was largely attended by relations, ringers, and friends. The body of the deceased was borne to and from the church by four of his ringing friends, Thomas Brocklehurst, T. Whitehead, A. Rangeley, and J. Brocklehurst. Several invitations were sent out to neighbouring churches. Old Glossop was represented by Mr. J. Sellers, and Mr. J. Pye, jun. The bells of St. Matthews were deeply muffled. The first touch was rung by W. Booth, 1; Joseph Brocklehurst, 2; T. Whitehead (conductor), 3; J. Wheatcroft, 4; A. Rangeley, 5; T. Brocklehurst, 6. The next was a 720 of Oxford, with A. Rangeley on the treble, A. Hadfield on the fifth the others as before. Later in the evening another 720 was rung by W. Booth, J. Brocklehurst, T. Whitehead, A. Rangeley, T. Brocklehurst, J. Pye, jun. The deceased had the honour of ringing (5040's) on different dates at St. Matthews Church, Hayfield, in seven different methods, and he is the first member taken from them, and his loss will be deeply regretted by all who knew him. The ringers of Hayfield take this opportunity of thanking the Vicar and churchwardens for allowing them the use of the bells on this occasion.

LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—MANCHESTER BRANCH.

A meeting of the above Branch will be held at the parish church, Eccles, on Saturday, December 15th. Bells ready at three o'clock. A good attendance is requested.

ECKINGTON, DERBYSHIRE.

On Tuesday, December 4th, the local company rang with the bells half-muffled two 720's of Oxford and Violet Treble Bob, as a tribute of respect to George Smith, who has been a member of the above company for twenty years, and died after a short illness at the age of 41 years. Deceased met with an accident two years ago while following his employment as a circular sawyer, which cost him all the fingers on his right hand, and made ringing with him at an end, and although he has been assisted by many friends his trouble has been great, loosing his hand and unable to follow his employment in one year, and a few months after having his wife laid-up with a long and painful illness. The ringers who took part in the above are the following:—F. Hancock, W. Price, E. James, J. Shaw, G. Norman, G. Marsden (conductor), and T. Lunn.

ECCLESIASTICAL FLORICULTURE.—Our attention has been directed to the superior collection of "Florists' Flowers" so eminently suitable for Church and other decoration, always to be seen at the important nurseries of Mr. S. B. Goslin, jun., situate at Bexley Heath, Kent. The proprietor, it would appear, has taken great pains to bring the art of Church Floriculture to something near perfection, for from this part of the "Garden of England" may be obtained fresh, by parcels' post, supplies of artificial flowers in every conceivable color. The adoption of Artificial Flowers instead of the unseemly flock or common wadding, or puff balls, so frequently used in the formation of letters for texts—which appear to be inartistic, rough, rude, and out of character, is a sensible act, and we venture to think when it is known that such simple and faithful representations of flowers can be supplied at such moderate prices, they will be appreciated by many thoughtful minds, and will tend to promote the love of the beautiful in the most fitting positions, and greater interest in the truths to be proclaimed. Nor is Mr. Goslin only a specialist in flowers, par et simple, but in silver and frosted leaves of all kinds, Heath Grasses, and what may be termed berry foliage, he is a remarkable adept. Banners with white floral texts on violet, crimson, green, or maroon cloth ground, with or without borders, may be had from his establishment. We recommend our readers who take an interest in the pleasing study of Church decoration to obtain his catalogue, or pay him a visit at the Camden Nurseries, Glynde Road, Brompton Park, Bexley Heath, Kent.

LETTER FOR "FREE LANCE."

DEAR FREE LANCE,—After reading your interesting notes in "THE BELL NEWS" I thought I would drop you a line or two letting you know what difficulties we have had to contend with since we took to change-ringing. In the first place our bells are a very poor peal of six, tenor about 11 cwt. in F. Five of them were cast in 1668, and a new treble—a very long bell—was added in 1681. They have been rehung since they were first put there, all the repairs being done by local men. Change-ringing was quite unknown in this district until we took it up just before the Hereford Diocesan Guild was established. Before that time there was a lot of old round-ringers, who done all they could to put down change-ringing here; they have not done so. I think they have got disheartened, as they have all left one by one. One of them said to me he did not see any sense in it, as when we came to a nice change we only rang it once and then left it, instead of ringing it over several times and getting the music out of it. Most of us are quite young ringers, between 20 and 30, some younger, and had not rung a bell that went properly until the new peal of six was hung at Clunbury last year, but we cannot get down there as often as we should like, most of us being engaged with our work till 7 p.m. It is not our fault that the bells are in such a disgraceful state, or for want of perseverance on our part, as you seem to think, as we have drawn the attention of both the Vicar and churchwardens to them about two years ago, and they gave Mr. Buchanan permission to get a bellfounder to look at them, and we got Mr. Taylor, of Loughborough, and he recommended us to have a new peal of eight, Tenor about 18 cwt., in a iron frame. We set to work to get the money, and got our Vicar to head the list by giving the new tenor, ourselves following by giving the treble, and during the winter months we got up two concerts, and after paying all expenses we put £12 in the bank. When summer came there was a meeting called to decide the best means of celebrating Her Majesty's Jubilee. Mr. Buchanan brought forward our church bell restoration scheme, Mr. Brown, our schoolmaster and organist, the new organ scheme. He (Mr. Brown) being backed up by the sum of £125 in the bank towards a new organ, the result of a bazaar some years ago, other proposals followed, but after several meetings it was decided that after providing a dinner of roast beef and plum pudding for all the men in the parish, and tea for women and children, and providing sports, the balance, if any, should go towards a new organ, which has been dedicated, with a handsome new lectern, the gift of the Vicar, the Rev. C. Warner. After our Jubilee celebrations we did not loose heart, and have still kept the bell movement to the front, and last winter we gave a third concert, and the Miss Creswells gave a children's entertainment, and after paying all expenses we have the nice sum of about £22 in the bank. As soon as the organ job is settled and paid for we intend starting again with renewed vigour, and have no doubt we shall soon have a new peal of eight bells. We have several people promised to support us, including Mr. Brown, the organist, and the Rev. E. Brown, our newly appointed curate, who has promised to become a change-ringer. One of our greatest drawbacks is the disgraceful state of the church tower, the church being restored about eleven years ago at a cost of £7000, the late Mr. Street offering to do the tower and rehang the bells for £1000 extra, at the time of doing the church, but I suppose the committee did not see their way clear to have it done, but I think the parish has done very well, considering it is purely an agricultural one. I think I have told you all, but if you want to know more I will tell you if I can. Please excuse all faults, for I have wrote it in a hurry.

BELL RESTORATION IN THE DIOCESE OF SALISBURY.

The peal of eight bells at St. Peter's, Bournemouth, have been fitted with new gudgeons and brasses, and other minor repairs have been executed by Mr. T. Blackburn, of Salisbury. The tenor bell at Caine, weight 25 cwt., is also being rehung by the same, with a new frame. The frame of the heavy peal of six at Heytesbury has been recently repaired by a local builder.

KIMPTON, HERTS.

This little village was quite enfete on Thursday, the 6th inst., this being the day fixed for the re-opening of the tower and bells of the parish church by the Bishop of St. Albans, after a thorough restoration. It is about thirty years since this splendid peal of bells were rung, owing to the dilapidated state of the tower, but through the energy and perseverance of the Rev. L. Stevens, the Vicar, once more the village is enlivened with the melody of the bells. The Rev. Stevens has spared nothing to make everything as perfect as possible in the belfry, and it was a great treat for the parishioners to listen to some good ringing, before and after the service, under the conductorship of C. Robinson, of Whitwell (who has been engaged by the Rev. Stevens to instruct the young men of Kimpton).

Both the Bishop of St. Albans and the Archdeacon of St. Albans, referred to the rapid strides that were made in bell-ringing. The Archdeacon said the time had passed when round-ringing was considered an art, and now change-ringing required both great thought and tact. and he wished the Kimpton company every success.

Subjoined is the name of the ringers: C. Robinson (conductor), 1; J. Chapman, 2; J. Dennis, 3; A. Sleet, 4; W. Wells, 5; C. Gilbert, 6. In the second touch W. Ball rang the fourth. Messrs. Chapman, Dennis, and Gilbert, belong to the Knebworth Guild, Robinson, Ball, Sleet and Wells to St. Paul's, Walden.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—PROPOSED LIVERPOOL BRANCH.

The idea has long existed in the minds of ringers in this part of Lancashire that a branch of the County Association should be established in the district. At last, under the impulse given to it by the action of one of the local clergy, the scheme has been definitely started and is receiving warm support. A meeting will be held to arrange necessary details, and establish the branch, on Saturday, December 22nd, at 5.30 p.m., in the Cocoa Rooms, St. Luke's Place, Bold Street, Liverpool. All change-ringers in the district are cordially invited to attend. It is especially hoped that every belfry in the Diocese will send one representative at least, to express the opinions of his band, and to give support to the proposals submitted to the meeting.

JOHN R. PRITCHARD, Local Sec. (pro tem),

ELSTOW, NEAR BEDFORD.

This place, so well-known as the birthplace of Bunyan, has just had its church restored, under the care of Mr. T. J. Jackson, architect, and a very handsome clock has been erected by John Smith and Sons, Derby. The clock is fitted with all the latest improvements, all the wheels are of the best gun metal, with their teeth cut from the solid, so as to be perfectly accurate and smooth. The main frame is arranged so that any separate part may be removed without interfering with the remainder, and steel wire ropes carry the weights. Messrs. Smith & Sons guarantee the clock to go with very great accuracy, and so form a standard of timekeeping for the place. The clocks at Wootton and Goldington, near Elstow, were also made by the same firm.

THE ROYAL CUMBERLAND SOCIETY.

On Thursday, December 6th, ten members of this Society met by invitation of Mr. Chapman, at the Roe Buck, Hampstead, to celebrate the completion of a tablet recording the peal of Cambridge Surprise rung at St. Annes Church, Highgate, on 26th June, 1888. This Tablet is of marble in the shape of a bell, and has been most ably executed by Mr. G. Hannington, of Highgate, from a drawing kindly supplied by Messrs. Warner and Sons, of the Crescent Foundry, Cripplegate. The Tablet has not been fixed yet as it is not quite decided whether it shall be placed in the belfry or in the vestibule. After doing full justice to the supper, the rest of the evening was spent in harmony, in which Messrs. Chapman, Foskett, Newson, and the Hannington brothers took part, the above gentlemen also obliging with several tunes and touches upon the hand bells. Great regret was expressed that Mr. J. Barrett had to leave early on account of the serious illness of his wife, and his brother strings sincerely hope she will have a speedy recovery. J. H.

LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION OF SIX-BELL RINGERS.

A quarterly meeting of this Association was held at St. James', Leyland, by the kind permission of the Vicar, on Saturday, December 8th. Members were present from Blackrod, Chorley, Eccleston, St. Andrews, Leyland, and St. James', Leyland. Several 720's of Bob Minor and Touches in other methods were rung at intervals during the afternoon and evening. The meeting was held at 5 o'clock in the School-room, and was presided over by Mr. John Milner, of St. James', Leyland. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed, and other business gone through it was arranged that the next quarterly meeting should be held at St. Mark's, Preston. Votes of thanks to the Chairman for presiding, and to the Vicar for the use of the bells and school brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

CHETTON, SALOP.

A company of ringers from Burwarton visited the above church on Wednesday evening, November 28th. The Rector of Burwarton, the Rev. A. James kindly providing traps for the conveyance of the party who were met at Chetton by Mr. J. Jones, the foreman of the local ringers. Several six-scores conducted by J. Sanderson, with J. Bowen, treble, were rang, and a 360 of Doubles by W. H. Fassell, 2; J. Underwood, 2; G. Preece, 3; W. Bowen, 4; J. Sanderson, 5; J. Wellings, 6. The bells were cast by Rudhall, of Gloucester. Tenor 13½ cwt. and ring very well, but only of late possessed stays, which were fixed by a carpenter from Chilmarsh, in a very extraordinary manner on the wheels.

A peal was rung by the local band, in whole pulls, who are a smart company. This meeting was arranged with a view of furthering the objects of the Hereford Diocesan Guild of Bell Ringers, to which all the above-named belong.

NOTICE OF LONG PEAL.—A band of the Oxford Diocesan Guild, will, if all is well, attempt a long peal of Stedman Caters at Appleton, on Monday, December 24th.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1888.

For a company of ringers from the Metropolis to visit a provincial town in order to ring a peal is not an event of unusual occurrence. A hearty reception and a widespread interest in the performance are sure to be accorded, and many are the pleasant reminiscences that attach to such outings. Very rarely, however, have our friends from the country brought a band to the metropolis, and the visit of the Burton-on-Trent company last week may almost be ranked as a new departure. Wonderful as are the abilities of these gentlemen, it cannot but be considered a bold programme that London Surprise should have been the method chosen for the occasion. Clearly the inducement to this choice lay in the fact that never hitherto has a peal in that most intricate of methods been achieved in the locality from whence it derives its name. We rejoice that success has crowned the intrepid resolution, and that a peal of London Surprise within the Metropolitan area is now an accomplished fact.

We believe we are correct in saying that to Mr. HENRY DAINS were due the excellent arrangements for Saturday last. To him therefore as well as to the Burton company are due the thanks of London ringers for the compliment paid to the ringing community of the Metropolis. The opportunity of welcoming the St. Paul's Society last week was no doubt most acceptable to those, by no means few, of our local brethren who have at various times made acquaintance with the hearty welcome to friends from a distance which is always to be found at Burton. It is to be hoped that the precedent now initiated may be often followed in the future, for we can conceive nothing as more likely to strengthen the bonds of union between town and country members of the Exercise than reciprocal visits from which each party may obtain not only pleasure but also incentives to progress.

Correspondence.

[While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.]

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

CORRECTIONS.

SIR,—In your issue of December 8th, page 463, in the peal rang at Ashby-de-la-Zouch, it should read John Jaggard, 7; and not John Bullock. Also on page 451, of December 1st, R. Logie was the umpire for the peal on handbells rung at Burton, and was rung at the 10th attempt, the other nine being as follows: 1200, 1300, 3000, 3922, 1876, 1120, 1904, 1890, 2744. J. JAGGARD.

SIR,—In answer to a paragraph in your last issue, I find there is a great mistake as to the representation of Lancaster ringers. Mr. R. S. Hirst only represents the St. Mary's company, there being two other companies, St. Thomas's, with a ring of six bells, with Mr. B. A. Edmondson, conductor, and St. Peter's with a ring of eight bells, Mr. P. Mulligan, conductor. R. T. EDMONDSON.

THE PEAL OF TREBLE BOB MAJOR AT ST. ANDREW'S, WELL STREET, LONDON.

SIR,—With reference to the above, which was published in your issue of the 1st inst., as being rang at the above church on the 24th ult., I am informed by a reliable authority that 2-3 "shifted course," and remained so for some time; also when "that's all" came up, 4-5 were found to be the wrong way, and were put right. I should like to know whether such is the case. Would the conductor (Mr. A. Jacob), be kind enough to enlighten us. If my informant is correct in his statement, why did not some one contradict the peal last week. He tells me he was not the only one who heard the peal. CONDUCTOR.

SIR,—In your issue of December 1st, there is a report of a peal of Kent Treble Bob Major rang at St. Andrew's Church, Well Street, London, on November 24th. Now, Sir, I should like to ask the conductor how many times the 2nd and 6th changed courses, and also how many times the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th were shifted in the last two or three leads to bring the bells round. And also if it is a fact that when the band separated they were under the impression that they had not rung a peal, the said members being surprised and annoyed when they saw it published as a peal. S.W.

ANSWER TO "FREE LANCE."

SIR,—In "Notes by the Way," under the quotation "Retrogression is contrary to nature," "Free Lance" raises a question I consider of some importance to the ringing community; I refer to the reports in "THE BELL NEWS" of touches rung upon practice nights and for Sunday services. I fail to see where the writer would have the line drawn, and what should, according to his idea, be sent for insertion in "THE BELL NEWS." He says he is always glad to read of such touches as quarter peals and 720's having being brought round; but is not a 500 or even a 120 by a young band equally creditable and as worthy of insertion as a quarter-peal or a 720 accomplished by a band after years of practice. Again, as to the reports of ringing for Sunday services, would it not be well if more, rather than less, were forthcoming, even though nothing extraordinary is achieved? It would, at all events, show that the bells (in these reformed days) were being put to their proper use in being rung for each Sunday Service, instead of, as I fear it is, too often still the case, that they are only raised once a month on ringing Sundays, or in many places are never raised except for week-day practice. Supposing "Free Lance's" suggestion be carried out and only extraordinary performances are reported, what will occupy the space (on an average six or seven columns per week) now devoted to the reports of ringing? Can matters of interest, or instruction, to ringers be found from week to week, or will our journal, which boasts of being a "Ringers' Record," commit an act so "contrary to nature as retrogression," by devoting the space so provided by recording additional extraordinary "Burial Cases," "alleged assaults by rectors," "Black Letter Saints' Day," etc., such as appeared last week? PROPOSED BENEFIT SOCIETY, AND MR. DORAN'S CASE.

SIR,—Some few weeks since, the idea of "A Ringers' Benefit Society" was proposed in these columns. While much is to be said in favour of such a grand idea, a great many objections may be raised. Firstly, would it be wise on our part to attempt to counteract the efforts and work of such societies as the A.O.F., M.U.O.F., and other existing benefit societies, societies for that one-object. I am afraid that between the promotion of the art of change-ringing and belfry reform, and the working of an Association for the promotion of thrift among ringers, between the two we should come to the ground. It is perhaps needless to add that ringers are not restricted from enjoying the advantages such societies as are here spoken of offer. Secondly, to float successfully a ringers' benefit society means the incurring of a great expense, much more than I venture to think ringers would feel prepared to pay, at any rate I do not think we are going to talk them into such an idea so very easily. To judge by the miserable response made to Mr. Randall's appeal on behalf of Mr. Doran, here is (what is in my opinion) a very deserving case, brought to our notice not only by Mr. Randall, but by one of our most prominent ringers, Mr. Henry Dains the Hon. Sec. of the Royal Cumberland Youths, and again by the respected editor of our "weekly" himself, so that we cannot doubt the case. But what do we find; some three months after the appeal as been made we find the magnificent sum of £5 17s. 6d. has been subscribed amongst 42 ringers out of the many hundreds there are existing, who are enjoying the greatest blessings that Providence can bestow upon them, viz., health and strength. I do not hesitate to say that such conduct on our part is simply disgraceful, that so many ringers should abstain from subscribing their mite. I take for example the Association of which I am Assist. Hon Sec; on looking down the list of subscribers I see that out of a membership of over 600 only 2 names occur. I do regret to think this should be the case, the matter would bear a different complexion if an appeal were often made, but this is only the second time such an appeal as been made this year. I am fully aware my remarks will not be met with approval by many of my brother-ringers, but here is a fact and as a fact, brother-ringers, I submit it to your consideration. You know the old Scotch proverb still stands good. "Many a mickle makes a muckle." That happy Christmastide is fast approaching, do your best now the opportunity presents itself, to make at least one home bright and cheerful if possible, and you may rest assured that your Christmastide will be doubly happy. I could say much more, but for fear of trespassing on valuable space, I now close, feeling sure my remarks (although harsh perhaps) will not have been made in vain.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"All's well that ends well."

Without a doubt, the most prominent feature of last Saturday's issue is the numerous array of peals reported. That circumstance denotes forcibly enough the fact that we are once more "in the thick" of the peal ringing season, and moreover, that our friends in various parts are by no means "letting the grass grow under their feet" in this respect.

* * * * *

In the weekly list of peals there are, of course, always some more or less interesting features; but last Saturday's collection seems to be more than usually notable. Not the least of this is the number of "first peals" or "first peals in the method," for I find that among the ringers of the twenty-one peals in question, no less than forty-six of them come under this category. If that is not an unmistakable sign of progress, I confess I don't know what else is. It shews that after many months of training on the part of the seniors, the young ringer has given evidence of his diligence in mastering the art, and thus rewarded the patient endeavours of his tutors by piloting his bell through his first peal. It shews signs of progress also in other cases where a band has set about mastering a fresh method, and after much practice together succeeded in "pulling off" a "fiver" in it.

