On Saturday, July 12th, the members of this Society had their annual excursion, Ilkley being selected for a visit. Leaving Hull by the Hull and Barnsley Railway at 1.15 p.m., Ilkley was reached at 4, in a steady downpour of rain, where two of the local company were waiting to receive them and conduct them to the parish church, where everything was in readiness for ringing. A tour of the church was then made, where a first view was taken of the memorial window to the late J. W. Snowdon, Esq. After viewing the windows to the other members of the Snowdon family a move was made for the churchyard, where the remains of the late J. W. Snowdon lie. Afterwards the belfry was visited, and a short touch of Grandsire Triples was rung to feel the bells, and then a quarter-peal in the same method was rung by G. T. Miller, 1; J. Highfield, 2; G. M. Brownrigg, 3; W. T. Verity, 4; R. Chaffer, 5; W. Southwick, 6; J. W. Stickney (conductor), 7; C. Jackson, 8. After an adjournment for refreshments, the celebrated Cow and Calf rocks were visited. The return journey commenced at 9.20, Hull being reached at 12. The company wish to return thanks to the local company for having everything ready for them, also to those who so kindly acted as guides.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 2, 1890.

"ALWAYS keep right with the parson. Churchwardens may come and go; but the parson remains, therefore it is the best policy to keep straight with him." This is the advice which has been tendered by many an old ringer to younger men. And the counsel is not to be despised. If held to be somewhat illogical, it has a flavour of the wisdom of the serpent, though its dove-like attributes may be infinitesimal. Expediency in this case teaches us to strictly adhere to the dictum herein laid down. If the parson is for us, of whom shall we be afraid? On the other hand, if he is against us, what hope is left?

The members of a thriving society in a well-known parish in Kent have, we regret to say, found out when too late, apparently, that it is wise to "keep straight" with the parson. The rev. gentleman in this instance has got crooked with the ringers, and closed the tower against them; preferring—for a brief period we hope—the services of round ringers and chimers. Our correspondent does not acquaint us with the nature of this misunderstanding between the Incumbent of Tenterden and the ringers. The fact however of the rev. gentleman refusing an interview at which it would be probable that all differences may be satisfactorily adjusted, marks his conduct as somewhat arbitrary. The Tenterden ringers are, we believe, men worthy of better treatment.

For the sake of peace in the Parish, in the interests of the Church, and for the sake of change-ringing in the County, it is to be hoped that the Vicar of Tenterden may be found willing to settle this unfortunate disagreement at the earliest possible moment. The spectacle of a ringers' lock-out from whatever cause does great injury, and in the end brings no good to either side. We heard some time ago of another Kentish vicar locking his ringers out, and then finding himself in want of ringers, applying to that remarkable universal provider, WHITELEY, to send him a company to ring his bells for some festivity. And WHITELEY sent them. The most remarkable part of this was that good ringers could be found who could stoop to be employed under such circumstances. We are glad to say that in this latter instance everything is now as it should be. And we hope soon to hear that the Tenterden affair has been settled amicably. We appeal to the Vicar to bend a ear to the representations of the leader of the Tenterden Society, and while forgetting what has passed, be not unmindful of the fact that there are times when it is better to err on the side of leniency than what he may consider strict—which others may consider hard—justice.

ST. THOMAS'S SOCIETY, BRENTWOOD.

The annual outing of this Society took place on Monday, July 21st. Eleven members put in an appearance, and a start was made by the 8.10 train to Dovercourt. They then walked by the beach to St. Nicholas Harwich, where they found a fine peal of eight. After an hour's pull a start was made by the steamer down the River Orwell to Ipswich, and after some refreshments boating and other amusements were indulged in for two hours. A return was then made to Harwich, and the Man of War Ship lying there. The company returned home by the 7.25 train reaching Brentwood at 9.30, highly pleased with the day's outing. Many thanks are due to the Vicar (the Rev. R. Druce) for the use of the bells; and to Mr. J. Brewster for having them ready and in good order.

And on Monday, July 28th, for practice, the Rev. J. B. Drabble rang his first 120 of Oxford with two other rev. gentlemen at the wheel, and two good ringers lately come to work in the parish. The old band are in hopes of soon retiring; the only matter which now wants settling is the pension.

ERITH (Kent).—On Sunday evening, July 13th, for Divine Service at the parish church, a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples in 43 mins. F. Cullum, 1; G. Cullum, 2; G. Cook, 3; T. Saxby, 4; H. Gibbs, 5; E. Barnett, 6; J. Garard (conductor), 7; J. Barber, 8.

HAYES (Kent).—On Sunday, July 20th, at the parish church, 720 Grandsire Minor in 25 mins. F. Sanders, 1; P. F. Harman, 2; E. Dunn, 3; G. Durling, 4; H. P. Harman, 5; H. G. Frum (conductor), 6. All the above hail from Bromley.

LONDON.—On Sunday morning, July 27th, for Divine Service at St. Stephen's church, Westminster, 504 Stedman Triples. J. George, 1; H. R. Newton (conductor), 2; J. Reed, 3; W. H. George, 4; W. Carter, 5; H. S. Ellis, 6; J. N. Oxborrow, 7; W. Lamb, 8. And at St. Clement Danes, Strand, for Divine Service in the evening, 504 Grandsire Triples. W. Weatherstone, 1; W. Chew, 2; H. Langdon, 3; F. Stevens, 4; J. George (Rugby), 5; W. H. George (conductor), 6; H. R. Newton, 7; E. Albone, 8. Also two courses of Grandsire Caters. H. Langdon, 1; W. Weatherstone (conductor), 2; W. Chew, 3; F. Stevens, 4; J. Comb, 5; R. Hopkins, 6; J. George, 7; W. H. George, 8; H. R. Newton, 9; A. W. Barkus, 10.

LEISTON (Suffolk).—On Monday, July 28th, 720 Canterbury Pleasure Minor, in 25 mins. F. Argent, 1; W. Taylor, 2; A. J. Lincoln, 3; J. W. Watson, 4; J. Harris, 5; G. Lindoff (conductor), 6. First attempt in the method by all except the conductor.

MITCHAM (Surrey).—On Friday, July 11th, at Christ Church, 720 Bob Minor in 25 mins. *J. A. Lambert, 1; G. Welling, 2; R. Sewell, 3; H. Springall, 4; *B. A. Heather, 5; J. Fayers, 6. *First 720 in the method. Tenor 7½ cwt.

TEWKESBURY (Gloucestershire).—On Saturday, July 26th, at the Abbey, an attempt was made for a peal of Stedman Triples, but came to grief after thirteen courses of capital striking, and on Sunday, July 27th, for evening service, a well-struck 504 Stedman Triples. W. Hampton, 1; R. H. Witherington, 2; S. Cleal, 3; J. Hale, 4; J. Wathen, 5; T. Devereux, 6; Jos. Wathen (conductor), 7; W. Haines, 8. Great credit is due to W. Hampton for the way in which he has mastered Stedman, as this is his fourth trial at the method, and has rung two 504s and a touch of 168.

WALSALL (Staffordshire).—On Sunday evening, July 27th, for Divine Service at the parish church, 704 Kent Treble Bob Major in 27 mins. W. Griffin, 1; F. Hallsworth, 2; J. Astbury, sen., 3; J. Wesley, 4; W. Walker, 5; J. Lawton, 6; D. Wesley, 7; J. Astbury, jun. (conductor), 8.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

STEDMAN TRIPLES.

SIR,—I must apologise to the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer for allowing several weeks to pass before replying to his letter, but pressure of work, coupled with a desire on my part to make a further examination of Thurstans' bob-and-single peal, has prevented me from writing sooner. In commenting upon the bob-and-single peals, it is evident that when Mr. Bulwer came to Thurstans', he felt that he must say something, and that something might pass very well with those who do not understand the method, but to me it is clear that forty sixes are built upon the first two sixes of a B block, thus it is that a B block—and not a five-course block—is lengthened into a quarter-peal. I may say that I am now doubtful whether Thurstans elaborated upon the plan at all, for my previous remarks upon this peal were made while I was under the impression that the peal was true, but on pricking out the four B blocks—from the four quarter-peal ends upon which the peal is built, I find there are four sixes in one even block false, with four sixes in the other. The same may be said of the two odd blocks, therefore the peal is false at the foundation. It is interesting to note that Thurstans seemed to have attached some importance to these quarter-peal-ends, for when he discovered the calling for his masterpiece in 1839 he used them, and when he hit upon the extra and omit business in 1846, there seems to have been a desire to get them to come at the quarter-peal-ends. J. J. PARKER.

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—In your last issue there is recorded as rung at Leiston a peal of 5376 changes of Bob Major, in the foot-note to which it is stated that: "This peal contains the full combination of 4, 5, and 6 in 5-6, and is the first peal rung with these qualities." I may point out that the appended peal, which contains similar qualities, was rung for the first time at Duffield on February 9th, 1887, and was recorded with a foot note describing its qualities in "THE BELL NEWS" of February 19th, since when it has been several times rung in other places. Composition in all the better known methods has been so vigorously pursued during the last few years that it is but seldom safe to put forward any production as a novelty otherwise than interrogatively, and certainly the composer of the annexed peal never ventured to claim originality for its qualities at the time it was produced. A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

THORNBURY CHURCH TOWER RESTORATION.

SIR,—It is stated in "THE BELL NEWS" of the 12th inst., that Mr. W. J. Sevier, of Gloucester, was instrumental in having our noble tower restored. I beg to say this is not true, as it was the intention of the parishioners for some years past to have it thoroughly restored, and it was only delayed for want of sufficient funds. Thanking you in anticipation of inserting this in your next issue.

THE YORKSHIRE ASSOCIATION AND PRIZE-RINGING.

SIR,—In your issue of July 19th is a letter from "Free Lance," in which he says that it is impertinence on my part to ask who he is. I fail to see any impertinence about it. If I had known his name I should have known whether he was an attendee at prize meetings or not. I wish it to be understood that I am only speaking of what I know about, that is ringing in Yorkshire. Now "Free Lance" has been trying make a mountain out of a mole-hill. He says "what have prize-ringers been doing to allow the ringing to degenerate," and then intimates that it was from a money consideration that it was formerly kept at such an high standard. Some of them have been connected with the Association from the commencement, and no doubt have been trying their best to keep up the standard, but have failed, first, because ringers in Yorkshire want some healthy rivalry to test their abilities, or otherwise they will not exert themselves more than the ordinary Sunday service ringing; and next, young ringers see nothing before them but bare dry change-ringing, and therefore do not persevere, but give up when half-learned. In the place of giving prizes or good striking, the Association has been promoting 5000 ringing, and were at one time at the head of the list. But that is failing also, as there are very few Yorkshire ringers who are so ambitious as to have a large number of 5000's put to their credit. They would rather have the honour of striking a good half-peal and getting a prize thereby, than all the 5000's they can ring in a lifetime. "Free Lance" says he does not believe my statement. I say again I am speaking of Yorkshire, and I say again that good ringing is greatly inferior to what it was fifteen years ago. Then again "Free Lance" tries to make another mountain from what I said in respect to managing without the clergy. Well, that wants an explanation. Mr. Snowdon, in his letter to the Yorkshire Post, appealed to the Bishop and Clergy and all who had power over the bells to put a stop to any attempt at prize-ringing; so that led to my remark that there was no need to call them in on a resolution of this kind. But as to doing without them, I should think if they are wise they will take up the project at once and help the ringers to make it both successful and honourable. "Free Lance" speaks as if there were nothing of the kind in existence. At present the Saddleworth company hold two cups, won at the United Counties' Association meetings, and I have no doubt that the ringing meetings which have been held yearly have contributed to better ringing than formerly, but the fact that a Yorkshire Association company holds both cups shows that good striking is peculiar to Yorkshire, and will have to be kept up by similar means. Now the whole of Free Lance's letter I consider tall talk—trying to make more of my letter than what is necessary—and I fancy many ringers will regard it as such.

Crosland Moor, Huddersfield.

P.S.—I have read the Editor's comment on my letter, and I consider it a fair and reasonable one; but I differ from you and think that the discussion will lead to some good. The letter you mention shows that it was only raising and ringing rounds, and not changes, and I think your remarks about church bells being devoted only to Church work, will loose nothing by having contests of the kind.

THE PEAL AT CHEPSTOW.

SIR,—I wish to have a few words concerning Mr. Fussell's letter. If Mr. Fussell thinks he has rung a peal at Chepstow he has got it all to himself. The men that took part in it will not own it as a peal. I don't want Mr. Fussell's composition that he talks about, nor him neither. If he publishes a peal he should ring it first. If Mr. Fussell has anything more to say in the matter he had better come to Chepstow, where he made the mistake.

CHARLES SMITH.

SIR,—I now take the liberty of saying a few words in reply to Mr. Fussell's letter of last week. In the first instance I think Mr. Fussell is evading the point at issue, viz.: was it a true peal? It seems very strange for the last half to have taken ten or eleven minutes longer than the first, considering that the bells were tapping round much quicker than the first half. And I have also a strong opinion that when the single "no bob" was called, that according to the position of the bells that it should have been a single call, as the bells went close on another part, when Mr. Fussell called "that's all," and the bells were scrambled home. As to Mr. Fussell's vow, that he calls it, he must have said that to himself, as none of the local company heard it, and in conclusion I hope that we shall get a peal yet of Plain Bob.

Chepstow.

G. WATKINS.

FALSE PEAL.

SIR,—In looking over "THE BELL NEWS" last week, I saw an account of a peal of Treble Bob Maximus said to have been rung at Ashton-under-Lyne. Now, Sir, I heard the finish of the said peal; I heard two bobs at the wrong come up, and then the dodge lead at home, and then they began firing, and it lasted for a whole treble lead, what should have been a bob at home, they were (as the saying is) all of a lump, and to mend matters they rang the same lead over again. To prove my assertion; it was seven o'clock when the last bob wrong came up, and it was ten minutes past seven when they came round, only one round, and there was a ringer who asked them if they had not broken down.

WELLINGBOROUGH, NORTHANTS.

After holding the living of Wellingborough for over 19 years, the Ven. R. P. Lightfoot, M.A., Archdeacon of Oakham, has accepted the rectory of Uppingham, Rutland. He has been the recipient of very handsome testimonials from the parishioners, also from the Sunday School teachers and others. Recently, Messrs. Ette (deputy-conductor), Turnell (steeple-keeper), and Wood (time-keeper), representing the parish church ringers and chimers, waited on the Archdeacon and presented him with a pair of oak candlesticks, made from the timber of the old bell-frame placed in the tower in the year 1640, and removed 1884, as a token of their respect and in appreciation of the kindness and consideration they had always received at his hands. The Vicar thanked them very much for giving him such a suitable memento of Wellingborough belfry.

During the long period the Archdeacon has been at Wellingborough, the following works in connection with the church have been carried out:—Erection of St. Barnabas' (iron) church and Elm-street mission room, re-roofing of north and south aisles of parish church and restoration of Lady Chapel, new organ, enlargement of vestry, vicarage rooms erected, top of spire re-built, and west doorway restored, church clock repaired, new chimes given, two bells added and one recast, two coloured windows given by parishioners, the ancient font replaced in the church and handsome cover added, new carved oak lectern, and at Easter last new altar rail and reredos. New grammar schools have also been built, the Priory property purchased and made available for parish and Sunday school purposes, the Sunday schools greatly enlarged, and parochial institutions generally put in good working order.

In addition to being a trustee of Freeman's Schools, Archdeacon Lightfoot was chairman to the Governors of the Grammar Schools, and for many years did good service as vice-chairman of the School Board, where his knowledge of educational matters made him a very valuable member.

THE SURREY ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting was held at Croydon by the kind permission of the Vicar, on Monday, July 28th. Between 3 and 4 p.m. ringing was begun at St. Peter's with touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples.

At 6 o'clock, tea was served in the parish church schools. Forty members sat down and enjoyed a very good tea. After tea the annual meeting was held, with F. W. J. Rees, Esq. in the chair. The officers and committee were re-elected for the ensuing year. Dr. Carpenter and Mr. Strange were chosen to be representatives on the Central Council. The next quarterly meeting was decided to be held at Epsom.

A. B. CARPENTER, Hon. Sec.

TENTERDEN, KENT.

We are asked to state that the Rev. S. C. Lepard, the Vicar of this parish, has been pleased to close to change-ringers the fine peal of bells at St. Mildred's church, and has preferred to avail himself of the services of some round ringers and chimers before those of the Guild of change-ringers who have done much work during the past three years. This is owing to a slight misunderstanding between the Vicar and the ringers, which most probably would have been amicably settled had the Vicar consented to a personal interview.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

X.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

Having shewn why all existing twin-bob peals are produced from Hudson's 60 P blocks, and also what laws must be observed in twin-bob composition, I will now proceed with the practical application of the information acquired. It has already been mentioned that although the arrangement of the P blocks in table A (article No. VI.) is adapted for one-part compositions, for those in more parts a different grouping is necessary. As in other Triple methods so in Stedman we may have three, four, five, six, and ten-part peals. One table will be required for five and ten-part compositions, another for those in three or six parts, and a third for those in four parts. Of these the first will be a five-part, the second a three-part, and the third a two-part table. I may here say that, although a two-part table is necessary for the production of four-part peals, no bona fide two-part composition appears to be attainable. If the mode of composing peals with one of these tables is described, the explanation will cover the use of the other two, which it will be then only needful to treat briefly. The five-part table being, from the shortness of its parts, the most convenient to handle, I will select it for the purpose of illustrating the application of the foregoing rules.

TABLE F.

HUDSON'S 60 COURSE-ENDS ARRANGED FOR FIVE-PART COMPOSITION.

I	II	III	IV	V
1. 231456	514236	342516	125346	453126
2. 324156	152436	435216	213546	541326
3. 234165	512463	345261	123564	451362
4. 321465	154263	432561	215364	543162
5. 251634	534612	312645	145623	423651
6. 521643	354621	132654	415632	243615
7. 256143	536421	316254	146532	426315
8. 526134	356412	136245	416523	246351
9. 265413	563241	361524	164352	462135
10. 264531	562314	365142	163425	461253
11. 625431	653214	631542	614325	642153
12. 624513	652341	635124	613452	641235

In the above table the course-ends in the first line are the part-ends. As with six working bells one must of necessity be at home at the part-ends, the 6th has been selected as the most suitable bell to occupy that position. In the first two lines appear all the course-ends with the 6th at home, in the next two lines those with the 6th in 5th place, and so on with the 6th in regular progression throughout, thus making it easy, by observing the position of this bell, to discover the line in which any particular course-end is located. It may be well to remark that, if the 6th be the bell at home, the part-ends must of necessity be the course-ends in the first line, for none of those in the second line bear a five-part relation to 231456. Further, no other five-part table than the above is possible, for if one be arranged with a different bell at home this will be found to be nothing more than a transposition of the one given. Therefore every producible twin-bob five-part (or ten-part) peal can be found in table F.

Now in all five-part compositions any individual part must contain twelve course-ends, and each of the twelve must come out of a different line of the table, so that every one of the lines (which are numbered from 1 to 12) shall be represented in a part. It is perfectly immaterial from which of the five columns the course-ends are severally taken, providing that the last one of the part (of necessity, as a part-end, in line 1) is not in column I, as in that case it would be 231456, and the composition would consequently come round at the part-end instead of shunting into another part. If the first part of a peal draws the proper quota from each line, the remaining five parts will be true, because the course-ends in each of the five columns are similarly transposed from the respective part-ends at the head of each column. Therefore it is sufficient to compose and prove one part of a five-part peal. Since, with the one exception above-noted, we need take no account of what column we use from, but only of the line, the whole table may be represented by the figures that appear on the left of each of the twelve lines. That is to say that, whereas in table A each of the 60 course-ends was represented by a separate figure, in table F one figure will represent five course-ends.

Similarly, the course-ends of table F representing P blocks, if we find the "q" sets for each of the four positions S, H, L, Q in twelve blocks, one selected from each of the twelve lines, we shall have all that is necessary to ensure compliance with "q" set requirements. Referring to table D (article No. IX.), we must now number the members of each set according to the line in which they respectively appear in table F. Taking first the "q" set containing S 231456, this row will be denoted by S 1; the next row of the set, S 536421, will be found in line 7 of table F, and will therefore be denoted by S 7. The two remaining rows L 653214 and L 123564 will be found in lines 11 and 3 respectively, and be denoted by L 11 and L 3. Thus the "q" set containing S 231456 will be denoted by S 1, S 7, L 11, L 3. If the "q" set containing the S position of any of the remaining four blocks in line 1 be sought, the other three members will likewise be found in lines 7, 11, and 12, and the statement confirmed that it is only needful to find the "q" sets for one block in each line. The three "q" sets containing the remaining three positions, H, L and Q, in block 231456 must now be found. This concludes the requirements of line 1. A block from each of the other eleven lines must be treated in like manner, to complete the work. The following table presents them all. Practically it is unnecessary to find any "q" sets for the L and Q positions, for these will presently be seen to be merely transpositions of the S and H sets. Nor is it requisite even to prick the whole of the S and H columns of the table, for as soon as we have obtained sets including the four positions in each of the blocks 1 to 12, clearly all further sets must be duplicates. Reference has already been made to the fact that only one-quarter of the positions require their "q" sets found if we are dealing with the whole 60 blocks unformed into a part table, and the same is true when the blocks are arranged in parts. I think, however, that to give the "q" sets of the five-part table in full will facilitate a clear understanding of the matter.

S 12, S 3, L 5, L 9.	H 12, H 10, Q 9, Q 6.	L 12, L 4, S 2, S 8.	Q 12, Q 11, H 5, H 6.

The first line of this table comprises the four "q" sets for the respective positions of S, H, L, and Q in the first block of the first line of table F, viz: 231456. The second line of the table comprises the "q" sets for the first block in the second line of table F, viz: 324156, and so on.

The first "q" set in column S is S1, S7, L11, L3. Now in the eleventh line of column L appears the set L11, L3, S1, S7. The two are clearly the same set transposed. Similarly every set in column L will be found to be a transposition of one in column S. Therefore we may at once eliminate the whole of column L, for what we require is a table of all the differing sets that govern the blocks in table F, and to tabulate any set twice over is useless. It will further be found that each set in column S also appears twice over in that column, for in the seventh line we find S7, S1, L3, L11, which is again merely a transposition of the first line. Similarly every other set in this column appears in duplicate. All these duplicates may of course be cut out. This leaves only six differing "q" sets out of the twenty-four contained in columns S and L. In the same manner, of the twenty-four sets in columns H and Q, there are only six that differ from one another. Therefore a total of twelve "q" sets covers the whole of the obligations of the four positions in all the blocks of table F. As the table in which these sets are arranged for practical use will require some further explanation it will be presented in another article.

THE WINCHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.—ANNUAL FESTIVAL.

The Guild held their festival at Dorking, Surrey, on Wednesday, July 16th. The belfry of St. Martin's church was opened at 10.30 a.m., and ringing was indulged in till 12 o'clock. Several touches of Stedman and Grandsire Triples were brought round, including a 252 of Stedman Triples. J. Hewett, 1; E. Warren, 2; G. Grafham, 3; A. Mills, 4; E. Jordan, 5; H. White, 6; J. W. Whiting, 7; D. Jordan, 8. And 168 Grandsire Triples by the Brading band, and 336 of the same by W. White, 1; H. Simmonds, 2; F. W. J. Rees, 3; W. Pain, 4; H. Jennings, 5; W. Johnson, 6; T. Newnham, 7; Rev. H. A. Spyers, 8. At 12.15 a special service was held in the church, the Rev. Canon Fisher, vicar of St. Peter's, Bournemouth, preaching an admirable sermon. Subsequently a dinner was held at the Public Hall, at which about 160 sat down to an excellent repast, which was however obliged to be hurried over owing to the special service having been prolonged twenty minutes beyond the time allotted to it.

The chair, in the unavoidable absence of the President, W. W. Moore, Esq., was taken by J. P. Stilwell, Esq., of Hillfield, Yateley, who was supported by the Hon. Secretary, the Rev. H. A. Spyers, the Revs. E. Summers, R. F. Tompkins, A. S. P. Blackburn, C. Buston, F. Whyley, Cameron Brock, Esq., Mr. W. Saubergne, Mr. J. D. Down, and others.

The Chairman proposed the toast of "The Queen and Royal Family."

Mr. Scott Evans, of Bournemouth, proposed the toast of "The Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese," to which the Rev. E. Summers replied.

The Chairman, in proposing "The Winchester Diocesan Guild," spoke of his early days spent in the neighbourhood of Dorking, and said that bell-ringing was a noble art, and worthy of all encouragement.

The Rev. H. A. Spyers, in responding, gave the men some sound practical advice on ringing, urging them to attach the greatest possible importance to evenness of striking, and to endeavour to minimise the annoyance to the outside public at their practices by having wooden shutters placed inside thelouvres of their belfries where the church was in close proximity to houses, and that when they were ringing for service or as a performance which they wished the outside public to listen to, they should never attempt to ring any changes which they could not strike evenly and well. As regards the progress of the Guild, he stated that when he first took the secretaryship some eight years ago the members numbered about ninety, but were now close on 500, and he was very thankful to have been the humble instrument in God's hands in carrying on this great Church work. He announced that the President, W. W. Moore, Esq., was willing to be elected for another year, and hoped to be present at next year's festival. He said that acting under medical advice he was obliged to resign the general secretaryship, but would be willing to take the post of local secretary for Hants. Ultimately Mr. Moore was elected President for the year; the Rev. C. Buston, General Secretary and Treasurer; F. W. J. Rees, Esq., local secretary for Surrey; and the Rev. H. A. Spyers, local secretary for Hants. The Committee was to be the same as last year with the exception of the substitution of Mr. F. White, of Basingstoke, in the place of Mr. W. Drewett.

During the afternoon the belfries of Ranmoor Common, Leatherhead, Ashted, Capel, Ockley, Newdigate, and Betchworth, were visited, and a party remained to ring at Dorking. An account of the touches rung at the above places will be found in another place. Altogether about 200 members were present at the festival.

The result of the voting for representatives on the Central Council, which was decided by voting papers counted at the Committee Meeting held at Purbrook on Wednesday, July 2nd, was as follows: F. W. J. Rees, Esq. (Guildford), 186; Rev. C. Buston (Deane), 180; Mr. G. Williams (Brighton), 144; Mr. H. White (Basingstoke), 133.

OPENING OF A NEW RING OF EIGHT BELLS AT CHRIST CHURCH, EPSOM, SURREY.

A new ring of eight bells, recently hung in the tower of Christ Church, Epsom, was on July 31st dedicated by the Bishop of Guildford. During the service, which was held at 2.0 p.m., a course of Grandsire Triples was rung by the Surrey Association. An address from the Bishop followed, and immediately afterwards a peal of Stedman Triples, under the guidance of Mr. Washbrook, of Oxford, was rung by the Association. A large party of the visitors, which had assembled on the vicarage lawn, were much gratified by the sweet tones of the bells, the work of Messrs. Mears and Stainbank, of Whitechapel. The ringers were kindly entertained at the Vicarage by the Rev. Archer Hunter and his lady before and after their work. The Rev. F. E. Robinson and Mr. Washbrook were the guests of Dr. Carpenter, of Croydon, with whom they remained till Saturday, August 2nd. Besides the above peal, one of Double Norwich at Carshalton on the 30th ult. was lost through the breaking of a rope, and a peal of Stedman Triples at St. Peter's, Croydon on August 1st, as well as a 5021 of Stedman Caters at Beddington on August 2nd, were successfully completed.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Tuesday, August 5th, the members of the Walthamstow St. Mary's society, with a few friends, amounting in all to about twenty, proceeded by road to the picturesque village of Aldenham, Herts., for their annual outing. A most enjoyable day was spent, the Vicar—Rev. K. F. Gibbs, M.A.—kindly placing the pretty ring of bells (which have recently been augmented to eight) at the visitors' disposal. Touches of Grandsire and Union Triples, and Bob and Grandsire Major, were rung during the day, in some of which Mr. H. Rowe of Aldenham took part. The Vicar very kindly allowed the use of his meadow for quoits, cricket, etc., and graciously threw open his beautiful grounds and conservatories for perambulation. A most excellent dinner and tea was provided by host Jones, of "The Chequers" inn, and the visitors left Aldenham soon after 8 o'clock, much pleased with their visit and the kindness shown them. They take this opportunity of thanking the worthy Vicar of Aldenham for the same.

LEEDS AND DISTRICT AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The usual monthly ringing meeting of the above society was held at Drighlington on Saturday, July 26th. Ringers attended from Leeds, Holbeck, Pudsey, and Drighlington, and touches of Kent and Oxford Treble Bob Major were very creditably rung. The bells are a good peal of eight, tenor 19 cwt., and the "go" of the bells leaves nothing to be desired. Unfortunately the Drighlington company are short of men so that they do not get regular practice on the whole peal. Four new members were admitted at this meeting, and the bells were kept going until 9.0 p.m.

THE ST. MARTIN'S GUILD, BIRMINGHAM.

This Guild held its annual outing and dinner at Warwick on Saturday, July 19th, when nearly forty members assembled from Birmingham and the neighbourhood.

These gatherings are looked forward to from year to year as the special occasion on which every member makes an effort to meet his fellows, and a glance round the platform at Warwick on the arrival of the train discovered the faces of many time-worn friends, always welcome but seldom seen owing to ill-health or the exigencies of business.

At the "Hare and Hounds," the head quarters for the day, the members were met and welcomed to the noble tower of St. Mary's by the ever-courteous tower-keeper, Mr. Hardy, and the bells were soon swinging to the tune of Stedman Caters and Treble Bob Royal.

Punctually at 3.30, the advertised time, a goodly company assembled at dinner, and all faces having been made radiant by a substantial and well-served repast, the chair was taken by the Vicar of Hatton—Rev. H. C. Courtney.

The Secretary of the Guild then mentioned several letters of apology he had received from clerical and lay friends of the Guild, among which were those of the Churchwardens of St. Mary's and the Vicar of St. Nicholas, Warwick, containing cordial invitations to ring on their bells.

The chairman, in proposing "Queen, Church, and State," spoke of the special significance of this toast to all ringers, and referring to the many recent and serious complaints against ringers for their absence from church service after inviting others, stated that personally he was most happily situated in this respect, as all his ringers were regular attendants at service. He could not but think that such complaints arose in a great measure from ringers having been treated in the past as quite an inferior race of men, instead of placing them in the position to which they were entitled. Where the clergy had a personal acquaintance with their ringers, and, as in some few cases other than his own made a practice of ringing with them, he believed there were and would continue to be no ground for these complaints.

Following this the presiding ringing master, Mr. John Day, gave "Success to the ringing papers and their respective editors," stating how much better off ringers of the present day were in this respect than their predecessors of some thirty or forty years ago, and how much of the increased interest taken in ringing was due to their circulation.

"Our absent friends and members," coupled with the names of Messrs. A. P. Heywood and C. H. Hattersley, was then given. Mr. John Ward gave "The health of the Chairman," and in a very humorous speech contrasted the new and old, not only among ringers but among the clergy, giving point to his remarks by a recitation of a comical passage between a country clergyman and a parish clerk.

At this stage a band was selected for each tower, and the bells of St. Mary and St. Nicholas were again soon going in changes. Later on the whole party met again at the hostelry, when the proceedings were closed with touches and tunes upon the hand-bells. In good time for an early return home the company were shortly afterwards on their way, every one expressing delight and satisfaction with what had proved a most enjoyable day.

RE-OPENING OF THE BELLS AT GREAT BENTLEY, ESSEX.

On Saturday, August 2nd, a special meeting of the Essex Association was held at Great Bentley to re-open the bells after the addition of a new treble cast by Mears and Stainbank, and hung by Mr. H. Howell, of Ipswich. By the kindness of the vicar, the Rev. D. H. Francis, and Mr. W. J. Nevard, a well-known enthusiast in ringing, an excellent meat tea was provided for all comers, and about forty, including round-ringers from the neighbouring parishes, sat down to partake of their hospitality. Representatives of the Essex Association, including the Hon. Secretary, were present from Great and Little Bentley, Dedham, Bures, Ipswich, Chelmsford, Coggeshall, Writtle, Stanstead, Kelvedon, Boreham, and Higham; and several 720s, besides shorter touches were rung during the day, in two at least of which it should be noted that Mr. Hume, of Bures, aged eighty-two, took part. A visit was also paid to Thorington, where there is a nice ring of five, kindly placed at the service of visitors by the vicar; but time did not admit of a visit to Great Bromley, the rector of which, the Rev. A. Graham, had offered the use of the tower with six bells. The new treble at Great Bentley was allowed on all hands to be an excellent splice, and general satisfaction was expressed with the "go" of the bells. After tea a short business meeting of the Association was held, at which the provisional election (at Fulham) of Messrs. T. Blackburn, of Salisbury, S. How, of Fulham, and J. N. Oxborrow, of Pimlico, was confirmed; and F. Balls, of Little Bentley, was elected a ringing member. The Hon. Secretary, after thanking the vicar and Mr. Nevard for their hospitality, expressed a hope that some of those present who are not change-ringers would be encouraged to join the Association as probationers, and aspire to qualify in the higher branches in the art of ringing. During the last ten years there had been much improvement in this district, several rings having been rehung and change-ringing started, principally through the persevering exertions of Mr. Nevard. This meeting, it should be noted, was the ringing opening of the bells, the new treble having been dedicated to the use of the church by a religious service on Whit-Tuesday. The ringing which took place during the day appears in another place.

PENTRE, RHONDDA VALLEY, SOUTH WALES.

A beautiful church has been erected here at a cost of £20,000 at the expense of the late Griffith Llewellyn, Esq.—and his widow—of Baglar Hall. In the steeple has been placed a very fine ring of eight bells, cast by Messrs. John Taylor and Co., of Loughborough. The tenor is a noble bell of 26 cwt. 3 qr. 10 lb. in E flat, and the weight of the whole peal is 100 cwt. 3 qr. 11 lb. They were opened on Monday last by eight members of the Llandaff Cathedral society, who were loud in their praises of the bells both as regards tune and tone, and also the excellent manner in which they are hung. The ringers on the occasion were J. Clutterbuck (conductor), 1; J. Wedlake, 2; J. Julian, 3; R. Hopkins, 4; J. Harris, 5; H. Snell, 6; H. Day, 7; J. Thomas, 8.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Saturday, July 19th, the ringers of St. John the Evangelist's Church, Rammore, Sheffield, Yorks, through the kindness of the vicar, the Rev. J. G. Williams, and the wardens, had their annual outing to Peel, Isle of Man. The company met at the Victoria Station at 6 a.m., the weather being very inauspicious, but after leaving Liverpool a bright change came over the scene, the sun shining out brightly; the company brought the hand-bells into requisition and rang several tunes, which gave great pleasure to a number of passengers on board the steamer. The Isle of Man now appearing in sight all anxiously waited the time to land. On landing—after slight refreshment—the company took train to Peel, and were kindly received by the Vicar. On Sunday morning they assembled to ring for Divine service at the beautiful church of St. Germain's, of which the Rev. J. G. Williams was formerly vicar, and in which he took a great interest, having with the late bishop Rowley Hill, been the means of the Church being built and the erection of the bells. After raising the bells in peal a touch of 168 was rung to try them, and then a 503, the ringers standing as following: Charles Sawyer, 1; Joseph Mulligan, 2; Sam Thomas, 3; James Dixon, 4; William Mulligan (conductor), 5; William Mellor, 6; William Plant, 7; Richard Collier, 8; weight of tenor about 12 cwt. In the evening for service, a 629 was rung, the ringers standing as above. On Monday morning an attempt was made for Holt's ten-part peal which came to grief in the third part, the ringers standing as before. They then dispersed, some to admire the beautiful places of interest in the neighbourhood, others to amuse themselves by boating, etc., returning home on Tuesday, after a most enjoyable outing.

A CHANCE FOR ALL.—100 cash prizes, ranging from £5 to a 1s.; given to those who send correct number of words in 119th psalm. Entrance fee 6d. Competition closes August 20th, 1890. Full list of winners published.—Address: F. WILLIAMS & Co., Church Park, Oystermouth, Glamorganshire.

ANNUAL FESTIVAL OF THE OXFORD DIOCESAN GUILD.

The tenth annual festival of this Guild was held at Buckingham on Monday, July 21st, and went off very pleasantly, the only drawback being the absence of the energetic Hon. Secretary—the Rev. Dolben Paul—occasioned by illness in his family. A very kind and hearty welcome to Buckingham from the Vicar—the Rev. F. G. Kiddle, awaited the 130 members who assembled there. Proceedings began with a service at the parish church at 11.30, the congregation being convoked by a touch of Stedman Triples on the bells. An effective sermon was preached by the Rev. W. H. Draper, Rector of Middleton Stoney, on Ps. xxii. 1, 2, in which the duty of the ringer, as a Church officer, is to be often found in the "Courts of the Lord's house," as well as the belfry, was forcibly brought out. The singing, ably led by the efficient choir and organist, was well taken up by the Guildsmen, many of whom are themselves choirmen in their several churches, and the effect was very bright and inspiring. At 1.30 the business meeting was held in the town hall, the Master—the Rev. F. E. Robinson—presiding. The Master and Hon. Secretary were unanimously re-elected, and Mr. A. E. Preston, of Abingdon, was appointed auditor in the place of Mr. Brown, of Burford, resigned. The Committee was re-appointed en bloc, a vacancy occasioned by the death of the late Mr. Rogers, of Maidenhead, being filled up by the election of Mr. John Evans, of Hughenden. Then followed the election of four representatives on the Central Council, who were the Master, the Rev. G. F. Coleridge, Mr. H. A. Cocks (Marlow), and Mr. Washbrook, the meeting being unanimous in voting the payment of their railway expenses to and from the meetings of the Council. In the absence of the Hon. Secretary and his documents, nothing transpired as to the financial, numerical or efficient state of the Guild, but we have ascertained that more than 100 new members have joined it in the present year, thus keeping the total number well above 1000; that the treasurer has a substantial balance in hand; that the Guild stands third in Mr. Attree's analysis; and that the services of the instructor are more and more sought after; four palpable tokens of success.

An adjournment was made to the dinner-table about 2.0 p.m., the Mayor of Buckingham presiding. This was followed by the usual toasts, which were duly honoured: "Church and Queen," "Success to the Guild," "the Preacher," "the Clergy and choir of Buckingham," "the Chairman." In responding for the Guild the Master observed that he hoped a peal of London Surprise (the only Surprise method not yet mastered by the Guild) would soon be accomplished by an energetic band which was about to grapple with it. He offered his own services to any of his brethren who needed advice about their bells, belfries, or ringers, and commended their efficient instructor, Mr. Washbrook, to their notice.

At 3.0 p.m., some members took train to Padbury, a neighbouring village with a handy ring of six, where they were kindly received by the Vicar. The eight-bell men returned to the Buckingham belfry to discourse on the fine ring by Mears and Co. (tenor 26 cwt.) touches of Double Norwich, and Stedman and Grandsire Triples, until at 5.30 they consigned themselves once more to the care of the London and North-Western Railway Company to take them to their homes, after a very pleasant and successful meeting.

Correspondence.

While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

STEDMAN TRIPLES.

SIR,—It is useless to prolong an utterly barren controversy. Still I cannot allow silence on my part to produce the impression that Mr. Parker's assertion (insulting as it is) is true and just, when he says that I considered anything would be good enough for those who did not understand Stedman Triples. If innuendoes of this kind are to be flung at those who write in "THE BELL NEWS" the result will be that no person of any sensibility will be found to contribute anything. I repeat that what I wrote on the subject of Thurstan's bob-and-single peal appeared to me to be a rational and intelligible account of the mental process which led the composer to produce the peal in question. The fact is, Mr. Parker and I have been looking at the same thing from two distinct points of view, and the impression left upon each is different. My contention is in no way affected by the question of the truth or falseness of the composition, which, in the case of an obsolete peal, I should not stay to inquire into. It may be false. But in that case I am sure Thurstan's never intended it for publication. I have no time to waste upon the peal now, nor do I see that any useful result can accrue to science by pursuing the enquiry; the plan and composition are both equally obsolete, and never likely to be revived. Let both pass into the oblivion prepared for them.

H. EARLE BULWER.

REPLY TO MR. LONGDEN.

SIR,—The letter of Mr. Geo. Longden in your last issue touches me so nearly, as one who took part in the said peal, that I feel bound to reply. Before, however, dealing with the main points of his letter, I wish, with your permission, to say that in my opinion Mr. Longden is actuated by a little jealousy in this matter. Of the causes which have led to this feeling I am not at liberty to speak. He point blank refused to ring in the first peal ever rung upon the bells—that of Grandsire Cinques; and when the peal had been rung he asserted he had never objected to ring in it. He has been several times asked to take a hand in the first Maximus peal, but as frequently has refused; in the meantime, however, stationing himself in the vicinity of the tower on Sundays, for the purpose of criticising our work. He cannot deny that I have suggested to him it would look much better on his part if he would join his brother-ringers in their efforts to improve themselves in twelve-bell ringing; but no, he has declared to me that if he ever went up the tower he would jump off the top. And why is all this? Simply because of his petty spite against a certain individual. But this is a private matter, and I have no right to discuss it. It pains me not a little to have to write thus of an old ringing comrade, but it is drawn from me through the fact that he has sought, by rash and direct misrepresentation, to render abortive the nearly four hours' labour of myself and others. Now, with regard to the peal. After a little study on my part, I made out his letter clear enough to enable me to say that his accusation, and not the peal, is false. Let ringers judge. He says he "heard the finish; he heard two bobs wrong, then the plain lead at home, and then they began firing, and it lasted for a whole treble lead." This is a deliberate falsehood. There was never at any time during the peal such a thing as "firing." I freely admit there was jumbling, but, as a matter of fact, it did not occur at the dodge lead home. I ask any ringer if it be possible for a peal of 12 to be "fired" for a whole treble lead, and the ringers afterwards to recover themselves and go on as if nothing had happened? This statement, in my opinion, only serves to show how far Mr. Longden's malice will carry him. He next says "What should have been a bob at home, they were, as the saying is, all of a lump, and to mend matters they rang the same lead over again." Sir, this sentence fairly staggered me. Let me say that here he displays ignorance of the composition, besides stating that which is not true. If we had, as he asserts, rung "the same lead over again," it would have caused one of the front bells to be in the hunt two successive leads, and he wants to make your readers believe that twelve men would have permitted a thing of this kind. The fact is, there were two bobs at home. Nothing wrong took place at the first bob at home, but about four changes further on the jumble I have mentioned occurred. But it did not last a whole treble lead; for I positively assert, and I think my word as good as that of Mr. Longden's, that the bells were all right six changes from home, and the end was clear and distinct. He admits we came round. Thanks! "Only once round," are his words, which are correct. This was caused by Mr. Wood calling "stand" as the bells came home, and he did this in a display of temper at the member who lost his place, and thus created the trouble.

WM. SMITH.

SIR,—The letter sent by Mr. Longden is a tissue of falsehoods from beginning to end. He states he heard the finish of the peal. I say he also heard the start and finish, much to his sorrow and dismay, for the deluded man thought we could not do without him. He also says he heard the last bob wrong come up at seven o'clock. Now, we have a clock in the ringing room, and it was betwixt three and four minutes past seven when I called the last bob wrong, so that he must not be able to tell a bob wrong. He also says we fired a whole treble lead, which is not true. We had a blunder, but it never came near firing; and as to ringing one lead over again it is simply ridiculous. Anyone who has ever rung with me know that I would not lend myself to the publication of a peal under such circumstances. The peal came round all right at ten minutes past seven, and I cried out "stand," as I felt so vexed at the party who had caused the blunder. I will conclude by calling Mr. Longden's attention to the piece of good advice given him by Mr. John Carter in "THE BELL NEWS" some two or three years ago over the 9600 of Grandsire Major—not to write about something he does not understand. He cannot tell what a course-end is, nor which of the little bells are in the slow, when he is not in the tower; and to always tell the truth.

SAMUEL WOOD.

SIR,—I was rather astonished on Saturday last to find that Mr. Longden, of Ashton, had called into question the truth of a peal of Treble Bob Maximus of which I sent you a report for your issue of July 26th, and which appeared correctly. I know Mr. Longden heard most of the peal, and he must know if he knows what I think he does about ringing, that his letter is a tissue of falsehoods, except that part where he says we came round at 7.10, which is quite correct. I rang the second in the peal, and stood right opposite the clock in the ringing-room, and when the last wrong was called it was over three minutes past seven, and had any of it been repeated as I was in the front at the last four bobs, I should have seen it, and I give such a statement a most emphatic denial. We had a little slip in the last lead, caused by a misunderstanding, which only lasted a few changes, and the last bob at home came all right. Before Mr. Longden questions another peal it would be as well to stick to the truth, and bear in mind the good old motto of the garter—Honi soit qui mal y pense.

JOHN HOPWOOD, Hon. Sec.

25, Egerton Street, Ashton-Under-Lyne.

P.S.—Since writing the above I have received the enclosed from Mr. Thorpe, and also an assurance from Messrs. J. Wood, S. Taylor, and other ringers who were in the society's meeting house close by that the peal was right.

J. H.

"SIR,—Having heard the peal from beginning to end, and composing the same, I give my name as to its truth.

JOHN THORP.

UNION TRIPLES.

SIR,—In last week's issue the Rev. C. D. P. Davies' letter appeared on the above. Mr. Davies speaks of me being compelled to use singles by handfulls. I must say that two is all that is wanted, as he can see by my one-part peal; but if singles are worth using at all I see no reason why we should be compelled to use only two, as better music can be got by them. I shall now leave it to the Exercise to compare Mr. Davies' letter with figures and Shipway's work, as I can't waste any more time on the subject, but should like the Council to take the matter in hand at their next meeting, as to what calls should be used in different methods.

JOHN CARTER.

TENTERDEN RINGERS.

SIR,—As a native of the South of England, and one who has many times listened to the music of Tenterden bells, may I ask for further information regarding the "split" between the Vicar and ringers of the ancient Cinque Port town, whose steeple is said to have been "the cause of Goodwin Sands?" Have the ringers thought too much of change-ringing and too little of service-chiming and attendance at church, or what? It would be of interest to get the clergyman's view of the question. A thorough explanation of the little difficulty would be much more satisfactory than a mere one-sided version of the affair, both to ringers and to church officials, such as yours faithfully,

BELFRY SIDESMAN.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

SIR,—Will you kindly tender my apology to Mr. Heywood and the Exercise at large for allowing the report of the peal of Bob Major at Leiston to appear in "THE BELL NEWS" in the manner in which it did. Also my thanks to Mr. Heywood for pointing out the error.

G. LINDOFF.

THE YORKSHIRE ASSOCIATION AND PRIZE-RINGING.

SIR,—After reading Mr. Stead's last letter, anyone unacquainted with ringing matters in Yorkshire could not help coming to the conclusion that the ringers of this county are either of a very selfish or else of a most disreputable character. According to his statements we will not exert ourselves to have good striking without the inducement of what he styles "healthy rivalry" in the shape of prizes; our young ringers see nothing before them but bare dry change-ringing, and therefore give up when half-learnt; our Association in place of offering prizes for good striking, has been promoting 5000 ringing; few of us are ambitious to have a large number of peals put to our credit, but we would rather have the honour of winning a prize for a half-peal than all the 5000's we can ring in a life-time, and that good ringing is greatly inferior among us to what it was fifteen years ago. This is a formidable indictment against us, and if it were true what he asserts, we ought verily, as "Free Lance" says, to hide our diminished heads in very shame. But I give a most unqualified denial to every one of these statements. Not only is there considerably more ringing done now than was the case fifteen years ago, but there is quite as much effort made in the way of good striking as there was when prize-rings were in full swing. More than that, also, methods then unknown amongst us are now rung regularly, and rung well, too. Mr. Stead must be in desperate straits for arguments in support of his proposition when all he can advance in favour of it are charges of deterioration, incompetency, and failure, against his brother ringers. It shews the weakness of his case when it has to be bolstered up with gross mis-statements and utterly false charges to keep it on its legs. Those who are acquainted with Yorkshire ringing will not be deceived by these maladversions; but those who do not might possibly through them form erroneous impressions about us; and it is mainly with the object of preventing this that I write. Mr. Stead pleads guilty to knowing little or nothing about ringing outside his own county, and if his letter be anything to go by, his knowledge of such inside its boundaries is precious little more extensive. But if he thinks that by abusing and misrepresenting his fellow members he will persuade them to vote for his motion, why, I envy his powers of imagination. He will find himself considerably deceived, nevertheless, or I am much mistaken.

YORKE SHERMAN.

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR,—Could any person kindly inform me if a peal of Stedman Triples was rung at Dereham, Norfolk, or in that district, shortly after October, 1845?

L. G.

A KIND OFFER.

SIR,—I can feel very much for our worthy friend, Mr. West, of Swansea, and if a casual visitor to their town would be of any service to them, a Society of which I am a member (not a ringing one) thinks of making Swansea its destination for a day's outing, and if so I don't mind spending four or five hours in their tower, if his ringers could make it convenient to meet me there. If he will send me his address I will let him know when we are coming, and if possible take one or two of our own ringers with me.

Obituary.

ALFRED CHAPMAN.

It is our painful duty to have to record the death of the above ringer, of Tamworth, which took place on Sunday, July 27th, at the age of 28 years. He had been in failing health for a considerable length of time, and had not took part in change-ringing for the last twelve months; but previous to his severe illness he was Captain of the local band, and also a member of the Society for the Archdeaconry of Stafford. He rang his first peal in 1887, which was the first peal rang by Tamworth ringers, and he had rung several peals since. Mr. Chapman's loss will be keenly felt by all who were acquainted with him, and in him a good ringer and true friend has passed away. On the day of his death the local company rang a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples, at the parish church, in 47 mins., with the bells deeply muffled. The funeral took place on Thursday, July 31st, at Tamworth Cemetery, and deceased was followed to the grave by a large circle of his sorrowing relations and friends, the coffin being covered with beautiful wreaths. A very beautiful artificial wreath was sent by the local ringers, in glass case. May he rest in peace.

J. T.

JAMES JAUNCEY.

We regret to announce the death of this ringer, which took place at Hertford, after a few months illness, on the 27th ult. The deceased was only 39 years of age, and a much-respected member of the Hertford College Youths. He leaves a widow and two children. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon, and the coffin, which was covered with wreaths (one "with much sympathy from his fellow-ringers") was borne to the grave in All Saints' churchyard by four of his brother-ringers, other members of the company following. The Burial Service was read by the Rev. Canon Wigram and the Rev. T. Lingley, Vicar of All Saints. Immediately after the conclusion of the service a touch of 504 Grandsire Triples was rung at All Saints' church, with the bells deeply muffled, by H. Bottrill, 1; W. L. Randall, 2; E. Holifield, 3; E. P. Debenham, 4; M. Ellsmore, 5; H. Phillips, 6; J. G. Crawley (conductor), 7; F. George, 8. The Rev. Canon Wigram, Messrs. J. Staples, H. Baker, and S. Knight were also present in the belfry. The deceased has rung seven peals of Triples—six of Grandsire and one of Stedman—and was a regular attendant at practice. His loss is deeply regretted.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 9, 1890.

As insufficient space is allowed us this week for anything in the shape of an editorial comment, we may take the opportunity of drawing attention to the necessity there exists for brevity in reports, correspondence, and other matters. Our columns are becoming more and more valuable, or rather we should say the space at our disposal. We must therefore again enjoin upon our friends to be as brief as possible in all things. That portion of our contents where our readers ventilate their opinions and grievances must be kept within bounds. Reports of meetings and outings are sometimes too elaborate, and contain particulars of very little interest only to the writer. We are often tempted to curtail "copy," but the operation when indulged in generally brings down the wrath of our readers, so it is seldom resorted to. Perhaps this hint to practise brevity will not be forgotten. Next week will appear a portrait, with memoir, of Mr. W. L. CATCHPOLE, of Ipswich.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

The quarterly meeting was held on Saturday, July 26th, at the parish church, Lancaster; members were present from Manchester, Southport, Bolton, Wigan, Bury, Heywood, Ramsbottom, and Blackburn. The attendance was not so large as the officials desired, which was no doubt in a great measure due to the long distance from the southern portion of the county, and the fact that the excursions from most of the principal towns were for the whole day only, the half-day not being available. The day being exceedingly fine and bright, the county town was seen at its best. The visitors took advantage of the splendid opportunity afforded (from the elevated position of the church), of viewing the romantic scenery of the lake, district, Morecambe bay, and Barrow. The bells are a very fine peal, tenor 32 cwt. with a splendid tone. The business meeting was held at 4.30 in the mission room. The Rev. H. J. Elsee, M. A., presided, being supported by the Rev. H. F. Lloyd, M. A., senior curate of Wigan parish church (also a ringing member), Messrs. J. Redford (secretary), R. Hill, H. H. Nutter, and J. Harrison, committee. The chairman was pleased to visit Lancaster; he supposed that this was the first meeting held by the Association in the county town. He next dwelt on the importance of ringers becoming members of the association, which he regarded as a kind of Freemasonry. He had no wish to detain them any longer as he was anxious to have a pull on the fine ring of bells. The secretary gave out a few notices and suggested the formation of a branch in the north, which was supported by Messrs. Harrison and Nutter. Mr. R. Hill proposed a vote of thanks to the vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells and the room for the meeting, also to the local ringers for their kind welcome, and having all in good order. Mr. Harrison seconded. Mr. R. S.

Hurst responded for the local ringers, and expressed a hope that the association would shortly pay them a return visit. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.

WELLINGBOROUGH, NORTHANTS.

RINGER'S WEDDING.—Last Thursday, William F. Wood, ringer of the third bell, was married at the Parish Church, the Ven. Archdeacon Lightfoot kindly coming over from his new parish of Uppingham to perform the ceremony. The ringers gathered at the belfry and rang a right merry peal as the wedding party left the church, and again at intervals during the day. In the evening all sat down to supper at the "Fox and Hounds," and partook of refreshments liberally provided by the bridegroom. The toast of the good health and happiness of the newly-married couple was proposed by Mr. E. J. Dennes (Belfry Sidesman), who testified to the value he put upon the services of Mr. Wood as a ringer, chimera and handbell-ringer, and trusted that their third-bell man would continue to take as much interest in the belfry as ever. Several capital songs were given by friends of the bridegroom, and an enjoyable evening brought to a close with the toast of the late Vicar of Wellingborough (the Ven. R. P. Lightfoot) and his successor (the Rev. R. W. Wynter), who was inducted on the 25th ult., with the usual ceremonies.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—
MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

MR. WILLIAM L. CATCHPOLE, OF IPSWICH.

[Vide Portrait.]

MR. WILLIAM L. CATCHPOLE was born at Ipswich on March 31st, 1849, and first learnt to raise a bell at St. Mary Key, Ipswich, in 1864, during the time the church of St. Mary-le-Tower was being re-built, and upon the opening of the latter bells became one of the volunteer chimers. In 1868 he was presented by one of the members of the choir (to which he has belonged for about twenty-five years) with Hubbard's 3rd edition on ringing, but he made no further advance in the art till 1876, when the St. Mary-le-Tower society was reformed (before which the bells remained silent for several months), when he was asked to become a member of the society. Owing to some three or four of the older members thinking there were too many learners, and wanting to retain the affairs in their own hands, and who left the society at the commencement of 1877, the younger members were forced to make some progress or give way to those that had left. Great credit is due to Messrs. Bowell, Reeve, and Prentice, for adhering to the fortunes of the society during that critical period, the result of their labours being manifest by the advance made by MR. CATCHPOLE in company with those bearing such well-known names as Alexander, Pemberton, and the late Wm. Kemp, who also joined the society at the same time. MR. CATCHPOLE's career may be taken to indicate the general progress of the society. The first 504 of Grandsire Triples by the society as re-organised, was rung on the following Easter Monday in the same year. The first attempt at a peal by MR. CATCHPOLE was made at Harwich in company with his old staunch friend, Mr. E. Horrex, of London, who was also a good adviser to the society at that time, but eventually he rang his first peal, which was one of Oxford Treble Bob Major, at Framsdon, on August 3rd, 1878, conducted by Mr. D. Prentice. MR. CATCHPOLE joined the College Youths in September 1878, since which time he has rung sixty-five peals in the following methods:

5200 upon 5 bells.
 Seven 720's upon 6 bells.
 Grandsire Triples, 6—conducted 1.
 „ Caters, 5—conducted 1.
 „ Cinques, 2—conducted 2.
 Stedman Triples, 2—conducted 1.
 „ Caters, 4—conducted 2.
 „ Cinques, 3—conducted 1.
 Plain Bob Major, 2—conducted 1.
 Double Norwich Court Bob Major, 6—conducted 2.
 „ „ „ Royal, 2—conducted 1.
 Oxford Treble Bob Major, 2—conducted 1.
 „ „ „ Royal, 1.
 „ „ „ Maximus, 1.
 Kent Treble Bob Major, 7—conducted 1.
 „ „ „ Royal, 6—conducted 4.
 „ „ „ Maximus, 13—conducted 5.

In the above are included one of Grandsire Triples, two of Grandsire Caters, one of Plain Bob Major, and one of Kent Treble Bob Major on handbells. The Double Norwich Court Bob Major includes 8064, the longest length at the time, and 6608, the late Mr. Haley's celebrated peal, the extent with the tenors together, being the only time this peal has been rung.

The subject of our memoir is very popular in the Eastern Counties, and shares with Mr. J. Motts, the work of conducting in the Ipswich company. He, in addition to being an accomplished conductor, is a composer of no mean capability.

THE SUSSEX COUNTY ASSOCIATION.—MEETING AT BATTLE.

The first of these pleasant gatherings at Battle, the most eastern branch in the county, was held on Monday, August 4th, and attended by between thirty and forty members. On the arrival at Hastings of a detachment from Brighton and Eastbourne, a four-horse waggonette was ready to convey them through the picturesque scenery to Battle, and the parish church was reached at eleven o'clock. Mr. Mather, the local secretary, and other members of the Battle branch, were present to welcome the visitors, and the bells were immediately started to the tune of Grandsire and Stedman Triples, the longest touches attempted during the day being 504's of each method. The bells are a fine peal of eight, with a tenor of 23 cwt., and have recently been rehung and the 7th recast. All is satisfactory excepting the "go" of the 6th, 7th, and 8th, which require further attention before one man could ring either of them through a peal of Triples or Major. A special choral service was kindly arranged and taken by the Dean of Battle, and was well attended. Luncheon took place at "The Chequers," and a business meeting followed, when in addition to the election of honorary and active members, it was unanimously resolved that the next eight-bell East Sussex district meeting should be held at Ringmer. Votes of thanks to the Dean and Churchwardens for the use of the bells, and to the local secretary for making the necessary arrangements, concluded the meeting. Through the thoughtful kindness of the Dean, permission had been obtained for the whole of the ringers to visit and inspect the interesting and historic mansion, grounds, and ruins of Battle Abbey, erected by William the Conqueror after the battle of Hastings.

LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN GUILD.

On Saturday, July 26th, the quarterly meeting of the Guild was held at Christ Church, Aughton, and was well attended, over 40 ringers being present. The bells were open for ringing at 3 p.m. and several touches of Grandsire Triples were rung until 4.30 p.m., when a short service was held in the church and was well attended by ringers. Special hymns for the occasion were sung and a good and practical address delivered by the Rector, and was listened to with rapt attention by all the ringers present. After service an excellent tea was provided through the kindness of Mr. W. L. Hutton, one of the wardens of Christ Church, after which the Rev. W. T. Bulpit proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Hutton for his kindness, and to the Rector for allowing the use of the schoolroom. At the business meeting the rector (who occupied the chair) said he had great pleasure in welcoming them there that day. The art of bell ringing was one in which he was much interested, in fact he learned to ring before many in that room were born. It had always been his hope and longing that some day he should be rector of a parish where there were eight bells, in order that he might take part in a full peal, but unfortunately before he had attained that position a misfortune on the ice had put that wish aside, as he had sustained an injury to his arms. He would gladly become a life member of the Guild. The Rev. W. L. Bulpit then read the minutes of the last meeting which were confirmed. Mr. W. Bentham then read the following report, which stated that since the formation of the Guild, successful meetings have been held at several places and the Guild heartily welcomed, and although the Guild had only been in existence for the short space of five months, yet there had joined 3 life members, 16 honorary members, and 87 performing members, making a total of 106 members, which the committee considered most encouraging; there was also a balance in hand of over £7 which did not include the balance in hand of the Benevolent Fund. There had joined as honorary members several working men, as they were unable to comply with the latter portion of the second rule, and rather than be disappointed they joined as honorary members. The report having been adopted, the Change Ringers' Mutual Benefit Society was considered, Mr. Martin thoroughly explaining his scheme, which was well received by the ringers and heartily approved of by them, and after a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding and also for the use of the bells and schoolroom, a very pleasant meeting was brought to a close. Several excellent touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples, Bob Major and Kent Treble Bob Major were rung.

(OF IPSWICH.)

SUPPLEMENT TO "THE BELL NEWS"

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

XI.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

The twelve "q" sets covering the obligations of the whole of the five-part table F (article No. X), may be conveniently arranged as in the following table:—

TABLE G.

THE "q" SETS OF THE FIVE-PART TABLE F.

S	L	H	Q
1, 7	11, 3	1, 4	7, 2
2, 8	12, 4	2, 3	8, 1
3, 12	9, 5	5, 6	12, 11
4, 11	10, 6	7, 8	3, 4
5, 6	2, 1	9, 11	5, 10
9, 10	7, 8	10, 12	6, 9

Each of the six lines under the heading SL contains a "q" set, as does also each line under HQ. The headings S, L, H, Q, denote the positions in each block to which the figures under them respectively refer, and the prefixing of a separate letter to each figure, as heretofore, is thus avoided. Taking as an example the first line, we find 1, 7 under S and 11, 3 under L. Here 1, 7 are the two S positions that interlock with one another, while 11, 3 under L are the two L positions that interlock with one another and cross-interlock with S 1, 7. As already stated, if S 1, 7 be bobbed, L 11, 3 must be plained, and vice versa. The mode of pricking peals by figures was explained and illustrated by a figured touch in article VIII, and I then said that the way to obtain the figures representing the consecutive shunts effected by the bobs would be explained later. This is accomplished by means of table G.

In connecting what follows with the reasoning of article VIII, it must be remembered that we are now dealing with a different table of P blocks to the one there referred to, and as a consequence the same figures do not apply to the same courses as then. In the figured notation the first line under the annexed heading S H L Q represents any one of the five P blocks in line 1 of table F, and the fact that 1 appears under each heading shews that throughout the course there is no shunt, and that therefore the whole of this block is used up. In the second line H and L are bobbed.

1	4	12	12

So far I am only repeating what has already been explained. Now, however, it must be noticed that the shunt, by bobbing H, from block 1 to block 4 may be found from the "q" set in table G which includes H 1. That is to say, the figures 1, 4 in this "q" set not only denote the two Hs that interlock but also the block into which the course will be shunted by a bob at this position. Thus, being in block 1, if we bob H we are shunted into block 4. If we had been, before the bob, in block 4 we should be shunted into block 1. That, in any pair of direct interlocking members of a "q" set, one should represent the bob shunt from the other is a sequitur from "q" set construction. The use of transposing scales is thus avoided, so far as concerns pricking the course-ends representing the four individual positions in a course.

Let us now take, as an example to shew the manner in which I propose to prick and prove peals, Thurstans' well-known quarter-peal, which is a five-part touch consisting of three courses four times repeated. Before commencing to prove a five-part peal or touch we must see whether the 6th is at home at the part-ends, otherwise it must be transposed so as to bring that bell into the required position, or the five-part table of P blocks, F, will not apply. In the quarter-peal in question no transposition is required. To make the procedure more intelligible, the calling and course-ends are added on the right of the figured pricking. Below are the "q" sets involved, with their respective halves headed B or P according as they require to be bobbed or plained.

PROOF OF THURSTANS' QUARTER-PEAL.

S	H	L	Q	S	H	L	Q	2	3	1	4	5	6
7	7	8	8	x	x			2	4	6	3	5	1
2	3	3	4	x	x	x		4	3	2	5	6	1
4	1	1	1		x			3	4	2	5	1	6

THE "q" SETS INVOLVED.

B	S	P	L	P	H	B	Q
1, 7		11, 3		7, 8		3, 4
2, 8		12, 4		1, 4		7, 2
5, 6		2, 1
P	S	B	L	B	H	P	Q
4, 11		10, 6		2, 3		8, 1
9, 10		7, 8

Starting from 231456 the bob at S shunts the course to block 7. We therefore place 7 under the heading S. This settles the treatment of the first "q" set, viz.: that S 1 must come up bobbed and L 11, 3 plain, should they happen to occur further on. We write, as above, this set under the heading BS, PL (bob S, plain L). As there is no bob at H we still keep in the same block and write 7 under H; this involves PH 8 and BQ 3, 4. The bob at L shunts the course from block 7 to block 8, and involves BL 7 and PS 9, 10. The Q being plain, the course-end will still remain in block 8 and involve PQ 1 and BH 2, 3. The remaining two courses must be treated in the same way, but after the first course it is necessary to be on the look out for positions of which the bobbing or plaining has been already fixed by previous "q" sets. For instance, in the second course, H is bobbed because the plaining of Q in the first course involved the bobbing of H 2, 3. Again, the following L must be plained, for the bobbing of S in the first course involved the plaining of L 11, 3. In these cases we have no fresh "q" set to write down as we are absorbing members of sets already noted.

Since the first part of the touch thus in no way contravenes "q" set requirements, and no figure appears more than once in any one of the columns S, H, L, Q, the touch is true in all its five parts. It will be well to notice that, although we have only dealt with a quarter-peal, yet the treatment of eight of the twelve "q" sets has been fixed. Thus, supposing it was intended to continue the composition to a whole peal, the advance is confined within very narrow restrictions, for only four "q" sets remain unfixed, and when one member of each of these has been introduced no further discretionary power remains, for every subsequent step is rigidly defined. From these considerations it is apparent that, in attempting to compose a peal, the pricking of four or five courses will usually shew whether the effort will end in success or failure.

"THE CUMBERLANDS" AT HUNTINGDON.

Considerable interest was manifested by the townspeople of Huntingdon in the proposed visit of members of this society, an event shadowed forth by the following announcement in the Hunts County News:—

"A CAMPANOLOGICAL TREAT.—A party of the Royal Cumberland Society, London, will visit this town and will ring peals on the bells of St. Mary's church, on Saturday evening and Monday morning. They will also ring for the ordinary services on Sunday."

Fortunately the reporter's prophecy—"will ring peals"—was actually fulfilled, and on the usual pages of this journal (in last week's issue) the reports of two very successful performances appeared, and happily for the numerous listeners, accomplished at the time stated.

The determination to visit Huntingdon arose through the remarks of the Editor calling attention to the scarcity of good ringing in this and the adjoining county of Rutland—remarks which the writer can thoroughly endorse—coupled with the fact that an able Cumberland (Mr. Sinkins) had recently established himself in Huntingdon, and was anxious to there receive a deputation of his brother-members.

The first five of those who achieved the first peal at Huntingdon hailed from the town of Slough, the rest of the visitors from London, the latter including Messrs. H. Dains, G. Newson, W.

Baron, and H. S. Thomas. The liberality of the Mayor and many other Huntingdon permitted of the chief expenses being defrayed. The courtesy of the Vicar and Churchwardens, and the assistance of Mr. Kay as steeplekeeper, was duly felt and appreciated.

By an early train on Saturday a man in advance, encumbered with a bag of eight bellropes, was conveyed to Huntingdon for the express purpose of examining the bells and fittings. He with local assistance made all careful and necessary arrangements for a successful issue. The other members of the band arrived at four o'clock, somewhat late owing to the amount of holiday traffic. On the completion of the peal an hour was spent in handbell ringing, and at the eleventh hour "Bedfordshire" was discussed, not without a few subdued jokes and sundry friendly diversions as to the pairing off of the men. In the morning several articles of apparel were either "lost, stolen, or strayed."

On Sunday the bells were rung in touches of Stedman and Grandsire Triples, for Divine Service in the morning and evening. The Vicar and Mr. Churchwarden Cummins kindly visited the belfry in the evening. Sunday afternoon, was spent by various individuals according to their own desires, the majority making it one of "rest." Mr. Sinkins kindly entertained the visitors at his residence to dinner and tea.

Bank holiday morning at 9 a.m., the first change of a peal of Major was commenced and luckily accomplished in the allotted time—thanks to the extra exertions of the tenor man by increasing the speed of ringing. A wedding ceremony, appointed at 12 o'clock being concluded, a touch was rung with Mr. H. S. Thomas on the 6th, afterwards an adjournment was made to the Fountain Hotel, and the whole band sat down to dinner, Mr. Thomas in the chair. A select company of "four" prominent ringers, (father and sons), visited the mother church of All Saints, and rang the "twenty-fours" on a set of four bells much in need of restoration and additional bells. Tune playing, double handed handbell ringing, and farewell glances round the town soon brought the time for departure near, and at 7.30 the reserved compartment of a King's Cross train was filled with homeward bound representatives of this distinguished society of change-ringers.

A Directory of Huntingdon published in 1854, on p. 290, gives particulars of Godmanchester bells; no means exist of proving the accuracy of the paragraph, which seems to suggest that it may not have been a true peal—that something of the kind was done, but was only perpetuated by hearsay evidence. Can any reader give me information concerning it?

Godmanchester which is in close proximity to the Borough of Huntingdon, was to have been visited also; however the bells were not touched owing to a severe illness near the church. The Vicar, the Rev. H. Chamberlain, M.A., has generously promised to receive the society as soon as can conveniently be arranged.

The two paragraphs here reprinted concerning the two peals of eight will conclude this report of one of the most successful and interesting visitations of the Cumberland Society.

"GODMANCHESTER.—The church is dedicated to St. Mary. In the tower is an excellent set of eight melodious and sweet toned bells, cast from the original ones (5 in number) in 1794, by Thomas Osborn, of Downham, Norfolk. The new bells were opened on 6th May, 1795, by the Cambridge and Soham ringers, who further celebrated their erection by ringing upon them a peal of 5780 changes in 3 hrs. and a half."

"HUNTINGDON, (St. Mary's).—The tower, which is at the west end, . . . Contains a peal of five bells, the best of which is the tenor, cast by Joseph Eyre, of St. Neots. Round this bell is inscribed: "I E S. Neots, fecit, 1757, Labour ipse voluptus, utile dulci: "which may be translated "Labour itself is a pleasure. Let what is useful be united with what is delightful." Another bell is inscribed: "Thomas Norris cast me 1652."

About 12 years ago Messrs. Taylor, of Loughborough, erected a new frame, increased the peal to eight, provided new fittings, etc. Since that time the town has not been fortunate enough to raise a company of change ringers. It is to be hoped that this deficiency will not long continue after the events here chronicled.

* * * Several reports of meetings and touches are unavoidably left over until next week.

WARNHAM, SUSSEX.

On Monday, July 28th, the above branch of the Sussex County Association arranged to have their annual outing, the place selected being Eastbourne, where they had obtained permission to ring at the following churches: St. Mary's, All Saints, and Christ Church, respectively. Eight of the members started on Sunday, July 27th so as to make the most of their time in visiting the various places of interest. Arriving at Eastbourne at ten o'clock they were met by Mr. Thomas Hart, of the St. Mary's band, who at once conducted them to All Saints' church, where they rang a touch of Grandsire Triples for morning service. Afterwards they took a stroll along the beach, and then the inner man was attended to. This part of the proceedings neither of the party appreciated much. This being over they visited St. Mary's church and rang a touch or two for afternoon service, when the vicar, the Rev. —. Ottley, came into the belfry and said how pleased he always was to welcome ringers to his church, and kindly wished to be remembered to the Rev. R. Bowcott and Mr. Burstow, as he could not stay to see them on Monday, having to return to London by an early train. The party then took a walk to Beachey Head with Messrs. Hart and Huggett. Getting back again some of them visited All Saints for evening service, while Mr. Chandler went to Christ Church and conducted 504 Grandsire Triples with that band. Before parting on Sunday night they arranged to start for a peal the next morning before the others arrived, but some of them not feeling inclined for a peal when the morning came, it fell through. Taking a walk along the beach they began to want their breakfast. Finding a tavern the proprietor asked if they wanted serving, which he found right well they did, especially one taking extras to the others. By this time the others had arrived, seven in number, when they at once proceeded to St. Mary's church and brought the following touches round: 336 Grandsire, 420 Bob Triples, 560 Canterbury Pleasure Major, 224 Kent Treble Bob Major, conducted by H. H. Chandler, the young ones ringing some Grandsire Doubles with 6-7-8 covering, which finished the ringing there. Visiting All Saints they rung 420 Oxford Bob Triples, conducted by Walter Charman. An attempt was also made for 576 Kent Treble Bob Major but it came to grief. It then being dinner time they made for the Garibaldi inn, where Mr. Hollobone had got a substantial dinner awaiting them to which ample justice was done by all, Mr. Siggs of the All Saints' company sitting down with them. Afterwards they proceeded to Christ Church and rang 560 Canterbury Pleasure Major in which Mr. Frederick Harding took part, conducted by H. H. Chandler. Also a course of Kent Treble Bob Major. The ringers wish through the medium of this paper to thank the vicars of the respective churches for granting them permission to ring, and also Messrs. Rollison, Smith, and Siggs, for having the bells in readiness.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN BRANCH.—The usual monthly ringing meeting was held at the church of St. John the Baptist, Tue Brook, near Liverpool, on Saturday, August 2nd. Only a moderate number of ringers were present, as being Saturday previous to Bank Holiday, several had gone away for a few days. The meeting was held in the Institute, West Derby Road, at 6 p.m., at which in the absence of the vicar, the Rev. E. P. Wethered (curate), presided, and after the minutes of the previous meeting were read and passed, he briefly addressed those present, and said that he should bring before the notice of their guild of ringers the objects of the Association and persuade them to join.

Mr. Hill (secretary) here spoke of the steady progress of the branch, and of the Association generally.

The next meeting was fixed to be held at St. Luke's, Farnworth, near Widnes (six-bell tower), on Saturday, September 6th.

A vote of thanks, passed to the vicar for the use of the bells and institute, also to the Chairman for presiding, brought the meeting to a close.

The bells were rung at intervals before and after the meeting. Methods rung—Grandsire Triples, Plain Bob Major, and Kent Treble Bob.

BRADFORD PARISH CHURCH.

On Tuesday evening, August 5th, the ringers of this church, with a few friends, met in the belfry for the purpose of uncovering a tablet recording the performance of a peal of Grandsire Caters, the first ever rung on the bells. The proceedings commenced with the ringing of a touch of Caters, after which, on the proposition of Mr. J. H. Hardcastle, seconded by Mr. James Angus, Mr. B. T. Copley was elected to preside.

The Chairman briefly explained the object of their meeting together that evening, and in the name of the members called upon their esteemed vice-president to perform the ceremony for which they had assembled.

The Rev. J. C. Wright, M.A., who on rising was warmly greeted, after expressing the pleasure which the invitation to perform that duty afforded him, humorously remarked that unfortunately he did not as yet understand the mysteries of the science of change-ringing—for a science it undoubtedly was—and confessed himself bewildered by such terms as Kent Treble Bob, Grandsire Caters, plain leads and bob leads, twin bobs and multi-bobs, and such like, which he read of in "THE BELL NEWS," but there were many things in connection with bell-ringing which could be readily understood by all, even although they were ignorant of the meaning of those technical terms. First the history of bells and ringing was a most interesting study; they could read how this mode of calling the Christian Church to prayer and praise had developed both in the making of bells and in the ringing of them. Then in connection with the ringers' work there were also exhibited so many points which characterised the life of a true man. For instance, there was precision; just as a ringer to perform his part faithfully must strike his bell exactly in the proper place, neither too soon nor too late, so would the true man be even with his conduct in daily life—neither too soon nor too late in the performance of his duties. Then there was endurance; as a peal to be successful must be continued without ceasing to the finish, so is the duty of a true man. Had our forefathers not practised that commendable virtue in the highest degree our country would not be now holding its proud position among the nations of the earth. So also the work of the ringer taught us perseverance, a mutual bearing and forbearing with one another, and a constant striving for something better. And at the end of the ringing, when he had rung his bell truly and well, there was the reward of "well done; he did his best and succeeded." Again, every man almost, had a hobby of some sort or other; and he claimed for bell-ringing that it was one of the most commendable hobbies that could be cultivated, inasmuch as not only was the ringer deriving pleasure in himself, but he was also gratifying others by the sweet sound of the bells he rung, and besides all this, was engaged in the high office of one who called the people to the House of God. Then, formally uncovering the tablet, he read the names of those who had rung the peal recorded on it, complimenting them on their performance, which was all the more noteworthy by its being the first peal of Grandsire Caters ever rung in Bradford. While wishing them every comfort in this life for a long time to come, he earnestly hoped that as their names were thus placed on the walls of the old tower in letters of gold, they might afterwards be recorded in a more lasting manner on the imperishable walls of their everlasting home in heaven.

Mr. B. T. Copley proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the Rev. J. C. Wright for his coming amongst them that evening and uncovering the tablet, and especially for the most excellent address to which they had the pleasure of listening. This was seconded by Mr. A. Moulson, and carried unanimously.

The rev. gentleman, in replying, assured them that his visit that evening had been gratifying to himself, and the remembrance of it would ever be a most pleasant one to him.

Mr. J. H. Hardcastle proposed, and Mr. Thomas Pollitt seconded, a vote of thanks to Mr. J. Broadley, the donor of the tablet, both expressing their admiration of the manner in which it had been made and painted. This motion was unanimously adopted, and Mr. Broadley briefly replied, remarking that there had been quite as much pleasure in the giving as in the receiving of it.

A vote of thanks was also accorded to Mr. Hardcastle for the present of a large framed copy of the calling of the peal, which was hung under the tablet.

The handbells were then brought into requisition, and a course of Grandsire Major rung, after which followed a touch of Caters on the tower bells, and a cleverly-tapped course of Treble Bob Royal on the handbells by Mr. J. F. Mallaby. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the evening's proceedings.

ANNUAL OUTING OF THE ST. ALBANS CATHEDRAL SOCIETY.

The members of this society had their outing on Saturday, July 26th, the destination this year being Portsmouth, via London Bridge, the Midland railway company kindly granting through tickets for the return journey. A start was made from St. Albans by the 12.44 up train, Portsmouth being reached between 5 and 6 o'clock, the journey being a very eventful one, and not likely to be forgotten for many a day. A good glimpse was obtained of Arundel Castle and the Roman Catholic Cathedral, both of which looking down, as it were, upon the insignificant railway, made a grand spectacle. With very little trouble lodgings for the whole party were obtained at the "Home" restaurant, Southsea. After a few preliminaries had been arranged, the party determined to go aboard The Victory. The good old ship was reached safely, and an inspection of her proved very interesting. As much as £10,000 has recently been spent on the old craft, and perhaps there is not much of the old ship left, but that part called the cockpit, where Lord Nelson breathed his last, is yet untouched. On board this ship there is an elaborately-chased bell, with a very brassy appearance, which was captured during the bombardment of Kertch, in the Crimean war. This bell is clappered, but owing to a tremendous crack the sound emitted from it is wretched. An oil painting representing the death of Britain's famed Admiral, surrounded by the few of his heroic comrades who survived the great and terrible conflict in Trafalgar's bay, was much admired. The old vessel is so full of historical associations, that it would be invidious to particularise them. On reaching the shore a promenade was enjoyed on Southsea pier, the strains of the band of the Yorkshire regiment adding piquancy to the walk. At 10 o'clock, the pier being closed at that hour, the party made tracks for the establishment in which they were destined to pass the night, but before many yards had been traversed an unwelcome sight was presented to them in the shape of a suicide, a man having just previously shot himself in the head with a revolver! The wound proved fatal, the man dying within five minutes after his admission to the hospital.