* * * * *

But if our Triples and Major ringers have been busy, surely the six-bell men must be credited with having been no less so, seeing that there are six peals to their credit, and their selection of methods which they rang, also, denotes long and constant practice.

* * * * *

I was rather surprised, though, to learn that the Steyning men rang their first combination of Treble Bob methods on the 20th ult. They were so well to the fore twelve months ago, that I imagined a peal of this kind was among the number. Nevertheless, although it has been longer in coming, I am pleased to see it.

* * * * *

The band who visited Frampton must have been eager for a peal when they rung these bells to the tune of forty-two six-scores of Grandsire Doubles. Perhaps the fact of its being the first on the bells as well as the first by the treble-man had something to do with it. The most credit in connection with that performance is undoubtedly due to the conductor, and shews that he is gifted with a good memory. But my friends, when you have a ring of six, why content yourselves with the very limited compass which five bells afford! Why not turn the tenor into the work and ring more pleasant and varying Minor methods? Of course, I might be met with the rejoinder that many with eight bells in their tower content themselves with ringing Triples. But considering the difference in the "extents" between Doubles and Triples, there is no analogy in the cases. Anyhow, seeing that you have successfully brought round the first peal on the Frampton bells, let us read before long that you have met again in the same belfry and been equally fortunate with a good peal of Minor.

* * * * *

By the way, I see the All Souls (Halifax) Society have been regaling the ears of our old friend Mr. Sottanstill with a peal of Treble Bob on the bells of his quaint old parish church of Sowerby. But what struck me most in this was the fact that six out of the octave are starred as being members of the Yorkshire Association. Why didn't they get the other two proposed, and thus have made it what it so nearly is—an Association peal. Perhaps it was an oversight.

The Lancashire Association is bidding fair to be top scorer with their handbell peals; two more this week. In fact, I have noticed with pleasure of late an appearance of much vigour in the County Palatine, both in the matter of ringing and also in their work of organisation. I ventured some time ago to remark upon the very large number (proportionately) of peals by independent societies, in that county, which seemed to indicate that this Association was a long way off embracing in its ranks the bulk of the ringers. But if this life and vigour be maintained, I do not doubt that ultimately these outsiders will be brought in, and that Association become as extensive and potent for good as even its most zealous members could wish for.

That reminds me of a story I heard a little time ago (and I am forcibly impressed with the idea that it came from Lancashire), which, if true, tempts me to think that they must have some queer individuals to deal with. One of the members waited upon a certain clergyman, and asked him to become an honorary member, as they were naturally anxious to have the support of the clergy. By way of supporting his request he shewed the Rev. gentleman a copy of their report, which contained a list of their hon. members. After looking through it, the said vicar returned the book with the discouraging remark that he could not comply. "Why so?" queried the astonished ringer. "Oh!" said he, "how do you suppose that I, as an evangelical, could allow my name to appear in that list among those High Churchmen and Ritualists?" That must have been a settler. At all events, so the story goes, it settled the point as to his becoming a member of the association. I should be glad, for the sake of our clergy, if this story could be contradicted; for if true, it shows that intolerance and bigotry are not confined to the lowest and most ignorant of our countrymen, but that these unworthy features manifest themselves even among the ranks of those who are our spiritual guides, and who should be examples for us to follow.

* * * * *

The Midland Counties men seem to be going in for "splicing" just now. Let us hope these splices will all of them be happy ones; and with respect to the latest of them, may Mr. Walter Canner's family obligations not tempt him to become lax in his ringing work, and that he will find in his good wife a worthy help-mate, so that in year's to come he may still be found "the worthy captain of the Ashby Society."

* * * * *

This brings to my mind the performances of another ringers wife, to whom I have previously had the pleasure of referring, namely, Mrs. Williams. This lady appears to be making good progress in handbell ringing, and her exploits would be worthy of any of the oldest masculine practitioners amongst us. I think Mr. G. Williams must have found an apt pupil in his "better half," who seems quite at home with 7-8 either in Grandsire, Stedman, or Plain Bob. He has made a good splice, evidently, and is to be congratulated accordingly.

* * * * *

The Devonport Dockyard men deserve credit for their perseverance with their quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples. Six consecutive meetings with six consecutive failures was certainly disheartening enough, but they strove on till success rewarded their efforts. Their experience in this is by no means unique, as many of us know from personal experience; but that by no means detracts from the merit of their praiseworthy and continued efforts. I wish them every success in their desire to cheer the heart of their esteemed president with a whole peal, and hope ere long to have the pleasure of congratulating them on the event.

MR. WILLIAM COOTER.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that the subject of our memoir ranks high among the talented ringers of the century, he will be personally unknown to very many of our readers. Those who have closely watched his ringing career, those among his intimate ringing acquaintances who know his character and attainments, are apt to regard him as one of the cleverest ringers the Metropolis has ever produced.

The church of St. James, Bermondsey, with its grand peal of ten bells, was consecrated in the year 1825, and Mr. COOTER first saw the light the same year. He claims to be a thorough Cockney—the real or supposed advantages of which are exceedingly problematical—being born in the parish of St. George-in-the-East, the church of which name has not been without some notoriety. While a youth, he became attached to bells, going through his probationary term in the most approved manner, viz., by chiming and ringing for Divine Service. The minute particulars of how he became a Change-ringer must be left to the imagination, for no one of his contemporaries appear to have the slightest knowledge how or when he “learnt the method.” We are informed when making inquiries in this respect, that Mr. COOTER seemed to require no practice for any method, but when called upon to ring he appeared to be quite ready. We may see in this, of course, not only the talent of quickly grasping new ideas and pursuits, but that of close application to what he took in hand. “Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might.” “What is worth doing at all is worth doing well.” His entry into the Exercise would seem to encourage the idea that the teaching embodied in these sentences was ever present to his mind.

In 1846, he joined the London St. James's Society, and rang his first peal—Grandsire Triples—with that society the same year. This peal was also the first by Mr. M. A. WOOD; and they both rang in the first peals of Stedman Cinques, Double Norwich, and Superlative ever rung by the “St. James's.” In 1852 he became Master of this company.

The same year in which he joined the St. James's, viz., 1846, he was elected a member of the Ancient Society of College Youths. In this company he successively filled the offices of Steward and Master, and after that the office of Secretary for some years. He found that the interesting records of this society had for years previously been kept in a most perfunctory manner, but by dint of hard work and the employment of a considerable amount of time and trouble, he succeeded in bringing them into an orderly arrangement. Mr. COOTER has rung in all two hundred and three peals. These comprise eleven upon handbells, viz., Grandsire Triples, three; Stedman Triples, two; Stedman Caters, four; Stedman Cinques, two. The first peal of Stedman Triples ever rung on handbells was called by Mr. COOTER, on January 20th, 1854, he ringing 3-4. This fact, as has been alluded to in a previous number of “THE BELL NEWS,” was rung by four members of the College Youths, the others being Messrs. FERRIS, WOOD, and DWIGHT. In March of the same year he was one of four of the St. James's Society who rang another peal of Stedman Triples in hand without a call being made, or any signal of the calls being given. This peal was not the same composition as the one which he had called. His companions on that occasion were Messrs. HALEY, COX, and WOOD. Such feats as these were at once sufficient to point him out at the time of their performance, as a ringer of rare ability, very rare indeed. Those gentlemen bearing the above names, with two others celebrated in the same direction, Messrs. POWELL and BRITTEN, were among our most honored friends in the Exercise, but for all that we do not hesitate to say that if a greater spirit of unity had pervaded them, or had they at the period of these achievements the wise precepts of some one like the late Rev. J. H. FISH to guide them, our Burton friends would not have rung the first peal of “London” in the Metropolis. It is however rendering mere justice to the subject of this memoir to say that his non-contentious disposition would have assisted unity instead of preventing it. This however by the way.

Whenever a band of ringers—above what we may call the ordinary capacity, was required for any particular purpose—such as the opening of a new peal—Mr. COOTER's services were nearly always secured, and thus we find him at the following places: St. Mary-le-Tower, Ipswich, when augmented to twelve; Kingston, Dorset, the seat of the Earl of Eldon; St. Stephen, Carlisle, Privett, Hants; Llanstephan, South Wales; Cliffe-at-Hoo, Kent; St. Barnabas, Dorking; Northwold, Norfolk; St. Peter, Bournemouth, and Weybridge, Surrey. At nearly all of the foregoing places he has scored a peal. He took part in the first peals rang in Scotland and Ireland, and on the way to the latter country, while on the Irish Sea, he rang in a course of Grandsire Cinques, this last however being more curious than difficult. In the year 1869 he was one of a band of College Youths who at the invitation of the local authorities visited Exeter for the purpose of exhibiting their skill on the Cathedral bells, and though little could be done owing to their condition, this visit, we are disposed to think, assisted in some measure to pave the way for the establishment of the Devonshire Guild. When the ringing of DAY's peal of 15,840 Treble Bob was on the tapis, the late Mr. HALEY, to whom the College Youths naturally looked to to call it, doubted its possibility of attainment, and for some time withheld his consent. The Colls. were however, determined upon attempting it, and if Mr. HALEY had positively declined to call it, Mr. COOTER would have been solicited to undertake the task. This is mentioned to show the confidence the Society possessed in him. The manner in which that splendid performance was got through is now matter of history. Our friend rang the 2nd in this peal, which occupied 9 hours and 12 minutes in execution. In the long peal of Stedman Cinques at St. Michael's, Cornhill, which has since been superseded by the Birmingham gentlemen, he did not take part, owing to indisposition.

A sketch of Mr. COOTER's ringing career, no matter how incomplete, ought not to be without the following remarkable circumstance, which our readers may depend upon as being absolutely authentic in every particular.

Some years ago—we forget the date, but it is immaterial—our friend had one day reached his place of business just after the dinner-hour was over, when he was waited upon by the late Mr. COX. Mr. COX stated that he had that evening to call a peal of Stedman Caters at the church of St. John, Horsleydown, Surrey, but owing to another engagement he could not stay till the finish. He proposed to commence calling the peal, and wished Mr. COOTER to come up, and, taking the rope out of his hand, finish it. At the time Mr. COX handed to him the figures of the peal—a level 5000. Mr. COOTER consented. His business being over in the evening, he wended his way to the church. Taking stock from the outside how far the peal had progressed, he ascended, and the ringing-chamber being entered by a trap door immediately under the rope of the 6th, having knocked at this trap door, the ringer of that bell—Cox himself—stepped one side and Mr. COOTER entered. Divesting himself of coat and waistcoat, he took the rope out of Cox's hands, the latter hastily disappearing through the trap-door as soon as possible. That peal Mr. COOTER finished without the slightest hitch, the good striking being unimpaired; and we think this episode is unique in the annals of ringing. Unfortunately the composition turned out upon examination to be false, and thus has never been recorded.

So far as is known, Mr. COOTER has never given his mind to composition. This has been the case with many celebrated ringers who are bob-callers. But as a manipulator—so to speak—of bells, when at the rope's end, especially when "Stedman" is being rung—he is said to be equalled by few, and surpassed by none. Labouring under a similar affliction to that of Mr. Haley—defective vision—caused by the optical obstruction known as cataract, often preventing him seeing even to the other side of a ringing-chamber, he never appears to the on-looker to suffer any inconvenience from such a physical defect while ringing. Evidently his aural capabilities, like those of his departed friend above-named, are remarkably acute, balancing perhaps, to some extent the loss of sight, though for such loss nothing else can be an equivalent. When the College Youths very wisely determined to depute one of their members to attend to "watch" a long peal of Stedman Caters lately rung at Appleton, they selected the best they could find in the person of Mr. COOTER.

The subject of our memoir is to be found at St. Paul's Cathedral every Sunday. He is always willing to assist in a peal, no matter how remote the church may be, and to oblige young aspirants in any way he can. He is held in respect by those who know him in as great a degree as any ringer living within the whole metropolitan area. Unassuming in his manner, never boasting of what he has done in the science, much less of that what he can do, he is a good example for many younger men whose reticence is the opposite of conspicuous. As an example of a desire not to intrude himself upon the notice of his ringing brethren, it may be stated that when it was suggested to him that his portrait should appear in this journal, he modestly replied that he did not think he had done sufficient in the science to entitle him to be brought into such prominence. In addition to the Societies already named, he is a member of the Essex Association and the Walthamstow St. Saviour's Society.

VISIT OF THE ST. PAUL'S (BURTON-ON-TRENT) SOCIETY TO LONDON.

After repeated invitations from several prominent London ringers, who at different times had favoured Burton with a visit, the St. Paul's, Burton-on-Trent company at length decided to pay a visit of a Saturday afternoon and Sunday's duration to London, in order to attempt a peal of some sort on the Saturday, and to have on the Sunday an opportunity of hearing some of the famous peals in the metropolis, and of becoming better acquainted with London ringers. Mr. Henry Dains, a very old friend of the Burton men, made all arrangements, and after a 4½ hours' ride to St. Pancras, followed by another hour spent in the delightful atmosphere of the underground railway, the visitors found themselves at 6.15 p.m. on Saturday, December 8th, at Fulham, where it was arranged the peal should be attempted. London Surprise was the method fixed on, and a start was at once made, and in about three hours and a half from the time of the ringers' arrival at Fulham, the first peal of that method ever rung in London itself was an accomplished fact. The Fulham bells are a good going peal with a good circle and a good ringing-room, the chief drawback, one which to some extent hampered the ringers, being the extraordinary difference in the "gait" of the seventh, or properly the ninth, and the tenor, the former requiring to be rung very close on both strokes, while the tenor could scarcely be rung too wide. When the bells became mixed up (and they are fairly well mixed in London Surprise), the effect of this peculiarity was most puzzling to the ringers of the front bells, and the striking to some extent suffered, but the whole of the band were very keen on their work, and although there were several trips by individual bells, the offender was in every ease promptly and accurately pounced upon and set right. The ringers were immediately after the peal heartily congratulated on their success by many prominent ringers who were present, the respected vicar of the parish a few minutes later adding his congratulations to those that had gone before. Taking into consideration the extreme difficulty of the task, the opinion expressed by these gentlemen that a most creditable performance had been achieved, will we think be pretty generally endorsed.

Sunday's programme included ringing at St. Martin's, Trafalgar Square, in the morning, a visit to St. Paul's in the afternoon—the fact that Canon Liddon was to be the preacher at the afternoon service being an additional attraction here—and ringing at St. Bride's, Fleet Street, for evening service. At St. Martin's a course of Superlative Surprise was first rung on the back eight, and subsequently several of the visitors took part in a touch of Stedman Cinques, five of the band now hearing twelve bells rung for the first time. At St. Paul's, while some of the visitors secured an early seat for Divine Service, others, under the obliging guidance of Mr. R. T. Woodley, had an opportunity of visiting Great Paul, and of viewing the heavy peal of twelve, the leader of the Burton company remaining in the belfry and accepting the kind invitation given to take part in a touch of Stedman Cinques. At each of the places named the visitors had the pleasure of meeting many old friends (including Mr. N. J. Pitstow, who had come up to town on purpose to meet them) and of making the acquaintance of many prominent members of the two great London Societies, with whose names they were all perfectly familiar, but whom they had not previously had the good fortune to meet. At each place the greatest possible kindness and courtesy was shewn them by all concerned, and they are glad of the opportunity of publicly thanking all those gentlemen for doing so much towards making this outing one of the most interesting and enjoyable the St. Paul's society has ever had.

To Mr. H. Dains for his perfect arrangements, and to the Rev. Mr. Fisher, for so kindly granting the bells at Fulham for the peal, their thanks are particularly due, as also to the band of Burton ringers who under the leadership of Mr. Jaggard kindly undertook their Sunday duties at St. Paul's during their absence.

NOTICE.—The peal of Stedman Caters proposed for December 24th, will be postponed, through the wish of the Rector of Appleton, till after the New Year.

ADDINGHAM, YORKS.

Hitherto nothing has appeared in these columns from this place on the subject of Campanology. This is not because we have no bells or bell-ringers, for we have the nicest peal of six bells for miles round, and a good set of bell-ringers, besides learners—but because there is no one who takes an interest in chronicling the doings in the belfry.

Last Saturday we had a social gathering of the neighbouring ringers, quite a new thing here, and it proved more than equal to our expectations; so I ask you to be as kind as to allow a short account of it to appear. If more of these social gatherings were got together, no doubt, better ringing would be the result.

The day turned out all that could be desired for this time of the year, and about forty ringers, representing Kildwick, Guiseley, Tong, Ilkley, and Addingham, availed themselves of the invitation sent, to come and try the sweet-toned bells of the parish church.

At 6 o'clock a free tea was provided for all comers, which was heartily enjoyed after pulling at the ropes and inhaling the pure country air. After tea Mr. Geo. Bolland, Tong, proposed a vote of thanks to the Rector, churchwardens, and ringers, for the kind invitation given them that day, the preparations made, and for placing the bells at their disposal.

The Vice-Chairman of the Yorkshire Association seconded the vote of thanks in a few appropriate words.

W. WATSON, Esq., churchwarden, replied on behalf of the rector, and expressed a hope that this gathering would only be the first-fruits of many more of a similar nature.

The gathering has already produced good results. Four members of the home set have joined the Yorkshire Association, others are following; and it was given to understand that the Kildwick ringers intend joining at the beginning of the year.

Great praise is due to W. Laird, Hon. Sec., for the able way he carried out all the arrangements.

ALL SAINTS', NORTHAMPTON.

The principal church in Northampton, a fine Renaissance work attributed to Sir C. Wren, dedicated to All Saints, and popularly known as the Corporation Church, was reopened on Thursday, having been closed five months for external repairs and the decoration of the interior, at a cost of about £2,500. The only important alteration inside has been the blocking up of the very ugly east window by the erection of a fine classic reredos, of which the principal feature is a large picture of the Crucifixion, placed in the centre between Corinthian columns, which bear a lofty arched canopy reaching nearly to the chancel roof. This church has long been famous for the beautiful moulded plaster work in the ceilings, and now the walls of the chancel are covered with fine work of a similar character. The old chancel arch, which was very poor, is entirely remodelled, and is now supported upon four Ionic pillars. The old reredos, containing two pictures of Moses and Aaron, by Sir G. Kneller, has been used to decorate the blank west wall; the ancient pulpit rests upon a better base, and a fine chandelier hangs from the great dome, which stands over the centre of the square nave. Four Bishops were present at the reopening, the Bishop of Peterborough, who preached in the morning, the Bishop of Hereford, who preached in the evening, the Bishop of Leicester, and Bishop Mitchinson. A procession was formed from the Town-hall to the church, in which walked about eighty of the clergy of the diocese, with the choir and the mayor of the town (who is senior churchwarden of the church), and eighteen out of the twenty-four members of the corporation, besides other officials.

WORCESTER AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS'
ASSOCIATION.—BROMSGROVE BRANCH.

On Saturday, December 29th, 1888, the members of this branch of the above Association will celebrate the 100th Anniversary of the long peal of Bob Major, 12,000 changes, rung at Bromsgrove, on December 29th, 1788, composed and conducted by the late Charles Ravenscroft. The days' proceedings will commence by an attempt to ring a peal of Grandsire Caters containing 8,024 changes, by ten members of the above Association. Dinner will be provided at the "Golden Cross" Hotel at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The Vicar of Bromsgrove, the Rev. A. E. Seymour will preside. Members of the above Association and any other ringing friends will receive a hearty welcome. Tickets for dinner 2s. 6d. each, to be ordered not later than Wednesday the 26th December, and any other information can be had on applying to WALTER REA, Secretary.

CRATHORNE, YORKSHIRE.

In the new tower of the above parish church, three new bells, from the foundry of Messrs. Taylor, of Loughborough, have been placed, at the sole cost of Mr. J. Lionel Dugdale of Crathorne. The old pear-shaped bell, still sound, dating apparently from about 1,300, has been rehung.

ST. MARTIN'S SOCIETY, BIRMINGHAM.

The usual quarterly meeting of this Society will be held at the tower on Tuesday, January 1st, 1889. A. THOMAS, Secretary.