After partaking of supper, the party, as will naturally be supposed, went to bed; but not to sleep long, for 10! at four o'clock a terrible pitched battle with bolsters took place amongst the juvenile section of the party, and in spite of the conductor crying "stand," the conflict was continued to the bitter end, happily without bloodshed. At six o'clock a dip in the briny was had, and a stroll taken to St. Thomas's to arrange for a touch, if possible during the day. That very important person—the sexton—was discovered just before the 8 o'clock service, dusting the high old-fashioned pews, with his hat on! On being interrogated, very little information could be gathered from him, so the idea of a touch was abandoned. The important item of breakfast having been happily despatched, it was determined to visit Kingston church, having received information that it had a new ring of eight. On arriving at the church—by the way a magnificent edifice—the ringers were soon found, who with great courtesy gave up the use of their bells to the visitors. Touches of Grandsire Triples were rung, and the local company lowered the bells in peal. The service in the church was of a bright and hearty character. Some of the visitors were a little amused at the lengthy list of proposed matrimonial compacts, about twenty-seven being "asked in church." After service, all were pleased to meet Mr. Buckingham, who had arrived for the day, so after dinner an adjournment was made to the Kingston belfry, where two good touches of Grandsire Triples were rung, and in which Messrs. Hardy, Nye, and Cornish, of the local company, took part. There is quite a young band of ringers here, to which the visitors wish every success, and they regretted they could not be with them the next evening. Their great kindness and affability will not soon be forgotten. Mr. Buckingham had unfortunately to return the same evening. The hours sped on, and bed-time was at length reached. No pitched battles this time. Apple-pie beds however, became the fashion, one distinguished member of the company finding quite a miscellaneous collection of articles between the sheets, nearly enough, in fact, to start in business as a "cheap jack." After breakfast a trip was made to the Isle of Wight, through tickets being taken for Sandown. The grand scenery along the cliffs encouraged the party to proceed to Shanklin, and when this place was reached the visitors were all ready for luncheon, and that being satisfactorily disposed of, various light games were indulged in. Afterwards, St. Saviour's church was visited, and some touches of Grandsire Triples rung with the local company. Southsea was soon again reached, and the next touch was "dinner-and-tea-combined," a very harmonious method, in which all rang all their bells well. Afterwards happened the most startling incident of the journey. Owing to the intense heat, it became necessary to visit the village barber, and when the surgical operation had been performed on three, and the fourth was under the hands of the operator, an explosion of gas occurred in a neighbouring gunsmith's shop. The explosion was so strong that it shook the barber's house, and a general stampede was at once made into the street, the ringers every moment thinking the house was falling upon them. The gunsmith's shop was wrecked, and the man received some painful injuries, necessitating his removal to the hospital. The day was finished by another stroll on the pier. At night apple-pie beds were again in fashion, proving that the beach had been robbed of a great many stones. Tuesday was a very busy day. The first part was taken up with a visit to the Prince of Wales' yacht, which laid in the harbour. On the way thither, the noted Sunbeam (Lord Brassey's Yacht,) and the Discovery (the Arctic exploring boat) were passed. On reaching the yacht the party were taken over by a guide, who explained the various objects of interest, and on shewing some of the dinner services incidentally mentioned that one particular pattern cost as much as £2 5s. for each single plate! This little yacht is elegantly fitted up, as might be expected, and the party may reckon themselves exceedingly fortunate in having succeeded in going over her. A push off was next made to the Duke of Wellington flag ship, which was found to be well-equipped with modern guns and other objects of interest, the blue jackets also being very busy at gun practice, which the party carefully watched. When the ramble over the ship had been finished, a move was made for the shore, the intention of the party being to visit the dockyard. But disappointment awaited them, for the yard was closed for a few hours. At the specified time for opening, nearly all the band met at the dock gates, and were conducted over the immense yards by a gentleman in blue cloth, who rather hurried the company along, which was not to be wondered at, considering the extent of the building. The Sultan, the ironclad that was sunk in the Mediterranean some time ago, was in dry dock, and of course came in for special observation; as were also two other large ships in course of construction. After a final walk on the Southsea beach an adjournment was made for tea, and then preparations had to be made for going home, although some were inclined to sing "We won't go home till morning." At 6.45 the train carrying the St. Albans contingent (minus one who prolonged his holiday), steamed out of Portsmouth station, and all arrived safely home in the early hours of Wednesday morning. The weather throughout was magnificently fine, and the entire holiday a complete success from beginning to end. But this report would be incomplete if mention was not made of those who contributed in any small degree to further that end. Special thanks are due to the St. Peter's Society, who so very kindly rang the Cathedral bells for the Sunday services, for without their assistance the excursion could not have been undertaken.

G.W.C.

MIDHURST, SUSSEX.

On Wednesday evening, July 30th, the ringers of Midhurst church, with a few friends, assembled in the belfry to try the new silent apparatus, invented and made by one of their own members, W. W. Selby, who was assisted by W. Tribe, in fixing, etc. The Vicar and churchwardens were invited and pulled off the first three bells, and afterwards about 600 changes of Bob Minor was rung. A. B. Bennett, 1; T. E. Ellis, 2; W. H. George, 3; W. Selby, 4; C. Tribe, 5; J. Lee, 6. The apparatus worked admirably, being so arranged that it cannot miss blows if the frame-work is ever so shaky, and the work of it is very simple, being only a matter of four levers to each bell, and fixed on to the ceiling. It will be very useful to the ringers for practice, while Mr. Selby must be congratulated on providing a remedy for what was looked upon by many of the residents in the immediate vicinity as a great nuisance. A touch of Oxford Treble Bob was then rung, as a farewell to Mr. C. Tribe who is leaving the neighbourhood. An adjournment was then made to the Coffee Tavern, where a good supper was provided, the chair being taken by the Vicar, the vice by the Rev. Guy Landon. After supper, the Vicar, in a neat speech, expressed the sorrow he felt and all the ringers felt in losing one of their oldest members, and presented to Mr. Tribe a splendid book on change-ringing, subscribed for by his brother-ringers, as a token of their best wishes for his future welfare. Mr. Tribe has been a ringer at Midhurst church for thirteen years.

Our correspondent adds: "This was the first time any of us had heard a silent apparatus at work, and had never seen one. The only fault noticable was the bells seemed too harsh and a little out of tune, but as it was the first time of their being rung in rounds or changes, only being timed with the bells tied up, I think it is a lot to say that five out of six are right. It was finished in a hurry, as Mr. Tribe, one of our band, ever anxious to learn beginners, was leaving, and I felt I should like him to be one of the first to have a ring on them. I trust we as ringers may benefit by it; I am sure it will learn us to strike, the action being almost noiseless. Only the small bells are heard, and as they are very quick in action, the least bad ringing would spoil it at once."

THE NORWICH DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

WOODBIDGE BRANCH.—The members of this branch had their annual outing on Monday and Tuesday, July 28 and 29. The party proceeded by road in a waggonette provided by Mr. C. Ward, Melton, to Framsdon, where a halt was made, and a roo of Grandsire Triples rung. Debenham was next visited, but in consequence of the illness of a lady the bells were not rung. The journey was continued to Eye, where the bells were in readiness. A peal was intended, but after ringing 1200 it came to grief. Messrs. G. Day and Son also took part in some well-struck touches of Treble Bob, Grandsire, and Stedman Triples. After taking of refreshments a move was made for Diss, where several friends met them. The steeple was visited, and several touches rung in different methods, finishing up with some Stedman Triples. Afterwards a pleasant evening was spent in ringing handbells, etc., at the "Dolphin," the "Two Brewers" being the headquarters for the night. After breakfast next morning the party started on for Redenhall, where Captain Moore was waiting to welcome them. This gentleman, who is a most enthusiastic ringer, joined in several touches of Treble Bob and Grandsire Triples. Fressingfield was next visited, and the bells rung. Then on to Stradbroke, a peal of eight, and to Worlingworth, which was the last call. The six bells were merrily rung, and the party proceeded on the homeward journey, which was reached about eleven o'clock on Tuesday evening, after a most enjoyable two day's outing. The arrangements were well carried out by Mr. J. Fosdike, sen., the Master of the Woodbridge company, who desires to express his thanks on their behalf to the clergy whose churches they visited, for their kindness in granting them the use of the bells.

ALL SOULS' CHURCH, HALIFAX.

On Saturday last, the ringers of the above church accompanied by a few friends, had their annual excursion, the place this year being Liverpool, which was reached about 7.30 a.m. Crossing over to Birkenhead, breakfast was partaken of and a waggonette engaged to take the party to Eastham. Passing the extensive soap works of Messrs. Lever Bros. at Port Sunlight, Eastham was reached after a pleasant ride. The ship canal was looked at and the party returned to Birkenhead and proceeded to New Brighton by train. Returning to Liverpool Alexander Dock was next visited and the ringers were kindly shewn over the Inman liner "City of Berlin," a visit which was much enjoyed. Various places of interest in Liverpool were visited and the party got back to Halifax about 1 a.m. on Sunday.

JASPER W. SNOWDON'S WORKS.

ROPESIGHT: 1s. 6d. OUT OF PRINT. A FOURTH EDITION NOW IN PREPARATION.

STANDARD METHODS: 2s. 6d. SECOND EDITION. Contains full explanations and rules for ringing all the best methods, from five to eight bells, with plain-course diagrams of each printed in full, with coloured lines. (40 pages of diagrams and 87 of descriptive letterpress).

GRANDSIRE; 2s. 0d. THE METHOD, ITS PEALS, AND HISTORY. WITH PORTRAIT AND MEMOIR. EDITED BY HIS BROTHER, WM. SNOWDON. COMPLETE WITH AN APPENDIX BY THE REV. CHARLES D. P. DAVIES, M.A., OXON. Commences with ringing on five, six, and seven bells, for the benefit of a learner; gives instructions on composing, proving, varying, and reversing, conducting and calling round; and ends with a general survey of the practical and scientific aspect of the composition of triples—thus forming a complete reference book for all Grandsire ringers. (210 pages).

TREBLE BOB. 3s. 2½d. PARTS I. AND II. COMPLETE. Part I. contains instructions for pricking, transposing, proving, composing, and conducting peals; an essay on the In and Out-of-course of the changes; and a history of the various compositions and performances. Part II. contains classified peals of Minor, Major, Royal, and Maximus, with their reverse variations; remarks on the different qualities; particulars of first performances, composers' names, &c., &c. The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 16, 1890.

WE are again treated to the vapourings of one of those splenetic individuals who at times think they are making themselves important by attacking bells and ringers. Elsewhere will be seen a paragraph sent by one of these people to a local paper. The writer in this case is evidently suffering from mental derangement, and his fear that his "poor brain has almost become touched" has evidently become realised. His friends, if he has any, should at once place him under restraint. Ringers are now denominated as "fiendish-looking individuals." That is a very charitable expression, and we should not wonder if it is the production of a fiendish-minded, ranting, canting dissenter, whose hourly conduct is hypocritical and contemptible. That is all we will say about such a writer. It is however matter for surprise that the Editor of a respectable provincial newspaper has allowed his columns to be defiled by such balderdash.

Correspondence.

While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

THE PEAL AT ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

SIR,—The letters in your last issue respecting the above are all falsehoods, as any ringer can see at a glance. In the first letter the first part is all rubbish. The second part that deals with the question I will reply to. In the first place they had jumbling, but not firing—what difference is there? none in their case. I did not say that it was at the dodge lead at home. I said that it was at a bob at home; and he says that I am ignorant of the composition. That I am to a certain extent, but I can tell them what the calling of the last course was; they two bobs at the middle and two wrong, and they should have two at home but had three; and then he says "would twelve men permit of ringing two leads over again?" I can say, without fear of contradiction, that there was not three men that rang in the peal that could tell if they had rung the same lead over again, Mr. Smith included. And then he says that nothing took place at the bob at home. They were all of a jumble as he calls it, and he admits of jumbling for thirty-eight changes, that is not far off a treble lead of his own telling. As regards the third letter I don't think Mr. Hopwood capable of being a judge. Not many weeks ago we started for a peal of Treble Bob Royal at Manchester. Mr. H. was ringing the 2nd in that attempt, and we had not gone more than three leads before he was coursing the 6th (no bob being called) and should have been coursing the 3rd; so I think that a ringer that cannot keep his place in the plain course in the same method is not allowed to be a judge. Now for Mr. Thorp's letter. If he will tell the truth he never heard the finish of the peal. He told me that they (those members and himself) that sent assurance to have their names put to the P.S.) were in the meeting-house playing at tipit, and they had a bother about the time they came round; but he said they had a bad blunder about half-past four, in which the 11th ringer got lost; and he also said that he asked them when they came down if they had not broken down. I say it still, and there is not one of the whole band who will convince me to the contrary, that they fired for a whole treble lead, and they rung the same lead over again to get straight. GEO. LONGDEN.

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—The peal rung at St. Martin's, Salisbury, on 30th July, should be recorded as rung by the Salisbury Diocesan Guild. W. W. G.

THE CHEPSTOW PEAL.

SIR,—Absence from home and other business has delayed my answering Mr. Smith and Mr. Watkins. In answer to Mr. Smith I wish to say that I hope to have the pleasure of visiting Chepstow again, and should much like to hear a better peal rung. I believe him when he says he does not want me there. In the best of ringing there is always room for improvement. In reply to Mr. Watkins I would point out that there was nearly four minutes' difference between the time in which each half was rung, and the bells were much too quick at the start. It would have been no advantage to me to have had the peal reported if it had not been fairly called and rung. I have not endeavoured to evade any point at issue, and have stated all that is necessary. Should the National Central Council like to take the matter up I shall be glad to stand by their decision. W. H. FUSSELL.

THE RECENT PEALS AT HUNTINGDON.

SIR,—I do not object to these performances being recorded in our company's book by no means. What I object to is the composition of the band. When a representative team of our company is to go anywhere for such a purpose as the one at Huntingdon, it is thought by myself and others that those members who sustain the prestige of our Society should be among those invited. Such members as Mr. Baron, Mr. Dains, and Mr. Newson are seen always with approval, but what on [earth] is the standing of the brothers Fussell and Mr. Thomas? One of the former has got into hot water about calling a peal, the other certainly cannot be classed as a superb ringer, while Mr. Thomas I hardly know. Such men as Messrs. Rogers, Swain, and others I could name ought to be invited for such purposes. These invitations should be thrown open, and settled by the company who is to go. If this plan had been the case with the Huntingdon job, I don't think that three of the band who did go would have went.

Obituary.

WILLIAM SCHOLEFIELD.

It is with the deepest regret that we have to record the death of W. Scholefield, of Ossett, on the 2nd inst. He was a member of the Yorkshire Association, and belonged to the local company at Holy Trinity church, Ossett, where he rung peal on April 12, 1884.

SUDDEN DEATH IN THE BELFRY.

On Monday last Mr. H. Moore, coroner for the district, conducted an inquest at the "Lion" Inn, Weobley, on the body of Thomas Scandrett, aged 29 years, who died suddenly whilst performing his duty as bellringer at Weobley church, the previous (Friday) night. The body was identified by Elizabeth Scandrett as that of her husband. John Probert deposed that he was with deceased in the belfry of Weobley Church on Friday night last, the 27th of June. Deceased was one of the ringers, and he might have been ringing five minutes when witness saw him fall suddenly on to the side of his face. He did not speak afterwards and had not complained previously. The rope turned him over after he had fallen, but it in no way threw him. It was about 8.30 p.m. when this took place. He died in a few minutes afterwards. Dr. Walker, Weobley, said that the post mortem examination he had made of the deceased's body showed that he suffered from heart disease, all the other organs being healthy. The immediate cause of death was bursting of a blood-vessel on the brain. There were no marks of violence, and the exertion of ringing the bell was too much for his heart. A verdict to the effect that deceased died suddenly from the bursting of a blood-vessel on the brain was returned. The interment took place in the parish churchyard, the funeral service being impressively read by the Rev. J. S. Crook, M.A., Vicar. There was a large number of spectators present.

YET ANOTHER MANIAC.

The following is taken from The Heris Advertiser :—

"I am certain that the composer of 'Chime again, chime again, beautiful bells,' did not live in St. Albans, because if he had he would never have written it. It is all very well for certain fiendish looking individuals who go by the name of 'change ringers' to make our beautiful summer evenings hideous with campanological conundrums which go by the name of grandsire couples and grandmother triplets, or something of the sort, but I think it is quite time that we, the suffering public, should demand that our nerves should be accorded a little compassion. Really what with one variety of touch on the St. Peter's bells, another on the Abbey, with the droning of St. Michael's bells thrown in, my poor brain has almost become touched, and will be quite if the nuisance is not tolerated."

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

The Annual Meeting of the above Association was held at Bristol on Monday, August 4th.

The day's proceedings commenced with service in the Lady Chapel of St. Mary Redcliffe at 11.30, the officiating clergy being the Revs. H. B. Beckwith (curate), J. G. Alford (vicar of St. Nicholas), H. A. Cockey (Master, vicar of Oldland), and Pitt Eykyn (Hon. Sec., vicar of Magor). The Rev. C. W. H. Griffith, Master of the Bath and Wells Diocesan Association, and W. H. B. Harvey (Chipping Sodbury), were also present. The congregation comprised about forty-five ringers and about a dozen ladies. The vicar of St. Nicholas preached an appropriate and impressive sermon, taking as his text 1 Cor. xii. 13.—"Covet earnestly the best gifts."

At the conclusion of the service a touch of Grandsire Cinques was attempted on the grand ring of twelve at Redcliffe, tenor 48 cwt., but was not brought round.

An adjournment was then made to the Parish Hall, which had been kindly placed at the service of the Association by the vicar of Redcliffe.

Dinner was served at 1 p.m., the chair being occupied by the vicar, the Rev. C. E. Cornish, who was supported by the above-mentioned clergy, and Messrs. C. E. D. Boutflower (local secretary) and R. Lewis (secretary of the Bath and Wells Diocesan Association). Dinner ended, and the usual loyal toasts having been duly honoured, the Chairman proposed "Success to the Gloucester and Bristol Association," coupling with the toast the name of the Master. He said that as a Bristol clergyman he felt very grateful to the society for the work it had done, and hoped that the time was not very far distant when in every parish, not only of Bristol, but of the whole diocese, they would find a branch of the Association at work. The Association had already done very good work in promoting belfry reform, encouraging ringers in steady and respectable habits, and removing from our belfries much that was to the shame and discredit of the parishes of England. He trusted that the rules and purposes of the Association would penetrate into the most remote parishes of the county.

The Master in responding, said that the great object of the Association was not only to make good change-ringers, but good churchmen, who would understand that their work was closely connected with the Church, and that they were Church workers, for this was the best way of improving the moral tone of ringers, and of doing away with the abuses which had existed in former days, and he was sorry to say, still existed in very many places. Another good work which the Association had in view was the bringing together of her members at such meetings as the present in friendly intercourse, in order that they might make each other's acquaintance, and after a friendly pull together, banish those petty feelings of envy and jealousy once so common between ringers belonging to different societies and different parishes, and even now existing to so great an extent as to be one of the greatest stumbling-blocks in the way of true brotherhood and unity amongst ringers.

The health of the preacher having been proposed and duly honoured, the business of the meeting was taken in hand. The minutes of the Cirencester meeting was read and passed, and the following new members were elected: Revs. H. B. Beckwith, C. W. H. Griffith, and Messrs. R. Lewis, J. Fussell, and T. Radford.

It was decided on the proposition of Mr. Howell, that the next meeting should be held at Thornbury.

In the course of a discussion which arose on the performance of their duties by Committee men, the Master, referring to a remark which had been made about "Instructors," drew attention to the fact, which evidently had not been realised by many of those concerned, that in the Gloucester and Bristol Association there is no permanent official in this capacity. He explained that whenever an application was made to the officers from any parish in the diocese for the assistance of an "Instructor," the officers selected a member of the Association whom they might consider best fitted to act in this capacity, both on account of his skill, and of his proximity to the place where his services were required, and authorised him to act as their Instructor for a period of three months or more. But he wished to call attention to the fact that when he ceased to give instruction under the Association at this particular place, he ceased to be an "Instructor" to the Gloucester and Bristol Association.

The proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman. The principal ringing during the day was as follows:—A peal of Grandsire Triples, Holt's ten-part, at St. Saviour's, Bath, in the early morning; and in the afternoon 528 Grandsire Cinques at St. Mary's; 504 Stedman Caters at St. Nicholas; a quarter-peal of Stedman Triples at All Saints, and 216 of Grandsire Caters at St. Mary's; and touches of Triples, etc., at the Temple Church, St. Mary-le-Port, St. Peter's, St. Michael's, and St. Luke's, Bedminster.

The band who rang the quarter-peal at All Saints were Messrs. Gardner, Daltrey, H. L. and E. B. James, S. Romans, C. Price, S. Reeves, and the Rev. H. A. Cockey. The same band, with the assistance of Messrs. J. Hinton, F. Price, C. Gordon, W. J. Sevier, G. Colston, and F. K. Howell, took part in most of the touches specified above.

DALTON-IN-FURNESS, LANCASHIRE.

On Wednesday, July 30th, the members of the parish church, had their annual outing, Brathay and Ambleside being the places selected. Leaving Dalton shortly after seven o'clock, the party reached Brathay about half-past ten. After ascending the tower and raising the bells a 720 of Grandsire Minor (thirty-eight bobs and twenty-two singles), in 21 mins. T. R. Jackson, 1; T. P. Jackson, 2; J. Spencer, 3; M. Caddy, 4; T. Suart, 5; J. Burrows (conductor), 6. Also 240 Grandsire Minor. A. E. Shepherd, 1; T. P. Jackson, 2; M. Caddy, 3; T. Suart, 4; T. Townson, 5; J. Burrows (conductor), 6. Also 240 Plain Bob Minor, standing as above. And also 120 of Grandsire Doubles: A. E. Shepherd, 1; T. P. Jackson, 2; M. Caddy, 3; T. Suart, 4; J. Burrows (conductor), 5; J. Gibson (first 120), 6. They then made their way to Ambleside parish church, where an attempt was made for a 720 of Grandsire Minor, which came to grief three leads from home; T. Smart, 1; T. Townson, 2; G. Spencer, 3; M. Caddy, 4; T. R. Jackson (conductor), 5; J. Burrows, 6. Then they adjourned to Cowell's temperance hotel, for dinner, where full justice was done. Returning to the tower again several touches of Plain Bob Minor, Grandsire Minor, and Grandsire Doubles were rung. Leaving Ambleside again at 7.30, Dalton was reached about 8.30, everyone being well pleased with the outing. The company wish to return thanks to the vicar and churchwardens of the above named churches for their kindness in allowing them the use of the bells. Also on Sunday, August 3rd, for evening service, a 720 Plain Bob Minor (sixteen bobs and two singles), in 24 mins. A. E. Sheppard, 1; T. P. Jackson, 2; M. Caddy, 3; T. Suart, 4; T. R. Jackson (conductor), 5; G. Burrows, 6. This is the first 720 of Plain Bob by A. E. Sheppard, and the first 720 with a bob bell by T. P. Jackson.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

ROSSENDALE BRANCH.—The usual monthly meeting was held at Newchurch on Saturday, August 9th. There were twenty members present. Several 500's of Grandsire Triples were rung on the bells. Two new members were elected. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Rawtenstall on August 30th.

J. SHEPHERD, Branch Sec.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE BELLRINGERS.—In the Whitehall Evening Post, November, 1754, is a paragraph stating that "ROBERT GIBBS, of Winslow, in the county of Bucks, had six sons, Robert, Richard, William, Thomas, John and Stephen, which sons rang the bells of Winslow church on New Year's Day, for forty years in succession. The senior son rang the tenor, and every son had his bell in right of seniority, and they were every New Year's Day entertained at dinner by the worthy family of Lowndes at Winslow." Three of the said sons—Richard, William and Stephen, were said to be then living at Winslow. These six brothers were the progenitors of Mr. Robert Gibbs, F.S.A., of Aylesbury, the well-known journalist, local historian, and antiquary.—Clear's History of Windsor.

RINGERS' OUTING.

ON Saturday, July 19th, the members of the Christ Church society, Bacup, who are also members of the Lancashire Association, had their annual outing, the place selected being Waddington, Yorkshire. Starting by the first train from Bacup, Clitheroe was reached a little before nine o'clock, where breakfast had been ordered, and the ringers being ready for it a start was made at once. After breakfast a waggonette was waiting to take them through the country to Staidburn, stopping at Bolton by Bowland, to go through the stables and over the grounds of Bolton Hall, which is a treat never to be forgotten. Again mounting the four-wheeler they were soon on their way to Slaidburn, arriving there about two o'clock. Having ordered dinner the party visited the church while it was being got ready, and rang a 720 of Plain Bob. W. Ormerod, 1; A. White, 2; Z. Lord, 3; A. Chew, 4; J. Smith, 5; W. Smith (conductor), 6. Afterwards the party had a look round the church, then to dinner which they did ample justice to, after which they had a short stroll by the river side and back again to the waggonette, which was waiting to take them to their destination. Starting at once they drove through Dunmow Park and over the fells to Waddington, where the ringers of that place were waiting to greet their old friends from Bacup. After many a grip of the hand, and tea being ready, they were soon dodging among it, after which the evening was spent with songs and recitations until bed time, when all went to bed tired with their first day's outing. Being up by four o'clock in the morning, a good walk made them ready for their breakfast, after which they went to the church and rang 720 Oxford Single for service. W. Ormerod, 1; J. Hardman, 2; A. White, 3; A. Chew, 4; J. Smith, 5; Z. Lord (conductor), 6. Another short walk in the country brought dinner time, to which ample justice was done. After a little rest they were in the tower again ringing 720 College Single for afternoon service. W. Ormerod, 1; A. White, 2; Z. Lord, 3; A. Chew, 4; J. Smith, 5; W. Smith (conductor), 6. Time now being short they had to get ready for their homeward journey, and after bidding good-bye to the Waddington ringers a start was made for Clitheroe station which was two miles off. Arriving there in time they were soon off to Blackburn, at which place they had to wait an hour before their train started. It being fine they made for Trinity Church and rang 720 Plain Bob. W. Ormerod, 1; J. Hardman, 2; A. White (conductor), 3; Z. Lord, 4; J. Smith, 5; W. Smith, 6. Returning to the station they were soon on their way home, Bacup being reached a little after nine o'clock, all being well pleased but tired with their two days' outing. The ringers take this opportunity of thanking the rev. gentlemen for the use of the bells, and also to the ringers for the manner in which they received them.

KETTERING, NORTHANTS.

The Ringers met at the belfry on Monday evening, and had their last "pull" in the old ringing-room where Kettering ringers have handled the ropes for generations past. The old frame (dating back to the year 1714, when the peal was increased to eight) is now to be removed, the bells re-hung in modern style by Messrs. Taylor of Loughborough, and the defective third bell replaced by a new one kindly given by a parishioner. It is to be hoped that the old peal tablets will be carefully removed and placed in the new ringing-room. The oldest tablet records the ringing of 5,040 Grandsire Triples in 3 hours 18 minutes, in the year 1729. Kettering church is now undergoing complete restoration.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—
MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

XII.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

Before analysing the mode of composing and proving an entire peal it is necessary to elucidate a further point. I do not propose at present to enter into any arguments with a view of demonstrating the impossibility of obtaining a peal by means of bobs only; let us take for granted that none can be produced without the use of at least two singles. It is then clear that the whole of the sixty P blocks cannot be absorbed into one "block," by which term is signified here not an individual P or B block, but any number of courses so connected by bobs as to form a circle ending where it began. A touch is such a block, but rounds is not of necessity found in every block. The plan to be followed in Stedman, as in all other Triple methods, is to absorb the whole of the P blocks into two or more large blocks, which large blocks are then connected by singles. The process of singling blocks together is one of extreme delicacy, which I do not intend yet to describe; suffice it to say that when the 60 P blocks have been absorbed into two large blocks, these can invariably, so far as my experience goes, be singled together so as to form a peal.

We will proceed, then, with the consideration of how to form the two blocks which produce a peal.

Still adhering to the five-part plan it is evident that, if we can form two shunting parts which between them absorb portions equivalent to one block from each of the twelve lines of table F (article No. X.), each of these parts being four times repeated, two five-part blocks result. These two blocks are only under exceptional circumstances of equal length; it is far easier to obtain them unequal. When we attempt to compose, we shall find that there is a strong tendency for rounds to come as the part-end. Such a part, being non-shunting, is of course useless, as it fails to introduce the other four parts. Now, by inspecting the figured notation of Thurstans' quarter-peal given in article No. XI., it will be seen that there is nothing in the figures to indicate whether the part-end will shunt or not. The last course-end is 1, which may be rounds or any one of the other four course-ends in line 1 of table F; the only way to discover whether it is rounds or not being to prick the course-ends of the part in full. But now comes a curious fact, namely, that if a shunting part-end is obtained, no matter how many courses there may be in the part, the remainder of the twelve courses, which will form the part for the other block, will also shunt. If the first part obtained is non-shunting the complementary part will also be non-shunting. Therefore it is useless to work out the part complementary to a non-shunting part in the hope of obtaining a shunt.

A simple way is to take a one-course shunting part, such as that produced by bobbing SH from 251634 in the peal below; then the remaining eleven courses may be arranged in any manner that will absorb the remaining eleven lines of table F. By thus starting with a known shunting part, the possibility of a correct complementary part is assured.

We may now consider the production and proof of an entire five-part composition, and for this purpose I will select my No. 1 peal as being an easy example to analyse. Attention may perhaps have been attracted to the unwieldy number of "q" sets that were written down in obtaining the proof of Thurstans' quarter-peal (article No. XI). A great saving of time and labour will be effected if it be definitely decided to treat the whole of similar positions in a similar manner. Thus, let it be resolved that all the S and Q positions shall be bobbed, in which case it follows that all the . and H positions must be plained. Then if all the exceptions to this treatment are written down, we shall have the requisite information in a convenient form. In the following peal there are only three "q" sets that do not conform to the treatment decided on. These are given below. The calling and course-ends are also inserted for clearness, although, as has already been pointed out, they are not needed by the experienced composer. The L column is also needless as no L position is bobbed, and this column is consequently only a duplicate of the H column.

7	7	7	2	x			x	5	4	1	3	2	6
8	8	8	8	x				2	4	6	3	5	1
2	3	3	4	x	x		x	4	3	2	5	6	1
11	9	9	6	x	x		x	3	5	4	6	2	1
5	6	6	9	x	x		x	5	6	3	2	4	1
10	10	10	10	x				4	6	1	2	5	3
9	11	11	11	x	x			6	5	3	2	1	4
4	4	4	3	x			x	1	2	3	5	6	4
12	12	12	12	x				6	2	4	5	1	3
3	2	2	7	x	x		x	2	5	6	1	4	3
1	1	1	1	x				4	5	3	1	2	6
6 5 5 5				x	x			2	5	1	6	3	4

B	H	P	Q
2, 3		8, 1
9, 11		5, 10
5, 6		12, 11

There are here two blocks, the first consisting of eleven courses the last of one course. Each of these, as will be seen from the course-ends, is a shunting block, and will therefore repeat four times. In each of the columns S, H, L, Q appear all the figures from 1 to 12 inclusive, therefore the whole of the P blocks of table F are absorbed. Again every S is bobbed and every L is plained; also every H is plained and every Q is bobbed, except such Hs and Qs as are noted under the headings BH and PQ. Therefore all "q" set requirements are complied with, and the two blocks merely require to be singled together to form a peal.

No difficulty will be found in interpreting the peal as above presented if reference is made to the full description of the proof of Thurstans' quarter-peal contained in article No. XI. In comparing the two productions, the regularity of the treatment in the peal of the S and L positions contrasts strongly with the mode adopted in the quarter-peal, and, although the best productions are not on this regular plan, there is a reason in addition to those already given which will incline the less enterprising composers to adhere to it. This reason I will state.

There is among ringers a strong and well-grounded objection to six consecutive bobs. The twin-bob construction possesses the great virtue of not requiring more than four bobs together. To introduce six bobs is to take a distinctly retrogressive step towards the old multibob peals, and should therefore be as widely discouraged as possible. The sole case in which a six-bob set should be deemed permissible is where it is otherwise impossible to illustrate a particular class of composition. In other words, peals containing such sets should be for the student and not for the conductor. Now if, in composing, either the S or L position is plained throughout, it is clear that six consecutive bobs can never occur, and hence the advantage of this treatment. On the other hand, by proceeding thus, a considerable number of four-bob sets are entailed, and to get the best compositions, consequently, the S and L positions must be variably treated at the risk of a six-bob set turning up to mar the peal.

Further, the desirability of having the press of bobs in the S, H, and L positions as far as possible reduced makes it advisable to take as a basis the bobbing of Qs and consequent plaining of Hs rather than the opposite, although it will not be found possible to insert more bobbed Qs than bobbed Hs into a five-part composition formed in two blocks, because of the necessity for the introduction of at least six of the latter calls. To attempt to explain the peculiar connective powers of H bobs would be to trench upon the area of Mr. Bulwer's discoveries; I will therefore only say that if no Hs are bobbed a composition will fall into a number of small blocks which can then only be connected into a peal by the use of a number of singles.

I trust that the foregoing example of the pricking and proof of a five-part peal, in conjunction with what has previously been advanced, will sufficiently demonstrate the principles of twin-bob composition, and shew how far more simply and expeditiously a 5040 of Stedman can be produced and proved than a peal in any other Triple method.

The distinction between five and ten-part compositions will be explained when we come to consider singles, the management of which calls will form the subject of the next paper. As a scale of course-ends may prove useful in working out the above and subsequent peals, a table comprising them all is appended. It will be noticed that three of the course-ends are producible by an alternative calling. These are marked respectively a, b, and c. Another point deserving of attention is that the calling S L Q produces rounds, like M B W in Treble Bob Major; consequently, except between singles, neither the sequence S L Q, L Q S, or Q S L can be used. This disability, coupled with the necessity of avoiding also the six-bob sequence S H L, causes variety in the calling to be less practicable than the amplitude of the following table would lead us to expect.

ST. MICHAEL'S, COVENTRY.

On Friday, August 1st, a meeting was held at the "King's Head" inn, Coventry, when the Working Men's Bell Tower Canvass Committee handed over to Mr. George Woodcock the result of their labours. The proceedings were of a most interesting character, great enthusiasm being manifested in the assurance that at no distant time the splendid bells of St Michael's may be again heard.

MR. WOODCOCK, upon receiving the papers, was loudly cheered. He afterwards congratulated the committee upon the result of their labours, and said the fact of 8,391 householders out of a possible eleven thousand being in favour of a campanile, must prove to all how unanimous the feeling was that they might again hear the bells, clocks, and chimes. He would undertake to convey the papers to the vicar and churchwardens of St. Michael's, together with the list of canvassers, and see that they were deposited in the parish church. Should another Mr. Andrews in years to come turn up, he would be able to find evidence of the means taken to bring about what the present Mr. Andrews had discovered from an old minute book was contemplated in 1793, namely the erection of a separate tower for the bells, to thereby put beyond jeopardy and further risk the tower and spire, which had been handed down five hundred years. He could assure the whole population of Coventry and neighbourhood that that alone had been his object and nothing more, notwithstanding anything said, written or printed to the contrary. He thought even the gentlemen who arranged the public meeting for considering what should be done with the bells, and who quoted the result in furtherance of their own views in favour of chiming, must now admit that it could not have represented the real feeling of the inhabitants of the city. Many who signed the requisition for chiming had since explained to him personally that they did so under a misconception, had assured him of their desire to see a bell tower, and had promised subscriptions towards the cost. Some objected to a new tower through fear that it would interfere with the present architectural beauties of the existing steeples, and others because they did not believe that the poor old city could find £5,000—the sum which he stipulated should be provided by the town as an earnest of their desire to have the tower. He trusted, however, that the doubt would now be removed. He had never for one moment entertained a doubt upon that point. As a matter of figures, if the 8,400 people who had signed would undertake to contribute one penny a week for two years, the amount required to make up the £5,000 would be more than covered. If others shared this faith in the liberality of the citizens, no time should be lost in commencing the work. Indeed, acting on his own responsibility and faith, he had already communicated with three of the highest architectural authorities of the day, with a view to ascertaining whether they would advise the committee as to the best site, and act as assessors upon the designs which he suggested should be obtained from five of the leading church architects. He had received favourable answers from the three gentlemen—Mr. Ewan Christian, Mr. Alfred Waterhouse, and Mr. Norman Shaw—he had asked. He suggested the formation of a general committee to carry out the project, such general committee to appoint a small sub-committee consisting of the Vicar as freeholder, two gentlemen representing the subscribers opposed to the scheme, and two of those in favor of it. This committee would confer with the experts as to site, and prepare a specification from which designs could be invited. The committee would also take steps to collect what funds were necessary. He did not ask for too much money, and he felt sure all would help. As to the collection of funds from the public, he said their half would not increase; his possibly might. The money would be forthcoming, and the result would be the erection of one of the handsomest campaniles not only in England but throughout the continent. He announced, amidst cheers, his intention of presenting a three-and-a-half ton bell, upon which the clock should strike the hours, and added that although circumstances would soon necessitate his continued absence from Coventry he should, even if he was in Russia, come to hear the bells for the first time. He concluded by thanking the committee for their exertions, expressing the hope that the citizens would contribute liberally to the fund. A vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Woodcock for meeting the committee, and a similar compliment to the chairman for presiding, after which the proceedings terminated.

THE ST. SIDWELL'S SOCIETY, EXETER.

On Saturday, August 2nd, the members of this Society held their annual outing, North Devon being chosen. Leaving Queen Street Station at 11.45 a.m., Umberleigh was reached, and a pleasant walk of two miles brought them to Chittlehampton tower, one of the finest in Devon, where hangs a nice-going peal of eight bells, tenor 16 cwt., cast by Evans, of Chepstow, in 1739. The bells were soon set going to Grandsire Triples, and after several hours of pleasant ringing the bells were lowered in peal, and a move was made for Barnstaple. Here the "Bell" hotel was selected for headquarters, and after justice had been done to a substantial supper, the party retired to rest for the night. Pilton, near Barnstaple, saw the party at 8.0 a.m. on Sunday. Here was found a very fine peal of eight, tenor 25 cwt. in D, cast by Rudhall in 1712. Very little ringing was done here owing to the bad state of ropes and bell-gear, the belfry being little less than a dungeon, it being necessary to resort to farthing dips stuck upon sticks to see at all. On complaining of the bad state of affairs they were informed that two local wheelwrights have been instructed with the rehanging of this fine peal, so that intended visitors will know what to expect at a future visit. On leaving the belfry they were surprised to meet Mr. Ernest Bishop, of Swindon, and invited him to partake of some ringing with them at Braunton, five miles from Barnstaple, in the afternoon. A few 6-scores were also rung at the old church, Barnstaple, a fine ring of six, tenor 22 cwt., cast by Bryant, of Hertford, in 1803. After dinner a brake and pair was in readiness and a most enjoyable drive by the river side brought them to Braunton. Here hangs a very pretty peal of eight, tenor 18 cwt., cast by Evans, of Chepstow, in 1713, recently rehung by Stokes, of Woodbury, and they go like fiddles. Touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples were rung and highly appreciated by the natives. A return was then made to Barnstaple for the night's rest. Next morning a start was made for Bideford, ten miles by rail, and the tower visited, which contains a peal of eight, tenor 16 cwt., cast by Rudhall in 1722. Here an attempt was made for a peal, but owing to the false striking of the bells, especially the 6th, which was found cracked soon after the bells were rehung, the attempt was given up after 1 hr. ringing. These bells were rehung and the two trebles founded by one, Abbott, of Bideford, in 1876. After dinner a return was made to Barnstaple, and a journey of two miles up the river Taw brought them to Tavistock. In the tower of the parish church hangs a splendid peal of six bells, tenor 19 cwt., cast by Evans in 1753, and recently rehung by Stokes, and go well. A few 6-scores having been rung, a pleasant walk home brought the party to Barnstaple, which was left by the last train for Exeter, and so ended one of the most enjoyable outings the Society has ever held, the weather being all that could be desired. They wish to return their best thanks to Rectors, steeplekeepers and North Devon ringers for the courtesy shown them during their holiday.

BASINGSTOKE, HANTS.

Thursday, August 14th, 1890, will not quickly be forgotten by the members of the local band of the Winchester Diocesan Guild in this town. On that day a wedding of exceptional interest took place at the parish church, the contracting parties being Lieut. Ewan Cornwallis Cameron, of the Royal Horse Artillery, and Miss Kathleen May, youngest daughter of the late Thomas May, Esq., of Brook House, Basingstoke. The ringers met in the belfry at 9.30 a.m. to attempt a peal of Grandsire Triples, and at 9.35 a start was made. All went well, not a single trip of any consequence occurring throughout, and at 12.25 the welcome words "that's all" told that the first peal on the bells ever rung by a local band had been successfully accomplished. Mr. F. Bennett, of Guildford, who held the keys of the tower while the peal was in progress, and who heard the greater part of it, then came into the belfry, followed by Mr. Frank (sidesman) and Mr. H. Loe (churchwarden), both hon. members of the Guild, who congratulated the ringers on their success. The whole party then proceeded to the vicarage grounds, where they were photographed by Mr. B. H. Gidney, of Basingstoke. After the wedding ceremony, which took place at 2 p.m., and with the assistance of Mr. F. Bennett (a former member of the local band) a start was made for another peal, and soon the bells were rolling merrily along to the tune of Bob Triples. Success again crowned their efforts, and by 5.50 the second peal had been safely brought round. In the evening, by the kindness of Lieut. Col. May (uncle of the bride, and an hon. member of the Winchester Diocesan Guild), the ringers with a few friends, numbering in all about twenty-five, were served with a capital dinner in a room tastefully decorated with flags and bunting, at the rear of the "Rose" inn, Mr. H. Loe and Mr. F. White occupying the chair and vice-chair respectively. In addition to the usual toasts, those of "the Bride and Bridegroom," and "the Donor of the feast, Col. May" (who has for many years been a staunch friend and a liberal supporter of the ringers) were submitted and received with enthusiasm. The company broke up shortly before midnight, having spent a very pleasant evening, their success in the earlier part of the day having added not a little to their evening's enjoyment.

THE ST. MICHAEL'S SOCIETY, MELBOURNE, DERBYSHIRE.

On Monday, August 11th, the above Society had its usual outing, the destination being Cleethorpes. Leaving Melbourne at 6.30 a.m. a pleasant ride of about four hours' duration, interspersed with touches on the handbells, and amusing anecdotes, landed the party at Grimsby Docks, where they were met by the genial clerk of St. Andrew's, who conducted them to the church where hangs a fine peal of eight, tenor about 16½ cwt., by Messrs. Warner. Before testing the tower bells, a course of Grandsire Caters was rung upon the handbells belonging to the St. Andrew's Society, by the following: G. C. Tunnicliff, 1-2; Jos. Warren, 3-4; H. Hollingworth, 5-6; H. C. Woodward, 7-8; J. R. Wood, 9-10. Touches of Grandsire and Oxford Bob Triples and a course of Bob Major were rung on the tower bells, the go of which leaves nothing to be desired, although an improvement would be made by the addition of another floor to deaden the sound, which is rather unpleasant. M. E. Fryer, 1; J. Vickers, 2; J. R. Wood, 3; H. Hollingworth, 4; H. C. Woodward, 5; J. Warren, 6; T. Hollingworth, 7; G. C. Tunnicliff, 8. Leaving the tower, the spicy breezes of the Fish Docks were inhaled, and the sales by auction of the finny denizens of the deep watched with very great interest.

A proposition that an adjournment should be made to the "Dolphin" at Cleethorpes for dinner was carried with acclamation, and acted up to forthwith. After dinner the members separated for various amusements in the shape of boating, promenading, and very pleasant and enjoyable visits to the various oyster saloons. A very serious accident occurred in connection with a boating trip; one of the band had his chapeau blown into the briny; thereupon resulted an exciting chase, a rescue being effected by a brother string after almost superhuman efforts, which all but resulted in the capsizing of (not the hat) the boat and the loss of a valuable stick (p. c. 2d.) The Royal Humane Society's medal has not yet been received by the gallant rescuer.

The return journey was commenced from Cleethorpes at 8.5 p.m., and the interim enlivened by songs, toasts, jests and sentiment: also a course of Grandsire Caters, the ringers as before with the exception of J. Vickers, who took the place of J. R. Wood. Melbourne was reached about 1 o'clock; the society dispersing with the unanimous opinion that it was the best outing they have had. The society desires through the medium of this valuable paper to tender its best thanks to the Rev. R. Meddings, for placing their bells at their disposal, also to those friends who kindly conducted them to and assisted them whilst in the belfry.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

BLACKBURN BRANCH.—On Saturday, August 16th, a meeting of the above branch was held at the parish church, Burnley, when representatives was present from Blackburn, Burnley, Church, Colne, and Padiham. Mr. J. Walker presided at the meeting which was subsequently held, and it was decided to hold the next meeting at Blackburn parish church on Saturday, September 20th, when all members are earnestly requested to attend, as the election of officers for the branch for the next twelve months will take place.

Votes of thanks to the rector, wardens, and ringers concluded the business of the meeting. Touches of Triples and Bob Minor were rung during the afternoon.

IRCHESTER, NORTHANTS.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A RINGER.—On Saturday, August 9th, Mr. James Foster, with his wife and son, left Irchester station with the intention of paying a visit to some friends in the North of England. On Wednesday, a telegram received at Knuston stated that Mr. Foster had died somewhat suddenly. The corpse was brought to Knuston on Wednesday afternoon. Deceased was taken ill shortly after leaving Knuston, and died on Tuesday. He was well-known and generally respected. Mr. Foster having been one of the Irchester ringers and also a member of the choir, a dumb peal was rung after the funeral on Thursday. It is many years since the plaintive music of muffled bells sounded out from Irchester spire. Wellingborough ringers kindly lent some of their muffles for the occasion.

Ye "fiendish-looking" ringers, 'tis most true,
That scribes whose very grammar is at fault,
Whose "balderdash" defiles—are of the crew
Of intellects deformed: the blind, the lame, the halt.

THE ST. MARY'S SOCIETY, PENZANCE.

The ancient borough and market-town of Lostwithiel, the "Uzella" of Ptolemy, and the adjacent parish church of Lanlivery were selected by the above branch of the Devonshire Guild for their recent annual excursion.

After fifty miles of rail, proceedings for the day commenced by raising and ringing some 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles on the light peal of five bells to be found in Lostwithiel church. These are of Pennington's casting, dated 1764, with a tenor of 8 cwt., decidedly flat. An antiquarian survey of the church was then made, when a rough moor-stone font of octagonal shape attracted particular attention; supported on five pillars, its sides bore rude representations of the Crucifixion, with a female figure on each side; huntsman on an ass, with sword, horn and hawk, a dog seizing a rabbit, a bishop's head, ape's head, enchained with snakes, and arms of the Earls of Cornwall. It is said that in 1644, when the town was occupied by the Parliamentary forces under the Earl of Essex, that a horse was christened "Charles," by some soldiers, in this font, in contempt of Church and King. An alabaster carving in relief, of the martyrdom of St. Bartholomew, to whom the church is dedicated, and the pedestal of a poor box dated 1645 were also noticed.

The church dates from the 16th and 17th centuries, and is Gothic chiefly; the tower is earlier, being of the 13th century, and is beautiful in design, being called by the late G. E. Street, R.A., F.S.A., "the pre-eminent glory of Cornwall;" is in two stages, the lower square and heavily buttressed, the upper, being chamfered at the angles, is octagonal, from which rises an octagonal lantern of handsome open tracery work, surmounted by an octagonal spire.

About one mile from the town, upon the summit of a bold headland, are the magnificent ruins of Restormel Castle, whose origin, though involved in obscurity, was doubtless erected by Robert, Earl of Moreton, in the 13th century, and was once the residence of the Earls of Cornwall. The rampart, or outer wall, is nearly circular, and has a diameter of 126 ft. being surrounded by a moat 60 ft. wide and 30 ft. deep; the entrance was formerly by a drawbridge, now by a raised roadway, through a square ruined tower, leading to an open circular area, 64 by 65 feet. Around this area and within the outer walls are situated two regular suites of apartments, the upper ones being reached by two dark and narrow stone staircases; also a chapel of apparently more modern date; the whole of the ruin being enveloped in ivy presents a most picturesque appearance, the walls being enshrouded as completely as its antiquity does its history.

The terrace and winding walks through the plantations surrounding the castle were thoroughly enjoyed both for the scenery and enervating effect on the appetites for luncheon, which was partaken of on the return to Lostwithiel.

A two-mile walk, mostly up hill, and a Cornish one too, brought the party to Llanlivery, where there is an excellent peal of eight bells, recently augmented from five by the addition of three new bells, and turned out exceedingly well, in new frames and bearings, etc., by Mr. H. Stokes, of Woodbury, as recorded in a recent number of "THE BELL NEWS."

Here touches of Grandsire Triples to the extent of 750 and 1500 from Holt's ten-part peal were rung with much pleasure; the running of the bells with a tenor of 16 cwt., and of beautiful tone, being everything that could be desired. Some round-ringing was joined in by several of the local ringers, whose courtesy in receiving the 'scientifics' at both churches was much appreciated by the visitors.

This church of St. Brevita is a fine granite building in the Perpendicular style, and has been recently restored. The tower is one of the best in the county, and consists of three stages, buttressed on the square to the third stage. Here the coins, which become octangular, rest on corbels, composed of lions, angels, and human heads; these coins are surmounted by lofty octagonal and battlemented pinnacles, with crockets and finials.

In the churchyard is a ponderous granite coffin, said to have been removed from the north transept, and tradition adds that it originally protected the remains of one of the Cornish princes, brought hither probably from Restormel Castle.

Returning by way of Pelyn House, where was being held a bazaar and flower show in aid of the Church Restoration fund, tea was partaken of and the mansion inspected. Pelyn has for four centuries been the principal seat of the Vicar's (the Rev. Francis Kendall) family. It is supposed to have been at an early period the site of a religious house, but of which order it is uncertain; it was one of the manors presented by William the Conqueror to his half-brother Robert, Earl of Morton. About twenty-five years ago the greater portion of the interior was destroyed by fire, fortunately the valuable collection of family portraits by Sir Joshua Reynolds, Hudson, and other artists, was preserved from destruction, and still adorn the walls.

The westernmost terminus of the G.W.R. was reached soon after eleven, many expressions of pleasure being elicited from the excursionists on the journey homewards of the success attending the day's outing.

DURHAM AND NEWCASTLE DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

On Wednesday, August 6th, a deputation of the above waited on the Right Rev. Doctor Westcott, Lord Bishop of Durham, at his residence, Auckland Castle, Bishop Auckland, for the purpose of presenting His Lordship with an address of welcome to the Diocese of Durham. On arriving at the Castle the members forming the deputation were received by the Rev. C. H. Boutflower, the Bishop's Chaplain, and were conducted by him through the Chapel, situated at the east end of the Castle, which was beautified by the late Bishop Lightfoot. The rev. gentleman kindly explained things of interest, special attention being drawn towards the stained-glass windows, the subjects of which are most interesting. The party after being conducted to a room in the Castle, where they were received by the Bishop, Doctor Westcott, presented his Lordship with an address, which was as follows:—

"TO THE RIGHT REV. DR. WESTCOTT, LORD BISHOP OF DURHAM.

May it please your Lordship—We, the members of the Durham and Newcastle Diocesan Association of ringers in common with all other bodies of churchmen in the county of Durham, do heartily welcome your Lordship to the episcopal throne of Durham, recently rendered vacant by the death of the late Dr. Lightfoot, who was a patron of the Association. In consideration of the close friendship which existed between your Lordship and our loved and esteemed late Bishop, Dr. Lightfoot, we naturally feel the more inclined to tender you the warmest reception in our power. We humbly pray and trust that help and strength may be given your Lordship in the further continuance of the work to which it hath pleased the Almighty to call you. Signed on behalf of the members by R. S. Story, President; Francis Lees and Thomas Clark, Vice-Presidents; Lancelot Newton, Hon. Secretary."

His Lordship spoke a few words on Church work, and expressed his opinion that all should be Churchworkers in some form or another, and that to be a bellringer was being a good Churchworker.

The visitors were, through the kindness of his Lordship, entertained to tea in the Castle, for which they wish to tender their sincere thanks; and also to the Rev. C. H. Boutflower for the interest he took in their visit.

MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

NUNEATON BRANCH.—The usual monthly meeting was held at Stoney Stanton on Saturday, August 9th, when there was a good attendance of members. Ringing commenced at 4 o'clock, with a 720 of Bob Minor, by J. Wright, 1; E. Lane, 2; J. Garrat, 3; G. Winter, 4; R. Bishop, 5; H. Briggs (conductor), 6. And 600 of Kent Treble Bob Minor, by H. Horwood, 1; A. R. Aldham (conductor), 2; J. Swinfield, 3; A. Needham, 4; T. W. Chapman, 5; J. F. Clarke, 6. Also several 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles by the younger members. An adjournment was afterwards made to the meeting-house, where Mr. Aldham presided. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed and one new member was added to the list. After the close of the business, the handbells were brought out, and several touches of Grandsire Caters were rung. The party returned home with the conviction that they had enjoyed a very agreeable time.

A DAY IN THE COUNTRY.

On Monday, August 4th, a few members of the Worcester (St. Helen's) society spent a very enjoyable day, making a visit to some of the towers in the south of this county. A start was made from Worcester at 7.25 a.m. by five members, arriving at Kempsey at 8.0 a.m., where two more members joined the company. A halt was here made for a short ring, and after a bit of running about owing to the steeple-keeper being away from home and taking the key with him, an entrance was effected by the vicar kindly hunting over the vestry for a spare key. The bells, which are a peal of six, tenor about 16 cwt. in F., going the back way, were at once raised. By that time it was discovered that something easy would be necessary, some of the bells going very bad, and a 720 Grandsire Minor was rung at the second attempt, the first coming to grief through the fourth bell casting her rope. T. Penny, 1; S. Cotton, 2; H. Knowles, 3; L. Longney, 4; B. Hill, 5; W. Page, 6. After falling the bells a move was made for Upton-on-Severn, in the vehicle which F. Owen had been tending, and calling at the residence of L. Longney, whose parent with his usual generosity kindly provided some refreshment. Arriving at the above pleasant little town at 11.30 a.m. and after seeing to the comfort of the old grey horse, the tower was at once made for, where they found Mr. Smith, the local, and another one of their band waiting for them, the former having good-naturedly oiled the bells and put everything ready. They here found a peal of six in fair good going order, and after raising the bells, to the tune of Bob Minor a 720 was brought round in 25 mins. F. Owen, 1; L. Longney, 2; S. Cotton, 3; H. Knowles, 4; W. Page, 5; R. Knowles, 6. Also 120 College Single and 120 Stedman Doubles. After lowering the bells they made for the "Anchor" inn, and did justice to a good spread. The handbells were then brought into use and some touches of Grandsire Triples and Major were indulged in to the delight of the natives. A very pleasant walk of 15 minutes brought them to Hanley parish church, where they found a good going peal of six, tenor about 16 cwt. in F., the only fault being the fifth too sharp. After reversing their position a 720 of College Single was attempted, but came to grief through the third rope breaking, which however was soon remedied. Another start was made but the same thing occurred again, three yards of extra rope flying about, but luckily without accident. F. Owen, 1; L. Longney, 2; W. Page, 3; S. Cotton, 4; H. Knowles, 5; R. Knowles, 6. Also 120 of Stedman Doubles. The return to Upton was then made, and tea was partaken of. Welland being the next on the list, the vehicle was brought out and a very pleasant ride of four miles landed them safe, passing a wayside inn called the "Rope and Pickaxe." Again putting the horse in, an entrance to the church was essayed, but the keys were missing, which after a good deal of hunting were found in a saddle-room. Here they found a pretty peal of six, tenor about 10 cwt., with two bad faults, viz., the ropes falling in two parallel lines, and the room being miserably lighted with only one window, about 1 ft. by 3 ft. Here they rang 720 Oxford Bob in 26 mins. F. Owen, 1; R. Knowles, 2; S. Cotton, 3; ——— 4; W. Page, 5; L. Longney, 6. They then lowered the bells, and time being short adjourned to the Pheasant inn, but only to see the ostler, who however answered the purpose, and put the horse in harness again. Shortly after leaving a disaster was narrowly escaped, the coachman nearly taking off the only wheel from a razor grinder's apparatus. Hanley Swan being the next halting place, upon the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. R. Knowles, they adjourned to their house, and enjoyed a delicious tea. Afterwards the handbells were brought out and courses of Triples and Caters were rung. After thanking Mrs. Knowles for her excellent catering, a move was made for the tower, where there is a nice little peal of six, the "go" of which was perfect, also being a good circle and capially lighted. Darkness fast approaching a 720 of Canterbury Pleasure was brought round in 23 mins. F. Owen, 1; S. Cotton, 2; H. Knowles, 3; R. Knowles, 4; L. Longney, 5; W. Page, 6. This finished the programme; all the 720's being conducted by L. Longney. The company then made for home, which was reached at 10.50, all having thoroughly enjoyed the tour, the weather being grand, and the country looking beautiful, in many places harvest being in full swing.

ALL SAINTS', WEST BROMWICH.

On Saturday, August 2nd, the ringers connected with the above church accompanied by a few friends, had their outing to Aberystwith. An early start was made, and they arrived at their destination a little before 11. A move was at once made to Llanbadarn Fawr church, which was restored and beautified about five years ago. A part of the restoration was adding two new bells to a peal of six, and making them into a peal of eight. The bells were raised in peal, and when all were ready "go" was called for Holt's ten-part peal of Grandsire Triples, which was successfully brought round in 2 hrs. 57 mins. As this is the first peal rung upon the bells since they were made into a peal of eight, it is probable that a tablet will be placed in the belfry recording the same. After falling the bells and partaking of tea the beach and promenade were visited until 7 o'clock, when two of the party had to return home. On Sunday morning a touch of 518 Grandsire Triples was rung for the English service. Monday was occupied in bathing, sailing, and seeing the places of interest in and around Aberystwith. In the evening they returned to Llanbadarn, where an open-air concert was given by the party. Tunes and touches of Grandsire Triples on the handbells, songs, and a duet in Welsh by two of the villagers were very much appreciated by a large number of the inhabitants who turned out to listen. The party returned home on Tuesday, greatly benefitted by their trip. The thanks of the ringers are due to the Vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells, and to all the other friends who did so much to make the visit such a pleasant and enjoyable one.

MONMOUTH.

An event, in which a great deal of local interest was taken, on Tuesday, August 12th, was the wedding of Mr. John B. Hyam (eldest son of Mr. T. R. Hyam, Cornwall House), and Miss Thomas (only daughter of Mr. J. Thomas, of the King's Head hotel). A crowd assembled at St. Mary's church to witness the ceremony, which was performed by the Vicar, the Rev. Wentworth Watson. After the service had concluded, Mr. Webb, the organist, played the Wedding March, and as the bride and bridegroom emerged from the church and walked to their carriage they were greeted with a continuous shower of rice, which was also freely bestowed upon other members of the party. The wedding breakfast took place at the "King's Head" hotel, and during the afternoon the happy pair left Troy Station, amid a cannonade of fog signals, for Weymouth, en route for the Channel Islands. The bells of St. Mary's rang out merrily during the day, and an account of the ringing will be found in another column. Salutes were fired by the men at Mr. Hyam's steam saw mills, the employees of both families being entertained at dinner in the Borough Court in the evening. A very handsome and valuable lot of presents were received by the bride and bridegroom, including gifts from the servants at the Hotel and Mr. Hyam's workpeople.

ST. MARGARET'S SOCIETY, WESTMINSTER.

The lads and lassies associated with this Society turned up in round numbers on Thursday the 7th inst., at St. Margaret's Hall, Westminster, to enjoy a concert and entertainment of a high class, admirably arranged and conducted throughout, and under the chairmanship of the Rev. W. E. Sims, A.K.C. The proceeds of the entertainment are to be devoted towards a fund which is being raised to provide a competent Instructor to initiate the members in the intricacies of change-ringing, so that "Tombstone Surprise" shall be relegated to the past, and the music in future issuing from the belfry of St. Margaret's may be more in keeping with the historical and parliamentary character of the church.

Several good songs were well rendered by the ladies and gentlemen present, and Mr. Arthur Leopold mystified the audience with his sleight of hand tricks, and proved he was a conjurer of no mean ability. Very sorry were the spectators when he concluded his entertainment, for like "Oliver Twist," they "wanted more."

SATURDAY, AUGUST 23, 1890.

THE account of the Cumberland's visit to Huntingdon and neighbourhood has, we are informed, been read with great interest. A correspondent points out that a like visit to St. Neot's, where there is a peal of eight (tenor 30 cwt.) would enlighten the darkness to some little extent of the band of ringers there who "work the changes" on a plan of their own. In this plan we are told the treble is always first, and the tenor last, and the ringers of the other six bells have each on the floor at their feet, a large square of cardboard, on which appears in big figures, the bells in the order in which they are to follow them. This is not a new mode of unscientific ringing, by no means. A visit by a good company to St. Neots, might perhaps induce the local band to give up this cardboard business, and take to change-ringing proper. Should our friends of the Royal Cumberlands again visit this part of the country, perhaps they will arrange, if possible, a visit to the town of St. Neots.

It is gratifying to hear that the result of our remarks about Huntingdon was the almost immediate visit of a number of scientific ringers to that town. We hope that such alacrity may be imitated very largely by others. There are a number of spots requiring the attention of those who are anxious to promote the extension of ringing and the formation of Societies. Whoever embarks in such a work and perseveres in it is a benefactor to the Exercise.

Jones (conductor), 7; H. Brown, 8. Afterwards an attempt for a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples came to grief after ringing four parts out of the six through the 3rd man missing the treble in 1-2. W. Jones, 1; J. Ward, 2; J. Brown, 3; W. Honeyfield, 4; W. Walters, 5; T. M. Preece, 6; T. H. Jones (conductor), 7; H. Brown, 8.

NUNEATON (Warwickshire).—On Sunday, August 10th, for Divine Service at the parish church, 1114 Kent Treble Bob Major. H. Horwood, 1; H. Argyle, 2; H. Briggs, 3; G. Winter, 4; J. Noble, 5; A. R. Aldham (conductor), 6; J. F. Clarke (conductor), 7; T. W. Chapman, 8. Messrs. Aldham hails from Barwell; Briggs and Noble from Stoney Stanton. This is the first touch of Kent Treble Bob Major on the bells, and the first by all except the conductor.

OSSETT (Yorks).—On Tuesday, August 5th, at Holy Trinity church, 720 Kent Treble Bob Minor with the bells muffled, as a tribute of respect to the memory of the late William Scholefield, a late member. Also on Sunday, August 10th, a half-muffled touch of thirty-one treble leads of Kent Treble Bob, representing the age of deceased. A. Spurr, G. Crawshaw, D. Stephenson, W. Byram, M. Garforth, W. Illingworth, J. A. Idle, W. Dixon.

SALISBURY.—On Sunday, July 27th, for Divine Service in the evening, 1260 Grandsire Triples. W. Dawe, 1; S. Macey, 2; H. D. Adams, 3; C. A. Clements, 4; R. Gollop, 5; W. S. Wise (conductor), 6; W. W. Gifford, 7; G. Doel, 8.

ST. GEORGES (Gloucestershire).—On Sunday evening, August 3rd, for Divine Service at the parish church, 720 Grandsire Minor. — Howell, 1; W. Lansdown, 2; H. Thomas, 3; A. E. Thomas, 4; S. Phillips (conductor), 5; F. Howell, 6. And on Thursday, August 14th, for practice, 720 Double Court Minor. C. Tompkins, 1; A. E. Turner, 2; H. Thomas, 3; A. E. Thomas, 4; W. Lansdown, 5; S. Phillips (conductor), 6. First 720 of Double Court by the whole band. F. Howell hails from Thornbury.

ST. ALBANS (HERTS).—On Sunday evening, August 17th, for Divine Service at the Cathedral, the last 742 of Holt's Original. E. Chapman, 1; T. Long, 2; S. E. Mitchell, 3; E. R. Mitchell, 4; J. C. Mitchell (conductor), 5; H. Brewer, 6; W. Battle, 7; H. L. Waddington, 8.

TAUNTON.—On Thursday, August 14th, at St. James's church, two 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles. J. Maddock, 1; R. Crossman, 2; A. Doble, 3; T. Radford, 4; F. Price (conductor), 5; F. Sadd, 6. Also some 6-scores on the handbells. A. Doble, 1; T. Radford, 2; F. Price (conductor), 3-4; J. Maddock, 5-6. F. Price hails from Bristol.

WALDRON (Sussex).—On Monday, August 4th, at the parish church, two 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles. G. Ades, 1; T. Ashdown, 2; J. Beal, 3; H. Rann, 4; A. Reed (conductor), 5; H. Ades, 6. This is the first touch rung on the bells for over two months, owing to a grievance between the rector and the ringers, the former saying that if they rung for Divine Services on Sundays they must also attend them or leave the bells alone. The ringers declined to be always bound to go to church, so therefore the bells were left undisturbed. Permission was however granted this time by one of the churchwardens, the rector being away from home. It is to be hoped that it may now be carried on in a satisfactory manner to both parties, as the band have just made a start, having only in March last rung their first peal of Grandsire Triples.

Correspondence.

While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

THE RECENT PEALS AT HUNTINGDON.

SIR.—If "Young Cumberland" will give me his name and address through the columns of this valuable paper, I shall have great pleasure, when next taking the trouble to obtain the necessary fund for some brother Cumberlands to visit here, in consulting him as to whom I am to invite and what class he would like them to travel. I am extremely sorry that he should have felt so aggrieved, and to make amends (for what he considers my bad behaviour) I will endeavour to obtain permission for him and others, whom he may desire to bring to attempt a peal on some bells not far from here, the tenor of which is badly cracked.

F. V. H. SINKINS.

Huntingdon.

SIR.—If your Correspondent who signs himself "Young Cumberland," in your last issue of "BELL NEWS," will renew his query, at one of our meetings at head-quarters, I think he will receive a satisfactory answer.

[This correspondence must now close.—ED.]

THE "JACK-IN-OFFICE" AGAIN.

SIR.—I wish to say a few words concerning a peal that was to be attempted at St. Mary's, Taunton. Since the Bath and Wells Association has been formed a member wished to attempt an association peal at the above church. After having permission from the Vicar, through the Steeplekeeper, he got together a band and engaged a conductor, but when he went to see the steeplekeeper the day beforehand he positively refused to let them ring. The Bath and Wells Association has been formed to encourage change-ringing. Is this the right way to encourage it or not?

T. R.

THE YORKSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

SIR.—In your issue of August 9th there is a letter signed "Yorke Sherman," which I must take exception to. I deny that the reading of my letter will lead any one to any such conclusion as that Yorkshire ringers are selfish or disreputable characters, and it is only by a great stretch of the imagination that any person could say so. I maintain that all I have said is strictly true, and can be verified. I fancy I see some of my old friends titter with laughter when they read that more ringing is done in Yorkshire now than fifteen years ago, and methods then unknown among us are now rung regularly. The late W. Goodall, of Liversedge, had upwards of 100 peals to his credit, besides his record of prize-ringing achievements, before the Yorkshire Association came into existence; and ringers fifteen years ago could and did ring any known method both on six and eight bells; men who are still living can testify to what I say. I have myself helped a company to ring seven broken-lead peals on six bells, three of which had never been rung before, more than fifteen years ago. The number of adjectives used in Y. Sherman's letter is something astounding. Some of my friends will be induced to read my letters over again to try and find the charges brought against me. He says—"Mr. Stead pleads guilty," etc. I did nothing of the kind. I said I was speaking of Yorkshire only, and as to my knowledge of Yorkshire ringers, my name will be sufficient for that.

THOMAS STEAD.

Obituary.

JUSTIN ANDREW.

It is our sad duty to record the death under painful circumstances of the above-named member of the Ashton-under-Lyne Society, which took place on Saturday, August 9th, at Manchester Royal Infirmary. The deceased, who was employed by the Manchester Corporation, was assisting in demolishing some old buildings when he fell from the scaffolding, and was so severely injured that on his removal to the infirmary, he died as above stated. He was a very useful member of the above society, being constant in his attendance, although he lived six miles away from the tower. He was 39 years of age and had been connected with the parish church ringers about nineteen years, and he had rung some thirty peals, principally covering (although he could also take his place inside). His last peal was one of Grandsire Cinques, which was the first in the new tower and on the bells. His last touch was on the Sunday evening previous to his death, when for evening service he covered a touch of 593 Grandsire Cinques. The interment took place on the 13th of August, and in the evening his fellow ringers met, and with the bells deeply muffled, rang the same touch which he had last taken part in, conducted by Mr. Samuel Wood. His loss will be keenly felt by his fellow ringers, and they wish to give their sympathies his bereaved family in their great affliction.

FORREST STONE.

The ringers of the St. Wollos' Church Guild, Newport, (Mon.), have sustained a great loss in the death of the above ringer, which took place under melancholy circumstances, at the early age of 23, at Minehead, Somerset, on Sunday, the 10th inst. Deceased was attached to the 2nd Batt. of the South Wales Borderers, and he seems to have contracted a severe attack of acute pneumonia early in the week, which in spite of the attention of the medical staff attached to the camp, and the careful nursing at the Dunster Cottage Hospital, proved fatal in less than a week of his being laid up. He had for a considerable time captained the band of ringers at Newport, and his patient and courteous bearing had done much to encourage the men to overcome the preliminary difficulties of change-ringing, which was rendered the more difficult by the unsatisfactory condition of the bells, six in number. However, they had succeeded in mastering the various methods in Doubles, and had attained considerable proficiency in Minor ringing, one or two 720's having been recorded, and this result was in a great measure due to the perseverance and wholesome discipline instilled by the painstaking example of Mr. Stone. Much sympathy is expressed with the family of the deceased in their bereavement, and the St. Wollos Guild participate deeply in this. On the day of the funeral on Thursday, the 14th inst., they rang with the bells deeply muffled in the evening, and the Caeleon band also muffled their bells at their usual practice as a mark of sincere respect.

EDWARD WRIGHT.

On Sunday, August 4th, 1890, at St. John the Evangelist, Wilton Road, Pimlico, London, after evening service, the following members of the Ancient Society of College Youths rang a funeral peal, consisting of the usual "whole pull and stand," followed by a touch of Stedman Triples, with the bells half muffled, as a last mark of respect to the memory of the above-mentioned member of this society (who died from scarlatina (which eventually lodged in his throat), in the Stockwell Fever Hospital on 26th July, 1890, aged 28½ years, viz.:—F. E. Dawe (conductor), 1; H. Langdon, 2; G. T. MacLaughlin, 3; W. E. Garrard, 4; C. F. Winny, 5; W. H. George, 6; H. R. Newton, 7; J. M. Hayes, 8. Tenor 10½ cwt. in G. The deceased had been a constant worker at the above church since 1879 at which time he was taught to ring by his friend, Mr. F. E. Dawe, and in return, a short time afterwards, he taught Mr. G. T. MacLaughlin, another well-known ringer. At one time Mr. Wright took great interest in ringing, but had only accomplished one complete peal, for during the last few years his fine voice found him the most prominent position in the choir as bass soloist, and in musical circles he soon became well-known and appreciated. He has left behind him many who will mourn the loss of a true, straightforward, and kind-hearted friend, together with a young widow and only child. May he rest in peace.

"PAY UP."

"The work of getting in unpaid subscriptions makes great demands on the Secretary's time and patience."

There are some bell-haulers,
Likewise some bob-callers,
Among ringing institutions;
Desirous without stint,
To see their names in print,
But ignore the friendly hint,
To pay their contributions.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Tuesday, July 29th, the St. Paul's society, Shipley, held their annual excursion, Southport being the place selected. Leaving Shipley by the 5.5 a.m., Southport was reached at 8.10 a.m. After breakfast a walk on the pier was very much enjoyed, and after a short stroll through the town, and a hunt up and down after the steeple-keeper of Christ Church, they found that they would not be allowed to have a pull on the bells until after six o'clock. Dinner being the next thing looked for and partaken of, a start was made for the Botanical Gardens, which was reached after a very nice ride through the town. A look through the gardens and hot houses brought them out by the lake, where a few of the party had some very good fun in watching the boating, one or two having a row on the lake, then returning by tram into Southport and having tea. At a few minutes to six the bells were heard to be tolling, which was taken as a signal that the tower was open for ringing, and upon arriving there they found Mr. Hill pulling up the bells ready for ringing. After adjusting the ropes a few courses of Kent Treble Bob was rung. T. Lilly, 1; R. Hill, 2; T. Kendall, 3; W. Fox, 4; J. Lilly, 5; G. A. O. Nettleton, 6; J. A. Ross, 7; J. S. Clark, 8. After a short chat with Mr. Hill it was time for them to be making their way to the station, and leaving Southport at 8 p.m. they arrived at Shipley at 11.35 p.m. well pleased with their day's outing. They wish through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS" to thank the vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells, and also to Mr. Hill for his kind attention to them while they were there.

FOR SALE, SPLENDID PEAL OF 42 HANDBELLS—Chromatic, from G25 to C1, by Messrs. Blews, Birmingham, together with Table, Box, and all fittings for the formation of a band. Cost over £30. Will take 10 Guineas for immediate cash. Great bargain. Apply, B. T. LONGLEY, 99, West Street, Sheffield.

THE ST. JOHN'S SOCIETY, LOUGHTON.

On Bank Holiday, August 4th, the above society held their annual outing, the place selected being Hertford. Leaving Loughton at 8 a.m., they proceeded by brake to Waltham Cross station, where they were joined by J. Gobbett (West Ham), and G. Cornell (Wanstead). They then journeyed on, reaching Hertford about 11 a.m. At St. Andrew's they were met by Canon Wigram, who gave them a hearty welcome. After a false start a touch or two of Stedman Triples was rung, assisted by Messrs. Ellesmore (Hertford), and Stanbridge (Birmingham). They then adjourned to the Coldbath Hotel, where handbell ringing was indulged in for a time. Then a walk through the town to the Hertford Coffee Tavern, where an excellent dinner was in waiting. Dinner over a visit was paid to All Saints, where they were met by Mr. Knight. Touches of Stedman Triples and a touch of Grandsire and Stedman Caters was rung here; and a touch of Treble Eight was also attempted, but was not brought round. Leaving All Saints another move was made to the hotel for tea. Before leaving a touch of Bob Major was rung at St. Andrew's. A start was then made for home which was reached about 11 p.m., all having spent a very pleasant day. The above society wish to thank Canon Wigram for kindly making arrangements: also the steeplekeepers of the towers and all those gentlemen who contributed to the day's enjoyment.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

My DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

XIII.

SINGLES AS APPLIED TO TWIN-BOB COMPOSITION.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

We have seen that the 60 P blocks can be aggregated by bobs into two (or more) blocks. To unite these main blocks singles are required. In effect the single is merely a peculiar shunt to introduce a block that cannot be brought in by bobs. To ascertain what is the block, or portion of a block, lying between the first and second of every pair of singles is essential to the proving of a peal. Conversely, it is necessary in composing a peal to know how to place the singles so as to introduce the required blocks or portion of a block. Now simple though this process may be deemed, in reality it is a very precarious one unless a thorough insight is obtained into the laws which regulate the employment of singles. The insidious nature of the process consists in the fact that, while a very little attention may suffice to place the singles so as to introduce the correct length of block, and thus effect the completion of the peal at the proper number of changes, yet the block introduced may easily contain courses or parts of courses that occur outside the singles, and therefore cause the peal to be false.

The enquiry into the use of singles in twin-bob peals may conveniently be arranged under three heads. Firstly, what are the actual sixes produced between singles, and what is the relation of these odd (out-of-course) sixes to the even (in course) P blocks which they represent?

Secondly, in what position of the observation bell in a course can singles be called?

Thirdly, in what ways can singles be arranged to unite the disjointed blocks of a peal.

With regard to the first head, as soon as a single occurs the six-ends become odd until the next single; that is, whereas the backstrokes were previously all even and the handstrokes odd, now the handstrokes are even and the backstrokes odd. Therefore changes that before came at backstroke will now come at handstroke and vice versa. Let us examine the relation between an even course and an odd one containing the same sixes.

For this purpose I give below in column A the six-ends of the plain course, and alongside, in column B, the six-ends of the corresponding odd course. In both columns the sixes which contain the same rows are numbered alike.

A The six-ends of the plain course (even)	B The six-ends of the odd course containing the same rows as A.

5. 7 1 4 2 5 6 3	9. 6 1 5 3 4 7 2
6. 7 1 2 6 4 3 5	8. 6 1 3 7 5 2 4
7. 1 6 7 3 2 5 4	7. 1 7 6 2 3 4 5
8. 1 6 3 5 7 4 2	6. 1 7 2 4 6 5 3
9. 6 5 1 4 3 2 7	5. 7 4 1 5 2 3 6
10. 6 5 4 2 1 7 3	4. 7 4 5 3 1 6 2
11. 5 2 6 7 4 3 1	3. 4 3 7 6 5 2 1
12. 5 2 7 3 6 1 4	2. 4 3 6 2 7 1 5
13. 2 3 5 1 7 4 6	1. 3 2 4 1 6 5 7
14. 2 3 1 4 5 6 7	14. 3 2 1 5 4 7 6

In any course the quick six-end with the 7th dodging 6-7 up is known as the "course-end." For the purpose of demonstration I require a defined term for the quick six-end with the 7th dodging 6-7 down. This position occurs in the latter part of a course as the 7th is going down quick. The most appropriate term would seem to be the "wrong." It is to be particularly noticed that the position thus indicated occurs at a quick six-end and therefore the term "wrong" is not to be applied to the six-end following the course-end, at which the 7th is dodging 6-7 down at a slow six.

If now the course-end 2314567 (for example) is transposed by 2135476 we obtain 3215476, which is the "wrong" six-end of the odd course in column B. This six contains precisely the same rows as the six from which the transposition was made. Similarly every six in column A will be found transposed, but containing the same rows, in column B. When, however, the transposition is made from a slow six, and not as above from a quick six, the scale 1325476 must be used. It should be noticed that a quick six always transposes to a quick six and a slow six to a slow six.

It is thus plain that any course-end transposed by 3215476 will give the "wrong" of the corresponding odd course containing the same rows. That such odd course does contain the whole of the rows of the even course is shewn by the following sample of two complete sixes taken from each of columns A and B. The back bells of the four middle rows, are for the sake of clearness, omitted.

Two full sixes from the plain course A.	Two full sixes from the odd course B.
5 2 7 3 6 1 4	3 2 4 1 6 5 7
2 5 3 7 1 6 4	2 3 1 4 5 6 7
5 2 3	2 1 3
5 3 2	1 2 3
3 5 2	1 3 2
3 2 5	3 1 2
13. 2 3 5 1 7 4 6	14. 3 2 1 5 4 7 6
3 2 1 5 4 7 6	2 3 5 1 7 4 6
3 1 2	3 2 5
1 3 2	3 5 2
1 2 3	5 3 2
2 1 3	5 2 3
14. 2 3 1 4 5 6 7	13. 2 5 3 7 1 6 4

A careful study of this and the former table will shew clearly that when any P block is introduced in its odd form by means of singles it will come row for row backwards, the six-end in the one being always the first row, or six-head of the corresponding six in the other, and vice versa.

It has been already stated that when any even course-end is transposed by 2135476 the "wrong" six-end of the corresponding odd course is obtained. As it is usually more convenient to obtain the course-end of the odd course, this may be accomplished by transposing the even course-end by 564312; the rest of the course may then if desired, be pricked from the course-end so obtained. Attention must, however, be directed to the fact already mentioned that it is in the "wrong" six of an odd course that the actual rows of an even course-end occur. The converse is also true, for what ever is true of an odd course in relation to an even one is equally true of an even course in relation to an odd one, and the scales above given are applicable either way. The necessity for insisting on a clear apprehension of the relation between an even course-end and an odd "wrong," and the converse, will be apparent later.

Having shewn how the odd form of a P block is obtained, I pass on to consider whether similar treatment is applicable to a block containing bobs. Let us take as an example a course bobbed at S, H, Q. This calling, four times repeated, produces a five-part block. For the purpose in hand one course must suffice. This is given in column C, while the corresponding odd course appears in column D. I may however remark that to prick the whole of the block in both its forms, although somewhat tedious, will afford a clearer insight into a difficult subject than can be obtained in any other way.

C Six-ends of even course bobbed at S, H, Q.	D Six-ends of odd course containing the same rows as C.
2 3 1 4 5 6 7	14. 4 3 2 1 5 7 6 W

2. 3 4 6 7 2 5 1	12. 3 1 7 2 4 6 5 - } Q
3. 4 7 3 2 6 5 1 - } S	11. 1 2 3 4 7 6 5 -
4. 4 7 2 6 3 5 1 - } H	10. 1 2 4 6 3 5 7 C E
5. 7 6 4 3 2 5 1 -	9. 2 6 1 5 4 7 3
6. 7 6 3 2 4 5 1 -	8. 2 6 5 7 1 3 4
7. 6 2 7 5 3 1 4	7. 6 7 2 3 5 4 1
8. 6 2 5 1 7 4 3	6. 6 7 3 4 2 1 5
9. 2 1 6 4 5 3 7	5. 7 4 6 2 3 1 5 - } H
10. 2 1 4 3 6 7 5 W	4. 7 4 2 3 6 1 5 -
11. 1 3 2 7 4 5 6	3. 4 3 7 6 2 1 5 - } L
12. 1 3 7 4 2 5 6 - } Q	2. 4 3 6 2 7 1 5 -
13. 3 4 1 2 7 5 6 -	1. 3 2 4 1 6 5 7
14. 3 4 2 5 1 6 7 C E	3 2 1 5 4 7 6

It has been shewn that the odd form of a P block is the same block pricked backwards, but that the course-end of the one will be the "wrong" of the other. If the course-end 3425167 at the foot of column C is transposed by 2135476 we obtain 4321576 as the "wrong" of the corresponding odd course. Pricking from this we come immediately to the Q position. As Q is bobbed in the even course it must be similarly treated in the odd one. We now arrive at the course-end of the odd course corresponding to the "wrong" in the even one. In the even course S is bobbed; but, and here is a vital point, if we bob S in the odd course we shall be bobbing too soon, for in the even course five plain sixes intervene between Q and the previous bob, and consequently we have not yet got the two bells 5, 1, that are behind at the four bobs, into position. By postponing the bobs until the H, two sixes later, the correct result will be attained. As there are four consecutive bobs it is necessary now to bob L as well as H, after which we may proceed as usual till the course is completed at the following "wrong." We have now produced the odd course in column D. On inspection it becomes evident that, while Q and H are bobbed as in the even course, L has been bobbed instead of S. This is the ruling procedure in reversing any course or courses from even to odd or odd to even, viz.: that every S becomes an L, and every L an S. The following diagram may render the matter more intelligible.

Arrange the four calling positions, as above, as if they were figures on the face of a clock. Since the two starting points, namely, the course-end and the "wrong," are both contiguous to the Q position, the latter is placed at the top. The remaining positions S, H and L are arranged in their natural order, supposing that we travel round the diagram (which represents a course) in the direction of the hands of the clock. This motion will represent an even course. For an odd one we must travel from Q in a reverse direction, when it is clear that, although we shall pass H at the same interval as before, this is not so with S and L; since, whereas we then passed S as the first quarter and L as the third, we now pass L as the first and S as the third. In other words, when the even course is reversed to odd, or vice versa, while Q and H remain unaltered S and L are transposed.

From these considerations we arrive at the important law that when any even block is reversed to its odd form, or vice versa, the S and L calls are transposed; that is, every S becomes an L and every L an S. It follows from this, which is indeed the case, that we may with impunity reverse any peal by transposing the calling of the Ss and Ls. I adverted in the last paper to the fact that Hs and consequently Qs must be introduced into a peal in certain proportions, and that all Hs could not be eliminated without breaking up the peal into a large number of blocks. I am again trenching on ground which will be covered by Mr. Bulwer, but only go so far in order to shew that, although the "q" set treatment of SL and HQ is alike, the two pairs are very different in their effect upon composition. As an illustration I may instance Brook's variation of Thurstan's "Original," in which H is bobbed in every course, and consequently Q never. We may reverse to the same peal by transposing the Ss and Ls, but to bob the Qs instead of the Hs would altogether destroy the cohesion of the peal.

I trust that enough has now been advanced to enable the relation of the even and odd forms of blocks to be understood, and to shew that any block may appear in whichever of the two forms is most convenient, by transposing the bobs at S and L. In any course, however, that contains both S and L bobs, or neither, it is manifest no change in the calling will be entailed.

Owing to the bob marks in the scale of course-ends, given in the last article, having got misplaced, the table is given again below in a corrected form.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

The members of the above Association are invited by Mr. Percival Heywood to a garden party at Duffield Bank on Saturday, September 13th, from two o'clock to six o'clock. Tea at 4.30. The bells of the parish church will be at the disposal of the visitors after two o'clock. Members are at liberty to bring friends who belong to any ringing society.

The presence of any clergy, who can make it convenient to come, will be especially welcome.

NOTE TO THE MELBOURNE PEAL.—This peal was rung with the bells half-muffled as a token of respect to Alice Emily, eldest daughter of W. Briggs, Esq., C.C., Bleak House, Melbourne, also to Miss Smith, daughter of the Rev. Smith, Vicar of Calverton, Notts., who was visiting Melbourne, and was being driven to church on Sunday morning, August 17th, when the horse took fright and ran away. Miss Smith in attempting to jump out of the carriage, slipped, and was killed on the spot.

CURIOSITIES OF THE CHURCH.

There are 560 clergy named Jones; 320 Smith; 312 Williams; 229 Davies; 170 Evans; 130 Thomas; 127 Taylor; 124 Lewis; 112 Brown; 106 Clarke; 105 Edwards; 105 Morgan; 103 White; 101 Johnson; 100 Hughes; 100 Roberts; 100 Robinson; 100 Walker. The three smallest parishes in England, in population, with a parish church in use in each, are:—Wilcot, Oxon: population, 7; church holds 60 persons; Vicar, R. L. Baker; value of living, £75. Willersley, Hereford; population, 8; church holds 52; vicar, R. Bishop; value of living, £85. Yelford, Oxon; population, 8; church holds 50 persons; vicar, C. R. Powys; curate, W. Newman; value of living, £98. The largest parish church in England is St. Michael's, Coventry, which will hold 3,760 persons, and there are 1,250 free seats. The next largest parish church is St. Nicholas, Great Yarmouth, which holds 3,600 persons. The smallest parish church in Wales, Eglwysbreu, Glamorgan, which will only hold 20 persons; the population of the parish is 30; the value of the living is £120 per annum. The smallest parish church in England is Brobury, Herefordshire, which will only hold 28 persons; population of parish, 75. The following are the smallest parish churches in England and Wales, except the three first mentioned, under 30 population:—

The smallest parish in the City of London was St. Peter, Cheapside; population, 20. The church has been demolished and the parish joined to St. Vedast, Foster Lane. The most valuable living in the City is St. Andrew Undershaft, which is £2,057; the population is 315, that is, about £6 10s. each soul. The smallest parish in the City is St. Mildred, Bread Street, which is but one acre. The population is 76: the living, £282: nearly £4 per soul. ACCIDENT AT WALTHAM ABBEY, ESSEX.

ON Wednesday, August 13th, Henry Tarling, a youth fourteen years of age, and son of Mr. David Tarling, one of the Waltham Abbey society of ringers, received a kick from a horse which resulted in his death. An inquest was held on the body on the 21st inst., when a verdict of "Accidental death" was returned. The following is communicated by our local correspondent:—

The deceased was interred in the Waltham Abbey cemetery on Saturday afternoon, August 23rd, the Rev. J. Stamp officiating. Mourners to the number of eighteen attended, and relatives and friends sent several beautiful wreaths, including one from the Waltham Abbey bell ringers, this body being also represented at the funeral. Although deceased was not a member of the society of change-ringers, he had been very closely associated with the members of the company for the past two years. At the age of twelve, anyone visiting the belfry while practice was on, could have seen young Henry Tarling mounted on a box which had been especially introduced for him, as he could not reach high enough to manage the bell properly without such assistance. He continued to be constant in attendance in the belfry (until he met with this fatal accident), and for the last twelve months he had often taken part in the ringing, each time shewing signs of improvement and probabilities of becoming a very clever ringer, so much so that it would not be saying too much that never since the time of Masters William and John Carr's early performances, now about eighty years ago (for which they were celebrated throughout the country), have the local ringers been fortunate enough to meet with a Waltham boy so young as deceased to be so promising. Had it not been for the recent illness of the conductor of the local society, deceased would have made still further progress, as it was the intention of the ringers to have attempted a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples especially for him to have taken part in. On Saturday evening last the ordinary meeting of ringers took place as usual, when the bells of the Abbey church were rung half-muffled as a last mark of respect to the deceased, who by his willingness and perseverance had earned the respect of every local ringer.

THE BELLS OF STOKE-NEXT-GUILDFORD.

The following letter appears in The Surrey Advertiser of August 23rd:—"SIR,—Happening to look through some old volumes of the Stoke Magazine the other day, I noticed, in the New Year's address from the rector for 1881, two interesting items, one being an announcement that the 'Royal Arms' coffee tavern would be opened in a month or so, and the other that it was proposed to have a peal of eight bells, similar to those at St. Nicholas church, before the end of the year, and announcing the following promises of help:—J. S. Budgett, Esq., £100; Mrs. Bowyer, £50; Rev. F. Paynter, £20. As nearly ten years have come and gone since then, and there are still only the three old bells, can any of your readers inform me why the scheme fell through? Surely, Sir, the ancient mother-church of a large and important parish like Stoke ought to be provided with a full peal. A LOVER OF CHURCH BELLS."

HOUNSLOW (Middlesex).—It was intended to start for a peal of Grandsire Triples here on Monday, August 4th, but the band met one short, and the following rang 720 Kent Treble Bob Minor. R. Flaxman, 1; G. Stanbrook, 2; J. J. Parker, 3; J. Basden, 4; A. Garraway, 5; S. Hayes (conductor), 6. And some Stedman Doubles with 4-6-8 covering; Messrs. Gould and Goodchild ringing 6-8. After lowering the bells in peal, they made their way to Isleworth, where it was intended to start for a peal of Oxford Bob Triples, but they were still one short, so they rang 720 Oxford Bob Minor with 6-8 covering. Afterwards the veteran William Nowel came up, and rang the 7th through a 504 of Grandsire Triples, conducted by J. Basden; also a short touch conducted A. Garraway.

THOSE of our readers who are preparing for their autumn holidays would do well to consult the time-tables and excursion arrangements of the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company, whose net work of lines runs to all the most pleasant and interesting spots on our southern coast. The route from London Bridge to Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight opens out to the traveller some of the most magnificent views in the country, including Box Hill, Dorking, Arundel, and many other beautiful scenes of scenery. From Portsmouth, the trip to the island is soon accomplished, when one can make his choice between Ryde, Sandown, Shanklin, Ventnor, Carisbrooke, Cowes, Freshwater, and many other delightful health-giving resorts—each one being well worth a visit. For those who prefer the mainland, cheap fast trains run daily to Brighton, Lewes, Eastbourne, Hastings, etc., all arranged to meet the requirements of every class of holiday-maker.

ST. MARY'S GUILD, PORTSEA.

The first annual outing of the above Guild took place on Monday, August 18th, the outing taking the form of an excursion by brake to Arundel via Chichester. The band is quite a young one, having been only formed in the latter part of last year on the erection of the new parish church at Portsea, but up to the present time most satisfactory progress has been made. After a short touch on the home peal a start was made about 7 o'clock, the weather being simply perfect for a driving excursion. The party numbered in all about twenty-five, including Mr. J. W. Whiting, of Fareham, whose kindly acts as instructor to the band and whose efforts in that capacity are most indefatigable. Chichester was reached about 9 o'clock, and the party proceeded at once to the Cathedral belfry where, by the kind permission of the Dean, some Grandsire Doubles were rung, and also some courses of Triples with some of the local men standing in. Cathedral service being on at 10 o'clock, the bells were lowered in peal, and the drive was resumed, reaching Arundel about 12 o'clock, where arrangements having been first made for ringing after dinner, ample justice was done to a most elegant and recherche repast.

On arrival at the tower they found the bells already raised, and two or three attempts for a 500 were made, but were not brought round, the last attempt coming to grief about two leads from home; a 377 was however brought round with the assistance of two local gentlemen. The bells were then lowered, and attention was turned to the castle and the park for an hour or so, the party assembling again for tea about 5.15. A start homewards was made about 6.30, and home was reached shortly before midnight. An endeavour to have another touch on the Chichester bells (which by the way go beautifully), was unfortunately frustrated by the absence of the gentleman who held the key of the gate. They beg to thank the Dean of Chichester and the vicar of Arundel for granting them the use of their bells, and also the ringers at both places for the exceedingly kind and courteous reception they gave them.

RINGERS' EXCURSION.

On Monday, August 18th, the ringers of St. Mary's, Bath, and a few friends went to Oxford. We have read of many outings lately, and it is only the great success of this, which prompts publication for other's guidance. Reaching Oxford at 11 a.m., they were met by J. W. Washbrook, whose gift for conducting ringers is only partially displayed in the tower. Afterwards it was said that no man would believe, if told, the amount seen, the distance covered, the crowded stories and reflections. But thus it was done: Leaving the station a short halt was in Worcester Quad, then on past the Martyrs' Memorial to St. John's; next to Keble, the "Varsity pitch" in the park, past the Museum, Wadham and Trinity Colleges to the Old Schools and New College; then to All Souls, and, with a glance at University, to St. Mary's, the Radcliffe and Bodleian Library, whence, after lingering over the many marvels, they sped to the "Queen" Restaurant for a capital dinner. Next for after-dinner ease and fuming bowls to Christ Church Meadows; then on to the Cathedral, unfortunately draped in holland, and restless with dust and duster. Before passing away from the glories of "The House," some mounted Tom tower to see and hear the ponderous seven-ton bell. Next on to Oriel and to Corpus, where in their own conductor's college the party was immortalized by the camera, together with "Tom," the fifteen-year old college cat. Next to Merton and past the new schools to Magdalen, with its grand chapel, water walks and deer park, and after that to tea up "the High" to the Restaurant, eye-worn, feet aching and hungry. Yet again the ringing members struggled back to St. Peter's belfry and rang to their bodies, if not their heart's content; while the rest made for Folly Bridge and pursued the river to "The Gut." And then came the time for parting looks and shaking hands; and away home by the night mail to Bath, after a day like which there can be but few.

FOR SALE, SPLENDID PEAL OF 42 HANDBELLS—Chromatic, from G25 to C1, by Messrs. BLEWS, Birmingham, together with Table, Box, and all fittings for the formation of a band. Cost over £30. Will take 10 Guineas for immediate cash. Great bargain. Apply, B. T. LONGLEY, 99, West Street, Sheffield.

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA.

In connection with the visit of some of the members of the Victorian Society, who visited and rang a peal at St. Philip's church, Sydney, a presentation took place, consisting of a nicely-framed picture, shewing a view of St. Mark's and St. Philip's churches, where their ringing principally took place. Immediately under the views is the following inscription, written in old English:—

"St. Mark's, Darling Point, St. Philip's, Church Hill, Sydney, 1890." Presented to Mr. J. L. Murray, by W. S. Morton, as a slight token of esteem, and in appreciation of his ability as a conductor on the occasion of his ringing and conducting Holt's ten-part peal of Grandsire Triples, believed to be the first peal ever rung in the southern hemisphere. Rung at St. Philip's church, Sydney, on April the 9th, 1890, in 3 hours and 15 minutes. Ringers: William Shenston, 1; John Beechey, 2; J. Horton, 3; J. L. Murray (conductor), 4; William Albinson, 5; T. B. Hall, 6; A. Adams, 7; Thomas H. Joyner, E. A. E. Collins, 8."

A view of St. Philip's was also presented to each ringer who stood in the peal, as a slight memorial of the occasion. The presentation was made through Mr. Shenston (one of the band) who happened to come to Sydney on a similar errand.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

MANCHESTER BRANCH.—On Saturday, August 23rd, a very successful ringing meeting was held at the parish church, Whitefield, there being upwards of forty members present from Manchester, Eccles, Worsley, Ashton-under-Lyne, Radcliffe, and Flixton. Ringing commenced about 4.30, and was kept up until 9 p.m., with the exception of about forty-five minutes' interval for the business meeting. Touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples, Plain Bob, and Treble Bob Major were successfully brought round, the ringing being very fair on the whole, considering the bad go of the tenor. At the meeting subsequently held in the schoolroom and presided over by Mr. G. Longden, it was decided to hold the next monthly meeting at Flixton parish church on Saturday, September 20th. A question was put to the chairman by Mr. Houghton, of Whitefield, as to what benefits young probationers would receive from the Association on becoming members. On this question a warm discussion ensued among the members present. It was eventually decided to bring the matter forward at the Annual Meeting of the Association to be held at Manchester in the month of October.

Votes of thanks to the rector and churchwardens for the use of the bells and schoolroom brought the meeting to a close.

ST. ALBANS, HERTS.

On Saturday, August 23rd, A. H. Taber and J. Basden visited this place with a beanfeast party. At 3.45 they met by appointment Mr. W. Battle, who had kindly arranged for a pull on the Cathedral and St. Peter's bells. After he had shewn them the numerous things of interest in and about the cathedral, which was greatly enjoyed, they rang 504 and 168 Grandsire Triples. E. Chapman, 1; S. E. Mitchell, 2; J. Basden (conductor), 3; A. H. Taber, 4; H. Brewer, 5; W. Battle, 6; T. Waller, 7; H. L. Waddington, 8. They then adjourned to St. Peter's, and with W. H. L. Buckingham rang another touch of Grandsire Triples, and attempted a touch of Stedman Triples, and with Mr. Debenham and others rang a course of Grandsire Caters. A hasty farewell had to be taken, and they wish, through the medium of this paper, to thank one and all for their kindness during their short but pleasant visit.

One Sunday morning, in the City,
"The scruffe" sent deputies; what a pity.
Deplorable to tell:
The ringing was below the mark,
A great gun almost went mad, stark,
And with low ring countenance and dark,
Disgusted, set his bell.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Let us be thorough in all our actions."

I have had to be satisfied for the past few weeks with being "crowded out," as the saying is, in other words the mass of reports sent to our Editor has been so much that my remarks have had to give way. I am always glad to so retire, when necessary, though I am told of the fact that my notes are always greatly missed whenever such an exigency as an influx of "copy" happens.

* * * * *

Very little seems to be doing just now, but either enjoying or else arranging for the enjoyment of holidays. The principal centres of animation are the railway stations and sea-side resorts; where all sorts and conditions of men are to be seen on one object bent. I became a victim to the popular epidemic; I began to feel fagged, my very bones ached, and all over me came a sense of weariness and longing for a change of air and scene. Perhaps this was the outcome of my recent indisposition—it might have been more imagination than anything else—but I began to look out for some place which (as friend Joshua would modestly put it) I might honour with a visit. Last year I had a brief—much too brief—sojourn by the ocean; this year, country lanes, and sweet singing birds seemed to raise such a fascinating scene of repose that I longed to be amongst them and ruralise. But where should I go? This question was still unanswered when I received a very warm invitation from an old schoolmate who had settled down as master of the National School in a country village some distance off. This decided my plans, and away I went as gaily as a schoolboy on his holidays. On arriving at the nearest railway station, some four miles from my destination, I was both surprised and delighted to find my old friend, along with a friendly farmer, who had brought his horse and trap to carry me over the intervening distance, "just to give the horse a bit of a stretch," he said, but I rather imagine the object was more with the view of doing a little service to my friend "the master," who I soon found out had made himself popular everywhere in the neighbourhood. The four miles drive that evening I shall not forget yet awhile. The picture was one "just as my fancy painted it:" lovely scenery met the eye whichever way one looked; fields, plantations, farmsteads, with here and there a grey old tower or a tall tapering spire—monuments of our ancestors' piety and regard of the spiritual requirements of those dependent on them. Then as we entered the village, a characteristic type of those many little spots which seem to calmly repose on the breast of mother country; every cottager's window was a perfect bank of flowers; and before we arrived at the old church with its ivy-covered walls and square embattled tower (close to which was the school and my friend's house) I felt as if I could lay aside everything and spend the remainder of my life in such a lovely and peaceful spot as this.

Next morning (which was Sunday) I woke early, after a most refreshing sleep; birds were singing outside. I could hear the "moo" of the cows, and the occasional bark of a dog, which combined sounded to me like music incomparable. Then later on, as I was partaking of breakfast with an appetite such as I had not felt for months back, the sound of bells came from the old tower across the fields, as the sweet-toned ring of six were being raised in peal. This, on enquiry, I was informed, was the eight o'clock Sunday morning peal. When, a generation ago, the old tower was tenanted by two little bells only, this performance was known as the "ting-tang," and dire would have been the consequences to the old sexton had he failed to commence punctually. But on the arrival of the ring of six, this "ting-tang" duty fell on the local company, who ever since made it a practice to raise the bells at that time, and leave them ready for morning service. At 9.30 I was in the churchyard, curious to see what sort of brother-strings I should meet with in this quiet out-of-the-way place. Would they be of the old sort—pulley-hauley, Churchyard Bob, Gravestone Delight performers—I wondered. Then I heard them commence, and was not long in doubt, for after a very short spell at rounds, the bells broke into Grandsire Minor, and with the exception of a slight trip here and there, went like clockwork for about twenty minutes, till the 720 was finished and they came into rounds again. I then made a move to the tower door, thinking of paying a visit to the belfry, where I met the curate, also on the same errand. From a short conversation with him I learnt that their ringing business went on as regularly and as smoothly as the striking of the bells to which I had just listened. Every Sunday morning—the rector himself being too old and infirm for the task of mounting the belfry stairs—he visited the band for a few minutes' conversation, thus becoming intimately acquainted with everything going on; and when necessary repairs—new ropes, etc.—were required, reported the same to the Wardens. If any of the members were absent through sickness or family trouble, the same was told the rector, who on the following day visited the absent members, to render what assistance—both spiritual and temporal—was needed. Then we together ascended the belfry steps, as the bells were again sounding to the tune of Grandsire Minor, the ringers, as I afterwards learnt, being considerably surprised at their curate's non-appearance as usual on the completion of their first 720. That, however, was owing to your humble servant—en passant. When I opened the belfry door, I was much pleased to find a comfortable apartment—a veritable sitting-room, in fact—carpetted floor, cushioned seats, a pretty mat for each ringers' rope to fall upon, and in the corner a wash-hand basin, on stand, with large pitcher of water at its side, a towel hung on a rail just by, and a mirror with combs and brushes in close proximity. I entered as quietly as possible, so as not to disturb the men at the ropes, the conductor of whom let the ropes come home at the half-peal end, and I had the pleasure of witnessing the cordial relationship which existed between parsons and ringers. There was no servility or obsequiousness on the one part, nor was there any arrogant assumption of authority on the other. While every respect was shewn to the curate, by virtue of his office it was quite evident that there was more existing amongst them than mere acquaintanceship; there was unmistakably a feeling of mutual respect and brotherly love existing, which it was positively a treat to witness. I left them at the same time as their curate, with feelings better imagined than described. Here, thought I, is a band as it should be—a recognised part of the Church's system in the parish, and where the ringers know it and conduct themselves accordingly. I was therefore not a bit surprised while sitting in Church during the morning prayer to notice, scattered among the congregation, the faces of those I had seen previously in the belfry. And as I walked with my friend homewards to dinner at the close, I felt prouder of my position as a church bell-ringer, and happier at the sight of things as they should be, than I had felt for many a long day. Here I must close for this week. How I went in the evening to a neighbouring parish, and what were my experiences there, I must leave for a future time.

* * * * *

There is a very nice man in St. Albans who has written about "fiendish-looking" ringers. This individual, I suppose, is one of those gutter-writers whom cheap local newspapers have created. Some people would say we must forgive him. No doubt he wrote his "lineage" on bank-holiday, when the enemy had entered into his mouth and stole away what remnant of brains he had left. If my "notes" comprised such mongrel rubbish as this, the Editor of this paper would soon put an end to the literary efforts of

SATURDAY, AUGUST 30, 1890.

By a letter from the Rev. E. W. CARPENTER (Hon. Sec. of the Kent County Association) which will be found in its proper place in another column, we learn with satisfaction that the little roughness which has existed for a short time at Tenterden has been cleared away. We shall not be committing any breach of courtesy or etiquette in saying that the mediation of the rev. gentleman has been the sole factor in the termination of the unpleasant position which for a short time existed; and no doubt those concerned, especially the company of ringers, will be of opinion that in the Secretary of their Association they have a gentleman who is able and willing to rectify similar misunderstandings, if ever they should arise.

There is one important lesson to be learnt from this Tenterden affair. Interference of any kind we are fully aware, often creates a soreness, and the panacea which first suggests itself is the offices of a newspaper. But it is much better to exhaust every other legitimate source for the removal of a difficulty before resorting to such means. And if upon occasions like the one before us, the aid of the principal among ringers of the district is invoked, such as the mediation of an Association Secretary, the end of the unpleasant situation is not far off.

Correspondence.

While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR,—Could any person kindly inform me of the names of a band of Norwich ringers that rang a peal at Holbeach, Lincolnshire, in June 1771, which according to a Norwich newspaper "they rung a complete length of Eight in, at which place their names with the bell each man rung were set up in the belfry of the church." This peal was rung on their journey to attend the opening of York Minster bells; can any one inform me of any tablet up for this peal, or whether the Norwich ringers rang any other peal in Lincolnshire, or what was done by them at the York opening in 1771 or 1772, as they were absent from Norwich some twelve months, from June 1771 to June 1772, during which time (according to the Norwich Mercury), they visited all the principal towns in the north of England, where they were treated with the utmost politeness and respect. P. S.

SIR,—Could any person kindly inform me of the whereabouts and address if possible, of Mr. Brown, who conducted a peal of Stedman Triples at Dereham, in 1865. G. LINDOFF.

AN ANSWER.

SIR,—In answer to your correspondent L. G. of August 9th, Thurstan's peal of Stedman Triples was rung at East Dereham, Norfolk, on the 25th of February, 1867, no other peal of Stedman rung in the District nearer than Norwich. P. S.
31, Esdelle Street, Norwich.

A SATISFACTORY EXPLANATION.

SIR,—Seeing in your issue of Saturday last, a letter containing accusations against the steeplekeeper of St. Mary's, Taunton, and I being the person referred to, I trust you will kindly allow me space in your valuable columns to reply. It is quite true that Mr. Radford asked me some time ago to get permission for a peal of Grandsire Triples, the band to be made up as follows: Bristol and Bath, three men each, Mr. Radford and myself. Mr. J. Hinton was spoken of as the conductor. I heard nothing more of this contemplated peal, until the night before the day named, when Mr. T. Radford came to me with a letter, which stated that only one of these gentlemen was coming, at the same time asking me if we could not make up a band to ring a few touches in company with this gentleman. I asked him how it could be done, and he mentioned to me the names of some persons, whom I, acting under instructions given me as conductor, was obliged to refuse, and nothing whatever was then said about a peal. As I have been accused in "THE BELL NEWS," by "T. R." of endeavouring to discourage change-ringing, will you permit me through the same columns to ask him two questions:—1. The names of those whom he had selected to ring? 2. At whose hands he obtained his instructions in the art of change-ringing? In conclusion, I can only say that for the future as in the past, I shall always be ready to do anything I can to forward the real interest of change-ringing. T. DOBLE.

[We have received another letter to the same effect. Had we known our friend Mr. Doble was the steeplekeeper, the heading to the letter last week would not have been allowed to appear. The publication of this letter will we hope satisfy Mr. Doble and his friends, and the correspondence may now cease.—Ed.]

THE MISUNDERSTANDING AT TENTERDEN.

SIR,—As it was publicly stated that the Vicar of Tenterden had closed the tower to the Tenterden ringers, I think equal publicity should be given to the fact that the ringers are reinstated in their office. It is unnecessary to go into the details of the matter. There were misunderstandings on both sides owing principally, as it seems to me, to the fact that the vicar and the ringers communicated by letter, and finally the vicar has stated that he "wrote under a misapprehension of facts." I was able to give to each side the views of the other with the result that Mr. Nunn obtained an interview with the vicar and the matter was settled. Probably five minutes' conversation would have prevented the affair reaching the point it did.

ST. NEOTS BELLS.

SIR,—Being one of the company who paid a visit to St. Neots on August Bank Holiday, 1889, I should like to state that should a company think of visiting the place they will find the bells in wretched going order. I should advise them if they want to ring them for more than fifteen minutes at a time to take some steam power with them. When a band of the Bedfordshire Association visited the place it was found a heavy job to get two short touches (168 and 336 Grandsire Triples). I have mentioned this for the information of any company thinking of paying the place a visit. Eaton Socon was another place visited, which tower contains a peal of six, wretchedly out of tune and go very bad, but we managed to ring two 720's. Eynesbury, a stone's throw from St. Neots tower, has a peal of six which also go very badly. So you see what is wanted first is the bellhanger, then probably some good might be done in the district. If there were no better going bells than at the places mentioned I for one would never touch a bell rope any more. If any of your readers would like to know any more and what was rung on them on August 5th, 1819, I would refer them to "THE BELL NEWS" of August 17th, 1889. C. W. CLARKE.

SIR,—In your article in last week's issue you spoke of the ringing done at St. Neots, and the possibility of a visit to the town by a band of scientific change-ringers. May I express the wish that should they visit St. Neots, they would also try and have a pull at the parish church of Eynesbury, which is a stone's throw from St. Neots. At this tower there has recently been formed a young band, who are anxious to become good change-ringers. Most of the members can ring Bob Doubles, but the want of an instructor is greatly felt. Any ringer who could find time to visit Eynesbury and give a few words of advice, would be kindly welcomed by the band, who, unfortunately reside in a county where the art of change-ringing is almost unknown. A WOULD-BE CHANGE-RINGER.

SIR,—Your correspondent in last week's "BELL NEWS" points out that we work the changes on a system of our own, this system he says with the treble always in front. I do not think your correspondent could have visited St. Neots lately, for since Christmas we have rung Triples. The cardboard business however is not used by us all; four of us are able to ring 120 Bob Doubles. If any one would care to come to St. Neots and try St. Neots bells—when a fortnight ago it took four of us to pull the 7th up—and if our bells went like St. Mary's, Huntingdon, we might be tempted to ring more. We always ring half-pull. Should your enlightened correspondent like to come and try to raise the 7th in peal, he will be welcome to do so; and if he requires any help I will stand in readiness to help. C. CHASTY.

THE RECENT PEAL AT ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

SIR,—As I have only just seen my last Saturday's "BELL NEWS" I wish your kind indulgence for a few parting words with Mr. Longden, as I shall not pursue the matter any further, because, he having failed in argument, must descend to personal abuse. The matter he speaks about at Manchester in a peal of Treble Bob Royal I do not remember, but I would remind Mr. Longden that through the third lead the 6th is in the slow, so I do not know how I could begin to course him, but having rung over thirty peals in the Treble Bob method during the last nine years, I think I am capable of seeing when a bell is in the slow for two leads together. But, Mr. Editor, this is outside the question. I do not see that Mr. Longden has brought any arguments forward to substantiate his first letter, and would beg to remind him that personal abuse will not prove a peal false. I think I may safely leave the matter in the hands of my brother-ringers to judge who is right and who is wrong in this matter between the whole society and one dissatisfied late member. JOHN HOPWOOD, 25, Egerton Street, Ashton-under-Lyne.

POETIC LICENSE.

When readers of this journal ponder o'er,
The touches, peals, and outings, in the news,
"Free Lance" and "Joshua," and poetic lore,
And compositions intricate from which to choose:

'Tis wonderful, some think, how all this mass,
Is gathered in secure from day to day:
Amazing feats in figures, fit to pass
Their authors through the degree of B.A.

Twin bobs and Q blocks, what a medley here
Of Quick and Slow—all taxing to the mind:
Far and near places, snaps, whole turns severe,
Full work in front, and triple dodge behind.

Bobs right and wrong, middle, before, and home,
Singles half-way and end, to regulate the whole,
Methods galore—the names of which are known
Across the seas, almost from pole to pole.

Distracting science: and yet one fondly loved
By Britishers of every tribe and caste,
E'en those who are but listeners, are moved
At length to cease the grumbling of the past—

And wishful to become good ringers in due time,
Greatly regretting that they'd held aloof;
Then join the "Colls," but 'fore they've learnt to chime Loudly murmur 'cause they're not in "the scruffe."

This high position gained, the next ambition
Is to outshine the old and tried conductors;
But failing this (a possible condition),
Strive to engage as company instructors.

Any way they must have the loaves and fishes,
Other matters are not worth consideration,
Ringing qua ringing does not meet their wishes,
And practices are works of supererogation.

The tide thus turned, apathetic they become,
Their energy has undergone a great reversal,
Fines they evade when possible, and some Employment find in "doings quite commercial."

To publicity they have a grave objection,
From jealousy and fear that they should lose
Anything like fees, or even slight reflection,
And turn their back upon their friend—"BELL NEWS."

Others arise, whose course is more than steady
And not spasmodic—their aim is reformation,
Progress their watchword! these are always ready To happily increase "THE BELL NEWS" circulation.

CALBE.

EARL'S BARTON (NORTHANTS).

DEATH OF AN OLD RINGER.—On Sunday, August 10th, there died at Earls Barton, aged 73, one of the best known and most respected church bell ringers in the district. Mr. Farrow Barker had been a ringer and chimer at Barton Church for a great many years. He had a good knowledge of the method or science of campanology, and was, moreover, a correct and precise treble ringer. Mr. Barker was until lately a frequent and welcome visitor at Wellingborough belfry, where he loved in the old days to "lead" on the peal of six, and latterly was proud to handle the rope of the new treble of eight. Formerly he would have a pull at the "big bell" and was fond of relating that he first rang Wellingborough tenor when he came to be confirmed nearly sixty years ago. Farrow Barker's family have resided in Earls Barton for a long period. When Barton tenor was recast in the year 1761, Vincent Barker, who was a farmer, was instrumental in getting the work done, and the bell bears his name as "Benefactor." On the evening of Farrow Barker's funeral his fellow-ringers half-muffled the bells and rang several 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles, as a fitting tribute of respect to his memory. G. Johnson (conductor), 1; H. Line, 2; W. Austin, 3; F. Jones, 4; A. White, 5; W. Willis, 6.

BIRCHINGTON, KENT.

On Monday, August 18th, by the kindness of Mrs. John Wood, of Dilkoosha, Birchington, and the Court Theatre, London, in commemoration of her daughter's marriage, a dinner was given at the "West Cliff" hotel to the Quex Park and All Saints' band and some other friends. The chair was occupied by Mr. T. B. Reed sen. (captain), and Mr. E. Knott was vice-chairman.

An excellent dinner was provided and ably served by the Host, Mr. Hillier, to which full justice was done. The cloth was then removed, and the first toast was "The Queen and Royal Family," proposed by the Chairman, who also gave the next toast, the "Army, Navy, and Reserve Forces." These were both duly honoured. Next followed the toast of the evening—"The Bride and Bridegroom," proposed by Mr. E. Knott. This was most enthusiastically received and drank with musical honours, the whole of the company standing. A similar reception was accorded to "The health of Mrs. John Wood," which next followed. This was succeeded by "Prosperity to the Quex Park and All Saints' Band," which was duly responded to by the Chairman, who next gave the worthy "Host and Hostess," which was acknowledged by Mr. Hillier. The final toast, proposed by Mr. G. F. Ashton, was the "Prosperity to the village of Birchington," with which the name of Mr. D. Golder was coupled, who replied in fitting terms. The ringers gave some good touches on the handbells, and some capital songs were sung by Messrs. Wilson, Enden, Hutcheson, J. and E. Knott and others. At 10 p.m. the party went by request of Mrs. Wood to her residence, where the handbells were rung before that lady and her family, and after a short speech from the bridegroom and a suitable reply by Mr. Ashton, the party broke up with three ringing cheers for the kind lady who had given them so much pleasure.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

SINGLES AS APPLIED TO TWIN-BOB COMPOSITION.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

We now come to the second of the heads into which I have divided the consideration of singles, viz.: in what positions of the observation bell in a course can singles be called? The answer to the question is simple. A single can be called at any six in which it will disturb the work of the 7th and in no other. The two bells affected by a single are those dodging 4-5 up and 6-7 down; the former, by making 5ths place, cuts out the two sixes it would have dodged behind; the latter, by repeating the duty in 6-7, adds two sixes to its work. In every course the 7th is twice in 4-5 up and twice in 6-7 down; therefore there are four places in a course where this bell may be disturbed by singles. These positions are known by the number of their sixes as 2, 9, 11, and 14 respectively, of which the singles at 2 and 11 lengthen the work of the 7th, while those at 9 and 14 shorten it. As the course of the 7th must of necessity be kept regular, it is manifest that every shortening single entails a complementary lengthening one, and vice versa.

The singles at 2 and 14 occur after the 7th has come out quick, those at 9 and 11 after it has come out slow. Therefore if a single at 14 is used, a single at 2 will restore the identical part of the course that was previously skipped. Similarly, a single at 11 restores the piece cut out by a single at 9. A very curious and useful discovery has, however, been made by Mr. Parker, namely, that a single at 2 can be used to compensate for a single at 9, and consequently, by analogy, a single at 11 to balance one at 14. The value of the innovation lies in the fact that, by the use of such singles, non-shunting blocks, which would otherwise be useless for a peal in parts, can be caused to shunt. If a non-shunting part is introduced between a single at 2 and one at 14, or between a single at 11 and one at 9, the second single in either case will bring the bells into the six that would have come up by omitting the first single. Equally will this be so if the single at 14 precedes that at 2, or the single at 9 that at 11. The introduction however of a single at 9 to balance one at 2, or at 11 to balance one at 14, has the effect that the block singled in is no longer quitted at the point where it was entered. For the second single, instead of restoring to their places both the bells disturbed by the first single, replaces only the 7th, at the same time disturbing a fresh bell; or, to regard the matter in another way, and taking as an instance a single at 2 followed by one at 9, the block singled in falls short of including the whole of the last of its courses by the number of sixes that lie between 9 and 14, the latter being the point at which such last course would naturally be completed. That is to say, a block is introduced of which one course is incomplete, the remainder occurring elsewhere in the peal. This very intricate evolution reflects the highest credit on its originator, and demands the closest attention from any imitator to ensure that the sixes omitted in one place are correctly introduced in another. I can suggest no safer way to obtain a thorough insight into this most complicated problem than a careful study of Mr. Parker's No. 8 peal as published in "THE BELL NEWS" of January 25th, 1890, but later on the matter will be further considered.

Having now shewn that a single may be called at any of the four positions in a course in which it will disturb the work of the 7th, it remains to explain why, in twin-bob composition, this call can be used at no other six. In order to avoid losing the thread of Hudson's 60 courses, to which it has been proved we are absolutely confined, it is necessary that the shunt effected by a single should be into some other part of these 60 courses. Such part may be in its even or odd form, but out of Hudson's 60 courses we cannot go. In a P block there are 14 sixes. Of these, since 4 are singleable, 10 remain to be tested. These 10 do not include, however, all the positions at which singles are conceivable. If a fully bobbed course be pricked, that is, one having S, H, L, and Q all bobbed, which may be termed the B block of the twin-bob system, the six-ends produced by the first of each pair of bobs are, as we already know, absent from the 60 P blocks. It is, therefore, necessary also to enquire what will be the result of a single instead of a bob following these positions, thus adding 4 more possibly singleable sixes, and making, with the previous 10, 14 in all.

If these 14 positions be each severally singled we obtain 14 odd six-ends. In order to compare them with the 60 P blocks these six-ends must be transposed to their even form. Upon analysis every one of the 14 will be found to be either an irregular six or one of wrong denomination for its position. The inadmissibility of any P block six in an irregular form was proved in article No. 1. A six of wrong denomination for its position is one that comes as a slow six where regularity demands a quick one, or vice versa. Since the 7th is not disturbed by any of these 14 singled positions we are considering, it is evident that the shunt effected by such a single must be to a six in a corresponding position in some other course, which cannot be the case when the denomination is changed. Nor does the fact of the change from even to odd sixes, or the converse, affect the question; for it was shewn in article No. XIII that any six must remain of the same denomination when changed from its even to its odd form, or vice versa. Therefore singles can only be called at the four sixes in a course in which the 7th is thereby disturbed.

It will be more convenient to give the table shewing the effect of each of the four shunts obtainable by singles when we come to the consideration of the manner in which the main blocks of a peal are to be joined.

CORRECTION.—In article No. XIII., first line of third paragraph in second column. "It is thus plain that any course-end transposed by 3215476." For "3215476" read "2135476."

SOCIETY OF COPLEY SCHOLARS.

On Saturday, August 30th, a special ringing meeting was held at Saltaire, for the purpose of repeating the experiment tried at Bolton a few weeks ago. On the former occasion the test pieces were touches of Triples and Major; this time the piece de resistance was a 720 of Bob Minor, and instead of being arranged beforehand, the members of each company were drawn just previous to starting. Three companies were thus made up; the first of which came to grief, through two bells changing places after ringing about six minutes, but starting afresh, completed the 720. The next company was more unfortunate, for after ringing short of ten minutes, they jumbled out, and on recommencing again collapsed soon after the half-way single. The third, however, got the bells at a nice speed; and completed their 720 without a hitch. Messrs. J. H. Hardcastle and James Angus again officiated as censors, and seated beneath the wide-spreading branches of a large tree in the church grounds, took the faults and otherwise criticised the ringing as it proceeded. At the close the members assembled on the grassy slope round the judges' table, when Mr. Angus read the reports, which contained many very useful observations.

Mr. George Titterton then moved, and Mr. Sam Palframan seconded, a cordial vote of thanks to the judges for their valuable services, and the good advice which was contained in their reports, which was carried amid loud applause.

Messrs. Angus and Hardcastle briefly replied, and an adjournment was made to the Royal Cafe, where, in company with some of the members' wives, tea was partaken of; thus concluding a very pleasant and profitable afternoon's outing.

THE ESSEX ASSOCIATION.

The Rector of Chelmsford wishes me to make it known to all whom it may concern that change-ringing can only be allowed in the belfry of St. Mary's church upon Saturdays and Bank Holidays. The frequent services and the proximity of rooms in which evening classes are held, render this rule necessary. Members of the Association who may wish to arrange for a peal or any ringing upon the ten bells at Chelmsford will do well to confine their application to the days specified by the Rector.

The Report with list of members for the current year is now ready, and is being forwarded as quickly as possible. Ringing members resident in the county should apply to the heads of their respective companies.

I beg to call attention to the advertisement of a District Meeting to be held at Saffron Walden on September 20th.

T. L. PAPILLON, Hon. Sec. E.A.C.R.

Writtle Vicarage, Chelmsford.

LEEDS AND DISTRICT AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The usual monthly ringing meeting of the above society was held at Christ Church, Armley, on Saturday, August 30th, upwards of forty members being present, from Leeds, Pudsey, Headingley, Holbeck, Bramley, Burley, Rothwell, and Armley and the bells were kept going up to 9.30 p.m. in the following methods: Oxford and Kent Treble Bob; Woodbine; Duke of York; Violet; and College Pleasure. The ringing throughout was well struck and those present thoroughly enjoyed a very successful meeting. A vote of thanks to the Vicar and Churchwardens for the use of the bells brought the proceedings to a close. Four new members were admitted at this meeting.

THE LARGEST PARISH CHURCH IN ENGLAND.

The following letter, from The Great Yarmouth Gazette, is sent to us for publication:—

SIR,—An attempt has been made with much assurance to deprive St. Nicholas', Great Yarmouth, of its renown, but it will not do, and the statement must be contested that has gone forth from St. Michael's Vicarage, Coventry, and recently copied into various newspapers, to effect that the glorious church of that parish is, in respect of area, the premium parish church of the land, being 293 feet 9 inches long and 127 feet wide in its broadest part, and that its present area including the tower is 24,015 superficial feet, "thus making it the largest parish church in England, St. Nicholas, Great Yarmouth, coming next with an area of 23,265 superficial feet." St. Nicholas, Great Yarmouth, is perfectly contented with, and glories in possessing 23,265 superficial feet, and by them still claims to be respected by all men as being truly the largest of the strictly parish churches in England. In the work published eight years ago (and now out of print), giving the history of St. Nicholas' church, the following footnote, explanatory of some remarks respecting St. Michael's church, appears on page 13. In a descriptive guide to St. Michael's the length as stated to be 293½ feet, and the breadth was 127 feet. As this statement was at variance with Sir E. Beckett's statistics, he was communicated with, and the following is a copy of his reply:—"St. Michael's, Coventry, is 280 feet long inside, including the tower, but that is only open to the church by a small door. Without the tower it is 252 feet, as given in my list formerly published. I took this from a plan lent me by Sir G. Scott, who restored the church." The list referred to in this note gives the area of many cathedrals and large churches, and states that the area of St. Michael's church (without the tower) is 22,080 superficial feet. This tower has recently been opened to the church by the formation of an arch, so that it now may unquestionably be added to the area of the building. This tower from Sir E. Beckett's statement, would appear to contain about 784 superficial feet, these being added to the 22,080 brings the total area, not to the 24,015 square feet that are now claimed, but only to 22,864. St. Michael's tower is certainly a grand one, but it is not strong enough to bear the weight of its own bells, nor is it large enough to bid St. Nicholas', Great Yarmouth, to "come next." Allow me to mention that at the present time two portions of St. Nicholas' are in the hands of workmen, who are engaged in restoration work that will require an expenditure of about £3000; here then is an excellent opportunity afforded the "faithful in the land" to offer willing aid in rescuing from time's destructive hand, the largest of "the grey old churches" we have inherited from our forefathers.

E. J. LUPSON.

VISIT OF THE HATFIELD COLLEGE YOUTHS TO ALDENHAM, HERTS.

ON Sunday, August 31st, the above society paid a visit to the parish church to have a pull on the bells, arriving there between one and two o'clock. After refreshing the inner man a move was made to the tower where the local company, awaited them. The bells being raised a plain course of Grandsire Triples was rung with W. Hewitt, of the local company, ringing the treble. Afterwards a 392 was brought round. H. Shepherd, 1; W. J. Rumney, 2; J. Kentish, sen., 3; J. Shepherd, 4; A. Shepherd (conductor), 5; H. G. Rowe, 6; J. Hollingsworth, 7; G. Smith, 8. While the service was going on the members spent a few pleasant hours in Bricket Wood Scrubbs, a noted place for nuts. They then returned and rang a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples. H. Shepherd, 1; W. J. Rumney, 2; J. Hollingsworth, 3; J. Shepherd, 4; J. Kentish, 5; H. G. Rowe (composer and conductor), 6; A. Shepherd, 7; G. Smith, 8. First quarter-peal by A. Shepherd. Also several plain courses of Grandsire Doubles. A. Shepherd, 1; H. G. Rowe, 2; F. Wright, 3; J. Shepherd, 4; H. Wright, 5; H. Hart, 6; W. Hewitt, 7; J. Hollingsworth, 8. This is the first attempt on tower bells by Messrs. Wright and Hewitt. The members wish to thank the vicar for his kindness in allowing them to ring, and also the members of the local company. The following were the party: R. Canham, H. Tharby, D. Dolleman, J. Greenham, R. Shepherd, J. Kentish, jun., A. Shepherd, J. Shepherd, J. Kentish, sen., H. Shepherd, W. J. Rumney, J. Hollingsworth, and G. Smith.

RINGERS' OUTING.

The Reigate Society held their annual outing on August 20th, Brighton and Heene, Worthing, being the selected places of attraction. On arriving at Brighton, soon after 10 a.m., they were met by Mr. G. Williams, who was waiting to welcome them and who had made the arrangements for ringing at Heene and Brighton. Heene was reached soon after 12, being over an hour late; a little time was lost in finding the steeple keeper, but when everything was ready a start was made for a long touch of Grandsire Triples, which was unsuccessful, a short touch in the same method was brought round. F. Linter, 1; F. Hoad (conductor), 2; E. Moses, 3; J. Bashford, sen., 4; T. Brown, 5; E. Kenward, 6; W. Argent, 7; J. Howard, 8. A hasty retreat had to be taken to catch the 1 p.m. train back to Brighton. The afternoon was spent on the beach and water. At 5.15 arrangements for ringing at St. Nicholas, where three touches of Grandsire Triples were brought round, conducted respectively by F. Hoad, G. Williams, and E. Moses. W. Bleach and H. Weston took part in the ringing here; the bells were lowered in peal. At 7 o'clock we found ourselves at St. Peter's, a start being made for 588 Stedman Triples, which were well struck and brought round. G. Williams (conductor), 1; J. Bashford, 2; E. Moses, 3; G. A. King, 4; W. R. Smith, 5; E. Kenward, 6; J. Jay, sen., 7; J. Howard, 8. And 576 Treble Bob. F. Linter, 1; J. Bashford, 2; J. Jay, 3; E. C. Merrett, 4; W. R. Smith, 5; E. Moses, 6; G. Williams (conductor), 7; G. A. King, 8. We wish through "THE BELL NEWS," to thank the Vicars and steeple-keepers for granting us the use of the bells, and for having everything in readiness for ringing, and Mr. Williams for making the arrangements.

PORTRAIT NUMBER.—With next week's number will be issued a portrait with memoir of the veteran, MR. HENRY BRIGHT, of Woolwich, Kent.

ENQUIRIES.—A correspondent asks:—"Whether there are any bells at Llandudno or immediate neighbourhood, and also the address of a ringer would be esteemed."

An American professor says:—"Take a railroad from the earth to the sun, with a train running forty miles an hour, without stops, and it would take about two hundred and sixty-five years to make the journey." He estimates the fare at a penny a mile, to be £372,000. Even a public company prospectus writer could float such a railroad.

THE CARILLONS OF BELGIUM.

SIR,—Some of your readers must have had enough of the Rev. Mr. Haweis and Belgian bells, but there may be others to whom the subject is not so stale as it is to myself. I thought too that Editors were glad of a little padding at this time of year, but I see in your last issue that you are suffering from a plethora of copy. I visited some of the famous Belgian towers three years ago before I had seen Music and Morals. During the past month I have inspected more carefully the carillons at Louvain, Ghent, and Malines (or Mechlin).

It is difficult for a simple prosier to follow a prose poet. A musician or a bell-founder would probably impugn Mr. Haweis' accuracy. I do not find so much fault with his facts as with his colouring: and then, instead of distributing his praise and blame evenly, as he should have done on the evidence of his own one-sided reports, he has nothing but bad words for English bell-founders and bell-ringers, nothing but extravagant praise of the foreigner. Mr. Haweis draws a terrible picture of an unreformed English belfry, and tells a highly-varnished tale of Van den Gheyn the great carillonneur at Louvain in the last century. My first visit the other day was to Louvain. The bells of the carillon are closely packed in a wooden lantern which supplies the place of a central tower in the cathedral, and access was so difficult and painful that I did not venture to invite the Belgian friend who accompanied me to make another ascent. This gentleman's language was quite as strong as anything that Mr. Haweis has said about the neglected state of English belfries. I will only say that the ringers, who spend a good deal of their time in the towers and roof of the church, pay no attention to cleanliness and sanitation. It is fair to add that this was the only case of gross neglect I met with.

I asked after our friend Van den Gheyn. They did not know much about him, except that he was dead. (He died in 1785.) I tried to get hold of a carillonneur, as the man who plays on the key-board is called, but did not succeed here or elsewhere. At Louvain he is a pianist, at Ghent a watch-maker who has charge of the clock. These men could no doubt have told me much that was interesting, but I was able to extract sufficient information from the steeplekeepers.

At Ghent the carillon is in the belfry, at Malines in the tower of the Cathedral. A belfry (beffroi) on the Continent has no connection with the word bell, which is unknown there, but means a strong watch tower. In the middle ages these belfries contained the bells, which assembled the people in arms and gave the time of day, and the alarm in case of fire. Where there is no belfry, as at Louvain and Malines, some of the cathedral bells belong to the town.

One description will serve for the three carillons which I inspected. There are 40 bells hung in three or four tiers. They range over three and a half octaves. The smallest bell is about eight inches in diameter, and the largest a yard and a-half. At Malines, however, the great bells, weighing several tons, were connected by wires with the chiming apparatus.

The bells are all well-shaped, rather longer in the waist than English bells, and very thin at the sound bow. The chiming hammers are heavy, and are so balanced that a slight pull at one of the wires produces a sonorous note. In the case of the larger bells the hammers hang like clappers perpendicularly outside of the bells, as well as inside. The arrangement seemed to me to be ingenious, and well adapted for the purpose. There are two sets of wires, one for the chime-barrel, and the other for the key board or clavecin. The barrel was in each case comparatively new (1856). The tunes are changed twice a year, but I should call them melodies or symphonies rather than airs. They are played whenever the clock strikes, and at the quarters and half-quarters. The barrel and keyboard are in a chamber below the bells, and are protected from the weather. But the other ends of the iron wires are exposed to rain and snow, and must be always getting out of order. In fact, the clock music is jerky and unsatisfactory, and the explanation they give is always the same, that the apparatus has not been tuned lately.

It is, however, the clavecin that the people care for, and that seems to be worth noticing. Three years ago I was at Malines on market-day while it was being played. Dance music was hammered out in a lively jangling fashion. I felt inclined to laugh, and liked it rather than admired it.

The keyboard, or clavecin, consists of two or three rows of pegs in the place of the ivory keys of an organ and pedals. One of the men went though a dumb show of the performance for me, and it struck me at once, as I see it struck Mr. Haweis, as being the pantomime of a pugilistic encounter in the French style, which allows kicking. The pegs are struck with the gloved fist. In the clock music a chord is struck not simultaneously, but each note in rapid succession. The performer on the clavecin, whom I heard, struck his chords in unison, and the result was somewhat harsh and disagreeable. But an active and skilful carillonneur could, I think, strike the notes of a chord in succession with the same fist, and thus play a piece, for which an organist would use his ten fingers. Mr. Haweis says that Van den Gheyn composed and played music on the bells, which no carillonneur of the present day can attempt. I see no reason to doubt that he did so. From the inscriptions which I saw, most of the bells seem to have been cast by Hemony of Amsterdam (1650), and Van den Gheyn of Louvain (1750), or his successor Van Aerschodt in the present century. Mr. Haweis mentions the names of other Belgian and Dutch founders, and a Van den Gheyn as early as 1562.

The most costly and extensive carillon in the world is, I believe, at Mafra in Portugal. It was cast at the Louvain foundry in 1730, and was set up by the King at his own expense. According to Murray, the entire weight of metal in each of the two towers is reckoned at upwards of 200 tons. A friend, who has seen and heard these chimes, was more impressed with the clockwork than with the manual performance. The keys were like those of a piano, but a lady who tried them found the movement too heavy for her own fingers.

The bells of a carillon are admirably suited for that purpose. They sound well when touched, rather than struck, by a heavy hammer. It is, I suppose, a serious mistake to use them in the English fashion, and hence people who get bells in Belgium are often disappointed. Their heavy bells, which one hears rung out in peals of three, are very good. I dare say there are bad bells in Belgium, but not so many as in England. I have no doubt that our best bells are equal to theirs. In Belgium they have never neglected their bells as we have sometimes done in England, but there is nothing there corresponding to the revival of bell-ringing here during the last twenty years. I doubt whether a Belgian "BELL NEWS" would find any readers, or anything to print.

C. PEARSON.

P.S.—The carillon of Mafra is remarkable rather as a monument of a King's extravagant folly, than as a work of art. In the first instance the bellfounders declined the order, hinting that the expense was more than the revenues of Portugal could bear. Don John took offence, and replied that he had made a mistake, and would have a double set of bells. At the same time he sent in advance twice the sum the bellfounders had mentioned. The cost is said to have been half a million sterling, but could not have been nearly so much.

THE ST. JAMES' SOCIETY, LONDON.

At the general meeting of this Society, held on Monday, August 18th, 1890, at the "Essex Head," Essex Street, Strand, W.C., the following members were elected as officers for the year:—

Master, MR. HENRY R. NEWTON.

Secretary, MR. GEORGE WILD.

Treasurer, MR. A. ALBONE.

Stewards, { MR. E. E. RICHARDS.

{ MR. G. T. McLAUGHLIN.

A vote of thanks having been passed to the retiring officers, the following gentlemen—Mr. Henry H. Newton, and Mr. George T. McLaughlin—were elected to represent this Society at the next meeting of the National Central Council.

"Parochial" beadles are of the past,
And parochial ringers long won't last

If to critics they've objection,
Publicity they should always meet
With temper good and manners neat,
And speech; after due reflection.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"A little bird has whussed i' my lug" that some inquisitive brother-strings have been making valiant efforts to discover the locale of the story I narrated last week, and a gentle hint also reaches me that the promised account of my Sunday evening's experiences will be looked for with some amount of interest. I have no objection to either; if their exploits in connection with this amateur detective business yield them any amusement, they are quite welcome to it all, so far as I am concerned. But for goodness' sake, don't everybody almost, fit the cap on, and imagine that I have had some sinister design against them in this recounting of my rural peregrinations. With this small personal item got rid of, I will take up the thread of my story, according to promise.

* * * * *

Last week I told you how proud I felt of my profession as a church bell ringer after what I had seen in the morning; and as we sat—the two of us—in my friend's front room, partaking of a right good country-farm-house sort of dinner, the conversation (naturally with me) turned on belfry affairs. I was told that at a neighbouring Church, about three miles away, was another ring of six which my friend said was well worth a walk to hear. As service in summer was in the evening, we had abundant time to indulge in a lounge before starting, and so felt fresher at starting on the walk. About half-way on our journey, a bend in the road brought the church into view, an edifice one could see at a glance was quiet modern compared with the one in which we had worshipped that morning. In place of the old ivy-covered walls and low square embattled tower which we had just left, this was a building of quite noble dimensions, its very tall and elegant spire standing out in relief against a background of clear blue summer sky. I instinctively stopped to more fully realise the picture, it needed but the sound of the bells I thought, to complete the grandeur of the whole scene around. Then as we moved along again, I felt eager to reach the place, and plied my friend with questions, but somehow he appeared singularly reticent, and now and again I caught a smile gathering over his features as I waxed warm in my encomiums of the place, and indulged in great anticipations of the treat which must be in store. Well, we reached the village at last, and found it pretty much similar to the one we had started from, only more extensive, and as we were some time to the good before the ringing should begin, I proposed a look into the church. But that course was more easily suggested than carried out, for we found every door locked, and so, contenting ourselves with an exterior examination we sauntered round the grave-yard, when I soon began to experience a sensation the very reverse of what I had anticipated. In comparison with the carefully-tended grave plots which I had seen in the morning, with their abundance of flowering plants and other tokens of loving regard for the last mortal resting-place of those who had "gone before," this God's acre was a perfect wilderness; weeds were growing rank and evidently unrestrained. Tombstones leaned in all directions, and everywhere was apparent the most gross neglect. The mental picture I had drawn on first viewing the magnificent church of what were its surroundings was fast becoming obliterated, and while feelings of disappointment were thus rapidly filling my mind, I espied three men coming through the entrance gates. Two of them were smoking short clay pipes, and from their manner it was evident that they had no more regard for the sanctity of this consecrated place than for the open highway. Following them came another man—a big brawny fellow without coat, his shirt open at front displaying a broad chest, and his rolled-up sleeves exposing a pair of arms strong enough, one would imagine, to "fell an ox." I turned to my friend for explanation, who in reply simply smiled and informed me that these were four of the ringers. Three or four more similar individuals followed directly, most of them smoking, and I saw one unlock a door at the foot of the tower, and all disappeared, pipes in mouth, just as they had entered the churchyard.

After this, I was just debating in my mind whether or not to suggest an immediate return homewards, so as to be in time for service, when I heard a bell raised, then another, then two or three together, not in peal, but apparently just as suited the fancy of each individual at the rope's end. Then they struck off into rounds, which certainly sounded more pleasant, and I waited anxiously for the next performance. What was it to be? I was not very long left in doubt, for the rounds quickly changed to Queens, which settled the question, as well as my anticipations, most effectually. However, we decided to visit the belfry before service commenced, so up the stairs we mounted and soon found ourselves in a large well-lighted room, but in what a state! The dust and dirt of generations seemed to be clinging to walls, roof and floor. Not a vestige of covering appeared on floor or seat, and if paint or whitewash had ever been introduced into the place, it must have been anterior to the day of consecration, for every trace of it had disappeared, and dirt and cobwebs reigned supreme. The coatless man with the rolled up sleeves and brawny arms, I found perched on the tenor box, and pulling as if for his very existence, while great beads of perspiration stood on his forehead, while the other five stood at their ropes in various more or less grotesque attitudes, and behind them sat, or rather lolled on the seats, three or else four individuals, every one industriously engaged in "blowing a cloud" from the clay pipes in their mouths. No further notice was taken of our entrance than a prolonged inquisitive stare. "I think it's bacca time now, mates," remarked another, and forthwith he proceeded to put his theory into practice. I turned to leave, and as I did so, took one more hasty view of the scene. Ten men sat on the seats, nine of them indulging in the "fragrant weed," the smoke from them evidently in a fair way for speedily filling the place, and I was glad to get once more at the foot of the steps—out into the fresh air. It again became a subject of debate whether to remain for service or retrace our steps homeward, but eventually the former course was decided upon, and we entered the church through a magnificently-carved porch. I found the interior quite in keeping with the outside, so far as architecture went; and one thing was quite evident that at some time or other a very considerable amount must have been expended in the fine carving, the beautiful stained windows, and the richly-furnished chancel. My friend led the way to a pew by a window on the north side, from whence the neglected state of the graveyard seemed to appear more prominent by reason of its contrast with the elaborate nature of things inside. As we sat, the congregation assembled slowly—so slowly indeed that when the officiating clergyman had finished the Exhortation, I scarcely think there would be fifty persons present. Well, I need not trouble to describe the slipshod manner in which Evensong was gabbled through, nor the eight minutes of schoolboy platitudes which took the place of sermon. I learnt afterwards, that the rector was then on his annual holiday, which usually occupied from three to four months, during which time the Sunday services were performed by various "supplies," got from anywhere almost; and also that during the week there was no such thing as Church in this place. I was thus not a bit surprised to find that the Baptists had a large building in the village, as well as the Wesleyans, both of which were tolerably well filled by hearty congregations every Sunday, and who also between them conducted the only day school in the place. But I am diverging. Soon after we had commenced the psalms, my friend touching my arm pointed with his prayer-book to the window against which we stood. On looking out, there I saw the previous occupants of the belfry slowly walking along the path—ten of them, including the coatless man with his sleeves rolled up, and exposing a pair of brawny arms; and of the ten, nine had still the same clay pipe in their mouths. As I watched them for a moment, my thoughts somehow reverted to Writtle, and I wondered what would have been the feelings of our friend Mr. Papillon had he been about and viewed this ungodly procession as it filed out of the churchyard, and disappeared on the outer side of the gates. Service was over at length, and we retraced our steps homeward, passing soon after the front of the "Brown Cow," where, if one might judge from the boisterous sounds coming from the open windows, there was a considerable larger assembly than what had been seen in church. As we reached the first door of this "pub.," my friend asked if I cared to bid good-bye to my brother-ringers before finally leaving the place. Certainly not, was my reply, but why did he ask? "Oh," he replied, shrugging his shoulders smiling, "only because if you wanted to see them you would find them all there (pointing to one of the windows from whence most of the noise seemed to come) with a large mug in front of them." But I had no intention of paying them another visit. So we kept on our way, till once again we reached the grey old church and my friend's house; but somehow, I didn't feel quite so proud of my position as a church bell ringer as I had done on a previous part of that day.

* * * * *

Now what is the moral to be drawn from my experiences of that Sunday? I don't think I need point it out; it is so very obvious; so there I will leave it for the present. Perhaps at some future time I may relate certain other circumstances which came under my notice during that brief holiday in the country.

FREE LANCE.

LEISTON, SUFFOLK.—RINGERS' OUTING.

On Saturday, August 30th, the members of the St. Margaret's society, accompanied by the District Secretary, went on a ringing tour. The party started at 2.30 in a waggonette, and on passing through Thiberton were joined by that hale and veteran ringer—Mr. William Pipe. The first halt was made at Yoxford at 3.30—a most picturesque village, known as "The Garden of Suffolk." Here everything was in readiness, and the kind and respected vicar—the Rev. Henry Parr—was at the church giving the ringers a most cordial welcome, and explaining the many alterations made, resulting in the present very neat edifice. Here are a very fair ring of six bells, but they much need to pass through the bellhanger's hands. After ringing several touches of Bob Minor the party proceeded to Sibton, where the esteemed and popular vicar—the Rev. Wm. Bromley—was waiting to receive them, and who, after expressing the great pleasure it gave him to welcome them, proceeded to explain the various objects of interest in the sacred edifice, after which the tower was visited. Here are a very good ring of five in fair going order, with an excellent tenor, which can well do duty to a ring of eight. After having successfully brought round several 6-scores of Plain Bob and Grandsire Doubles, a move was made for Peasenhall, where there is a very handy ring of five in good going order. Here the party were joined by several members of the local company, amongst them being a very familiar face of another veteran ringer in the person of Mr. John Ludbrook, who has for many years been Master of the Peasenhall company. The vicar—the Rev. A. S. Thompson—was from home. After having discoursed various 6-scores of Bob Doubles and Grandsire, the party repaired to the headquarters at the "Angel" inn, where an excellent peal of handbells were brought in requisition and upon which various touches of Bob Minor and Bob Major were brought round. The party then returned home, which was reached at 11.15, much pleased with their outing and the reception given them. The ringers desire to tender their best thanks to the clergy for their kindness in granting the use of the bells, and to the various steeplekeepers for having everything in readiness. It is worthy of note that Mr. William Pipe, who is in his ninetyeth year, rang a short touch at each of the three towers visited.

HOLY TRINITY, BOLTON.—ANNUAL OUTING.

On Saturday, August 16th, the Holy Trinity company had their annual outing to Leamington and Warwick. Leaving Bolton early in the morning they proceeded via Crewe, Stafford, Birmingham, and Coventry, arriving at Leamington at 9 a.m. They immediately left by tram for Warwick, where breakfast awaited them at the "Hare and Hounds" hotel. Mr. Home, the host, was evidently mindful of their wants, as he had provided an excellent repast. Mr. Hardy, the tower-keeper of St. Mary's, Warwick, having joined the party, he accepted an invitation to spend the day with them. The weather being favorable, a break was engaged to convey the party to Stratford-upon-Avon. Having passed through a splendid portion of the county, the Shakespearian town was reached. A slight halt was made to view the historical birthplace of Shakespeare. The church was next visited, where an excellent photograph of the sacred edifice was taken by one of the company. A move was then made to the belfry where ringing was indulged in to the extent of 30 mins. An inspection of the interior of the church was next made, the chief attraction being the tomb of the immortal bard, and a number of ancient oak carvings.

The return journey to Warwick commenced at 2.30 p.m., the drive being very enjoyable. On their arrival at the latter town dinner was partaken of at the above-named hotel, full justice being done to the good things provided. The fine church of St. Mary's was visited, the noble tower being greatly admired. The visitors were here met by the vicar of Hatton, the Rev. H. C. Courtney, whose kindness was very much appreciated by the Lancashire Associationists. Time only permitted of a short touch in which the Rev. H. C. Courtney and Mr. Hardy took part.

The party shortly afterwards returned to Leamington, having to leave at 6.45 p.m. Their warmest thanks are due to Mr. Hardy for the courteous manner in which he received them, and for the arrangements he made; the various places of interest in the district being graphically described, which added very much to the enjoyment of the visitors. J. R.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Saturday, August 30th, the Chalford branch of the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association with a few friends, had their outing, the places selected being Newnham and Westbury-on-Severn. Newnham was reached about ten o'clock, and a few 6-scores of Grandsire and Plain Bob were rung. G. Pincott, 1; A. E. Cook, 2; G. Cook, 3; A. Chambers, 4; A. A. Cook, 5; J. Hawkes, 6. Also a few 6-scores with the assistance of Mr. Blanton. Afterwards a pleasant walk to Westbury by the river-side was much enjoyed. Here dinner was provided by host and hostess Nicholls of the "Lion" hotel. Dinner being over a start was made for the tower, where some very good 6-scores were rung with the assistance of Messrs. Grindon and Gleed of the local company. A visit to Ministerworth, where there is a nice peal of six, was intended, but time would not allow. The ringers wish to return their best thanks to the respective rectors and to Messrs. Blanton and Gleed for the courtesy shew to them throughout the day.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

RE-ISSUE OF

STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA.

Of this curious work, by the immortal FABIAN STEDMAN, but one copy is supposed to be in existence. This copy is the property of the Rev. W. C. LUKIS, Vicar of Wath, Yorkshire, who has kindly entrusted it into the hands of the Editor of this journal for re-publication.

It is proposed to issue the work complete, handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, for One Shilling and Sixpence per copy, post-free; and as only one edition will be printed, orders for copies should at once be sent to the printers, care of Editor of this paper.

As many admirers of the distinguished author have ardently desired to possess a copy of his book, the printers hope that this republication may be taken up by the Exercise generally, and that those gentlemen who can will order more than one copy. Where it may not be convenient to send the amount with order, the order may be sent on notwithstanding, and the amount follow at the earliest opportunity. Postal Orders are the most convenient.*

The work will be printed on good paper, and will form a valuable and curious addition to the ringers' library. It will be issued without delay. The imprint on the title-page of the book runs as follows:

"Printed by W. G. for Fabian Stedman at his shop in St. Dunstan's Churchyard in Fleetstreet, 1688."

All Orders will be announced in this paper.

"THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD" will be forwarded post free, on the following terms:—

One copy, 12 months	8s.
" " 6 "	4s.
" " 3 "	2s.

All Subscriptions and Orders for papers must be sent direct to the Publisher E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, London.

Everything for insertion in this Journal to be addressed "The Editor of THE BELL NEWS, Walthamstow, London." Letters forwarded for publication, and performances under 5000 changes must reach us not later than Wednesday morning; and the insertion of any communication arriving later than the first Postal delivery on Thursday morning cannot be guaranteed in that week's number. When it is found impossible from want of space to insert all touches forwarded, the earlier ones will have the preference.

All communications respecting advertisements must be addressed to the office of "THE BELL NEWS," Walthamstow, London.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1890.

THE enterprise shown by the printers of this journal in re-printing the book on ringing of which STEDMAN was the author will, we hope, be appreciated by our readers. The work involves some pecuniary risk, but if only those who can ring the method known as Stedman's Principle will order a copy, the course will be clear. It is imperative that no delay should take place in orders for copies being given, because only those ordered will be printed, and afterwards a copy cannot be had. In bringing the publication of the work before those who will be responsible for its publication, the idea suggested itself that there may be some of our ringing brethren, anxious to have a copy, unable just at present, from various causes, to remit the necessary amount. To meet such cases we have counselled a delay, conditions of which are set forth above.

In advising the republication of STEDMAN's book, the Editor of this journal has no interest beyond satisfying a conviction that members of the Exercise will joyfully avail themselves of the opportunity of perusing FABIAN STEDMAN'S OWN work, written by his own hand. He believes that a very great number of his ringing brethren are desirous of having a copy, if only from motives of curiosity. For a curious book indeed it is, and it tells its tale in a curious manner. The price of publication is not great; it has been fixed after due consideration as low as possible. The Editor hopes that the representations he has made to induce the printers of this paper to reissue the work will be more than fulfilled.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

The members of the above Association are invited by Mr. Percival Heywood to a garden party at Duffield Bank on Saturday, September 13th, from two o'clock to six o'clock. Tea at 4.30. The bells of the parish church will be at the disposal of the visitors after two o'clock. Members are at liberty to bring friends who belong to any ringing society.

The presence of any clergy, who can make it convenient to come, will be especially welcome.

Review.

BY "SCRUTATOR."

THE ESSEX ASSOCIATION OF CHANGE RINGERS' ANNUAL REPORT.—Once more I have had the pleasure of perusing the account of work done and progress made by this flourishing association. In his official statement, the Rev. T. L. Papillon states that "The numbers of the Essex Association have again increased, and its prosperity continues. There are now on our books the names of 66 honorary and 490 ringing members, as compared with 68 and 448 recorded in my last report; and although a few of these names will probably be removed, the increase is in any case a substantial one. The only unsatisfactory feature is that the number of honorary members has slightly fallen; and that so few, comparatively, of the clergy and resident gentry take any interest in the work of the Association. The number of peals rung is somewhat less than last year, but sufficient to maintain the reputation of the association; and the list is rather more varied than usual, including peals of Double Norwich Court Bob Major, Stedman Triples, and Union Triples, in addition to the usual Grandsire, Plain Bob, and Treble Bob Major. We need somewhat more variety in the methods rung and practised by our members. Stedman, for instance, and Double Norwich, can hardly be said to have a footing in Essex at all, and we might be content to fall below other Societies in the mere number of peals rung, if our list included a few more of higher quality." After a passing reference to work accomplished in the way of belfry improvements (including in his remarks both bells and ringers) he alludes in graceful terms to the losses which this association has sustained during the past year. Among these, the resignation of their president, Dr. Claughton, of the Bishopric of St. Alban's, has however one consoling feature, namely, that it "need not deprive them of the honor of his name at the head of their list of officers." Another loss is by the death of Dr. Hatch, the late rector of Purleigh, of whom it is said that "he was little known in Essex, but had made his mark as a theologian, not only in Oxford, but throughout Europe, and had been longer spared, his name would have done us honour." But the most peculiar loss is that occasioned by the death of the late Rev. J. B. Seaman, "the founder of this association eleven years ago, its hon. secretary for the first four years of its existence, its warm supporter and firm friend to the day of his death." And the Report goes on to say: "Those who know what a difficulty it is in country districts first to start and then to keep alive any institution whatever, will acknowledge the debt of gratitude which we, in the full tide of the association's prosperity, owe to the care that watched over its early years. Mr. Seaman was not an accomplished ringer, nor was he a rich man; but zeal and perseverance enabled him to do much for the cause of ringing." Leaving this sorrowful subject the Report next proceeds to deal with financial matters, which it states are "in a satisfactory condition, and in spite of too many subscriptions being in arrear, we have been able to replace some of the money that had been withdrawn from the reserve fund to meet the expenditure of previous years. That fund now amounts to £49 9s. 7d., as compared with £44 19s. 3d. the previous Whitsuntide. A comparison of the expenditure with that of 1888-9, shows a decrease of £3 6s. 6d. upon meetings—due, I fear, to their not having been so well attended—and of a considerable sum upon the entry of peals in the peal book, in consequence of the wise regulation that half the expense shall be borne by the bands that ring them. The increased cost of the annual report is accounted for by the 22 pages of peals, and the table of rings in Essex, which I trust will be thought a useful addition. The expenses of ordinary printing and postage naturally increase with our growing numbers. About 70 subscriptions of ringing members and 18 of honorary members for the past year (amounting altogether to about £8) are still in arrear. The work of getting in these unpaid subscriptions makes demands upon the secretary's time and patience, as well as upon the funds of the association in postage, which might to a great extent be avoided if all members were punctual and regular in their payments." This latter complaint is one, unfortunately, only too common in our associations. If members would only remember that their subscriptions are but a honest debt which they owe to their Associations, one which in common fairness should be paid promptly, and that reminders of and applications for the same so largely increase the amount of time and labour to be expended by Hon. Secretaries, time often ill-spaced amongst their many other duties, I really believe their own consciences would not allow them to be defaulters in such a direction. It surely should be enough for Hon. Secretaries to conduct necessary business and correspondence without having this additional and thankless work of dunning for subscriptions thrust upon them. If some of these negligent ones could only have the Hon. Secretary's work placed upon their shoulders for a brief space, they would, I fancy, open their eyes in astonishment, and be careful to pay up their just debts when due in the future. In concluding his report, Mr. Papillon writes with evident regret that "during the past year I have received more than one complaint from clergymen who have communicated with me on ringing matters, that their ringers, after ringing the bells for service on Sundays, too often go away without attending the services. I mention this (he says) not because I have either the right or the wish to dictate to members of the Association how they should observe Sunday; but because I feel that such conduct, if general, is more likely than anything else to alienate the sympathies of the clergy and of churchpeople from ringers and ringing. Without imposing upon ringers any undue restrictions, I think that the clergy have a right to expect that those who ring the bells for Divine Service should as a rule set the example of regular attendance. And I may add that where, unfortunately, the scandal exists of ringers going off in a body as soon as service begins, it is not the clergy only who are offended." This matter having been to the front in the pages of "THE BELL NEWS" so recently, I do not desire to reopen the question; probably the mere reproduction of Mr. Papillon's pungent remarks will be more effective than any words of mine. In this annual statement by the vicar of Writtle, I must confess some surprise at finding one important subject conspicuous by its absence, namely, the National Council, and particularly so when one considers the prominent part taken by Mr. Papillon in the proceedings on Easter Tuesday last. But perhaps this was an oversight. It is at any rate on the other hand satisfactory to know that the Essex Association is not behind any of its contemporaries in its support of this highly important project, so the omission of any mention of it in the annual report may be viewed without any misgivings. Turning to the balance-sheet (which I rather regret to see is not certified as being "audited and found correct" by duly appointed officials), I find that of the expenditure of £28 8s. 2d. for the year, £11 5s. 5d. has been absorbed by dinners, teas, and other expenses in connection with meetings; so that, after deducting £9 7s. 0d. for the printing of the Annual Report, £3 10s. 0d. transferred to Savings Bank, and £3 16s. 4d. in hand, the actual working expenses for the year have been £7 15s. 5d., which also, by the way, includes £3 15s. 0d. for entry of peals, one half of which has been repaid by the bands ringing them. Leaving out the £11 odd for dinners, etc., at meetings (a mode of expenditure to which I have decided objections, as I have expressed myself beforetime), the Essex Association is by no means profligate in the way of management expenses; and in fact, were the members (both Honorary and Ringing) as anxious to discharge their liabilities as their officers appear to be careful in incurring such on behalf of the Association, the balance-sheet would have shewn even more favourably than it does, and the Savings Bank account have been some £8 more to the good. Here I must "bring the bells home;" and while congratulating the Essex Association on their past year's report, both in the matter of its contents and the creditable manner in which it has been got out by the printer, join with Mr. Papillon in expressing the hope "that the coming year may be no less prosperous than the last, and that it may be marked by further progress in change-ringing, by reform in belfries where reform is still needed, and by increased unity and harmony among ringers in each tower and neighbourhood."