Another section of Holy Trinity, Aberystwyth, consisting of tower and transepts, was consecrated by the Bishop of St. David's on the 29th ult., and the octave of services was brought to a close last Thursday. The first part of this church was only opened in August, 1886, and it soon became so crowded that the vicar (Prebendary Williams), with the help of a committee of laymen, had to proceed at once with the extension of the building. The church at present consists of nave, central tower, and transepts, and has cost £5,700. The chancel will be built as soon as funds are forthcoming.

NOTICE OF LONG PEAL.—Twelve members of the Yorkshire Association will attempt 10,196 of Stedman Cinques at the parish church, Sheffield, on Monday, December 31st, to commence at 10.30.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"In terra pax!
In excelsis gloria

Once more, old Father Christmas is on the eve of paying us his annual visit. Once more we are about to celebrate in right good English fashion, as of yore, the great festival which we hold to commemorate the birth of Our Lord and Saviour. Once more we shall utter, with a heartiness which rolling years only serve to strengthen, the time-honoured wish to each other that we may all have "A merry Christmas." Before I write my next weekly contribution to these pages, we shall once more have rung the Christmas peal; we shall have sounded "among the hills and the valleys" the jubilant tones of our bells which proclaim to our people, as the angels proclaimed to the shepherds, "Unto us a child is born; Unto us a Son is given."

The bells have ever been a favourite theme with our poets, but on no subject have they waxed so eloquent as on the bells of Christmas-tide. To them—and no less to them than all of us—Christmas would be bereft of one of its greatest and most notable features were the bells to be silent at this happy time. In the words of the American poet, who though many miles away from the "old country" still retained his fondness for the Christmas morn at home—

"Those bells—those bells of mother-land,
Upon a Christmas morn,
Outbreaking, as the angels did,
For a Redeemer born;
How joyfully they call afar,
To cot and Baron's hall,
With holly decked, and mistletoe
To keep the festival!"

I think sometimes, when I muse upon ringing affairs generally, that we are apt to underrate the appreciation of our work on the part of those for whom we ring. We are prone to imagine that no one cares for our performances on the bells; that though we may, after many months of careful study and constant practice, succeed in ringing a date touch or peal in some intricate method, no one outside seems to know or care about it. We think fretfully, sometimes, even, that people don't seem to care whether we ring or not, and in consequence there is an inclination to become discouraged. My friends, put these ideas away from you; let them sink into oblivion; there is an inducement of sympathy with bell-ringing among Englishmen that time will never wear out—nay, will and does—strengthen as years go on. The general public is ignorant of the technicalities of our art, they do not, and cannot, comprehend the intricacies of our systems, but they know and appreciate the times when the bells are ringing, whether it is in mournful muffled tones for the loss of a brother, or in jubilant sounds to celebrate some festival or time of rejoicing. We have the pleasure in ringing, they in listening to us; and if they do not seem to interest themselves in us and our affairs so much as we could wish, is it not more because our art is to them a "sealed book," than to any semblance of indifference. But at the glad Christmas-time, do we not then, at any rate, play a most important part in the celebration of our great time-honoured festival? Would Christmas be thought complete without the old familiar peal from the bells in the church tower? Let us then ring heartily, as faithful sons of the church meet in our belfries next Monday evening and welcome in the season which brings home to one another, parents and children, brothers and sisters, who will listen together for that glad sound through the louvres of our belfry windows, which proclaim "Peace on earth; good will to men!"

Then as we meet on the Christmas morning to call together the people to church, let us once more join together, hand in hand, as brothers, and agree to jog along life's pathway in pleasant harmony. Let all past differences sink and pale in the bright light of this happy season, resolving to begin anew with purer hopes and brighter prospects, helping one another, bearing and forbearing, remembering that this is the last Christmas some of us will be permitted to see on this side of the grave; thus shall we be truly happy together; thus will we spend the festal season with joy, and be able to think of it with pleasure in the days to come.

My friends, allow me in the fulness of my heart to wish you all a right happy and merry Christmas Tide. May we be able in the future to point to it as a happy event in our lives. May we be permitted to spend the coming season so that naught put pleasurable feelings will be around in after time, at its remembrance.

It was a very pleasurable surprise to read of the accomplishment of a peal of London Surprise at All Saints', Fulham, by the talented Burton men. I feel I can but reciprocate the complimentary remarks, and good feeling expressed in Saturday's leading article, and hope that the sentiments therein evoked will bear practical fruit; first in giving honour to this intrepid company, and, second, in inducing other provincial societies to pay a visit to the Metropolis and "do likewise."

The Royal Cumberlands have been successful in ringing a peal of Caters at the historic church of St. Sepulchre. The description of this peal denotes many musical qualities, and I therefore hope to see the composition appearing before long in the pages of "THE BELL NEWS."

"This is the conductor's 200th peal." Such is the foot-note appended to a peal on page 475. If this is not absolutely unique I might ask how many ringers in England have passed that record? I have no desire to create vanity in the mind of our respected friend Mr. Washbrook, but I cannot refrain from heartily congratulating him on the circumstance. Those of us who go in for peal ringing know full well the innumerable ups and downs inseparable from such work, and when we think of the breakdowns and failures which will have been attendant upon this total of two hundred peals, we can readily imagine the time and perseverance which Mr. Washbrook must have devoted to it. It is therefore with more than ordinary pleasure that I compliment the worthy instructor of the Oxford Diocesan Guild on this achievement. I trust that he may be long spared to be not only an ornament to his profession but also a power for progress in the Association which is so fortunate in possessing his services.

Mr. Attree's monthly analysis of peals is once more before us, in which there appears but little change in the relative positions of the various Associations and Societies. I do not suppose there will be much alteration at the end of the year, and I would most strongly urge our friends to study this return thoroughly. When we are favoured with the full analysis up to the end of the year I hope to have something further to remark upon it.

The Liverpool men are starting a project which deserves every commendation and wish for its success. There can be no doubt that the formation of strong branches in our County Associations will be productive of much good. Not only will they materially aid in bringing in more members to the general body, but they will—which is perhaps an even more important matter—be able to assist in a most marked degree in the work of organization and improvements, which is the great object of these Associations. I wish the Liverpool men every success in their endeavour, and trust that their meeting on Saturday will be successful to the full extent of their anticipations.

* * * * *

"The Society of Copley Scholars" appears to be striking out a new line in their peals, according to the report of one which they rung on Saturday, the 8th inst. The peal itself is modest enough—seven 720's of Bob Minor—but their plan of ringing it is one which commands itself to me, and is in accordance with opinions which I have previously expressed in the matter of conducting. I think that, for many reasons, more of our friends should go in for conducting touches—if not peals. In how many instances do we find local companies where there is but one of the number who ever attempts to call a bob? The result is, that when this individual is absent—through sickness or otherwise—the rest have to content themselves with plain courses and such like. This is a point which deserves attention. No ringer, I contend, should consider himself thoroughly competent in his work unless and until he has proved himself able to conduct at least a service peal. I hope this example of the "Copley Scholars" will be followed by others, and by this means the latent talent on the part of the "rank and file" be brought out.

FREE LANCE.

LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—MANCHESTER BRANCH.

A ringing meeting of the above branch was held at the parish church, Eccles, on Saturday, December, 15th. Ringers attended from Radcliffe, Whitefield, Manchester, Swinton, Worsley, Walkden, and Bolton. Various methods were rung during the evening. Afterwards all adjourned to the meeting-house, the "Grapes Hotel," Mr. James Barrett being appointed chairman. The proposed formation of a new branch of the Association at Liverpool was brought before the meeting by Mr. Joel Redford, the Secretary, and was heartily approved by the members present. Three new members were proposed, and it was decided to hold the next meeting at Whitefield, on Saturday, January 12th, 1889, ringing to begin at four o'clock.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—PROPOSED BLACKBURN BRANCH.

A Ringing Meeting will be held at Blackburn parish church, on Saturday, December 29th, at 2.30 p.m. At 6 o'clock a meeting will be held to arrange necessary details and establish the branch. All change-ringers in the district are cordially invited to attend. It is especially hoped that every belfry in the district will send one representative at least, to express the opinions of his band, and to give support to the proposals submitted to the meeting.

THE BEDFORDSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

The Quarterly Meeting proposed to be held at Leighton Buzzard, on Saturday, December 29th, cannot be held there as the tower is under repair. It will therefore be held instead on that day at Eversholt, the six bells having just been overhauled by Messrs. Taylor, of Loughborough, and put in good ringing order.

TITHE AGITATION.

The tithe agitation, hitherto almost confined to Flintshire and Denbighshire, has broken out in Carnarvonshire, and on Saturday, at some sales in Llannor parish at the instance of the Rev. D. Jones, vicar of Pwllheli, there were a series of remarkable scenes. Early in the morning guns were fired to apprise the people of the visit of the auctioneer. Mr. Lloyd Carter was protected by Colonel Ruck, chief constable of Carnarvonshire, and Superintendent Hughes, of Pwllheli. When the distraining party took the road a cart was placed in front of the procession, and in it was the effigy of a clergyman intoxicated and lolling in a chair, having on his breast the words in Welsh, "This is what we do with the tithes." In front of the clergyman stood a table with a bottle of wine and a tobacco-pipe. On the way to the second farm, another effigy was met representing a surpliced clergyman attired in a pair of shooting-boots which peeped out under his canonicals. He bestrode a white horse, and he carried a gin bottle. Then came a sickly-looking youth sitting on an empty beer-barrell, and clad in all the hues of the rainbow, driving a pair of ponies. At the next farm Captain Roberts, the tenant, refused to pay £16 odd. The stack was bought in for the tenant, and then the crowd sang the Welsh national song, "Land of my Fathers." At Fron farm, tenanted by Mrs. Williams, a widow, a collection was made on her behalf, and the amount paid, cheers being given for the subscriptions of Colonel Ruck, and Superintendent Hughes. At Hendre, Penbyrs Mills the tenant paid £11 out of £13 odd due, and the sale of a large stack of hay for the balance seemed to excite the crowd, for when the miller turned on the water which flows down the yard in an aqueduct, they pushed Mr. Carter, the auctioneer, under it, and he was rescued in a drenched condition. The last place visited was Tynewydd, where £18 were recovered by the sale of a haystack to Dr. Griffiths, who purchased for the tenant. On leaving the yard clods of earth were flung at Mr. Carter, and he was roughly used. A move was then made to the vicarage, where the Rev. T. Jones was vigorously hooted.

Mr. Stevens, acting on behalf of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and the local clergy, was busily engaged on Monday in levying distrains in various parts of Flintshire. Starting from Mold at daybreak, accompanied by Chief Constable Bolton and several police and emergency men, he proceeded to Rhesycae and Halkyn, where several seizures were made. At Whitford the party were vigorously pelted with rotten eggs. About forty miles were traversed during the day.

Ten days' notices have been served by the representatives of Christ Church, Oxford, upon the tithepayers in the Meiford Valley, Montgomeryshire for arrears. A large number of the farmers have not paid since 1886, and the Dean and Chapter refuse to concede an abatement of 10 per cent.—Guardian.

Obituary.

THOMAS BAMFORD.

WE regret to announce the death of the above ringer, who had been a ringer of the Rochdale parish church society for over sixty years, which event took place on Sunday, November 11th, at the advanced age of 84 years. The deceased was interred at the Rochdale cemetery on Wednesday, November 14th, and was borne to the grave by four of his ringing friends. The funeral ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. S. Rowland, one of the curates of the church, after which a course of Grandsire Triples was rung at the grave side. The bells of the parish church were deeply muffled, when touches of Grandsire Triples and Major were rung by mixed companies from Rochdale, Heywood, and Todmorden. Deceased rang regularly for the Sunday services within two months of his death, and was in possession of all his faculties up to the last. He took part in a good many peals of 5000, and notably one to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his first peal, when he was seventy-eight years of age. On his eightieth birthday he rang another 5000, and for Divine Service on his eighty-second birthday he rang the first half of Reeves's ten-part peal (2520 changes). Deceased was a member of the Ancient Society of College Youths, and took part in a peal of Grandsire Triples in London.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1888.

ONCE again the most genial season of all the year has come round, and we are "in position" to repeat the welcome call—"A Happy Christmas and Prosperous New Year," to all our readers and friends. Welcome to many, without doubt, the warm-hearted, kindly greetings which pass from mouth to mouth, and heart to heart: welcome to the worn and weary toiler in counting-house and workshop the brief respite from labour and care which the well-earned holiday brings with it; welcome the glad reunion of families round the old home fireside; welcome the tender and gentle influence which cheers the poor, soothes the sorrowing, and breathes on the hearts of all the heavenly message of "peace and goodwill."

True, we have other holidays, and other occasions during the year, for family or social gathering; but, for all that, "Christmas comes but once a year," and the Christmas holiday has a flavour which is all its own. Whether we "keep Christmas" in midwinter, on this side of the globe, or in midsummer at the Antipodes, the old associations cleave to it, it retains its own peculiar charm, and exerts its own benignant spell: its time-honoured traditions, like the evergreens with which we adorn our churches and houses, will last; while other emotions are crushed and battered in the rough battle of life, or wither with the growth of years. May the benign influence of this season of joy, hallowed alike by its origin and its significance, exert its proper sway over the hearts of us all! As votaries of a beautiful art, consecrated by its association with the offices of religion, may we all permit Christmas, with its holy lesson of love, peace, and goodwill, to teach us to lay aside all petty animosities, to heal our little feuds, to reconcile our differences, and to start afresh for a new peal, with truer changes and better striking, of mutual help, brotherly love, union and concord.

Bell-ringers, like the carol singers, have been in many parts of the country for years associated with the celebration of Christmas: and on Tuesday next, we doubt not, joyous peals will ring out from many a church tower, nor will the hand bell-ringers be idle: for many a village household will doubtless receive its customary visit and listen to the harmony of Grandsire and Treble Bob, while curious eyes endeavour in vain to unravel the intricacies of the rapidly and well-struck changes. This will be as it should be. For we venture to think that our church bells, at least can be put to no higher or better use than to mark by special peals of joy the feasts kept by the church in commemoration of the Great Events of our Redemption. We hope to see the time when no church tower, with an effective ring of bells, will fail to send forth its notes of joy and praise on these High Festivals, and when every band of ringers shall recognize in such a peal, not only an act of official duty, but a labour of love—a reasonable voluntary service.

Let us begin by extending such a recognition to this Christmas Festival; and we may be sure we shall feel happier and better for having in our own special way joined heartily in giving "Glory to God!"

Correspondence.

(While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.)

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

BILL DORAN'S CASE.

SIR,—Allow me to say the case of our old friend Doran, is rather an exceptional one. He has always been a steady and careful man, never of the strongest in health, but with a good heart and will, as supplement, I found in him the man that would do and say just what was about the right thing. I cannot say if he belongs to a Benefit Society or not, but suppose he does. His illness has been so protracted that he will have outrun its benefits; again, suppose he has this society to back him up, what is it after all 10s. or 12s. a week. Not much to provide for a little family, pay rent, and find the necessaries for a sick man's wants. Beyond this I will also say that when in work, his wages were such, that only by dint and perseverance could he make both ends meet, and many of us who know him well, know also he would have attended ringing practice more frequently and regularly had it not been for the fact that he could not afford the few pence for railway fare.

Yes, Mr. Editor, the case of plain, but straightforward Bill Doran is a bad one, I appeal to all members of the Royal Cumberlands to support it, other gentlemen to please themselves, and to do so quickly, or I doubt for ever lose the opportunity, as without a great alteration the case is hopeless.

During the present foggy weather, the poor fellow, has to struggle for breath and existence. Let me hope, that this and other appeals I am making may ease the struggle for sustenance. HENRY DAINES.

THE PEAL OF LONDON SURPRISE AT FULHAM.

SIR,—In your last issue, I see you have recorded a peal (?) of London Surprise, rang at All Saints, Fulham, in 3 hrs. and 19 mins. by the St. Paul's, Burton-on-Trent, branch of the Midland Counties' Association.

As an honorary member of the St. Paul's Society, and also of the Fulham Association of Change-Ringers, I think it my duty to bring before your notice the following facts, but I may add that I do so without any personal feeling in the matter. I could not help noticing the very poor striking at the start, but thought it would improve after a time. In 20 mins. the bells got into a complete fire, which continued, when a bystander remarked, that he hoped they would not break down as it would be too late to start again. This occurred three times during the progress of the ringing. The rate varied from twenty-four to twenty-six changes per minute; calculating at the average rate, it was remarked that the ringing should have taken five or six minutes longer.

It was a very poor exhibition of ringing all through, and wound-up by the bells being at sea to come round clean by the method.

C. F. WINNY.

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—I wish to inform those of your readers who possess a copy of Snowdon's "Grandsire" of a misprint on page ninety-three, in the second peal. (Rev. C. D. P. Davies, fifth part).

It will be seen at the 14th bob lead that the observation bell (the second) is called in and out at three. This should be in and out at four. Also the small figure denoting the number of plain leads between the 18th and 19th bob leads should be two instead of five.

Both mistakes may be perceived by noticing the 15th and 19th bob leads which are correct.

A. E. PARSONS.

Old Hill, Staffs.

SIR,—In reading yours of the 15th inst. I saw an intimation from the Oxford Guild of their intention to attempt a long peal of Stedman Caters, and taking it for granted to be their intention, if possible, to lower the record of the last, viz., Cheltenham peal, I could not help but think how much better, aye, fairer it would have read had they seen their way clear to have selected a peal of bells something near the same weight. When one reads of the splendid performances achieved in London, for instance, when they were struggling for the mastership in the long lengths of Treble Bob, and used to get some weight at the ropes' end one cannot help but admire their pluck and endurance. Then again we have the Painswick peal, the 12,000 at Broomsgrove, tenor nearly a ton, and like a bright star, the over 15,000 at Ashton, tenor 21 cwt. shines out prominently. These few I take it are something like performances against which the intended peal next Monday sinks into a mere farce. I daresay my Oxford Guild friends will be annoyed at my writing like this, but I also think there are a goodly number of brother ringers who will agree with what I say.

T. RUSSAN.

PROPOSED BENEFIT SOCIETY.

SIR,—I thoroughly believe were a Committee formed with the intention of taking up the initiative of "Free Lance," the above would soon become an accomplished thing and enjoy the support of the great majority of ringers. I noticed a correspondence purporting from the "Assist. Hon. Sec." Sussex County Association (Mr. J. E. Worsell), in your last issue. With some amount of amusement I learned from him that "ringers are not restricted from enjoying the advantages" of the A.O.F., M.U.O.F., etc. Would not it have been just as instructive for that gentleman to have gone a little further and have added that ringers are not even "restricted" from enjoying the rights of Magna Charta? Both of these societies named by your correspondent could in no serious manner be injured by the ringers having a benefit society. I think also Mr. Worsell is somewhat hard on ringers in general and on his Association in particular for not responding to Mr. Randall's appeal for Mr. Doran. Does it ever occur to Mr. Worsell that there is such a malady as "Depression of Trade" which more or less I think every working-man has had an unwelcome experience? This I attribute to such a shallow response to such a deserving case. Mr. Doran, I feel sure, has the sympathy of all non-subscribers, and their regret at not being able to support him, but who none the less hope that he may enjoy the coming festive season with their welcome of a right Jolly Happy Christmas.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.—LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN BRANCH.

A most successful and harmonious meeting took place on Saturday last, in the Cocoa Rooms, St. Luke's Place, Liverpool, for the purpose of forming the above Branch. The meeting opened at 5.30, when there were present about thirty ringers, representing Aughton, Blackburn, Hindley, Huyton, Liverpool, Ormskirk, Prescott, Sefton, Southport, Upholland, and Wigan, and the secretary and treasurer of the county association. The Rev. D. Jones, of Aughton, was unanimously voted to the chair, and explained the object of the meeting.

Mr. F. W. Moore proposed "that having heard the remarks of the chairman, it was desirable to form a branch of the Lancashire Association for Liverpool and district." This was seconded by Mr. W. Bentham and carried unanimously.

Mr. John R. Pritchard then proposed "That the branch should be called 'The Liverpool Diocesan Branch.'"