WHO WAS CONDUCTOR?

SIR,—During a recent brief holiday, I heard of a peal rang under the following circumstances:—After several unsuccessful attempts, a conductor who had previously called the peal but was debarred from taking part, perched himself in the belfry to keep the bells in their proper coursing order. As his services were needed during the peal, was it right for the bob caller's name to appear as conductor?

THE ST. MARY'S (MONMOUTH) SOCIETY.

On Thursday, August 28th, taking advantage of an excursion by the G.W.R., six of the members of this society journeyed to Swansea—the Hon. Sec. Mr. T. H. Jones, having failed to get a band together for a 5000—arriving at the station at 10.30, where they were met by Mr. H. West, of the local band. Having made their way to St. Mary's, where they found a peal of eight bells, tenor about 15 cwt. in F, with new ropes for the occasion and having disrobed the bells were set going to Grandsire Doubles, with our friend Mr. West on the treble, who only seems to require a chanc of good practice to make a method ringer. After several 6-scores were brought round, each called differently, Mr. J. Hoar of the local band took the treble, Mr. West taking the 5th, when several more 6-scores were well struck and brought round. It being now 1.15 and over two hours having been spent in Doubles, some who had breakfasted between five and six in the morning, wanted a course or two of Englishman's Delight, which was obtained at a neighbouring Temperance Hotel, with only a bob at the end; after which an inspection of the Docks, not missing the gun which is fired from Greenwich every day at one o'clock by electricity. Four of the band made for a neighbouring tower which was seen in the distance, where a lot of Harrington's tubular bells had been fixed; they found a nice little Church with Bath-stone dressings, a spire to match, and inside a stained wood roof much like their own church at home only a much smaller scale; the Vicar was found in the Vestry, but no key to the main object of their visit, as a clockmaker from Coventry had taken the key with him into the town, so that we did not see what the tubulars were like. Having to meet at the tower again at 5, to give the local ringers who had been at work all day, a chance, we wished the rev. gentleman good day, and made for St. Mary's, which was reached at 5.2, and the bells set going once more to Doubles, after which touches of Bob Minor were well struck on the front six with 7-8 behind. H. West, 1; W. Jones, 2; J. Ward, 3; W. Walters, 4; W. Honeyfield, 5; T. H. Jones (conductor), 6; H. Brown, 7; J. Hoare, 8. If Messrs West and Hoare are a sample of the local band there is no reason why they should not ring Doubles by themselves in a month or two at the outside, but perhaps Swansea is like a good many other towns where there are some who never think of touching a bell rope only for the sake of £ s. d. We take this opportunity of thanking the rev. gentleman for the use of the bells, the go of which is very good, the light however is bad, except when the door is wide open, which being on the ground floor is rather awkward for a peal, unless the gates are locked to keep visitors out until the bells are brought round. We wish to thank Mr. West for meeting us and having everything ready, and also for showing us everything of interest. An inscription on one of the tombstone in the churchyard states that a man "Died on the Thirty-first of November, 1833."

STOKE-UPON-TRENT ARCHIDIACONAL ASSOCIATION.

A very successful meeting of this Association was held at Wolstanton on Saturday, August 30th, about twenty members being present, the towers represented being Stoke, Wolstanton, Burslem, Norton, Bucknall, and Tunstall. Several 504's of Grandsire Triples were rung, conducted by H. Page (Stoke), W. Miller (Wolstanton), and G. Woods (late of Tamworth). The bells were lowered in peal about nine o'clock.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—
MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

XV.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

The third and last of the heads into which the enquiry into the use of singles has been divided remains to be considered, viz: in what ways can singles be arranged to unite the disjointed blocks of a peal?

In article No. XII. I explained that the 60 P blocks can be formed into two (or more) main blocks. Let me first try to make clear, by the aid of the annexed diagrams, the basis upon which the connection by singles of these main blocks is founded. As most peals are composed in two blocks, such alone will be at present considered. Since every block is a circular arrangement, leading us back to the starting point, we may fitly represent it by a circle. In fig. 1 of the diagrams let the two circles A and B represent the two blocks of a peal. It is altogether immaterial whether these blocks are the same length or not, therefore no importance is to be attached to the fact that, throughout the diagrams, the two blocks are represented by figures of equal size. One block may contain fifty-nine courses and the other only one, each of them is still a circle, whose size does not concern us. Rounds must occur in one of the two blocks, let us suppose in A. The starting and, consequently, the finishing point of the peal will, therefore, be in A. In B we shall have no fixed point, and we can enter it where we please. Let us now take a pencil and follow the circumference of circle A, to represent the ringing of this block. We must ring A as an even block because, as an odd one, rounds would come at hand-stroke and involve an unusual go off. Let an even block be expressed by travelling round the circle in the direction of the hands of a clock, as indicated by the arrows on A and B, fig. 1; an odd block by travelling the reverse way. If we now single block B on to block A we obtain fig. 2, in which we move round in a figure of 8. Observe that where A and B touch, that is, where the singles occur, the motion is changed; for as soon as we pass from A to B, we are travelling contrary to clockwise. We continue thus till we have completed B, and pass, at the second single, back to A, when we are once more travelling clockwise. The arrow on block B shews we have rung that part backwards. In fig. 2, therefore, we have an exact illustration of the mode in which the two blocks of a peal are singled together in any one-part composition.

Next we must consider the singling together of the blocks of a peal that is in several parts. Let us take as an example two three-part blocks, since the diagrams will be simpler than for five-part ones, and the same reasoning is applicable to both. The direction of motion, clockwise or the contrary, is still to express respectively an even or odd portion, but an almond shaped figure will now be more convenient than a circle. In article No. XII. the construction of a five-part peal was carried as far as the formation of the 60 P blocks into two even five-part blocks. I shall, in a later paper, shew that the 60 P blocks can also be formed into two even three-part blocks. How these latter may be singled together I will now point out.

In fig. 3 let A₁, A₂, A₃, represent the three parts of one (even) block, and B₁, B₂, B₃, the three parts of the other (even) block. If the lines of the figure are followed with a pencil in the direction of the arrows, it will be seen that the motion is clockwise throughout, expressing even blocks. We will assume that rounds is located in A₁. There are two ways in which these two three-part blocks may be singled together, and it is to illustrate the distinction between them that these diagrams are inserted.

Figs. 4 and 5 shew how the three-part blocks are singled together for a six-part or three-part peal respectively. Wherever the apex, or point, of one almond touches the apex of another almond singles occur, as at the junction of the circles in fig. 2. Starting clockwise with the arrow on A₁ fig. 4, we come at once to the apex to which the block B is singled. Owing to the single we find ourselves, at the arrow on B₁, travelling contrary to clockwise, and thus proceed round B₂ and B₃ till we get back to B₁. When we arrive again at the apex of B₁ that touches A₁, we must single out of B₁, for, if we continue round it, we shall be traversing the same ground twice over. This second single, however, conveys us back into A₁ and at the same time the motion becomes clockwise (even). Following round A₂ and A₃ we reach the starting point in A₁, and the peal is complete in six parts, viz. A and B each repeated twice. In the procedure we have followed the first single was placed close to the start, and we rang the odd block first. If, however, rounds happens to be located on the lower line of A₁, we shall start the other way—as we must go clockwise until a single is called—and the A (even) block will be rung first, thus postponing the first single to the middle of the peal.

Turning next to fig. 5, and starting clockwise with the arrow on A₁, we come immediately to the apex touching B₁. Since a single must be called here, we travel contrary to clockwise round B₁, as shewn by the arrow. On completing B₁ a second single is called, conveying us back into A₁, and changing the motion to clock-wise (even) again. Following the line, we shunt into a fresh part, A₂. Passing the arrow in A₂, we arrive at another apex, and, by means of two more singles, absorb B₂ and return into A₂. Thence we are shunted into A₃, thus completing the second part. Arriving at the apex of A₃, by means of two more singles we absorb B₃, and return into A₃. Thence we are shunted back into A₁, when the third part, and therefore the peal, is completed. Each of the three parts of the peal, consequently, contains one part of block A (even) and one part of block B (odd), two singles being necessary in each part.

It is thus plain that while in a six-part peal the two three-part blocks are merely united at one point by two singles, in a three-part peal one of the parts (odd) of one block is united to each of the parts (even) of the other block.

A careful scrutiny of the diagrams, paying attention to the direction of motion, will make the distinction between the two modes of treatment apparent. Precisely the same holds good in the case of a five-part composition, which may either be rung as a ten-part peal with two singles, or as a five-part peal with ten singles, two in each part. There is however a reservation with regard to the three and five-part arrangement, for while any pair of three or five-part blocks may invariably be singled together into a six or ten-part peal respectively, there are cases in which the same blocks cannot be made into three or five-part peals. How this apparent anomaly arises I will explain. In a three-part peal each of the three parts of each block is of necessity a shunting part, for the same reasons as were given in article No. XII. in regard to five-part compositions. If the shunt inherent in the part of one block happens to be such as exactly to reverse the effect of the shunt inherent in the part of the other block to which it is singled, the result is rounds at the part-end. Any reader who is acquainted with the science of acoustics, will grasp the nature of this curious accident, if I point out as a parallel the phenomenon known as the interference of sound, as the result of which two precisely equal and opposite sound-waves may produce silence.

Owing to the larger number of parts in a five-part composition the occurrence will be less frequent than in a three-part one.

But in a two-part composition it is invariably present, and in consequence, all this class of peals must be arranged in two two-part blocks singled together as the three-part peal in fig. 4. When we attempt to proceed as in fig. 5 with two singles in each part, the result is invariably rounds at the first part-end. Hence my reference, in article No. X., to the fact that no bona fide two-part peal has been composed, or was probable of attainment.

In regard to fig. 5 it is desirable to point out that while the other figures are accurately descriptive of the procedure involved, in this one there is an inconsistency arising from the fact that it implies, taken strictly, the singling in of three non-shunting blocks, whereas B¹, B², and B³ are shunting parts of one block. The diagram cannot, however, be drawn to shew this distinction, nor is it necessary, for all that the figures are intended to illustrate is in general view of the two-fold manner in which the two blocks of composition in parts may be united.

THE OXFORD DIOCESAN GUILD.—EAST BERKS AND SOUTH BUCKS BRANCH.

It is proposed that the friends of the late Mr. Edwin Rogers (who was Treasurer for many years to the above branch, and a member of the Guild Committee) should unite with his family in erecting a suitable memorial over his grave in St. Luke's churchyard, Maidenhead. The belfries of All Saints, Boyne Hill, and of Great Marlow, have already voted corporate subscriptions from their respective funds. Any individual members of the branch or general Guild who desire to join in this mark of respect and esteem for Mr. Rogers' memory and long services are requested to send their contributions at once to Rev. R. P. Newhouse, Branch Sec., Hillside, Maidenhead.

MR. HENRY BRIGHT, OF WOOLWICH.

[Vide Portrait.]

HENRY BRIGHT was born at the village of Fyfield, in Essex, on May 21st, 1809, and consequently is now in his eighty-second year. He comes of a ringing family, and his acquaintance with bells dates from a very early period, as at the age of seven he used to obtain the key of Fyfield church and go up and tie the clapper of a bell and pull away until he was able to master it. At the age of eight years he was able to ring rounds, and raise and fall a bell in peal in company with his father and four brothers. A young band was soon got together, and with them he persevered for some time until they could ring Grandsire called six different ways, also Old Doubles. Even at that early age he used to travel all over the county to ring. MR. BRIGHT also belonged to the choir of Fyfield church, and for several years played the violoncello. This instrument he carried for miles to different churches where there was singing and ringing going on, and many happy evenings did he spend in the company which his musical and ringing talents brought him in contact with. He removed ultimately to Hornchurch, Essex, and remained there some years, and to his delight met with a good company of ringers there, with whom he was on capital terms.

MR. BRIGHT afterwards removed to Woolwich, where he became acquainted with the famous Bannister family. He took part in a great number of peals in several methods with these gentlemen. Among other tablets in the tower of St. Mary, Woolwich, is one recording a peal of Stedman Triples rang by Messrs. Bannister, father and six sons, MR. BRIGHT ringing the tenor. In company with the Bannister family MR. BRIGHT paid a visit to Penzance to open a new peal, where they were met by the celebrated Squire Trelawney. No peals were attempted during this trip, but some years afterwards our friend had the pleasure of taking part in Mr. Trelawney's first peal, which was rung at St. Mary's, Lewisham.

It is much to be regretted that MR. BRIGHT has kept no record of his ringing performances, but he calculates that he has rung upwards of forty peals of Grandsire, Stedman, and Treble Bob. Although a thorough Master of the Standard Methods, particularly Double Norwich, he has never been fortunate enough to finish a 5000 in the latter method.

Notwithstanding his great age, and failing health, HENRY BRIGHT is still a "tower of strength" in a peal, and every ringer who has visited Woolwich will testify to the kindness and courtesy with which they are treated by this "prince of steeple-keepers." For many years at Woolwich he has done his utmost to impart his knowledge of change-ringing to young beginners, and there are many who owe their success in the Art to MR. BRIGHT's untiring efforts.

Our old friend is a member of the Society of Trinity Youths, the Ancient Society of College Youths, the Waterloo and St. James' Societies, and the Kent County Association. We will conclude this brief sketch with the hope that MR. BRIGHT may yet be spared to accomplish the wish of his life, namely, a peal of Double Norwich.

MR. W. H. L. BUCKINGHAM.—Among the peal records will be found a report of the rooth peal rung by this gentleman. They comprise:—On Church Bells, Grandsire Triples, 27; Grandsire Caters, 6; Bob Triples, 3; Bob Major, 1; Stedman Triples, 8; Stedman Caters, 8; Kent Treble Bob Major, 2; Kent Treble Bob Royal, 2; Oxford Treble Bob Major, 1; Oxford Treble Bob Royal, 1; Double Norwich Court Bob Major, 1. On Hand Bells:—Grandsire Triples, 24; Grandsire Caters, 5; Bob Triples, 4; Bob Major, 5; Bob Royal, 1; Stedman Triples, 1. The foregoing includes Holt's Original and Holt's 10-part un-conducted, rung on handbells retained in hand.

SUPPLEMENT TO "THE BELL NEWS"

DURHAM AND NEWCASTLE ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday, August 30th, the St. Hilda's (Middlesbrough) branch of the above Association had their annual outing to Barnard's Castle.

Tickets to the number of eighteen having been secured beforehand for the ringers and their friends, a start was made from Port St. Lawrence by the 1.20 p.m. train. On arrival of the train at Stockton, the company was further strengthened by four of the Stockton company. A pleasant journey of about two and a half hours saw the visitors safely landed at Barnard's Castle, and the natives were not long in hearing that strangers were in their midst. After raising the fine peal of eight (tenor 17 cwt.), a start was made for 1008 Grandsire Triples, which, however, was unavoidably lost through the treble casting her rope after ringing over 800 changes. Meanwhile several of the company had gone into the woods and to view the places of interest round about, whilst others were not long in finding out where a sound course with knives and forks was to be had. Having returned to the tower, and the company re-arranged, another start was made for a touch of Treble Bob Major, which however shared the same success, after ringing some considerable time, as the other. Tea having been announced the company adjourned to the "Red Lion" inn, where host Wilson had been busily engaged preparing a sumptuous spread. Having all got seated "go" was called to the course of the day, which was run through in fine style, "Passman and Borrows" especially, securing first honours for their remarkable dodging tactics, hunting in and out among the tarts to the utter amusement of all the rest. After stand was called another visit was paid to the tower, where a 504 of Grandsire Triples was successfully brought round, just leaving time to catch the train for home, which was reached shortly before twelve, the ringers all expressing their satisfaction at the agreeable and most enjoyable outing, and wish to tender, through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS," their sincere thanks to the Vicar and churchwardens for so kindly placing the bells at their disposal.

RINGERS' OUTING.

The ringers of St. Giles, Killamarsh, held their first outing on Saturday, August 30th, the place selected being North Notts. All being in readiness, "go" was called at 9.30, and Mr. G. Pemberton, handling the ribbons in a masterly style, safely landed the party at Shireoaks, where the day's programme was to begin. After raising the bells in peal, a 6-score of Violet was rung as a feeler, then a 720 in the same method in 25 mins. H. Greaves, 1; J. Severn, 2; J. Emsen, 3; T. Bettison, 4; G. Burnham, 5; C. Severn (conductor), 6. Then a 720 of Kent Treble Bob. H. Taylor, 1; the rest as before, with the exception of the 4th and tenor, who changed places.

A move was then made for Worksop, where after satisfying the inner man, the Abbey Church was visited. Raising the bells, a 720 of Oxford was attempted, but lost when about 500 had been rung. A 360 of Kent was then successfully rung.

A move was then made for Blyth, but the time for ringing there was short on account of evening service. A 720 of Duke of York was attempted, but came to grief through a change-course.

Anston was the next place visited, but no ringing was done on account of the lateness of the hour. From here the party returned home, reaching there about 1 o'clock, after having spent a very pleasant day.

Through the medium of this journal the ringers desire to thank the Vicars and churchwardens of the above churches for granting permission to ring, and also those friends who conducted them to the belfry.

ORDERS RECEIVED FOR "STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA."—F. J. W. Rees, C. Pearson (6), Rev. R. F. Tompkins (2), E. J. Dennes (2), W. W. Gifford (2), Norman Snow (2), F. Harrison, C. H. Hampton (2), George Astbury, Rev. W. C. Pearson, D. Gridley, W. E. Yates, A. F. James, Rev. G. F. Coleridge (2), J. Carter (2), W. J. Sevier (2), F. E. Hart, D. Hayward (2), T. Hudson, J. Slater, York Green. Attention is directed to the notice on page 298. No ringer, especially lovers of Stedman's Principle, should be without a copy of this, his own book.

LIGHTHORNE AND CHESTERTON.

The parochial Magazine for the above parishes recently had the following:—

'THE CHURCH BELLS here were most successfully lowered on Monday and Tuesday, June 9th and 10th, by Messrs. Llewellyns and James. A long beam was put across the top of the tower and secured in the turret entrance; the stone mullion was removed, and a check pulley was used. They were taken by Mr. Hotson to Kington Station for conveyance to Bristol, where one will be re-cast, and the other re-tuned. One of the bells gave a loud clang intervals along the road, as much to say "Where am I going to, and what are they going to do with me?" The inscriptions on the bells are and will be as follows:—

No. 1 the Treble (cracked),
"M. Bagley made mee, 1774."

and these lines will be added:—

"I was re-cast in memorie
Of the Queen's Jubilee,
1890."

This bell will then be No. 2. The new treble will have this inscription:—

"Laus Deo (Praise to God).
W. R. Verney, Rector,"

W. Lattimer, W. Wilkins, Churchwardens, 1890."

No. 3:—

"H. B., 1679,
Thomas Green and William Townsin, Churchwardens."

No. 4, the Tenor:—This is a Pre-Reformation Bell, as can be seen by the half-length figures of the Saints and the Blessed Virgin, and the inscription:—

"Iohannis prece

which means:—

"By the intercession of John may it sweetly sound, and Amen, or, so be it." There is no date.

Nos. 3 and 4 will be quarter-hung, as well as re-tuned, as the clapper striking for so many years on the same place has made a deep indentation of each. It would be interesting if our correspondents in the other Parishes would give the dates and inscriptions of their bells in the Magazine. Messrs Llewellyns and James have promised to let us have the bells back by the 10th of August, St. Lawrence's Day. We ought to have a good Festival Service and a Parish Holiday then. We will hope most earnestly that when the bells are once more in their places they will ring to Church some who now seldom or never enter the House of God for prayer and praise.

And later on:—

'THE CHURCH BELLS.—The bells came back rather sooner than was expected. They have been most carefully and lightly hung by Messrs. Llewellyns and James, and have been most thoroughly and musically tuned. A Ringers' Guild is in course of formation, and some of the members have already had a lesson. Due notice will be given in the parish of the opening festival, when it is hoped that the sermon will be preached by the Venerable Archdeacon Walters."

Obituary.

CHARLES EVERETT, OF BANHAM, NORFOLK.

We have to record the death of this well-known ringer, who met with his death under very painful circumstances, being knocked down by a train on the Great Eastern railway at Roudham on the 20th of August last, and killed. His funeral took place at Banham on the 22nd ult., and on the following Sunday his fellow-ringers rung with the bells half-muffled, at Banham, a peal and a half of Bob Minor, as a last tribute of respect. J. Woods, jun., 1; W. Nudds, sen., 2; G. Edwards, 3; W. Ringer, 4; J. Woods, sen. (conductor), 5; W. Nudds, jun., 6. At Kenninghall on the evening of the same day a muffled touch of 1008 Bob Major was rung. J. Woods, jun., 1; A. G. Williams, 2; G. Edwards, 3; J. Woods, sen., 4; W. Nudds, jun., 5; W. Ringer, 6; W. Oxer, 7; J. Mordey (conductor), 8. The deceased had rung about 26 peals; 23 at Kenninghall, 1 at Eye, 1 at Diss, and 1 at Debenham, in the Oxford and Kent Treble Bob Methods.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Time and tide will wait for no man."

Our Editor tells me he thinks I "might do worse" than complete the story of my travels without delaying it to that future time which I mentioned last week. I accept the implied compliment conveyed in that observation—though it might appear a little ambiguous at first sight—and so, bowing to the superior judgment of so important an individual, I will once more resume the narration of my "outing," at the risk of tiring out my readers, who must by this time have been almost surfeited with such reports.

* * * * *

But first, I would reply to a communication which I was considerably surprised on receiving, from one who confesses his inability to see the moral to be drawn from my experiences of that Sunday in the country, and, "would be very glad to have it explained." It invariably affords me much pleasure in giving any information in my power, but really, I did not imagine that I should be called upon to point out the lesson to be learnt in my story, so obvious did it appear—at any rate, to myself. However, for the benefit of my enquiring friend, I will endeavour to place it before him as clearly and briefly as I can. In my morning's visit, I found a village band, whose work was a recognised "part and parcel" of the church in the parish; whose intimacy with the clergy was real and consistent; whose belfry was visited by the curate every Sunday morning as regularly as he attended to his other duties. Here the ringers on their part understood and valued their work; recognition of their duties by the clergy was concurrent with consistent performance of duties and obligations by ringers. Consequently, in this parish I found belfry work "done decently and in order."

* * * * *

But when I went in the evening, I saw an evidently neglected church and parish, with a rector who apparently had but indifferent ideas of his high and holy calling; as was manifest by the untended graves, the slovenly mode of conducting service, and the twenty-five per cent. of each year spent in some fashionable watering-place, or on the continent, leaving the parish and its inhabitants during that time with but a mere shadow of the church's ministrations. Thus dissent in the village, and dirt in the belfry, increased and multiplied. And thus also, the ringers following suit, simply regarded their occupation as so much ringing for so much money; their ideas of the sanctity of the place, or the religious nature of their work being about on a par with the rector's ——— of the duties he honestly owed to both Church and parish. Thus again, when they had finished their regulation period of rope-pulling, they were invariably on an evening to be found among the tap-room company at the "Brown Cow"—which was more congenial to their feelings than the dreary performance of service in church.

* * * * *

Now, my enquiring friend; if you are still dubious as to the moral of all this, just put the cases together, and ask yourself what is the cause of this so vastly different state of affairs in these neighbouring parishes; then if you are still unable to get over the difficulty, why—ask your parson.

* * * * *

Then to resume. I spent Monday leisurely rambling about, with no object but to avail myself of the opportunity of getting as much fresh air as possible. On Tuesday was held the fortnightly market at the little town of——, and we were fortunate in receiving a cordial invite to be driven over and spend the day, from the farmer who had so kindly brought my friend to meet me at the station on arriving. It needed no inducement to get me abroad at an early hour, for everything was perfectly lovely, a few showers of rain which had fallen during the night having freshened up the vegetation wonderfully. But hardly had my friend and I completed our breakfast when we heard the farmer and his roomy, comfortable (if rather old-fashioned) trap outside; and before many minutes we were once more on our way through the country lanes till we reached the highway which led straight to the town of our visit. Arriving there, although the day was yet young, we found the place full of animation, and business appeared (from the noise, at any rate) to be proceeding briskly. It was, indeed just one of those sort of country fairs which we "cribbed, cabined, and confined" townsmen often read about but seldom see. You could do almost anything in the way of business—buy a horse or a cow, trade a set of horse gear, engage a farm servant, rent a holding, or buy a pair of boot laces or a paper of pins. The whole "country side" appeared to be there bargaining, bantering, and doing business in one shape or other. My friend the school-master, of course, had been there before, and consequently all this was nothing new to him, but our farmer host was properly in his element. He was here, there, and everywhere, and it became impossible not to find oneself beginning to be infected with his jubilant spirit. Well, I will not enlarge upon this, as probably it will be uninteresting. Neither will I describe the market-dinner at the "Black Horse," where the hospitable tables were as crowded on the top with well-cooked substantial as they were round the sides with hungry souls who most emphatically (myself among the number) "did full justice to the good things provided," as our amateur reporters are so fond of describing it. Towards evening we all three (or rather the farmer on our behalf) accepted a hearty invite to tea given by an intimate acquaintance of his, so thither we went. After this pleasant function was over, and we were strolling round his half-acre of kitchen garden, the sound of a bell came from the church tower, as it was being raised. "Is there evening service in Church?" I enquired. "Oh no," was the reply, "It'll be the ringers' practice-night." Then another bell sounded; and to make a long story short, I was soon on my way to where the sound came from, with a instruction to call at the "Black Horse," in the market place, when ready for return homewards.

* * * * *

Arriving at the church gates I soon discovered the belfry door, and entering found myself in the ringing room, where four intelligent-looking young fellows were just preparing to pull up the tenor, quite evidently proud of the job. As they did so, I took a survey of the room, which appeared to be clean, and well tended too. Eight ropes formed the circle, while on the walls were tablets recording peals; these, however, were all dull with age; and I soon found out that if they were to be taken in evidence, it was half a century or more since the last peal had been brought round. On a seat, also, I espied a copy of the previous week's "BELL NEWS." Is this another case of one copy for the whole band? I wondered; but turning round, was just in time to see the tallest of the youngsters set the bell, his face beaming with pleasure at the feat. A few enquiries soon elicited the information that the band was going to practice, "if they all turned up, if one was missing, they didn't ring because there were now only six of them, one had died, and another gone a long way off, they didn't know exactly where, but thought it was in Lancashire, or some other foreign parts." A long time ago, the ringers here were celebrated for miles round, by reason of their performances, in which they far excelled any of their contemporaries. But it was the old, old story, repeated once again. These ringers, basking in the sunshine of popularity, thought but of time present; the idea of making any provision for the future was one which never entered their heads. If a recruit turned up who by persistence or influence contrived to gain instruction, he stood a chance of filling up the next vacancy which occurred. So somehow they had continued, until a short time ago, to keep the octave going, and preserve their reputation. But evil days had come upon them, and they were now reduced to six; it needed but another loss to bring about total collapse. In spite of this threatening state of affairs, however, there was no attempt to stave off disaster by the training of any one to fill the already vacant places; nor even a word of encouragement to the lads before me whom I felt convinced had all the "makings" of good ringers in them. No! the next turn of the wheel will probably disclose—like as has been the case in numbers of other instances—five men, who can't ring because they are one short; the bells remain silent, it may be for years, and where once was one of the best bands in the county—then may Ichabod be written over the belfry doorway.

* * * * *

No one else appeared on the scene while I was chatting with the boys; so I once more sought the open air with a keen sense of disappointment number two, and there espied five men engaged in a heated discussion, which, from the words I heard as I passed through the gateway, was evidently about some horse transaction which had taken place during the day. "Ah," thought I, as I wandered back to meet my friends at the "Black Horse," "if only you were as eager in your work of ringing as you are in discussing horse-flesh, those boys upstairs would not be idle, nor the bells silent, nor yourselves three short of a full band for practice." As we drove along the market-place on our way homeward a short time after, I heard the bells again—but they were being ceased (by the boys, I expect), thus one more evening was wasted, and the local band so much nearer the "crash up" which must inevitably come. When, as we were nearly a mile distant from the church, the sound of the really beautifully-toned tenor came floating on the still evening air and it seemed to me as if it were sounding the knell of another lazy band who (in sadly too numerous company, it is quite true) will see their occupation as ringers slipping out of their hands; the parishioners deprived of those sounds which they have been accustomed to hear from childhood; and possibly a chimera introduced, before they will make the slightest effort to provide for the maintenance of ringing in the future, by training up young ringers in the way they should go.

* * * * *

Here I must pull up; but I can't close this week without expressing the satisfaction with which I read the Editor's announcement last Saturday, with regard to the reprint of Stedman's curious book. I certainly hope his enterprise will result in success—which I am afraid cannot be said of some other ventures in a similar direction that he knows about.

FREE LANCE.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The annual outing of the above society was held on Monday, August 25th, Shrewsbury being the place selected. They started from Birmingham at 5 a.m. and arrived at their destination about 7 a.m. They were met at the station by W. Griffith and the brothers Groves, who conducted them to a coffee house to have breakfast. Afterwards they had a stroll over the English bridge to have a look at the old abbey church. The church is situated in the suburb to which it has given the name of Abbey Foregate, and is built of red deep sandstone. A noble simplicity, combined with a massive solidity, characterises the whole structure, to which time has given a most venerable appearance, but marks of mutilation are too evident throughout. It displays many curious features of Norman architecture, combined with the earlier pointed style. It contains a peal of eight bells, but unfortunately they could not have a pull in consequence of service being held in the church, so they had to content themselves with looking at them. The tenor was recast in the year 1713, all the others being of a later date. On the south side of the church stands an elegant octagonal stone pulpit, and a little further on is Lord Hill's column, which was commenced to be built in 1816. The diameter of the base is 15 ft. feet, and the stature of his Lordship is 17 ft., the total height being 133 ft. 6 in. The reader will judge for himself that a statue like this is not to be seen every day. They then wended their way back to the town and arrived at St. Alkmund's church, where they found that Mr. G. Boylin, the steeplekeeper, had got everything in readiness for them. Here they found a musical peal of eight, tenor 18 cwt. A few touches of Stedman Triples, Grandsire and Plain Bob was rung, after which they made their way to St. Chad's, where there is a grand ring of twelve, tenor 42 cwt. Everything being in readiness, some touches of Grandsire Caters were rung, in which some of the local ringers took part, and while the ringing was going on at St. Chad's, a few had a walk down the Quarry Avenue, which is noted for its beauty. They then made the best of their way to the Working Men's Hall, where they had dinner. After dinner was over they were conducted over the Shire Hall by their friend Mr. Boylin, which was very interesting. From there they went to St. Alkmund's church, where they rang a few more touches. They then went to St. Mary's, where they were met by Mr. Price, the steeplekeeper, who conducted them through the church before ascending the tower, which they found was very interesting. On the west wall of the tower is an inscription on a tablet which runs thus:

Let this small monument record the name
Of Cadman, and so future times proclaim:
How by an attempt to fly from this high spire,
Across the Sabrina stream he did acquire.
His fatal end 'twas not for want of skill,
No, no, a faulty cord long drawn too tight,
Hurried his soul on high to take her flight,
Which bids the body here beneath good night.
Feb. 2nd., 1739, aged 28 years.

Afterwards they ascended the tower where they found a grand peal of ten, tenor 21 cwt., where they had a few touches of Grandsire Caters by mixed bands. And a well-struck touch by A. Cresser, 1; J. Carter (conductor), 2; G. Walker, 3; R. Hackley, 4; J. Jones, 5; C. Carmell, 6; C. Barnacle, 7; F. H. James, 8; A. Hackley, 9; W. Griffith, 10. From there they adjourned to the "Wheatsheaf," where they spent a few hours in harmony and several recitations from their old friend, Mr. J. Ward. They then returned home about midnight, everybody having thoroughly enjoyed the day's outing. They take this opportunity of thanking the vicar and churchwardens of the churches visited for the use of the bells; also to Mr. W. Phillips, the brothers Groves and Mr. J. Boylin for the trouble they took to make their outing as enjoyable as possible.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

The members of the above Association are invited by Mr. Percival Heywood to a garden party at Duffield Bank to-day, Saturday, September 13th, from two o'clock to six o'clock. Tea at 4.30. The bells of the parish church will be at the disposal of the visitors after two o'clock. Members are at liberty to bring friends who belong to any ringing society.

The presence of any clergy, who can make it convenient to come, will be especially welcome.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

RE-ISSUE OF

STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA.

Of this curious work, by the immortal FABIAN STEDMAN, but one copy is supposed to be in existence. This copy is the property of the Rev. W. C. LUKIS, Vicar of Wath, Yorkshire, who has kindly entrusted it into the hands of the Editor of this journal for re-publication.

It is proposed to issue the work complete, handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, for One Shilling and Sixpence per copy, post-free; and as only one edition will be printed, orders for copies should at once be sent to the printers, care of Editor of this paper.

As many admirers of the distinguished author have ardently desired to possess a copy of his book, the printers hope that this republication may be taken up by the Exercise generally, and that those gentlemen who can will order more than one copy. Where it may not be convenient to send the amount with order, the order may be sent on notwithstanding, and the amount follow at the earliest opportunity. Postal Orders are the most convenient.

The work will be printed on good paper, and will form a valuable and curious addition to the ringers' library. It will be issued without delay. The imprint on the title-page of the book runs as follows:

"Printed by W. G. for Fabian Stedman at his shop in St. Dunstan's Churchyard in Fleetstreet, 1688."

All Orders will be announced in this paper.

"THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD" will be forwarded post free, on the following terms:—

One copy, 12 months	8s.
" 6 "	4s.
" 3 "	2s.

All Subscriptions and Orders for papers must be sent direct to the Publisher E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, London.

Everything for insertion in this Journal to be addressed "The Editor of THE BELL NEWS, Walthamstow, London." Letters forwarded for publication, and performances under 5000 changes must reach us not later than Wednesday morning; and the insertion of any communication arriving later than the first Postal delivery on Thursday morning cannot be guaranteed in that week's number. When it is found impossible from want of space to insert all touches forwarded, the earlier ones will have the preference.

All communications respecting advertisements must be addressed to the office of "THE BELL NEWS," Walthamstow, London.

GEORGE F. ATTREE.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

In pursuance of a resolution passed at the last Annual Meeting, a special Business Meeting of the Raunds, Wellingbro' and District Society took place at Finedon on Saturday last, the Rev. G. W. Paul kindly lending the school-room for the purpose. The tuneful peal of six bells (tenor 24 cwt.) was also placed at the service of the ringers. The delegates chosen by the various belfries to represent them at the Preliminary Meeting at Wellingborough, on Aug. 30th, and at the Finedon meeting were, Messrs. Gilbert (Raunds), Dennes (Wellingborough), Martin (Higham Ferrers), Jones (Earls Barton), Lewis (Kettering), Pettitt (Irthlingborough). Rushden was not represented. The Hon. Sec., the Rev. Hugh Bryan, presided. It was unanimously resolved (1st) that the delegates as now chosen should act until next Annual Meeting, when fresh representatives, including three Hon. Members, should be elected for the year; (2nd) that quarterly Ringing Meetings of the Society be held at various places, but no refreshments to be provided, the first Quarterly Meeting to be at Keystone or Warkton. Suggestions as to the advisability of making the Society a County Association, and charging all new members an entrance fee; also as to payment of delegates' expenses, part payment of belfry instructors, and as to whether belfries having over ten members belonging to the Society should not be privileged to elect two delegates instead of one only, were likewise discussed, but left for settlement at next Annual Meeting. In future the meetings of the Society will be advertised in "THE BELL NEWS" in addition to being called by circular. Mrs. Mackworth Dolben was good enough to allow the ringers access to the beautiful gardens of Finedon Hall. The general opinion of campanologists regarding the bells of the Church of St. Mary, Finedon, is that the addition of two trebles would make a musical octave, very near in tone and weight to the peal of eight at Kettering.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN BRANCH.—The usual monthly ringing meeting was held at St. Luke's church, Farnworth, near Widnes, on Saturday, September 6th, when about twenty ringers attended from Liverpool, Garston, Huyton, Halewood, Prescott, Woolton and Southport, besides the local company. The meeting was held in the schoolroom, at which the Rev. J. R. Jones (curate-in-charge), presided. After the minutes of the last meeting were read and passed, he addressed those present, giving the Association a hearty welcome, strongly advising his ringers to join the association, eventually four of them were enrolled at once, and the remainder would be sure to be so when seen by the leader. Mr. Hill, secretary, then briefly addressed the meeting, fully explaining its objects to be attained. The next meeting was fixed to be held at the parish church, Wigan (8-bell tower), on Saturday, November 1st. No meeting on October 4th, as the annual meeting will be held on that day. A hearty vote of thanks to the Rev. J. R. Jones, for the use of bells, schools, and presiding, brought a very harmonious meeting to a close. Methods rung during afternoon and evening: Grandsire Doubles, Grandsire Minor, and Plain Bob Minor.

ROSSENDALE BRANCH.—A meeting was held at Rawtenstall, on Saturday, August 30th. There were a good attendance from Haslingden, Helmshore, Bacup, Waterfoot, Ramsbottom, Newchurch, and Rochdale. Several 500s of Grandsire were rang during the day. Mr. Shepherd was re-elected secretary for the next twelve months. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Haslingden, on September 27th, 1890.

THE SHEFFIELD JUNIOR AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

This Society, which was formed in January of the present year, held their first half-yearly gathering at Ranmoor, on Saturday afternoon, August 23rd. A start was made with a game of cricket; afterwards an adjournment was made to the "Bull's Head" inn, where a capital dinner was provided by Host Slowe. Grace being said "go" was called, and the course-ends came up in quick succession. A move was then made to the church of St. John the Evangelist, where, through the kindness of the Vicar, the Rev. J. G. Williams, the bells were set going to the tune of Grandsire Triples and Treble Bob Major. Afterwards the members passed the evening with courses and tunes on the handbells.

THE SOCIETY OF CUMBERLAND YOUTHS.

On Friday evening, September 5th, the annual meeting of the above was held at the "Green Man," St. Martin's Lane, W.C. More than usual interest was felt in this meeting, as about seventy members were in attendance. The auditors, Messrs. Hannington and Foskett, having made a satisfactory statement, the balance sheet was passed as read, and the following members were elected officers for the ensuing year:—

Master, Mr. GEORGE NEWSON.
Jun. Steward, Mr. FREDERICK PITTS.
Sen. Steward, Mr. WILLIAM JONES.
Treasurer, Mr. WILLIAM BARON (re-elected).
Secretary, Mr. HENRY DAINS.

A cordial vote of thanks was then given to the outgoing officers and after a short debate, the following were elected as representatives to attend the forthcoming business of the Central Council, Messrs. Newson, J. Rogers, W. Baron, H. Dains, and the meeting closed.
H. DAINS, Hon. Sec.

ANNUAL OUTING.

On Wednesday, August 27th, the Blackburn Parish Company had their annual outing to York. Leaving Blackburn at 7.20 a.m., arriving at York at 10.20 a.m., they immediately made their way to Scowins Hotel. Mr. Dyson, the host, was evidently mindful of their wants, as he had provided an excellent repast. After doing justice to the good things provided, a start was made for the grand old Minster, which was very much enjoyed by all. St. Martin's church was next visited, where there is eight bells, and a touch of Grandsire Triples was indulged in which soon brought some of the York ringers amongst the party, Mr. W. H. Howard being one of them, and he had a touch of Grandsire Triples with them—of course he was the very man they wanted. Till the party saw him they were not able to get to see the Minster bells, but under his pilotage they were soon in the belfry viewing this fine peal of twelve. They were, however, forbidden fruit. The big bell, which is 10 tons 15 cwt, was also inspected. Leaving the Minster, Mr. Howard again took them through the city, pointing out the principal places therein (amongst them St. Mary's Abbey) and along the city wall, which commands a fine view of the city. In their course they came to Mr. George Breed's, and the next course was back to Scowins hotel, where Mr. Dyson had provided an excellent tea, which was very much enjoyed. The party soon after left for home, reaching Blackburn at 9.55 p.m., having spent a very

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

"STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA."

SIR,—For many years I have been trying to find a copy of this celebrated ringing treatise, but without success; and I don't believe there is a copy in the British Museum. The late Mr. Jasper Snowden was very anxious indeed to find a copy of the edition you are about to publish, and he would have given a high price for it had it been for disposal. I have spent many years in looking up all sorts of antiquarian gems, and I should say that a copy of this edition of Stedman's book is of very great value. Some thousands ought to be sold among lovers of the antique alone.
AN ANTIQUARIAN.

SIR,—Would you kindly inform me if the "Tintinnalogia" you are about to publish contains the lines by Fabian Stedman when he presented some changes to a ringers' society called, I think "Collegians?"
ENQUIRER.

[The book contains the quaintly-written lines of dedication to which our correspondent refers. We must, however, be excused answering questions of this kind. Our correspondent could have satisfied himself at a small cost.—ED.]

DEAR SIR,—I have just got our last week's "BELL NEWS," and see that you are about to reprint a valuable and interesting work of Stedman's own book, this I am very glad to hear; I hasten to give you an order for one copy for myself, and will try and induce my other friends to do the same. I must have this work as I have in my library all your other reprints. I hope you will have a great sale for the work.

OLD WILLIAM.

On the tenor-box old William stept
With vigour, hale and hearty,
Determined now to do his best
For the members of his party.

The peal went on, the first half o'er,
The time began to tell,
The caller more than once complained
About the tenor-bell.

'Too close,' 'too wide,' 'why can't you hear!'
Old William hardly liked it;
And just before the single came
He set his bell and spiked it.

THE LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN GUILD.

On Saturday, August 30th, the monthly meeting of the Guild was held at St. Luke's church, Crosby, and was well-attended by ringers from the following places: Aughton, Bootle, Crosby, Crossens, Ormskirk, Sefton and Southport. Ringing commenced at 3 p.m., and service was held in the church at 4.30 p.m., which was well attended by the ringers and several members of the congregation. The prayers were read by the Rev. R. Love, and a good and practical address was delivered by the Rev. W. T. Bulpit. After service the ringers adjourned to the schoolroom, where an excellent knife and fork tea had been provided by the generosity of the Vicar and churchwardens, and to which ample justice was done. The business meeting was afterwards held, at which the Vicar (the Rev. R. Love) presided, supported by the Rev. W. T. Bulpit, Captain Green, Messrs. J. Martin, W. F. Hayward. The Vicar, in a neat and forcible speech, gave the ringers a hearty welcome to Crosby, and said he was pleased to hear of the good work that was being done by the Guild, and would be glad to become an hon. member and do all he could to assist them in every way. Captain Green then addressed the ringers at some length, and said he was pleased to see so good a meeting, and hoped the Guild would keep on doing the good work it had begun, and he would do all he could for the Guild, and hoped to again meet them on some future occasion. Several items of interest were then discussed, and three hon. and five performing members were elected, and after a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding, and for the use of the bells and schoolroom, and to the gentlemen for providing so excellent a tea, a very pleasant evening was brought to a close. Touches of Grandsire, Bob and Kent Treble Bob Minor were rung.

BELLS AND BELL-RINGING IN SHREWSBURY.

It may not be out of place to put before the numerous readers of "THE BELL NEWS" a short account of one of the many interesting features which the town of Shrewsbury can boast. Through the kindness of the clergy and ringers, access was soon obtained to the tower of St. Alkmund, where a beautiful peal of eight (tenor about 14 cwt.) is to be found. An account of three peals—one of Bob Major, rung in 1812, and two of Grandsire Triples, rung in 1818 and 1839—hang on the walls which at once recalls to a stranger's mind the time when the famous Shrewsbury Society of Union Scholars existed. Close at hand lies St. Julian's church with a very musical ring of six (tenor about 16 cwt.) but the "go" is rather bad. In the vicinity is St. Mary's church, with its peal of ten (tenor about 21 cwt. and dated 1775). In this tower hang four peal-boards recording—a peal of Grandsire Caters rung in 1811, a peal of Oxford Bob Royal rung in 1813, and two peals of Grandsire Triples rung in 1833 and 1864. Overlooking the quarry, which just now looks superb, is the dome of St. Chad's church, covering a magnificent peal of twelve (tenor 42 cwt.) The spacious ringing-chamber is adorned with five peal-boards, the most famous recording the extraordinary performance of a peal of Grandsire Caters, 10,097 changes, rung in 6 hrs. 50 mins. in 1808. The other boards give dates—1799: Grandsire Cinqes (6,006 changes); 1800: Oxford Bob Royal; 1813: Oxford Treble Bob Maximus and 1842: Grandsire Triples. A pressing invitation to visit the other churches, which could not be accepted, brought to conclusion a day which will long be remembered by

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE NEWLY-DISCOVERED PEAL OF STEDMAN
TRIPLES.

Some interest and not a little curiosity has, no doubt, been excited by the statement in the foot-note appended to the record of the peal of Stedman Triples rung at Cliffe-at-Hoo, in Kent, on the 7th inst. I have been requested to relate the history of that composition, so far as it is known, and to publish the figures of it; and this, pending further investigations, I will proceed to do at once, in the hope that the publicity thus given to the matter may lead to some further information being received in elucidation of what, at present, seems a very strange affair.

The peal in question is contained in a letter (which I have seen) written by the late Mr. Henry Hubbard on October 20th, 1845, and sent by him to Mr. Leggett, who was at that time leader of the band of ringers attached to the church of East Dereham, in Norfolk. That company had already rung a quarter-peal in the method, and were anxious to achieve a 5000; they accordingly applied to Mr. Hubbard, then living in Norwich, for a peal. Mr. Hubbard appears to have allowed some little time to elapse before responding to this request, being engaged, in the meantime, in an endeavour to secure the figures of Hudson's composition (with the 60 P blocks). Not succeeding in obtaining this so soon as he expected, he wrote the letter mentioned above, and sent to Mr. Leggett, instead of Hudson's peal, one in five parts by Mr. Thos. Thurstans, with common singles only, in place of Hudson's "Doubles." But the East Dereham company had, in the meantime, suffered the loss of one of their number, by death, and before a new hand could be brought forward sufficiently to enable the peal to be attempted, Mr. Leggett himself, the conductor, took an engineer's berth in the East India Company's service, and left the town. Before going, however, he handed over the letter containing the peal to Mr. Wells, another member of the company, in whose possession it is supposed to have remained until his death, about a year ago.

It seems certain that the East Dereham company never performed this peal: for although they did ring a peal of Stedman Triples in 1867, enquiries which I have made leave little room for doubt that it was what we have hitherto known as the "Original" which was performed on that occasion.

Mr. Hubbard's original letter has come to light within the last few weeks in the following way. On the death of Mr. Wells senr., his papers passed into the possession of his son, Mr. Robert Wells, of Benhall, Suffolk, who found this letter among them, but does not seem to have examined it closely, concluding that it contained only a touch of Stedman. He, however, happened to mention the existence of the letter to Mr. Gabriel Lindoff, when the latter was in the neighbourhood for his summer holiday. Mr. Lindoff expressed a wish to see the letter; and, in due time, Mr. Wells very kindly sent it to him for his inspection. Mr. Lindoff, seeing that it was a peal, and not a touch, at once sent the figures to me for examination and proof. Finding it true, I was naturally curious to learn the circumstances of its production, and was at once placed, most courteously by Mr. Lindoff, in possession of the above details, and also favoured with a sight of the original letter. Mr. Lindoff was, of course, aware of the importance and interest attaching to the discovery of this peal; but did not wish to have it made known until it had been rung.

Now, the strange thing about it is, that, whereas we have always been accustomed to consider Thurstans' well-known and admirable ten-part composition as the first ever produced by means of common singles only, in addition to bobs; there can, nevertheless be no doubt that the date of composition of this five-part peal was prior to that of the former. The title "Original" has distinguished the former because of that supposed fact—that it was the first, not only rung, but composed by the aid of common singles only: and it is admitted that great excitement was caused among ringing men at Birmingham by the production and performance of the "Original" on this very account. Yet this five-part peal with ten common singles (easily reducible to two) was in existence all the time. The actual date of its composition we cannot fix, except that it must have been some little time before October 20th, 1845, when we find it already in the possession of Henry Hubbard. The "Original" was rung, it is believed immediately after composition and proof, on May 18th, 1846; no knowledge of any previous peal, with common singles only, being apparently current at the time in Birmingham.

Mr. Heywood, who has taken the greatest interest in this discovery, has enquired diligently in Birmingham without being able to discover that anything whatever was ever known, or suspected, of any such peal prior to the "Original." Yet it is most extraordinary that Thurstans should have concealed the knowledge of this peal from his Birmingham associates, especially the late Mr. Henry Johnson, at a time when the greatest keenness was being manifested in the matter of Stedman compositions, and when such a peal would have been sure to have created a sensation. Still more extraordinary is it that he should have sent it away, presumably to a stranger; and that that stranger, Henry Hubbard, should not have been more impressed by the novelty than he appears, from his letter, to have been.

Any information, which may serve to throw more light on this curious subject, will be gladly received, and thankfully acknowledged. The Exercise is indebted to Mr. Lindoff for bringing this interesting composition to light.

The following is the peal. The five courses singled-in, one in each part, may be massed in any one of the parts between two singles.

SINGLES AS APPLIED TO TWIN-BOB COMPOSITION.

We are now prepared to complete the third of the heads into which the consideration of singles was divided, by examining the mode in which these calls are to be practically applied. The above table shews the effect of the four different singles which are available. The left-hand column refers to singles occurring in an even course, that is, even before the single; the right-hand column to singles occurring in an odd course, that is, odd before the single. Taking S2 in the left-hand column, we find: "S2 shunts from six 1 to six 10; scale 153624." This means that, if S2 occurs in any even course, the course is shunted, at the completion of its first six, to the tenth six of the even course corresponding to (i.e. containing the same rows as) the odd one entered at the single; and the natural course-end of this corresponding even course is obtained from the natural course-end of the course quitted at the single by transposing the latter by the scale 153624. Conversely, taking S2 in the right-hand column, we have:—"S2 shunts from six 9 to six 14; scale 632451." This means that, if S2 occurs in any odd course, the course is shunted at the completion of the ninth six, not of this odd course but of the corresponding even course, to the fourteenth six of the even course entered at the single; and the natural course-end of this even course is obtained from the natural course-end of the even course corresponding to the odd one quitted at the single by transposing the latter even course by 632451. The natural course-end is simply the course-end of that P block to which such six as is under consideration belongs. To find the course-end of the even course corresponding to an odd one, or vice versa, transpose by the scale 564312, which is given at the foot of the table.

It is of the highest importance to the student that he should understand the precise point in a course from and to which the respective singles shunt. The correct application of these calls is by far the most troublesome part of twin-bob composition. And yet, if the use of singles is confined, in any one production, either to 2 and 14, or to 11 and 9, their employment will be found to depend on very simple laws, the difficulty being to render these intelligible.

Let us, to this end, trace the connection between S2 and S14. If, by means of S2 followed by S14, a block in its odd form is introduced into a peal, it is easy to see that S14 comes precisely at the point in a course where a shunt is necessary to avoid repetition with S2. But we cannot well deal, in composition, with blocks in other than their even form, and it is in the process of transposition to even that we seem to lose sight of the exact points from and to which the singles shunt. We have seen that S2, in an even course, shunts from six 1 to six 10. If S14 is used at the end of the odd block to shunt back to the even one, we must find S14 in the right-hand column of table J, where it is stated to shunt from six 11 to six 2. Bearing in mind that the table gives everything in its even form, let us notice that S2 produces six 10 of the block there entered. S14 must consequently quit this block at the adjoining six, which it does at six 11; for seeing that the block, being transposed from odd to even, is consequently rung backwards, six 11 will be the last six in the block before six 10 is again reached. Six 2, produced by S14, is the one following the six 1 at the completion of which S2 caused the shunt.

S11 and S9 produce precisely the same effect, shunting, as will be seen by an examination of the table, from and to the very same courses as S2 and S14, but with the important difference, noticeable in the table, that the shunts take place from and to a different part of the course.

It is needless to make the explanation unnecessarily tedious by pointing out the further analogies that exist between the four singles. It must be left to the student to follow the matter out for himself. I may say however that, by means of table J the intricate conjunction of S2 with S9, and S11 with S14, as in Mr. Parker's arrangement, can be clearly deciphered. We will now take up the five-part peal where it was left in article No. XII., to which reference must be made, and see how the points can be ascertained at which the singles required to unite the two main blocks are to be placed. The following examples of uniting the main blocks of peals by means of singles will greatly facilitate a comprehension of what has been advanced.

In the above mentioned five-part peal rounds occurs in the larger block, which therefore must remain even. The smaller block must, consequently, be singled in. Let us see how this may be achieved by means of singles at 2 and 14 such as we have above considered. What we want to find is the point in the larger block at which the smaller one may be introduced by the singles selected. In the tabulation of the peal in article No. XII., which it will be remembered is formed upon the arrangement of P blocks given in table F, article No. X, the smaller block is given as S6, H5, L5, Q5. This being the even form of the block to be singled in, it is first necessary to discover into what part of the larger block S14 in the odd form of the smaller block will shunt. Referring to what has been stated above in reference to the use of table J, we must transpose one of the course-ends in line 5 of table F, say 534612, by 153624, giving 514236, which will be found in line 1 of the table. If S14 at the end of the singled in block shunts into line 1, then S2 at the beginning of this block will of necessity, in accordance with what has been already explained, shunt out of the same line. Therefore, as the course-ends in line 1 are the part-ends, S2 at the commencement of the peal will bring up the odd form of the block which we require to single in. As this block in its even form is bobbed at S and H, in its odd form the bobs will fall, as explained in article No. XIII., at H and L. We therefore at the commencement of the peal call S2, followed by bobs at H and L, and conclude with S14, which latter call brings up six 2 of one of the courses of line 1, after which the larger block is continued to its completion. I have shewn in article XV. that, after the first single, the singled in block may be either entirely completed by calling the whole of its five parts before the second single is inserted, or S14 may be introduced at the end of the first part of this block, followed by one part of the larger block, in which latter case the whole must be four times repeated.

Let us next see where the smaller block can be introduced by means of S14 followed by S2. By the scale in the right hand column of table J we must find the course of the larger block into which S2 called at the end of the odd form of the smaller block will shunt. As before, we take a course-end, say 534612, in line 5 of table F, which is a course-end of the smaller block, and transpose it by the required scale 632451, giving 243615 which will be found in line 6 of the same table. Therefore S14 called at the end of the fourth course of the larger block will shunt to the odd form of the smaller block, and the following S2 will return to the larger block at the same point (but in another part) at which it was quitted at S2. This may be seen by noticing the numbers of the sixes from and to which the shunts lead. Now let us take S11 and S9 and see how these calls may single in the smaller block. The scale, in the right hand column of table J, for shunting from S9 back into the larger block is the same as that used in the case of S14, with the exception that the shunt takes place from and to a different part of the course, viz: from six 2 of the smaller block to six 11 of the larger. The course entered is, as before, one of those forming the part-ends, the eleventh six of which comes in the last course of the larger block. Thus the first single will, in this case, come after all the calls in the larger block are completed.

It now remains to consider the effect of S11 following S9. This will be the same as in the case of S2 following S14, for the scale for the shunt by S11 back to the larger block is found in the right hand column of table J to be 632451. The sixth entered is ninth of a P block in line 6 of Table F, whereas, in the case of S14, S2, it was the fourteenth six. Here comes into play a further consideration. The ninth six of a P block in line 6 occurs, as will be seen in the tabulation of the peal, in the fifth course of the larger block. The ninth six of a course comes between the L and Q positions, and as in this fifth course Q is bobbed, we must be careful, on returning to the main block, to remember that, after calling S11, the Q bobs remain to be called.

The explanation of any difficulty that the student may experience in regard to singling from or to courses in which Q is bobbed is to be found in the fact, carefully pointed out in article

No. XIII, that a block, singled in at a course-end, as is the case with singles at 2 or 14, starts at the "wrong" of its even form and consequently between the L and Q positions. Conversely, a block singled in at "wrong," as is the case with singles at 11 or 9, starts at the course-end of its even form. Hence the value of the numbers of the sixes, from and to which the singles shunt, given in table J. Were there no bobbed Qs in a peal there would be no need, in dealing with singles, to consider any part of the course but the course-end. But whenever there is a bobbed Q in a course from or to which a single shunts, it is necessary to examine carefully the number of the sixes concerned, remembering that, in the case of sixes 8, 9, 10, or 11, it is requisite to go behind the bobs at Q, that is, to work from the P block under the heading L instead of from that under the heading Q, or course-end.

As regards the arrangement of the peal in five or ten parts, the same choice is open in the three latter combinations of singles as in the case of S2, S14; that in five parts being, however, always liable to the chance of the peal coming round at the part-end, as pointed out in article No. XV. In the next article the peal we have been considering will be given in full with the singles placed in each of the four possible ways.

CHRIST CHURCH, EASTBOURNE, SUSSEX.

On Sunday, September 8th, 1890, an attempt was made to ring Penning's five-part peal of Grandsire Triples, which came to grief after ringing over 1000 changes, in consequence of the new vicar forcing himself into the belfry to deliver a letter to the secretary. The vicar was very sorry, and stated he did not know there was any such secret in bell-ringing. Also at St. Mary-the-Virgin, Ringmer, Sussex, an attempt was made to ring Thurstan's peal of Stedman Triples, but as the sixth rope broke this peal came to grief. Afterwards a touch of Union Triples was brought round. The ringers were then entertained by the Rev. C. D. P. Davies, who provided an excellent supper, after which some touches were rung on the handbells. The rev. gentleman then invited them to view the stars through his telescope. And at Brighton, Sussex, at the residence of Mr. Williams, several touches were rung on handbells, by Mr. and Mrs. Williams, and Messrs. Weston, King, Mitchell and George. The writer desires to thank Mr. T. M. Smith, of Eastbourne, Rev. C. D. P. Davies, Ringmer—the steeplekeepers, Messrs. A. Bennett, of St. Paul's, Brighton, and H. Hodges of Heene, for the use of bells (particulars which will be found in the peal column), and also Mr. G. Williams, of Brighton, for the energetic arrangements made by him which so much added to the enjoyment of a holiday. Such kindness and thoughtfulness to one whom he had not previously seen, will long be remembered.

THE NORTH NOTTS. ASSOCIATION.

A very successful meeting was held at Blyth on Saturday, September 13th, when upwards of forty members were present from the various towns and villages, viz.: Retford, Worksop, Shireoaks, Anston, Evertton, Tickhill, and Blyth.

At three o'clock the bells were put in motion by the Shireoaks ringers, and were kept going until a late hour in the evening to the methods of Kent, Violet, Duke of York, and Grandsire. At five o'clock the ringers adjourned to the Post Office (Mrs. Hinds), to partake of a substantial meat tea. Having all got seated, "go" was called, and the ringers rang a merry peal on their knives and forks, the last course-end coming up 40 minutes from the start.

The Rev. Canon Gray addressed the ringers, and in the course of his remarks said how pleased he was to see and welcome such a large assembly of church bell-ringers to the parish of Blyth. With reference to the Blyth ringers he was pleased to say they had with a great amount of teaching considerably improved in the art of change-ringing, but what seemed to be the greatest drawback to village churches was after the trouble the clergy were put to in having ringers properly taught, that as soon as they became good ringers one or two of them left the neighbourhood, and the consequence was the company required fresh ringers and additional training. He concluded by wishing from the bottom of his heart, the Association every success, and hoped the ringers would thoroughly enjoy themselves.

It was proposed by Mr. H. Haigh, and seconded by Mr. N. G. Hunt, that the next quarterly meeting be held at Anston on Saturday, December 6th, which was carried.

THE ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE SOCIETY.

On Saturday, September 6th, the above-named society held their annual pic-nic, the place selected for their destination being Wrexham, North Wales. The pic-nic fund was supplemented by a handsome donation from the wardens of St. Peter's church. The first contingent left Ashton by 5.30 a.m., being followed at 12.50 p.m. by the rest of the society. On arrival, as no notice had been sent of their intention to visit the town, the first thing was to hunt up the keys of the church and obtain permission to ring, which were very soon got, as all who know the Wrexham men will be sure, as they are always willing to welcome any brother-strings. During the day touches were brought round in the Grandsire, Treble Bob, and Stedman methods on the fine peal of ten bells which are enclosed in one of the finest church towers it has ever been the pleasure of the visitors to see. The ringing-room is decorated with tablets recording the prowess of the Wrexham band.

The view from the top of the tower came in for a great share of attention as well as the lovely scenery of the Welsh hills in the vicinity. The weather was lovely, and the beautiful scenery of Delamere forest, Chester, the new Dee Bridge, and Hawarden, which was passed en route, was greatly enjoyed. The return time came too early, but by great exertions all caught the train except a portion who stayed to view the beautiful Vale of Llangollen on the following day. All arrived home by midnight well pleased with their day's outing, and with many thanks to all who contributed to the day's enjoyment, not forgetting the rector of Wrexham (the Ven. Archdeacon Howell), and his band of ringers.

CRICKET.

ST. ALBANS CATHEDRAL RINGERS v. ST. PETER'S SOCIETY.

On Saturday, September 5th, these two societies met on the St. Albans Grammar School Recreation Ground to try conclusions in a game of cricket. As this was the first known instance of any change-ringing or other ringing societies of St. Albans having met in the cricket field before, the event was looked forward to with interest. Favoured with weather more favourable to the cricket field than the belfry, a start was made soon after three o'clock. The sides were captained by the two conductors, Mr. G. W. Cartmel for the Cathedral company, and Mr. E. P. Debenham for the St. Peter's society. Mr. Cartmel winning the toss, elected to bat first, Messrs. T. Long and R. Weatherley defending the wickets. With the total at 9 the champion (Long) was bowled, the vacancy being filled by the Rev. Philip Deedes, who shared a similar fate at the hands of the same bowler. Things were indeed looking black for the Cathedral band, two wickets having fallen, and the over unfinished. Cartmel next appeared, and disappointed the bowler from accomplishing the "hat trick." By degrees the score increased, but at the expense of wickets. The policeman bat had not appeared on the scene when the last two men were in, but S. Mitchell, who, although unwell, came to the rescue. After scoring 4 he was bowled, and by this time the other bat appeared. The field was shifted in all directions, in view of some tremendous hitting, and these expectations were fully realised, when Chapman opened with a drive for two. But there his score was unfortunately stopped, as Cartmel, when his chances appeared for carrying his bat out, was bowled by a good ball from J. W. Brewer. The St. Peter's band started in good form, J. W. Brewer especially punishing the bowling of T. Long and H. Parkins. Waller was the first to leave, his place being filled by H. Brewer, who, after making two, was bowled by Long. The conductor next appeared, and opened with some of his old form, but when he had made 6 he also was beaten by Long. Arthur Hull was the only other bat who scored, the innings closing for 37, six points behind.

On the second venture of the Cathedral eleven a better stand was made, Long scoring a useful 23, and the Rev. Philip Deedes 28. The latter gentleman was not out at the call of time, but it was decided to have two more overs, and then, unfortunately, he was bowled. The ground is a slow one for run getting, owing to the rapid growth of grass, which accounts for the low scoring. As will be seen by the scores, the Cathedral band won the match by 6 runs on the first innings. Mr. W. Battle kindly acted as scorer, a position which just suited his "delicate constitution."

On the conclusion of the game a tea of a substantial character was partaken of at Mrs. Orpin's restaurant, the company numbering twenty-two. Mr. Cartmel acted as chairman throughout the evening, which was spent in a very harmonious way, songs being sung ad lib. Everything passed off most happily, and the day's enjoyment will long be remembered by all. The National Anthem brought the gathering to a close.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Friendships on earth are made to sever;
In our Father's home they last for ever."

When I received my paper on Saturday last and beheld the features of the oldest "youth" of Woolwich, I felt a strong desire to start off for the "red barrack town," to shake hands with our octogenarian friend and brother-string, Mr. Henry Bright, and compliment him—first on his entrance into the "gallery," and second, on the excellence of the portrait furnished us. Unfortunately, business calls were imperative, and so my aspirations remain for the present unrealised. But, at any rate, if I am unable to meet Mr. Bright in propria personæ, there is left the consolation of knowing that I can, through our editor's indulgence, convey to the old veteran my warmest wishes for his comfort and happiness, and to express my earnest hope that the long and manifold services which he has rendered to the Exercise in his own locality may be ever remembered and valued by those to whom he has done such good service; and also that I may ere long be able to congratulate him on the accomplishment of "the wish of his life"—a peal of Double Norwich.

Now, Trinity Youths—you who have so long been benefitted by Mr. Bright's knowledge, and zealous efforts for your good; here is an opening to show what stuff you are made of. Here is an opportunity placed within your grasp of making some return for services rendered to you, and at the same time of performing something which when accomplished will redound to your own credit. Therefore, let us see you rise to the situation, master the intricacies of Double Norwich, and pull off a peal in the method with your old friend, which feat, I doubt not, will yield him more gratification than any form of presentation which you could make him.

I am very much pleased in being able to compliment Mr. Buckingham on his hundredth peal, and particularly so when I look at the composition of his "century." Forty of these, we are told, have been on handbells retained in hand, which fact, it will not be disputed, adds lustre to his record of achievements in the way of peal-ringing. Perhaps I may not be presumptuous in expressing the hope that we shall ere long be able to add his features to those of our other notabilities in the "gallery."

Talking about peals, brings to mind Mr. Attree's return for the first seven months of this year, which is rather interesting reading, and instructive also. The College Youths are, as taking all things into consideration they should be, at the top; but the most notable change in the relative positions between this and last year is certainly that of the Kent Association, which has jumped from 13th to 2nd place. On the other hand, Worcester has dropped from 8th to 18th place. Salisbury and the Cumberlands have risen from 14th and 15th places to the 8th and 9th respectively; but the Norwich and Yorkshire Associations have come down from 6th and 7th to 10th and 11th. The Trinity Youths also have risen from 21st to 14th, and the East Lincolnshire Association from 34th to 26th. But what is most remarkable is the decrease of 91 in the gross total from that of the corresponding period last year. What is the cause of this? Had last year's return been of a phenomenal character one might have readily understood the drop; but nothing of the sort is the fact. The annual increase in the number of peals rung has been of such a steady character as to preclude all attempts to explain the decrease on that score. So the problem still remains to be solved. There is, however, one small modicum of consolation to be derived from the fact that if there has been a decrease in quantity, at any rate quality (in the shape of variety of methods rung) has by no means deteriorated. Thus, it might not be unreasonable to suppose that this lesser number of performances may after all be due in a great measure to the fact that there has been this year an effort to master fresh methods. If so, the unfavourable character of Mr. Attree's return might be regarded with equanimity.

By the way, may I ask, is some one bidding strongly for the position of poet laureate to this journal? If so, I commend him for his perseverance. But somehow his effusions remind me very much of a period in my schoolboy days, when some of us youngsters' ambitious of acquiring fame as poetasters, commenced a journal of "Nursery Rhymes"; and I can tell you Lord Tennyson "wasn't in it" with some of the contributions which as a rule ran something after this style:—

"There was once a man in Rangoon
Who went up aloft in a balloon;
But he rose up so high
That it burst in the sky,
And o'erpower'd the man in the moon.

Now, Mr. would-be-poet-laureate, what do you think of that style of poetry? It might by some be regarded as crude, perhaps doggrell, or even vulgar; but such are persons of no account, and so, if you mean to win position, here's the cue for you. When individuals are rising to eminence, it appears to be the usual thing for them to be assailed by the darts of the green-eyed monster; so if this rule applies here, you are on the high road, for some envious one (who has forgot, probably intentionally, to append his signature) vents his spleen in the following:—

"An ignoramus, somewhere in the City (?)
Thinks himself a poet—more's the pity;
If I could only get hold of him,
I'd——"

But I will draw a veil upon the remainder; a thought has just struck me that perhaps after all, it is not envy which has prompted the utterance, but that the writer has felt himself hit rather hard, by one of your classical rhymes, and thus would bring down a pulverising vengeance upon your devoted head. So "Up guards, and at 'em!"

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

RE-ISSUE OF

STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA.

Of this curious work, by the immortal FABIAN STEDMAN, but one copy is supposed to be in existence. This copy is the property of the Rev. W. C. LUKIS, Vicar of Wath, Yorkshire, who has kindly entrusted it into the hands of the Editor of this journal for re-publication.

It is proposed to issue the work complete, handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, for One Shilling and Sixpence per copy, post-free; and as only one edition will be printed, orders for copies should at once be sent to the printers, care of Editor of this paper.

As many admirers of the distinguished author have ardently desired to possess a copy of his book, the printers hope that this republication may be taken up by the Exercise generally, and that those gentlemen who can will order more than one copy. Where it may not be convenient to send the amount with order, the order may be sent on notwithstanding, and the amount follow at the earliest opportunity. Postal Orders are the most convenient.

The work will be printed on good paper, and will form a valuable and curious addition to the ringers' library. It will be issued without delay. The imprint on the title-page of the book runs as follows:

"Printed by W. G. for Fabian Stedman at his shop in St. Dunstan's Churchyard in Fleetstreet, 1688."

All Orders will be announced in this paper.

"THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD" will be forwarded post free, on the following terms:—

One copy, 12 months	8s.
" 6 "	4s.
" 3 "	2s.

All Subscriptions and Orders for papers must be sent direct to the Publisher E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, London.

Everything for insertion in this Journal to be addressed "The Editor of THE BELL NEWS, Walthamstow, London." Letters forwarded for publication, and performances under 5000 changes must reach us not later than Wednesday morning; and the insertion of any communication arriving later than the first Postal delivery on Thursday morning cannot be guaranteed in that week's number. When it is found impossible from want of space to insert all touches forwarded, the earlier ones will have the preference.

All communications respecting advertisements must be addressed to the office of "THE BELL NEWS," Walthamstow, London.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1890.

In a previous issue attention was directed to a request made by a member of the company of ringers at Swansea for a band of expert ringers to visit that town, with the view of exciting public interest in the art of change-ringing. This request was not suffered to go by unheeded, for at their earliest convenience, the Monmouth company, under the leadership of Mr. T. H. JONES, passed over the border to do what they could towards the object in view. What they effected there, and the results of such visit need not be dealt with now. We are only concerned in alluding to the bare fact of the response given by our Monmouth brethren. The visit certainly did not result in three or four peals in a day, in as many different methods, but for all that we hope and believe it will be the means of establishing the Art in the town, and that eventually we may have the pleasure to chronicle the performance of some good work in the southern portion of the principality. We see in another column a letter of thanks to the Monmouth men for their exertions, which embraces a wish that they may see fit to make Swansea the scene of their annual excursion. That of course is a matter for themselves to decide upon, though other visits would no doubt have a tendency to further the cause and strengthen the Welshmen in their efforts.

Obituary.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

On Tuesday, the 29th ult., the above-named gentleman for many years a member of the Wakefield (St. John's), and parish church societies, passed away at the advanced age of seventy-eight. Mr. Scott was born on August 3rd, 1812, at Long Melford, Suffolk, where he learned to ring six-bell methods. In the year 1837 he migrated to Wakefield, and formed an acquaintance with the ringers of that town, with whom he soon made good progress on eight and ten bells in the Grandsire, Stedman, and Treble Bob methods. Mr. Scott had taken part in ringing many peals of 5000 changes and upwards, including one of 8000 and one of 10,080 Kent Treble Bob Major, and conducted several of them. As a ringer and conductor Mr. Scott could always be relied upon, but unfortunately he had not been able to take any part ringing for several years owing to deformity of the hands, the result of severe rheumatic affliction. As a ringer and citizen he was much respected, and he leaves one son, Walter, who is a good ringer and a respected member of the Cathedral society. The remains of the deceased gentleman were interred at Wakefield Cemetery on Sunday, September 7th, and several members of the Cathedral society attended the funeral and rang on the handbells over the grave a course of Grandsire Triples, and in the evening a muffled peal was rung on the Cathedral bells.

Correspondence.

While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

A CORRECTION.

SIR,—At the bottom of the notice of the peal rung at Aylsham, in "THE BELL NEWS" of the other week, it states that "This is the first peal on the bells since 1838, in which C. Clements took part at the age of 17." Allow me to inform your readers that this is a false statement, and that persons desirous of giving such information in the way of history had better abstain from writing foot notes altogether, rather than mislead people by dabbling in matters which know nothing about. Mr. C. Clements has rang in two peals on the Aylsham bells since 1838, viz.: 5024 of Oxford Treble Bob Major in 1843, and a 5000 of Bob Royal in 1852.

J. H.

THANKS.

SIR,—I venture to ask if you will again allow me a short space in the columns of "THE BELL NEWS." I now write to publicly thank the six ringers from Monmouth, under the superintendence of Mr. T. H. Jones, for their kindness in visiting this town on August 28th, and in introducing to the place the proper method of bell-ringing. It was quite a pleasure on that date to listen to the old bells ringing in merry touches in bob-and-single "style," and not a few outsiders—judging by their remarks since—seemed to be alive to the fact that something unusual was taking place within the ancient tower of St. Mary's, Swansea. My letter is brief, but as I have already stated, I simply write to express the gratitude of most of my fellow-ringers as well as my own to the Monmouth men, hoping they will pardon me in not doing this before, also hoping they will make Swansea their annual outing place.

HENRY WEST.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, BRIGHTON.

SIR,—The bells of the above church, not having been heard in changes lately, it would be interesting to know if the society or band of ringers that once existed have, like the "Dadoo," become extinct. Should such be the case, however, one cannot feel at all surprised; for (I am sorry to say it) the relationship between the Captain (who by-the-bye appoints himself to that office), and his ringers has never at any time been of that friendly description which we at all times rejoice to see, and which happily is the rule rather than the exception, throughout the whole of the ringing world. It is, I venture to presume, a great pity that this kind of thing exists, but the fault in this instance, can only be attributed to the arbitrary and cantankerous method adopted by this self-appointed official in dealing with his ringers; he takes upon himself the position of being "monarch of all he surveys, and whose right there is none to dispute"; and should one of his ringers question his authority in the belfry, or capability of conducting a touch, oh dear, their lives in his presence would hardly be worth the living; and further so zealous in his disposition, that should one of the band pay a visit to either of the other towers in the town, he stands condemned in his judgment. As an instance for the readers of this journal, I will mention one case that occurred very recently. A member of one of the other societies in the town was passing the tower a few Sunday evenings since, when hearing only five bells going he thought to himself he would go up and give a hand to ringing for the service, which he did, and by way of thanks I presume, he meets with a torrent of abuse from this cantankerous official, and is even dared ever to enter the belfry again. I ask in all fairness if ringers are to tolerate this kind of treatment, can they be expected to? Decidedly not; but at the same time are the bells to lay idle for the sake of this individual. I hope not. It is not at all a pleasant subject for me to write to you about, but this kind of thing has gone on for so long, that I feel compelled to expose the character of this official whose company is better suited to the backwoods of America than the belfry of a church. Were it not for this individual, the relationship between Brighton ringers might be considerably improved; were it not for his bigoted disposition the Sussex Association would experience no difficulty in obtaining the use of the bells whenever required. Even now when the vicar of the church has granted the use of the bells to the Association, this individual would not allow any member of the same to enter the belfry, if he does, it is only a few chosen ones, and few they are. Much more could be said while on this subject, which I have not attempted to exaggerate, a fact, in which Brighton ringers generally could bear me out. Having been at one time a member of the society in question, I am enabled to speak from experience. In my time a visit from a Sanitary Inspector would oftentimes have been very beneficial. Oh! that pail that usually stood in the corner, is it removed? PERFECTLY DISGUSTED.

WANTED HANDBELLS.—Three Chromatic Octaves, from C22 or G25. State make, condition and price to W. L. Smith, West Parade, Sutton-on-Hull

GARDEN PARTY AT DUFFIELD BANK.

By the kind invitation of the President, A. Percival Heywood, Esq., the Midland Counties' Association and other ringers, were on Saturday, September 13th, invited to a garden party in the lovely grounds attached to his residence. Members were present from Birmingham, Burton-on-Trent, Derby, Duffield, Long Eaton, Loughborough, Melbourne, Nottingham, Nuneaton, Ripley, Sandiacre, and Sheffield, to the number of about 120. The parish church bells were also placed at the disposal of the visitors, and with the exception of a short interval for refreshments, were kept going the whole of the afternoon and evening. The chief attraction of the meeting was the miniature railway which runs through the picturesque grounds of Duffield Bank, and the trains which were run at frequent intervals were largely patronised, and evidently greatly enjoyed. Refreshments were provided during the afternoon, and tea as usual was served about five o'clock. The weather was delightfully fine and bright, and when the party broke up at six o'clock, it was evident that one and all had enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon, and the members through "THE BELL NEWS" desire to return their hearty thanks to Mr. Heywood and his family for their kindness.

BICKLEIGH, DEVON.

The Rev. R. Scoble, vicar of this pretty little parish (situated about seven miles from Plymouth), has placed a new set of ropes in the tower at his own expense. They are from the firm of J. Nicoll, Bermondsey, and give every satisfaction. The vicar having communicated with Mr. E. Taylor, of Plymouth, that gentleman journeyed to Bickleigh and adjusted the ropes to the bells, placing heavy ropes at the ropes'-ends, leaving them so for a week. On Sunday, September 7th, the vicar invited Mr. Taylor to bring a change-ringing party and ring for Divine Service which they accordingly did, Journeying thither on shanks' pony, the peal of six were set going in Stedman Doubles. After ringing about six 6-scores in this method, the party adjourned to the fields for half an hour, and regaled themselves on the pure breezes from the Dartmoor hills. There is no inn at Bickleigh. Going back to the tower they rang six 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles, when the vicar visited the belfry and thanked the party for coming, saying it gave him great pleasure to have the bells rung so nicely, and leaving strict orders with the sexton not to have the ends of the ropes cut off. This is the first Stedman by the band for at least ten years, or since the prime days of W. Banister, Esq. The striking was excellent throughout, the ringers standing as follows: H. Myers, 1; E. Hendy, 2; E. Taylor (conductor), 3; A. Richards, 4; W. Marsh, 5; P. Manning, 6. Mr. Hall, of Bickleigh, rang the fifth and tenor alternately. All the ringers stayed to Divine Service, after which they caught the 8.20 train for home.

ST. THOMAS' SOCIETY, BELFAST.

The members of the above society assembled in the belfry on Wednesday evening, September 10th, and rang a hearty peal of congratulation to Mr. H. P. Hill on the occasion of his marriage, which happy event took place at Downpatrick on the morning of the 10th inst. Mr. Hill was for a number of years an active member of the society, and no doubt would have continued so, but for his removal from Belfast. He has the good wishes of his brother-ringers for his future happiness.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

My DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

*This is to certify:—*That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

MONEWDEN, SUFFOLK.

On Wednesday, September 17th, this small parish of only 200 inhabitants was quite en fete, the occasion being the first time the new peal was rung. No opening service was held in the church, owing to the indisposition of the rector, the Rev. C. A. Sinclair. At 9.45 the first 720 Oxford Treble Bob was rang in 25 mins. R. H. Hayward (conductor), 1; D. Collins, 2; H. Howell, 3; S. Collins, 4; E. Clayton, 5; A. Howell, 6. The peal were cast by Mears and Stainbank, and hung by H. Howell and Son, Church Bell Hangers, Ipswich, and although very light (tenor only 6 cwt), are good in tone and go capitally. The inscriptions are: Treble—"Martha Gooderham gave me;" 2nd. "We six are hung to the Glory of God;" 3rd. "May God bless all whom we do call;" 4th. "I commemorate Jubilee, V.R.;" 5th. "C. A. Sinclair, rector, J. J. Peck, G. Gooderham, churchwardens;" Tenor—"Geo. Gooderham gave me."