Mr. R. Hill seconded, and this motion was unanimously carried.

Mr. J. R. Pritchard then proposed "That meetings be held monthly alternately at eight and six-bell towers." This also was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. Joseph Prescott, Hindley, proposed, and Mr. W. G. Mann, Liverpool, seconded, "That Mr. John R. Pritchard be elected local Secretary," which proposition was unanimously carried.

Mr. James, Liverpool, proposed "That the various superintendents of towers, being members, should form a provisional committee to select the places of meeting, six of whom to form a quorum." This was also agreed to.

Mr. J. Martin, churchwarden of Sefton parish church, in a few well-chosen remarks, wished the branch every success, and was elected an honorary member.

Mr. F. W. Moore also addressed the meeting, and gave some very appropriate remarks on the duties of clergy and wardens to the ringers, and the ringers' duties to the church.

The Chairman then proposed a vote of thanks to the wardens of St. Luke's church for kindly placing the bells at the disposal of the meeting. The meeting then proceeded to the election of members, when forty performing and two honorary members were added to the roll of the Association. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding brought a very pleasant meeting to a close.

After the meeting touches were rung on the bells of St. Luke's church, and also on the handbells in the ringing room. The next meeting of this branch will be held (in conjunction with the quarterly meeting of the County Association) at Southport, on Saturday, January 12th, 1889, when it is to be hoped all ringers in the diocese will attend.

ST. GABRIEL'S, PIMLICO.

It is with the most sincere regret that we have to announce the lamented and unexpected death of the wife of the Rev. J. H. Ellison, Vicar of St. Gabriel's, Warwick Square. It was only last year that her marriage took place at Lambeth Palace Chapel, under the happiest and brightest auspices. About six weeks ago she was safely delivered of a son, and appeared to be progressing favourably. Recovery was somewhat slow, but her death on Wednesday, December 19th, was almost sudden. A local paper, referring to the deceased lady, says:

"Mrs. Ellison was the youngest daughter of the late Archbishop Tait, and was not the least brilliant of a specially gifted family. Besides intellectual talents of no mean order, she had a most lively fancy and humour, a keen wit, an unruffled good-temper, and the most engaging manners. She was the delight of a very large family circle, and a still wider surrounding of friends. She was the support of her father's declining years, and the comfort of his many and repeated domestic bereavements; and it was most touching to see them as almost playful companions together, and to hear her gay and sweet voice singing about the old halls and galleries of Lambeth Palace. She had much that recalled her illustrious father both in face and character. Many of the happiest homes of England are desolated by this untimely loss, and the deepest and most respectful sympathy must be felt for her husband, whose life is so prematurely overshadowed."

The deceased lady was only twenty-eight years of age. The first part of the funeral service took place at St. Gabriel's, on Friday, December 21st, and she was laid to rest the next day at Addington. Last Sunday evening a muffled peal, consisting of the usual whole pull and stand, was rung at St. Gabriel's. C. F. Winny, 1; H. Swain, 2; W. Hoverd, 3; W. E. Garrard, 4; G. T. McLaughlin, 5; W. T. Cockerill, 6; R. T. Woodley, 7; J. M. Hayes (conductor), 8. Afterwards two courses of Stedman Triples were rung. The ringers also forwarded to the Vicar a letter of condolence.

VISIT OF THE BENINGTON RINGERS TO WIDFORD, ESSEX.

It is already known to the Exercise that this peal of bells (tenor 12 cwt. in G) has recently been augmented from six to eight. Besides two new trebles, the back six have been thoroughly overhauled, the second and sixth are placed in a new oak frame above the others, the whole having new sallie rollers and iron guides for the ropes, with chiming apparatus complete. The work has been carried out in a most satisfactory manner, through the munificence of A. Pryor, Esq.

On Wednesday, December 19th, by the kind invitation of the donor of the new bells, there journeyed to Widford L. Proctor, Esq., and the Benington ringers, accompanied by Mr. H. Baker and Mr. J. Gray, of Hertford, where they arrived about 11 a.m. The bells were raised in peal, and afterwards touches of Stedman, Double Norwich, Superlative, Cambridge, and London Surprise were brought round during the day, amounting to upwards of 4000 changes. At 2 o'clock the party sat down to an excellent repast, provided by host Clark, at the "Sir Evelyn Wood," afterwards returning to the tower, where ringing was kept up until 4 p.m. The visitors having expressed themselves greatly pleased with the splendid "go" of the bells, then made their way to Chelmsford, and rang a short touch of Stedman Triples and 416 of Double Norwich, at St. Mary's, afterwards catching the 6.30 train en route for Hertfordshire. The Benington ringers included Samuel Page, John Kitchener, Joseph Kitchener, L. Chapman, J. Warner, N. Warner, C. Shambrook, and W. Hobbs.

ST. MARTIN'S GUILD FOR BIRMINGHAM, ASTON, AND THE SURROUNDING DISTRICTS.

The first general meeting of this Guild will be held at St. Martin's Mission Rooms, Barwick Street, Edmund Street Birmingham, on Tuesday evening, January 8th, 1889, at 8 o'clock, when all the present members of the St. Martin's and Holt Societies are earnestly requested to attend.

W. H. GODDEN, Sec. pro tem.

OPENING OF ST. MARY'S TOWER, RAWTENSTALL.

On Thursday evening, the formal opening of the new tower clock and bells, in connection with St. Mary's Church, Rawtenstall, took place. The Bishop of Manchester preached the dedicatory sermon from St. Mary's pulpit, to an exceedingly large audience, and was listened to with profound attention. The following clergymen were present:—Revs. Canon Champneys, vicar of Haslingden and Rural dean; J. G. Haworth, vicar of Tunstead; A. Spencer, vicar of Goodshaw; E. Holliday, vicar of Cloughfold; I. Downham, vicar of Baxenden; C. Wesson, vicar of St. James' Waterfoot; A. Smith, and T. F. Jones, curates, Stacksteads; J. Gardner, curate of Goodshaw; R. W. Hay, Newchurch Grammar School, and curate of Haslingden; Rev. J. M. Mather, Revs. J. Norris, J. Dodd, and J. Given, Rawtenstall.

The Bishop then ascended the pulpit. He said they had met to dedicate that tower and bells to that house of prayer. He supposed the principle upon which they had proceeded in their work had been this, that so far as they were able to secure it, every one of their gifts to God should be perfect of its kind. So thoroughly did the builders of the Middle Ages, recognise this principle that they made not only every stone perfect that was exposed to view, but also those inside. The eye of man might not rest upon them, but the eye of God would, and so far as their efforts could prevent it, they were determined there should be no defect in their gifts. He believed they at that place had carried out that principle, and he congratulated them on their work, and might God grant His blessing on their works of faith and labours of love.—His Lordship then preached an impressive sermon from Matthew, 12 chap. and xxxvi. verse.

The bells were opened by the Newchurch ringers with a 504 Grandsire Triples, before and after the service. And on Sunday, for Evening Service the same company rang another 504. After Evening Service a 720 Plain Bob Minor. T. Harrison, 1; T. N. Pickup, 2; J. B. Taylor, 3; James Pickup, 4; John Smith, 5; John Kershaw, 6. Tenor 14 cwt. The bells are by Messrs. Mears and Stainbank, and the clock by Messrs. J. Smith and Sons, and they give every satisfaction.

RAVENINGHAM CHURCH BELLS, NORFOLK.

The bells in this parish were re-opened on Saturday, December 22nd, after having been entirely re-hung upon a new stout English oak frame. Two new bells have also been added to complete the peal. Saturday being the day fixed for the opening ringers were invited, and the following places were represented: Eye, Beccles, Loddon, Norton, Thurlton, etc. Through the liberality of N. W. Bacon, Esq., J.P., of Raveningham Hall, a substantial dinner was provided to which about twenty sat down and did ample justice to. The chair was taken by Mr. J. Mendham, agent to N. W. Bacon, Esq., and the vice-chair by Mr. George Day, Eye. The bells formerly consisted of three, which are from the Norwich Foundry, 1676 and 1617, bearing the city shield, and have now, through the generosity of N. W. Bacon, Esq., been augmented into a peal of five, by the addition of two new bells, and they are considered by all who have heard them to be a very pretty musical peal. The two new bells were cast by John Warner and Sons, of London.

During the evening several toasts were proposed and drunk, including the health of the donor of the bells, and that of Mr. J. Mendham, who has taken much interest in the restoration, being one of the ringers, and to him thanks are due for the use of his excellent peal of handbells during the evening.

The clergy who have been attached as curates to the parish church at Halifax under Dr. Pigou have presented their former vicar with two handsome easy chairs for the library—one in morocco leather, and the other upholstered in rich velvet for Mrs. Pigou. The Rev. H. Robinson said that while offering their congratulations their feelings were mingled with regret at Dr. Pigou's departure. They recalled with much pleasure the kindness not only of himself but also of Mrs. Pigou, who had endeared herself to them by ever making them feel that the vicarage was a home where they always had a kindly greeting. The Dean and Mrs. Pigou feelingly acknowledged the gift. A silver plate inserted in the book-rest bore an inscription.

ACCIDENT TO A BELLHANGER.

An inquest was held on Saturday, at the Bristol General Hospital, by the city coroner, Mr. Wasbrough, concerning the death of Alfred York. The coroner said the case before them was one in which a bellhanger, who had been severely injured by a bell falling on him, died on Friday at the Hospital. James York, of 19, Hillgrove-hill, Stoke's-croft, son of the deceased, said his father was a bell-hanger, and his age was 52. He lived in the same house as witness. While deceased was engaged at Withington, Herefordshire, in hanging a peal of bells a bell fell on him. This happened on November 28. George Liversha, of 4, Queen-street, Eastville, said he was engaged with the deceased in hanging the peal of bells. The deceased was working under a bell, when the bolt which was keeping it up broke, and the bell fell on the deceased. The bell weighed 9½ cwt. One of the jury asked if the bolt was a temporary one. Witness said it was not, and in reply to the question whether the bolts were tested before they were used made answer that they did not test them, as they were supposed to be tested by the blacksmiths of whom they were bought. Dr. H. C. Newnham, said the deceased was brought to the hospital on November 28, suffering from a compound fracture of the leg. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death. The coroner then recommended that all bolts should be tested before being used.

The Carnarvon Herald states that Dr. Gardner, the Queen's physician in Scotland, has reported to the Archbishop of Canterbury that the Bishop of St. Asaph is incapable of resigning, owing to mental inability to give that attention which would make such an act valid, and if pressure were exerted fatal results might follow. The signature of the Bishop of St. Asaph to the commission appointing the Bishop of Bangor to officially act for him in the diocese was made before a recent serious collapse, and even then only a mark was appended and witnessed. Under the peculiar circumstances it is announced that the Archbishop is consulting the law officers of the Crown to endeavour to relieve the deadlock.

NOTICE OF LONG PEAL.—Twelve members of the Yorkshire Association will attempt 10,196 of Stedman Cinques at the parish church, Sheffield, on Monday, December 31st, to commence at 10.30.

THE PROPOSED ADDITION TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

Westminster Abbey is a building of such surpassing interest that any matter relating to it is worthy of public attention. The manner in which its walls are covered and often disfigured by its multitude of monuments, cannot escape the eye of the most casual observer. However wrong it may seem from an æsthetic point of view, it is unquestionably true that the chief interest of the Abbey for the general visitor lies in these very monuments; and the interest is historical not, æsthetic. In them it contains what is perhaps the most impressive and certainly a most popular lesson in the national history. When therefore we are met by the fact that the Abbey is full—too full as many think—and that the time has come when no more monuments can be placed in it, it is necessary to consider how provision may be made for the future. For the necessity of making adequate provision for continuing this as yet unbroken line will be admitted by every one.

More than twenty-five years ago Sir Gilbert Scott proposed to build in Abingdon-street, facing the Houses of Parliament, a monumental cloister stretching from the Chapter-house to Great College-street. In the November Number of the Nineteenth Century, at the end of an article on recent work in connection with the public buildings of London, Mr. Shaw Lefevre discussed another scheme for adding to the Abbey a building styled variously a chapel, a cloister, and a new south transept. The plan now advocated consists of an oblong building to be erected on the south side of the Abbey between the Little Cloisters and the Jewel Tower, with its east side facing Old Palace-yard. This site is now occupied by houses of no architectural interest, and if cleared would give space for a building 200ft. long by 100ft. wide. It would include within its walls the remains of St. Catherine's Chapel, the altar of which might be rebuilt to be used in connection with the memorial or dedicatory services; its main entrance from the exterior would be at Poet's-corner, but it would be more closely connected with the Abbey by a passage from the south transept under the buttresses of the Chapter-house, and by an entrance from the Little Cloisters; one great merit, it is suggested, of this plan would consist in opening up a view of the Chapter-house and of the south elevation of the Abbey.

A building of such a size, and necessary of considerable architectural pretensions, would of course involve a large outlay of money. And there is the site to be bought. Mr. Shaw Lefevre's proposals for raising the required funds are given in the same article and are as follows:—For the site a sum of about £80,000 is required. The building itself, he estimates, would involve an outlay of some £50,000 or £60,000, though surely this is too little. It is not to be expected that Parliament will vote the money. But in the course of the next year, we are told, there will come into existence a quasi-public fund upon which no one has any claim, and for which as yet there is no destination. The much abused London coal duties, at first intended to cease on July 1st, 1888, were extended to July 1st, 1889, in order to free certain bridges over the Thames and the Lea from tolls. After providing for this it is estimated that there will be a surplus of not less than £120,000 to be disposed of as Parliament may think fit. It is proposed that this fund should be appropriated "as an inducement to private liberality for works of public improvement."

One half of the amount necessary for the erection of the chapel might come from this fund and the remaining half be raised by public subscription. Among the supporters of this scheme are such well-known names as those of the Duke of Westminster, Lord Wantage, Lord Brassey, Baron F. de Rothschild, Mr. Cubitt, Mr. H. H. Gibbs, Mr. Bertram Currie, and Dr. E. Freshfield.

In conclusion, it is suggested that the building should remain in the hands of the Government, who would be responsible for its maintenance and repair, and regulate the burials and the placing of monuments in it. It might be called Victoria Chapel.

Notice has already been given—and this shows that the promoters are in earnest—of an intended application to Parliament in the ensuing session to authorise the compulsory purchase of the site and to sanction the application of part of the coal duties for the above purposes.

Obituary.

THOMAS BARROTT.

We regret to have to announce the death of the above ringer, who was accidentally killed on Friday, December 14th, whilst following his employment at the Besom Hill Brick Works, by a fall of shal and stone, killing him on the spot. He was in his 26th year, and leaves a wife and child to mourn his loss. For many years—up to his untimely death—the deceased was an active member of the Moorside tower and handbell ringers, and has rung in about eight peals and a few date touches. He was looking forward to going out with the ringers on Christmas Eve, and was whistling a few minutes before his death a tune which they had been practising for that occasion. On the Sunday following his death, the bells were rung deeply-muffled, and a 760 of Grandsire Triples was rung for morning service. In the evening the company met early and rung the first four parts of Reeves's Variation. A. Butterworth, 1; T. Greenwood, 2; J. Gratrix, 3; George H. Beaver, 4; F. Cocks, 5; W. Sutcliffe, 6; J. Taylor, 7; J. Crossley, 8. Messrs. Beaver and Cocks hail from Glodwick, Oldham; J. Gratrix from Manchester; the rest are of the local company. Both touches were conducted by Wm. Sutcliffe. In the evening the ringers wended their way to the tower, and rang a muffled peal of Grandsire Triples, in 2 hrs. and 57 mins., as a token of respect to their deceased brother-ringer. Adam Butterworth, 1; Thomas Greenwood, 2; William Pitman, 3; Samuel Stott, 4; Joseph Taylor, 5; William Sutcliffe, 6; James Siddall, 7; *John Crossley, 8. Conducted by Wm. Sutcliffe. *First peal. Messrs. Stott and Siddall hail from Oldham; the rest belong to the local company. The deceased was laid to rest on Tuesday in St. Thomas's churchyard, Moorside, before a large and sympathising crowd of people. He was followed to his last resting place by his widow and child, parents, sisters, brother and other relatives and friends, and the workmen at the brickworks, and the Moorside ringers. The Rev. George Holmes, son of the Vicar, officiated at the service, and sympathised with the bereaved, and said he had known the deceased when a boy. Over the grave his brother ringers rang that beautiful hymn "Go bury thy sorrow," and a course of Grandsire Minor on the handbells. The procession then returned, after which the ringers ascended the tower and rang a touch of Grandsire Triples 350 changes, with the bells deeply muffled. They subsequently adjourned to the house of Mr. John Lees, Sholver Moor, where a sumptuous tea was provided for them and the workmen of the brickworks. After the cloth was removed (Mr. Isaac Bassett in the chair), Mr. Thos. Mellowdew, Sholver Moor, and the host delivered some appropriate remarks about the deceased. Mr. Adam Butterworth moved that a message of condolence be sent to the deceased's widow, sympathising with her in her sad bereavement. Mr. James Siddall, of Oldham, seconded it, in a few touching remarks, the company unanimously agreeing. Mr. Thomas Mellowdew thanked them on behalf of the widow, parents, and relatives for assisting them in the painful duty they had to perform that day. Mr. Adam Butterworth then recited some verses which he had composed for the occasion.

As the result of a munificent gift, a new parish is being formed in Hastings, and a church will, it is hoped, be built without delay. A lady some months ago, having consulted the Rev. H. D. Jones, rector of Upper Street, S. Leonard's decided to build and endow a church in memory of her husband, at a cost of £15,000, in the poor and populous district of All Saints', Hastings. The offer made was readily accepted by the Rev. G. A. Foyster, the vicar, on condition of the Bishop's approval of the scheme of patronage by which Mr. Jones was to choose the first vicar. Mr. Foyster was able to add that a site had already been promised by the Rev. C. Sayer-Milward, who owns land in the parish. The first incumbency has been offered to and accepted by the Rev. H. U. Whelpton, curate of Christ Church, Albany Street, N.W., and son of Prebendary Whelpton, of Eastbourne. The appointment has been approved by the fundress and the Bishop.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"A Happy New Year."

Let us hope that the coming year of grace may prove so to all of us. But we should try to make it so far as we can by the practice of the cardinal virtues, notably of self-denial. This virtue is an important factor to the well-being of our art. Let us then practice it in and out of season. Then we shall hear no more of the ravings of spite and jealousy.

* * * * *

I am obliged to Mr. Mead for his very interesting epistle. Although I am rather inclined to think that his letter was intended more for my private perusal than for publication, yet the information it contains sufficiently warranted its "reduction to print," while at the same time, to my mind, it fully bears out my previous remarks which give rise to it. I gave the Clun men credit for perseverance, and surely the story told by Mr. Mead is one long narrative of drawbacks, and a steady determination to surmount them. First they have the opposition of the old stoney ringers, which they appear to have settled satisfactorily. Then their efforts to procure the restoration of the tower and the substitution of a good peal of eight in place of their present "very poor peal of six," although not so successful as they deserve to have been, yet seem to me full of promise for the future. Take heart, my friends, keep pegging away, and and success will attend you sooner or later—probably sooner.

* * * * *

That part of Mr. Mead's letter referring to the restoration of their church is, I am sorry to say, only too common with us. Large sums are collected and spent in the "restoration" of nave and chancel, vestry and organ chamber. Expensive oak and tile work are laid down for the purpose of beautifying the interior; but the poor old tower, which for generation after generation has pointed heavenward, is left in its dilapidation and dirt. Nobody goes up its spiral staircase to view its interior, save the ringers, and perhaps the sexton when he has to ring the death-bell or wind up the clock. The parishioners see it only from the outside, which to them seems as solid as ever it did. Thus it is so often our towers and their contents are neglected, and left to "rack and ruin," so that in many places when the ringers are not so persevering as the men of Clun, they give up ringing, in disgust, the bells remain silent and all above is forgotten, till some day a clock weight, or a rotten beam, or a stone gets loosened from its fastenings and comes thundering down into the church below, dealing destruction in its course. Then the people wake up, and wonder how this has come to pass; how it is that such a dreadful state of affairs exists in their but recently restored and beautiful church. They talk of the narrow escape, and what might have been the case had this "accident" happened during service time: then in the flush of the moment they commence to do that which they ought to have done years before—finish the work of restoration properly—only to find that what might have been previously accomplished with tens of pounds, now costs hundreds.

* * * * *

Here is a parish which eleven years ago spent £7,000 in the church, but where the Committee "did not see their way clear" to raise but another seventh of that sum to properly complete the work. Thus the state of the tower is a disgrace to the church and parish. But, ringers of Clun, you have made a good start—two bells towards the eight. Surely with the powerful help of Vicar, Curate, Organist, and good ladies in the parish, you are on the right track, and bound to win. My earnest hope is that this time next year you may be ringing together in a restored belfry, and usher in Christmas with a touch of Major on a fine new ring of eight.

What a contrast is this story told by Mr. Mead to the report we have from Kimpton! After thirty years of enforced silence through this very cause—the dilapidated state of the tower—the bells have been once more made ringable, thanks to the good effects of the worthy vicar. The presence of the Bishop and Archdeacon of St. Albans at the reopening was a fitting recognition not only of our art, but also of the vicar's energy and perseverance, and it is to be hoped that we shall soon read of substantial progress made by the local band under the tutorship of Mr. Robinson.

* * * * *

The ringers of Mossley and Sharnbrook are to be congratulated on the success of their young pupils, who have evidently commenced early in life, one fifteen, one fourteen, and one thirteen years of age, all of whom have rung their first 720 of Minor. But I should like to know how the conductor of the latter company managed to crowd fifty-eight bobs and twenty-two singles into one 720 of Grandsire Minor.

* * * * *

It is to be hoped, for his own credit's sake, that the conductor of the peal of Treble Bob at St. Andrew's, Well Street, will be able to answer satisfactorily the doubting queries respecting it. Certainly the temperate language used by the two correspondents does somehow give an unpleasant prima facie appearance of good grounds for their questions. They do not appear to be of that disagreeable species of humanity which we have too often amongst us, who seems to think that his great object in life is picking holes and fault-finding. Among ringers he is generally to me found putting disagreeable questions which he knows serve no purpose but to make things unpleasant. If a peal has been rung, which he has not taken part in, he is replete with queries and innuendoes: first as to the truth of the composition, then as to its having been properly conducted and rung; if he fails to find in them a peg to hang up a case on, then he will fall back on his last resource—"Oh, the striking was bad; it wasn't worth counting a peal," and so on. Well, the best mode of dealing with these conceited would-be mischief-makers is to "leave them severely alone," and they will in the long run extinguish themselves. But as I observed before, I don't think these queries in question come from such a quarter, and thus I shall look with some interest for the answer.

* * * * *

And now a word with our friend Mr. Attree. With all due deference to him, I think he has made but a poor defence of the practice which I complained of. His whole letter, indeed, smacks so much of that old familiar tu quoque style of disputation, as to take away much of the weight it otherwise might have. His points, too, are so easy of annihilation that I really feel almost ashamed of tackling them. But by way of illustration I will just mention one or two. First the peculiar connection which he endeavours to form between my weekly motto and my remarks on this subject; which had no existence save in his own mind. Then the argument having reference to the appearance of what he seemed to consider extraneous and (to us) useless matter; that is a point altogether wide of the question, and does not affect the point at issue in the slightest. Again, the cases which he cites in favour of his contention are actually the cases which I wrote in favour of, i.e., where there is something more than ordinary in their nature. I am afraid I am spinning out my notes to and inordinate length this week, or I might have had a little more to say to our friend Mr. Attree. As it is, I would recommend him to produce something stronger if he wishes to convince anyone that he is right in his contention.

Mr. Worsell reverts to the recently suggested "Ringers' Benefit Society," and like many others, seems to be impressed with the many difficulties in the way. But, in whatever shape it might assume, there can be no doubt that we, as a fraternity, ought to have some properly constituted plan of helping brothers in distress. Let me then strongly urge upon our friends to give this subject their earnest thought; and more, while they are holding happy unions together this Christmastide, devote a little time to the discussion of the point, have an interchange of ideas, so that when the holidays are once more over, we can express our opinions which have thus been formed after careful consideration.

* * * * *

I wish our friends of the Oxford Guild every success with their proposed attempted long peal of Stedman Caters, at Appleton, as announced. May "the course-ends roll up like clockwork," one after the other till the welcome words "That's all," brings to an end a peal the ringing of which will afford pleasant recollections to the performers.

* * * * *

Our Christmas number contains two capital stories, and a splendid portrait of a very expert ringer. I trust that the future portraits of our paper will be of the same order. They can be utilised for framing, or inserting in a kind of portfolio made for the purpose; and thus every ringer will be able to possess a ringers' portrait gallery. Let me commend this idea to my readers. I am told that each of these portraits cost nearly a penny each to produce, so that we ought not to murmur at the increase in the price of the number. And with respect to the stories I can affirm without fear of contradiction, that shorter stories not near so interesting are sold at railway bookstalls for sixpence and one shilling. The tale entitled "A Merry Peal," certainly gives above three penny's worth of amusement and interest. And our old friend Trippels also is to the fore again.

* * * * *

Once more my friends—everyone, great and small—accept the heartiest new year's festive greetings from your humble servant, and well wisher,
FREE LANCE.

The Quarterly Meeting proposed to be held at Leighton Buzzard, to-day, Saturday, Dec. 29th, cannot be held there as the tower is under repair. It will therefore be held instead on that day at Eversholt, the six bells having just been overhauled by Messrs. Taylor, of Loughborough, and put in good ringing order.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1888.

THE issue of our last number for the year 1888 affords a fitting opportunity for some remarks on the progress made in the science and art of change-ringing during the last twelvemonths—a subject which deserves special recognition at our hands, when we compare the position of the Exercise at the date of the first appearance of our paper with its position and achievements at the present moment; and we trust that we shall not expose ourselves to the charge of vanity, if we venture to express the hope that the weekly appearance of "THE BELL NEWS" during the last eight years has not been without its influence in bringing about the results which we deem it our duty to summarise and chronicle.

The past year has been in various ways a remarkable one in the annals of change-ringing, and though it is the fashion to relegate the "palmy days" of the Exercise to a former generation, we cannot help thinking that if records were thoroughly searched and tabulated, that for the year which now closes would be found to be greatly in advance, in all important respects, of any which have gone before it. It is true that in the days of the giants men delighted to handle heavier metal in ringing their long lengths; but after all, this was merely a trial of physical strength and endurance, which did not touch the higher and finer interests of the art, and however much we may admire, as they deserve, these achievements of old, we think that we have something better and more noble to show in the superior and more general advance of the intellectual side of the art during recent years.

First, then, let us notice briefly the additions to the literature of change-ringing which have been made during 1888. This year has given to the Exercise the last work of its faithful and devoted friend, JASPER SNOWDON; his admirable Treatise on the Grandsire System bringing to a premature close the incomparable "Change-Ringing Series" with which he had purposed to endow the art he loved so well. Many of us, as we read his lucid explanations, and, above all, the very interesting and erudite chapter on the "History of Grandsire," could not fail to be conscious once more

This year has also seen the production, in completed form, of Mr. HEYWOOD's Treatise on the new method, "Duffield," which he has presented to the Exercise. In certain respects, this method marks a new departure on the scientific side of change-ringing; presenting new principles and new effects, which are well worthy of acceptance. The method is still too young to have secured anything like general attention; but its scientific merits are such as will, we doubt not, receive the recognition due to them as ringers, in general, advance in scientific knowledge add attainments. The Treatise, with its collection of the most notable compositions hitherto produced in the method, is a welcome addition to our literature: for it paves the way to a reformation of much which has for long sadly needed amendment.

In the next place, we note, with satisfaction, the greater regard that is being paid to the musical qualities of the peals which have of late been composed and rung. This is evidenced by the footnotes appended to records, as well as by many of the compositions which have appeared in our columns from time to time. There is still much room for improvement in this direction; but we are glad to recognise and welcome the advance already made.

When we turn to the number and character of the peals rung during the year, the beating of previous records is still more patent. Thanks to Mr. ATTREE's careful analysis, we are enabled readily to compare one year's achievements with another's; and though the returns for the closing year are not yet complete, enough is still shewn by the return for eleven months to make evident a very considerable advance in this respect. The total number of peals rung during the year has considerably increased; and this increase is not the result of spasmodic effort, or established and acknowledged rivalry; for the increase has been more or less steady month by month. What does this imply? It implies, not so much that individual societies are increasing their performances as that fresh companies are coming to the front, and fresh towers being opened for peal-ringing. The art is extending and gathering in new votaries from new districts. The advanced character of very many of the performances is also a conspicuous feature in the year's doings. Peals have been rung, on varying numbers of bells, in some sixty different methods, all told; including four Surprise methods, and such unusual names as Prince Albert Major, Violet Major, Canterbury Pleasure Major and Triples, and Place Triples, besides other methods which have not been much practised for many years. This revival of forgotten methods is a cheering sign, it shows an increasing spirit of enterprise which augurs well for the future; and though the more notable performances are to be credited to three or four enthusiastic bands, yet they are no longer confined, as was once the case, to isolated efforts waiting long for repetition or imitation. In this connection we gladly note the fact that the Ipswich Tower Society have, before the end of the year, broken through the cloud which has so long brooded over Double Norwich Maximus; and we are confident that before long we shall have the pleasure of booking a first peal—the first peal for many, many years, and the second ever rung—to the credit of that talented company. Nor must we pass over, as a feature of the year's performances, the long peals achieved by the Oxford Diocesan Guild, lowering the previous record in three methods, Double Norwich being one. A word of recognition is also due to the six-bell ringers for the energy and enterprise they have displayed in several places by scoring five thousands in different methods. We have had pleasure in recording many performances of this class during the year—performances, in our judgment, of no mean kind; evidencing much industry and devotion to the art, and giving token that those who have achieved such peals have had the best possible training in the art of method-ringing to fit them for taking part in the more ornate branches of Major ringing, when the suitable opportunity occurs.

Enough has been said to point out the real progress which has been effected, and to encourage our brethren to renewed perseverance, fresh enterprise, and more notable achievements than even the past year has witnessed.

Christ Church, Harpurhey, Manchester, was reopened on Sunday, after complete restoration and considerable enlargement. New open seats have taken the place of narrow and dark pews, a new floor and heating apparatus have been laid, two new lancet windows opened at the east end, the chancel has been brought forward and greatly improved, and new pulpit, reading-desk, and sedilia provided. Two new bays have been added to the church, forming porches, and staircases to the galleries, the gallery seats widened, a new font erected, a new vestry built, and by a new roof raft additional height has been gained over the former ceiling. The new lancet windows are filled with painted glass subjects in memory of the donor's father and mother, the late Henry and Elizabeth Hilton. Two other stained-glass windows, now brought to the east end of the church, commemorate the family of Mr. F. Andrew, of Green Mount. The improvements have been at the sole cost of a lady, formerly a parishioner, and have been carried out from designs of Mr. J. S. Crowther. The reopening sermon was preached by the rector (the Rev. J. Leighton) from 1 Cor. iii. 11. The other preachers of the day were the Rev. J. A. N. Hibbert and the Rev. J. G. Haworth, vicar of Stacksteads.

HOW TO LEARN CHANGE-RINGING WITHOUT AN INSTRUCTOR.—By Charles Pearson, M.A. Price Threepence, by post Fourpence.—WILLIAM POLLARD AND Co. Printers, Exeter.

Church News.

The Goldsmiths' Company have contributed £50 towards the Thames Church Mission.

The Dean and Chapter of Christ Church at the close of the morning service on Monday formerly elected Dr. Stubbs, Bishop of Chester, to be Bishop of Oxford, in the room of Bishop Mackarness, resigned.

Mr. Gladstone, before leaving England, forwarded 20*l.* to the Bishop of Bedford for the East London Church Fund. The subdiocese of East London now includes such neighbourhoods as Islington, Enfield, Clerkenwell, and Shoreditch.

The consecration of Dr. Jayne, vicar of Leeds, as Bishop of Chester, will not take place, as has been announced, on Friday, January 25th. No date is yet fixed, but it is hoped the necessary legal preliminaries may be completed by February 2nd, the Purification. The consecration will be in York Minster.

The congregation of St. Matthew's, Redhill, have voluntarily subscribed all expenses of a visit to the Holy Land and Egypt of the Rev. Henry Brass, as a mark of appreciation of his ministry among them during a period of more than a quarter of a century.

The living of Rype, vacant by the resignation of the Rev. R. S. Sutton, has been offered to the Rev. F. C. Fox, M.A., curate of Benenden, Kent, who has accepted it.

The following Commissioners under the Pluralities Act Amendment Act have been re-elected in the diocese of Southwell:—Canon Gray, for the chapter of Southwell; Canon Andrew, for the archdeaconry of Derby; the Rev. W. Homfray, for the archdeaconry of Nottingham.

The Record states that the Rev. John Hurst, vicar of St. Mark's, Tollington-park will succeed the Rev. D. L. McAnally, in the secretaryship of the Colonial and Continental Society. Mr. Hurst was ordained in 1858 in the diocese of Huron. From 1859 to 1874 he was rector of Windsor, Ontario, and from 1874 to 1875 he was assistant-minister of Huron Cathedral. In 1878 he was appointed assistant-secretary of the Colonial and Continental Church Society, and in 1881 he accepted the vicarage of St. Mark's, Tollington-park.

"Those who have criticised the Bishop of Liverpool for driving from one church to another on the Sabbath day in his carriage," says the Rock, "have evidently overlooked the teaching conveyed in our Saviour's question, 'Have ye not read in the law how that on the Sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless?' They profaned it merely by the necessary duties of their office, and were held 'blameless' because the work was necessary for the services of the Temple. The Bishop who uses a carriage when he cannot possibly help it is in very much the same position as were the ecclesiastics of old.

On Monday se'night the congregation of St. John-the-Baptist's, Holland-road, assembled in considerable numbers in the Addison Hall to present to the Rev. S. F. Green a testimonial on the occasion of his resignation of the position which he has held amongst them during the last five years. A sum of £350 was collected, and was presented, together with an illuminated and framed address, to Mr. Green at the meeting. The chair was taken by the vicar of the parish, the Rev. G. Booker, and the presentation was made by Mr. S. Adams, one of the churchwardens, who read the address.

The Chairman next presented to Mr. and Mrs. Green a handsome silver tea-service, as a small offering from Mrs. Booker and himself.

In obedience to the Constitutions of the Cannons Ecclesiastical, and in conformity with the judgement of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, delivered February 23, 1871, the Dean of Rochester wore at the celebration of the Holy Communion on Christmas Day in his Cathedral a beautiful and costly cope, presented to him by friends in Liverpool in remembrance of "mid-day addresses to business men" given by the Dean for several successive years to crowded congregations in the parish church of St. Nicholas.

On Thursday, December 20th, the renovated parish church of St. Lawrence, Effingham, Surrey, was reopened. A chapel or chantry existed on this spot from very early times—certainly from the twelfth century—served by the monks of the once famous monastery of Merton, to whom in 1388 William of Wykeham issued a mandate, enjoining on them the rebuilding and adorning the chancel. The great Bishop's behest has been once more obeyed and carried to a most thorough completion. About six years ago the then new vicar, the Rev. E. F. Bayly, began the good work of improvement in the services and the adorning of the sanctuary, and this being done the parishioners settled themselves to wait for some future day when the blank, dreary walls, the unsightly galleries, and the high pews might also be swept away. Last New Years Day the same generous hand which had given such help to the vicar in the chancel made him a liberal offer towards the entire restoration, and thus encouraged he asked and obtained subscriptions to supplement his own resources. The services at the re-opening began with a celebration at 8.15 a.m., which was well attended, followed by matins at 10 a.m. and a choral celebration at 11.45, beginning with the processional, Salve Festa Dies. The sermon was preached by the Rural Dean, the Rev. F. P. Phillips, rector of Stoke d'Abernon, from Heb. viii. 5. At 7.30 the preacher was Canon Teesdale, from Joshua iv. 6. By lowering the floor of the nave there are now two steps up into the chancel, thereby adding to the dignity of the sanctuary. In rebuilding the walls and taking away the galleries an ancient stoup was found near the old porch, which has been replaced, and in the south transept containing the chapel of St. Nicholas a stone piscina marking the place of an altar in former time. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence and St. Nicholas.

The last of the Advent lectures at St. Alphage, London Wall, was preached on Friday evening, by Canon Benham, who (it being St. Thomas's Day), referred to the want of faith exhibited by the Apostle. Some carols were sung by the choir after the service.

New Mission buildings for the parish of St. Michael's, Camden town, were opened on Tuesday week, by the Duchess of Teck. Suitable prayers having been said by the Bishop of Marlborough, the vicar (the Rev. E. B. Penfold), read an address to her Royal Highness describing the purposes of the buildings, and the bishop spoke of the need of mission-rooms in all parts of London, and thanked the Princess for her presence. She was then, at her special desire, conducted over the building. The architect is Mr. Lacy W. Ridge, of Upper Woburn Place, and the building consists of two large rooms in the basement, where soup kitchen and clubs will be held. In the large hall Sunday-schools, Mission services, and temperance work will be carried on, as well as mothers' meetings and a Girls' Friendly Society. The building has been specially designed with regard to ease of access to all the rooms, and has cost, including every expense, £1,950. The land is held from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners at a nominal rent. The Bishop of London's Fund has given a liberal grant, and about £300 has still to be raised.

A paragraph has appeared in several of the daily newspapers stating that the clergy in Rochester, Chatham, and neighbourhood have been considerably troubled by the falling off in their congregations since Dean Hole took up his residence in the cathedral city. The Dean inaugurated his rule by introducing Sunday evening services at the cathedral, made as popular as possible, and evening prayer being shortened, while sacred songs are sung from the "London Mission Hymn-book." On these occasions the congregation never numbers less than 1,000 persons, and the clergy of the district complain that not only members of their flock, but their churchwardens and officers, are drawn to the cathedral, to the detriment of the local offertories. As a result of communications made to him, Dean Hole arranged for a collection to be made at the Sunday evening services, and the proceeds are to be divided among the parochial clergy whose funds have suffered for distribution among the poor.

The Bishop of Southwell on Wednesday week, installed as Honorary Canons the Rev. J. T. Alderson, rector of Ravenstone, and the Rev. J. G. Richardson, vicar of St. Mary's, Nottingham.

(While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.)

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

THE PEAL OF LONDON SURPRISE AT FULHAM.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Winny's letter re the above peal, I should like to say that after the peal was rung, as I was leaving the churchyard in company with Mr. Woodley (Hon. Sec. of the College Youths), Mr. Winny came up and said he did not consider it much of a peal, but condescended to add "that he would give us credit for being able to ring a better one on our own bells." No mention was made about the peal not being rung true, and when he met us at St. Bride's, Fleet Street, on Sunday evening, nothing was said as to the accuracy or inaccuracy of the performance. Mr. Wakley has kindly shown me his reply to Mr. Winny's letter, and as I knew every course and the time it took to ring each part, I fully endorse his remarks thereon, and consider Mr. Winny intensely ignorant of the method, and his comments most absurd.

JOSEPH GRIFFIN.

5, St. Paul's Street East, Burton-on-Trent.