The restoration of the bells was first proposed at the celebration of Her Majesty's Jubilee in 1887, when the rector's churchwarden (Mr. J. J. Peck), said that he should much like for the balance of the Jubilee Fund—£6 12s. 6d.—to be placed in the Savings Bank to start a fund for the recasting of the bells. There were only three at that time and two of which were badly cracked. This proposition was received unanimously. At a meeting of the parishioners held shortly after, it was agreed to have a new peal of six and dispose of the old ones.

At the same meeting Mr. George Gooderham, the senior warden, very handsomely promised to give two new bells—a tenor for himself and a treble for his wife. A committee was formed consisting of the Rector and several of the principal ladies and gentlemen of the district, who have helped well with subscriptions, leaving only a small balance now to be raised. The second 720 on the bells was one of Oxford Treble Bob, in 21 mins. A 240 of Cambridge Surprise was rung by the Wightman family from Cretingham.

A cold lunch was served in a marquee, to which 111 sat down (sixty-four of which were ringers). Lawn tennis, cricket, quoits, and sports were all provided for the amusement of the visitors, and were well patronised, the weather being beautifully fine. Touches were rang by several other well known ringers, including Messrs. J. Fosdike, H. Baldry, and the Rev. J. B. Hawkesford, of Charsfield. It is a remarkable thing that one parishioner—Mrs. Hunt—who was present on Wednesday, was at the bell opening at Helmingham in 1816. She is now in her ninetieth year and is well and strong, and can remember the Helmingham affair well, talking of it as if it happened only a few months ago. About 6.30 the bells were lowered in peal by the Wickham Market band. The day's proceedings finished with a dance in the school-room which was kept up until shortly after midnight. The Harvest Festival was held on Sunday evening, September 21st, when the new bells were rung in rounds by Monewden men before and after the service. R. H. H.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

XVII.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

Having endeavoured to explain, in the last article, the four different ways in which singles may be applied to unite the two main blocks of the peal tabulated in article No. XII., I now give the results in full. It is to be specially noticed that the four arrangements are precisely alike in effect, for all produce the same part-end. The sole difference lies in the varying positions of the singles in the part. The arrangements with singles at 2 and 14 will usually be preferred, as these calls come at the beginning or end of a course, while those at 9 and 11 come awkwardly in the case of courses in which Q is bobbed. A careful study of the four types, in connection with the explanations contained in the last article, will enable the process of uniting the main blocks of a peal to be understood. I must, however, point out the great need for care in the use of table J.

since if any error is made in the location of the singles, it frequently fails to affect the part-ends, and in this case is only discoverable by the tedious process of pricking out the six-ends of the odd part and comparing them with those of the same courses in their even form. As the scales for obtaining the course-ends resulting from singles may be found useful in pricking out peals in ringable form, I here present them.

TABLE K.

Scales for pricking course-ends resulting from singles.

Calling single at	produces from
	1 2 3 4 5 6
2	2 4 6 3 1 5
9	5 1 4 2 6 3
11	2 4 6 3 1 5
14	5 1 4 2 6 3

A few examples will illustrate the use of this table. In peal (a) below, to obtain the course-end produced by S2 from rounds, transpose 231456 by 246315, which gives 346125. This is a short course of two sixes. To prick the next course in the same peal, first obtain the course-end resulting from calls at H and L, and then transpose this by the S14 scale, which gives 453126. This row must be placed in brackets, as owing to the 7th making fifths place, the course-end and the following six are cut out. The advantage of putting down this imaginary course-end is that we thus have the basis from which to prick the following course, into the second six of which the 7th falls at the single. To obtain the effect of S9 and S11 in peal (d), from the previous course-end 354621, prick the course-end resulting from calls at S and H, from which, by the S9 scale, the actual course-end 456231 is obtained. This course, like the one containing a single at 14 will be two sixes short. Then, to obtain the next course-end, produced by H, L, S11, Q, transpose 456231, first by the HL scale, then by the S11 scale, and lastly by the Q scale, which finally gives the actual course-end 265413. This course will contain two extra sixes. The bob scales will be found at the end of article XIII.

Reference was made in article No XIV. to Mr. Parker's No. 8 peal. I will now give an analysis of this composition in order to further elucidate the combination of S₂ with S₉. The following is the peal in its ringable form as published by its author. It may, however, be incidentally mentioned that, if the calling is commenced with the second S₂, the part-ends, which I annex, will have the bells falling into the respective places in their natural order, as in my No. 6 peal, a simplification very convenient to those conductors who mentally transpose the successive parts as they proceed.

Four times repeated.

As I have given in article XII. an example of the mode of tabulating twin-bob compositions it will be unnecessary again to call attention to the process, and the peals hereinafter analysed will be presented in the same manner without further comment. If the singles in the above peal are now removed, the composition will fall into its two component main blocks. These blocks, with the "q" sets involved, are as follows:

S	H	L	Q	S	H	L	Q	2 3 1 4 5 6
I	4	4	3		x		x	3 4 5 2 6 1
12	12	12	11	x			x	6 2 5 4 3 1

2.	8	12.	4	1.	4	7.	2
3.	12	9.	5	9.	11	5.	10
5.	6	2.	1

Assuming that all the S and H positions are plain and all the L and Q positions are bobbed, the above five "q" sets comprise all exceptions to this procedure. The one-course block being non-shunting, the larger block will also be non-shunting, as may be seen from the course-ends. Referring to the ringable form of the peal, it will be observed that the one-course block is singled in at the fourth course, between S₂ and S₁₄. This block need not, therefore, be further considered. The peculiar plan of the peal consists, as has before been stated, in the larger block being caused to shunt by means of S₉ in conjunction with the second S₂. These singles have nothing to do with uniting the two main blocks, for they occur within the larger block. Their effect is only to cause the part of the larger block that lies between them to be rung backwards, with the curious result that a shunt is thereby obtained. It will simplify matters to imagine the one-course block with its singles as altogether cut away from the ringable form of the peal, by striking out the fourth and fifth course-ends and their calling. Turning now to the tabulated analysis, the part of the larger block which lies between S₉ and S₂ is that divided from the rest of the block by the gaps after L in the third course and after Q in the eighth. If we refer to table J, we shall find that S₉ in an even course shunts from six 8 of such course to six 13 of the even form of the odd course entered at the single, the scale for the shunt being 632451. The transposition must not be made from the third course-end, because S₉ will come before the bobbed Q position. It must be made from the course-end which would come up if Q were plain, namely, 265413, Q₉. This, transposed by the scale 632451, gives 356412, Q₈. As the shunt is to six 13 of this course, we are landed after the Q₈ which comes just before the second gap. Thus after S₉ we ring backwards from Q₈ till we have passed Q₆, at which point we have reached the place where the shunt was effected. We cannot go farther back than six 9 of this course, for its eighth six came up before the single. Here, therefore, there must be another single, viz.: S₂. Referring again to table J, we find that S2 in an odd course shunts from six 9 of the corresponding even one to six 14 of the course entered at the single, the scale being 632451. As the single is called immediately after passing backwards through Q6, we are again in L9, which is here 361524, whereas the L9 before the first single was 265413. Transposing 361524 by the scale 632451 we obtain six 14 of the course 416523, which is Q8. Thus this second single shunts us to the even six 14 of the course which we began to ring backwards from its six 13 at the first single. In its non-shunted form Q8 is seen to be 246351. We have now, by inverting the courses between the gaps, got instead 416523, from which we obtain the part-end 453126, as will be seen by consulting the ringable form of the peal. Thus by inverting a portion of the larger main-block a shunt has been produced.

It is worthy of notice that non-pairing singles, viz., 9 with 2 and 11 with 14, are of no use in uniting disjointed blocks, for they can only be used within the limits of one main block.

MARRIAGE OF MR. BAKER, OF HERTFORD.

The wedding of Mr. Herbert Baker, youngest son of Mr. Wm. Baker, of Hertford, with Miss Lilian Constance, third daughter of Mrs. E. B. Hancock, of Woodlands, Lee, took place at St. Margaret's church, Lee, on Thursday, September 18th, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. W. J. Beck Hancock, brother of the bride, who was assisted by the Rev. Lewis Smith, M.A., vicar of Christ Church, Lee.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. E. Baker, who acted as best man, and the bride was attended by five bridesmaids. The bells pealed forth merrily as they left the church for Woodlands, where Mrs. Hancock held a reception. The bride and bridegroom left at 4.30 for Oxford, en route for North Wales, for the honeymoon.

In the evening eight of the Hertford College Youths started for the Rev. C. D. P. Davies' five-part peal of Grandsire Triples at St. Andrew's church, Hertford, but it came to grief after ringing 1526 changes. H. Bottril, 1; J. G. Crawley (conductor), 2; E. Holifield, 3; Rev. Canon Wigram, 4; S. Knight, 5; M. Ellsmore, 6; J. Cull, 7; F. George, 8.

The members of the Hertford Society of College Youths presented Mr. Baker with a handsome salad bowl and servers, accompanied by the following letter:—

"DEAR MR. BAKER,—We request you to accept this salad bowl as an evidence of our earnest desire for your happiness; and in the hope that some memento of the evenings which we have spent together in the belfry may be acceptable to Mrs. Herbert Baker and yourself.

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) W. Wigram, James Staples, W. L. Randall, F. G. Crawley, Jasper G. Crawley, F. George, S. Knight, M. Ellsmore, J. Cull, E. Holifield, H. Bottril, H. Phillips, J. Pomfret, R. Wilds."

WORCESTERSHIRE AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.—RINGERS' OUTING.

ON Saturday, September 20th, the Worcester branch of the above Association held what is hoped will be made an annual outing. Cheltenham was the place selected for headquarters for the day, from which place Charlton Kings and Prestbury was visited. Sixteen of the members leaving Worcester at 8.30 a.m., were allowed by the Midland Railway officials to travel as a pleasure party. Arriving at Cheltenham at 9.30 a.m., they were met by Mr. Hooper, who conducted them to St. Mary's tower, where ten of the company attempted a peal of Grandsire Caters, but was stopped for a wedding; after which a touch or two of Triples were rung. The remainder of the company made their way for Charlton Kings, where they rang several 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles, returning at two o'clock, at which time dinner was ordered. The whole company and one or two Cheltenham friends adjourned to Mr. Hodge's restaurant, High Street, and sat down to a capital spread, to which all did ample justice, the courses changing with surprising rapidity. At 3 p.m. a move was made for Prestbury, where one or two more local men joined them. The bells being at once raised, a touch or two of Grandsire Triples was rung till service time at 5 p.m., G. Colley ringing his longest length. After service another short touch was rung, after which the bells were lowered, and the return journey to Cheltenham commenced. Upon arrival some members made for the restaurant, others for the tower, and enjoyed another touch or two. Train time fast approaching the bells were lowered, and the visitors took leave of their Cheltenham friends. They then made way for the station, arriving home about 10 p.m., all having spent a thoroughly enjoyable and pleasant day, having had about twelve hours for disposal. Their best thanks are due to the local men who helped them to spend such a pleasant day; Messrs. Morris, Hooper, Nicholson, Pates, and Mr. Davis, of Prestbury, being very active for their pleasure; also Mr. W. J. Sevier, who spent the day with them.

SIR PAUL PINDAR'S HOUSE.

(FROM The Times.)

The impending extension of Liverpool-street Station, in itself an improvement essential to the convenience of tens of thousands of busy people, must of necessity result in the demolition, or, at any rate, in the removal, of one out of the two buildings in the City selected by Mr. Hare as the most remarkable examples of domestic architecture in the period preceding the Great Fire. Those persons who walk past the entrance to the congested terminus and the Great Eastern Hotel and turn to the left down Bishopsgate-street can hardly fail to observe upon the left-hand side, a quaint and ancient building, now used as a public-house, bearing the name of "The Paul Pindar." From the first floor upwards the front consists of two oriel windows, one being imposed upon the other, the oak timbers of which are of very great antiquity and beauty. Moreover, the ceiling of the room upon the first floor is, by virtue of its thoroughly Elizabethan character, well worthy of inspection. This is the edifice which is doomed. Of the few genuine pieces of Old London which remain to us there are few more fragrant with historical memories. Sir Paul Pindar was a man of mark. Born in 1566, in the year of the murder of Rizzio, and living to a ripe old age as a City merchant, he was placed in a position to witness from an advantageous standpoint the passage of events in the most stirring and critical period of the national history. Toward the end of the reign of Elizabeth we find him, according to trustworthy Mr. Hare, beginning to build his house. In later days "his reputation of the richest merchant of the kingdom brought him frequent visits here from James I. and Charles I. to beg for a loan in their necessities." The former of these monarchs sent the great merchant to Constantinople with a mission aimed at the improvement of British trade in the Levant. He was also appointed Commissioner of Customs, of which appointment one result was that at his death the King was found to be indebted to him and his brother Commissioners in no less a sum than £300,000. He does not appear to have died rich, for his affairs are said to have been in such confusion that his executor relieved himself of his trust by suicide, but in his lifetime he was certainly wealthy. He was rich enough to keep a diamond, valued at £30,000, which he lent to James I. on State occasions, and subsequently sold to Charles, to provide funds for the escape of Henrietta Maria and her children during the Civil Wars, to be described as "a worthy benefactor of the poor," and to contribute £10,000 towards the restoration of St. Paul's before the Great Fire.

All these details may be found in Mr. Hare's "Walks in London," together with others of interest. From him we learn that at the outset the house had a park behind it, and that in that park, for the particular delectation of James I., mulberry trees were planted, some of which survived until a few years ago in Half Moon Alley. Such a house suggests an endless series of mental pictures. We can almost see James sitting in the oriel and watching the citizens in Bishopsgate, or sauntering in the park behind with "Baby Charles" and "Steenie." That a structure thus redolent of history should be condemned is a thing to be deplored; but there is no denying the necessities of the case, and even the "official caretaker . . . for the historical memorials of London," for whom Mr. Hare calls, could hardly have refused his consent to the demolition of the house.

Sir Paul Pindar was a native of Wellingborough. He gave Communion Plate to the Parish Church A.D. 1634; also the present 3rd bell (the treble of the old peal of six) in the year 1640.

THE ESSEX ASSOCIATION.—MEETING AT SAFFRON WALDEN.

A District Meeting of the Essex Association was held at Saffron Walden, on Saturday, September 20th, and was fairly well attended for so remote a corner of the county, with railway communication none of the easiest. Ringers were present from London, Braintree, Bishops Stortford, Stanstead, Sawbridgeworth, Sudbury (Suffolk), and Saffron Walden and neighbourhood; besides Mr. Proctor of Benington, accompanied by one of his band, the Hon. Secretary (Rev. T. L. Papillon) and the Rev. T. H. W. Eyre, of Great Totham, now assistant Secretary. On Friday evening the Secretary, accompanied by four of the ladies who are probationer members of the Association, and some of the Saffron Walden ringers, paid a visit to Radwinter, where a new ring of eight (tenor about 17 cwt.) has recently been opened, and after trying the eight bells in rounds and call changes (in which the ladies acquitted themselves most creditably), a 360 of Bob Minor was rung on the back six by J. Freeman, 1; A. Pitstow, 2; F. Pitstow, 3; Rev. T. L. Papillon, 4; A. James, 5; E. Pitstow, 6. As also a 6-score of Grandsire Doubles, with 2-3-4 leading. J. Freeman, 1; A. Pitstow, 2; Miss E. Nockolds, 3; Miss D. Pelly, 4; A. James, 5; Rev. T. L. Papillon, 6; E. Pitstow, 7; F. Pitstow, 8. Ringing began in the Saffron Walden tower on Saturday morning with touches of Stedman Triples, Plain Bob, and Treble Bob Major, but not much worthy of note was done before the business meeting, held at 4 p.m. at the King's Head Inn, about thirty members (including five ladies) being present. The Rev. Raymond P. Pelly, Vicar of Saffron Walden, presided, and in response to a vote of thanks for the use of the tower and bells, gave a warm welcome to the Association, with some appreciative remarks upon its work in furtherance of the good object of bellfry improvement and recognition of the highest use of church bells in the service of God. The following new members were elected: Honorary Members—Rev. F. H. Fisher, Rector-designate of Debden, near Saffron Walden (at present Vicar of Fulham); Rev. R. P. Pelly, Vicar of Saffron Walden; and Mr. G. Lancelot Andrewes, of Sudbury (also a Ringing Member). Ringing Members—Messrs. C. Matthews, Sawbridgeworth; S. Andrews and E. Gowllett, Radwinter (Probationers). Mr. E. Brewer (Probationer), of Rayleigh, was admitted to be a ringing member, and the provisional election of Messrs. E. Chapman and J. E. Randall of St. Albans, and H. Swain, London, was confirmed. The Rev. H. T. W. Eyre, Vicar of Great Totham, near Witham, was on the motion of the Secretary appointed to act as assistant Secretary until the next annual meeting.

During the day complaints were made by some of the inhabitants that the noise of the bells disturbed them during business hours, and it is doubtful whether the Association will again be able to visit the town until something is done to lessen the volume of sound that pours down upon houses adjoining the church. Moveable wooden shutters inside the windows of the bell-chamber, that could be closed at need, would obviate most of this annoyance, while a "dumb practice apparatus" would give to those who wish to practice change-ringing opportunities of learning which at present are denied them. It is much to be hoped, in the interests of change-ringing upon this fine peal of bells, and of the general feeling of the inhabitants towards it, that these improvements may be adopted.

On and after this date, members of the Essex Association are requested to address all communications respecting payment of subscriptions to the Assistant Secretary, Rev. H. T. W. Eyre, Great Totham Vicarage, Witham, to whom also applications may be made by those who have not yet received the Report and list of members for the current year.

Intending subscribers are again reminded that the above must positively close at the end of the present month (September). The final list of subscriptions will be published in "THE BELL NEWS" of October 11th. W. H. GODDEN, Hon. Sec.

WORCESTERSHIRE AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday, September 13th, a committee and quarterly meeting of this Association was held at Stoke Prior, near Bromsgrove, the Rev. C. Stockdale, B.A., presiding. The rev. gentleman, in opening the proceedings, said he was very pleased to see such a large gathering of ringers present, which told him that they must take a deep interest in the good work they were engaged in, which he hoped was not all done for their own gratification, but to the honour and glory of God. He was very pleased to see and know that a great change had taken place amongst ringers and the ringing-chambers, and should be very pleased to assist in the spreading of such an important branch of Church work.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the next business on the agenda was the election of a representative to the Central Council. Mr. Smith, Hon. Sec., said before any nomination was made he wished to state that after consulting with the Master, Mr. Spittle, he had written to Mr. Harvey Reeves, hon. member of this Association, asking him to allow himself to be nominated as the representative of the Association. He was pleased to say that although Mr. Reeves had declined to accept a similar honour from another Association, he could not refuse that of representing his native county, if it was the wish of the Association that he should do so. He therefore proposed "That Mr. H. Reeves be the representative of this Association." Mr. J. Lewis, Treasurer, seconded the proposition.

Mr. Spittle, Master, in supporting the proposition, said he was pleased that Mr. Reeves was willing to represent this Association. He thought it would add dignity to their Association to have such an able representative, one who could in reality represent their feelings and interests, and who would be at all times in a position not only to listen to but to give effect to the wishes of the Association so far as a representative was able to do so. On the motion being put to the vote it was carried unanimously amidst much cheering.

Two honorary and one performing member were elected, and the Hon. Sec. was instructed to write to the Ven. the Archdeacon of Worcester, asking him in the interest of the Association to allow enrolled members the privilege of ringing upon the bells under his control. The usual vote of thanks was passed to the rev. chairman for presiding, and for the use of the schoolroom, tower and bells.

THE SAFFRON WALDEN SOCIETY.

A most enjoyable day was spent by the above Society, augmented by friends from Cambridge and Sawbridgeworth, at Yarmouth, on the 12th inst. The company was met by the Rev. J. F. Hastings, with whom arrangements had previously been made, and at once piloted to the grand old parish church, where touches of Grandsire Caters, Stedman Triples and Caters and Treble Bob Royal were rung on the fine ring of bells, in most of which Mr. Hastings took part, and also Mr. Long, the obliging steeple-keeper. A trip on the ocean waves, a saloon carriage which had been requisitioned for the ringers and their friends (numbering about thirty), merry tunes and changes on the handbells, the kindly greeting of Mr. Hastings, and many other pleasant things, all combined to make the visit to Yarmouth most enjoyable.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

BLACKBURN BRANCH.—On Saturday, September 20th, a meeting of this branch was held at the parish church, Blackburn. Representatives were present from Blackburn parish church, Holy Trinity, Church, Darwen, and Rawtenstall. The usual business meeting was held in the schoolroom at 5.30, Mr. J. Walker presiding. Mr. Walker was re-elected President of the branch, and Mr. J. Horrocks was re-elected Secretary. Votes of thanks were accorded to the Vicar, Wardens and ringers for the use of the bells, etc. Also to the officers for their services during the past twelve months, to which Mr. Walker briefly responded. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Church, on Saturday, October 25th. During the afternoon and evening touches of Triples, Caters, etc., were rung.

NOTES—INTERMEDIATE.

"Here we are again!"

Many readers of "THE BELL NEWS" were very kind to me in writing to the Editor in approval of my previous chapters. That has no doubt induced the people at the office to ask me to fill up the void caused by Free Lance's absence this week. That valuable contributor to our paper is, I am informed, not ill, but too busy to write any notes for this number. I am not enlightened as to the nature of this business. He may be enjoying his honeymoon, for all I know, or perhaps he is negotiating for an "opening" somewhere, and desires it to be held secret till afterwards; or perhaps—perhaps—well perhaps he will tell us next week all about it. At any rate this paragraph will serve very well as a preface to what is to follow.

I should like to say, en passant, that my identity is not yet known, nor is it going to be. All the guesses yet made are nowhere near the mark; therefore I would have my readers refrain from attempting to discover my patronymic. There is no reason for such inquisitiveness. I prefer to remain unknown for the present. Have not other great men also preferred to be incognito? Nevertheless I will answer one interrogatory put to me. I am not the Rev. H. R. Haweis; nor am I "that person" who once solicited an office "under the Crown." Heaven forefend.

The first of this month, as every one knows, partridge-shooting commenced. All the almanacks tell us this. I have a friend who is fond of shooting every thing except the moon, who studies the almanacks, and having discovered what day of the month the 1st of September came on, he determined, with other choice spirits, to go partridge-shooting, and I was invited to be of the party. My experiences of this sport are too painful for relation. In fact it is nicer to forget than to remember them. One or two occurrences I may mention, if only to excite the commiseration of those readers who when perusing this chapter, think it sombre and heavy. Whatever possessed me, who had never held a rifle before, to join a party of sportsmen, I cannot conceive.

We started on the morning of the above ill-fated day—a band of eleven, two of which were of the canine species, who every now and then seemed bent on committing a breach of the peace. In due time we reached the trysting-place, a barren piece of moorland bounded on one side by what appeared to be a large market garden. Here we awaited. The education of the partridges I thought had been greatly neglected, as they did not put in an appearance. I hazarded an opinion that the birds had "met one short," and gone away again, but this conjecture met with some amount of raillery. We still waited, and I, forgetting for the moment in whose society I was, suggested a touch on the handbells, to fill up the interregnum. The whole of the party eyed me with amazement, and I was fain to edge away from them, and pretend to be on the look-out for those feathered friends whom we had come out to slay.

We waited, and waited. But no birds ever came at all. At last we sat down upon the turf, and attacked the miscellaneous amount of provender brought with us. Under the influences of such refreshment the company gradually but perceptibly appeared benignant, so much so that I verily believe had Messieurs le Partridge appeared they would have been allowed to pick up the crumbs without molestation. The tempus continued to fugit as fast as possible, yet we moved not, till the shades of evening began to close o'er us. And even then nor in fact till the following morning was I aware that something like rheumatic fever had seized me. From the attack my convalescence has been but slow, mentally and bodily. My ravings during mental aberration were a compound of "How to learn Ringing without an Instructor;" "The Management of Bells;" and "Stedman's Tintinnalogia," all mixed. I have since arrived at the conclusion that "sport," or that which is called by that name, is not at all in my line.

Before I am again "called upon"—I was about to say "solicited"—to write another chapter for this paper, I should like to take a few of my readers into partnership with me. In this manner: From those readers of the "B.N." who are anxious to become journalists like myself, I invite contributions towards my next chapter. They can send me one or more paragraphs about any subject they are sweet upon. If such paragraphs meet with my approval I will incorporate them into my chapter. These literary efforts must bear the name and address of the senders—but photographs and written characters certified by churchwardens and overseers, are not necessary. It must be understood that the signature to my chapters will always be the same; I shall not add "and Co." I hope such contributions will be kept free from jest, and written in that serious vein in which my own contributions are written. To the first approved contributor I'll give a prize, the value and nature of which shall be a subject of the most profound reflection on my part. There is one condition I had almost forgotten. Every contributor must prove to my satisfaction that he spends one penny per week on the "B.N." and lends his copy only to those poor people who really can't afford this sum.

I had better leave off here.

JOSHUA.

ST. MARY, SWANAGE, DORSET.

On Thursday, September 18th, the above society had their annual outing, selecting Wimborne and Blandford as the visiting places. Accompanied by the rector, the Rev. T. A. Gurney, they left Swanage by an early train, arriving at Wimborne about nine o'clock, where, by the kind permission of the vicar, they had a ring on the Minster bells, and were shown through the Minster by Mr. Hart, leader of the Minster bell-ringers. They then proceeded to Blandford, arriving there about 11.0 and were met at the station by the leader of the local ringers, who conducted them to the belfry, where some change-ringing took place. At 12.30 they adjourned to the corner coffee house, where the proprietor, Mr. Hoskins, had a capital luncheon provided for them, to which they did ample justice. A stroll through the town followed, and then a return to the belfry, where the Blandford ringers very kindly met them, and some ringing was indulged in by both companies, occupying about two hours. They returned to Wimborne about 5 o'clock, and after partaking of tea at Mrs. Cast's, the Square, they proceeded to the Minster tower and were met there by the Minster ringers. The bells were set going and continued at intervals by the two companies till about 8.30. They soon after made their way to the station, leaving there just before 10 o'clock and arriving home at 11, having spent a long and very enjoyable day. The kind reception met with and courtesy shown by the leader and ringers of both towers they visited added greatly to the enjoyment of the outing. The ringing throughout the day was very appropriate at both places, preparation being made at Blandford for a Harvest Festival Service in the evening, and at Wimborne there was an Annual Meeting of the C.E.T.S., with service in the Minster at 5.30, Archdeacon Sowter being the preacher.

JASPER W. SNOWDON'S WORKS.

ROPESIGHT : 1s. 6d. OUT OF PRINT. A FOURTH EDITION NOW IN PREPARATION.

STANDARD METHODS : 2s. 6d. SECOND EDITION. Contains full explanations and rules for ringing all the best methods, from five to eight bells, with plain-course diagrams of each printed in full, with coloured lines. (40 pages of diagrams and 87 of descriptive letterpress).

GRANDSIRE ; 2s. 0d. THE METHOD, ITS PEALS, AND HISTORY. WITH PORTRAIT AND MEMOIR. EDITED BY HIS BROTHER, WM. SNOWDON. COMPLETE WITH AN APPENDIX BY THE REV. CHARLES D. P. DAVIES, M.A., OXON. Commences with ringing on five, six, and seven bells, for the benefit of a learner; gives instructions on composing, proving, varying, and reversing, conducting and calling round; and ends with a general survey of the practical and scientific aspect of the composition of triples—thus forming a complete reference book for all Grandsire ringers. (210 pages).

TREBLE BOB. 3s. 2½d. PARTS I. AND II. COMPLETE. Part I. contains instructions for pricking, transposing, proving, composing, and conducting peals; an essay on the In and Out-of-course of the changes; and a history of the various compositions and performances. Part II. contains classified peals of Minor, Major, Royal, and Maximus, with their reverse variations; remarks on the different qualities; particulars of first performances, composers' names, &c., &c. (236 closely printed pages). Part II. (136 closely printed pages) may be had separately, 2s. 13d.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

RE-ISSUE OF

STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA.

Of this curious work, by the immortal FABIAN STEDMAN, but one copy is supposed to be in existence. This copy is the property of the Rev. W. C. LUKIS, Vicar of Wath, Yorkshire, who has kindly entrusted it into the hands of the Editor of this journal for re-publication.

It is proposed to issue the work complete, handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, for One Shilling and Sixpence per copy, post-free; and as only one edition will be printed, orders for copies should at once be sent to the printers, care of Editor of this paper.

As many admirers of the distinguished author have ardently desired to possess a copy of his book, the printers hope that this republication may be taken up by the Exercise generally, and that those gentlemen who can will order more than one copy. Where it may not be convenient to send the amount with order, the order may be sent on notwithstanding, and the amount follow at the earliest opportunity. Postal Orders are the most convenient.

All Orders will be announced in this paper.

"THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD" will be forwarded post free, on the following terms:—

One copy, 12 months	8s.
" 6 "	4s.
" 3 "	2s.

All Subscriptions and Orders for papers must be sent direct to the Publisher E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, London.

Everything for insertion in this Journal to be addressed "The Editor of THE BELL NEWS, Walthamstow, London." Letters forwarded for publication, and performances under 5000 changes must reach us not later than Wednesday morning; and the insertion of any communication arriving later than the first Postal delivery on Thursday morning cannot be guaranteed in that week's number. When it is found impossible from want of space to insert all touches forwarded, the earlier ones will have the preference.

All communications respecting advertisements must be addressed to the office of "THE BELL NEWS," Walthamstow, London.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1890.

At the risk of being considered tiresome, we again call attention to the condition of the fund for erecting a suitable memorial to the late MR. HENRY JOHNSON, of Birmingham. A notice in another column informs all those whom it should concern, that the fund closes at the end of the present month. That period will arrive on Tuesday next, so that any members of the Exercise intending to help in this worthy undertaking who have not yet done so, must not longer delay. We are of opinion that the amount subscribed falls very short indeed of the expectations of many people; and especially must such an opinion be strong among those who knew the worth of the departed gentleman. At the same time we are among the last to attribute the smallness of the amount to any disinclination or objection to subscribe to such an object; rather would we believe that it is the effect of that wretched apathy which unfortunately is the bane of ringers generally, to any movement outside their own immediate sphere. This unconcern—this indifference—tells very heavily against us; and the one great disappointment of the hour is that the social upheaval which has taken place in our ranks during the past few years has caused very little improvement in such a direction.

In other pursuits which have recreation for their chief object we do not see such indifference displayed; pursuits not requiring one fraction of the intelligence and thought which change-ringing demands. Clearly here is a problem for solution equal to those which our greatest mathematicians are so fond of attacking.

BELL-RINGING CONTEST AT FRIEZLAND.

Judging from the interest which was taken in the bell-ringing contest at Friezland, on Saturday afternoon, campanology has lost none of its hold on the people of Saddleworth, where the manipulation of bells has long since gained for it a reputation which it is pleasing to note is still fully maintained. The contest was under the auspices of the United Counties' Association, and the changes were rung upon the six bells in the tower of Christ Church, Friezland. Six companies of ringers had entered, and all of them competed. Each company rang one peal of Minor—that is, 720 changes—in the following order:—Chapel-en-le-Frith, Saddleworth United, Hyde, Saddleworth, Hayfield, and Mossley. The day was very fine and warm, and, as a consequence, a good number of old and tried ringers from various outside places were in the neighbourhood of the church, and augmented those already assembled from within the district, so that during the whole of the afternoon the usually quiet valley presented an animated appearance. Great interest was manifested in the proceedings throughout, and in the evening, and shortly after the contest was concluded, the judges—Messrs. Joseph Pickering (Kirkburton) and Allen Womersley (Almondbury)—gave out their decision at the Farrars Arms to a large crowd who had assembled on the road in front. The results, which were received with loud cheers, were as follows: 1st, Saddleworth, number of faults, 262; 2nd, Saddleworth United, number of faults, 353; 3rd, Mossley, number of faults, 534; 4th, Hyde, number of faults, 560; 5th, Chapel-en-le-Frith, number of faults, 794; 6th, Hayfield, 301, rung out. Directly after the decision had been given a move was made to the clubroom over the public house, which was soon filled, the object being to distribute the prizes.—Mr. John Holden (president of the association) took the chair, and at once called upon Mr. Pickering, one of the judges, to distribute the prizes.—Before he did so, Mr. Pickering said he took that situation with pleasure, and he thought they would feel satisfied with what had been done that day, unless they were very selfish. He and his friend Mr. Womersley had done their best to give satisfaction, and they were very pleased to know that they had done so. (Hear, hear.) He would now give out the prizes to those who had been successful.—The first prize (Saddleworth) consisted of the association's silver cup and six travelling bags, value 16s. each. The ringers (in order) were John Holden (conductor), Jos. Radcliffe, E. Buckley, J. Radcliffe, J. H. Shaw, and E. Wood. The second prize (Saddleworth United) consisted of six cruet stands, value 8s. 6d. each, and the ringers were—John J. Brierley, Franklin Brierley (conductor), Joseph L. Buckley, Joseph Wood, Chas. Jubb, and John Buckley. The third prize (Mossley) comprised six inkstands, value 6s. 6d. each, the ringers being Ralph Taylor, John Greaves, Samuel H. Cooper, Arthur W. Holden, Samuel Wrigley, and Thomas B. Dicken (conductor). The fourth prize (Hyde) was six silk handkerchiefs, value 3s. each. The ringers forming this company were James Shaw, Henry Rostron, Thomas Bradley, Samuel Bradley, Thos. Wilde, and Jas. S. Wilde (conductor).—After the prizes had been distributed appropriate toasts were given by Mr. Pickering and the Chairman, which were duly acknowledged. On the motion of the Chairman a vote of thanks was given the judges for their services, which was heartily carried and duly acknowledged. The Chairman was appointed a delegate to the National Counties' Association of Change Ringers.—Mr. John Sidebottom (secretary) moved that the best thanks of the association be given to the Friezland ringers for the manner in which the contest had been conducted throughout, and for the handsome prizes they had given that day.—Mr. Frank Brierley seconded, and on being put was heartily carried. Mr. J. F. Dicken replied, and said the Friezland ringers had done their best to get the money in to buy the prizes, which had been subscribed for by the parishioners and friends, and the next time they had a contest there he should like to give something better again. (Applause.)—The Chairman said he was very pleased to see amongst them some of their Leesfield friends, and he wished to announce that the annual general meeting and dinner would take place at Leesfield, where they, no doubt, would be made as comfortable as possible. In conclusion, he hoped everyone would strive to promote what they had in view, namely, the success of change-ringing.—Local Paper.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

STOKE-NEXT-GUILDFORD.

SIR,—Seeing in your much valued journal of August 30th the account of a letter published in The Surrey Advertiser regarding the bells of Stoke-next-Guildford, I beg to forward the following particulars, thinking they might be of interest to the readers of "THE BELL NEWS." A letter also appeared in the West Surrey Times of September 13th. A meeting was held in the Stoke Schools, on Monday evening, September 15th. The rector, the Rev. F. Paynton, presided, and amongst those present were Lieut.-General Hankin, and Mr. W. Swayne (churchwardens), Revs. J. C. Montgomery, C. A. C. Langdon and W. T. Stoer; E. Bonner, J. J. Jones and St. Nicholas ringers, &c. The rector said they had met to consider the desirability of having a fresh peal of bells in their church, some few years back a similar movement had been started but had fallen through. There was the question of expense to be considered; especially as in a very short time they would have to make a considerable outlay in connection with the roof of the church, which was now in a very bad condition. But he thought they might get the bells before that work was commenced. He would call upon Mr. Bonner to place the question before the meeting. Mr. Bonner, after a very humorous reference to the present bells, suggested that a committee be appointed to collect funds and the selection of the bells. He had spoken to Mr. Budgett, one of the largest landholders in the parish and he would be very willing to help, providing they would have a light peal, on account of his close proximity to the church, and had mentioned that the tubular bells were becoming very popular, they being light, of mellow tone, and could be rung by one man, and could be supplied at a cost of £250. He would move that a committee be appointed to consider what had better be done to place a peal of bells worthy of the important and populous parish of Stoke. Mr. Swayne, in seconding the motion expressed his preference for a peal of the old fashioned bells; Lieut.-General Hankin thought the committee right to have an architect's opinion of the strength of the tower, and if tubular bells were adapted he should very much like to hear some in another place, before they were finally adopted. The committee were elected with power to add to their number—Lieut.-General Hankin, Mr. W. Swayne, Mr. J. S. Budgett, Rev. C. Langdon, Messrs. R. T. Billing, J. Jones, W. Bowyer and E. Bonner, Hon. Secs. The meeting was adjourned for a fortnight when the committee will present their report. Mr. F. J. W. Rees has since given his consent to join the committee, and Mr. Moon, architect has inspected the tower and pronounced it quite sound and capable of carrying a peal of bells.

THE HORNSEY GUILD.

On Saturday, September 20th, the members of this Guild had their first outing, the place selected being Brighton. The roll was called at 8 o'clock at London Bridge, and after a short delay the band started in a special carriage provided for them by the Brighton and South Coast Railway. During the journey they were enlivened by several of the celebrated songsters of this Guild, and in due course Brighton was reached at 10 o'clock. After refreshments had been partaken of a start was made for St. Peter's church, where, by the kindness of Mr. Attree, arrangements were made to ring. After several touches of Grandsire Triples had been rung and the splendid go of the bells and the beauty of the peal tablets duly praised, the party were conducted to Booth's restaurant, where dinner had been provided. After the several courses had been duly disposed of a start was made for St. Nicholas' church, and on arrival they were welcomed by Mr. Boniface, the Secretary of the St. Nicholas' Society. He then informed them that one of their brother-strings had just been married, so they at once proceeded to ring several touches of Grandsire, in which the captain and one or two members of the St. Nicholas' Society took part. The company then made their way to the beach, where amusements became the order of the day. The sea being so rough no bathing or boating could be indulged in, so enjoyment had to be found upon the beach, and if the happy laughter and pleasant jokes of the party were any criterion this was not one of the least enjoyments of the day. The evening coming on apace a start was made for the "Unicorn" hotel, the meeting house of the St. Nicholas' Society, which is kept by a brother-string, and the rest of the evening was spent in social intercourse. 8.40 having arrived the party at once made a start for home, and having been conducted by the guard to their special carriage they settled down to harmony, in which all took part most heartily, and London Bridge was reached before the party was aware of it. The company then separated, highly pleased with their first excursion. They wish, through the columns of this paper, to return their sincere thanks to the Vicar and churchwardens of St. Peter's and St. Nicholas' churches for the use of the bells, and also to Mr. Attree for his kindness in making arrangements for the party. The following took part in the touches of Grandsire during the day: E. King, W. Dixon, W. Short, J. Barber, T. Titchener, J. Ward, G. Griffin, and J. Hannington.

ST. JAMES' SOCIETY, BRISTOL.

On Tuesday, September 16th, the members of the above society had their annual outing to Malvern. Arriving there at 11.10 a.m. the party took a long walk across the common to the town, visiting the fine old parish church and other places of interest. They then proceeded to Messrs. Elliott and Co., Church Street, where a capital dinner awaited them, and to which ample justice was done. After dinner the hills were visited, and a magnificent view of the surrounding country obtained, these hills being about 1400 feet in height. After tasting the water of St. Ann's well, tea was partaken of and the homeward journey begun, the party reaching Bristol about ten o'clock, highly pleased with their excursion.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN
TRIPLES.

XVIII.

THREE-PART TWIN-BOB COMPOSITION.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

In articles VI. to XVII., inclusive, the principles underlying twin-bob composition have been fully treated. To illustrate what has been advanced tables and peals in five parts were selected, except in article XV., where the three-part division was more convenient. Thus, while explaining principles applicable to peals in all practicable numbers of parts, five-part composition has been, in particular, amply dealt with. We may now, therefore, pass to three and six-part peals. It would seem advisable to complete the explanation of the general construction of compositions in the various numbers of parts, taking only such peals as are needed for examples of procedure, and postponing till afterwards the individual consideration of the leading peals of each type.

In entering on three-part composition it is first necessary to arrange Hudson's 60 P blocks in a three-part table of 20 lines. Since, at the time I formed my three-part table, no peal in three or six parts was in existence, there was nothing to influence me to select any particular part-ends. I decided to adopt, as the most suitable, 231456, 312645, and 123564. It is imperative that all six bells should be moved at each part-end, for otherwise three of them must lie still, a treatment to which the 60 P blocks will not lend themselves. Failing any fixed bells, the above part-ends will probably be preferred on account of the familiarity of the terminations 456, 645, and 564, and the selection has Mr. Bulwer's approval.

It was shewn, in reference to the five-part table, that no other part-ends than those given were there possible. In the present case it would appear that, although differing sets of part-ends are available, the result of employing them would be alike in each case, that is to say, no composition could be produced from one set a transposition of which could not be found from every other set. Positive proof of this theory is not easy, but Mr. Bulwer agrees with me in believing it to be correct. The bearing of the question upon three-part peals generally is this: If any table, other than the one deducible from the above part-ends, is merely a transposition thereof, then the said table is competent to serve for the proof or composition of any peal in three or six parts.

TABLE L.

We now require a table of "q" sets applicable to the above arrangement of the 60 P blocks. The set figured in table G, article XI., will not apply, as the numbers refer to the lines in table F only. The actual course-ends of these sets, however, as obtained by table E, article IX., will serve again, for they are defined rows altogether independent of the order in which, as course-ends, they may be placed in a table. But as the number of rows in a column of a three-part table is greater than in that of a five-part, there are more "q" sets to be found. When these have been obtained by means of table E, they must be sought out in table L and the corresponding figures set down in the way described in article XI. The complete result is here presented.

In this composition every S is plained and every L is bobbed. It is further assumed that, with the exceptions noted in the above "q" sets, every H is plained and every Q bobbed. The S column is merely inserted in order to present a complete example; it is otherwise unnecessary since no S is bobbed. These two main blocks are singled together by the rules given in articles XVI., XVII., precisely as in the case of a five-part peal. The location of the singles may likewise be varied, but S2 after the first course-end of the larger block will introduce the smaller in a convenient manner. The shunt is to L13 of this latter block, which is then rung backwards till Q11 in the same course is passed. S14 called here shunts the course back to the second six of the second course of the larger block. The peal is given below in its ringable form as a three-part composition. To ring it as a six-part composition it is simply necessary, after the first single, to call the odd block three times instead of once, omitting singles until the end of the last repetition, when S14 brings up, as before, the second course of the even block, which latter, called three times, not forgetting the first course, completes the peal.

The whole twice repeated.

It is needless to occupy space by any further explanations in regard to the formation of three-part peals, since, although an entirely new departure in the method, composition on these lines follows in every detail that in five parts. It is, however, worthy of mention that the smaller block can only consist of one course, twice repeated, when bobbed at S H L, thus introducing three six-bob sets. The only other calling that gives a three-part course-end is H Q, which, unfortunately, will not comply with "q" set requirements, and is therefore productive of false-ness. In five-part composition, on the other hand, we have four one-course (four times repeated) blocks to select from, viz., S H, H L, S H Q, and H L Q. Owing, doubtless, to there being 20 courses to be dealt with in a six-part peal, as against 12 in a five-part, the former sub-division does not appear so popular with composers and conductors as the latter. The impossibility also of getting the 6th at home at the part-ends is considered an objectionable feature. Nevertheless this branch of the method, although as yet comparatively little explored, will certainly in the future be made to yield a variety of interesting peals.

AMERICAN EXTRAVAGANCE.—A dress made for an American bride has outrivalled all the wedding-gowns for costliness, and for the beauty of the rare Alencon lace with which it was trimmed. For a fortnight curiosity-shops and collections of rare laces were ransacked to find enough Alencon for its adornment. The cream-white satin was specially ordered from Lyons. The train, three yards long, was covered with two lengths of lace. This vision of bridal white wrought in lace and satin and long trails of orange-blossoms was insured for nearly 20,000 francs (£8000), just half its value, and a duty of 7500 francs (£300) was paid at the New York Custom-house.—Paris Fashions in "The Woman's World," for August.

THREE DAYS' RINGING IN HAMPSHIRE.

ON Saturday, September 20th, Messrs. Williams, Weston, and Fuller, left the Brighton Terminus by the 1.20 p.m. train to Havant. Arriving there at 3 p.m. we were met by Mr. Staples (Havant), and H. White (Basingstoke), with whom we walked four miles to Cosham to catch the 4.35 train to Fareham, which place was duly reached at 5 p.m. Here a peal of Treble Bob Major was on the programme to celebrate the birthday of Mr. J. W. Whiting, an enthusiastic member of the Fareham band, and who kindly invited us to tea before starting for the peal. All turned up at the parish church of SS. Peter and Paul at 6 p.m., "go" being called at 6.15, and at 9.10 the first peal of Treble Bob Major rung by the Winchester Guild in Hampshire was accomplished. The striking was good throughout, four of the band scoring their first peal of Major; and the first peal of Major on the bells. Formerly this church contained a peal of six bells, Joshua Kipling, of Portsmouth, being the founder, five of which were cast in 1742, and the tenor, which bears the following inscription, was cast in 1745:—

"In vain the rebels strive to gain renown
Over our Church, the Laws, the King and Crown;
In vain the bold ingrateful rebels aim
To overthrow when you support the same;
Then may Great George our King live for to see
The rebellious crew hang on the gallows tree."

The trebles were added in 1883 by Messrs. Warner and Sons, of London. After the peal the band were again entertained by Mr. Whiting, and a pleasant hour spent together before retiring to our respective quarters for the night.

Sunday morning at 7 o'clock we were at Mr. Whiting's residence, where we were invited to breakfast, after which we rung a course of Grandsire Triples on his fine-toned peal of handbells, tenor size 22 in C. At 8 o'clock a start was made for an eight mile walk to Swanmore, which place was reached in time for a 360 of Bob Minor before morning service. Then another walk of 2½ miles brought us to Soberton, which was to be headquarters for the next two nights at the hostelry of Mr. Holmes, who is always ready to welcome ringers. On our arrival we were met by the Rev. W. H. Morley, curate-in-charge, who soon explained the history of the church tower, bells, etc. The bells are a very musical ring of eight, tenor 14 cwt. in G, some dating back from the fifteenth century, two of them bearing the following curious inscription; "Pray ye for the souls of John Newport and Elizabeth the wife of him." These are supposed to be a butler and dairy-maid by whom the tower was built. The butler, with his key of trust, and the dairy-maid with her pail are both represented on the western front of the tower. When the church was restored in 1880, over £100 was contributed by servants for the restoration of the tower alone. On a tablet outside the tower is the inscription—"This tower, built by servants, was restored by servants, A.D., 1880." Some Grandsire Doubles with 7-6-8 behind were rung for evening service with the local band. Monday was to be a busy day—a walk to Swanmore to attempt a 5040 on the light peal of six at the parish church of St. Barnabas, meeting-time, 8 a.m., sharp. "Go" was called a few minutes later, and after ringing 2 hrs. and 7 mins., to our dismay, the rope of the treble came into the ringing-room: therefore the peal was lost after ringing 4200 changes. A. A. Fuller, 1; J. Osman, 2; J. E. Warren, 3; G. Williams (conductor), 4; H. Weston, 5; W. Linter, 6. Tenor 7 cwt. 16 lbs.

On leaving the tower we were invited to take lunch with Mr. Warren (which of course we did) before returning to Soberton, where two peals were to be attempted. But as we did not want any more broken ropes, an hour was spent in seeing to that part of the business before other members arrived. This brought dinner time, and also the Rev. F. E. Robinson, and Messrs. Whiting and White, having had a seven mile drive from Botley. Messrs. Grafham and Warren arrived a few minutes later on their bicycles. After dinner (which was served up in host Holmes' satisfactory manner), a start was at once made for a peal of Kent Treble Bob Major, 5088 changes, which was successfully brought round after 2 hrs. 50 mins. good ringing, being the first peal of Major on the bells. This brought tea time, after which the bells were again on the swing, and in 2 hrs. 47½ mins. from the call of "go," the first peal of Stedman Triples on the bells was accomplished. On leaving the tower we were heartily congratulated by the Rev. W. H. Morley and others on the excellent striking.

Tuesday morning, 8 a.m., we were starting by waggonette to Privett, and after about two hours drive through the most pleasant part of the Meon Valley, the church of the Holy Trinity was reached, one of the finest modern churches in the county, and possessing a very grand peal of eight, by Mears and Stainbank, tenor 12½ cwt. in F. These bells were opened by the Ancient Society of College Youths in 1878, when the late Mr. H. W. Haley in answer to a question, said it was the finest peal he ever heard at the weight. Here we were reinforced by Mr. Staples (Havant), who kindly filled the place of Mr. Grahame. At 10.15 all was in readiness, Stedman Triples being the method chosen. All went well for an hour and a quarter, when a slight trip occurred, ending in a change-course, which was detected a few sixes later, when the bells were immediately stopped. All thoughts of scoring two peals after this were given up, so several courses of Double Norwich were rung (in which Messrs. Staples, Warren, White, and Whiting, figured for their first time) till dinner time, after which a start was again made for the same peal, and which was rung in 2 hrs. 42 mins., the first peal in the method on the bells, all four peals being recorded in their proper place last week. The band then broke up—Messrs. White and Whiting going to Ropley, and the Rev. F. E. Robinson to Westmeon, the remainder driving to Petersfield to catch the train for Havant en route for Brighton. The thanks of the band are due to Mr. G. Williams, who made all arrangements, which gave the greatest satisfaction and worked admirably. Also to the clergy of the respective churches for placing the bells at the disposal of the band, and to the steeplekeepers of Fareham, Swanmore, and Privett for having everything in readiness.

NOTES ON BELLS AND BELFRIES.

The church of St. Andrew, Wytham-on-the-Hill, near Bourne, Lincolnshire, has a very fine six-bell peal. The fourth bell, owing to a small crack, has lately, as a jubilee memorial, been recast. These bells have an history. Five of them are recasts of five bells which hung formerly in Peterborough Cathedral. General Johnson gave an additional bell which forms the treble of the peal. On this bell the following curious inscription appears:—

'Twas not to foster pride and hatred
William Augustus Johnson gave me,
But truth and grace to celebrate.
Those laws do keep, and e'er remember
On May 29th you must not ring,
Nor on the 5th of each November,
Nor on the crowning of a king.

[I having been renewed in the year of the Jubilee of the good Queen Victoria; O, only Jesu, sound sweetly in this church the glories of Thy reign in joyous peal, and announce the hours of work.]

The tower of Little Bowden Church is of wood, and contains three very unmusical bells. Hence the distich:—

Little Bowden—poor people—
Leather bells and wooden steeple.

One never hears anything nowadays of the crookedness of Grantham steeple, which furnished an illustration for a seventeenth century rhymester, who wrote:—

No Churchman can be innocent and high
'Tis height makes Grantham steeple look awry.

Surfleet and Spalding Churches are commemorated in the following quaint lines:—

Gosberton Church is very high,
Surfleet Church is all awry;
Pinchbeck Church is in a hole,
And Spalding Church is big with foal.

South Lincolnshire is pre-eminently the district of fine bell-towers; the spires of Louth and Grantham called the two queens, and that of Sleaford is the earliest and least admirable. The tower is low, and the spire, of the broach form, is stunted.

The whole steeple is of transitional date, passing into Early English, and is of much value from the rarity of these early spires. In 1554 Sir John Marriott, vicar of St. Alkmund's, Derby, hanged himself in the belfry of that church by means of a bell-rope. "We are not told from what cause," says Hutton, "but if Sir John was condemned to starve upon a benefice of eight pounds a year, no wonder he sought a reprieve in the belfry." In his "Curiosities of the Belfry," Mr. Briscoe records a death as having occurred in a belfry. He tells us that "in the chancel at Springthorpe are suspended a maiden's funeral wreath and gloves cut out of white paper, such as are yet not uncommonly displayed in some parts of England, but very rarely in Lincolnshire. It is reported that the girl thus commemorated here was killed through the unwary manner in which she pulled one of the bell ropes, when she was dashed against the belfry floor above."

THE NORTH LINCOLNSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

The autumn quarterly meeting was held at Grimsby, on Saturday last, the 27th ult. During the afternoon the members rang touches of Grandsire at the parish church of St. James, and also on the splendid peal at St. Andrew's. At about 5.30 p.m. upwards of twenty sat down to a good tea provided at the "Bull Ring" coffee hall, presided over by the Rev. Canon J. P. Young, vicar of Grimsby, C. F. Allison, Esq., churchwarden and conductor of St. Andrew's, occupying the vice-chair. This being over, the chairman, Rev. Canon Young (vice-president of the Grimsby centre), opened the business meeting, by stating that he much regretted that so very few visitors were present, but this was accountable for by the fact, that, as the excursions had ceased running, there were no late return trains. He congratulated the local ringers upon their turning up in such good numbers, which undoubtedly had made the meeting a success; he then called upon the secretary to read the minutes of the last meeting which were confirmed. Several letters, the chairman announced, had been received from honorary members, regretting their inability to attend. Rev. J. Bell, North Somercoates Vicarage, was unanimously elected an honorary member. One efficient and five probationary members were also elected. Two probationers who had qualified were accepted efficient on the recommendation of Mr. Allison. It was decided to hold the next meeting of the association on December 26th, at Gainsborough. After the usual votes of thanks the meeting terminated. Ringing was again resumed at St. James' church for the remaining part of the evening.

A NOVELTY IN CHURCH RESTORATION.

The restoration of the parish church of Marsworth, a village near Tring, has been accomplished under extraordinary circumstances. The Rev. F. W. Ragg was appointed to the vicarage in 1880, when, notwithstanding some partial works which had been executed, he found the substantial parts of the church—the windows, walls, buttresses, roof, and tower itself—in a very unsound state. About £200 was subscribed towards the restoration, but although this was altogether inadequate, Mr. Ragg, with a practical devotion worthy of the middle ages, set to work as an ordinary mason, and, with the aid of one worker in stone and a few farm labourers who voluntarily assisted, accomplished all that could under the circumstances be done. With this help alone he restored the windows, took down the dangerous buttresses and rebuilt them, made good the south wall, and, with the aid of a carpenter, raised the roof of the nave. He then had no funds left wherewith to pay the mason and carpenter, but he kept on with the work, completing buttresses and walls, building a parapet, refacing the tower, cutting and erecting a chancel arch, &c. Then an attack of rheumatic fever, due to exposure when working, disabled the dauntless clergyman, but on his recovery he put in several windows, and completed other work. It is now proposed as a memorial of Mr. Ragg's singular and effective work in the church for which he has so long and lovingly laboured, to fill in at least the east window with stained glass, and it is believed that many Trinity men, past and present members of the college, when they know what Mr. Ragg has done, will be glad to assist in erecting such a memorial to his ability and perseverance.

THE NORWICH DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

The Annual General Meeting was held at Norwich on Tuesday, September 23rd. About 160 members and friends of the Association were present, the towers of eight of the city churches being, by the kind permission of the incumbents, open for ringing during the day. The magnificent twelve of St. Peter Mancroft, proved as usual, the great source of attraction, being kept going with little intermission throughout the time allotted to ringing. Service was held in this church at 12.45, which was fairly well attended by the ringers, who had the privilege of listening to a most admirable sermon delivered by the Rev. Canon Wigram, which we hope to see printed at length in some future number of "THE BELL NEWS."

At 1.30 an excellent cold collation was admirably served in Blackfriars Hall by Mr. L. Brown, of the Shire Hall Tavern, after which the usual toasts were given and acknowledged with commendable brevity, in order to allow an important business meeting to succeed. At this the Hon. Secretary read the Report for the two years since 1888, by which it appeared that since the commencement of the present year 142 new members had been enrolled, these with fifty-eight elected at this meeting made a total of 200 for the year, besides which several old members who had temporarily fallen out had rejoined. The actual numbers on the register without counting the fifty-eight new members elected that day, were eighty-two Honorary, 374 Performing, and eighteen Probationers, making a total of 474. The finances were also in a satisfactory condition, for notwithstanding unusually heavy expenses in connection with the reorganization of the society, and the payment of last year's debts to the amount of nearly £20, a balance was left in hand of £27, which would, however, be reduced by the heavy expenses of that Annual Meeting. The revised code of rules was then submitted to the members and adopted with an amendment moved by Mr. A. Hubbard, of London, by which the intention of not making the new rule with respect to the granting of certificates retrospective was clearly defined.

The election of four representatives on the Central Council followed, when as a result of the nominations previously made in writing, the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer, Hon. Sec., Captain A. P. Moore, District Secretary, Mr. Fred. Knights, senior Master of St. Peter's company, Norwich, and Mr. W. L. Catchpole, of Ipswich, District Secretary, were elected by show of hands.

The officers having been re-elected, seven Hon. Members were appointed on the Committee, as follows: the Rev. C. F. Blyth, Rev. H. J. Coleman, Rev. J. F. Hastings, Rev. T. H. Marsh, Rev. W. W. Hutt, Captain Moore, and Mr. J. W. Spratt. With the election of the new members, the proceedings terminated, and the members dispersed to the various towers to re-commence ringing which was kept up till nightfall, thus bringing to a conclusion a highly successful, enjoyable and encouraging meeting.

N.B.—The Hon. Secretary desires to assure any members who may have been disappointed at not getting as much ringing as they wished, that the result is entirely owing to the neglect of companies in not procuring beforehand, steeple cards, which were ready, and would have secured their turn, without trouble or confusion, if they had in all cases been applied for, as desired in the circular convening the meeting. It is hoped that this regulation will be more strictly attended to on another occasion.

THE BEDFORDSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

A Quarterly Meeting was held at Leighton Buzzard, on Saturday last, September 27th, permission to ring on the fine peal of bells at the parish church having been kindly granted by the Vicar (Rev. T. W. Richards) and the churchwardens. By the courtesy of the Rev. C. E. Dandridge, Vicar of Linslade, the Association also had the use of the six bells of that church. The meeting was well attended, members being present from Bedford (St. Paul's and St. Mary's), Sharnbrook, Biddenham, Clapham, Aspley Guise, Woburn, and Milton Bryant.

The Woburn and Aspley Guise contingent were the first to arrive, and they commenced proceedings at Linslade with an attempt for 720 Bob Minor, which unfortunately came to grief, through the tenor slipping wheel. The other members had by this time arrived, and 720 Kent Treble Bob Minor was rung by a company from Bedford, conducted by C. W. Clarke.

A move was now made to Leighton Buzzard, and the ring of eight was raised in peal, Mr. J. Frossell exciting local admiration by raising the tenor single-handed, as she is generally supposed to tax the energies of two men. A touch of 504 Grandsire Triples was rung, conducted by C. W. Clarke, at the close of which the Rev. E. W. Langmore, senior curate, spoke a few words of welcome to the Association, expressing the pleasure he had enjoyed in listening to the touch, and a hope that the All Saints' company might become members of the Association.

The Rev. W. W. C. Baker, Hon. Sec., in reply, said the Association were very grateful for the kind welcome they had received, being allowed to ring, and warmly reciprocated Mr. Langmore's desire to see the local company members of the Association. He explained the assistance which the Association was prepared to give in teaching learners, and instanced the Sharnbrook company as a proof of its efficacy, they having rung a peal in seven Minor methods after barely four month's instruction by Mr. C. W. Clarke.

Most of the members now adjourned for tea to the Fountain Coffee House, kept by Mr. Langston, a former member of the Woburn company, and the evening was spent in ringing touches of Bob Major and Grandsire Triples. Before the close of the meeting several of the Leighton ringers were elected members of the Association, and arrangements for a course of instruction are being made. The members separated with numerous expressions of pleasure at the success of the gathering, and of admiration for the fine bells on which they had been practising. They are a very musical ring from the Whitechapel Foundry. Unfortunately several go heavily, and it would be impossible to attempt a peal upon them in their present condition.

It was decided to hold the next quarterly meeting at Sharnbrook on the first Saturday in the New Year, should permission be obtained.

THE FIRST PEAL OF STEDMAN IN GLOUCESTER.

Since peals of Stedman have been rung, attempts have been made both by the Society of Crypt Youths and by the Painswick Youths to ring a peal of Stedman in this city, and several times the peal was nearly accomplished. During the last twenty years the matter has been allowed to rest until September 1889, when a band of St. Michael's Juniors made their first attempt on Michaelmas-day, which came to grief in the 14th course of Brook's Variation. A second attempt came to grief just after the half-way single, and another attempt came to grief a week later. Cambridge Term interfered now, and no more attempts were arranged until Christmas, when a company arranged to meet at 6 a.m. on Christmas morning, but meeting short nothing was done. On January 2nd, 1890, the peal was again attempted, but the three back bells were going very heavily, and could not be rung. Several more attempts at Easter were given up owing to the bad go of the bells, and the company had to wait until July, when the peal was started for every successive Thursday, and lost regularly through the go of the bells, although they had two men for the tenor, one attempt being given up at the half-way single. A band was made up again to attempt it on Thursday, September 25th, two tenor men being provided, one of them was however unwell and could not come. Under these circumstances Mr. W. J. Sevier volunteered to attempt the tenor single-handed, and Mr. Bewick was placed at the treble. Thus stationed the peal was finally rung, and all concerned wish to tender their best thanks to Mr. Sevier for giving up his place inside and ringing the tenor, which is going very badly behind the peal.

LEEDS AND DISTRICT AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The usual monthly ringing meeting of the above Society took place at St. Matthew's church, Holbeck, on Saturday, September 27th. Upwards of forty members attended from Leeds, Headingley, Armley, Burley, Bramley, Pudsey, Drighlington, Rothwell, and Holbeck, and some good touches were rung in Kent Treble Bob and Plain Bob Major, and Oxford Treble Bob, New London Pleasure, and Violet Minor. Courses of Grandsire Caters and Triples were also rung on the handbells at the meeting house. A cordial vote of thanks to the Vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells, and to the Holbeck company for the excellent arrangements for the comfort of the visitors brought to a close a very successful meeting.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

I am once more obligated to our "mutual friend" Joshua for so kindly filling up the gap caused by pressure of other business, but he is altogether wide of the mark in his conjectures as to the nature of that business. I certainly was not enjoying my honeymoon—that is an event which now exists only in our family history; neither was I negotiating for an "opening," for the fact is that I have such in profusion—considerably too many, indeed. Unfortunately, somehow, the demands upon my only too limited spare time are gradually increasing; so much so, that I am beginning to seriously contemplate retirement from the scene as notographer-in-general to "THE BELL NEWS." Should this come to pass, it will be with less reluctance on my part, seeing that I can look for such a versatile successor in friend Joshua. But, as my—shall I call him duplicate?—humorously puts it, tempus will continue to fugit, and as the venerable old father is proverbially a discloser of events, we will leave this point where it is for the present, and wait to see what he brings forth.

* * * * *

There is one portion of friend Joshua's Intermediate Notes which, in spite of his irrepressible humour, strikes me as deserving serious consideration. It introduces a point which I have many times thought about, and which is comprised in his invitation to brother-strings to forward contributions for his next chapter. Communications which I have had the pleasure of receiving from time to time convince me that we have amongst us many who are not only well versed in matters which deeply interest us, but who are at the same time capable of putting their ideas into readable shape. As I have remarked beforetime, there is all to gain and nothing to lose by a free interchange of opinions; besides that, ideas occur to individuals, and circumstances arise, which oftentimes might be productive of good, if the same were ventilated through the pages of "THE BELL NEWS" in the way suggested by friend Joshua. So now brother-strings, don't be backward in coming forward, but if you have ideas, suggestions, or facts, which may possibly be of service to the Exercise, if only by way of introducing points of interest to us, take Joshua's "tip" (excuse the vulgarity) and bring it forth in the manner indicated.

* * * * *

Another good ringer gone w—oh, I beg pardon, I ought to say, right; At any rate, if an old saw is to be credited, one more has arrived at the end of his troubles. I have a vivid recollection of a similar event some years ago, in which I myself played an essential part, and thus can speak from personal experience—like a lot more of us, in fact. Nevertheless, I very heartily wish Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Baker a long enjoyment of the happiness of married life; may the sweet sound of the bells which came from the tower on the 18th instant be a happy augury of the future of those who had been "newly-wed," and just commenced to walk life's journey together.

* * * * *

It is reported of a certain young lady who, when asked the question "What is woman's great object in life?" replied, "to get married." I won't attempt to estimate how far that reply was correct; nor, indeed, if it was even correct at all—which latter will, I imagine, be contended by those of the fair sex who are not so candid as the one in question. But whether it be so or not, I am very happy to find five young ladies who have some other object in life, who have bravely dared to ignore conventionalities, and accomplished a feat hitherto regarded as the whole and sole right of the sterner sex—by ringing tower bells in peal. Even if only modest rounds and call-changes are all that they have attempted thus far, it is a beginning, and a good one too, that is made by these fair probationers of the Essex Association. The perseverance which they have shewn thus far is creditable both to themselves and their tutor, Mr. Pitstow; and taking this into account, I think we may fairly expect seeing them bloom into full ringing members of their county Association at no remote period. I can't address our lady ringing friends as "brother-strings," so very well; if their example becomes at all extensively followed, it will begin to be a case of "ladies and gentlemen," when addressing meetings of ringers; but at any rate I can, in the words of the Irishman's hearty greeting, wish them "More power to ye!"

* * * * *

With this week's number, October is once again here, and with that month we may be said to have once more commenced the active season of ringing. May I suggest, then, that we all should make a special effort—beginning with the month—1st to improve our ringing both in quantity and quality; 2nd, to increase and strengthen our county and diocesan organisations; 3rd, to infuse a higher and more correct estimation of our work as church bell ringers amongst our brethren of the craft; and 4th (not least, if last) to every one determine to have his own copy of "THE BELL NEWS" weekly. If we do this now, it will save us the trouble of making our annual good resolutions next New Year's Day. We shall instead have the satisfaction of feeling that we are doing better than merely forming these commendable resolves—that we are carrying them out, which will redound considerably more to our credit, and result in good to the Exercise.

FREE LANCE.

ST. PETER'S GUILD, WOLVERHAMPTON.

On Saturday, September 13th, the society held its first annual meeting at Wolverhampton. A fair number of members were present. Tea was provided by Mr. Smith in his usual good style. The business meeting followed. The rector, the Rev. Prebendary Jeffcock, took the chair. There were also present the Revs. Keeble and McCleverty; Mr. W. H. Godden, of St. Martin's Guild, Birmingham, and other friends. The following officers and committee were elected: President, Rev. J. T. Jeffcock; Vice-President, R. P. Walker, Esq.; Ringing Master, R. Cartwright; Deputy-Master, J. Pardoe; Secretary, C. F. Vickers; Committee: J. Marsh, Wolverhampton; H. Roden, Penn; W. Smith, Darlaston; B. Dalton, Tettenhall; E. Moreton, Codsall; B. Gough, Coseley; H. Deans, Wombourn; W. R. Small, Tip-ton. J. Lawson was unanimously elected a ringing member. A vote of thanks to the rector for presiding terminated the meeting. During the afternoon and evening several touches of Grandsire Triples were rung.

ASSINGTON, SUFFOLK.

The bells of St. Edmund's church have been thoroughly restored. The four old bells, the largest of which was cracked, have been recast, and with new metal added, a ring of six has been produced, and hung in the existing frame, which has been altered to receive two new bells. The tenor is about 11 cwt. in A flat. There was an Harvest Festival and dedication service for the bells held on the 30th inst. The ringers from Sudbury were present to open them. The work has been carried out by Messrs. John Warner and Sons.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

RE-ISSUE OF

STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA.

Of this curious work, by the immortal FABIAN STEDMAN, but one copy is supposed to be in existence. This copy is the property of the Rev. W. C. LUKIS, Vicar of Wath, Yorkshire, who has kindly entrusted it into the hands of the Editor of this journal for re-publication.

It is proposed to issue the work complete, handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, for One Shilling and Sixpence per copy, post-free; and as only one edition will be printed, orders for copies should at once be sent to the printers, care of Editor of this paper.

As many admirers of the distinguished author have ardently desired to possess a copy of his book, the printers hope that this republication may be taken up by the Exercise generally, and that those gentlemen who can will order more than one copy. Where it may not be convenient to send the amount with order, the order may be sent on notwithstanding, and the amount follow at the earliest opportunity. Postal Orders are the most convenient.

All Orders will be announced in this paper.

"THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD" will be forwarded post free, on the following terms:—

One copy, 12 months ..	8s.
" 6 " ..	4s.
" 3 " ..	2s.

All Subscriptions and Orders for papers must be sent direct to the Publisher E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, London.

Everything for insertion in this Journal to be addressed "The Editor of THE BELL NEWS, Walthamstow, London." Letters forwarded for publication, and performances under 5000 changes must reach us not later than Wednesday morning; and the insertion of any communication arriving later than the first Postal delivery on Thursday morning cannot be guaranteed in that week's number. When it is found impossible from want of space to insert all touches forwarded, the earlier ones will have the preference.

All communications respecting advertisements must be addressed to the office of "THE BELL NEWS," Walthamstow, London.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1890.

THERE are many of our readers whose knowledge of the late Rev. H. T. ELLACOMBE only comprises the bare fact of his being a great enthusiast in bell matters. They have never heard that he was skilled in mechanical arts, more so, perhaps, than many with whom mechanics is the business of life. One result of his labours in this direction was the manufacture of a model printing press, and a letter of his, conveying the information that he had been at work on the roof of the chancel of his church, is also within our recollection.

According to a report which will be found on another page, we find that the race of such men as the late revered Rector of Clyst S. George is not extinct. The Rev. F. W. RAGG, Vicar of a place called Marsworth, near Tring, has, with almost unexampled courage, laboured to restore his parish church with the aid of an ordinary stonemason and a few farm labourers. This worthy clergyman has repaired the walls, resuscitated the broken-down buttresses, refaced the tower, and restored the chancel. Perhaps we should have been better pleased had he, in addition to the above, erected a good ring of bells. This may follow, however. At any rate, the exertions of the worthy vicar deserves special recognition, and we are happy in recording our appreciation of his labours, which it is difficult to speak of too favourably.

The orders received for "STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA" are not so numerous as it was hoped they would be. Among the 50,000 ringers said to be in existence, it was not unreasonable to suppose that 1,000 copies would be required—and that number was considered in fixing the price of publication. It is requisite that the list be shortly closed, and then the number ordered, and those only, will be printed. There is no necessity for sending cash with order. We hope, before the month of October is out, to see that 1000 copies at least are to be struck off.

S14 at the end of the third part, and add S2 to the sixth part.

Or S9 at the end of the third part, and S11 at the end of the sixth part.

A shunt may be had and rounds produced at the end of the first part by calling Q instead of H in the seventh course, and for the second half call Q in the third course instead of H in the fourth course. This shunting will cause the peal to fall into six blocks of 840 changes each, without affecting its truth.

THE NORWICH DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.—DISTRICT MEETING AT LEISTON.

The second quarterly meeting of the Saxmundham district was held at Leiston on Saturday, September 20th, each tower in union, with one exception, being represented. The bells were kindly placed at the disposal of the ringers by the rector, the Rev. B. W. Raven, from 2.30 till 9.0., during which time various touches of Grandsire Triples, Bob Major, and Oxford Treble Bob Major were rung. The business meeting was held at 6.30., when eleven names were enrolled as new members of the Association. Three peals have been rung in the district since the last meeting, viz., two at Leiston, and one at Kelsale. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Rendham.

The ringers desire to tender their best thanks to the rector for his kindness in granting the use of the bells.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

MANCHESTER BRANCH.—The usual monthly ringing meeting was held on Saturday, September 20th, at the parish church, Flixton. There were about forty members present from Manchester, Ashton-under-Lyne, Rusholme, Swinton, Eccles, Worsley, Bolton, Walkden, and Whitefield, besides the local company. The bells were set going about 4 o'clock, and ceased at 9.20 p.m., and were kept going nearly the whole of that time with the exception of about forty minutes' interval. Touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples, Plain Bob, Kent Treble Bob, and Double Norwich Court Bob Major were successfully brought round. During the interval the meeting was held in the school-room, presided over by Mr. J. Eachus, when it was decided to hold the next monthly meeting at Pendlebury on Saturday, October 18th. Six new members were proposed and accepted.

Votes of thanks were duly accorded to the curate-in-charge and churchwardens for the use of the bells and schoolroom, and also to the presiding member.

THE ST. PETER'S MANCROFT SOCIETY, NORWICH.

On Sunday, September 21st, six of this society visited Burgh-Apton, where there is a good peal of six in good order, with a tenor about 10 cwt. Raising the bells in peal, a 720 of Oxford Treble Bob Minor was rung in 24 mins. G. Howchin, 1; F. Knights (conductor), 2; F. Howchin, 3; E. Francis, 4; J. Smith, 5; F. H. Knights, jun., 6. Afterwards some touches with the local men. Returning home by way of Brooke, a good peal of six was found with a tenor about 16 cwt. and a 720 in the above method was rung upon them in 27 mins. G. Howchin, 1; F. Knights (conductor), 2; E. Francis, 3; J. Smith, 4; F. Howchin, 5; F. H. Knights, 6. This 720 is the first in the method on these bells for upwards of twelve years.

KNEBWORTH, HERTFORDSHIRE.

The bells of St. Mary-the-Virgin have been restored. One bell, which was cracked for some time, was recast about twelve months since. The two trebles, which were bad bells, have now been recast, with extra new metal to improve them with regard to size, and the new smaller treble has been added, making them into a ring of six. Tenor about 11 cwt. in G. These two works have been carried out within a week, by Messrs. Warner and Sons.

“PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY.”

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

My DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, ESQ., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE REV. H. EARLE BULWER, M.A.

[Vide Portrait.]

The REV. H. EARLE BULWER is the only surviving son of the late Rev. A. E. L. Bulwer, rector of Cawston, in the county of Norfolk, where he was born on March 23rd, 1841. He was educated at King Edward VI's Grammar School, Bury St. Edmunds, whence he went to Pembroke College, Cambridge, in October 1859; subsequently proceeding, after taking the B.A. degree, to Wells Theological College. He was ordained deacon (1864) and priest (1865) by the Bishop of Ely (Dr. Harold Browne), took the M.A. degree in 1866, and for some years afterwards held various curacies, principally in his native county.

It was not till the year 1879 that his connection with the science and practice of change-ringing commenced, the principal inducement thereto being derived from the fact that he was then residing in the neighbourhood of Harleston, in Norfolk, and constantly in the society of such enthusiastic ringers as Captain Moore, Mr. Gervas Holmes, and the late Rev. N. Bolingbroke. The Norwich Diocesan Association had a short time previously been established mainly by the exertions of the above gentlemen and the late Rev. G. H. Harris, its first Secretary. The Redenhall Bell Foundry, started at about the same time, was also an enterprise in which Mr. BULWER from the first took the greatest interest, and being himself a mechanic of no mean order, he often lent a hand in the operations there carried out. The casting of the new ring of six for Weybread church, Suffolk, and the transference of the old frame from that church to the tower of the one which Mr. BULWER was at that time serving as curate, determined him to begin forthwith to learn the Art of change-ringing, and he very soon became a member of a band of learners, who practised at Redenhall and the neighbouring towers. He did not take part in a peal, however, till the year 1881, when, having mastered the methods of Bob Major and Treble Bob, he joined with other members of the Redenhall company in attacking the long neglected Double Oxford Bob method, and his first peal in any method was achieved in this on May 3rd, 1881. This peal was also the occasion of his first essay in composition, being arranged by him on the lines of Annable's well-known and (supposed) original peal of Bob Major. Between this date and the time of his leaving the neighbourhood in the following year, he took part in five peals of Oxford Treble Bob Major, and also on the Queen's birthday, 1881, scored his first courses in both Stedman Triples and Superlative Surprise. One of the above peals of Treble Bob was also composed by him; for he had by this time entered seriously upon the study of the science of change-ringing, and had mastered the Treble Bob system. It was in this peal that attention was first specially drawn to the importance, musically, of keeping the second away from sixths place at the course-end, in order to prevent that bell dodging with the tenor at the previous W.

In 1882, Mr. BULWER went, as senior curate, to Hunstanton; and, unfortunately, lost all further opportunity for continued practice on the ropes. Nevertheless, he was firmly wedded to the science, and pursued it with increased zeal on paper, though he could no longer do so in the belfry. As the result of correspondence with the late Mr. Jasper Snowden, and the leading composers, he collected and edited in 1884 in the pages of "THE BELL NEWS" a long series of touches of Treble Bob Major of all lengths, with their reverse variations, many of them being composed by himself. In that year, he accepted the neighbouring benefice of Stanhoe, where he found himself still outside the sound of church bells, with but little prospect of renewing his acquaintance with the art, save at odd times and long intervals. In 1886, he brought out a new Treble Bob method, to which he gave the name of "New Cumberland Surprise"—a method possessing peculiar features and properties which make it very interesting to the composer, and, for ringing purposes, musical and not so complicated in its working as to make it beyond the powers of a good Treble Bob ringer. Since the production of this method, Mr. BULWER has turned his attention successively to the "Duffield" method and to Stedman Triples, in both of which he has produced several peals; and is about to contribute some articles supplementary to those now appearing by Mr. Heywood on the latter method.

In February of the present year Mr. BULWER became Hon. Secretary of the Norwich Diocesan Association, and has since been unremitting in his exertions to restore that Society to its former position of strength and prosperity. He is also one of the representatives of that Association on the Central Council.

The rev. gentleman has been a warm supporter of this Journal ever since its commencement; at all times ready and willing to write for its pages whenever his valuable aid is required.

ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH PARISH CHURCH SOCIETY.

ON Wednesday, September 24th, a good number of the members of the above society, accompanied by Mr. Churchwarden Matthews and other friends from Ashby, and Messrs. Austin and Smith from Burton, had their annual outing, the places selected being Tickenhall and Melbourne. Leaving Ashby by brake, the party arrived at Tickenhall about 2.45. After about an hour's stay, during which 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles were rung by different bands, and an inspection made of the church, which was rebuilt about 1847, the company were again en route for Melbourne, where, after a most pleasant and enjoyable drive, they arrived about 4.15. A move was at once made for the church, which is a fine specimen of Norman architecture, and two 504's of Grandsire Triples were rung before the word was passed for tea, and an adjournment made to the "New Inn," where a most substantial and welcome repast awaited the visitors. After tea the church was again visited, and more ringing indulged in.

The visitors with some Melbourne friends afterwards repaired to the "New Inn", where a short but pleasant time was passed. Before leaving, a vote of thanks to Mr. Churchwarden Matthews was passed for so kindly accompanying the party, he being seventy-eight years of age, but still, as the mover was pleased to say, seemed as well able to enjoy these excursions as the youngest member of the band. That he may live to take part in many more excursions, was the wish of those present.

The ringers wish through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS" to thank the vicars of Melbourne and Tickenhall for allowing the use of the bells, also those Melbourne friends who so kindly made up the bands for ringing, and particularly Messrs. Austin and Smith for journeying from Burton to join the party.

THE LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN GUILD.