SIR,—Mr. Winny is either totally ignorant of the method of London Surprise, quite incapable of following a bell through a course of the method, and not able to even recognise a course-end when he hears it, or, in his anxiety to discredit a performance he cannot hope to supersede in any other way, he has deliberately invented the "facts" he has thought it his "duty," without any "personal feeling" to communicate to you. If Mr. Winny is at all qualified for his self-imposed task—if the combined mantles of Henry Haley and John Cox have indeed fallen upon him—he must know that in so far as his "facts" are intended to impugn the truth of the peal, they have not even the remotest foundation of "fact" to recommend them. He must know that though as we have always admitted there were mistakes made by individual bells (I utterly deny that there was any firing or that more than one bell at a time was implicated), yet in no case was the coursing order of the bells affected. He must have been able to follow the number of courses and the number of leads in each; he must, a quarter of an hour before the end have actually heard the bells run into the plain course; have heard them remain there two leads; have heard the bobs wrong and home, with the course end 45236,—than which no course-end was ever better struck; and when in the middle of the last lead, after the 5th had been called home again, he heard a slight "trip" behind, he must have known that it was caused by a slight hesitation on the part of the 7th in going down to 565 with the 2nd; he would have heard a couple of wide blows and a close one or two; would have heard the bells come clear again and would have known that the tenor had only to run straight up from 4th's place to behind getting there at back stroke, and the bells would be round. This, Sir, is an accurate statement of the course of the peal. During the last 800 changes there had been—with the single exception I have named—no trip of any kind, the striking had been good, and there was nothing to prevent a competent man ascertaining accurately the position of the bells—and yet Mr. Winny says "the bells were at sea for coming round in the method!" Well, Sir, I assert as emphatically as I know how that if Mr. Winny is a "competent" man, he has in that statement wilfully and deliberately asserted what he knows to be false; if he is not competent then by what right, I ask, does he without the slightest proof make so disgraceful a charge against us? I have dealt fully with Mr. Winny's remarks on the truth of the peal. I do not propose to notice his other remarks; offensive, intentionally offensive, as they are, except by saying that the peal was heard by many other ringers quite as capable as himself, and of much higher standing in the ringing world, and that to them I am prepared to leave the settlement of the question whether in the short account of our visit to London which appeared in last week's "BELL NEWS," and in what I have said in this letter, I have or have not given a fairly accurate description of the performance. Lest there should be any who even now are anxious or willing to believe in the falseness of the peal, I send you a copy of the calling and beg to state that:—(1) As regards the rate per minute at which the bells were going, the first part of 1696 changes took exactly 1 hour 5 mins., the second part, as nearly as possible 1 hour 6 mins., and the last 1 hour 8 mins., so that the rate varied from about twenty-six and a half in the first part, to almost exactly 25, in the last. (2) That every bob was called and made, that every course and every lead of the peal was rung, that there was no change-course or anything approaching it, and that nothing that occurred in the course of the ringing would have justified any conductor in stopping the peal. (3) That I am prepared to maintain, on oath if need be, the absolute correctness of the whole of these statements.

Burton-on-Trent, December 24th, 1888.

WILLIAM WAKLEY,

SIR,—I notice in your last issue a letter from Mr. Winny. I should like to ask that gentleman if he thinks it possible to get into a muddle so that the bells, as he says, fired (I take his word for it), and then come out clean in such a method. If they did, so much for the capabilities of the conductor and deputy, which one would think should prevent them getting into it. We see from the Burton point of view, that getting used to the gait of the bells would take up the first 500 or so, and also that one or two members did go wrong, and were put right, (don't think that would cause fire), some allowance should be made for young men who would naturally feel a little shaky, ringing before an audience composed of the great lights of the Exercise, such as our learned friend Mr. Winny tow it. Then the poor exhibition of ringing is easily accounted for by the method being unmusical. Perhaps he expected to hear Superlative music from a gentile method like London, which one would think was only invented or gathered together from all the stray-bungles, turning courses, and comicalities of other methods rung in the great city. It is most interesting to ring but to listen is rather painful, and inclined to make you bilious next morning, which may continue for a week or so, more or less. The time, so many changes per minute, how was it possible to count if the ringing was not decent? I don't understand about starting at sea and coming round by method. Does he mean to say that the Burton band completely gulled the London Exercise, and he has made a great discovery—a little better explanation about sea and method would be esteemed a favour. I should like to hear what others have to say about the peal. Mr. Pitstow, Mr. Dains, or Mr. Hayes—by the way (if he was not out of the way)—or some other friend who has not had nightmare.

ANOTHER HON. MEMBER OF ST. PAUL'S.

SIR,—I note in your issue of the 22nd inst. a letter on this subject signed C. F. Winny, and as an honorary member of the St. Paul's, Society, Burton-on-Trent branch of the Midland Counties' Association, I deem it my duty to say I consider this letter a tissue of fabrication, or gross misrepresentation of facts from beginning to end. During the ringing of this peal there was some good striking, but the bells never approached a complete fire, "and as to the bells being at sea to come round clean by the method," let any of your readers who have an opportunity look up the last half dozen changes of the plain course, and see if these changes do not appear to be foreign to the rounds so soon to follow. This being so, our critic unwittingly favors the peal he otherwise attempts to destroy. As to the speed of ringing I think him further at sea than the bells; upon this point I have the authority of Messrs. W. Baron, A. Jacob, and B. Foskett, who are I think competent to time a peal, as well as to judge its quality, and they say they found the bells going at from 25 to 27 per minute nearly, never so slow as 24, and I therefore conclude that a slight mistake has crept into the letter above mentioned. Respecting the bystanders, now although there were several of us in the cluster, I believe I am the person alluded to; be this so or not, I certainly ventured the reported expression, and mind, sir, I intended what I said, but my hope was in no way compromising, neither was it suggestive that the trip just taking place was likely to lead up to such a catastrophe by a break down. No sir, it was a hope sincere, and one that I had the satisfaction to realize in about three hours later when the bells came round. Concerning the performance, I will say here as I said previously, that, raking all things into consideration, the miles the men had travelled, the strange bells to ring upon, and above all the most complex of methods that can be selected, I think the performance is very creditable one indeed, one that shows how thoroughly these men have grasped the method, and how thoroughly they set their minds upon the work in hand. Lastly, Mr. Winny says he has no personal feeling in the matter. Well, Sir, how anyone could write such a letter without, I can hardly conjecture. While there were several other ringers on the spot, quite as able to judge what ringing a peal should be made of, and I am quite sure, quite as free from personal feeling, as your correspondent will ever be. I would here stop but cannot, as our friend possesses some rare and undoubted abilities both as ringer and conductor of peals. I therefore regret to write of him as I have done, while at the same time I feel I am thus only doing justice to all other parties concerned.

CHRISTMAS SUPPLEMENT

TO

The Bell News and Ringers' Record.

A MERRY PEAL.

BELMINSTER is a pretty little country place in one of the great coaching roads to the North. Too large to be called a village, and too small to be a town, it can boast of a good shop, where you can buy almost anything, and of two or three establishments whose managers are rather above the rank of blacksmiths and carpenters. The great inn of former times, where the passengers of the "Fly and Rocket" used to dine, has become a boarding-school for young ladies, and now there is a railway station, whence you may reach London within the hour. In other respects Belminster has not changed much for centuries, though, as is often the case with country towns, the railway has rather diminished than increased its importance. The church, which belonged to a famous monastery of mediæval times, is large and handsome, and the tower contains a fine peal of eight bells, on which some notable feats of change-ringing were performed in the palmy days of the Exercise.

Besides the general store and workshops already mentioned, there is another industry which brings a large sum of money into the place in the form of wages. This was formerly the embroidering of smock-frocks, and, since smocks have gone out of fashion, it has been changed for the making up of cheap clothing for export. Most of the women and girls find employment in this branch of the sweating system, which is in their eyes an unmixed blessing. But it is disliked by the farmers, who say that it makes the people so independent that a labourer will do nothing more than he pleases. If the "sweater" were resident he would no doubt be one of the magnates of Belminster, but he is represented there only by an agent who comes from London once a week to inspect the work and pay the wages of the needlewomen. After all, agriculture is a far more important industry here than all the others put together. Accordingly, it is only natural that the eyes and tongues of the public should be devoted in a special manner to the Squire, the Parson, and the tenant of the Castle Farm, who have in fact through several generations been an unfailing topic of conversation for tap-rooms and tea-tables. In this triumvirate there is always to be found a Cæsar and an Antony, while the third is usually a "slight unmeritable man, meet to be sent on errands;" but whether the parson, or the squire, or the farmer of the period is Cæsar or Antony, or Lepidus, seems to depend more upon their personal characters than upon any advantages of fortune. Ten years ago Squire Partridge was undoubtedly the Cæsar of the trio, and like other Cæsars, if he were no better or worse than his neighbours, his good and bad qualities were at least more conspicuous than theirs. He was at this time an elderly man, nearer sixty than seventy years of age, of a spare habit of body, endowed with a clear intellect and plenty of shrewd good sense, but sadly deficient in everything like enthusiasm or geniality.

He had taken a high degree at the University, and was the author of some books of repute, especially a Manual of Political Economy, much used as a text-book in superior schools.

His favourite motto was, "Be just before you are generous;" and if he could fairly call himself a just man it seemed never to occur to him that generosity also had its claim when justice had been satisfied. As a magistrate he was a terror to evil-doers, but the innocent, and even those who had been betrayed into crime through weakness or thoughtlessness, knew that their defence would be understood when he sat on the bench. Among his own set he was an admirable host and companion as long as he had his own way, but no one could make himself more disagreeable when he was thwarted.

The second member of the triumvirate, the Rev. Hugh Mildred, was an amiable man of high character and cultivated mind, who did much good in the parish, and might have done much more if he had been able to hold his own against the squire. As a rule they were excellent friends, and the parson enjoyed nothing more than a cosy dinner at the Manor House, or a chat in the squire's library. But sometimes his sense of duty would compel him to plead in behalf of a poacher's wife, or a poor creature whose rent was in arrears, or to seek the squire's support in some benevolent project for the benefit of the widows and orphans of his flock, and then the pleasant intercourse would come to an end, and he had to submit to a series of petty insults and annoyances, which were inflicted with as much pleasure to their author as they caused distress to his too good-natured friend.

Farmer Barley was not so easily managed as the parson, but he too had to confess that he was no match for the squire. He was a strong jovial man still, in the prime of life, well-known in three or four counties as a fox-hunter and breeder of Sandowns, profuse in his hospitality, but jealous of his rights.

It was of course useless to attempt to bully such a man, and the squire, whose temper was always under control, took care to make no demand of his tenant for which he could not give a plausible reason, and never sought to gain his end by mere rudeness, as he did when he wanted to reduce the parson to subjection. Nor would Barley waste words in asking for concessions which the squire was indisposed to grant. Sometimes, of course, a debateable point would arise, and then the battle was fierce indeed. Only once had the squire been beaten. There was a question between them of manorial rights and copyhold in which the written law was in conflict with the custom of the district, and Barley, whose ancestors had held the Castle Farm for many generations, was ready to throw up his lease rather than give way. Then the squire's good sense prevailed, and he said to his tenant, "We must not part so. You are quite wrong, but do as you please." So the dispute was settled, and the squire bore his defeat stoically, but an illness which he had soon afterwards was attributed with some show of reason to his disappointment. There was another difficulty in Belminster about this time which caused a good deal of ill-feeling between the labourers and the farmers, though the squire saw no occasion to interfere, except by making remarks which were equally irritating to both parties.

To do the squire justice, he had never been a grasping landlord, and his rents were low. He preferred, as he said, to have on his estate farmers whose fathers and grandfathers had been there before them, to putting up his farms to competition. Agricultural wages were also lower than in the neighbouring parishes, though the labourers were rather better off than the average owing to the earnings of their wives and daughters by needlework. This was inevitable, as was shewn in the squire's book on Political Economy, but the men could not see that it was fair that they should be paid less for doing the same work as their neighbours who had no dealings with the "sweater."

With low rent and low wages the farmers ought to have been happy men, but nothing is easier than to learn to live up to one's income, and in times of depression they would grumble as much as others who had formed more parsimonious habits. However, things went on pretty well till the men, most of whom belonged to the Labourers' Union, were ordered by the chief of their society to strike for the wages which were being paid elsewhere in the district. Squire Partridge was a great authority on rent and wages, but what he had to say on the subject, though admirably convincing to outsiders, was not calculated to calm the troubled waters. If anyone had a right to strike, he maintained it was himself, as he could find tenants for his farms any day at the increase of twenty-five per cent. But he could not blame the men for striking, or the farmers for resisting their demands. Wages depended upon supply and demand, but they could only be adjusted from time to time by what Adam Smith called "the haggling of the market," and a strike was nothing but a somewhat violent and ruinous mode of haggling. But he suspected that the farmers would be able to hold out longer than the Union, and in the meantime would be forced to use machinery, and so become less dependant than ever upon the good will of the labourers.

In due time all this came to pass, but before the strike was at an end the cordial relations between master and man which had formerly existed had become embittered, and among other evil consequences many of the labourers were alienated from the church, and either joined the dissenters, or ceased to attend any place of worship. His illness, the strike, and some other reasons which do not concern us, induced the squire to shut up the Manor house, and go abroad for a season. Two years is not a long time for the old and middle-aged, but it is long enough to change a boy into a man, and this is what happened to the farmer's eldest son. Young Tom Barley was at school at Bedford till he was eighteen, after which it was intended that he should live at home, and learn to tread in the steps of his father. Few young men have such a good start in life as Tom Barley, but of those few a considerable portion for one reason or another are discontented with their lot. This was the case in the present instance. Tom was fond of hunting and shooting, and of a life out of doors, and in the way of work he liked agriculture as well as anything else. But he was popular among his schoolfellows, and was a first-rate cricketer. He was certain to be in the University Eleven if he went up to Cambridge, and he and his friends were eager that he should have this opportunity of distinguishing himself. Besides, he was a clever fellow, though he preferred to study anything rather than Latin and Greek and Mathematics, and held revolutionary views with respect to Political Economy, which was one of the subjects in which he delighted. His father, who could afford to send him to college, and would have consented to do so if his son had been of a more docile disposition, had no idea of sending him there to learn to lead a life of genteel idleness, and, moreover, was much irritated by his taking the part of the labourers in the strikes. He was determined to knock all this nonsense out of the young man's head, so from Easter to Christmas Master Tom was constrained to remain at home, working on the farm in a rebellious frame of mind, and railing at everything which he did not happen to like. One of his grievances was the social position of tenant-farmers. Good-looking, well-dressed, of popular manners, and with money in his pocket, at school he had found himself the equal and companion of the sons of the gentry, and now it was gall and wormwood to him to see the parson and his son admitted to the squire's drawing-room, while his father and himself were allowed to penetrate no further than the gun-room. Old Barley, though a proud man in his way, had not been brought up to new-fangled ideas of equality, and had no more wish to sit at the squire's table than he had to see his shepherd and horse-keeper at his own. And he had the good sense to see that if his son wanted to be a gentleman he must try the experiment away from Belminster, where the classes were as distinct as so many Indian castes.

One of the farmer's sisters had married a doctor who had since attained some eminence in the profession, and it happened that this Christmas their son, a medical student at Guy's, came to spend his holidays at the Castle. Dick Bransby was the life and soul of any party of pleasure-seekers. No one was his equal in singing a comic song, or in acting a funny part in a play, or could chaff a pretty cousin with more audacity. If he had a fault it was a weakness for practical jokes, but it is fair to say that they were calculated to amuse as much, and to annoy as little, as possible. Never had they spent such a merry Christmas at the Castle Farm, and cousin Dick was not allowed to go away until he had promised to make his visit annual. But something more than amusement resulted from these festivities.

Tom Barley found that nothing would suit him but being a doctor. Not that he had any particular taste for the science of medicine, but he was determined to be a gentleman some way or the other, and by all accounts the life of a medical student seemed to be a very jolly one. His father had not the same objection to this scheme as to the other, and as his second son was only too glad to have his brother's birthright, he agreed somewhat reluctantly to allow them to make an exchange of careers, for it had always been contemplated that one of the boys would be taken under the wing of their uncle the London doctor.

Dick Bransby usually left his mark wherever he went, and there was another matter in which he was the author of a new departure at Belminster. In addition to the accomplishments which have already been mentioned, he was an excellent change-ringer, and was a member of the Guild of Æsculapius, a ringing society consisting chiefly of young doctors and medical students on the Surrey side of the Thames. Accordingly soon after his arrival at Belminster our friend Dick paid a visit to the belfry. Here he found a state of things not altogether satisfactory to an enthusiastic ringer. In former years the belfry had been a model one, and the bells could be put in order again without much trouble or expense, but they were suffering from recent neglect. There were still some change-ringers in Belminster, but a few years ago the long-suffering parson had been forced to quarrel with them on a question of belfry reform and a new set had hardly learnt to ring a plain course of Triples when the strike occurred, and they seceded, to spite the church-wardens, or for some such frivolous reason. When these troubles were over, the squire, whose house was close to the church, found that he had always disliked the bells, more perhaps because they gave pleasure to others than because they caused annoyance to himself, and was able to silence them simply by not renewing the liberal subscription which had been paid by his predecessors for some generations, and by himself in former years. The parson and some others knew pretty well that the squire would never tolerate the revival of ringing as long as he lived. But it had not been necessary for him to say so, especially as he had no right to interfere at all, and Dick Bransby had like difficulty in getting permission from the parson to form a band from among the old ringers, together with two or three of his cousins, who were popular with them on account of the line Tom had taken with respect to the strike. So, with some help from the neighbouring market town, Christmas was duly honoured on the bells once more, and the old year was rung out, and the new year in, quite in the style of the good old ringing days. Moreover, when Dick and Tom had gone to London to pursue their studies, a promising young band of ringers remained to learn the mysteries of the Exercise, and before long they began to talk of celebrating the centenary anniversary of a famous peal rung to issue in the new year of 1781. Then they joined the Diocesan Guild, and when Dick Bransby and his cousin came to spend Christmas at Belminster again, they arranged to repeat the feat of their forefathers, and left a band in training for it, being themselves ready to take the place of any two defaulters. Of course during the summer there was a cessation of practice, but in October they began again in earnest, and in the following month succeeded in ringing a half-peal of Bob Major without a hitch, and no one thought of asking how the squire would like it. This was a serious oversight, though it is impossible to say what they could have done to invert impending danger. However, one day unusual signs of movement were observed at the Manor. The chimneys began to smoke, the shutters were opened, furniture vans and other conveyances came and went through the park, and on Sunday morning the squire was seated in the great pew in church. It would be incorrect to say that his reappearance was generally welcomed, but it caused a good deal of interesting conversation. It was felt that many usurped privileges and lax proceedings of various kinds must now be given up, and on the whole quiet people were glad that it should be so. As was remarked by a cynic at the "Green Dragon" "Well, the squire must be a good man to be sure; leastways there's a deal of mischief goes on when he's away."

Thursday was practice night for the ringers, and the first Thursday after his return the squire had a few friends to dinner. He was in excellent humour and spirits, retailing to the company stories which he had picked up on his travels. Suddenly the bells struck up, and at once the stream of anecdote was frozen up. Mr. Mildred, who guessed the cause of the squire's displeasure, explained with some embarrassment that the ringers had joined the Diocesan Guild, and that he hoped the old fame of the Belminster bells might be revived. "Ah!", said the squire, "I don't think they will keep that up long."

"Why don't you think so?" asked Mildred nervously.

"Because the ringers live in my houses, and they will have to and homes out of the parish if they are so fond of ringing."

No one ventured to remonstrate against this ebullition of despotism, and indeed it would have been of no use. The squire could be agreeable when he was in the humour, but he enjoyed making himself disagreeable infinitely more. As for the poor parson he felt that he was in disgrace, and would be cut off from all the social amenities he so loved for the next six weeks. Then his spirit rebelled against the slight put upon himself. It was the parson's business to manage the belfry, and the squire was not even a churchwarden. But what could he do? Some bitter words rose to his lips, but on the whole he thought it best to bear the affront in silence, as he had often done before in other matters. But the pleasure of the evening was gone for him, and for the other guest who were sensible of the squire's ill humour without fully understanding the cause of it.

Next morning after breakfast, when the squire as usual sat in the gun-room to transact business, he did not fail to instruct his steward to communicate to the ringers his amiable intentions. Some of the young men were for defying the tyrant, naturally thinking that life would not be worth living if they allowed themselves to be trampled upon to gratify the caprice of a cross-grained curmudgeon, to whom they applied even less complimentary epithets. Two of the Barleys, who belonged to the band, were especially loud in their indignation, but their father, who did not care about the bells, and had no mind for another quarrel with the squire as soon as he returned, peremptorily forbid their ringing without the permission of the parson. Mr. Mildred, for his part, adopted a line of conduct which was to be expected of him. He was personally in favour of encouraging the revival of ringing, but under the circumstances he thought it better that the practices should be discontinued for a month, in order that he might have time to consult with the churchwardens and ascertain the nature of the squire's objections. Then it appeared that some of the old ringers, who were not very enthusiastic in the cause, and hardly cared to ring at all unless they could count upon the squire's five-pound note at Christmas, were by no means inclined to quarrel with their bread and butter, or to risk the threatened eviction. So the band was broken up, and the hope of the centenary peal was abandoned.