ON Saturday, September 27th, the monthly meeting of this Guild was held at Upholland, near Wigan, and was attended by members from Aughton, Hindley, Ormskirk, Wigan, and also the local company. At 5 p.m. the members sat down to an excellent tea, provided by the generosity of the vicar, who gave the members a hearty welcome to Upholland. After tea the usual meeting was held, Mr. R. Young presiding in the place of the vicar, who had been called away to attend a funeral. The business was of the usual routine character, and one honorary and three performing members were elected, and after a hearty vote of thanks to the vicar for providing so excellent a tea and for the use of the bells and schoolroom, a very pleasant meeting was brought to a close. Several touches of Grandsire and Bob Minor were rung.

TWO-PART TWIN-BOB COMPOSITION.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

The formation of a two-part table of P blocks with its accompanying arrangement of "q" sets is conducted upon lines similar to those adopted in the case of the five and three-part tables. In two important particulars, however, the subdivision now to be considered differs from the preceding ones. The first of these points has already been more than once mentioned, viz., that compositions formed on a two-part table cannot be arranged with two singles in each part and every part called alike, as is possible in the case of five and three-part tables. It would appear, however, that the statement in article X. "that no bona fide two-part peal appears attainable" is only correct so far as regards compositions with two singles in each part, for it seems more than likely, upon consideration of Mr. Parker's discovery detailed in articles XIV., XVII., that, by inserting in each part two extra singles either at 2 and 9, or at 11 and 14, the first part can be made to shunt, which is otherwise impossible. Such a peal would complete the number of subdivisions into which, under the twin-bob treatment, the 60 courses can be divided. Without making use of this ingenious device, regular compositions on the two-part table will be always in four parts, consisting of two parts of probably unequal length, each repeated; the two main blocks thus obtained being united by two singles in the usual manner.

The other point of difference will be explained presently. I now give the table containing Hudson's 60 course-ends arranged for two-part composition.

It is important to notice that table N is simply the five-part table F, article X, read in a different direction. For instance, the first horizontal line in table F forms the first vertical set of five course-ends in the left hand column of table N, and the second line in the former forms the first set in the right-hand column in the latter. The same analogy is apparent throughout the remainder of these tables. I draw attention to this feature as it will be found of material assistance in comprehending those four-part peals in which each part is subdivisible into five "sub-parts," as in Thurstans' "Original." Such compositions, while properly and strictly referable for their analysis to a two-part table, may also be traced, with the exception of the extras and omits, in a five-part table.

In table O four of the "q" sets will be seen to be underlined and it is the presence of these "shunting" sets that constitutes the second point of difference, before referred to, between the two-part table and the previous tables F and L. In the SL columns of table O let us take the last two "q" sets. The first of these is S22, 24—L19, 16. Here we know that if S22, 24 be bobbed L19, 16 must be plained, and vice versa; and further that S22 bobbed produces S24 and vice versa, also similarly with L19, 16. Next, turning to the other set, we have S23, 23—L20, 20. Here S23 bobbed produces S23, that is to say, the shunt effected by bobbing S in P block 23, table N, is into the other P block in the same line. Similarly, if L20 be bobbed, the shunt is into the other P block in line 20. As a consequence we may have either PS 23, BL 20 or BS 23, PL 20 without in any way affecting the figured analysis of a peal, although the actual course-ends will be found, if pricked in full, in a different column of table N according as we elect the one treatment or the other.

It must further be noticed that we have a "q" set consisting apparently of only two members instead of four. In a two-part table there are 30 course-ends in a column. There must consequently be 30 "q" sets, 15 belonging to the SL and 15 to the HQ positions. If, however, the "q" sets under these headings in table O are counted, there will be found to be 16, not 15. Of these, two under each heading are underlined as shunting sets. Thus we are able to account for the fact that a shunting set only contains two members, or half a set. The two half-sets in each column reduce the tabulated number of 16 sets to the proper number of 15. Let me here say that the apparent difference of these shunting sets from the others is only due to the two-part construction of the table, for the "q" sets throughout the whole of the 60 P blocks contain, for like positions, exactly similar qualities.

When I first came across this curious anomaly I at once jumped to the conclusion that here was the basis of Thurstans' "extras" and "omits." Further examination proved that the supposition was correct, and the connection will be explained when we come to the analysis of peals of this type. First, however, I will give an example of a four-part peal in which each of the two main blocks consists of two parts called alike. Afterwards what may be termed "irregular" four-part peals, such as Thurstan's Original, will be examined.

The following tabulation of the two main blocks of my No. 5 peal will serve to illustrate the type to which it belongs, as also to explain the use of tables N and O.

Like the three-part peal in article XVIII., the composition above tabulated has every S bobbed and, consequently, every L plained. The L column is merely inserted, as before, in order to present a complete example. It is assumed that, with the exceptions noted above, every H is plained and every Q bobbed. In the case of the shunting sets it is clear that the figured notation affords no means of indicating whether a position is bobbed or plained, because in either case the same figure expresses the result. The bobbed members of such a set are consequently underlined to denote the distinction. The same plan will be followed in analysing any other compositions that come under the range of the two-part table. I now give the ringable form of the above peal in order to shew how the main blocks are united.

Repeat from SI4.

It might be thought that a change of bobs in the shunting "q" sets would effect a change in this or a similar composition that would enable it to be rung as a two-part peal. But it is to be remembered that if we alter any one shunting twin-bob, although we at once get into the other column in the table, yet the "plain" entailed by this bob has a similar effect when we come to it, and thus a second shunt is introduced resulting in the same part-end as before. The only exception would be if, in the larger block, a shunting set were altered that had its other member in the smaller block, but then the effect would only be to produce two non-shunting blocks. As there are only two part-ends possible, of which the one, 231456, is non-shunting, we are bound to obtain 324156. A further consideration will now show the impossibility of a two-part arrangement, except by use of Mr. Parker's device. If one block shunts so does the other, and the shunt in one block must counteract that in the other if they be joined by two singles in each part, and produce rounds as the part-ends.

In conclusion it may be mentioned that, as in the case of the five-part table, no other two-part table is possible, other than a simple transposition of the one given. In the next article Thurstan's Original, as a type of an irregular four-part peal will be analysed.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

ST. LEONARD'S, SHOREDITCH.

SIR,—In your last issue you published a quarter-peal of Bob Major at St. Leonard's, Shoreditch. I think the columns of our paper should contain only the reports of touches which are true, and that quarter-peals and other touches in which the bells have to be shifted by the conductor in order to bring them into rounds, should not be sent. The conductor in the touch under notice, had to shift two bells in the last lead, so that rounds would come up at the lead end, and in addition to this two other shifts occurred during the ringing.

J. WAGHORN.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH, ILSINGTON, DEVON.

Just off the breezy downs of Haytor (Devon), stands the village of Ilsington. Usually it is the very ideal of quietness and peacefulness. On a recent occasion, however, there was unwonted stir, the cause being the celebration of the erection of a new tower clock, the reopening of the belfry after the re-hanging of the bells, and the annual service of thanksgiving for the harvest. The work, of which the completion was recently celebrated practically concludes the scheme of restoration which the present vicar (the Rev. Thomas Hale) originated. When Mr. Hale took charge of the parish, about twelve years since, he found that the church was filled with unsightly pews, and the floors and windows in bad condition. It was not, however, until 1884 that he was enabled to secure the restoration of the interior of the sacred edifice, and provide new seats of a modern type and an organ at a total cost of nearly £2,000. The expense of erecting the clock has been borne entirely by Mrs. Woodley, of Haslanger, the amount being £120. With regard to the re-hanging of the bells, the expenditure of £50 involved is to be defrayed by subscriptions by the parishioners. Therefore, it will be seen that nearly £2,200 has been spent in connection with the church during the last six years. The new clock has been constructed by Messrs. John Smith & Sons, of the Midland Steam Clock Works, Derby. It is made of good metal, and will strike the hours on the tenor bell. There are to be three dials, 6-ft. in diameter, facing north, east, and west. Arrangements would probably have been made for putting a fourth dial on the south side of the tower had not the position of the belfry steps prevented it. By a mishap in the course of transit from Derby the three dials intended for the tower were injured and rendered useless, and another set could not be forwarded in time to be placed in position by the day. Consequently, parishioners were not able to see the whole of the work, but there is every reason to believe, from the arrangements already made, that the dials, when they occupy their respective situations, will not only be an ornament to the fine embattled tower of the church, but prove useful as well to the parishioners, who will be able to watch, if they choose, the minutes how they fly. The bells, five in number, have been re-hung in their old cage, but supplied with new fittings throughout. Mr. Harry Stokes, of Woodbury, to whom the work was entrusted, has carried it out in a highly satisfactory manner. In order to render the services fully appreciative, the interior of the fabric was embellished with flowers, corn, &c. Miss Hale, Miss Elsie Hale, Misses Lyons (3), Miss Apjohn, and the Rev. T. Hale, undertook the work of adornment, and showed considerable decorative ability in the manner in which they performed it. The first service commenced at 11 o'clock. It was an ordinary morning service, and was fairly well attended. Besides the vicar, who conducted the service, there were present the Ven. Archdeacon Wilkinson (Plymouth), the Rev. W. Birch (Ashburton), and the Rev. G. Ford (Ideford), all of whom took part in the service. The sermon was preached by the Ven. Archdeacon Wilkinson, of Plymouth. He took as his text the 13th and 14th verses of the 104th Psalm: "He watereth the hills from his chambers; the earth is satisfied with the fruit of Thy works. He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man, that he may bring food to the earth." After the service there was a celebration of the Holy Communion. At 7.30 there was semi-choral evening service, with a sermon by the Rev. Prebendary Wolfe, Torquay. The choir was augmented by voices from Newton Abbot. Mr. Hearder, organist at St. Leonard's, Newton Abbot, played the organ.

LOW MOOR, YORKSHIRE.

Monday, October 6th, was the jubilee of the bells of Holy Trinity Church, Low Moor, they having been first rung just fifty years ago on that day. In honour of the event, a band was made up by the Bradford parish church and the Low Moor companies, who rang a date touch of Kent Treble Bob Major. J. Hardcastle, 1; S. Clark, 2; F. Wood, 3; J. Cotterell, 4; J. Broadley, 5; J. W. Cundall, 6; J. W. Emmott, 7; C. Drakup, 8. This date touch is all the more noteworthy through its being the first conducted by J. Hardcastle, as well as the longest length by F. Wood. It is intended to attempt a peal of Treble Bob on the first opportunity in commemoration of the jubilee.

DEDICATION OF A PEAL OF BELLS AT BLACKLANDS, HASTINGS.

By the dedication of the peal of bells in the recently completed tower of Christ Church, Blacklands, another church is added to the list of sacred buildings in Hastings possessing bells and chimes. The day's proceedings commenced with an eight o'clock celebration of the Holy Communion. After the service the choir and congregation assembled outside the belfry door, where the hymn "When morning gilds the skies" was sung. After mounting the narrow spiral stairs to the belfry, the vicar read some special prayers, the hymn "We love the place, O God" next being rendered, after the ringers had chimed the tune. On behalf of Miss Norris, who presented the clock, Mrs. Hodges, the wife of the vicar, then ascended to the clock stage, and severing the cord with a silver knife set the clock in motion. Next, Mrs. Axtell, the donor of the bells, formally dedicated the bells by taking hold of one bearing the inscription, "To the Glory of God." A band of the Kent County Association then rang, and the service closed with the Doxology. During the day twelve members of the Kent County Association rang changes in various methods. The bells, six in number, have a very pleasing tone, resembling closely the bells of Battle Abbey, and later on some of the Battle ringers exhibited their skill.

The bells were supplied by the firm of John Taylor and Co., Loughborough, and they give every satisfaction. They were first raised by the Blacklands ringers.

The Kent Association ringers were Messrs. C. Pearson, W. Brapple, G. Pope, R. Edwards, A. Hinds, J. Sharp, E. Watson, A. Allen, J. Goldsmith, A. E. Munn (conductor). They rang several peals of Bob Minor, Grandsire Doubles and Stedman Doubles. The Blackland ringers were Messrs. W. Block, J. Lock, A. Tester, W. Sellman, W. Simmond, F. Anderson, J. Livermore, G. Gower, E. Bishop, Munn, A. James, W. Martin, S. Briggs, W. Swain, W. Reeves, S. Foord and W. White.

SOCIETY FOR THE ARCHDEACONRY OF STAFFORD.

The Quarterly Meeting in connection with the above society was held on Saturday, October 4th, at Tamworth, the following towers being represented: Perry Barr, Christ Church (West Bromwich), St. Michael's and Lichfield Cathedral, Darlaston, and Tamworth. Owing to the late arrival of members, ringing did not commence till close on 4 p.m., when an attempt was made for a touch of Grandsire Triples, which unfortunately came to grief. A 336 of Stedman Triples was brought round. A short service was held in the chapel, and a very interesting address delivered by the Rev. E. D. Pollock, vicar of Tamworth. After which a committee meeting was held, and one honorary member, one ringing member, and seven members were elected according to rule 8. The next quarterly meeting is to be held at Darlaston on Saturday, January 10th, 1891. The secretary, Mr. S. Reeves, was elected to represent the society on the Central Council. Tea was provided through the kindness of the vicar in the schoolroom, when all present thoroughly satisfied themselves with the good things provided, which were by far in excess to the number present. A vote of thanks to the vicar for his address, and also the ladies for their kindness in waiting, brought the meeting to a close.

ST. MARY'S, DOVER.

The following letter has been sent to the Dover Chronicle :—

"SIR,—Seeing in your paper the other week the report of the meeting in St. Mary's Vestry about putting the churchyard in decent order, it is quite right it should be done. I think, however, that the fine peal of bells hanging in the old tower should not be forgotten, and that something should be done so that they could be rung again. I think it would be a honour to the town to have the bells rung again, as they are as fine a peal as any in Kent. The only bells that can be rung in Dover are those of St. James, which are made of steel, but I am sorry to say they are not very often rung. Trusting that you will find room in your valuable paper for these few lines, and that something may be done so that the bells can be rung as they were in years gone by.

Dover, September 22nd, 1890.

A LOVER OF BELLS."

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Constant dropping wears away rocks."

Seeing that concurrently with these lines the portrait of our esteemed friend the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer will appear, it is with peculiar satisfaction that I can refer to the extraordinary success which has attended the Norwich Diocesan Association during the past year. An addition of 200 new members, besides the rejoining of several old ones "who had temporarily fallen out;" making the numerical strength now over 500; a satisfactory state of finances—twenty pounds of bad debt rubbed off, and as much left in hand; and in addition "a highly successful, enjoyable and encouraging meeting." If that record is not enough to amply satisfy the most enthusiastic member, and reflect highest credit on all who have been assisting in the work of extension and improvement, particularly the energetic Hon. Sec., then I am at a loss for terms wherewith to express myself.

* * * * *

It will be pleasing, moreover, to all earnest members of the Exercise to find such energy displayed in this old historic ringing ground, and such success attending our Norwich brethren's efforts for good. I trust the appearance of Mr. Bulwer's portrait this day will be a strong incentive to those who are fortunate in possessing him as their Hon. Sec. to warmly and effectively support him in his arduous labours for their Association. When they look upon the semblance of those well-known and amiable features, may they be reminded of what he has done already in lifting up their Diocesan Society; and then if this reminder moves them to practical effort, there is no reason why it should not be Mr. Bulwer's privilege at the next annual meeting to report another great and substantial success.

* * * * *

I cannot resist complimenting that persevering body of brother-strings who rejoice in the now well-known name of St. Michael's Juniors, on their peal of Stedman Triples. For twelve months they have been "pegging away" to bring this peal round, and the story of their continuous failures reads like a romance in a small way. But with that pugnaciousness of which John Bull is credited by his continental neighbours with possessing in a large degree, they kept at it, undaunted, till success at length crowned their efforts. Here is an example of pluck which I commend to the notice of those who are so apt to "throw up the drumsticks" after a failure or two. How many are there amongst us who go in for peal-ringing who could not point to numerous cases of faint-hearted brethren who because they have "come to grief" once or twice have eschewed trying any more? I know only too well that such has been my experience. A well-known scion of the Exercise used to remark that he considered one success for three attempts a very good average. I remember a case where a band met for thirteen successive Saturdays before they accomplished their peal; and they were old and proficient ringers, too. Another circumstance is yet vivid in my recollection, where a band was made up out of two or else three companies for a peal which through mishaps of a varied character—ropes slipping wheels, bobs missed or wrongly called, meeting a man short, etc. (which likewise ended in failure) only two of the band as originally formed, took part; the other six had one after another dropped out—lost heart, in fact, and the peal tried for is as yet unaccomplished. But how small do these efforts appear against the story of the St. Michael's Juniors, who we are told resolutely met, "started for the peal every successive Thursday, and lost it regularly through the go of the bells?" So how can I help saying "Well done, Juniors!"

You have not merely pulled off the first peal of Stedman Triples in "the fair city," but have by your performance given such an example of indomitable perseverance which should have a good effect in more quarters than one?

* * * * *

I have heard it said of Jasper Snowdon that when an attempt for a peal came to grief, his first enquiry was—"When shall we meet again for it?" The Gloucester Juniors have evidently been imbued with the same spirit, and quite certain am I that if this resolute temper was more manifest, peal-scoring would be larger, and those who are determined to succeed in this matter would find themselves in a more favourable position for accomplishing their desires.

* * * * *

When I read the report of the peal of Grandsire Triples at Nuneaton, I confess I felt rather sorry for young Horwood that after working the tenor behind for two hours and ten minutes he was compelled to give up the rope to another. However, taking into account his youth of sixteen years, the effect was certainly creditable to him. Let us hope he will be more fortunate in his next attempt.

* * * * *

I confess I was somewhat surprised to read the Editor's remarks anent the scant support as yet given to his praiseworthy speculation of re-publishing the rare "Stedman's Tintinnalogia." Whether looked from a scientific or an antiquarian point of view, one might have reasonably imagined that such a reprint would have been eagerly brought up, and even more so, taking into account the low price at which it is issued. Had the publishing price been half-a-guinea, or something like that, a small list of subscribers might have been expected; but when it is only a modest eightpence which stands between us and the possession of a copy, I can't understand the very tardy manner in which the list gets made up. Some will probably be wanting the book when this reprint is sold out, and then have a "fancy" price to pay for it, which will cause them to regret neglecting to avail themselves of the opportunity now afforded. I know of my own knowledge that the late Jasper Snowdon offered two guineas for a copy of this work, and then could not get it.

* * * * *

I am greatly obliged for the very kind letter from Mr. Bennett anent my projected retirement, and assure him that only the Editor's wish, or sheer necessity, will bring this about. But we are all creatures of circumstances, you know.

THE HERTFORD SOCIETY.

ON Wednesday, October 1st, the ringers met to ring at St. Andrew's, the occasion being the home-coming of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Baker from their wedding tour. Several touches were rung, the chief of which was a 630 of Grandsire Triples. R. Wilds, 1; J. Knight, 2; J. Pomfret, 3; H. Phillips, 4; M. Ellsmore (conductor), 5; H. Bottrill, 6; E. Hollifield, 7; F. George, 8. The ringers regret that through some misunderstanding they were unable to attempt a peal, which they had hoped to do. However the ringing went on very well, and the ringers hope soon to have Mr. Baker again with them in the belfry.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

JASPER W. SNOWDON'S WORKS.

STANDARD METHODS : 2s. 6d. SECOND EDITION.
Contains full explanations and rules for ringing all the best methods, from five to eight bells, with plain-course diagrams of each printed in full, with coloured lines. (40 pages of diagrams and 87 of descriptive letterpress).

GRANDSIRE ; 2s. 0d. THE METHOD, ITS PEALS, AND HISTORY. WITH PORTRAIT AND MEMOIR. EDITED BY HIS BROTHER, WM. SNOWDON. COMPLETE WITH AN APPENDIX BY THE REV. CHARLES D. P. DAVIES, M.A., OXON. Commences with ringing on five, six, and seven bells, for the benefit of a learner; gives instructions on composing, proving, varying, and reversing, conducting and calling round; and ends with a general survey of the practical and scientific aspect of the composition of triples—thus forming a complete reference book for all Grandsire ringers. (210 pages).

TREBLE BOB. 3s. 2½d. PARTS I. AND II. COMPLETE.
Part I. contains instructions for pricking, transposing, proving, composing, and conducting peals; an essay on the In and Out-of-course of the changes; and a history of the various compositions and performances. Part II. contains classified peals of Minor, Major, Royal, and Maximus, with their reverse variations; remarks on the different qualities; particulars of first performances, composers' names, &c., &c. (236 closely printed pages). Part II. (136 closely printed pages) may be had separately, 2s. 1½d.

DOUBLE NORWICH COURT BOB MAJOR. 1s. 0d.
Contains rules and instructions for pricking and ringing the method; a linear diagram of the plain course; a collection of touches and peals; instructions for proving, and a history of the earlier performances, with a list of peals down to 1834. (78 pages).

A few copies are still left of "An Account of the Society of Union Scholars." (49 pages). Post free, 8½d.

Forwarded, Post Free, on receipt of remittance, by WM. SNOWDON, Old Bank Chambers, Leeds.

HETHERSETT, NORFOLK.

Wednesday, October 1st, being the feast of St. Remigius, to whom the church of this parish is dedicated, was selected for the Harvest Festival and re-opening of the bells, after rehanging and augmentation to six. A large congregation assembled at 3.30 p.m., nearly filling the church, which was prettily decorated, and a special service adapted to the occasion was heartily joined in by those present; some appropriate and beautiful prayers being introduced with special reference to the dedication of the bells. The sermon was preached by the Ven. Archdeacon Nevill from Psalm cl. The offertory, amounting to £12, was for the bell fund. It was found necessary to remove entirely the whole of the old frame, timbers, and supporting baulks, and replace them with new material. This has been most satisfactorily done, and a new tenor of 10 cwt. 16 lbs. from the foundry of Messrs. Warner, added to the old ring of five. The latter have been tuned and thoroughly refitted, the result being a very handy and melodious little ring of six, the splice between the new bell and the old ones being excellent. By the request of the rector and churchwardens, Mr. F. Knights, Master of the St. Peter Mancroft company, came from Norwich with five of his company, viz., Messrs. J. Skinner, P. Smith, F. H. Knights, F. Howchin, and G. Howchin, and these were joined at Hethersett by the Rev. A. G. Blyth and the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer, Hon. Sec. of the Diocesan Association, who, with Mr. George Day took part in the ringing before the service. Some 720's of Oxford Treble Bob were brought round during the afternoon, all being well-satisfied with the "go" of the bells, as well as with their music. In the evening the ringers were entertained at tea in the schoolroom by the rector and churchwardens.

ST. MARY'S PARISH CHURCH SOCIETY, EALING.

On Saturday, September 13th, the members of this society had their first outing, which they hope to make an annual affair. Henley-on-Thames was the place selected, and 9 o'clock found them on the way, per G.W.R., and after a run of about an hour-and-a-half, they found themselves at their destination. The morning being rather foggy, they were not able to see far across country till after they had passed Slough, when the various churches and places of interest were pointed out and admired. After they had looked about this picturesque town and made final arrangements for dinner, etc., they made their way to the parish church, where permission had been granted to ring, the obliging steeple-keeper, Mr. W. Butt, being in attendance. After ringing a few touches dinner was the order, and they soon knocked off a few courses sharp under their able conductor, H. Parsons. This touch was well struck without, and took place at the Little White Hart, facing the river: then a little after-dinner chat. Being joined by two friends from High Wycombe, they again visited the tower and rang a few more short touches, some taking a stroll to hear the bells, and some doing a little boating. Then tea, and a little more ringing with some of the local company, afterwards adjourning for a parting chat and glass with them. Now to the station was the order, Ealing being reached about 10.30, all having enjoyed themselves.

Henley boasts of a fine peal of eight, tenor 23 cwt. 3 qrs. in E flat. Change-Ringing does not seem to flourish, neither could the visitors hear that any one took in "THE BELL NEWS." The following belonging to Ealing took part in the ringing: H. Parsons, C. Witchlow, E. W. Mitchel, E. Harris, A. H. Taber, E. Gould, A. Fryer, J. Wallson, and J. Basden. Methods rang—Grandsire Doubles and Triples, and Tombstone Major.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

*This is to certify:—*That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

XX.

ANALYSIS OF THURSTANS' ORIGINAL PEAL.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

Although the recent discovery of a five-part peal by Thurstans, which can be rung with only two singles as a ten-part composition and was certainly produced before his well-known masterpiece, properly abrogates the right of the latter to be called the "Original," still this title, which has grown within the last year or two to be generally applied to the peal in question, will probably continue to hold its own. Upon the plan adopted in this production there are, as I shall presently shew, four compositions, each of which is practically a transposition of the other: that is, one of the four being proved correct, the others cannot fail to be so. Two of the transpositions are well known, viz.: Brooks and Haley's. The remaining one, owing to the number of six-bob sets, may be classed as altogether worthless. As a matter of fact Brook's variation was composed by Thurstans and the great peal was merely a subsequent improvement in arrangement. Thurstans was rightly unwilling to put forward a composition in which the bobs are throughout in fours. The great beauty of the Original lies in the way in which, with a minimum of four-bob sets, 6-7 are regularly brought home, but there are further merits which will be pointed out as we proceed. I now give the analysis of the peal worked upon the two-part table N.

If in the above tabulation it is assumed that SH are bobbed and LQ plained throughout, then the following "q" sets form the exceptions.

P S	B L	P H	B Q

6. 26	22. 15
23. 23	20. 20

It will be seen that the two main blocks of the peal as given above are non-shunting, and, consequently, fail to introduce the other half of each block, which may be pricked out from 324156 and 562314 respectively, and in this state of four separate quarters the peal may be traced on the five-part table F, article X. Four similar quarters had been already united into a peal by Lates with the aid of irregular singles when Thurstans by discovering the shunting "q" sets, or, as we commonly speak of them, the omits and extras, connected the four quarters into two independant halves which latter were then easily joined by singles.

Let us now refer to the shunting "q" sets in table O, article XIX. These are underlined and are four in number. I have shewn in the same article that, to obtain a part-end shunt by transposing B for P in a shunting set, such set must not have both its members in that part. The four shunting "q" sets are as follows:

11. 11	4. 4	14. 14	30. 30
23. 23	20. 20	19. 19	7. 7

Of these sets the ones under HQ are useless for the purpose, for H19 and Q7 both occur in the first block of the peal, while H14 and Q30 both occur in the second block. In the case of the SL sets, however, S11 occurs in the second block and L4 in the first, and similarly with S23, L20. Consequently by transposing P and B in one of the latter sets we shall obtain a shunt in each block. To transpose both these sets would, of course, produce the non-shunting part-end again, just as when the two members of one set appear in one block. In the tabulated analysis of the peal we have BS11, PL4, and PS23, BL20. The necessary shunt may be obtained either by changing the former set to PS11, BL4, or the latter to BS23, PL20. The first of these alternatives is the one selected by Thurstans, although, as is well known, the latter is equally efficient with the omits in the first half of the peal and the extras in the second. As soon as any of these calls are introduced the composition is no longer traceable on the five-part table, for the palpable reason that the five parts of each quarter are no longer called alike. I will not pursue the subject of the shunting sets further as Mr. Bulwer intends to deal more fully with this point.

Having introduced the shunt into each half, although, as already explained, the figured analysis is not affected, the pricking of the course-ends must be revised from the point in each half at which the shunting set takes effect. We have the composition now in two main blocks, each of equal length, and these only require to be joined by singles in order to complete the peal. But here we come to another of the remarkable qualities of this production. The calling of the second half, when it undergoes the reversal consequent upon its being placed between singles, comes out precisely the same as the calling of the first half, with the exception of the shunting bobs. We cannot but admire this additional proof of the ability of the composer, and taking into consideration the number of points in which the peal stands pre-eminent, it may safely be said that no future composition will ever displace it from its pedestal of fame.

Let us now turn to the variations of the Original which are presented in the accompanying table.

S H Q	S H Q
H	H L
(c)	(d)
S H	S H
H L	H

The calling here given is that of one quarter of the "Original" (a), of Haley's variation (b), of Brook's variation (c), and of the third variation already referred to (d). The difference between (a) and (b) is simply that the extras and omits in the one form the standard calling in the other. Thus the shunt in (a) is by omitting L in the first of the three courses and adding it in the last, which treatment forms the standard calling in (b). In (b) the shunt is by adding L in the first of the three courses and omitting it in the last, which is also the standard calling of (a).

Of the remaining two variations, (c) is merely (b) with the Q bobs all transferred to H; the extras and omits are the same. Variation (d) bears precisely the same relation to (c) as (a) does to (b). The singling together of the two main blocks is similar in all four peals.

A WEEK'S RINGING IN NORWICH DIOCESE.

A most enjoyable round of visits to a few of the principal towers in the Norwich Diocese for the purpose of peal-ringing came to a successful and brilliant termination on Saturday, October 11th.

The project of such a tour had for some months been engaging the attention of the Hon. Secretary of the Diocesan Association, and, having received the sanction and approval of the committee, arrangements were made, thanks to the willing assistance of a few friends, and the cordial co-operation of the Incumbents and Wardens of the churches visited, for the assembling of the party on Monday, October 6th, at Ipswich. The following gentlemen, all well-known lovers of the Art, met accordingly on that day in response to the invitation issued by Mr. Bulwer: Revs. F. E. Robinson and G. F. Coleridge, Messrs. J. W. Taylor, jun., N. J. and E. A. Pitstow, C. Hounslow and J. W. Washbrook. Some of these gentlemen, not content, apparently, with the prospect before them, had already stopped by the way to score a peal of Double Norwich at Foxearth in Essex, and had booked themselves in advance for another of Stedman Caters at Cambridge on the Saturday following! Arrived at Ipswich, the visitors were met by Captain A. P. Moore and the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer. On reaching the "Coach and Horses" hotel, which had been indicated as their quarters for the night, the party were about to proceed to the church of St. Mary-le-Tower to attempt a peal of Stedman Cinques with the assistance of Messrs. Catchpole, Jas. and Wm. Motts of the Tower company, when they were unexpectedly met by the disappointing announcement that no ringing could be done at Ipswich that night on account of a case of serious illness close to the church. After a brief consultation over the tea-table, it was resolved to start at once in a waggonette for Coddendam, and in a few minutes the seven visitors, with Captain Moore, were under way, leaving Mr. Bulwer to send a telegram before them for permission to ring, and to have the bells in readiness. Fortunately, owing to the extreme kindness of the Rev. Walter Wyles, Rector of Coddendam, and the prompt co-operation of Mr. Hawkins English, the band found no obstacles in their way, and achieved a splendid peal of Stedman Triples, the first on the bells, in a minute under three hours, the gallant captain covering the changes with a perfection of skill and accuracy of striking which justly won for him the admiration of all his colleagues. The clocks of Ipswich had struck the midnight hour before the adventurous band regained their hotel; so, after some much needed refreshment in the way of supper, they speedily retired to rest with the prospect of an early start before them in the morning. The Coddendam peal, however, must not be dismissed without mention of its most gratifying sequel, which arrived a day or two later in the shape of a letter from the Rector to Mr. Robinson, from which the following is an extract: "Dear Sir,—I do not know who was captain of the company that rang the magnificent peal last night, but I write to you because your address has been the most fully given by Hawkins English, one of our ringers, and I write to thank your company for giving us the rich treat of such a splendid peal. . . . I should have been glad to see the company who came to us last night, but was busy with two meetings between 7.30 and 9. Will you convey my thanks to your co-ringers."

Seven o'clock on Tuesday morning found the whole party at Ipswich Station, en route for Woodbridge, where they were met by Mr. Fosdike, the District Secretary; and, after breakfasting, started for a peal of Double Norwich. The bad go of some of the bells, however, caused, it is said, by the rocking of the tower, produced a shift-course after two hours' difficult ringing, and the conductor called "stand!" The visitors were most kindly received by the Rev. S. B. Field and Mrs. Field at the Rectory, where they found a substantial luncheon provided for them. With a keen appreciation of the hospitable welcome accorded to them here, they left by the 2.30 train for Great Yarmouth, where they were met by the Rev. J. F. Hastings and Mr. W. Blyth, the District Secretary. Mr. Hastings had made all arrangements for the accommodation of the party, and to him and the members of the St. Nicholas' company the heartiest thanks are due for the kindness and goodwill with which the tourists were received. After tea with Mr. Hastings, a start was made for Stedman Caters on the fine ring of ten in the tower of St. Nicholas church, but a most unfortunate shift-course again occurred after an hour-and-a-half's good ringing, and "stand" had to be called. It being too late to start afresh, the visitors descended to listen to the bells outside while they were rung by the home company; some going for a stroll on the beach until supper time, when with the whole of the Yarmouth company they sat down to a bountiful repast at Mortlock's. After passing a pleasant hour, during which Mr. Hounslow "warbled" to the company in his own inimitable style, word was passed for 9 a.m. sharp at Beech Station, and a few hours of welcome slumbersought.

Refreshed for the task before them, the party reached Aylsham at 10.25 on Wednesday morning, and found most hospitable preparations made for them by Mr. Dewhirst, the energetic churchwarden. Traps were in waiting to take them to the church, and by eleven o'clock, with Mr. R. Stackwood, jun., of the Aylsham company, standing in, the newly hung ring of ten were going merrily to the tune of Treble Bob Royal, and brought round, after a well-struck peal, at a few minutes after two. A bare half-hour could only be allowed for partaking of lunch most generously and hospitably provided by Mr. Dewhirst at his house, before the time arrived for departure by train to Norwich. Arrived there, a visit was paid to the Cathedral, and in due time, Mr. F. Pitstow joined the party, St. Peter Mancroft was reached, where the visitors were met by Mr. F. Knights, the obliging Master of St. Peter's company, and several of his band. After evensong a start was made for Treble Twelve, with the aid of four of St. Peter's company; but it proved a false start, and after three quarters of an hour a shift-course occurred, for the third time during the week, and it was feared by some the attempt would have to be abandoned; this, however, Mr. Knights would not hear of, and it was owing to his persuasion that a fresh start was made, with the result of scoring a most magnificent peal of Maximus in three hours and forty-five minutes, the striking for the whole time being admirable, very few trips being detected by the listeners outside. By the kindness of Mr. Oram, one of the churchwardens of St. Peter's, and of the Rev. A. G. Blyth, of St. Philip's, Heigham, beds were provided for most of the party, and the balance repaired to Mr. Jas. Skinner's. A start was made for Diss at 9 a.m. on Thursday morning, and there, after some very hard work, on account of the working of the frame and fittings, a peal of Double Norwich was brought round, the striking of which was very good considering the difficulties that had to be encountered by rope slipping wheel, bells hanging up, or dropping down, and other vagaries, which only the bell-hanger can correct. The visitors were very hospitably entertained at lunch after the peal, half going to the Rev. W. Andrews, Curate of Diss (in the absence of the Rector from home), and half to the house of H. E. Garrod, Esq., churchwarden. In the afternoon train was taken for Harleston, which was the headquarters for the rest of the week, sleeping accommodation for the whole party being most kindly and cordially offered by the Rector, the Ven. Archdeacon Perowne, Dr. Candler, Mr. J. A. Everson, and Captain Moore. In addition to this, the Archdeacon had invited the whole party to supper on Thursday, and to lunch on Friday, with a kindness which will long live in the recollection of those who were the recipients of it. Twenty minutes' walk from Harleston Station brought the party to Redenhall, where the tower was forthwith ascended, and the bells, recently re-fitted and frame strengthened by Captain Moore, set going to the familiar tune of Thurstane Original, Mr. Robinson being this time at the helm. A very fine peal resulted, the Captain's covering being again a noteworthy feature, but the time was undoubtedly slow. On Friday morning Superlative Surprise was attempted on the same bells; but after an hour's good ringing a "jumble" occurred, out of which chaos even Mr. Washbrook's genius could not extract order; so the remainder of the morning was devoted to touches of Stedman, Treble Bob, and Duffield, in all of which Mr. Bulwer took part. In the afternoon a waggonette and pair of horses conveyed the party to Eye, a most enjoyable drive of eleven miles through a beautiful country in glorious weather. Here the party were received most kindly by the Vicar, the Rev. Donald Campbell, and Mrs. Campbell, and entertained at tea, after which a splendid peal of Double Norwich was brought round in good time, the bells going perfectly—indeed better, if anything, than any others during the week. After a second edition of tea at the Vicarage, the homeward journey was taken through the night air, now, alas! somewhat thick and cold. The disappointment of the morning had rankled in the breasts of the experts, and before leaving the tower, it had been virtually settled to start again for Superlative on Saturday morning; so at supper, time tables were studied, and arrangements made for an early effort, "7 a.m. at the tower" being the order. That hour accordingly found all ready and determined to wind up the week in brilliant fashion. "Go" was soon called, and by eleven o'clock a capital peal of Superlative Surprise had been added to the week's record. The Archdeacon came up into the ringing chamber to congratulate the dauntless band, and once more invited all to an informal lunch before starting for the station. Here only a partial separation was effected; Mr. Coleridge remaining behind to take the afternoon express to London; while the remainder of the visitors, after taking a fond farewell of their good old friend the Captain, accompanied Mr. Bulwer as far as Wymondham, on their way to Cambridge.

As the programme for the week was originally arranged, it had been intended to include peals on all numbers from seven to twelve inclusive. As it happened neither Cinques nor Caters were rung, the one having to be abandoned, and the other being lost. As a set off to this, there was the achievement, believed to be unique, of peals of Treble Ten and Treble Twelve on the same day.

Altogether the week was a most successful one, and much enjoyed by all who took part in it. The members of the party will not soon forget the great kindness and hospitality they met with from Woodbridge onwards, nor the cordiality with which they were welcomed at the places they visited, for which the sincere thanks they offer are, after all, but an inadequate return.

A LOOK ROUND IN EAST SUFFOLK.

A number of change-ringers, including Messrs. H. and A. Howell, J. Motts and W. Motts, of Ipswich, S. Slater of Glemsford, and T. Sadler of Winesham, visited several churches in the district on Sunday, September 28th. They first drove to Helmingham, where they rang 224 Kent Treble Bob Major. H. Last, 1; H. Howell, 2; W. Whiting, 3; S. Slater, 4; A. Howell, 5; A. Whiting, 6; W. Motts, 7; J. Motts, 8. They then journeyed to Stonham Aspal, where they attended morning service. After service they met the local ringers and made up a band so that the visitors could hear the ten bells. J. Motts, 1; W. Motts, 2; S. Slater, 3; H. Howell, 4; R. Thurlow (conductor, Stonham Aspal), 5; T. Sadler, 6; W. Leffley, 7; W. Clements (Stonham Aspal), 8; A. Howell, 9; F. Clements (Stonham Aspal), 10. These bells are a fair peal and in fair going order, tenor 24 cwt. After the ringing was over here the rector kindly invited the ringers to partake of refreshments, and after a short stay at the rectory they proceeded to Debenham, where a short touch of Bob Major was indulged in. J. Grimes (Debenham), 1; G. Lowe (Debenham), 2; T. Sadler, 3; H. Howell, 4; A. Howell, 5; J. Motts (conductor), 6; W. Motts, 7; S. Slater, 8. During their stay here a touch of Bob Triples was rung in which J. Brady, a blind person, and H. English took part. These are a fine peal of bells and go splendidly, and a capital place for peal ringing. Framsdon was the next place visited; here a capital 504 of Grandsire Triples was rung. S. Slater, 1; T. Sadler, 2; A. Howell, 3; H. Howell, 4; J. Motts (conductor), 5; H. English (Coddensham), 6; W. Motts, 7; F. Brister (Norwich), 8. This was followed by a touch of Major. W. Last, 1; T. Sadler, 2; A. Howell, 3; G. Thurlow (Framsden), 4; W. Motts, 5; H. English, 6; G. Perry (Framsden), 7; S. Slater, 8. These bells are a splendid ring, and is without question the best of eight of their weight in the county, but they are not in first rate order; tenor 16 cwt. This concluded the ringing for the day, and the whole party wish to express their most sincere thanks for the welcome they received at each of the parishes, this round being arranged by their Ipswich friends to oblige them, therefore they wish to return them their best thanks.

RINGERS' OUTING.

ON Saturday, September 27th, six members of the Stanstead branch of the Essex Association paid a visit to Braintree, where there is a good peal of six, tenor 12½ cwt. A start was made from Takely by the 8.57 a.m. train, arriving at the destination about 9.30 a.m. There they were met at the station by three of the local band, viz., Messrs. Rudkin, Hammond, and Watson, who soon conducted them to the church, and after a hasty look through the same they soon made for the tower, and after raising the bells a 720 of Plain Bob Minor (twenty-six singles) was rung in 26 mins. J. Cavill, 1; W. Cavill, 2; J. Cavill, 3; G. Gray, 4; I. Hammond, 5; W. Watts (conductor), 6. Composed by the late B. Annable. Also 720 Woodbine Treble Bob in 23½ mins. J. Cavill, 1; I. Hammond, 2; G. Gray, 3; C. H. Howard (Braintree), 4; W. Watts, 5; I. Cavill (conductor), 6. And 720 College Exercise in 24 mins. T. Watson (Braintree), 1; I. Hammond (first 720 in the method with a bob bell), 2; H. E. Hammond (Braintree), 3; G. Gray, 4; F. Rudkin (Braintree), 5; I. Cavill (conductor), 6. Then refreshments were partaken of, and some tunes and touches on the handbells followed. Another visit was paid to the tower and 720 Cambridge Surprise was attempted but was unsuccessful. A 720 of Double Court was brought round in 24 mins. W. Hammond (Braintree), 1; F. Calthorpe (Braintree), 2; I. Hammond, 3; G. Gray, 4; I. Cavill, 5; W. Watts (conductor), 6. Also 240 Kent Treble Bob. F. Bumstead (Braintree), 1; W. Moore (Bocking), 2; W. Dyson (Braintree), 3; F. Calthorpe (Braintree), 4; F. Rudkin (conductor, Braintree), 5; A. Hucksion (Braintree), 6. A meat tea was afterwards partaken of, which was brought round in fine style. Afterwards a touch of Bocking Treble Bob Minor and a touch of Bob Major brought the ringing to a close. The visitors wish through the medium of this paper to thank the vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells, also Mr. Rudkin for getting everything in readiness, and doing all he could to make the days' outing a most enjoyable one.

Correspondence.

While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

"SPUR PEAL"

SIR,—In a local publication I notice a query about a "Spur Peal" being rung at Seaton (Rutland), can any of your readers tell me what this means, and whether carried out at any other church?

Ashby-de-la-Zouch.

W. LIGGINS.

ST. LEONARD'S, SHOREDITCH.

SIR,—In your issue of last week I saw a letter to my great surprise concerning a touch of Bob Major rang at the above church, which touch I sent up to you myself. Now I should like to learn of Mr. Waghorn first, whether he knows if the touch was true or false, and if he did why did he not say so at the time; but secondly, in my opinion he has got to learn the position of the bells in and out of course before he can do so; but to finish my letter I must say that if the ringer of the 3rd had struck his bell better, the ringing would have been better; otherwise I am perfectly satisfied with the touch we rang.

E. T. EDRIDGE.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

THE YORKSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

Hardly had the good folk of Hull begun to feel relief after the busy Church Congress week, then they were again in a state of siege. Last Saturday, October 11th, was a great fair day in this "fourth port of the realm," and heavily-laden excursion trains, as well as ordinary traffic, brought in crowd after crowd of visitors. They came from north, south, east and west, and verily, had there been another part of the compass in existence, they would have come from thence also. It was estimated that the thirty odd "trips" alone brought between 20,000 and 30,000 persons. It was thus amid scenes and circumstances of considerable animation (not to use a stronger term) that some hundreds of our brother strings on that day journeyed to Hull for the purpose of taking part in the annual meeting of this association. The weather, happily, was beautiful.

St. James' Schools, Porter Street, formed head quarters for the day, both of the association and the local company; to which place the attention of visitors was attracted by a festoon of banners reaching across the street, while stretched in front of the school was a very large crimson cloth bearing the words "Yorkshire Association of Change-Ringers," in white letters. At nine o'clock, Mr. J. W. Stickney, Hon. Sec. to the Hull branch, with the local committee, met to regulate the order of ringing, control the arrangements, and issue tickets for tea. With kind consideration and forethought, as each member arrived and paid the "regulation" sixpence for his tea ticket, he was likewise furnished by the Hull branch with tickets for luncheon, which he could avail himself of just when it suited his own inclination or his appetite. At Holy Trinity Church likewise, genial Charlie Jackson was busily engaged in carrying out the duties of steeple-keeper, and along with other members looking well after the comfort of visiting friends, not forgetting their "creature wants" in the way of luncheon. Both belfries were open from nine o'clock, and from that time, as train after train each brought its contingent, the Hull members soon found themselves having a busy time of it. At half-past eleven a visit was made to the magnificent town hall, where by kind permission of the mayor (Alderman Sherburn) members and friends were enabled to make a tour of the rooms, a privilege which was much appreciated. The bells of Holy Trinity and St. James, were meanwhile kept going in various methods until three o'clock, when a band previously arranged by the stewards (Messrs. T. Hattersley and J. H. Hardcastle), took possession of the latter belfry to ring the touch for service. This was a 928 of Kent Treble Bob Major, which was rung in fine style by J. Hardcastle (conductor), 1; T. Hattersley, 2; C. H. Hattersley, 3; J. Dixon, 4; J. Broadley, 5; J. H. Hardcastle, 6; J. Angus, 7; A. Brearley, 8. At four o'clock members assembled in church where choral service was held, and after the singing of the Old Hundredth, the Rev. H. G. Kenrick, M.A., preached the annual sermon, taking for his text—"They wait upon their office according to their order."

The hymn "Abide with me" having been sung, and the benediction pronounced, a move was made back to the schools where a most substantial meat tea awaited them. In this pleasant part of the day's proceedings, nearly three hundred took part. Banners hung round the walls, and flowers lent a bright hue to the surroundings. In a short course of time, beef, ham, tongue, rabbit pies, bread (both "plain" and "fancy") sweet-stuffs, and innumerable cups of tea, vanished; all of which had been well cooked; the meats "tender as a chicken," the baked eatables "done to a turn," and the tea good and refreshing; all of which things gave great satisfaction to those who partook. This over, and grace sung, an adjournment was made to the lower schoolroom, where the business meeting was to be held. While members assembled, touches were rung on handbells; and then the chair was taken by

Mr. W. SNOWDON, president, who after briefly expressing congratulation on the highly successful progress of the day's proceedings thus far, read the minutes, which were passed. He then announced that all retiring officers had been re-elected, no new nominations having been sent in. The fifteenth annual report and balance sheet next came up for consideration, the former of which stated that it was laid before the members "with surroundings which on every side denote the continued prosperity of the Association. On one point only—the number of peals rung—has there been any retrogression." Satisfaction is expressed at the formation of the Central Council of Church Bell Ringers, which, it is pleased to note, "seeks to maintain the position of ringers as a branch of church work; this, of course, side by side with its scientific aspect." The total number of members last year was 661, made up of twenty-six honorary and 635 ringing members, of which latter sixty-three were on the non-resident lists. During the year two honorary and sixty-six ringing members have been elected, but on the other hand, one honorary and nine ringing members have been lost by death, while sixteen other names have been erased for non-payment of subscriptions (some of which, it has been ascertained are dead or left the country). The Association now numbers twenty-seven honorary and 677 ringing members (of whom seventy are non-resident) making a total of 704. The number of members that have qualified themselves for life membership now reaches 226, and the report expresses its gratification "that the building up for the Association on a solid financial basis, together with the constant and uniform gain of new members, points to the fact that bankruptcy is not likely to overtake the society, and, as a consequence, that life membership is not in danger of becoming an empty term." The balance sheet disclosed that on capital account the Association had invested in Leeds Corporation Stock £100, and in the Leeds Provincial Building Society £91 11s. 5d., making a total of £191 11s. 5d. On yearly account, £28 13s. 6d. had been received in subscriptions, and £6 11s. 7d. in interest and other items (including £2 10s. 3d. from the previous year); while the total expenses were £25 11s. 5d.

Mr. James Highfield (Hull, one of the auditors) proposed, and Mr. C. Jackson (Hull) seconded the adoption of the report and balance sheet, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. Arthur Brearley (Sheffield) proposed, and Mr. Frank Willey (Sheffield) seconded, a cordial vote of thanks to the officers for past services, and to the auditors and the representatives to the Central Council, which was carried with applause.

Mr. Highfield then handed in the returning officer's report of the voting for headquarters, which stated that 294 voting papers had been received. Of these 166 were for Bradford, and 121 for Wakefield, and seven were rejected on account of their being unsigned; the voting thus resulting in a majority of forty-five for Bradford.

The officers' roll call being read over, all but two were found to be present. The president then asked for invitations for the place of holding the February meeting, but none being forthcoming, the selection was left in the hands of the Committee, as per rule.

Mr. W. H. Howard (York) proposed, and Mr. Thomas Clark (Ripon) seconded, a hearty vote of thanks to the Rev. Canon McCormick, D.D. of Holy Trinity, the Rev. D. K. Moore, M.A., of St. James', for the use of their bells during the day: to the Vicar of St. James' for the use of the Schools, and the arrangements for service in church, to the Rev. H. G. Kenrick, M.A., for his excellent sermon; the wardens of the two churches for their generous provision for the members' comfort; and likewise to the organist and choir of St. James' for their valuable services in connection with the annual service. This was carried with loud applause.

The Rev. D. K. Moore, replying to the vote, said it was a pleasure to him to be of service to such a body as the Yorkshire Association of Change-Ringers. The association, he said, was doing a good work in the church, and thus it had his warmest wishes for its success. He warmly commended the words spoken by the preacher with reference to striving to keep both time and tune in their endeavours for good. He hoped to see the day when every ringer would be not only an attendant at the church services, but a communicant also; and after indulging in a humorous account of his first experiences as a bell-ringer, concluded by heartily thanking the members for their good wishes.

Mr. Snowdon read a letter from the Rev. Canon McCormick, apologising for his absence. The Vicar of Holy Trinity had had a most fatiguing time as secretary to the Church Congress, and was taking a little rest after his labours: which fact evoked many expressions of sympathy and approval from those present. He had also to apologise for the absence of the Rev. H. J. Kenrick, who had been compelled to leave soon after tea.

Mr. Thomas Stead (Huddersfield), moved the following resolution, of which notice had been given, to the effect—

"That it be an instruction to the Committee of the Yorkshire Association of Change Ringers to form some plan by which prizes can be given for the best quantity of changes—say 1000—at the Annual Meeting of the Yorkshire Association; its object being to encourage true change-ringing."

In doing so, Mr. Stead said that he would make no apology for bringing this motion before the meeting, because his whole and sole purpose was that of raising ringing to a higher standard of excellence than it was at present. When the Yorkshire Association first came into existence, he considered that ringing was at its height. Then the late Mr. Jasper Snowdon went in for 5000 ringing, which had a long spell of prosperity, but that had now gone down. The Yorkshire Association was very low in the number of peals during this year, and he thought the best way they could do to bring them back to the front was by encouraging prize-ringing. He contended that a prize-ringing meeting could be conducted as well and as satisfactorily as any other meeting of the Association, and by this means they would make themselves more efficient than could possibly be done otherwise. Instancing the case of the United Counties' Association, he said they gave annually two cups—one for six and one for eight bell-ringing, and argued that their meeting, for these contests were conducted in a very creditable manner, without the disagreeable features which sometimes characterised the old prize-rings. He did not advocate the adoption of the old plan of offering money prizes at these contests, but failed to see what objection there would be to the offering of two cups annually—like as was done by the United Counties' Association, and was certain that the highly respectable character of their meetings would not be diminished thereby. As to the matter of expense, he considered that if the provision for tea was done away with, there would not be as much cost even as at present. He maintained that in bringing this motion forward he was doing his duty, as the question involved was of great importance, and assured them that his sole desire was to improve ringing in the association.

Mr. James Barraclough (Huddersfield) seconded.

Mr. Snowdon (president) then moved:—

"That as the Yorkshire Association of Change-Ringers has—and that to a great extent by the uniform and consistent official conduct of its officers and committee—brought itself to be looked on as a model, the committee be asked under no circumstances to encourage anything that would tend to alienate the clergy or their wardens from the Association, or do anything that would stop the kindly welcomes which at times it is in the habit of receiving."

While giving Mr. Stead every credit for good intentions, he protested against such a proposal being thrust upon the Committee. Every officer was doing his very best for the Association, and to saddle them with an extra duty—one which possessed so many objectionable features—was scarcely reasonable. Mr. Stead based his arguments upon the assumption that ringing had degenerated of late years. This he (Mr. Snowdon) denied. And further than this he contended that while ringing was keeping well up to the old standard, their position as ringers had greatly improved; they were more friendly with clergy, wardens, and churchpeople, and more respected in the Church and country altogether than they were twenty years ago, when prize-rings were of frequent occurrence. Great alteration for good had taken place during that period, and the county associations had very materially helped on that improvement. But how would it be were they to adopt Mr. Stead's motion? Not only would they be retrograding a quarter of a century, but they would lose that support from the clergy and church officials which they had been years in gaining. Had their meeting that day included such a ringing match as was proposed, they would not have been allowed the use of Holy Trinity and St. James's bells, the church for service, nor the school for the meeting. It was their proud boast that never in the history of the Association had they been refused the use of church bells and schools; but were they to adopt this proposed plan, all that would be altered, for there could be no mistake about it that the general spirit of churchpeople was at the present time strongly against these ringing matches on the bells, which were placed in their towers for the specific purpose of being rung for the offices of the Church. Individual members of the Association might, if they chose, get up or attend these ringing contests; there was nothing, so far as their membership was concerned, to prevent them, but for the Association to take this up officially, and to relinquish its position of neutrality would, he urged, be committing a great if not indeed a fatal mistake.

Mr. Thomas Clark (Ripon) seconded; and on being put to the meeting, six hands only were held up for Mr. Stead's motion, the majority against being simply overwhelming, and the president's motion was then carried unanimously.

The Chairman brought up the subject of the Central Council, and called upon the two delegates who attended the preliminary meeting last Easter to give their opinions on the project.

Mr. C. H. Hattersley said that from his experience so far, he was of opinion that the Council was not merely desirable, but absolutely necessary for the benefit of the Exercise at large. As it was desirable to form our local companies into one county association, so it was equally desirable that those county associations should have a joint representative body such as the Central Council to adjust matters when required, and which would not only bind all more closely together, but should occasion require it, be a tower of strength to us, such as we should not otherwise have the benefit of. Regarding the preliminary meeting last Easter, he was perfectly satisfied with what was done in the main, with the exception of the rejecting of proxy voting. On all other matters he was satisfied with the decisions there given, and thought the Council deserving of all support.

Mr. B. T. Copley (Hon. Sec.) corroborated the previous speaker's remarks with reference to the usefulness and desirability of having the Central Council firmly established. He also was not satisfied with the striking out of the proposed rule establishing the principles of proxy voting under certain conditions. After reading the rejected rule, he said that such a reasonable regulation he had never imagined would have been objected to, but to his surprise, when they were met together, notice was soon given of an intention to move its rejection on the ground that it might encourage touting for votes. And even supposing it did—what then? Was it not better for any society when questions which arose within it were thrashed out properly and with animation; when members would go to the trouble of endeavouring to convince others to support what they believed would be for the benefit of the society—rather than be insipid, callous, or leave the business to be done by anybody who was willing to undertake it? He contended that neither the Yorkshire nor any other Association would go on year after year paying away pounds of their members' money to defray the expense of sending delegates. When Associations paid the annual subscriptions for their full quota of delegates, they had a right to that proportional share of the votes, and not be disfranchised should some of them be unable to attend. He felt strongly on this matter—because he was anxious for the future of the Central Council; so just to see how far he was in accord with the members in this matter, he moved—"That the Yorkshire Association considers it highly expedient for the success of the Central Council that the system of proxy voting as expressed in the rejected rule XIII. should be carried out."

Mr. C. H. Hattersley seconded the motion, and on its being put, the manner in which it was unanimously carried left no possible doubt on the matter.

Mr. Abbshaw (Rothwell) proposed, and Mr. Hoyes (Lincoln) seconded a cordial vote to the Hull branch for their generous arrangements, as well as to the ladies who had assisted at tea. This was carried amid great cheering, which was renewed as Mr. Stickney rose to reply, which he did briefly.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman was carried with a general cheer all round, and the fifteenth annual meeting was then declared at an end.

The evening had by this time drawn on, so that there was little time aught else but friendly enquiries about absent friends, hand-shakings and warm good-byes before the numerous trains commenced retracing their various ways with their loads of "suffering humanity:" and thus terminated one of the most pleasant, satisfactory, and successful annual meetings ever held by this Association.

[Our correspondent desires to add that he is under great obligations to Mr. William Titterton, who kindly put off an important engagement in order to visit Hull, and take down the copious short-hand notes from which this report is in a great measure obtained.]

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

RE-ISSUE OF

STEDMAN'S TINTINNALOGIA.

Of this curious work, by the immortal FABIAN STEDMAN, but one copy is supposed to be in existence. This copy is the property of the Rev. W. C. LUKIS, Vicar of Wath, Yorkshire, who has kindly entrusted it into the hands of the Editor of this journal for re-publication.

It is proposed to issue the work complete, handsomely bound in cloth, gilt, for One Shilling and Sixpence per copy, post-free; and as only one edition will be printed, orders for copies should at once be sent to the printers, care of Editor of this paper.

As many admirers of the distinguished author have ardently desired to possess a copy of his book, the printers hope that this republication may be taken up by the Exercise generally, and that those gentlemen who can will order more than one copy.

"THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD" will be forwarded post free, on the following terms:—

One copy, 12 months	8s.
" 6 "	4s.
" 3 "	2s.

All Subscriptions and Orders for papers must be sent direct to the Publisher E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, London.

All communications respecting advertisements must be addressed to the office of "THE BELL NEWS," Walthamstow, London.

Everything for insertion in this Journal to be addressed "The Editor of THE BELL NEWS, Walthamstow, London." Letters forwarded for publication, and performances under 5000 changes must reach us not later than Wednesday morning; and the insertion of any communication arriving later than the first Postal delivery on Thursday morning cannot be guaranteed in that week's number. When it is found impossible from want of space to insert all touches forwarded, the earlier ones will have the preference.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1890.

THIS week we are again compelled to postpone our usual comment, which is already in type. The nature of the contents of this number in fact prevents the appearance of several reports, among which are the proceedings at the Annual Meeting of the Lancashire Association, an important meeting of the Bath and Wells Diocesan Association, a variety of miscellaneous touches, correspondence, and other matters. The propriety of publishing an enlarged number next week is under consideration. The editorial of next week will deal with bell concerns in relation with the Herefordshire Guild.

THE HEREFORD DIOCESAN GUILD.

The annual festival of this Guild was held at Hereford on Wednesday, October 1st, when the members visited the city, the towers represented on the occasion being those of Colwall, Eastnor, Cradley, Foy, Coddington, Burwarden, Clun, Bosbury, Withington, Sutton, Woolhope, and Ross.

In the morning the members attended Divine Service at the Cathedral, at which the lessons were read by the Rev. Prebendary Palmer and the Rev. Canon Phillott. The sermon was preached by the Lord Bishop of the diocese from 1 Cor. x. 31—"Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." The right rev. prelate delivered from this text an appropriate sermon in which he pleaded the cause of the Guild, and gave to the members seasonable admonition and counsel.

In the afternoon the ringers dined together in the College Hall. The Rev. Prebendary Poole presided, and the company included Rev. Canon Musgrave, Rev. Prebendary Palmer, Rev. G. M. Custance (Hon. Sec. of the Guild), Rev. C. T. Wilton, Rev. J. R. G. Taylor, Rev. A. C. Lee, Hon. and Rev. W. Stanhope, Rev. C. Burrough, Rev. M. Hopton, Rev. T. M. Beavan, Rev. H. B. D. Marshall, Mr. W. H. Barneby (vice-chairman), Mr. E. Phillott, Mr. W. Hebb, Mr. T. G. Buchanan, and others. After the repast,

The Chairman proposed "The Health of the Queen," and "The Bishop, and the Dean and Chapter." He said that the company owed their thanks to his lordship for the interest he took in the Guild, and also for the admirable sermon he had preached that day. They were also indebted to the Dean and Chapter for the help they had given to the Guild, and the handsome donation they had made towards its funds, and he thought he might say that anything in reason the Guild requested them to do would be done. The Dean and Chapter were, further, the guardians of one of the best if not the best peal in the diocese, and he hoped those bells would be in future frequently heard to the best advantage.

Canon Musgrave, in responding, said that it had been pointed out that ringers had effected an improvement in their position and standing, and he looked upon the establishment of a Guild in this diocese as a thing which would very much tend to secure that end.

In submitting the toast of "The Chairman," Mr. Barneby said Mr. Poole was well-known to all present as a good landlord and excellent neighbour. For his (Mr. Barneby's) part, he thought Mr. Poole had gone out of his way to show a great deal of kindness towards bellringers. He had not a peal of bells of his own, but that did not prevent him taking an interest in the Guild, and being present that day, for which he was entitled to their thanks. Mr. Poole's presence at that gathering set a good example to the gentlemen of that county who were not yet connected with the Guild, but who in the future would doubtless be able to render useful service to it in a pecuniary way.

The Chairman, in responding, said the interest he took in bells, though very great, was somewhat distant. He heard the bells of his neighbours at Holme Lacy and St. Weonard's, but his bells were silent, and even if they were rung they were down in a valley from which they would not be heard, and if they were not heard it was not encouraging to the ringers. He was glad to be able to do what he could for the Guild, and he would propose the health of the bellringers. After what they had heard that day he need not go into the history of church bells, but probably when an early half-savage obtained an iron pot in which to boil his beef or venison, he might have dropped his hammer upon it, and then discovered the grand potentiality of a perfect peal of bells. That he had no doubt was the origin of bellringing (laughter). There were many reasons why they should take pride in their bells. Bellringing was essentially an English custom, and no foreign country had taken to the custom as England had. Bellringing, he believed, was unknown abroad as we understood it. It was owing to Englishmen's partiality for bellringing that we owed the possession of some of our most beautiful towers and spires. There was no country in the world—and he had seen a good many—in which the towers of the churches were so beautiful as they were in England. Another reason why they should take pride in bellringing was that he believed it was almost the only pursuit in which ladies did not take part—the ladies went to great lengths nowadays but he had not yet heard of a female bellringer (laughter). He condemned the fashion which had prevailed in some parts of the country of building small towers in which proper peals of bells could not be hung, and urged that more use should be made of the bells in parishes which possessed them. They in Herefordshire should be proud of their bells. He concluded by proposing the toast, wishing that the Guild might go on flourishing and increasing.

The Rev. G. M. Custance responded. He said the Guild had been joined by ringers connected with 43 towers, and three others were also about to join them. A greater amount of funds was required if the Guild was to be successful. It was not as though they had great expenses to meet; the greatest was the salary of the instructor, and really without him the Guild must die. As a means of increasing the funds he suggested the payment of a larger subscription by the honorary members, and also a revision of the rates now paid by probationers, and he also asked that the inhabitants of the various parishes should endeavour to take an increased interest in the Guild; offertories might be made on its behalf now and then, and that would considerably help the finances. The Guild would do very well if it only obtained sufficient money to meet the calls made upon it. He then proposed the health of Mr. Barneby, a gentleman who took the greatest interest in ringing, and was not only able to talk about it, but could himself also ring.

Mr. Barneby in responding said he hoped that under judicious management the Guild would, during the next few years, greatly increase in prosperity, and instead of anticipating that it would go down, he looked to a very successful career for it in the future.

The Rev. A. C. Lee proposed "The Health of the Founder of the Guild," the Rev. G. M. Custance. The rev. gentleman acknowledged it, and the proceedings soon afterwards ended.

During the morning the bells of the Cathedral and other churches were rung, and in the afternoon bands of ringers visited several of the churches in the vicinity. In the morning a peal was attempted by a band from Ross, but which came to grief after 2 hrs. ringing.

A VISIT TO DURHAM.

On Sunday, October 5th, by kind invitation of Mr. W. J. Newton, of Durham, Mr. E. Duft and myself paid a visit to the above historic city from Sunderland. On arriving we were met by Mr. Newton and another brother-string, and at once proceeded to St. Oswald's church to ring for morning service, Plain Bob Minor being the method. As this church is in the immediate vicinity of the Cathedral, it is the custom to ring for a short time, and then leave off while the Cathedral bells chime, and start again, ringing for about a quarter of an hour, therefore only short touches can be indulged in. Afterwards several of the ringers kindly gave their time to us, taking us to many places of interest all round the city, nearly every spot having some old legend attached to it. The scenery all around is magnificent.

After being kindly entertained at dinner by Mr. Newton, the beautiful old Cathedral was visited. Then taking a walk on the bridge that crosses the river Wear, we had the pleasure of hearing the bells chiming for service. They are a grand peal, and I should think sound beautiful when rung in changes. After enjoying a very nice tea with Mr. Newton, we again made our way to St. Oswald's tower, when an attempt for 720 Kent Treble Bob Minor was made, but it unfortunately came to grief after ringing about twenty minutes. E. Duft (London), 1; W. H. Craggs, 2; W. G. Newton, 3; J. Willshire (London), 4; C. J. Butterworth (conductor), 5; ———, 6. Another attempt was made, the band as before with the exception of J. E. Avery, 1; and C. Bradford, 6. This was successfully brought round in 25 mins. They are a very nice ring of six, with tenor about 16 cwt.

A very sociable evening was then spent, ringing of course being the principal topic discussed, that and the genial company of brother-strings proving so attractive as to cause us very nearly to lose the last train. We take this opportunity of thanking the gentlemen who so kindly assisted to make the day such an enjoyable one, and also Mr. Newton for his kind hospitality.

LEEDS PARISH CHURCH.

The Leeds Parish Magazine informs us that the belfry of the Parish Church has recently been cleaned and re-decorated, and is now in accordance with the rest of the fabric. The Very Rev. the Dean of Worcester and Mrs. Gott began the reformation by presenting to the ringers for use in the ringing chamber a very pretty and elaborate carpet with crimson felt cover, and this was followed by the ever ready courteous Churchwardens giving instructions for the whole of the interior of the chamber to be thoroughly cleansed and re-decorated, and such articles as were required to be obtained. This was carried out in the following manner:—new oil cloth, green cloth curtain for the doorway, seat cushions with covers, new washing utensils, six-light gas pendant with reflector, painting and colouring the walls, and varnishing the ceiling, seats, and tablets of old ringing records, some of which record performances upon the peal of bells in the old church which was taken down in 1838. After this had been done it was found that a few more things were required to make the work a success, but the ringers felt that they should not trouble the Churchwardens further, but should make an effort to supply their further wants themselves. Mr. Wm. Snowdon at once volunteered to supply a curtain with rods, rings, and brackets for the west window; Mr. Wm. Walker, umbrella stand; Mr. Tom Lockwood, wood for table; Mr. Robt. Binns, making of table; Mr. H. W. Needham, table covers; drawers, locks, knobs, painting, &c., by subscriptions from the remaining members of the company. We must not forget to mention the gift by Miss Nelson of eight beautiful plants for the windows, which are much appreciated, and do much to give the chamber the comfortable appearance which places it second to none. The St. Peter's Society desire through the medium of the Magazine to thank all those who have so generously assisted in the work.

Johnson Memorial Fund.—The amount of the total in our issue of the 11th should have appeared as £22 7s. 6d. instead of £25 7s. 6d.

NORTH MYMMS, HERTS.

On Sunday, October 12th, eight members of the Hatfield (Herts) Society, visited the Parish Church of North Mymms, and (by kind permission), succeeded in ringing on the fine and musical ring of six, three 6-scores of Grand-sire Doubles, each called differently. This ring of bells are beautiful in tone, and were cast by the famous bellfounder of Herts, John Briant. They sadly need rehanging, as the go is very bad. The ringers wish through the medium of "THE BELL NEWS" to thank the authorities for the use of their bells. The following comprised the party; H. Shepherd, J. W. Rumney, J. Shepherd, W. G. Powers, A. Shepherd, H. Tharby, G. Smith, R. Shepherd, J. Greenham.

EARLSHEATON, YORKSHIRE.

HAND-BELL CONTEST.—A change-ringing contest on handbells took place at "Prospect Inn," Earlsheaton, on Saturday, October 4th, before a crowded audience. Six prizes were given for the best two courses of Grandsire Triples and Grandsire Major. Nine bands entered, viz.: Mirfield, Batley Carr, Birstall, Dewsbury, Liversedge jun., Liversedge sen., Brighouse, Bradford and Almondbury. At the conclusion the prizes were awarded as follows: 1st prize, Almondbury; 2nd prize, Birstall; 3rd prize, Dewsbury; 4th prize, Liversedge jun.; 5th prize, Liversedge sen.; 6th prize, Bradford. Also an extra prize was given for the best Minor course on six bells, and was won by Birstall. Messrs. G. Taylor and J. Ruddlesden officiated as judges.

Kent County Association.—Copies of the Annual Report (price 3d.) may be obtained from E. W. CARPENTER, Hon. Sec. Bobbing Vicarage, Sittingbourne.

A Boulogne correspondent telegraphs that the beadle of the church of St. Pierre committed suicide on Monday morning by hanging himself in the church tower.

PETERBOROUGH CATHEDRAL.—This cathedral was re-opened after restoration on last Tuesday, when Bishop Magee preached at noon and Archdeacon Farrar at night. A sum of £20,000 is required to complete the work, but the security of the fabric is now assured.

ST. WERBURGH'S, BRISTOL.

The company of ringers of this church and members of the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association had their annual outing on Monday, September 29th, the places selected being Chepstow and Mathern, Monmouthshire. Starting from Bristol at 10 o'clock the first course attended to after arriving at Chepstow was the supply of the inner man. Then taking a very pleasant walk of about two miles through the fields brought them to the quiet little village of Mathern, where there is a nice peal of six bells lately rehung by Messrs. Taylor and Co. (see "THE BELL NEWS," June 28th, 1890). At the tower they were met by the Rev. Watkin Davies, vicar, who kindly explained many interesting objects in reference to the old historical church, which is dedicated to St. Tewdric, the Saxon martyr, and where he was buried. A portion of the church now standing is supposed to have been built in the year 600. The "go" of the bells is very good. There are two curious epitaphs on tombstones in the churchyard, one to the memory of John Lee, who died at the great age of 103 in the last century, as follows:

"John Lee that good old man is dead and gone,
We shall never see him more;
He used to wear an old drab coat,
All buttoned down before."

The next was as follows:

"She was blessed Haley Saley,
Free from malice void of pride,
So she lived so she died."

After ringing several 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles and some Minor it was high time for a change-course, so they retired to a pleasant cottage where there was a good dinner awaiting them. After doing justice to the good things provided, they enjoyed themselves with the handbells. Then a start was made for Chepstow, and on arriving there they proceeded to the tower where they found the bells deeply muffled out of respect for a departed member of the choir. After ringing for a short time with their Chepstow friends, they had to leave to catch the iron horse for Bristol. The bells go very well, and it is quite a pleasure to ring them. They returned to Bristol about 10 o'clock, after enjoying a very pleasant day's outing. They wish through the medium of this paper to thank the Rev. H. Denning, rector of St. Werburgh, and friends, for their kind assistance, also the Rev. Watkin Davies, vicar of Mathern, and the Rev. E. J. Hensley, vicar of Chepstow, for the use of the bells; also to Mr. J. Morley, leader of the Chepstow band, and Mr. H. Hoskins, of the Mathern band, for their kind attention.

THE CUMBERLANDS AT DENHAM, BUCKS.

On Saturday afternoon, October 4th, the Slough members of the above Society visited Denham, and by kind permission of the Rector rang several touches of Grandsire Triples on the grand old ring of eight which the tower contains, tenor 24½ cwt. Several London friends joined the party at Slough at 2.30 p.m., where a conveyance was in readiness to convey the party to and from Denham. An excellent tea at the "Swan" hotel was thoughtfully prepared for the visitors by the Rector, and an enjoyable evening spent in company with the local ringers, who are now anxious to return the Slough men a visit during the winter. The bells were examined and seen to by Mr. E. Elburn, of Amersham, personally superintended by the Rector, but it is much to be regretted that the tenor is still unpealable. The Rev. C. T. Mayo, Rector of St. Andrew's, Uxbridge, was absent through illness.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

ONE-PART TWIN-BOB COMPOSITION.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

We now come to one-part composition which need only be lightly touched upon, seeing that the manipulation differs in no essential point from that already explained in regard to five, three, and two-part composition. There is also comparatively little general interest attaching to one-part peals, although some of these are decidedly deserving of notice. The one-part table has already been given (A, article VI), and I now present a complete table of the "q" sets applicable thereto. It will not be necessary to tabulate an analysis of a one-part peal, as this would take up valuable space, and the student can readily prick one for himself from the explanations already given.

52. 46	19. 17	50. 59	46. 56

The above table concludes the demonstration of the main principles of twin-bob composition. These may be analysed in various ways, and doubtless each composer prefers his own. Probably the plan I have followed is as simple as any, and certainly the notation by figures in place of course-ends is, more especially in peals in several parts, a great saving of labour. The further consideration of twin-bob construction will be taken up by Mr. Bulwer, who has followed very exhaustively the relations existing between the component portions of the 60 P blocks.

In order to complete my share of these papers it only remains to examine the plan of construction of such of the twin-bob peals in Mr. Snowden's list as have not already been analysed among the examples used in illustration of the foregoing articles. It was stated at the outset that this list would be taken as representative of composition in the method, and although there are interesting and novel peals by the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer, Mr.

Parker, and Mr. Washbrook, I do not intend to make more than a passing reference to one or two of the more prominent of these.

Of peals obtained by means of legitimate bobs and singles only—and I do not propose to consider any others—Mr. Snowden presents but two which can be termed one-part productions. These will be found at pp. 559 and 571 of "THE BELL NEWS" of February 21st and 28th, 1885, respectively. Both contain 59 consecutive courses with bobs only, the remaining course being singled in. The first of these peals is the latter of the two by Lates given on the page first named. Although from its broken nature it can only be classified as a one-part production, in reality it consists of four parts, each of which is subdivided into three, these subdivisions containing five courses each. To join up the four parts, consistently with inserting the singles at the earliest opportunity, various shunts are made, each occasioning a departure from the five-course calling employed. I may remark that the peal is very incorrectly printed, some of the omits and extras being marked in wrong places.

With regard to the second of the peals referred to, which is by Thurstans, this appears to be simply an attempt, as stated by Mr. Snowden, for the whole peal without a single. There is no regularity in the calling sufficient to tempt the endeavour to divide the composition into parts, but a careful inspection rather suggests that the ground work is that of the "Original."

THE ST. SAVIOUR'S SOCIETY, WALTHAMSTOW.

ON Saturday, October 11th, the members of this society, with a few friends, had their annual excursion. The town of Chelmsford was as before selected for the head quarters, and here the company dined in the evening after they had visited the neighbouring churches of Great Baddow, Galleywood, Widford, and Writtle. Mr. Lincoln, of Writtle, who had hitherto made the arrangements for the party, was unfortunately too ill to do so on this occasion, but the visitors found an excellent substitute in the person of Mr. W. Rowland, of Chelmsford, who kindly stayed away from business for the day in order to pilot his friends to their several destinations. At Chelmsford station the party were met by Mr. Rowland with a two-horse break, in which they first proceeded to Great Baddow. Here they were met by Mr. Rowlands' father, a hale old gentleman, who welcomed the party, and whose praises of our contributor who writes under the cognomen of "Joshua" were prominent. One or two touches were rang here, the bells, though having a well-known peculiarity, going well. While ringing was going on here, Mr. C. H. Reeves had found his way to the organ loft, and between the changes was heard the sounds emanating from that instrument, Mr. H. M. Reeves presiding at the bellows. Finishing here, Galleywood was made for, and two touches rang upon that nice peal. Then Widford, where lunch was much enjoyed, and a pull on the handy little eight, meeting with Mr. J. Dains, who had everything in readiness. On starting for Writtle a slight mishap occurred, owing to two of the party hardly taking their seats in time. The Secretary and Treasurer of the Society had hardly got into the break, when owing to a premature order given to the driver, they were shaken off again into the road, and it is regarded as something approaching the miraculous that the society was not deprived for ever of the services of its two most useful officials. However all that was effectively damaged was the rim of the worthy Treasurer's hat, and even this drawback was soon regarded with equanimity as the party proceeded on the way, Writtle being soon afterwards reached, where more ringing was obtained. Thence to Chelmsford, where some ten-bell ringing was engaged in, and a substantial dinner with a modicum of conviviality at "The Dolphin" completed the day. To Mr. Rowland and the friends who met them, and the authorities of the various churches visited, the company return their best thanks. They felt some disappointment in not finding the genial Vicar of Writtle at home, but he would have been with them had his engagements permitted.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday afternoon, October 11th, the annual meeting of the Lancashire Association was held at the Cathedral, Manchester, and was very largely attended by members of the Association from Middleton, Rochdale, Heywood, Bolton, Eccles, Bacup, Ramsbottom, Rawtenstall, Worsley, Walkden, Dalton-in-Furness, Liverpool, Southport, Ashton-under-Lyne, Blackburn, Prestwich, Radcliffe, Accrington, and other places. Permission had been kindly given for the members to ring at the following places; Cathedral (10 bells), St. John's Deansgate (8 bells), Sacred Trinity, Salford (6 bells), and the Manchester Town Hall. Ample advantage was taken of this privilege, and free use was made of the bells. At half-past three a special service was held in the Cathedral, when there was a large attendance of ringers and others. The Rev. Canon Woodhouse, M.A., rector of St. Andrew's, Manchester, was announced to preach the sermon, but owing to his absence through indisposition his place was occupied by the Rev. H. J. Elsee, M.A., curate of St. Andrew's (vice-president of the Association).

On ascending the pulpit the rev. gentleman said: Before I begin my sermon I wish to express the deep regret felt by Canon Woodhouse at his not being able to fulfil his engagement to preach here this afternoon, as he has been taken with a cold which has taken away his voice, and that is the reason why he has not been able to come here this afternoon. However, he has given me the sermon he had prepared for this afternoon, and I am here as his deputy to give you the expressions which he would have uttered had he been able to come.

An excellent discourse was listened to with rapt attention. After the service tea was partaken of in the Cathedral Schools, to which about 150 sat down. The business meeting was subsequently held, the Rev. Charles Lowe, M.A., presiding, who was supported by the Rev. H. J. Elsee, M.A., vice-president, Rev. H. F. Lloyd, M.A., Wigan, Rev. W. D. Heelas, Middleton, Rev. J. A. Winstanley, Precentor of the Cathedral. Letters of apology for non-attendance were received from the Rev. Canon Birley, Rev. H. F. Gore-Booth, and Rev. T. E. Cleworth.

The President, on behalf of the Cathedral authorities gave the members a hearty welcome to Manchester, and expressed the pleasure it gave him to preside over so large a gathering of ringers. He congratulated them on the excellent condition of the Association, which was in a great measure due to the exertions of the secretary, the local branch secretaries, and the members of the committee. For the past four years he had been their President, a position which he felt proud of; he was, however, about to relinquish that office, owing to the fact that he had accepted a preferment from Holy Trinity, Bolton, to that of St. John's, Cheetham. He had dropped from eight bells to one bell; but he had always pleasure in helping forward any good work, and he believed that the work of their Association was very important, and one which deserved the support of the clergy and church officers. During his Vicariate at Holy Trinity, Bolton, which extended over a period of nine years, he and his ringers had ever been on the most courteous and agreeable terms, not even a wrong word had passed between them. He was indeed sorry they had not Canon Woodhouse with them, and he also feelingly alluded to the late Dean Oakley.

The Committee's report and balance-sheet were unanimously adopted, which shewed that they had a total of 577 members. Thirty-one peals of 5000 changes and upwards have been rung in the following methods: Grandsire Triples, 19; Stedman Triples, 2; Bob Major, 3; Kent Treble Bob Major, 3; Double Norwich Court Bob Major, 2; Grandsire Caters, 2.

The Rev. H. J. Elsee, M.A., was unanimously elected President for the next two years. The rev. gentleman thanked the members for the high honour they had conferred on him by electing him to that important office.

Mr. J. Eachus (Manchester) was unanimously elected vice-president for the next twelve months to complete the unexpired term of the Rev. H. J. Elsee.

Messrs. Redford and H. W. Jackson were unanimously re-elected Secretary and Treasurer respectively.

Mr. H. H. Nutter, Rossendale Branch, J. Aspinwall, Liverpool Diocesan Branch, and J. Horrocks, Blackburn Branch, were re-elected members of the committee; Messrs. W. Davies and W. Booth, Liverpool, were re-elected auditors. A long discussion took place as to whether it was advisable to elect four representatives to the ringing council, that being the number they were entitled to: the meeting, however, decided to elect two only, the Rev. H. J. Elsee and Mr. G. Longden being appointed. The President, Mr. H. W. Jackson, and Mr. W. James were elected trustees.

The following rule, proposed by the Committee, was approved of by the meeting after a long debate: "That performing members may become Life Members of the Association on subscribing a total sum of fifteen shillings. This amount may be paid either (a) in a single subscription at the time of election, or (b) in successive annual subscriptions for fourteen years, or (c) in successive annual subscriptions for any number of years less than fourteen, together with the amount needed to complete the fifteen shillings. All such life members shall be entitled to a copy of the report, provided that the funds of the Association will permit; if not a charge of sixpence per copy shall be made." Twelve new members were elected. The members decided to hold the next annual meeting at Liverpool. Votes of thanks to the retiring President, the Cathedral authorities, the Town Hall committee and the clergy for the use of the bells, the Cathedral ringers for providing tea and other necessary arrangements, concluded a very successful meeting.

BATH AND WELLS DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

The first District Meeting of this Association was held at Wraxall, on Saturday, October 11th. The proceedings of the day were opened by a short service, which was conducted by the Rev. H. Vaughan, curate of Wraxall, assisted by the Rev. C. W. H. Griffith, curate of St. Mary's, Bathwick, and Master of the Association. The following towers were represented: St. Andrew's, St. Saviour's, and St. Mary's (Bath), St. Mary's, and St. James's (Taunton), All Saints (Wraxall), and All Saints (Long Ashton). After service a move was made by some of the members to Wraxall church, where the bells were set going to the tune of Grandsire Triples, while the remainder of the party journeyed by break to Backwell and Nailsea, to ring Grandsire Doubles on the peals of six at these places. On the return of the wanderers from Nailsea tea was partaken of at the "Battle Axe," Wraxall, at the conclusion of which attention was turned to business. A meeting was held at which the Master presided, supported by Mr. Rupert Lewis (Hon. Sec.) and Mr. C. E. D. Boutflower, local secretary of the Gloucester and Bristol Association. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the Master addressed the meeting on the objects and aims of the Association. He said that they should all consider their position as Church workers, and remember that as ringers they were also preachers, that when they were ringing they sent out the message of the Gospel by means of the bells, far wider than it was possible for it to be done in any other way. He also referred to the teaching of new members, and hoped that one and all would do their utmost to obtain recruits, and spread the work of the Association far and wide through the diocese.

On the proposition of Mr. H. W. Brown, seconded by Mr. Wyburn, it was decided to hold the next district meeting at Frome. A vote of thanks to the clergy of Wraxall, Backwell, and Nailsea, for the use of their towers, was carried by acclamation on the proposition of Mr. C. E. D. Boutflower. The meeting then terminated with a vote of thanks to the Rev. C. W. H. Griffith for presiding, and to Mr. Rupert Lewis (Hon. Sec.) for the trouble he had taken in carrying out the arrangements of the day. The ringing included the following: a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples, in 46 mins. H. Wyburn, 1; T. Doble, 2; C. Gordon, 3; H. W. Brown, 4; T. Radford, 5; F. Price (conductor), 6; C. Tomkins, 7; W. Colston, 8. A touch of 672 Grandsire Triples. J. Palser, 1; C. Gordon, 2; C. Tomkins, 3; H. W. Brown (conductor), 4; T. Radford, 5; Rev. C. W. H. Griffith, 6; C. E. D. Boutflower, 7; T. Doble, 8. Also six 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles.

We are glad to call attention to a notice which appears on another page relative to the resuscitation of the Oxford University Society. We hope to hear that many members of the old Guild have given their countenance and words of encouragement to those who are striving to revive it.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

The second Quarterly Meeting of the year in connection with this Association was held at Nottingham on Saturday, October 4th, 1890.

The bells of the following churches were kindly placed at the disposal of members from 2.0 p.m., viz.: St. Mary's (ten bells), and All Saints' and St. Mary's (eight bells), touches in various methods being brought round during the afternoon and evening.

The General Meeting took place after tea in the Arboretum refreshment rooms, the president (A. P. Heywood, Esq.) in the chair, and there were also present representatives from Birmingham, Burton-on-Trent, Derby, Duffield, Leicester, Lincoln, Long Eaton, Loughborough, Sandiacre, and Wombourne.

The minutes of the last meeting were confirmed, and three life and four ringing members unanimously elected. The president then delivered his address on the peals accomplished during the past quarter, and specially referred to the progress made by the Nuneaton branch, who scored the first peal of Kent Treble Bob Major a day or two before the meeting.

The next business was the election of members upon the Central Council, and there being only three nominations, viz., the President, Hon. Sec., and Mr. J. W. Taylor, jun., their names were put to the meeting, and those gentlemen were unanimously elected, the Chairman returning thanks on behalf of the delegates for the confidence reposed in them.

There were two places proposed for the next quarterly meeting, viz., Nuneaton and Burton-on-Trent, the former being selected by a large majority.

A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the president for his very great kindness in inviting the members to a garden-party at his residence, Duffield Bank, in acknowledging which he stated that it gave him great pleasure to meet so many of the members on the occasion referred to, and hoped to welcome double the number next year.

Votes of thanks were also passed to the clergy for the use of the bells, and to the Chairman for presiding.

STOKE-ON-TRENT ARCHIDIACONAL ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of this association was held at Cheadle, on Saturday, the 11th inst. Ringers attended from Bucknall, Stoke and Longton. The Rev. Father Morris, pastor of the catholic church, having kindly granted the use of the bells, a start was at once made for a 720 of Grandsire Minor, which was rung in 25 mins. G. Woods, 1; J. E. Wheeldon, 2; J. Warren, 3; W. B. Allison, 4; H. Page, 5; W. Twigg (conductor), 6. Tenor 18 cwt. This is the first 720 on the bells since they were re-hung by Messrs. Blackbourn and Greenleaf. An adjournment was then made for tea, after which a move was made for the tower of the parish church. The bells having been raised, a 360 of Bob Minor was rung. J. Burton, 1; H. Page, 2; S. Burton, 3; W. Twigg, 4; G. Woods, 5; H. Booth (conductor), 6. Tenor 15 cwt. An attempt was made for 720 of Bob Minor. S. Burton, 1; J. Warren, 2; J. E. Wheeldon, 3; J. Shenton, 4; R. Bullock, 5; H. Booth (conductor), 6. Unfortunately when well over the half-way single, a change-course occurred and the 720 came to grief. The Bucknall ringers were accompanied by the Rev. H. B. Tonge, secretary of the association, who evinced a lively interest in the day's ringing. The ringers desire through this medium to express their heartiest thanks to the Rev. Father Morris for so kindly placing the bells at their disposal.

PRESENTATION.

An interesting presentation was made in the belfry of St. Mary's church, Portsea, on Sunday, October 11th, to Mr. Cornish, a member of the guild of ringers, on the occasion of his marriage. The present, which took the form of a mantel time-piece, was handed to the recipient by the Rev. R. C. Harvey, who in a neat speech asked Mr. Cornish to accept it as a small token of the respect and esteem in which he was held by his brother-ringers, at the same time wishing him and his wife many happy years of wedded life.

Mr. Cornish, who was taken wholly by surprise, briefly thanked the members of the Guild.

DEDICATION OF NEW BELLS AT ST. GILES, READING, BERKS.

About six months ago it was announced in "THE BELL NEWS" that the tenor bell in the above-named tower had fallen down through the breaking of one of the gudgeons. Messrs. Blackbourn and Greenleaf, Church Bell Hangers, who were hanging another peal in the neighbourhood, were called in to examine and report upon the condition of the whole peal of six. These were found to be in a very dilapidated state, and required to be rehung, which matter was entrusted to their care. In the meantime Messrs. Newell and Egby waited upon the churchwardens, and impressed upon them the importance of having the peal augmented to eight to complete the octave, and pointed out to them that having a spare bell in the tower which was not used, weighing about 4 cwt, and also having a chance to buy six or seven cwt. of old bell metal at a cheap rate, it would be a good opportunity to let the bellhangers carry out the work. They gave the matter a careful consideration, and falling in with their views, gave the order into the hands of the above firm. The casting of the bells were entrusted to the Whitechapel Bell Foundry, who turned them out of the mould very brilliant in tone and perfect in tune, the splice to the old bells being considered by the ringers all that can be desired, and the "go" of the whole peal is simply splendid, and reflects credit upon Messrs. Blackbourn and Greenleaf. The tenor weighs 15½ cwt., and is in the key of F. The six old bells were cast by Mears and Co. in 1793.

The day appointed for the consecration was Tuesday, October 14th, at 3 o'clock, by the Bishop of Reading, who preached a very able sermon, and afterwards read the consecration service, that generally used on former occasions by the Oxford Diocesan Guild. During the singing of the last hymn a collection was made on behalf of the bell fund. As many old ringing friends came from Marlow, Whitchurch, Sonning, Burghfield, Hagbourne, Caversham, Tilehurst, etc., it was the wish of the local ringers that every one should have a touch. A peal of 5000 was postponed until a future date. The ringing, which commenced directly after the service, was kept up with spirit until 9 p.m., and some excellent ringing was performed, consisting of Bob Major, Grandsire Triples, and Stedman, which consisted of 500's, etc., being conducted by Messrs. Newell, Egby and Reeves. Altogether a most enjoyable day was spent, and one not soon to be forgotten.

LEIGH, SURREY.

On Saturday, October 11th, several ringers met at this parish church to try their skill on the new light ring of six bells cast by Mears and Stainbank, tenor 8 cwt. 2 qrs. The old tower has been taken down, the church lengthened, and a new tower built, the top part of wood with spire. Originally the old tower contained four bells, but they have been in the melting-pot and the six new bells are a beautiful peal. The ringers have to stand on the ground-floor underneath a gallery, which is very low in the front, so low in fact that the ringer of the 4th touched the wood where the rope went through. They require to be rung with a very tight rope, and a long pull to get the rope down through the gallery. The expense of the whole of the work has been defrayed by Mrs. Charrington, of Bury's Court. The ringing performed was a 6-score of Grandsire Doubles, just to feel the bells, then 720 Bob Minor. F. Arnold, 1; F. Bridger, 2; R. Arnold, 3; F. Saunders, 4; W. Burkin, 5; E. Moses (conductor), 6. And 720 Kent Treble Bob. F. Linter, 1; F. Arnold, 2; R. Arnold, 3; W. Burkin, 4; E. Moses, 5; F. Wickens (conductor), 6. Also 720 Oxford Bob. J. Robinson, 1; F. Sanders, 2; W. Burkin, 3; E. Moses, 4; F. Wickens, 5; R. Arnold (conductor), 6. And 720 Grandsire Minor. J. Robinson, 1; F. Linter, 2; R. Arnold, 3; F. Saunders, 4; F. Arnold, 5; W. Burkin (conductor), 6. Each 720 was rung in about 24 mins. Moses and Linter hail from Reigate; Wickens from Charlwood; the brothers Arnold and Bridger from Betchworth; Burkin from Nutfield; Saunders and Robinson from Buckland.

WIDFORD (Essex).—Recently at the parish church 1152 Kent Treble Bob Major. A. Tarbun, 1; J. Dains, 2; A. Shuttleworth, 3; W. Rowland, 4; G. Livermore, 5; A. Edwards, 6; W. J. Piper, 7; W. Lincoln (conductor), 8. G. Livermore hails from Waterford, Ireland.

BATH AND WELLS DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

A service was held at St. James' church, Bath, on Thursday, October 9th, to commemorate the rehanging of the peal of bells. The bells, consisting of a peal of eight, were cast in 1729 by Abraham Rudhall, of Gloucester, the tenor being 18 cwt. in E flat. They have up till recently been hanging in a wooden frame, which has become so dilapidated that rehanging was a matter of absolute necessity. The work was entrusted to Messrs. Warner and Co., of London, who have for the old wooden frame substituted one of iron, and they have also added all the modern improvements and a new floor, the whole costing £185. A start was made in the afternoon for Hollis' five-part peal of Grandsire Triples, but after 3220 changes, a bob was missed and the peal unfortunately came to grief. W. Simmonds, 1; G. Hill, 2; G. Temple, 3; Rev. C. W. H. Griffith, 4; H. Wootton, 5; J. Wootton, 6; H. W. Brown (conductor), 7; N. Wake, 8. Before the service in the evening 518 Grand-Triples was rung. The special service of the Association was read by the vicar, the Rev. P. W. G. Filleul, assisted by the Rev. C. W. H. Griffith. The sermon was preached by the Rev. F. E. Murphy, from 1 Cor. xii. 14. A supper was afterwards given at St. James' Memorial Hall by the vicar, the St. James' society, and Messrs. Warner and Co. The vicar presided, and there were also present the Rev. C. W. H. Griffith (Master of the Association), the Rev. F. E. Murphy and Mr. Rupert Lewis (Hon. Sec.). After supper the vicar said that he should like the members of the Bath Association to feel that they (at St. James') were always glad to see members of the Association in their belfry, but he did not like to see outsiders there. As they were a new company it would be a very great help to them if some of the members would come down and assist them, and he should be very happy to see them there. He further thanked the eight members of the Association who had rung during the afternoon.

Mr. C. Mundy, churchwarden of St. James' parish, having explained the absence of his co-warden, said he thought they might congratulate themselves on having the bells in position once more. They certainly sounded very nicely, and there was another thing for which they could be thankful, that they had been put in place without accident to the workmen. He hoped one and all would enjoy, as far as they could, the music of the bells.

The Rev. C. W. H. Griffith said he did not think that the members of the Association or the public generally understood the working of the new Association yet. It had been found necessary to make an addition to the rules framed at Taunton, for there was no rule making it necessary for anyone to speak for the moral character of a person who presented himself, or even his attainments, and they determined that it should be done as in some other Associations, that a ringer should be vouched for by his own parish clergyman, and should have belonged to a church tower, whether one of the towers under their jurisdiction or not; his capabilities should also be vouched for by a competent change-ringer. That would assist in keeping out any outsiders and give each a definite sphere of work to do as a church worker. They now had printed forms which they sent to the clergy of the parish where a ringer wanted to join, and they were vouched for by him with a special desire on his part that they should join.

Mr. Rupert Lewis said he took a great interest in the Association, and particularly in their Bath members, because he had had a great deal more to do with them than with their new friends in other parts of the county. He did not think their vicar need have any misgivings as to outsiders coming into their towers in Bath. He also spoke of the question of vouchers. In the old Association they had no qualification for some years, because when it was started six or eight years ago, there were only twelve or eighteen ringers in the district, and these only rang for what they could get out of it. The promoters therefore felt that they could not draw a hard line, at any rate to begin with, as to qualifications, there being no change-ringers at all. He said that the representatives of the different companies would receive notices of meetings, and that they would be published in "THE BELL NEWS," and he hoped that no one would feel that he was neglected in any way. The general secretary had a lot to do, and he relied on some help from the local secretaries, and general members of the Association through them. There was very little ringing throughout the county, and they had a lot to do to make the Association a success. One of the objects of the Association would be to go where there was no particularly good ringing, and shew them what good change-ringing should be, and thus produce a spirit of emulation.

Mr. W. Simmons made a few remarks, and the Rev. F. E. Murphy advocated a greater interest being taken in the ringing by the clergy. They were very thankful that Mr. Filleul had been able to work up his parishioners so as to get his bells rehanged, and he hoped that the one other tower—St. Michael's—would also be attended to. If they made the effort they might do it. He congratulated Mr. Filleul on what he had done, and wished him and the ringers every success.

The Vicar said that he should like to ring himself very much, but he was afraid he never should. It required practice, and the ordinary work of the parish took up the whole of his time. He wished all members of the Association there, and those not present, every success in the art of bell-ringing, and above all things, the highest blessing—God's blessing. He hoped that they might feel that they were ringing for the good of God's Church on earth. He considered that ringing was one of the healthiest things for a man's mind as well as for his body.

After further remarks by the Rev. C. W. H. Griffith, and a little handbell ringing had been indulged in, the proceedings terminated.

THE OLD EAST DERBYSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday, October 4th, the above Society held their third quarterly meeting at Norton. With the church being about four miles from a station it was not expected to be a large gathering, but a fine day helped to bring together a good number of ringers from Sheffield, Dronfield, South Anston, Killamarsh, and Eckington. The bells were raised by the local company, and were kept going by mixed bands during the afternoon. The Eckington men arrived about 4.30 and after ringing a twelve-score Mr. J. Allen, the local secretary, informed the members that the Vicar had provided tea for all comers, so a move was made to the mission room, which is only a few yards from the tower, a nice snug room for the young men of the village to spend their winter nights. There is no public house within half a mile of the church. About thirty were seated when the Rev. G. W. Hall arrived, and with a few kind words welcomed the Association to Norton. Having said grace "go" was called. Our correspondent adds: I will now leave it to those who have seen thirty hungry ringers feed what the result was. In thirty minutes after tea it was decided to hold the meeting. The Eckington men made for the tower, and by the appointed time had scored a 720 of Violet. Hancock, 1; Price, 2; James, 3; Norman, 4; Marsden, 5; Lunn, 6. J. Shaw rung the 3rd in the 12-score. On returning to the mission room the Secretary had no trouble in getting the members together.

The President, Mr. G. Marsden, having taken the chair, said that it gave him great pleasure to see so many present, and as the time was limited he would call upon the Secretary to read the minutes. The same having been confirmed it was resolved to hold the next meeting at Staveley, on Saturday, December 27th. Mr. T. Allen, vice-president, then proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the Vicar for his liberality in entertaining them at tea, which was carried with acclamation.

The rev. gentleman, in reply, said that nothing gave him greater pleasure on a Sabbath morning than the sound of a peal of bells, and hoped that when the time came round the Association would again visit Norton, and concluded by giving those present good advice, interspersed with wit and humour. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting. A mixed company from Dronfield, Killamarsh and Anston attempted a 720 with twenty-one bobs, but it came to grief two minutes from home. The Sheffield company then rung a 720 of Kent. G. Oates, 1; H. Ward, 2; W. Biggin, 3; T. Sarel, 4; J. Dixon, 5; T. Dixon (conductor), 6. One more peep in the mission room, but all was quiet; so making my way along the dark road I arrived at the "Bagshot Arms," and following the sound of the handbells found the lost sheep ringing Treble Bob, and with songs, etc., the evening's proceedings terminated with tunes on the handbells by the Norton and Sheffield men. SALE OF CHURCH PROPERTY.

Recently, before a large attendance, including several Clergymen of the Church of England, at the City of London Auction Mart, in Tokenhouse-yard, Mr. D. Watney (Messrs. Daniel Watney and Sons, of Poultry) had the opportunity, seldom falling to the lot of auctioneers, of submitting for public competition an ancient Cistercian abbey in Kent, and a comparatively modern advowson in Buckinghamshire. The latter property, which was offered for sale first was described as the Rectory of Hardmead, a short distance from Newport Pagnell, in the diocese of Oxford, with the very small population of 93 souls all told, and an income of about £179 per annum. The duties were light, and the age of the present incumbent 64 years, but no offer was made for the advowson of and the right of next and perpetual presentation to the rectory and benefice of Hardmead, and the lot was accordingly withdrawn in the interest of the vendors. For the Boxley Abbey estate, which was next brought under the hammer, and put up for sale in lots, the competition was keen and spirited. The first lot comprised the remains of the old Cistercian Abbey of Boxley (one of the earliest foundations of that ancient religious order in England, and in its ruins still an object of interest to the historian, the antiquary, and the archæologist), and 398 acres of rich land, modernly-built house, gardens, etc., situated on the main road from Maidstone to Chatham and Rochester. The maximum sum bid for the abbey and its grounds was £15,450, and at that figure it was sold, the auctioneer declaring it was fully worth £20,000.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1890.

THE previous number of this paper contained an account of the proceedings at the Annual Festival of the Hereford Diocesan Guild. Of this Guild the Vicar of Colwall, Herefordshire (REV. G. M. CUSTANCE) is Honorary Secretary, whose courage in adhering to the fortunes of what has always appeared to be a body struggling for bare existence, is highly to be praised. In a speech made by him on the occasion he is reported to have said that a greater amount of funds was required if the Guild was to be successful. As a means to this end he advocated a larger subscription than that at present, by those who were honorary members; and stated also that the Guild would get along very well if only sufficient money could be had to meet the calls made from time to time upon its finances. That such temperate advocacy would be met in a liberal spirit, no one could doubt. In fact the report teems with remarks calculated to encourage every ringer within the diocese. For instance, the Chairman—Prebendary POOLE—stated that the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral would do anything in reason that they were requested to do; and as that body were the guardians of one of the best rings of bells in the diocese, he hoped those bells would in future be frequently heard to the best advantage. Such an hope we fervently pray may be realised without loss of time. But let us see what chance there exists of its fruition.

The ring of bells under the guardianship of the Dean and Chapter is a peal of ten, tenor of 41 cwt., and the bells are said by many to be very good indeed, both as regards tone and tune. Some years ago money was spent in re-hanging, but ringing them is anything but satisfactory. The apartment for that purpose is very badly lighted and ventilated, the beams overhead being only 6 feet from the floor. The noise, too, is deafening. There are a great many large beams of timber, precluding the ringers from a view of each other while ringing. This chamber has been described as "a den," and "a slaughter-house." Various suggestions have been made to improve it and do away with its most objectionable features, but without effect; and it seems more than probable, unfortunately, that this grand peal of ten, said to be the only one of that number within the diocese of Hereford, will remain surrounded by these difficulties. We suppose there is no member of the Chapter who has spirit enough to emulate a former Minor Canon of the sister city of Worcester, in heading a crusade against the existing state of things. Then how can any one be sanguine in the hope for betterment?

A writer, who is somewhat extravagant in his language, perhaps, says that Hereford is the most "disreputable" city in Britain for its neglected bells and disgraceful belfries. At All Saints' Church there is a ring of eight, where for twenty years the tenor has been cracked. "The whole city," says this writer, "so far as bells are concerned, is just a century behind the age, and the apathy displayed in ringing matters by the clergy and inhabitants generally is the cause of delay in the work of reparation and improvement. The latter grumble about the noise of ringing sometimes, and write to the local papers to condemn it, but they will not put their hands into their pockets for the adoption of measures whereby such inconveniences may be greatly lessened, if not done away with altogether." We have seen specimens of these letters which have been sent to the local press, and they not only deal with the noise of bellringing at Hereford but with other things as well. One in particular is worthy of notice, because it is from a Prebendary of the Cathedral. This gentleman says:—

"I do not find that the Guild impresses on its members the first of their duties. In the circular letter by the Secretary these words are used—'To teach them (the ringers) the real art of change-ringing, and thus, while improving them morally, etc.' I fail to see that moral improvement is promoted by the ringing of church bells apart from their connection with the service and worship of God. Ringers who can report themselves as having rung a peal of Grandsire Triples in three hours and fourteen minutes, or who have stood to their bells for nine consecutive hours, may justly feel proud of their achievements. I fully enter into their feelings. No doubt those teams are composed of stalwart, athletic, Englishmen, but such is not the chief, or primary, use of church bells. If the Guild requires of its members that they use the church bells on Sundays for church services, it may expect more support from clergy and laity. Unless it does so, and directs its instructor accordingly, it will fail, I think, to receive, or to deserve, encouragement."

With all deference to the rev. gentleman we think that such an attitude is the wrong one to take up. If he or any of his clerical brethren anxiously desire that their Diocesan Guild of ringers should flourish, we would counsel them first to assist in providing the means to enable it so to do. Then that position being reached, they can with propriety urge upon its members the duty they owe to the Guild, and also to the Church of which they are officers.

It is to be feared that the grand ring of bells at Hereford Cathedral, and their surroundings, will be left as they are. Yet there ought to be no great difficulty in carrying to success a movement which should make that Cathedral a splendid head-quarters for ringing for the diocese. Change-ringing should certainly flourish in a cathedral city if anywhere. Is there not one good staunch churchman to be found in the county who will initiate a movement having for its object the restoration of this grand peal, and the provision of suitable accessories? And cannot the Dean and Chapter of Windsor, who are patrons of the benefice of All Saints' in the same city, be moved to restore the twenty years' fractured tenor in the steeple of that church? These are matters worthy of the noblest in the whole diocese; works which would yield immense delight and satisfaction to those employed upon them.

BIRMINGHAM AND DISTRICT AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The first quarterly meeting of the above society was held at Birmingham on Saturday, October 18th, and there was a good muster of members present from Moseley, Rowley Regis, West Bromwich, and Birmingham. The minutes of the last meeting being taken as read, Mr. J. THE MIDDLESEX ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday, October 4th, the first Annual General Meeting of this Association was held at Tottenham. The tower of the parish church of All Hallows was thrown open for ringing at 3.0 p.m., and from that hour until 6.0 p.m. touches of Grandsire and Stedman Triples, Kent Treble Bob and Double Norwich Court Bob Major followed each other in quick succession. At 6 p.m. a substantial meat tea was provided at the "Red House Coffee Tavern," to which about twenty-five members sat down; after which the business meeting was held, Mr. T. Card, the Master, occupying the chair. The first business on the agenda paper was the election of officers for the ensuing year. Mr. Card having recently left the county and taken up his abode in Kent, Mr. G. B. Lucas (Tottenham) was unanimously elected to fill his place. Mr. J. Waghorn, jun. (Tottenham) was elected Treasurer in the place of Mr. W. Tubb (Finchley), resigned; and Mr. F. A. Milne (Hadley) was unanimously re-elected to the post of Secretary. Twenty-seven new ringers were subsequently elected. The Secretary then read the report, from which it appeared that eight peals had been rung by members of the Association during the year. A short discussion then issued as the best means of extending the work of the Association, and the matter was eventually referred to the committee for further consideration. The meeting terminated with the usual vote of thanks to the chairman, and an adjournment was then made to the church, where after a short service, with an address by the Vicar (Rev. Prebendary Wilson), in which he touched upon the duties and privileges of bell-ringers as Church workers, several touches of Triples and Major in various methods were rung. At 10.0 p.m. the company dispersed, having spent a very enjoyable afternoon and evening. It is a matter of regret that the Association does not muster a sufficient number of members to entitle it to be represented on the Central Council, but it is hoped that before another year has passed its members will have considerably more than doubled.

RINGERS' OUTING.

On Saturday, October 4th, the ringers of St. Saviour's church Bath, members of the Bath and Wells Diocesan Association, held their first annual outing, Mells and Frome being the places selected for visiting. The company, including a few friends, travelled by break, leaving Bath at about 2 p.m. Arriving at Mells, they alighted at the "Talbot" inn, where tea was provided, after which an inspection of the church was made. Much interest was taken in the tower, in which hangs a very fine toned peal of eight, tenor 28 cwt. After having a good ring, they proceeded to Frome, where they were met by the local company, and conducted to the parish church. Here there is a heavy peal of eight, tenor 36 cwt., and they at once set the bells going to the tune of Bob Triples. After ringing at this church, a light refreshment was partaken of, and the return journey was made at 10 p.m. Handbell ringing was freely indulged in, and songs brought an enjoyable excursion to a termination. Those who engaged in the ringing were: R. Tylee, G. Temple, A. Willcox, C. Bell, H. Mills, J. Fussell, H. Brown, W. Tylee, C. Goodenough, and E. Tovey.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

My DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

XXII.

TWIN-BOB PEALS AND CONCLUSION.

By A. PERCIVAL HEYWOOD.

The only other peal as yet left unconsidered, of those presented in Mr. Snowdon's list which has any claim to recognition, is Thurstans' five-part ("BELL NEWS," p. 307, Jan. 24, 85). At the first glance this seems a somewhat irregular composition, but on closer inspection it proves to be very similar to the newly discovered five-part peal by the same author which was published in these columns a few weeks ago. As given by Mr. Snowdon the peal has the 2nd as the observation bell, and was so arranged to suit a Bristol conductor who was unwilling to ring at the heavy end. I have always suspected that this peal was originally composed with the 7th as the observation in the usual way, for, when transposed back to this bell, the production becomes at once perfectly symmetrical. When I was informed of the existence of an unknown five-part peal by Thurstans, suspicion gave place to conviction, for the two peals are on precisely similar lines. It is probable, however, that the one newly come to light, is, on account of its greater simplicity, the older of the two. These articles do not pretend to enter into history, but I may point out that as in the case of the composers of today five-part peals were the first to be produced, so also the fact that Thurstans composed a five-part before what is known as the "original" is in entire accord with the probabilities of the case. Why the five-part was not at once rung is a matter which remains, and I fear will continue to remain, a mystery.

Of modern peals it is needless here to say much, as they are all constructed upon the principles that have been explained, varying only in the greater or less ingenuity with which their component parts are connected from the typical compositions already analysed. Mr. Washbrook's peal in which there is no four-bob set is a very clever production obtained by splitting up the two main blocks into a number of smaller blocks, the result of avoiding bobs at H; these fragments being then united by a number of singles. Besides the remarkable peal examined in a previous article, Mr. Parker has several of much interest from the equal length of their halves and from the position of the 6, 7s. Of Mr. Bulwer's compositions I need not speak, as he will presently explain his own work.

CONCLUSION.

In concluding this examination of the various ways in which peals of Stedman Triples have been obtained I wish to point out that, while in all probability the simplest and best peals upon the simplest and best plan have been already obtained, there still remains a considerable field for the composer. It is by no means certain that it is essential that the bobs should be called in pairs, for which suggestion the reasons will be found in article VI. It is, however, practically established, although not actually proved, that no bob can be both preceded and followed by two or more plain sixes. This theory is borne out by the fact that in the old peals in which isolated bobs occurred there is no instance of the above law being contravened. Its raison d'être seems to arise from the following considerations. I believe no two six-ends in any peal have four of the bells in the same positions in both. For instance 2314567 and 2513467 cannot co-exist, for here 3, 4, 5 are alone moved. It is clear that an isolated bob would produce such six-ends, unless preceded or followed by another call at an interval not exceeding one plain six, in which latter case one of the three bells concerned in the isolated bob would be caught by the contiguous call and the simple triple shift avoided. That simple triple shifts must not be effected by bobs appears to be due to the fact that the work of the three bells in front is continually producing these, and therefore that the whole of the complementary two-thirds of the triple shifts producible from the 840 six-ends of necessity occur as the second and fourth rows of sixes. Another point in this connection is worth attention, namely that every quick bell that goes in gets out in advance of two bells which were previously coursing before it, thus practically making a bob. The whole subject is one well worth attention, as it would be satisfactory to have a positive proof that a peal containing bobs isolated by more than one plain six is an impossibility, although there is little doubt that such is the case.

The question of obtaining a peal by bobs only stands upon rather a different footing. Here the certainty of its impossibility is absolute, but, owing to the elusive nature of the method, no comprehensive proof has yet been found, although Mr. Thompson is, I believe, prepared to give one in regard to 840 defined six-ends. It is the possible irregularity of six-ends that at present defeats the formulation of a proof which will meet all conceivable eventualities. Without any doubt, however, the mathematical principle involved is the same as that which precludes the extent by bobs only in all other methods. In any extent peal the number of bobs will of necessity be a multiple of 3. For instance it is demonstrable in an extent peal of, say Bob Major, that if a bob H be called, two more Hs must of necessity be somewhere called upon the same three bells. Similarly with every W or M, each of which entails two more calls in the same position on the same bells. If the plain course is taken, we may add two complete courses to it by calling three bobs at H, or at W, or at M. In this way pieces of two courses each may be added to the original course. It is impossible to add an uneven number of courses. The total number obtainable must thus be of necessity uneven. Therefore the limit obtainable must fall short by one course of the extent; for every extent consists of an even number of courses.

There is no reason to suppose that the same law does not hold good in Stedman equally with the plain methods, and the inference is borne out by the fact that the limit obtained in the former method falls short of the extent by one course. Many other arguments can be advanced in support of the contention that the extent in a legitimate method cannot be obtained by bobs, but I am not concerned to say more than that, since we have an absolute proof of the impossibility in regard to Grand-sire and the kindred methods, we may well rest assured that the same is true of Stedman.

One further suggestion I wish to offer in regard to peals of Stedman Triples. There is no valid reason, so far as can be seen, why the 5040 changes should not be got in a seven-part composition with every part called alike and each bell doing similar work. Such a production would be void of any distinctive musical qualities, and the absence of an observation bell would not commend itself to any but the ablest conductors. Still Mr. Thompson's three-part peal of Grand-sire Triples, in which there is no fixed observation, has found admirers, and certainly a seven-part peal would have the merit of novelty, for not only would it consist of a hitherto unattempted number of parts, but must of necessity be constructed on a plan altogether different from that of compositions based on Hudson's 60 P blocks.

In concluding this exposition of the principles underlying the construction of the various classes of peals of Stedman Triples I must gratefully acknowledge the many useful hints I have received, more especially from my co-workers the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer and Mr. Thompson. Some apology is also needed for the length to which my share of these papers have extended. In extenuation I can only plead the desire to embrace, to the best of my power, every issue bearing upon the subject, in order that future students may have ready to hand, as in other standard methods, a key to what has been already accomplished.

NOTE.—In article XIV. the value of Mr. Parker's device of employing singles at 2-9 or 11-14 (i.e. non-pairing singles) to obtain a shunt in a non-shunting block was pointed out. He has since shewn me that a similar result may in certain cases be obtained by the use of singles at 9-11 or 2-14, i.e., pairing singles), a fact of which I was unaware. Mr. Parker has gone so thoroughly into the various ways in which singles may be employed that the publication of a further selection of his peals could not fail to prove instructive in illustration of this part of the subject.

A BUSY AFTERNOON.

A most enjoyable round of visits to the three towers mentioned in this account, terminated successfully on Saturday evening, October 18th. The trip had been on the tapis for considerably over two years, and permission previously obtained from the respective incumbents, four of the band sallied forth from Whitchurch shortly after mid-day, having the assistance of Messrs. Bower (Goring), and Foxell (Reading). By one of our greatest carriers, viz., the G.W.R., the band were enabled to reach Cholsey in good time, set to work, and the result was a first-rate 720 of Bob Minor, the first on the bells. After an inspection of the ring, which are hung in the centre of the floor, with a clear walk of some three feet all round, a second 720 was brought round and a 6-score of Grandsire Doubles completed the ringing here. After a short walk the party soon reached Goring station, from whence across the wide span of bridge over the Thames, the tower steps of Streatley were mounted, and the ring soon the reverse way about. A word of caution being tendered to the ringer of the third by one of the local band—as the stay of that bell was off—a capital start was made, and all were anxious to get a good 720, for, if completed, would prove to be another “first on the bells.” Just as the 720 seemed a certainty, the tenor rope snapped short at the wheel. Nothing daunted, and a firm knot made, a second attempt ended in complete success, much to the delight of all. “Back to Goring” was now the word, and here again a good 720 was completed. Once more taking advantage of the rail the busy ones reached their homes in good time.

CHOLSEY (Berks).—A 720 of Bob Minor taken from the Clavis. E. C. Foxell, 1; J. Bower, 2; W. Lawrence (conductor), 3; C. Pocock, 4; T. Pocock, 5; E. Bushnell, 6. The second 720 was conducted by T. Pocock, the third and treble men only changing ropes.

STREATLEY (Berks).—The 720 was conducted by W. Lawrence, the band being stationed as above.

GORING (Oxon).—A 720. J. Nicholls (Pangbourne), 1; J. Bower, 2; W. Lawrence, 3; E. C. Foxell, 4; T. Pocock (conductor), 5; E. Bushnell, 6. W. L.

ST. EDMUND'S, NORTHAMPTON.

On Saturday, October 11th, Mr. George Eads, late secretary of the above company, was invited to St. Edmunds, and an attempt was made to ring Holt's ten-part peal, but after ringing 55 mins. it came to grief owing to a mishap. T. Ealey, 1; J. S. White (conductor), 2; E. Huxley, 3; J. George, 4; J. Mackay, 5; A. Stewart, 6; G. Eads, 7; H. Smith, 8. The members then adjourned to the vestry to present Mr. Eads with an album containing the portraits of the clergy, churchwardens, the donor of the bells (Mr. Councillor Tomes), and the members. They were met by the Rev. Canon Hughes, vicar of St. Edmunds, the Rev. A. P. West, Mr. Councillor Tomes, and the churchwardens. The Rev. Canon Hughes made an excellent speech previous to presenting the album.

Mr. Eads responded in thanking all present.

The Rev. A. P. West, Mr. Councillor Tomes, and the churchwardens spoke highly of the character of Mr. Eads.

Mr. J. George also spoke very highly of Mr. Eads, and also of the kindness he receives from the members when in the belfry. Mr. George hails from Rugby.

MELBOURNE, DERBYSHIRE.

ON Saturday, October 18th, six members of the St. Michael's society visited Castle Donington church, where there is a very musical ring of six bells. Starting from Melbourne about 1.30, and after a pleasant walk Castle Donington was reached about 3 o'clock, and after refreshing the inner man a move was made for the church where Mr. Hickinbottom had everything in readiness. A course of Grandsire Triples was rung on the handbells. G. C. Tunnickliff, 1-2; J. W. Warren, 3-4; H. Hollingsworth, 5-6; J. R. Wood, 7-8. The tower bells were then raised and set going to the tune of Grandsire Minor, a 720 being successfully pulled off in 26 mins. F. Hollingsworth, 1; H. Hollingsworth (conductor), 2; J. R. Wood, 3; J. W. Warren, 4; T. Hollingsworth, 5; G. C. Tunnickliff, 6. A 720 of Plain Bob Minor were rung in 28 mins. the band standing in the same order, conducted by G. C. Tunnickliff. Afterwards a move was made to the house of Mr. B. Edge, where a very substantial meal was partaken of. They then went again to the tower, and after another course on the handbells two 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles were rung. F. Hollingsworth, 1; H. Hollingsworth (conductor), 2; J. Clark, 3; G. C. Tunnickliff, 4; J. R. Wood, 5; J. Hough, 6. J. Hough belongs to the Melbourne company, and J. Clark to the local company; the latter only wanting a little more practice with a good band to make a very fair ringer. Time getting late the bells were lowered in peal, and after a pleasant half-hour at host Edge's a move was made to the station, Melbourne being reached about 8 p.m. after a very enjoyable afternoon. The ringers wish through the medium of this paper to thank the vicar for the use of the bells, also to Mr. Hickinbottom for his services.

THE YORKSHIRE ASSOCIATION.—ANNUAL DINNER.

ON Friday, October 24th, the Hull branch of the above Association held their annual dinner at the Alexandra Hotel, Cogan Street, when members and their friends to the number of about thirty sat down to an excellent repast. The chair was taken by Mr. James Dixey, President, and the vice-chair by Mr. Charles Jackson. After justice had been done to the good things provided and the usual loyal toasts duly honoured, courses of Caters, Triples, and tunes were rung upon the handbells, and songs and recitations were given.

During the evening Mr. W. Southwick, in a few chosen words on behalf of the Hull branch presented Mr. J. W. Stickney with a handsome silver Albert and bell in recognition of his services as Hon. Sec., in accepting which Mr. Stickney replied in suitable terms.

Mr. W. T. Verity ably presided at the piano, and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close at 12.45 by singing “Auld Lang Syne.”

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

BLACKBURN BRANCH.—On Saturday, October 25th, a meeting of the above branch was held at the parish church, Church. Representatives were present from Blackburn, Accrington, Church, Burnley, Oswaldtwistle, and Rishton. Mr. J. Walker presided at the meeting which was held at the “Thorn” inn, when it was decided to hold the next meeting at Burnley parish church on November 22nd. Votes of thanks to the rector, wardens and ringers terminated the business of the meeting.

MIDDLETON (near Manchester).—On Tuesday, October 21st, at the parish church, the junior members of the local company rang a 720 of Bob Minor, with the bells deeply muffled, in memory of Mr. Councillor John Barratt, late sidesman of the above church. T. Oldham (conductor), 1; D. Renshaw, 2; W. Schofield, 3; J. Jacques, 4; J. E. Fitton, 5; T. Willins, 6.

DEDICATION OF BELLS AT EASTMEON, HANTS.

Wednesday, October 15th, was a day long to be remembered by the inhabitants of this quiet little village, when the bells of the parish church of All Saints were dedicated and the Harvest Festival held. They were formerly a peal of six, but the fifth and sixth have been badly cracked for a number of years. These have been recast and two new trebles added: the whole peal having been hung in a new frame and on a new floor several feet below where the bells originally hung, by Messrs. Taylor of Loughborough. The whole work has given the greatest satisfaction, and the "go" of the bells is excellent. Mr. Forbes of Bierleigh House, Eastmeon, is the generous donor of the bells.

During the service a few rounds were struck by members of the Winchester Diocesan Guild; this was the first time the parishioners heard the eight bells. After the service a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples (1260 changes) in 45 mins. J. Staples, 1; H. Sutton, 2; J. Paice, 3; E. Parsons, 4; A. Barker, 5; W. Hasted, 6; G. Williams (conductor), 7; J. Baker, 8. Tenor 19 cwt. 0 qrs. 18 lbs. in F. Composed by the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS," and contains the twenty-four 6-7's all the right way. The bells were then lowered in peal, after which a hot supper was partaken of at the "George" inn, kindly provided by the vicar. J. Staples hails from Havant; G. Williams from Brighton; the rest from Privett.

THE KENT COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

ROCHESTER DISTRICT.—A meeting was held at St. George's church, Gravesend, on Saturday, October 25th, and was attended by thirty-five members from Gravesend, Crayford, Swanscombe, Sittingbourne, Rochester, Woolwich, Erith, and Gillingham. The Committee met in the vestry at 4 o'clock, the Rev. E. W. Carpenter in the chair, when Mr. Cooke (Gillingham), was elected secretary of the District, and Mr. Snelling (Sittingbourne) representative on the Central Committee. Twelve new members were admitted. Some good ringing was done in spite of the heavy go of some of the bells, notably a very well-struck touch of Stedman Triples. The other methods practised were Grandsire, Union, and Oxford Bob Triples, and Kent Treble Bob Major.

KNEBWORTH, STEVENAGE, HERTS.

ON Monday, October 20th, Squire Procter, accompanied by Dr. Grayling and his band of change-ringers paid a short visit to the above village to ring the first touch on these bells, which have lately been augmented to six. They rang two 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles and 720 Kent Treble Bob, in all 960 changes. These bells are a capital ring of six, but need re-hanging badly, and guides provided, as at present it is difficult to ring a peal on them owing to length of rope, as they are rung from the floor of the church. Tenor 12 cwt. in F sharp. The Squire and party afterwards visited the Datchworth and Walton towers and rang touches there.

LEEDS AND DISTRICT AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The usual monthly meeting of the above society was held at St. Chad's church, Headingley, on Saturday, October 25th. Members attended from Leeds, Holbeck, Burley, Calverley, Huddersfield, and Headingley, and touches of Oxford and Kent Treble Bob, and Violet Minor, and Kent Treble Bob and Bob Major were rung, the bells being kept going until 9.0 p.m. During the evening the Rev. Mr. Hoyle, the newly-appointed vicar of St. Chad's, visited the belfry for the first time since his appointment, and having been informed as to the objects of the society, expressed himself perfectly in accord with them, and hoped to have the pleasure of meeting the members on other occasions. The handbells were also brought into use at the meeting-house. Two new members were elected at this meeting.

NORTON (Staffordshire).—On Sunday, October 19th, after Divine Service in the evening, being the Harvest Festival, 720 Oxford Treble Bob Minor, in 26 mins. W. Tabernor, 1; J. Wood (conductor), 2; J. Morton, 3; J. Baddeley, 4; J. W. Brough, 5; E. Glover, 6.

FESTIVAL AT PANGBOURNE.

The Bradfield Deanery branch of the Oxford Diocesan Guild held the annual meeting this year at the above village last Saturday, October 25th, fifty-six members and friends attending. Divine Service at the parish church at 3 o'clock commenced proceedings, and was bright and spirited throughout. Hymns 303, 215, and 223 A. & M. were used, and well rendered by the choir. The address by the Rev. F. Robinson, Master of the Guild, was both eloquent and practical, the preacher drawing a comparison between the rules of "methods" and the rules of life, concluding with a sound exhortation to all ringers to attend their church services after the ringing had ceased. Service over, all repaired to the village schools, accompanied by the clergy, where the tables were spread with good things by Mr. Therval, a well-known caterer from the neighbouring town of Reading. These two courses and a few brief speeches completed, a "Minor" band were soon engaged in good earnest in the church tower, the touch being listened to with attention by the clergy present, including the Revs. J. B. Burne and Hewett. The Rev. R. Finch (rector), gave all a cordial welcome, and took as usual great interest in the ringing. The principal touches of the day were a 720 of Bob Minor before the service by C. Gardiner, 1; C. Richardson, 2; W. Lawrence, 3; A. Richardson, 4; T. Pocock, 5; J. Hatto (conductor), 6. Another 720 after service in which the Master took part. T. Pocock, 1; J. Bower, 2; Rev. F. E. Robinson, 3; A. Richardson, 4; J. Hatto, 5; J. Richardson (conductor), 6. And a 360 at Whitchurch by nearly the same band, conducted by W. Lawrence; the Master again taking a rope.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

A DISCLAIMER.

SIR,—As my attention has been called by my friend Mr. H. Bastable to a peal in last week's issue, 5184 of Double Norwich, intimating that he received the same peal from Mr. Johnson several years ago, I therefore give up all claim.
JOHN CARTER.

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR,—Will you kindly permit me through the medium of your paper to ask if any member of the Cuckfield or Chichester branches would oblige me with a copy of the method according to which they ring Grandsire Triples, as I hear it is quite different from the method used here and in other places where they ring in Sussex. I would gladly give a copy of our plan in exchange. W. N. HOLT.

ST. LEONARD'S, SHOREDITCH.

SIR,—Mr. Edridge's letter respecting the above does not deny my assertion and only asks "if I knew the touch to be false why I did not mention it?" He surely heard the conductor shift two bells in the last lead so that the bells should run round, if he did not, he is remarkably deaf, for every one else in the tower heard him. Mr. Edridge will do well before writing to you again to make himself master of the subject, as his remarks respecting in and out of course plainly indicate his ignorance, and also to look up the Plain Bob method before going for another quarter-peal with a working bell.
J. WAGHORN, Jun.

"SPUR PEAL."

SIR,—In a recent number I notice a letter from a correspondent regarding the meaning of a "Spur Peal." In Lincolnshire this peal is sometimes called a "Banns Peal," i.e. a peal rung after Divine Service on Sunday morning, when the banns of an intended marriage are first put up. This ringing is sometimes done after the third publication of the banns, and in some rare cases after all three publications (e.g. as at Altringham, Elsham, Searby, and a few other places in this county. At Barnoldby-le-Beck, Lea, and other places the ringing is called giving the couple their "Spurring" or "Sporrings," from the old Danish word the "Sporge," or "asking." At Denton, Swayfield and North Witham, the ringing is called "Spurs." NORMAN E. SNOW.

OPENING OF THE NEW RING OF EIGHT BELLS AT WELLS, NORFOLK.

It will be in the recollection of many that the fine old church of Wells-next-the-Sea was struck by lightning in the early morning of August 3rd, 1879, during the terrific thunderstorm that raged then over the whole country, and was burnt to the ground. The tower of the church, on that occasion, acted as the chimney of a huge furnace, the flames being sucked up it, and bursting through at the top to the height of 40 or 50 ft. The fine ring of eight bells which hung there, came crashing down one by one as the frame was destroyed, and were themselves partially fused, the metal becoming so mixed with lead from the roofs as to be wholly useless for the purpose of a re-cast. A subscription was at once raised to rebuild the ruined church, and this was effected in three or four years at the cost of about ten thousand pounds. But much still remained to be done to re-furnish the church, when an affluent resident, Hugh Robert Rump, Esq., died, having bequeathed over £2000 for this purpose, among the works thus provided for being the restoration of the south porch, a new organ, a new ring of eight bells, and re-seating the body of the church with carved oak benches. These works have now been completed, and on Wednesday, October 22nd, the new ring was dedicated and opened and the church re-opened after re-seating.

The Rector and churchwardens had issued an invitation to members of the Norwich Diocesan Association, but the geographical position of Wells is such that it is very remote from the chief ringing centres of the Diocese, the consequence being that very few were able to avail themselves of the invitation to take part in the ceremonies of the day. Moreover the railway arrangements in these parts are not made with any reference to the convenience of the public; the ringers, therefore, that did arrive, came too late for the Dedication Service, and consequently no well-struck touch could be had in connection with this, the local ringers being as yet only learners unable to ring rounds, even, decently. The day's observance commenced very properly with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 a.m., which was fairly well attended. This was followed by the Dedication Service at 9.30, the Rector and churchwardens, with the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer, Hon. Sec. of the Diocesan Association, the Rev. E. C. K. Bearcroft, Vicar of Felmingham, the Rev. W. F. G. Sandwich, Rector of Holkham, and one or two others from the congregation, including the Rector's family, ascending the tower to offer the special dedicatory prayers in the bell-chamber. Upon their descent the bells were rung for a minute or two by the local company, assisted by the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer and Captain Moore. Nothing could be done, however, in the way of ringing until the arrival of a further contingent of competent ringers. When these appeared, however, the company was still "one short," as more than half of those whom the train brought in went on to Holkham to try the bells there, thinking that enough would be left to keep the new bells going till their return. This, unfortunately, was not the case, and thus it fell out that the independent action of a few utterly destroyed all chance of decent ringing at Wells, for the rest of the morning. Subsequently, when all had got together, some good touches were rung by mixed bands, the newness of the ropes, and their clumsily thick sallies, with a 66 foot draft, militating sadly against comfort in ringing. A public luncheon was served at 1.30, the inevitable after speeches being agreeably interspersed with tune-ringing on the handbells by Mr. Knights and some of his Norwich company. A special re-opening and dedicatory service was held at 3.30, at which the Hon. Sec. of the Association preached an appropriate sermon, taking for his text eight monosyllables from Nehemiah ix., 5—"Stand up and bless the Lord your God," to represent the eight notes of the new bells. There was also another service in the evening at which the preacher was the Rev. A. Cavell, curate of Hunstanton. The new bells are soft and melodious in tone, they were cast by Messrs. Taylor and Son, of Loughborough, and also hung by that firm in a new frame very effectively constructed of cast iron H frames, with oak ties at top and an oak foundation. On the label of each bell is the inscription "Hugh Robert Rump gave me, 1890;" and on the waist of each a phrase of the following: "To God the Father: God the Son: and God the Spirit: Three in One: Be honour, praise: and Glory given: By all on earth: And all in Heaven." The weights are as follows:—

SUDDEN DEATH IN A BELFRY. AT WEOBLEY, HEREFORDSHIRE.

On Friday evening whilst a number of ringers were engaged in giving a complimentary peal to one of our townsmen, a very sad event occurred to one of their number, named Thomas Scandrett. He had undertaken to raise the heavy tenor bell without assistance, and as it subsequently proved this herculean effort cost him his life. The tenor bell bears this inscription: "Pull me long, pull me straight, for I am 30 hundred weight." He had succeeded in raising the bell, but soon afterwards he suddenly lost consciousness and fell forward on his face. The end of the rope being warped round his left arm, his companions immediately went to his assistance, as it was feared the recoil of the rope would carry him to the ceiling. Immediately he was placed against the wall he expired. He leaves a wife and two young children to mourn his loss. An inquest was held on the body on Monday before Mr. Henry Moore, coroner, and a jury, of whom Mr. Frederick Berry was the foreman. John Probert, one of the ringers, said he was with the deceased in the belfry on Friday night. Scandrett might have been ringing five minutes, when he saw him fall suddenly on to the side of his face. He did not speak afterwards. He had not complained at all previously. The rope turned the deceased over after he had fallen, but the rope did not throw him down. He died almost immediately. It occurred about half-past 8 o'clock p.m. The widow of the deceased was called to identify the body, and said her husband was twenty-nine years of age. Mr. Walker gave medical testimony. He had known the deceased for seven years. He made a post mortem examination of the body, and he found that the deceased suffered from heart disease. All the other organs were healthy. The immediate cause of death was the bursting of a blood vessel on the brain. There were no marks of violence upon the body. The exertion of ringing the bell was too much for his heart. A verdict that deceased died from the bursting of a blood vessel on the brain was returned. —Local Paper.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

MANCHESTER BRANCH.—The usual monthly ringing meeting was held on Saturday, October 18th, at Pendlebury, when members attended from Eccles, Manchester, Rusholme, Swinton, Worsley and Walkden, besides the local company. Ringing in the four standard methods was indulged in during the evening. At the meeting subsequently held in the schoolroom, presided over by Mr. John Eachus, it was decided to hold the next ringing meeting at Walkden (six-bell tower), on Saturday, November 15th. Five new members being added to the list, the meeting was brought to a close with the usual vote of thanks to the vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells and schoolroom, also to Mr. Eachus for presiding, and the local company for having all in readiness.

ST. MARY-LE-TOWER SOCIETY, IPSWICH.

One of the most pleasant and successful outings of this society took place on Saturday, October 18th, till the following Monday, when those members who availed themselves of the opportunity paid a visit to the metropolis for the purpose of ringing (if possible) two peals, of which previous arrangements had been made, viz., one of Treble Bob Maximus at St. Michael's, Cornhill, and one of Double Norwich Court Bob Royal at Fulham. Leaving Ipswich by a fast train (save the mark) at 2.28, which arrived in London one hour late, they hurried along Bishopsgate to St. Michael's, where they met their fellow-townsmen and friend, Mr. Horrex, the obliging steeple-keeper, who piloted them off to tea, which was soon disposed of, and after raising the bells and adjusting the ropes to proper length, etc., a start was made for the peal, which was successfully accomplished in 4 hrs. 1 min. (for particulars see peal columns of last week). After ringing the peal they adjourned to the "Bell" inn and spent the rest of the evening with a good number of their London friends, who congratulated them upon their success. On Sunday morning the first church visited was St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, but disappointment awaited them, as the steeplekeeper did not arrive, therefore they were not able to ring, so they went to the service at St. Michael's, which to country people is a great treat. In the afternoon a journey over the water to St. James', Bermondsey, was taken, which took a great deal longer than expected owing to having a bad pilot. Three methods were rung with Mr. E. Carter, who very kindly invited them to tea, after which they went to St. Mary-le-Bow, Cheapside, and rang upon that celebrated peal, the tenor of which weighs 53 cwt., and is considered one of the best peals in the country. Going back to St. Michael's they rang after the evening service, it being the Harvest Festival. On Monday morning they were astir very early, breakfast being over by 6.45, and arriving at Fulham about 8.45, the bells were raised and prepared for the peal, which was successfully brought round in 3 hrs. 21 mins. This is the first of Royal in this method which has been rung in London since 1804, and no company except the Ipswich society have accomplished a peal since. The rest of the day was very pleasantly spent, and the party returned to Ipswich by the continental express, reaching home about ten, thoroughly satisfied with their successful and pleasant outing. The society takes this opportunity of thanking the various churchwardens and steeplekeepers for the use of the bells.

THE CUMBERLAND ASSOCIATION.

The Second Annual Meeting of the above Association was held at Cockermouth on Saturday, October 25th. Owing to the late arrival of the visitors, very little time was left for ringing, nevertheless, a highly successful meeting was held.

The proceedings commenced at 3.0 p.m. with a service in All Saints' church. Prayers were read by the Rev. T. Knowles of Christ Church, Cockermouth, and the Rev. A. J. Heelis, of Crosthwaite, read the lesson. The vicar of All Saints (the Rev. W. H. Parker), then preached an excellent sermon, basing his remarks upon the last verse of the 150th Psalm: "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord."

The rev. gentleman gave good counsel to his hearers, and urged them all to uphold the dignity of their positions. He considered that bellringers had as equally an important duty to perform as the clergy themselves—it was the ringers' place to call people to the House of God, and the clergy to speak to the people when assembled. He hoped that his hearers would not only ring the congregations to church, but would also attend themselves.

At the conclusion of the service the ringers and friends to the number of about fifty retired to the All Saints' Mission Hall, and partook of an excellent tea, kindly provided by the vicar.

After tea the general business meeting was held, the Rev. A. J. Heelis being in the chair. There were also present the Revs. W. H. Parker, T. Knowles, T. Hackworth (Workington); and ringers from Keswick, Penrith, Workington, Carlisle, etc.

The Hon. Secretary (Mr. L. W. Jennings, Carlisle), presented his annual report, which shewed that the number of members at present enrolled was eighty-seven, as compared with forty-nine at the corresponding period last year. The balance-sheet shewed a balance in hand of £3 12s. 10d. The report and balance-sheet were adopted.

The Secretary suggested that for the purpose of having a better control over the work of the Association, the Association be divided into three districts with assistant secretaries for each district, the headquarters of each district to be Carlisle, Keswick, and Workington, and after a considerable discussion the recommendation was adopted.

It was resolved that the Annual Report, Balance-Sheet and List of Members be printed and sold to members, etc., at a small cost.

The Rev. H. D. Rawnsley, of Crosthwaite, was elected President, and several vice-presidents were also appointed. The Secretary and Treasurer were re-appointed, and eight Honorary members and twenty-one Performing members were elected.

On the motion of the Rev. T. Hackworth it was resolved that the next Annual Meeting be held at Workington.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the Rev. W. H. Parker for his kindness in providing in such a hospitable manner for the ringers, and also to the chairman for his kindness.

The Association which has now been in existence for some two years, is in a very flourishing condition, and bids fair to become a useful and beneficial institution in connection with the belfries in the county.

LOCKERLEY, HAMPSHIRE.

Thursday, October 16th, was a day which will be long remembered by the parishioners of the above place, as on that day a beautiful new church with a fine peal of six bells was consecrated and opened by the Lord Bishop of Guildford. The church, clock, and bells is an entirely free gift to the parish through the munificence of — Dalgety, Esq., of Lockerley Hall. The bells are a very musical ring of six, tenor about 14 cwt., by Taylor and Co., of Loughborough, but unfortunately the ringing-chamber is rather cramped for want of room owing to the clock case and weights being placed in it. The clock is by Gillett and Johnston, of Croydon. Ellacombe chiming apparatus is also fixed to the bells. The Romsey Abbey ringers were engaged to ring for the opening day. The bells were engaged to ring for the opening day. The bells were raised in peal, and were rung in call changes for the services and at intervals during the day, and the striking was very good throughout. By the kindness of the vicar (the Rev. S. F. Bourdillon, who is himself a ringer), the ringers were entertained at the vicarage to luncheon and tea. The following took part in the ringing during the day: Messrs. G. Newman, sen., G. Newman, jun., A. Newman, J. Ellcombe, A. Ellcombe, Saint, R. White, and C. Tribe, all of Romsey; also the Rev. S. F. Bourdillon, H. Rogers and Treis of the local band.

In the evening a pleasant hour was spent with some of the local band with tunes, etc., on the handbells; thus bringing a very pleasant day to a close.

ST. LUKE'S PARISH CHURCH SOCIETY, CANNOCK, STAFFORDSHIRE.

On Monday, October 20th, being the "Wake," the members of the above society rang seven 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles. J. Martin, 1; G. Benton, 2; T. Benton, 3; W. Till, 4; W. Devey (conductor), 5; W. Shaw, 6. Tenor about 14 cwt. in G. This is the first 720 by all except the conductor, and the first 720 on the bells to the present generation's knowledge. As this is the first time you have heard from us, perhaps you will kindly permit us to say that the parish church is situated about two miles from the famous Chase. It is of very ancient date, no doubt originally built for the Roman Catholics. Here prevails the custom of ringing the curfew bell six months in the year at eight o'clock at night. A sum of money was left by a lady that lost her way on the Chase one winter's night, but being directed by the sound of the church bells, she landed safely in the then village of Cannock. Hence the custom to ring the bell six months in the year at eight o'clock at night for ever. We should be very glad to see any Minor ringing brethren at any time.

W. D.

P.S.—I should like to inform the chairman of the Hereford Guild that according to the Birmingham Daily Post, Woolwich claims the honour of having two young lady bellringers.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1890.

THE Yorkshire Association has recently held its annual meeting at the historic town of Hull, a meeting, by the way, of a highly successful character, and which was rendered important by means of the many items of special business which appeared on the agenda paper. First there was the annual election of officers, then the triennial contest for head-quarters, the production of the year's report of working, and other interesting matters. Whatever may be thought of the various decisions arrived at by the assembled members, there is cause for gratification at much of the sound sense manifested by our Yorkshire brethren. The entire and unanimous re-election of their retiring officers, shewing the perfect confidence which is placed in the members in their officials, must be gratifying to those gentlemen, and nerve them to still greater efforts for the good of the Association which has paid them so high a compliment. As to the relative claims of the present head-quarters and those of the new city of Wakefield we cannot help thinking that sentiment would lead a great many to look favourably on the latter. But Bradford would appear to be best situated from many points of view, and the fact that that town was already "in possession" might be considered to have claimed some advantage thereby. Then the financial state of affairs is one of which the members ought to be proud. An Association with nearly £200 to the good is undoubtedly in a most satisfactory position. Of course, there is the fact of its ever increasing number of life members to take into account, but we are pleased to note the confidence with which the report regards this tax on its resources.

Perhaps the item of business at this meeting which was most anxiously looked for was the attempt to introduce the official adoption by this association of the principle of ringing matches. On this point certainly the Association spoke with no uncertain or halting voice, as the insignificant minority of six in a large meeting testifies. Whatever may be considered as the rights or wrongs of the question of prize-ringing contests in the abstract—and we willingly admit that its supporters are actuated by only the best of motives—it is plain that official sanction of it by the Association will never take place. And now that this question has received such a settlement, it is to be hoped that what roughness may have been caused by the partisans on either side may completely die away. The ayes and noes in this discussion will find plenty to do to maintain the prestige of their Association without referring in the least to a well-threshed but obsolete subject.

DEDICATION OF NEW BELLS AT ST. GILES'S, READING.

The ceremony of dedicating two new bells recently hung in the church of St. Giles, Reading, took place on Tuesday afternoon, October 14th. The service commenced with the hymn, "In Sinai's dreary waste." An address was then given by the Bishop of Reading from 1 Timothy iv. 14: "For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused if it be received with thanksgiving. For it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer."

At the conclusion of the sermon, the Bishop, clergy, and choir proceeded to the porch under the belfry, where the dedication service was performed. After the responses the choir chanted psalm cl.: "O praise God in His holiness; praise Him in the firmament of His power." The Bishop then offered up five prayers, and psalm cxii. was chanted: "I was glad when they said unto me, we will go into the house of the Lord." Then a short touch was rung, which was followed by a hymn, and the service was brought to a close by the Bishop pronouncing the blessing.

MIDLAND RAILWAY TRAIN ALTERATIONS.

To operate from November 1st—England and Scotland.—The 9.15 p.m. Express from St. Pancras will be divided at Trent, and expedited to reach Edinburgh 25 minutes earlier, and form a new connection with an Express train to the North, leaving Edinburgh at 7.0 a.m., reaching Dundee at 8.43 and Aberdeen at 11.0 a.m.

The Edinburgh and Glasgow portions will leave Trent at 12.9 and 12.15 a.m. respectively, and the first part will run direct to Carlisle, stopping only at Masboro' to take up passengers from Sheffield (who will leave there at 12.40 a.m.) and at Skipton, and will be due to reach Carlisle at 4.10 a.m. The second portion for Glasgow will run via Sheffield, leaving there at 1.20 a.m., calling at the same stations and at the same times as at present between Sheffield and Carlisle. The 7.50 p.m. Express from St. Pancras to Carlisle and Scotland, and 1.12 a.m. Carlisle to St. Pancras, with connecting trains, will be discontinued.

Alterations will be made in the Scotch Companies' Trains having connection with the Midland. A train will leave Sheffield at 12.40 a.m. daily for Masboro', where passengers for Edinburgh and the North will join the 9.15 p.m. Express from St. Pancras. The 1.45 a.m. train from Leeds, and the 1.52 from Bradford, will start earlier, and passengers for the North British Line will join the London Express at Skipton. The Scotch portion of the 8.0 p.m. Express Bristol to Sheffield train will run direct from Burton to Trent, where it will be due to arrive at 11.53 p.m., and passengers for Carlisle and Scotland will join the 9.15 p.m. from London at Trent instead of at Sheffield. A train will be run from Burton to Derby at 11.22 p.m. for the convenience of passengers from the West, and a train will leave Derby for Trent at 11.45 p.m. to convey passengers to the North to join the down Scotch Express from London, in lieu of the 11.50 p.m. train from Derby to Sheffield. The 1.5 a.m. Liverpool and 1.20 a.m. Manchester to Carlisle and Scotland on Sunday mornings will start at 12.35 and 12.50 a.m. respectively, and run half-an-hour earlier throughout. The 11.53 a.m. Skipton to Morecambe will stop at Bell Busk on Saturdays. The 5.35 p.m. Marple to Guide Bridge will leave at 5.18, and cease to be in connection with the 3.50 p.m. from Derby. Passengers from Derby, Matlock, Buxton, &c. will proceed from Marple at 6.8, reaching Guide Bridge at 6.27. Stalybridge at 7.40, and Oldham at 7.15 p.m. An additional train will be run from Derby to Sheffield on Saturday nights. The 7.0 a.m. Birmingham to Wolverhampton will call at Penns when required to take up passengers for Walsall and Stations beyond. The 8.35 a.m. (Sundays) Gloucester to Bristol will leave at 8.40. The 11.50 a.m. Express Peterboro', G.N., to Lynn will be discontinued. The 3.50 p.m. Spalding to Lynn will run five minutes earlier. The 9.35 a.m. Lynn to Spalding will be 1 minute earlier at Holbeach. The 12.5 p.m. Lynn to Peterboro' will leave at 12.10, South Lynn 12.15, and Terrington at 12.27, taking up its present timing Sutton Bridge to Peterboro'. The 1.5 p.m. Lynn to Spalding will leave at 1.0 p.m., arr. South Lynn 1.4, dep. 1.9, the other times to Spalding being unaltered. This train will also call at Weston when required to take up or set down passengers. The 1.30 Express Lynn to Peterboro', G.N., will be discontinued. The 6.58 p.m. Lynn to Spalding will stop at Clenchwarton when required to take up passengers for Sutton Bridge, also Peterboro' and beyond. This train will also call at Gedney at 7.31, and Fleet at 7.34 p.m. The 5.45 p.m. Lynn to Peterboro' will stop at Thorney when required to take up for South of Peterboro' as well as for Grantham and North thereof. The 6.15 p.m. Nottingham to Derby will call at Beeston regularly. The 7.3 a.m. Bedford to St. Pancras will on and from November 3rd. leave at 7.18. Further particulars and times will be announced in special Time Tables and Bills which will be issued by the Company.

THE HERTFORDSHIRE ASSOCIATION.

A District Meeting of the above Association was held at St. Albans, on Saturday, October 11th, when representatives from London, Hitchin, Hatfield, Aldenham, etc., put in an appearance. Tea was served in the Abbey National Infants' School, by permission of the managers. Nearly thirty sat down, the Ven. Archdeacon Lawrance occupying the chair. There were also present the Revs. P. Deedes and T. T. Blockley (assistant clergy to the Cathedral), and the Rev. W. C. Morgan, St. Peter's. The business meeting followed, but ringers being such practical individuals this did not occupy their time long. The following were elected ringing members; W. H. Buckingham (St. Albans), F. Edwards (Bushey), W. Hewitt, A. Childs, C. Williams, H. Wright, F. Wright and W. Bennet (Aldenham). Mr. C. E. Keyser was elected an honorary member. The next meeting was fixed for Bushey and Oxhey, on the proposition of Mr. H. L. Waddington. Votes of thanks for use of bells concluded the meeting. Ringing commenced at once, bands being made up for both towers. At the Cathedral a 504 of Stedman Triples, a 504 of Grandsire, three courses of Bob Major, and another short Grandsire touch were rung. At St. Peter's, Stedman, Grandsire, and Bob Major were rung, both Caters and Triples.

ASH, NEAR WROTHAM, KENT.

On Sunday, October 19th, five members of the Swanscombe band visited Ash, for the purpose of paying a last token of respect to the late Mr. G. Elcome, the Sexton of this parish, who was buried on the preceding Tuesday. The deceased gentleman, who was very much respected by the inhabitants of the parish, had reached the ripe old age of ninety years, and entered on the duties of clerk and sexton in 1832, holding the post until 1888, during which time he was only absent from his place in church six times, and that through illness. The bells were rung muffled throughout the day, the usual whole pull and stand being rung for morning service, at which the curate-in-charge in his sermon spoke of the lesson the life of the deceased gentleman taught, and urged his hearers to lead such a life and so win the respect and esteem of their fellow-men, and be ready for the call whenever it should come. After service a 720 Plain Bob was attempted but lost in the fifth part. The ringers then returned home, feeling that another one of the links binding the past with the present ringers had been severed. The company from Swanscombe wish, through the medium of this paper, to tender their thanks to the Ash ringers for their kindness to them, and for having everything in readiness.

CHESHAM CHURCH, BUCKS.

The tower of this church has just been enriched by having a new set of Cambridge quarter chimes fitted to the clock, and also a tune-playing carrillon fixed at the same time. John Smith and Sons, Midland Clock Works, Derby, were the makers.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

XXIII.

THE V GROUPS.

BY THE REV. H. EARLE BULWER.

As a supplement to the papers that have already appeared from Mr. Heywood's pen on this subject, I am about to offer to the Exercise the results of my own independent enquiry into the inner working of Hudson's 60 P blocks, and to describe in detail the path which I pursued in the investigation. To do this, it is necessary to go back to the point at which the path I took diverged from that followed by Mr. Heywood. This point was the establishment of the conditions of the "q set" (see Art. No. VII). These conditions being grasped, it at once occurred to us both, that, by giving a distinctive number to each of the P blocks, and working by natural course-ends alone, we could dispense altogether with six-ends, and all other rows of figures, it being only necessary to put down the distinctive number of the P block entered whenever twin bobs occurred, and to observe the conditions of the "q set." An inspection and comparison of the positions occupied by the distinctive numbers would then quickly and effectually determine the truth and completeness of a composition without other proof being needed.

But it seemed to me that a further development of the conditions of the "q set" would facilitate operations still more, and probably enable us not only to work from one general table for all classes of peals, but also to express the course and character of a peal in a more summary manner.

The first step was obviously to gain a thorough knowledge of the P blocks bobbed into from any other blocks in the several calling positions (see table P, Art. XXI.) And here I was at once brought face to face with a remarkable fact, which bade fair to simplify matters with a vengeance. The 60 P blocks, are divisible into 15 groups, each of which can be worked out thoroughly as a four-course block independently of the others. Let us see how this is.

Take P block, No. 1, table A for the experiment, together with those into which it bobs in the three positions, S, L, and Q, and we find that:—

No. 1 will bob at S into No. 60; at L into No. 7; at Q into No. 53.
No. 7 " " " " " 53; " " " " " 1; " " " " " 60
No. 53 " " " " " 7; " " " " " 60; " " " " " 1
No. 60 " " " " " 1; " " " " " 53; " " " " " 7

Here then are these four P blocks, Nos. 1, 7, 53, and 60 working together and into one another in these three positions, and so long as bobs are confined to these positions, there is no escape from this group. Similarly the 56 remaining P blocks may be arranged in 14 other groups, each working in the same way. V being the Roman numeral for five, and the groups being further divisible into three columns of five groups each, I have called them the V groups; and a table of them is here appended, in which a distinctive small letter is attached to each group, the use of which will appear as we go on.

a { 1. 231456 7. 541326 53. 246351 60. 536421	b { 2. 324156 6. 514236 24. 316254 26. 526134	c { 3. 125346 10. 435216 13. 136245 20. 426315

g { 12. 321465 16. 641235 51. 345261 58. 625431	h { 14. 312645 15. 462135 45. 365142 48. 415632	j { 17. 163425 19. 243615 37. 145623 39. 265413
k { 21. 123564 30. 653214 31. 154263 40. 624513	l { 23. 132654 29. 562314 43. 164352 50. 534612	m { 25. 251634 27. 361524 57. 264531 59. 354621

A group may be worked out fully in a variety of ways; and as the courses composing it are in no way opposed to each other at S and L by the conditions of the "q set," they may be said to be in alliance with each other. The Ss of one group, however, will be opposed to the Ls of another, and the Ls to the Ss of a third; so that, although the courses in a given group are in alliance with one another, they are in opposition to the courses contained in certain other groups.

The next step, therefore, is to determine and tabulate these cross-workings. The following table shews in detail the opposition of groups to one another in the positions S and L, with which alone we are now dealing. As it is no longer necessary to use rows of figures to express course-ends, the distinctive numbers only, according to table A, will now be used. It must be remembered that the conditions of the "q set" require that, if the two blocks hyphenated together under one heading are plained, the two under the opposing head must be bobbed; and vice versa; for instance, if 1 and 60 are plained at S, 21 and 30 must be plained at L. In this table when the distinctive numbers have been once given in their proper relation with reference to position, it has not been thought necessary to repeat them.

An examination of these cross-workings will show that certain groups work against each other, under the conditions of the "q set," in the positions S and L; and, further, that such cross-working is by sets of three whole groups, which are entirely independent of, and unaffected by, the action of any of the other groups in those positions. The sets of three groups thus form independent triplets, the cross-workings in each of which it will be convenient to summarise by means of the annexed table. In order to express the three-cornered cross-working of these sets, I have named them the "X" Triplets.

The next thing to be considered will be the action of the P blocks in the remaining positions, H and Q, with reference to each other, and also with respect to the "V" groups.

DURHAM AND NEWCASTLE DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the above was held at Newcastle-on-Tyne on Monday, October 27th. The bells of St. John's, St. George's, and St. Stephen's were placed at the disposal of the ringers during the day. The bells of All Saints are unringable, the fourth bell being minus a wheel, whilst the authorities of the Cathedral contemplate a thorough restoration of their peal. The day's proceedings commenced with an attempt for a peal of Treble Bob Major at St. George's, but fortune did not favour the band, as the attempt was unsuccessful. The Committee met at St. John's vestry, after which a special service was held in St. John's church, which had been kindly arranged by the Rev. J. W. Milner. The Rev. F. J. Milward, curate of Chester-le-Street, preached an appropriate sermon, during which he gave the members some sound advice, and asked them ever to remember that the belfry was part of the church which had been consecrated and set apart for the worship of God. The curate of St. John's also took part in the service. The dinner was held at the "Crown" hotel, Clayton Street, to which sixty sat down and brought up the course-ends in excellent style.

On the removal of the cloth, the President of the Association (Mr. R. S. Story) who occupied the chair, gave the toast of "The Queen," which was well received as true loyal subjects.

The Chairman gave "The Bishops and Clergy of the two Dioceses," coupled with the names of the Rev. T. Archdall, vicar of Tanfield, and the Rev. R. P. Clark, curate of St. John's, Newcastle. The two rev. gentlemen suitably responded to the toast.

The minutes of the last meeting was read and adopted, after which a course of Grandsire Caters was rung on the handbells.

The Hon. Sec. (Mr. L. Newton) now submitted the thirteenth Annual Report of the Association, which showed that some good work was being done in the two dioceses in the way of establishing new branches which was likely to bear fruit during the next year. A new peal of bells has been placed in the parish church at Tanfield, and a band of ringers has been formed who can now ring Bob Doubles, which reflects upon them every credit.

The Report was adopted.

Mr. W. G. Routledge proposed the health of the President, Mr. R. S. Story, which was drank with musical honours.

Mr. Story suitably responded.

The health of the Vice-Presidents (Messrs. F. Lees and T. Clark), and also of the Hon. Sec. (Mr. L. Newton) was proposed. The whole of the officers were re-elected.

The President (Mr. R. S. Story), and the Hon. Sec. (Mr. L. Newton), were elected as representatives on the Central Council. A number of new members were elected, both honorary and performing, amongst the former being the Lord Bishop of Durham and the Rev. T. Hewan Archdall, vicar of Tanfield.

A vote of thanks to the Rev. F. L. Milward for preaching, and also to the different rev. gentlemen for the use of the bells concluded the meeting.

The February meeting will be held at Lanchester, and the Whit-Monday meeting at Bishop Auckland.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

ROCHDALE BRANCH.—A meeting of the above was held at St. Luke's church, Heywood, on Saturday, November 1st. Ringers were present from Rochdale, Bury, Oldham, and Heywood, and several touches of Grandsire Triples were rung. The next meeting is to be held at St. Mark's, Glodwick, on Saturday, December 6th, and it is hoped the members will muster up better than they have done at the last two meetings.

Correspondence.

While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

ST. LEONARD'S, SHOREDITCH.

SIR,—Mr. Waghorn's letter of last week asserts that I have to "make myself master of the subject before writing to you again." I must say where ignorance is bliss it's a folly to be wise, but as to the 1440 of Bob Major being false, I will bear out my statement that it was not, for if it was, the conductor would never have allowed it to have been published, and if Mr. Waghorn was ashamed of seeing his name in print with those who took part in the touch, he need not have been, as some of them were far superior ringers to himself. Perhaps Mr. Waghorn will make himself acquainted with the figures of the above touch and learn them all by heart. I hope Mr. Waghorn will be satisfied with this, as it is a pity he has no more respect for the "THE BELL NEWS" than to defile its pages by starting such hash of correspondence over such a paltry affair as a quarter peal of Bob Major.

E. T. EDRIAGE.

CHELSEA—STEDMAN CATERS.

SIR,—I am requested by several members of the Royal Cumberland Society who rang in this peal to ask your indulgence for correcting and adding one or two items to the report of its performance. The ringing occupied 3 hrs. and 9 mins. and not 3 hrs. and 19 mins. as stated. It is thought to be the first peal in the method on the bells, and was rang to commemorate the anniversary of the foundation of the church upon St. Luke's day, the patron saint. Whilst upon the subject of these Caters it is thought that the idea of going off direct into the sixes from rounds was first published by the late Mr. H. Hubbard about the year 1845, in which book he also gives a touch upon the plan mentioned. In the 1876 edition the same information is given, there is a peal having the sixth fixed in the 2nd place, while he goes off in the old way and has a long final course. It is also thought that Mr. G. Newson was the first to introduce the short coming-home course, so well adapted to this class of composition. If I have stated anything in error, I shall be glad of correction, as the whole facts of the matter are interesting.

H. DAINS.

A DISCLAIMER.

SIR,—I have been informed that the supposed new method, "Darlaston Bob Triples," sent by me to the last number of our paper, is "College Single." I have never yet seen a lead, and am at a loss to know how it is that there is not more peals of the method rung, as it is better than Grandsire. I should like to know what peals of it have been composed before I publish any, as I am taken up with the method. I am of opinion however that calls made when the treble is in front is a defect. I must also apologise for "Forward Bob Triples;" I cannot understand how I missed seeing the method of Court Bob in Shipway while I was looking through that work.