When the news reached Tom Barley, who was now studying at Guy's, he was exceedingly wroth, and wanted to make a formal demand on the part of the Guild of Æsculapius for permission to ring a peal at Christmas, knowing that the parson would find it difficult to refuse so reasonable a request from a society of such high repute.

Dick Bransby, however, was of opinion that the squire would be sure to circumvent them somehow, and advised proceeding by stratagem. He was not long in concocting a scheme, the outline of which was whispered in confidence to some choice spirits of the Guild of medicos, and immensely tickled their fancy. The design and execution of this plot we shall now proceed to unfold as briefly as possible.

Dick and Tom had been engaged to spend their Christmas holidays at the Castle Farm, but it now appeared that they were reading so hard for the examination that they could not leave town, at any rate till the dance which was to come off on twelfth-night. This was a great disappointment to the fair sisters and cousins at Belminster, but excited a fit of apoplectic laughter in the breast of old Sawyer, the village doctor, who was not to be imposed upon by any of Dick Bransby's devoting the Christmas holidays to hard reading. In his opinion Master Dick was not the sort of young man to be amused with the decorous pleasures of a country house, and no doubt by this time corrupted his cousin with the insidious fascinations of London life; though what their little game might be he was unable to surmise. As it happened, the old doctor's diagnosis of the young men's minds was as faulty as if he had believed implicitly in the alleged examination.

To proceed with our story. On the last day of the old year a young gentleman of artistic appearance, in whom Dick Bransby's mother would assuredly not have recognised her son, called at the Vicarage, and asked for the keys of the church. He wore a velvet coat, and a brigand's hat, from beneath which a profusion of glossy ringlets brushed his shoulders, and he carried a large portfolio under his arm. He wished to make a sketch of the old pulpit, and he displayed so intelligent an interest in the antiquities of the place that Mr. Mildred presented him with a copy of his "History of Belminster Abbey," and would have liked to ask him to lunch had he not been deterred by his very Bohemian appearance.

The parson's key gave access to the church through the vestry, where certain keys were kept, pertaining to the tower and gates of the churchyard, which were not likely to be missed if they were in Dick Bransby's pocket for the next twelve hours. It did not take the artist long to complete his drawing of the pulpit, and he had time before the next train to grease the bearings of the bells, to adjust the ropes, to trim the lamp, and to make all the preparations which a careful steeplekeeper might think necessary before a long peal. At eleven o'clock the same night, when ninety-five per cent. of the population were already buried in their first sleep, the quiet of Belminster was disturbed by the thunder and lightning, or in plain prose by the clatter of wheels and hoofs and flashing lamps, of a great excursion break, which deposited a dozen or more of its passengers at the main gate of the churchyard, and then drove away as rapidly and mysteriously as it had arrived. The sexton, whose house overlooked the churchyard, and who happened to be seeing the old year out in company with two or three of the old ringers, and with the support of hot gin and water and pipes, observed from his window that after posting sentinels, who appeared to be policemen, at each gate, the rest of the party ascended the tower, and were soon off for a peal of Bob Major in capital style. Hastily finishing the contents of their tumblers, the sexton and his friends sallied forth, bent upon solving the mystery. But the policeman at the gate refused to give them any information, or allow them to pass. While they were standing in the road conjecturing all sorts of things to account for so strange an occurrence, and guessing that the ringers must be the College Youths ("leastways they were sure no band in the Diocesan Guild could ring so well"), they were joined by Mr. Parker, the squire's butler, who had been sent by his master to order the ringers to stop at once on pain of his most serious displeasure. The Squire, who always kept an empty house at Christmas and other festive seasons had, as usual, been dining alone, and was sipping his tumbler of warm negus before retiring to rest, when the bells struck up. It would not be right to say that the joyful sound put him into a towering passion, because, strictly speaking, he never lost his temper. But he at once determined to have his will respected by making an example of the offenders. He rang the bell violently. The butler appeared with an expression of alarm on his face, knowing that something had happened to put his master out, and thinking over his own peccadilloes.

"Go to the church, Parker, and tell the ringers to stop at once; and that I shall have them up before the magistrates next Wednesday." Parker hurried off to give his message, but like the sexton was stopped by the policeman at the gate. Having explained that his master was a justice of the peace, and had a right to interfere, he persuaded the policeman to give some more information than the sexton had been able to elicit.

"We have come down from Scotland Yard," he said. "We have information that the Bermondsey burglars are secreted in the vaults of the church, or are somewhere in the neighbourhood. You had better go home and look after your plate. Sorry we can't let you pass."

"But won't you take a message to the ringers? The squire's in a terrible wax."

"Can't help that. Colonel Henderson's orders is to let no one pass in or out, nor yet to allow any kind of communication with them as is inside. We have nothing to do with the ringers. That's another party. P'raps there's some detectives among them. But, lor bless you, I know no more of that than you. I'll tell you what I'll do for you, when the Inspector comes round I'll tell him that the squire would like to speak to him."

This was all the satisfaction that Parker could get from the policeman, so he turned to the sexton, who was as much mystified as himself. Everybody had heard of the Bermondsey burglary, but what it had to do with the excellent peal of Bob Major, which was in full swing, was not at all clear. No one ever heard of burglars and detectives ringing a peal. They must be either that unknown quantity, the College Youths, or perhaps Squire Proctor's band from Bennington, who had talked of coming to ring a peal last Christmas, though nothing had been heard of them since. Anyways, it was a most extraordinary coincidence.

So Parker had to carry back this strange tale to the squire, who told him that he was a fool, and might go to bed.

"If it were not for this confounded asthma, I would go myself and find out what it all means. However, I will be a match for these gentlemen, whoever they may be." So he got out his law books, and before he went to bed had found a case in which some ringers, who had been bribed to ring for a victory on the race-course in spite of the express prohibition of incumbent and churchwardens, had been punished with a month's imprisonment. Meanwhile the peal went on merrily, and about two o'clock the sexton, who had returned with his friends to the pipes and glasses, heard the bells come into rounds. Knowing that the end was now near at hand, they went to the window, and then they saw a curious thing by the flashes of dark lanterns and carriage lamps. The break drove up from the direction in which it had disappeared three hours before, and almost at the same moment a procession issued from the church. There were three prisoners, handcuffed, and each of them in charge of two policemen. A few others were in plain clothes. The party at once took their seats on the break, and were preparing to drive off, when the sexton and his companions appeared on the scene. They were by this time somewhat fuddled by gin and mystery, but they were burning with curiosity, and the sexton, without venturing to ask a direct question, addressed the leader of the party, whom he took for the Inspector:

"Some first rate ringing here to-night, Sir! we are ringers ourselves, and thought perhaps . . ."

"Oh! the ringers? Well, I dare say you'll find them in the belfry. All right, coachman!"

In a moment the break was gone, and the sexton's party naturally went to the church, which they found locked. Having shouted in vain under the tower window, where a light was still burning, they returned to the house for the key, and admitted themselves without further trouble. There was no one in the belfry, only below the old peal board they saw a sheet of white paper, on which was printed in large type an inscription to the following effect:—

"On the night of December 31st-January 1st, 1880-81, a true and complete peal of Bob Major was rung on these bells by the following members of the Guild of Æsculapius, in commemoration of the peal rung by the Belminster band exactly one hundred years ago."

Then followed the names of the ringers, and below:—

"Of the above, Thomas Barley and Richard Bransby are great grandsons of Thomas Barley, who rung the tenor and conducted the peal of 1780-81."

"Well," said the sexton, "that Mr. Bransby is a comical chap as ever I see! The outdaciousness of him!! What will Squire Partridge say now, I wonder? There'll be some pretty games afore they've done, you'll see. Mark my words if there beant."

In these sentiments his companions concurred. For the next three or four days the burglars and the bells were the talk of Belminster, and it is needless to say that the squire was at a loss for evidence against the perpetrators of the trick which had been played him. So many different stories were afloat that it was difficult to say what had actually happened. But there was no doubt that the bells had been ringing half through the night, and some people thought that the break and the police were an invention of the sexton and the Belminster ringers.

When Dick Bransby came down with his cousin for the twelfth-night dance at the Castle Farm he solemnly declared that he knew nothing of the matter. He was glad to hear that the peal had been rung, and only wished he had been there to take part in it. He suspected the College Youths. They were terrible fellows for practical jokes. He knew some of them, and might have mentioned in conversation his disappointment about the projected centenary peal. If so, they had kept their proceedings very dark. No doubt it was the College Youths who had rung the peal. As for the Bermondsey burglars and the policemen there might be some truth in what was said. What was the use of detectives if they let every one know what they were about? For his part he believed there were more detectives in society than most people supposed. "Now, that man," he said to his partner in a waltz, pointing to a mild-looking youth in spectacles who was supposed to be learning farming, "I know to be a detective. Be sure you don't mention it, but I have seen him in very different company to this. Only see how he keeps his eye on that pretty little woman who is flirting with Captain Jones. Shall we take another turn?"

Tom Barley denied having anything to do with the new year's peal, though he did so with some embarrassment, and without any of that fertility of suggestion in which the vivacious Dick Bransby revelled.

Nevertheless, the record of the peal appeared in due course in "THE BELL NEWS" in exactly the same form as on the printed paper found by the sexton in the belfry, and next Christmas, the squire being again absent on the continent, all pretence was laid aside, and Dick and Tom were present at the unveiling of a new peal tablet presented by the Guild of Æsculapius in honour of their own performance and for the adornment of the belfry of Belminster church.

THE CHURCHWARDEN.

BY AN EX-CHURCHWARDEN.

MR. BOUNCE was the newly-elected churchwarden of the Abbey church at Slowborough, of which we have read in former numbers of "THE BELL NEWS."

He came into office at a most unusual time of the year, viz.: early in December. How this came to pass I will explain. The former Churchwarden, an old and respected inhabitant who had held the office for more than twenty years in succession, had died rather suddenly, and his colleague was unwilling to act singly, so a vestry meeting was called, and Mr. Bounce was appointed to fill the vacancy pro tem. till Easter, when in all probability he would be re-elected to the office.

And now a word or two with regard to Mr. Bounce's antecedents. He was a young man, and had only lived in Slowborough for a comparatively short time, having come from London and taken on an important drapery business in the town, which had been left him by a deceased uncle some three years previous to the commencement of our story. He understood his own line of business and managed it fairly well, but he was one of those individuals who always want to be dabbling in public matters. He had put up for the Town Council once during the short time he had resided in Slowborough, but had been defeated by a large majority. He was a good Churchman and a well-meaning man. While he lived in London he had attended a somewhat "ritualistic" suburban church, and was there the incumbent's right-hand man in everything, and when he came to Slowborough he soon fell in with the Vicar and other church officers, being most zealous in every kind of church work. Hence it came to pass that he was elected to fill the vacancy above mentioned, although he was only a new comer to the town. Mr. Bounce was a bit of a radical in his way. I don't mean politically, but radical in ideas on the management of things in general. No doubt the slow and easy-going ways of an old Abbey church, where nearly everything was paid for from endowments, presented somewhat of a contrast to him when compared with a modern London church kept up entirely by voluntary contributions. Be that as it may, after his arrival at Slowborough he soon saw many things in connection with the Abbey which, in his opinion, required rectifying.

Certainly on the day of his election he shewed no signs of bumptiousness in the vestry, but thanked the ratepayers present in the most modest manner for the honour they had done him in electing him Churchwarden; but as soon as he got out into the street he walked along with the air of a man who meant to do something to be talked about.

Nothing of any particular importance occurred during the first few days after his election, but about a week afterwards there was a vestry meeting to receive tenders for repairs to the roof of part of the Abbey, and to decide upon certain repairs to the bells.

Now Mr. Bounce was but little acquainted with matters connected with the building trade, and he knew still less about bells. However, on the day of the meeting he managed to make himself the laughingstock of several by making some absurd propositions with regard to the repairs of the roof. Next came the question of repairs to the bells. It appeared that several of the peal required new gudgeons and brasses as well as other minor repairs. Mr. Bounce did not see that anything of the kind was needed; he said that "the bells sounded all right when they were rung last Sunday." In reality they had only been chimed; and he further remarked that "he had been up into the bell-chamber that morning, and that the bells looked all right," and he added that "it was absurd to go to the expense of getting a bell-hanger from London, even if anything did want doing, when they had a man in the town who was a bell-hanger. The "bell-hanger" he alluded to was a local ironmonger and "house-bell hanger" who probably knew as much about a church bell as a watchmaker knows about a locomotive.

Mr. Bounce's ideas were happily "pooh-poohed," and an order was given to a well known firm to execute the necessary repairs at once. He was not to be daunted, however, but he determined, that if he had appeared to disadvantage that morning, he would still shew that he was a man who knew a thing or two. In the meantime he made up his mind to improve his knowledge of church bells; so on the following morning he paid a visit to the belfry, where he found our old friend Mr. Trippels chiming two bells for the usual daily service.

Unfortunately Mr. Trippels was not in a very communicative mood that morning, and Mr. Bounce was unable to obtain much information from him.

In the afternoon Mr. Bounce had a fresh chance of distinguishing himself in matters parochial. It was as follows: there was a meeting of the Trustees of the choristers' school, of which body the churchwardens were members ex-officio and the vicar ex-officio chairman.

Amongst other business at this meeting the trustees had to elect a boy to fill a vacancy among the choristers which had recently occurred. After examining several testimonials, and receiving the report of Rev. Dr. Swishem (head master), who had examined the candidates as to their scholastic attainments; and after hearing the organist's report on the quality of their voices; it was decided to elect the son of a poor curate in Liverpool. As soon as the decision was announced Mr. Bounce (who was the only trustee who was not in favour of the choice), rose to his feet and said: "Gentlemen: why should we choose a boy from Liverpool to fill this vacancy, when we have plenty of poor deserving boys in our National school, I cannot understand, and—"

THE CHAIRMAN: "Excuse me, sir, you seem to be under a misapprehension. The fact is, we must have boys of some social position. The trust deed expressly states that sons of poor clergy are to have the preference."

MR. BOUNCE: "But are we bound to stick exactly to rules laid down more than two hundred years ago? I should say that—"

ANOTHER TRUSTEE: "My dear sir, we must keep to our old plan; otherwise we shall have the Charity Commissioners down upon us."

MR. BOUNCE: "Why not apply to them for a new scheme?"

THE CHAIRMAN: "I think, sir, that the majority of the gentlemen present will agree with me when I say that the plan which has always been pursued in the election of boys is far preferable to any new scheme which could be invented. As I said before, we must have sons of gentlemen in our choir, and it would not do to mix boys of a lower grade with them." (Hear hear, on all sides.)

This matter then terminated, and after some other business had been discussed, a bright idea occurred to Mr. Bounce by which he thought he could distinguish himself; so turning to Dr. Swishem, he asked if it would be convenient for him to come into the school sometime during the ensuing week, and ask the choristers a few questions upon what they had been learning; at the same time he inquired what subjects they had lately been engaged with. Dr. Swishem said he could come if he liked, and mentioned the names of several well-known Latin and Greek authors whom his boys had been reading. This completely floored Mr. Bounce, as he had never had anything but a strictly commercial education himself. So he was obliged to decline coming.

Having so originally failed in his undertaking so far, Mr. Bounce thought he would try his hand at belfry reform. Now it will be remembered that the Abbey belfry at Slowborough was quite a model belfry already, as far as the conduct of the ringers was concerned, who were also fairly proficient in several standard methods in change-ringing. But this was not enough for Mr. Bounce, and he took into his confidence the Rev. Alban Cope, B.A., a newly-arrived curate, who knew as little of bells and ringers as Mr. Bounce himself did. It never occurred to these two worthies that the vicar, or anyone else except the ringers, would trouble much about what arrangements were made with regard to the ringing.

It will be remembered that the Abbey bells were always rung on the greater church festivals, and also on several loyal occasions. It occurred to these two gentlemen that anything which was not strictly a church festival ought not to be rung for; so between them they drew up an elaborate table for ringing days, wherein the Queen's birthday, Coronation, Mayor's day, and several other days for which the ringers received a liberal fee, were cut out, and it was arranged instead that the company were to ring a "peal" (so they called it) of five minutes' duration several times during the day on certain saints' days. This plan Mr. Bounce undertook to deliver and explain to the ringers on their next practice-night.

So accordingly on the evening of the following day when the company were met for practice, he burst into the belfry with the important document in his hand; thereby causing a well-struck touch of Treble Bob to come to grief and putting the ringers generally, and Mr. Trippels in particular, into anything but a suitable frame of mind to receive the oration which he was about to deliver.

Before he could get a word out of his mouth Mr. Trippels began with—"Now sir, you really ought to know better than to burst into a belfry in that fashion when a company are engaged ringing a touch or peal."

Mr. Trippels' observation rather took Mr. Bounce aback, but he recovered himself and said—"Oh—ah—I didn't know it made any difference,—I should have thought you could have gone on pulling just the same. But look here,—Mr. Cope (our new curate) and I have been consulting about the days you ring on, and we think that the list I have here in my hand will be more suitable than the occasions which you have hitherto rung for. Just put this up somewhere when all the men can see it, and see that they keep to it, will you?"

Mr. Trippels took the paper and just glanced through it. He then smiled and handed it back to Mr. Bounce, saying:—"I think, Sir, you had better lay it before the vestry, and then you can get the vicar's signature and that of your colleague, and then perhaps we may consider the matter, that is if you will guarantee us the fees on all these occasions. You see the list of ringing days was fixed by the Vestry and signed by the Vicar and Churchwardens in 1839, and it has never been altered since. If you like to step over to our meeting-room at the 'Crown and Mitre,' I will shew it to you." Mr. Bounce saw that it was of no use to argue the point, so he said, "Well I must see into this matter, and by the bye, you spoke of the 'Crown and Mitre' just now—you don't mean to say that you fellows go and spend money in a public-house after you have done ringing, do you?"

Mr. Trippels' temper was now roused and said:—"Sir: I am proud to say that our company are steady and respectable men, and why we should not meet in our private room at the chief hotel in the town, where the society has met for time immemorial, I cannot say, nor shall I take the trouble to argue with you on such a ridiculous matter. You have had the bad taste to burst in upon us and spoil our touch, and then you give us a lot of absurd rubbish to read, and afterwards insult us and give us a temperance lecture. I have our vicar's full permission for all we do here, and I may tell you that individually you have no right to interfere."

Mr. Bounce saw that he was getting the worst of it, so he left the belfry, saying that he would see the vicar about the matter.

This he did that very same evening, but the vicar considered that his plea was absurd, and gently hinted that in future he had better use a little more consideration before attempting to alter any old customs.

The next day was Friday, and there was the usual morning service in the Abbey at eleven o'clock, with the weekly lecture which was paid for from an old endowment. Mr. Bounce did not often go to church on weekday mornings, but he took it into his head to do so to-day. When service began he observed that only eight of the twelve choristers were in their places. He immediately thought that here was a chance for distinguishing himself in the execution of his duties, and he determined to see into the matter after church. I am sorry to say that his mind was so busily occupied in considering how he should act that he paid very little attention to the service. As soon as it was over he made his way to the choristers' school, intending to interview Dr. Swishem, and demand the reason why all the boys were not at church that morning. Unfortunately both the Doctor and Mrs. Swishem were out when he arrived, and were not expected home for an hour or more; so he thought that the best thing to do would be to speak to the boys themselves. Now if Mr. Bounce had appeared to disadvantage before the ringers on the previous he determined to make ample amends for it now by the grandeur and magnificence of his speech before the chorister boys.

Before we go further it will perhaps be better to explain to the reader the reason why all the boys were not at church that morning, which was as follows:—The weather had been unusually severe, and three of the boys (including Alec, the senior chorister) were kept indoors with bad colds and sore throats, whilst another (Master Xerxes, of whom we have read before), had on the day previous been engaged in a pugilistic encounter with a big town boy who had often annoyed the choristers; and between whom there had existed a continual feud for some time past. Now although Xerxes had managed to defeat the enemy, he had not altogether escaped some damage to himself, but had received a black eye and sundry scratches and bruises, and he was not just now quite presentable to the public. Consequently he had been sent up to the matron's room to keep the invalids company, and Dr. Swishem had given him fifty lines of Virgil to learn by way of employment.

When Mr. Bounce found that the Rev. Dr. Swishem was out he made his way to the school room and learned from one of the boys there the true state of the case: whereupon he demanded to see the matron, and this good woman having been fetched, he requested to see the invalids. Very reluctantly she led the way to her room, where he found the boys before-mentioned sitting by the fire and reading sundry periodicals published expressly for schoolboys.

"Oh! so this is the way you boys spend your time, is it?" he exclaimed; "I should have thought that although you may not be well enough to go out, Dr. Swishem might find some profitable employment for you which would improve your minds, instead of reading that trash. And let me tell you that (if it was my custom to rebuke those who were ill, which it is not), I should say that had you boys taken reasonable care of yourselves, you would not be laid aside now. As a trustee of this school I must say that we cannot afford to clothe, keep and educate delicate boys who are of no use to us as choristers, and I shall mention this at next meeting."

While he was speaking, Xerxes grinned, and the other boys looked sheepish. Alec, who was a sensitive boy, was near crying. Mr. Bounce now turned his attention to Xerxes, and was about to give him a severe lecture for fighting, when he was interrupted in a way in which neither he nor the boys expected. It was in this wise: The church bell-hanger from London had already commenced the repairs to the bells alluded to in the former part of our story, and Mr. Trippels was up in the bell-chamber with him, giving certain directions about what wanted doing. Just as Mr. Bounce entered the school premises, Trippels happened to be looking out through the louvers of the bell-chamber, and saw Mr. Bounce going towards the school. He then observed to the bell-hanger—

"I'll tell you what it is,—Mr. Redleaf—we've just got a new churchwarden here, and ever since he was elected, he's been poking about and trying to interfere with everything. There's one blessing, and that is, although he's elected, he hasn't been admitted into office by the Archdeacon yet—and he can't be till next Easter—if indeed, he doesn't give in before then. And it's just this, neither the Vicar nor anybody thinks much of him, or his doings; and as he has not yet been legally admitted, nothing he does will stand law if the point were contested. Now, last night he came to us in the belfry and spoilt a touch of Treble Bob, and then wanted to shove some absurd rules on us about our ringing days. And now I'll bet a penny he's off to show his authority over those young cubs at the choir school,—I know Dr. Swishem is out,—and although I'm only an outsider, and only go to teach mathematics twice a week, I feel that under the circumstances I ought to go over and see what he's after. Goodness knows what he'll say or do. He'll make those kids think he's King of England before he's been there five minutes. What do you think, Mr. Redleaf?"

Mr. Redleaf agreed that if the new churchwarden was such as Mr. Trippels represented, that he (Mr. Trippels) was certainly justified in looking after his proceedings. Accordingly Mr. Trippels put on his coat and went down, and arrived at the school just as Mr. Bounce had gone up to the matron's room. On finding out where he was, Mr. Trippels followed, and arrived just at the moment we last left Mr. Bounce. Now Mr. Trippels did not want to have any scene before the boys, so he quietly informed that gentleman that he wanted to speak to him immediately on a matter of considerable importance. Mr. Bounce was only too pleased to think that he was such an important personage as to be consulted on weighty matters, so he followed Trippels at once out of the school premises. When they got outside, Mr. Trippels said "I don't know, sir, what has been the object of your visit to the school to-day: possibly you may want to make some new arrangements about the boys and their duties, as you did with us ringers last night, but let me tell you—as an assistant in the school—that whatever anyone may have to say on such matters must go through the Rev. Dr. Swishem, as head master. Even the Vicar himself would not presume to do otherwise. You will please excuse me for mentioning the matter, but I have no doubt that the Doctor will hear any suggestions you have to make when he returns, but he will of course use his own judgement as to whether he carries them out."

When Mr. Bounce found out what Mr. Trippels really wanted him for he flew into a passion, and accused that gentleman of interfering with him in the execution of his duties. Mr. Trippels simply smiled contemptuously and walked away.

Mr. Bounce determined to see Dr. Swishem as soon as he returned, and to talk the matter over with him. This he would have done; but that afternoon, just as he was about to start on the aforesaid errand, he received a somewhat curt note from the Doctor, saying that "he would trouble him not to interfere with his boys any more," and asking him "to make any suggestions he might have to make to him, and him only," and further adding "that he, as head master, should in any case reserve to himself the right of rejecting or carrying out such suggestions as he thought fit." This note completely shut Mr. Bounce up in this matter.

It still wanted about a week to Christmas, and during that time Mr. Bounce had time to consider the various mistakes he had made during the past fortnight. After carefully thinking over the matter he determined to change his tactics and come out before the public as "Lord Bountiful," and to overcome everybody by his wonderful activity in assisting all good works, and by the magnificence of his gifts and subscriptions to every parochial institution. Accordingly he began by sending donations of one guinea each to the parochial clubs, library, and other institutions. He also sent a guinea to Dr. Swishem to be expended in prizes for the choristers, and he further determined to present a guinea to the ringers on Christmas Eve, and to go up into the belfry and deliver it to Mr. Trippels in person. So on Christmas Eve he made his way to the belfry in good time, arriving at the church before any of the ringers. As he had had some difficulty in finding his way up the stairs in the dark on his previous visit, he took care this time to bring a small hand lantern with him. He found the door at the bottom of the stairs unlocked, so he went up, and as none of the company had as yet arrived, he determined to ascend to the bell-chamber and inspect the work which had recently been done to the bells by the aid of his lantern. When he arrived at the bell-chamber he could not see any difference in the general appearance of the bells from what it was before the work was done: and considering that the repairs had consisted chiefly in new gudgeons and brasses, it was scarcely likely that an uninitiated observer would detect any difference. So he entered the bell-chamber and groped his way along the frames to the opposite side from the door. He had no sooner reached this point when he perceived the bells beginning to move, and he had just time to recede into a window when two or three deafening clangs reached his ears, and the whole peal were in due time raised. Now Mr. Bounce was no coward, so he made up his mind to stay where he was till the bells stopped. "I suppose," said he to himself, "that when they stop they'll be all down as they were when I came up first. It's rather a nuisance sticking here in the cold, but still they won't be long, and there'll be no harm done." Just then he happened to turn round, and as he did the seventh which swung close to the window where he was, touched his arm and wiped her lip on his coat sleeve, depositing a lot of grease thereon which had dropped from her bearings. He was not hurt, but he was annoyed to have a good coat spoiled.

Contrary to Mr. Bounce's expectations the bells did not stop so soon as he imagined they would, and when they did they still maintained a vertical position. The fact of the matter was that, as it was Christmas Eve, the ringers determined to raise the bells in peal, ring a short touch, and leave them up ready for Christmas morning. This they did, going straight into the touch as soon as the bells were up, without setting them. When the bells were set Mr. Bounce waited for a minute or two, expecting them to go down in some way or other, he knew not how. Finding that they did not do so he began to call out, but it was too late, as the ringers had left the belfry; and as the church stood in the middle of a large railed churchyard, nearly a hundred yards from the street, it was scarcely likely that anyone would hear him, considering the noise and bustle of the down on a Christmas Eve. Now anyone accustomed to the bells could have easily got out of the bell-chamber, although they were all up, but Mr. Bounce had an idea that the least touch would send them off, and he dare not move from the window where he was. So all he could do was to stay where he was, and shout. Although no one could hear him in the town it was quite possible that anyone in the churchyard or on the premises of the choristers' school, which was only about fifty yards from the tower, might do so. So we will leave him for a short time and take a look in at the school premises. Dr. Swishem was sitting in his study, having just returned from the schoolroom, after having read prayers and sent the boys to bed. He took off his cap and gown and sat by the fire indulging in a reverie. He had heard that day that a former chorister, now grown up, who had been under his charge some eight years previously, was going to the bar; and as he had taken a great deal of pains with him when a boy, he was naturally distressed at what he had heard. "Ah!" said the Doctor to himself, "I've much to be thankful for after all. My lot would be an enviable one to many a parochial clergyman, with perhaps several thousand souls in his parish. Here am I with only a dozen boys to look after, and a sermon to preach once a week; and my boys are absolutely under my control while they are here, and if I can't bring them up in the way they should go, it's a pity. By God's help I'll try and do my duty to them." While the Doctor was thus musing, his pupils had gone up into their dormitories. A small boy happened to look out of one of the windows facing the Abbey tower, and saw a light in the bell-chamber, and thought he could hear someone shouting, so he went up to one of the elder choristers and said "I say, Montie, there's a light in the tower; I wonder what it is." "Why you little duffer, Archie," said Montague, "It's only old Trippels oiling the bells, come, make haste and undress and get to bed." "Oh, but I don't think it can be him," said Archie, "he wouldn't be up there so late as this, and I think I can hear somebody shouting too." "No,—catch old Trips up there this time of night," said

Xerxes, who had just come up, "he'll be making himself comfortable at the 'Crown and Cushion' by now." Mr. Trippels' habits were pretty well-known to the choristers. Boys always find out anything which they are not wanted to know. Montague lifted the window, and shouts were distinctly heard so as to leave no doubt but that someone was shut up in the bell-chamber. It was therefore decided that Montague had better go down and inform Dr. Swishem of the matter. This he did and first tapped at the study door, as the doctor was occupied with his thoughts as above related. "Please there's a light in the tower, and we can hear somebody calling," said Montague, in answer to the Doctor's inquiry as to what he wanted. "Eh! What? Nonsense, boy," said the Doctor. "Oh but there is Sir, I'm sure,—would you mind looking out, Sir?" said the boy. Thereupon Dr. Swishem, accompanied by Montague, left the room and went to a side door next the churchyard, which when he had opened, Mr. Bounce's shouts could be distinctly heard. "Why, Montie," said the Doctor, "This is a regular ghost story,—good enough for the Christmas number of some magazine. I wonder where Mr. Trippels is—we must get the belfry key—but stay,—we'll just go across the churchyard to the vicarage. I believe the vicar has a key of his own and it will save time; you can come too if you like."

Thereupon both pedagogue and pupil crossed the Abbey yard, and entered the vicarage garden, and rung the bell at the front door.

Now the Rev. Jabez Orthodox had invited one of his curates to dine with him that evening. The curate being a bachelor, his vicar thought it would be more lively for him to dine at the vicarage than to be alone in his lodgings on Christmas Eve, and both vicar and curate were discussing matters parochial after dinner when Dr. Swishem and his pupil were announced. The Doctor soon explained his errand, but it turned out that the vicar had only a key to the church, and not one to the belfry staircase. "Have you any idea where we should be likely to find Mr. Trippels?" said the vicar. Dr. Swishem said he didn't know, but Montague said "Please, Sir, I think he'll be down at at the 'Crown,' er—I mean the ringers room at the 'Crown and Mitre Hotel.'" All three clergymen recollecting the habits of the ringers generally, and Mr. Trippels in particular, thought that Montague's suggestion was probable. The curate undertook to go and find him, and made his way across the churchyard, through the market place and into the yard of the "Crown and Mitre." When he arrived all the company of ringers had left, except Mr. Trippels, whom he found standing in the bar and having a final glass before going home. Matters were soon explained, and Mr. Trippels having the keys with him, the curate and he went at once to the Abbey. By this time the Vicar, Dr. Swishem and Montague had arrived at the west doors. These were soon opened and the staircase door unlocked. Mr. Trippels and the curate ascended the stairs with a lantern, while the rest of the party remained below. On gaining the bell chamber they found Mr. Bounce in the position before described.

"Oh, Trippels," said he, "I'm in such a predicament. I came up to see you to-night, and you weren't here, so I went up to have a look at the bells, and then you began to ring, and I couldn't get out, and I've been here ever since."

"So it seems," said Trippels, dryly. "All I can say is that I hope you've had a pleasant evening, but why on earth didn't you come out when we stopped?" Mr. Bounce then explained his fears of sending some of the bells off.

"Pooh!" said Trippels, swinging himself along the frame between the lips of the upturned bells to where Mr. Bounce was, "Now give me your hand." Mr. Trippels then half led and half carried the affrighted churchwarden across the frame and safely deposited him on the stairs. They then went down, and Mr. Bounce related his adventure to the Vicar and Dr. Swishem below.

The vicar insisted upon the whole party adjourning to the vicarage. On their arrival there he gave Montague a glass of wine and as many oranges as he could cram into his pocket, and Dr. Swishem sent him to the school, where he recounted the whole adventure to an admiring audience in the dormitories. As for the rest of the party the vicar suggested that "something hot" would not be amiss, and thereupon he insisted on their partaking a stiff glass of grog all round. This, Mr. Bounce especially, was very glad of, as he had been nearly frozen.

Trippels and the curate lit their pipes (the other three were not smokers), and it was past midnight when the party broke up.

Christmas morning dawned clear and frosty, and Mr. Bounce was awakened at an early hour by the Abbey Bells. When he got up he found himself not much the worse for his last night's adventure.

Before morning service he went up into the belfry and wished Mr. Trippels and the rest of the company. "A Merry Christmas," and then presented them the donation he had intended giving them on the previous evening.

I need not go through all the events of that Christmas Day, as nothing unusual occurred. After this Mr. Bounce forbore to meddle with matters which he did not understand, and by Easter he had become quite accustomed to the duties of his office, so that he was then unanimously re-elected; and before another Christmas the church officials and the parishioners generally came to the conclusion that the new churchwarden was "not such a bad sort after all."

THE RINGERS.—(OLD STYLE.)

The old church bells were merry, merry bells, altho' they were but three,

The Ringers too as jovial set, as ringers ought to be.
Now it happened once upon a time, but when I can't reveal,
That these old ringers sallied forth to ring a midnight peal.

They spent their evening as before, in soaking well their clay,
And when they sallied forth to ring could scarcely see their way.
To see them walk, and hear them talk, along the road was rich,
And strange to tell one old boy fell and rolled into the ditch.

They pulled him out, then to the church these ringers did repair
Unlocked the door, then on their knees went scrambling up the stairs;

They off' their coats and seized the ropes, but could not start at all,
'Till each man had to make his stand, with his back against the wall.

The bells begun, with three, two, one, and then went one, three, two,

For on that night to ring them right was more than they could do.
They stamped and tugged, and blowed and lugged, nor was it long before,
The big bell ringer missed his pull and tumbled on the floor.

He soon got up and seized his rope and tried with might and main,
But every time he tried to ring he tumbled down again.
The other two whose eyes were shut, kept on their bells a-ringing
Till one says "Stop, we'll have a drop, and finish up with singing."

The bells they stopt, and down they sat upon the belfry floor,
And drank till all the beer was gone, of that you may be sure.
Then groping back their way downstairs, as homeward they did reel,
Each one declared, he'd never heard, a better midnight peal.

For it really is a funny thing, the tales that I've been told,
It shows us clear, what ringers were, in the merry days of old.

THE TOCSIN.—The word Tocsin will be familiar to most, in connection with the sounding of an alarm by means of tolling a large bell, generally the largest in the principal church tower of the town, city, or village, as the case may be. The word seems to be derived from the Portuguese tongue; in that language "sino" is a bell, while to "tocca" is to "make" or "do," or as we say, to play a musical instrument. Thus to "tocca rebecca" is to play the violin, while the Blacksmith will shout to his assistant or hammerman to "tocca," "tocca," when he wants him to strike, or "do" his work; So "tocca-sino" is to ring the bell, and thus "Tocsin."

INNOCENCE (A fact).—Tom was a hardened criminal of about three and a half years; manifold had been his transgressions, culminating in stealing a bun from the confectioner's counter while his mother and the man of flour and jam were discussing matters at the other end of the shop. The infamy of this act was duly impressed upon Tom's mind at bed and prayer time, and must have sunk very deep, for the next morning at the breakfast table, with his mouth full of bread and butter, he said, "Mamma, do you fink God'll give me anover chance?"

ANOTHER CHAPTER IN THE TRUE HISTORY OF THAT AMBITIOUS TENOR MAN.

"The Belfry,"
Christmas Eve, 1888.

You'll recollect some time ago I wrote a short narration
About a simple Tenor-man, a man of aspiration,
Who, at vast expense, and enterprise, well worthy of the cause
Had purchased all the costly tomes that treat upon the laws—

Of scientific ringing; and had bothered his weak brains,
And at length achieved a peal of Grandsire Caters for his pains.
And how his friend (?) the Teacher-man had disappeared from view
These incidents, perchance dear Sir, are borne in mind by you.

Now this peal of Grandsire Caters had so puffed him up with pride,
That he strutted round quite haughty, and piled on lots of side,
While his costume underwent a metamorphosis so vast,
As recalled to an observant eye some pictures of the past.

Before his Grandsire Cater days, he'd mount a modest tile
Of felt, round topped and dark in hue, and quiet as to style,
But now to ape a College Youth is what he would be at,
To invested four-and-ninepence in a sleek Bell-topper bat.

Having thusly aped the apex of the College Youths attire,
To clothe his nether man appropriately did aspire,
So to St. Martin's Lane he went, and to a tailor there
An order gave, which rather made Sartorio to stare.

Said he "I know the Cumberlands, those noble ringing swells,
Whose meeting house is in this Lane, they ring St. Martin's bells,
When ringing, blithe as butterflies, industrious as ants;"
So make for me, same style as theirs, some wide Bell-bottomed pants.

Now wide Bell-bottomed trousers, as you dear Sir, well know,
Are not just now the fashion, and they make a man look low;
He then with most perverted taste, discarded modern hose
And like the dame of Banbury Cross, hung Bells upon his toes.

A swell of this strange type of course had views about his neck,
Which might be termed advanced, indeed he'd always worn large check,
But checks were now discarded, and he studied with a view
To clothe his throat to mark his taste, and still be loud in hue.

So he bought a large sized bicycle, and on it hung eight Bells,
The extra seven to mark him off from other cycling swells;
Then off he wheeled to Macclesfield, and of Matthews of that ilk,
Purchased forty "ringers' badges," splendid neckerchiefs of silk.

From Macclesfield to Birmingham, and found John Carter there,
Had some chat on ringing matters, and then John displayed his ware,
Of gold, or silver, copy of Great Paul, our man debated
Within himself, then bought them both, and went his way elated.

He always lit his pipe with matches, of the make of Bell and Black,
And his modest quenchers purchased either at the "Bell and Mackrell in the Mile End Road, or travelled on until he reached Cornhill,
Then at the "Bell" in Gracechurch St. his pipe and glass he'd fill.

(Note.—And empty two or three times).

With costume thus conspicuous he didn't feel small beer,
But felt a something wanting to crown his costume queer;
So when he went a courting, and was walking out his gell (groans)
(Rhymes are a fearful drain on the brain space of the unaccustomed rhymester, Mr. Editor).

For a buttonhole he always wore a Canterbury-Bell.

All this was fairly praiseworthy, but I grieve to have to say,
From his lofty aspirations this young man fell away;
The Bell idea he'd worked quite dry, he had no further hopes,
(That young "gell's" name was Sally), so he turned his mind to ropes.

The state required a servant, a man whose "line" was cord.
'Mong' st others (some were Baronets), our hero sent in word
That he the post would undertake; but he did not get the place,
And the Exercise are thankful that they're spared the sad disgrace.

What's that I hear you say, dear Sir? I thought you murmured "space,"
And that "Comps and Printers' Devils are not of patient race;"
The hero's name you'd like to know? ah! that I must not tell,
But by special Act of Parliament, 'tis lately changed to Bell.

And so, dear Mr. Editor, I hope that the individual is now happy, and will not worry your readers any more with his vagaries, which have become as tiresome to them, no doubt, as they have to

Yours (more or less) rhythmically,
THE WANDERING BELL-HAULER.