A CORRECTION.—The last peal of Grandsire Triples rang at Tenterden, Kent, a report of which appeared last week (sent without date), was rung on October 27th.

STOCKLEIGH ENGLISH, DEVON.

Thursday, October 30th, was a red-letter day in the annals of this small parish and of its ancient church, said to have been first dedicated to the service of God on July 23rd, A.D. 1231. For many years the tower of the church has been reported by successive rural deans as dangerous, and the bells, owing to their condition and the unsafe state of the timber, have never been heard ringing in peal in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The late rector, the Rev. George Dowty, was able to restore the chancel and nave, with the exception of a south window, which was falling to pieces. What he did was most satisfactory. He had hoped to restore the tower and bells, and had gone so far as to collect a small sum of money for that purpose. Soon after his death a wish was expressed by the parishioners that some memorial should be erected to him. To carry out this desire, the newly appointed rector opened a subscription list, and soon after was able to begin the work needed for the tower, the south window, and the bells. The restoration of the tower and window has been ably carried out by Messrs. Luscombe and Son, Exeter. Two of the bells which were cracked have been recast, and all of them rehung in entirely new timber by Mr. Harry Stokes, Woodbury. [The above work is much approved of. For the opening day the church was most artistically adorned by Mrs. and the Misses Greenale. Gifts of flowers were made by friends and neighbours; and numerous crosses and wreaths were sent to be laid on the grave of the late rector. The service began at 11 a.m. by the singing of a processional hymn. The surpliced clergy were the rector, the Rev. F. J. Coleridge (rural dean of Cadbury), the Revs. W. H. Arundell (rector of Cheriton Fitzpaine), H. A. Slack (rector of Woolsery), W. Gurney (rector of Poughill), G. T. Llewellyn (vicar of Sandford). The lessons were read by the Revs. H. A. Slack and W. H. Arundell. After the third collect the clergy proceeded to the tower, and the dedication service was read by the rural dean. During the service a short touch was rung on the bells by the Cheriton Fitzpaine ringers. Then followed the singing of a special hymn, and the clergy returned to their places in the chancel. The sermon, which was most appropriate, impressive, and instructive, was preached by the rural dean from Ezra v., 11. The service closed with an offertory on behalf of the restoration fund, which still needs help. Afterwards the rector entertained a large party at lunch. Among the invited guests were the following: Rev. F. J. and Mrs. Coleridge, the Rev. W. H. and Mrs. Arundell, and Miss Arundell, the Rev. H. A., Mrs., and Miss Slack, the Rev. W. and Mrs. Gurney, the Rev. G. T. and Mrs. Llewellyn, Mrs. Cruwys, Mrs. Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Fenton, Miss Maundril, and Mr. H. Swete-Archer, of Bishop Hall, Taunton. Later in the day a tea for the parishioners and others was provided by the rector. The bells were rung by various ringers during the day, and all of them spoke favourably of their tone and finish.]

THE LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN GUILD.

On Saturday, November 1st, the quarterly meeting of this Guild was held at Croston, and was well attended by members from the following places: Aughton, Crossens, Ormskirk, Southport, also the local company. Ringing commenced shortly after 3 o'clock, and several touches of Grandsire Triples were rung by the various mixed companies. At 5.30 p.m. the ringers sat down to an excellent meat tea provided by the local ringers at the "Grapes" hotel, and to which ample justice was done. The business meeting was afterwards held at which the Rev. J. Oliver presided, supported by the Rev. W. T. Bulpit, and in a neat and forcible speech gave the ringers a hearty welcome to Croston. The Rev. W. T. Bulpit afterwards addressed the ringers at some length, and several items of interest were discussed by the ringers present. One honorary and five performing members were elected, after which a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding and to the rector for the use of the bells and to the local ringers for providing so excellent a tea brought a very pleasant to a close.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

DEDICATION OF A NEW PEAL OF BELLS AT ASSINGTON, SUFFOLK.

Thursday, September 30th, was the day appointed for the dedication of the new peal of six bells at the church of St. Edmund. A band of ringers from Sudbury was engaged to open them. The dedication service was held in the belfry at 4 p.m., when the vicar (the Rev. J. W. D. Brown) and the churchwardens, choristers, and ringers were all assembled together. The vicar opened the proceedings by giving a brief outline as to the manner in which the money was gathered and expended, and concluded by reminding those assembled that the bells were placed in God's House to be used for the praise and glory of Him, and to call worshippers together to His House. A special hymn was then sung and suitable prayers were offered, the service lasting about a quarter of an hour. The ropes were then given up to the ringers, and 180 Plain Bob Minor was rung by C. Sillitoe, 1; A. Scott, 2; G. Brown, 3; J. Campin, 4; W. Howell, 5; H. Harper, 6. The vicar, churchwardens, choristers, and parishioners then left the tower, and a 720 of Bob Minor was rung by C. Sillitoe, 1; A. Scott, 2; G. Brown, 3; J. Campin, 4; W. Howell, 5; H. Harper, 6. Conducted by C. Sillitoe. The bells were kept going at intervals afterwards, Mr. J. Hume, of Bures, and Mr. W. Taylor, of Cornard taking part. The Harvest Thanksgiving service was held in the evening, and a touch of Kent Treble Bob was rung for service, and a touch of Treble Bob and Bob Minor after the service by J. Campin, 1; W. B. Ransom, Esq., 2; M. Silvester, 3; A. Scott, 4; C. Sillitoe (conductor), 5; H. Harper, 6. The ringers were kindly entertained by the vicar to tea and supper at the vicarage. The bells are a first-class peal and the "go" of them is all that can be desired, and great credit is due to Messrs. Warner and Sons for the capital job they have made. The weight of the tenor is 10½ cwt. in G.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN BRANCH.—The usual monthly meeting was held at the parish church, Wigan, on Saturday, November 1st. About twenty ringers attended from Bolton, Garston, and Southport, including a few of the local company. The municipal elections taking place there and other towns in the diocese accounts for the small attendance. In the absence of the Rector, the Rev. H. F. Lloyd, M.A., the Curate presided at the meeting in the Cocoa Room, and in a neat speech gave the Association a very hearty welcome.

Mr. Hill (Secretary) addressed the meeting, stated that on perusing his books he found that about fifty new ringing members had been enrolled—three life members and several honorary ones during the last nine months, which was very satisfactory. Four new ringing members were enrolled. Mr. Redford, county sec., in a brief speech, quite endorsed Mr. Hill's remarks, and felt sure the Branch under his exertions would go on progressing. He concluded by proposing a vote of thanks to Canon Bridgeman and the churchwardens for the use of the bells; Mr. Halliwell, steeplekeeper, and the Rev. H. F. Lloyd for presiding. Several good touches of Grandsire Triples were rung during the evening. The next meeting will be held at St. Thomas's church, St. Helen's, on the first Saturday in December (six-bell tower).

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY SOCIETY.

A meeting was held in Mr. de Lisle's rooms, Lincoln College, on Wednesday, October 29th, to re-found the University Society of Change-Ringers. The Rev. F. E. Robinson was elected Master, and Mr. H. F. de Lisle, Secretary. Twelve of the gentlemen present were elected members. All the old rules of the society were agreed to, and it was decided to obtain the services of Mr. J. W. Washbrook as instructor to the society. All communications should be made to the Secretary, Lincoln College, Oxford.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Back again! What cheer?

It seems almost an age since my last appearance, but I am always more than content to "take a back seat" when our Editor finds himself confronted with a superabundance of other kinds of "copy," which oft-recurring circumstance I am inclined to regard as a healthy sign of the times. All the same, however, I cannot refrain from expressing my appreciation of the many kind enquiries, and the numerous complimentary allusions made by correspondents to the Editor from time to time when I, through the cause specified, fail to put in an appearance; and it is at least comforting to know that one's humble efforts for the good of the Exercise are understood and accepted in the same spirit in which they are made.

I am pleased to observe that the young Cumberland Association is steadily making headway. This once terra incognita is now evidently, like certain other parts of the globe, being gradually opened out, and I sincerely hope that Mr. Jennings will have the good fortune in future years to be able to report an even still greater accession of strength to their Association. Let me suggest that we should hear from the new "Cumberlands" oftener through the pages of "THE BELL NEWS"; then perhaps our brethren in different parts of the country may be induced to make that interesting portion of our native land the locale of their holidays. By this means local brother-strings would receive encouragement, as well as information; and the mere fact of these visits will doubtless give additional impetus to the zealous efforts of the Cumberland officers, resulting in good all round.

While northwards, I would also compliment Mr. Harrison on the result of his labours with the young band at Tanfield, Durham. Considering how recently this peal was mounted, it is highly creditable to him to be able to report the modest six-scores of Bob Doubles which his young band rung on the 19th of last month. There is no need for me to repeat what I have before remarked with reference to the troubles and anxieties of training young bands, but if ought I can say will cause the young ringers of Tanfield to appreciate the efforts of their instructor and reward his teaching by an earnest endeavour to improve themselves in the science, I would say it with all heartiness of spirit. May I just remind them of the old and regretful saying that we never appreciate a man's good services till he is lost to us. Do not let that be the case with you.

After ringing within four courses of the end of a peal of Grandsire Triples at Chiddington (Kent) the attempt failed we are told through the conductor missing a bob "owing to his attention being attracted towards the 7th man, who was being given some refreshment on account of his bell going so badly." That is a pretty story to tell us, to be sure. If instead of starting with such a bad-going bell, they had spent the time inducing the wardens to have it made ringable, they would to my mind, have employed their leisure hours much better than in a futile attempt for a peal. What pleasure or credit can there be in foolishly attempting peals on bells which through their need of rehanging cause the work of the ringer to be more a feat of physical endurance than of scientific effort in the way of truthfulness and good striking? Much better will it be for all concerned, in these cases, to give some efficient bell-hanger a job, and refrain from punishing themselves merely for the sake of scoring a peal till the necessary work is done. Even should a bell be only found to go badly during the progress of a peal, if the peal cannot be finished without repeated supplies of "refreshments" (which invariably militate against good striking), the attempt should be at once abandoned for the benefit of all engaged in it.

Speaking of bell-founders and bell-hangers, I am glad to note that the former at least appear to be having a busy time of it just now, if the records of last week are anything to judge by. New rings at Eastmeon (Hants), and at Wells (Norfolk), along with two new bells at St. Giles', Reading, are reported, the increased ringing facilities afforded by which will I hope be fully availed of.

It is with regret that I refer to the death of our old friend Mr. Thomas Kimber, who for nigh on half-a-century was connected with the firm of Mears and Stainbank. It affords me a melancholy pleasure, however, to find that his body was not permitted to be laid in its lastly earthly resting place without that mark of respect which so peculiarly belong to the faithful ringer.

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES' ASSOCIATION.

NUNEATON BRANCH.—A meeting of this branch took place at Nuneaton, on Saturday, November 1st, when there was a good attendance of members, and some good touches in various methods were brought round during the afternoon. At 6 o'clock a move was made to Host Ratcliffe's, at the "Hand and Heart," where a substantial repast was partaken of with avidity under the generalship of Mr. John Butlin (Nuneaton), who was faced at the table by Mr. Chas. J. B. Cooke (Rugby). As Mr. Cook was obliged to catch the 7.45 train back to Rugby, as soon as the inner man was satisfied, and the cloth removed, the hand-bells were brought out, and speedily set going to a course of Grandsire Caters, in good style. After the vice-chairman had gone, the usual routine business of the branch was quickly disposed of, and the rest of the evening devoted to conviviality, during which the chairman, in a humorous speech, proposed "Success to the Midland Counties' Association," and said undoubtedly change-ringing in Nuneaton had improved considerably during the last two or three years.

Mr. H. Horwood, in reply, traced the Nuneaton Society back to the time when they thought they had accomplished a great feat if they rang two 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles without stopping, and he was proud to think they could now boast of having a branch of their own in a Society like the Midland Counties' Association.

A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman for presiding brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.

THE SURREY ASSOCIATION.

A Quarterly Meeting of this Association was held at Epsom on Monday, October 27th. At 5.30 the vicar of Epsom kindly held a short but impressive service in the church for the benefit of the ringers attending the meeting, and at 6 o'clock some thirty-eight members sat down to a meat tea at the Town Coffee Room. Subsequently five new members were elected, including the vicar of Epsom and the vicar of Christ Church, Epsom Common. Five peals were ordered to be entered in the book, and it was resolved to hold the next meeting at Kingston-on-Thames in January next. After the meeting some ringers went to the parish church and some to Epsom Common, where the new peal by Mears were soon going merrily in Stedman and Treble Bob, some very good striking being heard in both methods.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1890.

FROM one or two quarters within that region known as the metropolis, arrives, we are sorry to say, complaints of the too frequent use by well-known ringers of coarse and unrefined language. Phraseology of this kind is, we are told, coming to such a pitch that it will be necessary to make an example of those who, regardless of place, person, or thing, offend so heinously against the laws of good behaviour. One of the London Societies some months ago impeached a member who had, in language which can as a rule only be heard in such localities as Ratcliffe Highway, spoken of a deceased member who was a renowned ringer and composer, and in one special department the most illustrious of his day. Yet for all this we are compelled to hear that this evil is not entirely eradicated, for instances have again recently occurred of the same offence being perpetrated.

More pointed allusions on this matter than the foregoing need not be made. It is represented that a slight notice of this kind may be of benefit; we hope it may. The penalty in future ought to be total expulsion from the ranks of any society which has a character to preserve. But it is absolutely necessary that offenders after the infliction of such a penalty should be taught in a manner which admits of no doubt whatever that no condonation of their offence will ever be made, at any rate for a long period, and then only when signs of improvement are manifest. If the members of the various Metropolitan Societies refuse to admit anyone who has through such means forfeited his membership in any other society, they will be greatly assisting to eradicate the evil spoken of. We take leave of this subject, and deplore the necessity of alluding to it.

We learn with regret that a few lines of poetry which appeared some weeks back has given umbrage to a prominent Metropolitan ringer, a gentleman as widely known and respected as any in the Exercise. Far from reflecting on the action taken by him upon the occasion referred to in the verse, it has our heartiest commendation; we can only repeat our regrets that offence has been taken, where none was intended to be given. Another matter for which an apology should be made is the error which happened in the report of the peal at Fulham by the Ipswich gentlemen. It was reported as a peal of Double Norwich "Major," when as every one knows, it should have been "Royal." Accidents like these will occur at times, even when the greatest care is taken, but we greatly regret them nevertheless, and hope our Ipswich friends will regard this as the amende honorable.

THE WINCHESTER DIOCESAN GUILD.

On Wednesday, October 29th, a District Meeting of this Guild was held at Winchester, the chief event of the meeting being the presentation of a testimonial on behalf of the members of the Guild to their late Secretary, the Rev. H. A. Spyers, who resigned the post at the last annual meeting in July at Dorking. Tea was laid for 35 at a Restaurant. The Rev. A. Du Boulay Hill, who was the first Secretary of the Guild, and who really started it, ten years ago, presided as chairman, the vice-chair being taken by the Rev. C. Buston, the present Secretary of the Guild. Tea over, the Rev. A. D. B. Hill made a short speech, in which he spoke of the great good that this Society had done in the way of improving the diocesan ringing, and also the position of ringers as church officers, and after referring to the extension of the Guild, since he resigned eight years ago, and Mr. Spyers took his place, there being about 500 members now about from all parts of the diocese—from Walton-on-Thames, in Surrey, to Brading, in the Isle of Wight, he proceeded to make the presentation of the testimonial (a handsome Gladstone bag, fitted up after the manner of a dressing case, together with a most beautiful gong, in horse-shoe shape, with a ring of eight bells attached) to the energetic late Secretary. The Rev. H. A. Spyers then thanked the members of the Guild for their handsome present, which came upon him as a great surprise, and then gave the members present some excellent advice as to the best way of promoting the interests of the Guild, to support the present Secretary in every way, and to be careful to avoid giving him unnecessary trouble and expense, by answering his communications at once without delay; he also mentioned that his increasing years and the advice of his doctor were the chief causes for his giving up the post of Secretary, which post though he thought would be well filled by the Rev. C. Buston, who was calculated, by his natural genial manner, as well as by ability, tact, and judgment, though he could not be said to have a deep knowledge as yet of the science of change-ringing, to carry out the business of the Guild.

The Secretary, the Rev. C. Buston, then rose to call attention to the financial state of the Guild, and appealed to the representatives of the various bands to get more hon. members to belong to the Guild, and after the usual business, proceedings were brought to a close by a vote of thanks to the Dean of Winchester for the use of the Cathedral bells, proposed by the local secretary for Surrey, F. J. W. Rees, Esq. The belfry of the Cathedral was open from 2 till 3.45 p.m., and from 5 till 8 p.m. Bands from Woking, Weybridge, Basingstoke, Swanmore, Fareham, Hursley, Twyford, and Brading: there were also present the Rev. F. T. Madge, Minor Canon of the Cathedral, Mr. C. Tribe, of Romsey, and Messrs. Masters and Hughes of the Cathedral company. The following ringing took place: 377 Grandsire Triples. C. Tribe, 1; Rev. H. A. Spyers, 2; F. J. Rees, Esq., 3; Rev. C. Buston, 4; Rev. A. D. B. Hill, 5; H. White, 6; J. W. Whiting (conductor), 7; F. Hughes, 8. 504 Grandsire Triples. C. Tribe, 1; W. C. Ryde, Esq., 2; Rev. H. A. Spyers, 3; W. Linter, 4; Rev. A. D. B. Hill, 5; H. White (conductor), 6; J. W. Whiting, 7; E. Elkins, jun., 8. And a quarter-peal in the same method by same band, except Linter, who rung the 3rd, E. Warren the 4th, and G. Brown the tenor.

The President, W. C. Moore, Esq., of Bournemouth, was to have made the presentation, but at the last moment a family bereavement prevented him attending. The members of the Guild beg to thank Mr. Masters and Mr. Hughes for their care and attention in having the bells and belfry in readiness and good order.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

PRESENTATION TO THE REV. F. H. FISHER AT FULHAM.

Last Saturday, November 8th, was the occasion of a highly-interesting gathering of ringers at Fulham, who met for the purpose of bidding farewell to the Rev. F. H. Fisher, and presenting him with an illuminated address, indicative of the respect and esteem in which he has so long been held by London ringers. The business commenced at 3.30 with a meeting in the belfry of the members of the Fulham local Society, assisted by several visitors from London and suburbs, and the ringing of a few short touches of Grandsire Caters, in one of which the Rev. F. H. Fisher rang the 7th. Afterwards, the rev. gentleman, addressing the ringers present, said that he had been invited to the belfry that afternoon not to show them how much he had forgotten about ringing, but to make a presentation on behalf of the Fulham ringers to Mr. J. W. Driver, of a very handsome writing-desk, subscribed for by the members of the local society on the occasion of his recent marriage, as a mark of the esteem in which he is held by them. He did this with a deal of pleasure, as he felt sure that Mr. Driver, as master and steeple-keeper, was the right man in the right place, and by his energy and skill had done much towards placing the Fulham Society in the position it now holds, and on behalf of the members generally he wished him every happiness and success.

Mr. Driver, who seemed very much surprised at the presentation, thanked the members for their kindness, and assured them that he should lose no opportunity of furthering the interests of the Society, and promoting the harmony and goodwill of its members.

Another short touch or two of Grandsire and Stedman Caters, and an adjournment was made to the Church Room, where about thirty sat down to an excellent tea, the Rev. F. H. Fisher and his churchwarden, F. Manby, Esq., joining them. After tea a course of Grandsire Caters was rung on the handbells by Messrs. Newton, Dawe, Winny, Hayes, and Barkus. The cloth having been removed Mr. R. Woodley officiated as chairman, and explained that this presentation was made from the desire of the London ringers generally to express their appreciation of the unvarying courtesy and kindness with which the Vicar of Fulham had always treated them, not only when welcoming them to the tower at Fulham, but also when meeting them as he had often done at other places and on other occasions. He then read the address and called on Messrs. Haworth and Baron, as representing the two London Societies, to present it to the Vicar.

Mr. Haworth remarked that he was exceedingly pleased to take part in the ceremony that evening for many reasons. His recollection of the Fulham belfry went back further, perhaps, than any man's present. In 1837 he stood near the church and heard nearly the whole of the long peal—12000—which was rung there, and in 1842 he took part in a 6000 of Stedman Caters (peal-boards in the belfry commemorate both these peals) and since then from time to time he had had very pleasant associations with the old church at Fulham, and on behalf of the London ringers generally he had very great pleasure in presenting this illuminated address, together with the best wishes of himself and brother-ringers.

Mr. Baron concurred in similar terms.

The Rev. F. H. Fisher, in reply, said that he did not hear the long peal in 1837, one reason being that it was about four or five months before he was born, but as at that time he was "coming," perhaps this particular peal might have had some influence on his predilection for ringing which developed in after-life; anyway, he must confess he was always very pleased to meet ringers, and he had always met with the utmost courtesy from them wherever he went. Whenever he entered a tower where ringers were, when they found he was a ringer he always received a welcome, and a rope was always put at his disposal. He thanked them one and all for the very handsome address they had presented him with that evening, and he assured them he should never forget the pleasant associations he had made with the ringers of London during the time he had been connected with ringing. With the Fulham band also he was deeply interested, as it was in fact his own child, and he was very pleased to find that on the previous Saturday they were able to score a peal with their own band, which was struck in a manner which would have been a credit to any of the London Societies.

He had made many personal friends among ringers, and among the most valued and respected of them all was Mr. Baron. He had received much kindness and assistance from Mr. Baron when endeavouring to form the Fulham Society, and he should ever remember him as a dear and valued friend. In conclusion, he said that having in the past received so much courtesy from ringers generally, he made it the rule to encourage and assist the genuine scientific ringer in every possible way, but "Stoney" ringers he did not, could not, and would not, countenance.

A vote of thanks to the committee who carried out the arrangements concluded the business, and the company adjourned to the tower, where touches of Oxford and Kent Treble Bob and Grandsire Caters brought an enjoyable evening to a satisfactory close.

The address, which was mounted, framed, and glazed in a very neat walnut frame, and very tastefully illuminated, was as follows:—

"To the Reverend Frederic Horatio Fisher, M.A., Vicar of All Saints' church, Fulham. We, the undersigned Societies in London, desire to express our grateful sense of the services rendered by you to the cause of Change-ringing during your tenure of the Vicarage of Fulham, by your personal interest in the art itself, by your encouragement of the ringers in your own parish, and by the cordial welcome you have given to many outside of it. Among the heavy responsibilities of a large parish you have never forgotten to appreciate and to encourage the best use of the fine peal of bells entrusted to your care, and we feel that in your departure the ringers of London lose a firm friend. We trust that in a sphere of lighter work you will find some of the rest and leisure that you have earned, and it is with a grateful remembrance of your kindness and cordial wishes for your happiness, that we bid you farewell. All Saints', Fulham, Church Bell-ringing Association; the Ancient Society of College Youths; The Society of Cumberland Youths; The St. James' Society.

The address was drafted by the Rev. T. L. Papillon, and the engrossing and illuminating by Mr. Scarborough, writer to the College Youths. In design and execution it is quite a work of art.

DEDICATION OF BELLS AND RE-OPENING OF PADWORTH CHURCH, BERKS.

On Friday, October 31st, the ancient church of St. John the Baptist, which has undergone a very thorough and careful restoration, was re-opened for Divine Service by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of the Diocese. The church consists of nave and chancel, with a round east end, or apse, a wooden tower on the nave at the west end. The walls are all Norman, with modern windows inserted. The peculiar feature of the church is the semi-circular apse, the form of which is borrowed from the Roman basilica. This apse is plain, and was supposed to have been without a window at the east end, but, on removing the outside rough coat an arch opening into the chancel was discovered (which had apparently been blocked up for a long period) with excellent effect, and is indeed the attraction of the church. The old bells have been recast, and a sixth added by Mears and Stainbank. The work of restoration included a new south porch and vestry, new belfry floor, the removal of the weather boarding from the tower and the substitution of oak shingles, red-tile and wood-block flooring in nave and chancel, new oak choir stalls and open benches in the nave, the Norman doorway on the north opened out and restored, a new lych-gate, and many other minor improvements have been effected. The cost of restoration of nave, porch, and vestry, has been borne by Mrs. Darby Griffith. The expense of work to the tower and recasting of the bells has been provided by a fund raised by the parishioners, to which Mr. Benyon largely contributed. The entire expenditure on the chancel has been borne by the Rector, the Rev. W. O. Clinton. Messrs. Middleton, Prothero, and Phillott were the architects, and the work has been carried out in a most substantial and thorough manner.

Notwithstanding the boisterous weather that succeeded the heavy storm on Thursday night, the interesting event drew together a numerous assemblage of all classes, and the church was well filled. Immediately prior to the service (11.15) the beautifully-toned bells were raised in peal, and a touch rung in good style by members of the Oxford Diocesan Guild, including the Master (Rev. F. E. Robinson, of Drayton), Messrs. J. Martin Routh, G. H. Phillott, W. Newell, W. Lawrence, J. E. Hern, and

J. W. Washbrook. The Bishop and a numerous party of visitors were entertained at Padworth House by Mrs. Darby Griffith, and in the afternoon some good 720s were rung on the newly-cast bells in Kent Treble Bob and Plain Bob, Grandsire Minor and Stedman Doubles, by the Guild members, who were well entertained to both luncheon and tea at the Rectory.

RE-OPENING OF BELLS AT ASHOVER, DERBYSHIRE.

ON Saturday, November 8th, the bells of the above church, were reopened after rehanging, with the addition of a new treble, making a peal of six, the old treble and fourth having been recast, and the ancient inscriptions reproduced. The work has been done by Messrs. Taylor and Co., of Loughborough, the tone and "go" of the bells leaving nothing to be desired. The new treble has been given by F. J. Fenton, Esq., in memory of his daughter. The members of the East Derbyshire Association were invited, ringers being present from the following towers: Chesterfield, Clay Cross, Brampton Heath, Tibshelf, and North Wingfield. The dedication service commenced at 3 o'clock, the Bishop of Derby and Canon Massey being present. After shortened evensong, the Bishop, Canon Massey, the rector (Rev. J. B. Nodder), and churchwardens (Messrs. J. P. Jackson and W. Else, Esqs.), proceeded to the tower, and a short service was held in the belfry. After which the new bells were sounded by Mrs. Dolly Revell, aged eighty-four years, whose father was formerly parish clerk. She began ringing when eight years of age, and has assisted the ringers on many occasions at weddings, etc. The Bishop and clergy then returned to their seats, when hymn 215 A. & M. was sung. Then followed an appropriate sermon by the Bishop, dwelling on the duties of ringers generally, his Lordship laying great stress on the necessity of ringers after calling others, to attend the services themselves, and not go away as is often the case. After the sermon the hymn commencing

"Set between the earth and heaven
Now our bells are raised on high."

was sung to the tune "St. Oswald." The offertory was taken, to which the venerable old lady above-mentioned contributed eighty-four threepenny pieces, one for each year of her life.

The Bishop then pronounced the benediction, after which the congregation dispersed. The bells were then raised by the local band, after which the ropes were handed to the visitors. The first 720 of Bob Minor was brought round by the following: W. Butler, 1; F. Knowles, 2; W. Hopkinson, 3; T. Millington (conductor), 4; T. Allibone, 5; T. Day, 6. The above contains fourteen singles and eight bobs: tenor about 12 cwt.

Tea was provided in the schoolroom to which upwards of forty ringers sat down. After justice had been done to the good things provided, the rector made a very appropriate speech, dwelling upon the necessity of ringers working hand in hand with their respective clergy, and be ringers in principle as well as by name.

Mr. Allibone proposed a vote of thanks to the rector and churchwardens for so kindly entertaining the members of the East Derbyshire Association, which was seconded by Mr. J. Mee, and carried unanimously. The bells were then kept going by mixed bands to the tune of Grandsire and Bob Doubles, with touches of Bob Minor, when another 720 of Minor was brought round about 9.15 p.m. (fourteen singles and six bobs). W. Brown, 1; J. Tarlton, 2; W. Hopkinson, 3; T. Millington (conductor), 4; T. Day, 5; T. Clough, 6. The bells were then lowered in peal, and a most enjoyable day was brought to a close. The ringers all take this opportunity of thanking the rector and churchwardens for their hospitality and for the use of the bells.

LONGNEY (Gloucestershire).—On Thursday, October 23rd, at the church of St. Laurence, in honour of the wedding of Mr. W. Ward, 360 Grandsire Doubles. W. Prosser, 1; R. Ellis (conductor), 2; D. Browning, 3; A. Longney, 4; R. Gardner, 5; D. Pockett, 6. Also a 360. W. Ellis, 1; R. Ellis, 2; D. Browning, 3; A. Longney, 4; R. Gardner, 5; E. Taylor, 6. The bells were afterwards fired down. And on Friday, October 31st, for the Confirmation Service, 480 Grandsire Doubles. W. Ward, 1; R. Ellis (conductor), 2; B. Browning, 3; A. Longney, 4; R. Gardner, 5; E. Taylor, 6. Also after service a quarter-peal of Doubles. W. Ellis (conductor), 1; R. Ellis, 2; W. Ward, 3; A. Longney, 4; R. Gardner, 5; E. Taylor, 6.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

XXIV.

BY THE REV. H. EARLE BULWER.

Having already shown that, so long as bobs are confined to the three positions S, L, and Q, there is no escape from a specific group of four blocks, and since a connecting link between the groups must exist, it is time to consider the action of the blocks in the remaining position, H, through which alone this connecting link can be found by bobs.

It is true that shunts may also be effected from group to group by means of singles; but the action of singles in the various positions in which they may be called forms a distinct branch of the subject, demanding separate treatment. At present we are only concerned with the effects produced by bobs.

There being 60 blocks, it is evident that there are 30 connections between block and block in each of the four calling positions. We have seen that in the case of S, L, and Q these connections are confined to four blocks, forming an independent group. But in the case of bobs at H, the connection is from one group to another: so that since there are four blocks in each group, connection may be made from it with any one or more of four other groups; for in no case is it possible to connect two blocks of one group with two blocks of another by means of H.

It need hardly be said that the form in which a connection is presented does not affect the argument; the distinctive numbers of two blocks, hyphenated together, show the connection, and it is immaterial which number is placed first. In practice, it is necessary, in order to complete a peal, that each junction, in any position, should be passed through twice, once forwards and once backwards. Thus, if we pass from 1 to 60 by means of bobs at S, we must also before we finish pass back again from 60 to 1 by bobs in the same position, or the composition would be either false, or incomplete.

Taking the blocks in order as they occur in the V groups, the following Table shows the 30 connections available by means of bobs at H; the distinctive letter of the group bobbed into in each case being affixed to the distinctive number of the block. Apparent omissions simply show that the missing connection has already been stated in reverse order. In the same horizontal line with each connection at H., the blocks affected at Q are noted, the same law of the 'q set' being applicable to the positions H. and Q. which also controls the positions S and L.

On an examination of this Table it will appear that, taking the positions together, the distinctive letters denoting groups range themselves in sets of three, and that there are ten different combinations, each combination occurring three times. By collecting these together, and arranging them in series, we shall obtain a summarised table analogous to the one we obtained for the other positions and presenting the same "Triplet" character. But, whereas in the case of S and L, the Triplets ran by whole groups, in H and Q they run by half-groups, that is to say, two blocks only of each of three groups are concerned in each Triplet. If we attempted to arrange the workings of these positions by whole groups, we should miss the independent Triplet feature altogether, and find ourselves dragged eventually through the whole of the 60 blocks.

Now, since this position, H, is the only one in which bobs can be called which will supply a connection between group and group, it is obvious that it has a more important bearing on the construction of peals than any of the other three positions. Upon the treatment adopted with reference to this position the whole course and character of a composition will hinge, and it is even possible to project a composition by simply sketching out a chain of connections between group and group, and adapting the calling of the other positions to it under the conditions of the "q set." Examples of such chains will be given hereafter.

Although the two parts of Table S., taken together, contain all that is required for the composition and proof of any peal based on Hudson's 60 P blocks, yet, with a view to experiments in the direction just indicated, as well as to assist further examination, Table S (pt. II.), may be still further simplified and compressed by using only the distinctive letters of the groups, arranging them under Q and H respectively. This is done in the following synopsis, where the letter under Q denotes the group affected in that position by the connections under H in the same horizontal line. If both connections in the same line are used, all the members of the group affected must be plained at Q. If one connection is used two members will be plained and two bobbed at Q. If no connection is used in any given line, all the members of the group under Q in that line must be bobbed in that position:

Table U.

Synopsis of connections at H, according to the groups affected at Q.

Q.	H.	Q.	H.
a . . .	e-r c-g	j . . .	h-n g-p.
b . . .	c-f d-k.	k . . .	b-d m-p.
c . . .	a-g b-f.	l . . .	f-h m-r.
d . . .	b-k e-n.	m . . .	k-p l-r.
e . . .	d-n a-r.	n . . .	d-e j-h.
f . . .	c-b h-l.	p . . .	j-g k-m.
g . . .	c-a j-p.	r . . .	e-a l-m.

As there are 15 groups, the least number of connections required to unite them all will be one less than 15; and as each connection must be passed through twice, once forward and once backward, the least number of connections theoretically necessary to work out the whole, without the introduction of singles, would be 28. The result of such an arrangement would, however, in practice, be at best but an irregular and straggling composition, and would, moreover, be incomplete, for this reason, that even if the chain of connections were so carefully constructed (as it may be) as to affect in Q only one pair of blocks in each of fourteen groups, there would still remain one group unaffected in Q, in which, therefore, all the blocks would have to be bobbed in that position. Now the treatment of Q is an important factor in the working out of the group, as it influences the treatment of S and L, and the treatment of these positions, again, influences that of the other two groups in the same Triplet; so that the bobbing of all the blocks at Q in one group, while two are bobbed in each of the other groups of the Triplet, will be found to make it impossible to work out all, as whole groups, in their entirety, consistently with the conditions of the "q Set." At least one block, or its equivalent, will refuse to be worked in, necessitating either an additional connection at H, and so deranging another group, or the employment of singles. A Triplet of groups can, however, be worked out with all the blocks of one group bobbed at Q, provided all the blocks in one of the other groups are plained in that position: in other words, the number of pairs bobbed and plained must be equal, unless indeed more than 30 connections are used; for the groups can be worked out with Q fully bobbed in one group only (Thurstans' Original), or the bobs may be transferred to H and all the Q's left plain (Brook's Variation). In both these cases, however, singles intervene, forming two main blocks which can only be united by singles. To maintain equality of treatment, or at least an even balance at Q, as well as to obtain a peal in regular parts, it is, therefore, found necessary, in practice, to have 30 connections; that is, that an average of at least two blocks in every group should be bobbed at N. This gives 30 as the greatest number of twin bobs that can be called at Q (except under very exceptional circumstances to be hereafter noticed), as the remaining 30 blocks must be plained in that position.

It may be interesting to point out, that the groups connected together by pairs (under H), on any line of the Synopsis, are just the ones with which the group affected by them in Q will separately connect: thus, to take the first line, the connections e to r, and c to g affect the group a at Q: but when we look for the groups with which a itself will connect, we find a to c, a to r, a to c, and a to g. It is the same throughout the series. Nothing, I think, of great importance hinges on this; but it is a fresh evidence of the close inter-relation of the groups, and of their component members, and as such is worth notice.

In the next paper the bearing of the H position upon the construction of peals will be further examined.

Erratum:—In the last Article, paragraph introducing Table R, for "plained at L" read "bobbed at L."

LEEDS, YORKSHIRE.

ON Saturday evening, November 8th, the members of the Leeds Parish Church company dined together at their meeting-house, the "Old Royal Oak," Kirkgate, Leeds. After the good things provided by the worthy host had been satisfactorily discussed, the cloth was removed, and the usual loyal toasts duly honoured. The Chairman (Mr. T. Lockwood), then said a few words on the position of the company, remarking that as a rule a good understanding generally existed amongst them, and congratulated the company on the recent improvements that had been effected in the tower, and concluded his remarks by proposing the health of the vicar and churchwardens of the parish church, which was received in a very enthusiastic manner by those present. This preliminary having been brought to a close, the company settled down to an evening's enjoyment on the handbells, rendered additionally pleasant by the assistance of Messrs. T. Smith, F. Woodhead, and H. Lockwood, who contributed several songs in good style.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"The wintry winds are blowing."

Some time ago, I suggested to our friends who had the happy knack of putting down experiences and ideas on paper, to furnish our versatile friend "Joshua" with points occasionally. I have since had no information from that gentleman as to whether any one has acted upon my suggestion; but one brother-string sends me an item to the following effect: One of our band (he says) lately paid a visit to a certain old Cathedral City. He looked up the ringers there in hopes of having a pull, but found on enquiry that the sum total of these city ringers' scientific abilities was composed of about thirty changes of Grandsire Triples, which they had learned off by heart—truly a marvellous feat. The local ringer who vouchsafed this interesting information, then asked Mr. G. if he knew Mr. — of H. — and if it was not a solemn fact that the said Mr. — could both ring his own bell and tell others at the same time. "Oh yes," replied Mr. G., "I've seen him do it many times." "I've seen him do it too," said the city ringer, "but they (id est, the other 30-changes-of-Grandsire-Triples-performers) call me an old story-teller when I tell them so: I'm very glad to meet somebody down here who can back me up in what I told them." This was said, expecting Mr. G. would meet the band a day or two later. This however did not "come off," for this highly illustrious 30-changes-of-Grandsire-Triples-band, probably not caring to shew off their accomplishments before common ignorant strangers, could not be got together; so Mr. G. left this great home of change-ringing without either a pull or the opportunity of gaining wisdom from these artistic 30-changers.

* * * * *

That is somewhere about the main of what my correspondent writes about; and I certainly am considerably surprised to find the Exercise in this old Cathedral City in such a flourishing state that the local men can actually ring by heart thirty whole changes of Grandsire Triples. There are little country villages that I know of, miles from a large town, or even railway station, where the local bands never think of such feats as committing thirty changes to memory—perhaps it is too much for their small abilities—but go in for whole peals. But then they are different to the ringers of a high and lofty Cathedral City, where everything ecclesiastical is (or at any rate should be) of the best, so thus there can be no comparison between them. Well, some of my readers may appreciate the foregoing—some may not; if only, probably, through not being told the locale of the story. Not having my correspondent's permission, I cannot disclose that just now; but I will conclude my observations upon it for the present by expressing the hope that next time Mr. G. visits the aforesaid Cathedral City he will find considerable improvement, and the ringers there no longer deeming it impossible for one man to "ring his own bell and tell somebody else at the same time." They should have friend Washbrook among them for five minutes.

* * * * *

I am happy in being able to add my congratulations to our friend, Mr. R. Hill, the energetic Secretary of the Lancashire Association, on his sixtieth birthday; and also note with pleasure that this event has been duly honoured by his brother-strings on the bells of his own church at home. It is many years ago since I heard Southport bells—then they were only six in number, and their sound first came to my ears one still summer evening as I was sailing towards them from the little town of Lytham. But long ago as that was, and though at that time I was young and had no idea of bellringing, or the slightest conception of the fact that I should some day be a ringer myself, yet the sound of those Southport bells as they swung together in "queens" seems almost as fresh to me to-day as it did on that occasion. I hope I may be able, before Mr. Hill's next birthday comes round, to pay one more visit to that now celebrated Lancashire health-resort, to have a pull with the Christ Church band, and again hear those bells, the sound of which, when first heard, made such an impression on my youthful mind, long years ago.

* * * * *

The twenty-one peals recorded last week looks as if the busy ringing season was once again in full swing. But the signs of beating last year's record as to number would seem very remote, taking into account the deficiency of ninety-seven in the nine months. Of course, it is not to be expected that every succeeding year will o'ertop its predecessor: like as is the case with many other things, peal-ringing will have its "ebbs and flows." However, one good feature of Mr. Attree's returns this year, is the growing number of Surprise and Double Methods rung, which most certainly betokens that advancement is being made in the science. Another gratifying circumstance also is the infrequency of complaints and charges of false, badly-struck, and even bogus peals, with which were only too familiar some time ago. That, I think, shows that more care is being experienced in peal-ringing to have them true, and properly performed. If that alone were the characteristic of this year, it would not pass away without leaving its fair quota to the many legacies, good, bad, and indifferent, which have been bequeathed by its predecessors.

LLANISHEN, GLAMORGANSHIRE.

Wednesday, November 5th, was the day appointed for the dedication of the new peal of six bells at this parish church. A band of ringers from St. John's church, Cardiff, was engaged to open them. Leaving Cardiff by the 9.20 train they arrived there a few minutes later. After having a look round the church they ascended the belfry to ring for morning service several 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles. J. Cook, 1; T. Belcher, 2; —. Freeman, 3; —. Biss, 4; —. Coombes, 5; —. White, 6. After service they had another touch and then adjourned for dinner. During the afternoon they rang a few more 6-scores, and then they were kindly invited to tea by the vicar at the vicarage. After partaking of a good tea they made their way back to the church to ring for the Dedication Service which was to take place at 7.30, the preacher being the Lord Bishop of Llandaff, when they rang six 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles, each called differently. J. Cook, 1; T. Belcher, 2; C. Lloyd, 3; W. Biss, 4; W. Coombes, 5; H. White, 6. This is the first 720 by all except Mr. T. Belcher, who is doing all he can to push change-ringing on in South Wales. Service being over short touch was rung, and then the bells were lowered in peal. The bells are a first-class peal, and the "go" of them is all that can be desired, and great credit is due to Messrs. Llewellyns and James for the excellent job they have made. Tenor 9½ cwt. in A.

WELLINGBOROUGH, NORTHANTS.

TOLLING OF BELL FOR THE COURT OF THE LORD OF THE MANOR.—The Courts Baron for the respective manors of Wellingborough, Wellingborough Hatton, and Wellingborough formerly belonging to the college of Irthlingborough were held on Thursday week at the Hind hotel, Wellingborough, before Mr. H. C. Burnham, the steward, on behalf of Mr. H. H. Vivian, the lord of the respective manors. Mr. William Tester was the foreman of the Homage, and Mr. Thomas Gillitt was the other Homage. After the business of the courts was transacted, the usual dinner took place, presided over by the steward.

The living of the parish church of Wellingborough is in the gift of H. H. Vivian, Esq. The tenor at the old church is always tolled for fifteen minutes as a summons to the above-mentioned "Court Baron." Our correspondent says: "It would be interesting to know if this custom prevails in other towns in England and if so, what was its origin."

The extent with the tenors together will, I think, compare very favourably with other methods, but should like the kind opinion of any composer on the subject. As the bob turns the course of the changes singles are not required.

YORKSHIRE COURT TRIPLES.

By A. KNIGHTS, Chesterfield.

The following method which I have not seen published, I obtained from Yorkshire Court Minor in the same way as the College Single, by simply putting a bell into the hunt, which causes 5ths and 3rds to be made instead of 4ths and 3rds, and the double dodge in 6-7 instead of 5-6 as in Minor.

REOPENING OF CHURCH BELLS AT COPDOCK, NEAR IPSWICH.

The peal of five bells in the church tower of this parish has just been augmented to six by the addition of a new treble; the whole being rehung with all new fittings and framework. On Saturday last a dedication service was held, which was conducted by the Rector (Rev. H. Hocking), assisted by the Rev. R. H. Gorton, Rector of Belstead. The new bell is in memory of Rev. Arnold de Grey, the late rector, and has been erected by his wife, friends and parishioners of Copdock and Washbrook, and bears the following inscription: "In memory of the Honble. Arnold de Grey, Rector." "Holy unto the Lord." "A voice from the temple comes: Hear all ye that fear God." The bells were opened by four of the Ipswich company, assisted by Messrs. Geo. and Fred. Day, of Eye, members of the Norwich Diocesan Association, the first 720 being rung in 26 mins. In the afternoon other ringers were present from Ipswich, Debenham, Sproughton, Bramford, etc. The bells were lowered for service and then chimed, and afterwards another 720 was rung, and the bells fired, and ceased in peal. The ringers, churchwardens, and others were entertained at the rectory. The six bells now form a musical ring in the key of G.

THE LATE JASPER W. SNOWDON.

On Saturday next, November 22nd, a tablet recording the last peal rung by the late Mr. Snowdon will be unveiled in the belfry of St. Lawrence's parish church, Pudsey, by the Rev. R. Boyle Thompson, M.A., Vicar. The bells will be at liberty from 2.0 p.m., and the ceremony will take place about 4 o'clock.

JASPER W. SNOWDON'S WORKS.

ROPESIGHT: 1s. 6d. OUT OF PRINT. A FOURTH EDITION NOW IN PREPARATION.

STANDARD METHODS: 2s. 6d. SECOND EDITION. Contains full explanations and rules for ringing all the best methods, from five to eight bells, with plain-course diagrams of each printed in full, with coloured lines. (40 pages of diagrams and 87 of descriptive letterpress).

GRANDSIRE; 2s. 6d. THE METHOD, ITS PEALS, AND HISTORY. WITH PORTRAIT AND MEMOIR. EDITED BY HIS BROTHER, WM. SNOWDON. COMPLETE WITH AN APPENDIX BY THE REV. CHARLES D. P. DAVIES, M.A., OXON. Commences with ringing on five, six, and seven bells, for the benefit of a learner; gives instructions on composing, proving, varying, and reversing, conducting and calling round; and ends with a general survey of the practical and scientific aspect of the composition of triples—thus forming a complete reference book for all Grandsire ringers. (210 pages).

TREBLE BOB. 3s. 2d. PARTS I. AND II. COMPLETE. Part I. contains instructions for pricking, transposing, proving, composing, and conducting peals; an essay on the In and Out-of-course of the changes; and a history of the various compositions and performances. Part II. contains classified peals of Minor, Major, Royal, and Maximus, with their reverse variations; remarks on the different qualities; particulars of first performances, composers' names, &c., &c. (236 closely printed pages). Part II. (136 closely printed pages) may be had separately, 2s. 12d.

DOUBLE NORWICH COURT BOB MAJOR. 1s. 6d. Contains rules and instructions for pricking and ringing the method; a linear diagram of the plain course; a collection of touches and peals; instructions for proving, and a history of the earlier performances, with a list of peals down to 1864. (78 pages).

A few copies are still left of "An Account of the Society of Union Scholars." (49 pages). Post free, 8½d.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1890.

It is with very great pleasure that we notice in our last issue the re-founding of the Oxford University Society of Change-Ringers. It is but a trite observation that "as the twig is bent, so shall the tree grow," but we can call to mind no better illustration of how the matter is presented to us as likely to enhance the highest interests of our Art.

That a vast improvement has taken place in the conduct of that portion of Church work appertaining to the belfry, within the last seven or eight years, is apparent to the most superficial of observers; that our journal has done its full share toward this most gratifying result, we have received assurances from many clergymen of repute, and we feel, with all due modesty as to the measure of our efforts, that the commendations of these gentlemen are not out of place. But however much may have been done, or is doing by ourselves, and by the whole body of ringers to elevate the general tone of the Exercise, it is to the Clergy themselves, collectively and individually, that we must look to maintain and improve the morale of ringers as a whole.

We need to make but the barest reference to the subject of our leader of last week (and it was only the most imperative sense of duty that impelled us to refer to such an unpalatable subject) to illustrate the vast amount of moral influence that is brought to bear by the frequent presence of the pastor in the belfry. Were this the rule, instead of unhappily the exception, we feel that our unpleasant task of last week would never have been called for.

It is for this reason, primarily, that we hail the re-organisation of the society in question. The Universities are the nurseries of the Church, and the greater the number of their inmates, imbued with a love of ringing for its own sake, so becomes greater the probability that they will bear in mind their duties towards their ringers when they in due course become the legal custodians of the bells.

Hatto (conductor), 6. And for afternoon service, a 480 Oxford Bob Minor. T. Greatham, 1; J. Richardson, 2; C. Gardner, 3; C. Richardson, 4; A. Richardson, 5; F. Hatto (conductor), 6.

BOURNEMOUTH (Hants).—On Thursday, October 30th, at the church of St. Peter, a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples (1260 changes), in 49 mins. A. Grist, 1; J. Bristow, 2; H. T. Vivash, 3; G. J. Bennett, 4; G. Preston, 5; J. J. Bristow, 6; T. Green (conductor), 7; T. Belben, 8. First quarter-peal by J. Bristow and G. Preston. G. Preston hails from Christchurch, the rest belong to the Bournemouth band.

CALVERLEY (Yorks).—On Sunday evening, November 2nd, for Divine Service at the parish church, 1120 Cambridge Surprise Major in 41 mins. J. Cordingley (conductor), 1; E. Keighley, 2; W. Hollings, 3; C. Pratt, 4; J. Page, 5; J. Ross, 6; J. Benson, 7; W. Davison, 8. Tenor 10½ cwt.

CHEPSTOW (Mon.).—On Sunday, October 26th, at the parish church, for Divine Service, a 720 Bob Minor, with tenor covering, in 25 mins. C. Davis, 1; W. T. Bennett, 2; J. Morley, 3; W. Freestone, 4; G. Watts, 5; G. Watkins (conductor), 6; J. Simmonds, 7.

DEERHURST (Gloucestershire).—On Wednesday evening, October 29th, for practice at the parish church, 720 Kent Treble Bob Minor, in 26½ mins. Chris. Willis, 1; C. Willis, 2; C. W. Dyson (conductor), C. Robes, 4; G. Willis, 5; J. Bartlett, 6.

DISLEY (Cheshire).—On Sunday, November 2nd, for Divine Service at the parish church, a touch of Bob Minor. W. Booth (conductor), 1; T. Johnson, 2; T. Whitehead, 3; A. Rangeley, 4; T. Atkinson, 5; T. Brocklehurst, 6. Also for afternoon service, a 2160 was rung by the Hayfield ringers, being a 720 each of Violet, New London Pleasure, and Oxford Treble Bob. Also in the evening a 720 of Oxford, Mr. J. Hardman, of Pendleton ringing the 4th. The Hayfield company were stationed as follows: W. Booth, 1; J. Brocklehurst, 2; T. Whitehead (conductor), 3; J. Wheatcroft, 4; A. Rangeley, 5; T. Brocklehurst, 6. Later in the evening, three 6-scores, being one each of the above. The Disley ringers say this is the first time that three 720's have been rung in succession. We heartily thank the vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells.

EYNESBURY (Hunts).—On Sunday afternoon, November 2nd, for Divine Service at the parish church, two 6-scores of Bob Doubles called differently. S. Hawksford, 1; C. Chasty, 2; G. Coleman, 3; G. Irons, 4; H. Sutton, 5; S. Irons, 6. The first was conducted by G. Irons, and the second by H. Sutton. Also on Friday, November 7th, for practice, three 6-scores of Bob Doubles. S. Hawksford, 1; C. Chasty, 2; G. Coleman, 3; G. Irons, 4; H. Sutton, 5; S. Irons, 6. An attempt was made for four 6-scores to be called from different observation bells, but after ringing 380 changes a change-course occurred, and "stand" was called. All the above are members of the St. Mary's society, Eynesbury, which was formed some few months ago, and they deserve great credit for the way in which they have overcome the difficulties of change-ringing without an instructor.

HADLEY (Middlesex).—On Wednesday, October 15th, for practice at the parish church, two plain courses of Grandsire Minor. G. Godfrey, 1; C. Roberts, 2; J. Sumpter, 3; W. J. Dell, 4; F. A. Milne, 5; G. Roberts (first 120 as conductor as conductor), 3; W. J. Dell, 4; J. Sumpter, 5; G. Abbott, 6. And 120 standing as above, conducted by J. Sumpter. Also a plain course of Grandsire Minor. G. Godfrey, 1; C. Roberts, 2; F. A. Milne, 3; W. J. Dell, 4; J. Sumpter, 5; G. Abbott, 6. And on Wednesday, October 29th, for practice, four plain courses of Grandsire Minor standing as above. Also on Sunday morning, November 2nd, for Divine Service, 120 Grandsire Doubles. And for afternoon service four 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles, each called differently. W. J. Dell (conductor), 1; J. Sumpter, 2; C. Roberts, 3; G. Godfrey, 4; G. Abbott, 5; G. Creamer, 6.

HALIFAX (Yorks).—On Sunday afternoon, November 2nd, for Divine Service at All Souls' church, being the thirty-first anniversary of the opening of the church, 992 Kent Treble Bob Major in 41 mins. H. Reynolds, 1; I. S. Ambler, 2; F. Salmons, 3; A. Stead, 4; G. H. C. Copping, 5; J. Hampson, 6; C. E. Stewart, 7; S. W. Stewart (conductor), 8. Longest touch by F. Stead. Tenor 26 cwt.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—On Monday, October 13th, at St. John's church, 720 Bob Minor. J. Simn, 1; G. Campbell, 2; *H. H. Lindsay, 3; E. Wallis, 4; F. Lees (conductor), 5; T. Denton, 6. *First 720. And on Monday, November 3rd, a band met together to celebrate the sixty-second birthday of Mr. T. Denton, by ringing a peal of Grandsire Triples, but a change-course brought it round at 840. G. Campbell, 1; C. L. Routledge, 2; W. Eggleston, 3; F. Lees, 4; W. Story, 5; E. Wallis (conductor), 6; J. Simn, 7; J. Dixon, 8. Also 1260 Stedman Triples in 46 mins. F. Lees, 1; C. L. Routledge, 2; W. Eggleston, 3; E. Wallis, 4; W. Story, 5; J. Simn, 6; T. Denton (conductor), 7; J. Dixon, 8. Tenor 12 cwt.

WORCESTER.—On Sunday evening, November 2nd, after Divine Service at All Saints' church, six courses of Grandsire Major. J. Clements, 1; N. Wale, 2; W. Pudge, 3; H. Pheasant, 4; T. Bullock, 5; J. Reynolds, 6; T. Gwynn, 7; H. Wilkes, 8. On Thursday, November 6th, at the Cathedral, on the occasion of the unveiling of the statue of Queen Victoria, erected to commemorate the completion of fifty years of Her Majesty's reign, 1151 Grandsire Caters. J. Clements, 1; N. Wale, 2; W. Pudge, 3; H. Pheasant, 4; F. Jelf, 5; T. Bullock, 6; H. Wilkes (conductor), 7; J. Reynolds, 8; T. Gwynn, 9; W. Hale and S. Smith, 10. The above was rung in 49½ mins. F. Jelf hails from Malvern, and S. Smith from Ombersley. Also on Sunday, November 9th, being the birthday of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, 396, 503, and 305 of Grandsire Caters, standing as above with the exception of J. Perks, 5; and J. Thorn at the tenor in the place of S. Smith. Tenor 50 cwt.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

STEDMAN TRIPLES.

SIR,—I see that in "THE BELL NEWS" of the week before last, Mr. Heywood finishes his excellent demonstrations with a remark about "pairing" singles. He says Mr. Parker pointed out (and I suppose it would infer for the first time), the possibility of using these kind of singles for "shunts." If you will kindly allow me, I should like to point out that such singles were used by me to through Thurstans' original together, on the 13th of February, at Boyne Hill, Maidenhead, the peal being rung without the use of "extras" or "omits," but simply thrown together by six pairing singles, two the reverse of two, and two connecting singles, which connects the two half-peals. I point this out simply to shew that such singles had been actually used in an old composition. J. W. WASHBROOK.

INFORMATION WANTED.

SIR,—If W. N. Holt will send his address to me, I will forward him a copy of the method used at Cuckfield and Chichester in ringing Grandsire Triples. R. WALTERS.

The Chantry, Chichester.

P.S.—The same method is also used at Eastbourne and St. Paul's Church, Brighton.

CORRECTION.

SIR,—The first peal of Treble Bob Maximus given by me in your last issue, was rung in the year 1889, and not 1890, and the body of the peal of Stedman Caters given by me in the same issue, the bobs should be called at 5 and 16, and not 5 and 6. I regret to have made these errors in the copy sent to you. H. DAINS.

MR. ATTREE'S ANALYSIS.

SIR,—In looking at Mr. Attree's list of peals rung, I see that he only gives the Essex Association one peal of Stedman, it ought to be two at least, and again, he has made a mistake with regard to the Norwich Association; we rang a peal of Superlative at Redenhall.

F. PITSTOW.

A DISCLAIMER.

SIR,—The peal of Double Norwich Major in your last issue by me is false, I greatly apologise for sending the peal to you for publication. GEORGE HAYWARD.

Bromsgrove.

A CORRECTION.—The peal of Duffield Major rung at St. Paul's, cth October 30th, was conducted by Mr. Joseph Griffin, not by Mr. W. Wakley as stated in last weeks "BELL NEWS."

RUARDEAN, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

By invitation, on Saturday, November 8th, six members of the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association—three being members of the St. Michael's Juniors, Gloucester, and three members of the Chepstow society—journeyed to this ancient and interesting village, situated about six miles from Ross, to indulge in change-ringing on the parish church bells. The church, which is dedicated to St. John and has a fine tower and spire, was built in the year 1111, and contains many features of interest. It has recently been re-opened after thorough restoration under the direction of Messrs. Waller and Son, Diocesan Architects, Gloucester. Among other alterations, the ringing-chamber, which was on a raised floor and divided from the church, has been removed, the ringing floor now being on a level with, and open to the church. The bells, which are a pretty-toned ring of six, tenor about 18 cwt., have also received a little attention in the way of sundry repairs to the wheels and frame, but the whole of them go very badly, particularly the 5th and tenor, and require rehangng. They have been provided with a new set of Nicoll's ropes, and also wire guides, the cost of which was defrayed by public subscription.

The Chepstonians were the first to arrive, and after doing full justice to a tea which was waiting for them at a brother-strings', at once made for the tower, and the bells were soon running merrily to the tune of Bob Doubles, in which some of the local ringers took part. Several 6-scores were brought round, and great credit is due to Mr. Romans, of Gloucester, who has lately been instructing the band under the auspices of the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association, for the manner in which they acquitted themselves, considering the short time the band has been formed.

On arrival of the St. Michael's Juniors' detachment, a start was soon made for a 720 of Bob Minor which was brought round in 25 mins. W. T. Bennett, 1; G. Watkins (Chepstow), 2; D. J. Aston, 3; R. J. Wilkins (conductor, Gloucester), 4; G. Watts (Chepstow), 5; S. E. Romans (Gloucester), 6. Also several 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles and Bob Doubles were rung, after which the bells were lowered, and the company adjourned to "The Bell." The handbells were here soon produced, and Messrs. Romans and Wilkins called forth well-deserved applause for the manner in which they played several well-known airs on the handbells, retained in hand. A course of Grandsire Caters was also rung on the handbells after which the ringers dispersed to their respective quarters for the night.

At 9.30 a.m. on Sunday morning the bells were again set rolling and another 720 of Minor was rung for Divine Service in 26 mins. R. J. Wilkins, 1; S. E. Romans (conductor), 2; D. J. Aston (Gloucester), 3; W. T. Bennett, 4; G. Watkins, 5; G. Watts (Chepstow), 6. And again for Divine Service at 3 p.m. a 720 of Bob Minor in 25 mins. S. E. Romans (Gloucester), 1; W. T. Bennett (Chepstow), 2; R. J. Wilkins (conductor), 3; D. J. Aston (Gloucester), 4; G. Watkins, 5; G. Watts (Chepstow), 6. Our Gloucester friends were compelled to leave, and drove away amid the hearty farewells of all present.

For Divine Service in the evening several more 6-scores were rung, and after service one was rung by members of the local band only.

The writer on behalf of himself and fellow brother-strings wishes to tender his best thanks through "THE BELL NEWS" to the local ringers for their kind welcome and hospitality, and hopes to see recorded in this paper at an early date some result of their visit.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN
TRIPLES.

XXV.

THE CONNECTION OF GROUPS IN H.

BY THE REV. H. EARLE BULWER.

In order properly to understand and grasp the influence of H bobs upon the construction of twin-bob peals, it will be necessary to arrange the X triplets (Table S, pt. I.), in the form of a Diagram. The construction of the Diagram I will proceed to describe; and although the result is appended to this article, it still will be better if those who wish to study the subject would construct it for themselves as we proceed, thus:—

Take a half-sheet of note paper; rule it into three equal columns, divide these equally by four transverse lines. There are now 15 square spaces. Head the columns I, II, III from left to right. In the left hand top corner of each space place the small letter denoting each group, so that the three groups composing a Triplet shall occupy one transverse row of spaces. Thus the top row of spaces, taking them from left to right, will be lettered a, h, k; the second row, b, j, r; and so on. If we were going at once to compose and prove a peal, we should fill in the spaces with the numbers of the P blocks comprised in each group, under the heading S. H. L. Q. But as our immediate object is to study the effect of bobs at H only, it will be sufficient, for the present, to enter the numbers proper to each group, vertically under H. Thus, in the space a, we write below H the figures 1, 7, 53, 60; in space h, 14, 15, 45, 48; in space k, 21, 30, 31, 40. Treat the other spaces similarly, and the Diagram is ready for the next step.

It must be borne in mind, that, as the groups are now arranged, one transverse row is entirely independent of any other so far as positions S and L are concerned; and that the treatment of S, L in one group, only affects the treatment of the two other groups in the same row in L and S respectively. What we desire to ascertain, therefore, is—whether the bobs at H, which connect independent groups, act symmetrically: that is, whether corresponding blocks in the groups of one column connect similarly with the groups of another, or the same column. By comparing the X Triplets for H and Q, (Table S, pt. II.) with the figures of the Diagram, we shall arrive at the following conclusions, which may be noted on the Diagram by attaching to each block number the letter of the group with which it will connect.

- 1st.—That there is a two-fold connection of the groups in Column I. with one another: and also two connections in each group with separate groups in Col. III.
- 2nd.—That the same is the case with Col. II.
- 3rd.—That there are, consequently, in Col. III. two connections per group to Col. I., and two to Col. II.
- 4th.—That, as was to be expected, the blocks concerned in these different connections correspond in the several groups.

What constitutes correspondence? Briefly, the position of the 6th bell.

The classification of the connections may be summed up in other words, thus:—The groups of Col. I. will connect together, by corresponding blocks (6th in 3rds place); and so will those of Col. II. (6th in 4th place); but the groups of Col. III. will not connect together. And whereas Col. III. will connect both with Col. I. (6th in 5-6), and with Col. II. (6th in 1-2); there is no direct connection between these latter two Cols. possible by bobs.

A little study of these connections by the help of the Diagram, aided by a few trials at filling up the groups, will quickly show what an important bearing the selection of connections in H has upon the construction of peals.

The effect of the H connections upon the Q position, as illustrated by the Diagram, will be considered in the next paper.

THE ANCIENT SOCIETY OF COLLEGE YOUTHS.

ANNUAL DINNER.

Pursuant to notices which appeared in their proper place in this paper, the members of the above society held their Annual Festival on Saturday last at the "Bridge House" hotel, Southwark, a famed hostelry adjoining St. Saviour's church, the company's headquarters. The dinner committee, under the presidency of the worthy Master—Mr. F. E. DAWE—had taken care to have a plentiful provision for all the guests, a goodly number of whom were expected, such expectations however being more than realised. Seventy or eighty were looked for to be present, but 101 actually sat down to the table, a number far exceeding that of any previous occasion, in this, or we should think, any other ringing society. If any rebutting evidence was required of the statement that the College Youths are played out, or that the society is degenerating, enough and to spare was given by such a large meeting, and the general unanimity which prevailed thereat.

A little before seven the guests began to assemble. Many of them proceeded to the meeting-room at the "King's Head," to inspect the peal-books and regalia of the society, and those to whom such an inspection was new were greatly interested at what they saw. The neighbourhood in which the "meeting-house" is situated and the general aspect of the room in which the society transacts its business, and in which "the properties" are deposited, must have surprised some of the country visitors, who no doubt imagined a more capacious apartment, if not one with more cleanly surroundings.

At 7 o'clock the outside of the hotel showed to the passer-by that some festival was about to be enacted. Knots of ringers halted here and there on the pavement discussing matters of interest until their attention was called to the fact that dinner was on the table. The banquetting-room presented a pleasing view—the tables ranged in tiers furnished with all necessary adjuncts to a feast on a liberal scale, the attendants of various kinds clad in their orthodox costume, and other well-known features, made a scene "pleasing to a tuneful soul," and to a hungry one also. The menu, which we give below was, with the arrangement of the post-prandial matters, neatly printed on a 4-page bordered card, on which also was seen various mottoes and legends applicable to bell-ringers. This was got up under the auspices of the Master, and as was afterwards heard, at his cost; as was also the dinner tickets, and the expenses attendant upon the engagement of Professor May. The bill of fare was as follows:—

THICK MOCK TURTLE.	Soups.	CONSONNE A LA ROYALE.
	Fish.
BOILED COD AND OYSTER SAUCE.
FRIED FILLETS OF SOLE AND ANCHOVY BUTTER.

Among the visitors present we noticed Messrs. C. Sillitoe and W. Howell (Sudbury), Mr. Davies (Barking), Messrs. Smart and Brackley (Steyning), G. Cartmel, W. H. L. Buckingham, and J. Randall (St. Albans), J. George (Rugby), H. Payne (Halifax), Wadey (Billinghurst), Messrs. Davies, I. Shade, Thornton, and Lamb (Greenwich), Richards (Woolwich), James, Dunn, Fruin, Sanders, and Harman (Bromley), T. and G. Durling (Chislehurst), Mee (Ipswich), Rev. J. H. Hindson (vicar of Wraybury), Mr. H. L. Thomas (Royal Cumberland Youths), Messrs. Rattery, Willis, and Crust (Battersea), Messrs. James, R. and T. Mash, E. Harman, A. S. Norris, W. Warren, Earle, Kelk, Simmons, F. A. Glover, Illingworth, Collingwood, Ludlow, Perry, Wilson, F. Horrex, Barrett, Coles, Harvey, Scarborough, R. Hughes, Fell, G. Back, Emery, Cornish, M. J. Lickley, Simpson, A. Durling. Of well-known and celebrated London ringers there were Messrs. Cooter, Pettit, Dwight, Haworth, Mash, Dorrington, W. D. Smith, Winny, and others. Mr. Cooter looked well in spite of a recent troublesome illness, and Mr. Dwight was animated by his usual spirits. It is well known that the latter gentleman is only deficient in his powers of locomotion; with the exception of this failing, and taking into consideration his years, he is in good health. His inability to walk the distance from Stepney to Southwark in order to be present at the dinner, led to a very pleasing incident which we delight in recording. A number of the old gentleman's admirers chartered a cab to convey him to and fro, and thus he was enabled again to spend a few hours with many of his old and young friends around the festive board.

Directly all arrangements for the repast had been perfected, the Master—Mr. FRANCIS EDWARD DAWE—rose and called upon the Rev. J. H. Hindson, vicar of Wraybury, near Slough, to say grace. The rev. gentleman having complied, a terrible onslaught was made upon the various good things, course after course disappearing, not with alarming rapidity, but with "measured beat and slow," the company being evidently infected by the Shaksperian quotation which had been placed by the Master at the head of the menu—"Now good digestion wait on appetite." While dinner was in progress a very pleasing and novel selection of National airs was played on musical glasses by Professor May.

The dinner being satisfactorily brought round, grace after meat having been uttered by the Rev. J. H. Hindson, and the customary short interval having elapsed, the Master again took the presidential chair, and stated that the future proceedings would be initiated by an instrumental overture by Mr. J. S. B. Archer. This gentleman—in whom we discovered an old friend—displayed his skill on the pianoforte, and he was deservedly applauded at the close.

The Chairman next proposed "The Queen and Royal Family" in appropriate terms. This toast was followed by one of the best songs of the evening—"Chiming Bells," by Mr. J. Mash, a nephew of Mr. George Mash. The latter gentleman, who as usual, made a very agreeable vice-chairman, then briefly proposed "Church and State." With regard to the Church, as ringers were so intimately connected with it, he hoped that there would always exist the most perfect unanimity between the ministers of the Church and the Church's ringers. As to the State he couldn't say a great deal about that. It had got on very well hitherto, and would no doubt get on very well in the future.

The Rev. J. H. Hindson being called upon by the Master to respond to the toast, said that of all the kinds of parish work which he had to perform, none had given him so much satisfaction and pleasure as the work connected with his bells and ringers. As some of them knew perhaps, he had lately augmented his peal to a complete octave, and he was afraid he suffered at present from some sort of bell-fever. His experience with ringers had been most pleasant wherever he had gone; if he had been from home, and heard bells ringing he at once went straight to the tower, and on all these occasions he met with nothing but courtesy and kindness from the ringers. He believed that the connexion of Church and State would exist for very many years, and that ringers would prove a good bulwark of defence to any assault that might be upon it.

Song—"Love's Golden Dream" by Mr. R. T. Woodley.

The Master then proposed "The Ancient Society of College Youths and its Provincial Members." He said this was the toast of the evening, and bought with it a great responsibility. Their proper anniversary was the 5th of November—the day on which was celebrated a certain event by all the combustible combinations of "fizz and bang" possible to imagine. The society had now enjoyed "five jubilees and a bit." In ringing matters he had had a great many ups and downs—principally downs! and embraced this opportunity of thanking all his brother officers for their cordial support during the year that had passed. Among many of the grand performances he alluded to the peal at Evesham, Worcestershire, last Christmas (conducted by himself) also the peal at Bow, Cheapside (conducted by Mr. Pettit). In the midst of all their pleasure they must not forget the memory of their departed friends, and he alluded to the deaths of Mr. Henry Johnson (Sr.), of Birmingham; Mr. Joseph Field (47), of Oxford; and Mr. Wright (28), of Pimlico. He had before him a grand old silver bell on a pedestal, and narrated the use to which it was put ages ago, when the beadle carried it before them to Bow church, and the ringers walked in pairs. And the dear old cup he held in his hand was a sacred trophy, won by the company a century ago, and had doubtless been quaffed in token of brotherhood by generations of the College Youths who had preceded them, and was the outward and visible sign of a link which united the past with the present, and he hoped the present with the future in a friendly unity for many years to come. With regard to change-ringing its hygienic influences proved it to be one of the healthiest of exercises, and an undisputable fact spoke for itself that the average age of a ringer was longer than the majority of other communities, in fact to become a good ringer it was necessary to have a sound mind in a healthy body, or as our learned friends would have it, "mens sana in corpore sano!" Ringing had two parts, a scientific and a practical, and everything had to be as rigidly exact as anything can be in the nature of mathematics, in fact, a scientific ringer was a musical mathematician, and produced a succession of notes with never the same sounds twice following: but that to a casual onlooker, was really all below the surface, not like paying a fee to see two teams kick a ball from one end of a field to the other! Ringers were naturally of a retiring disposition (that was the reason he retired from the Lord Mayor's Show on Monday), and wordly fame was far from their thoughts. He was one of the very few who had ever been "trotted out" for show, and he gave a couple of laughable instances of his adventures with some of the Royal Family. Latin and Greek professors found it impossible to master the mysteries of change-ringing, whilst it sometimes appeared easy to those who followed the plough. He was not a phrenologist and could not tell exactly tell where the "bump" of change-ringing was—he could account for most of his—on the ice and in the cricket field! Many of his pleasant hours had been spent in the belfry or in the pursuit of ringing; the most of them with that company, which contained so many of his friends. Antiquarians would have them believe that there were a certain kind of bells in the time of Moses, and at the ancient city of Byzantium, and who knows but that the Emperor Claudian knew something of their uses. He was quite prepared to challenge Claudian as to his abilities in the belfry, though not in the arena, except at eight or nine hundred yards' range. He considered that meeting to be the very "Wimbledon" of the ringing world in London, and congratulated it on its great success. Their host had laid the tables for 101 guests, and there was by a strange coincidence exactly that number there. In wishing the society every success, he hoped with regard to the broad-shouldered peal-ringing men in the room that their heads and eyes would be clear, their arms strong, and their nerves steady for many years to come, to enabled them to achieve many other good performances in various parts of the country in the future. The toast was heartily received, amid the strains of "See the conquering hero comes."

After a facetious ditty by Mr. G. J. Smith, entitled "Oh the sea; the up-and-down motion:" Mr. J. R. Haworth responded to the toast. He said that the fact of so great a company attending on the present occasion gave him great pleasure. Throughout his experience he never saw anything like so great a number at the Annual Dinner, and he was glad therefore to feel that the College Youths was far from retrograding.

A performance on the dulcimer, by Mr. W. Harvey, a native of Ipswich, but for a long time located in London, then followed. This performance was received with marks of favour, and encored.

Song—"The Old Cathedral Bells," by the Master. This song relates to the city of Winchester, where he conducted the first and only peal on the bells.

The Vice-Chairman (Mr. George Mash) then gave "The London and Provincial Societies and Visitors." They were glad, he said, in welcoming so many that evening whom they did not often have the pleasure of seeing. They were pleased to welcome Mr. Thomas, of the Cumberlands, with a few friends. The attendance of their own members from Sudbury and other places on such an occasion as the present was very gratifying, and he hoped they would attend on similar occasions for many years to come.

Mr. Thomas, of Battersea, rose to respond to the toast. He and his friends had spent a very pleasant evening, and he thanked their worthy Chairman for so kindly sending him an invitation to be present. Should any of the company there that evening ever visit Battersea, he would be delighted to meet and welcome them to that steeple.

Song—"The fine Old English Gentleman," by Mr. George Dorrington.

A course of Stedman Caters was then rung on the handbells by Messrs. W. Cooter, 1-2; F. E. Dawe, 3-4; C. F. Winny, 5-6; W. H. L. Buckingham, 7-8; A. W. Barkus, 9-10.

Mr. W. Tyack next proposed "The Master and Officers of the Ancient Society of College Youths." Most of these gentlemen he said were known to the company, and it was almost unnecessary to mention them individually. They were highly respected by ringers generally, as was well-known. Mr. Tyack related one or two amusing episodes; one where he was indebted to the Trustees of the society—Messrs. Mash and Dorrington—for his first touch of "stone" on twelve; and another where he had seen a collection of gaspipes made to do duty for bells. The relation of these incidents created some amount of laughter.

Song—"The Long Peal at St. Michael's, Cornhill," by Mr. J. Dwight. At the conclusion of this song the company rose en masse, and cheered the veteran loudly, and drank his health amid hearty bursts of applause, which merged at length into the refrain "He's a fine Old English gentleman, one of the olden time."

Mr. Woodley then responded to the toast proposed by Mr. Tyack. He reviewed the position of the society, and gave some interesting particulars of the large increase of members, to the number of eighty, which had taken place during the past year, and other matters. His observations touching the continued prosperity of the society were well received.

The next toast was "The Press," which in the absence of Mr. Cooter was proposed by Mr. F. W. Thornton, who said the society had rung over seventy peals during the past twelve months, which were faithfully recorded in "THE BELL NEWS." They and all ringers owed something to that journal, as by it they were provided with ringing news from week to week when no other source was open to them. He coupled with that toast the name of Mr. H. Reeves, the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS."

A song ably given by Mr. Tyack was then well received.

The Editor of "THE BELL NEWS" was then called upon by the Master to respond to the toast of "The Press." Mr. Reeves said he was greatly obliged to Mr. Thornton for the manner in which he had spoken of "THE BELL NEWS," and was also grateful to the company for the reception the toast had met with. He was glad to hear from the worthy Secretary (Mr. Woodley), that the society had had such an increase of members this year, because that no doubt indicated an increase in the circulation of the paper. The conduct of the paper involved a deal of labour, and required at times some amount of forbearance. He thanked them all for drinking the toast.

"Auld Lang Syne" was then sung, and the company soon afterwards separated, and the 253rd Festival of the Ancient Society of College Youths—probably the most successful of them—was at an end.

The ringing at St. Michael's, previous to the dinner, comprised two touches of Grandsire Caters, by Messrs. Newman, Cartmel, Adams, Comb, Garrard, Richards, J. George, W. H. George, Cockerill, Barkus, Sillitoe, Payne and Smart. And a course of Stedman Cinques by Messrs. C. Mee, Haworth, Sillitoe, Winny, Newman, Horrex, Woodley, H. R. Newton, Barkus, W. H. George, Cockerill and Garrard. On the Monday following, several of the visitors, with some of the London members, met at Fulham for a peal of Stedman Caters, but meeting short started for Triples instead, which came to an end after ringing 45 mins. F. G. Newman (conductor), 1; R. T. Woodley, 2; C. Sillitoe, 3; C. F. Winny, 4; W. Howell, 5; A. S. Barrell, 6; J. W. Driver, 7; E. H. Adams, 8. Then in the afternoon they came back and started for a peal of Grandsire Caters, which also came to grief after ringing 1 hr. J. W. Driver (conductor), 1; C. F. Winny, 2; C. Sillitoe, 3; R. T. Woodley, 4; E. H. Adams, 5; E. Richards, 6; W. Howell, 7; A. S. Barrell, 8; F. G. Newman, 9; S. How, 10.

THE ST. MICHAEL'S JUNIORS.—UNVEILING OF A PEAL TABLET.

ON Thursday, November 6th, at St. Michael's church, Gloucester, the members of the above society assembled to witness the unveiling of a peal tablet by the Mayor of Gloucester, W. Stafford, Esq. The Rev. G. James, President of the society, said he had much pleasure in requesting the Mayor to kindly unveil a tablet which records a peal of Stedman Triples rang on St. Michael's bells about a month since by the members of the society, a performance, he said, which all who took part in it might well be proud of, as it was not, he was sure, accomplished without much perseverance, and was in fact the first peal in the method ever rang in the city.

The Mayor said it gave him much pleasure to meet the company. It was the first time he had met them and he hoped it would not be the last, as he had always taken a great interest in change-ringing, and should be most pleased to do anything he could for the society. His Worship then unveiled the tablet, which was of brass mounted on oak, and which had beautifully engraved on it the following inscription: "Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association: The St. Michael's Juniors rang in this tower, September 25th, 1890, in 3 hrs. 9 mins., a peal of Stedman Triples (Thurstans' composition), 5040 changes. E. E. Bewick, treble; G. L. Brunson, 2; E. B. James, 3; F. E. Hart, 4; W. H. Brunson, 5; S. E. Romans, 6; H. L. James, 7; W. J. Sevier, Tenor. Conducted by H. L. James. This is the first peal in this method in the city." The tablet was the work of Messrs. Warner and Sons, of London.

Mr. S. Romans proposed, and the Mayor seconded, a vote of thanks to the Rev. G. James for presiding that evening, and also for so largely contributing towards the cost of the tablet.

During the evening several touches of Bob Major, and Stedman and Grandsire Triples were rung by the following members; H. Brawn, E. E. Bewick, R. Brunson, G. Brunson, W. Brunson, W. J. Sevier, F. E. Hart, C. Jones, H. Mitchell, R. J. Wilkins, J. Austin, and S. E. Romans. Mr. J. Austin hails from Burton-on-Trent.

CHIPPENHAM (Wilts).—On Monday, November 17th, at the parish church of St. Paul, six 6-scores of Grandsire Doubles, each called differently in 27 mins., by the local company on the back six. *A. Hull, 1; *T. Daniels, 2; J. Cleaver (conductor), 3; A. Knight, 4; *E. Merrett, 5; *G. Chandler, 6. Tenor 16½ cwt. in Eb. *First 720. Rung on the birthday of T. Daniels.

ASSOCIATION OF MONMOUTHSHIRE RINGERS.

Several years ago one of the leading resident ringers of the county proposed an amalgamation of the bell-ringers in the county of Monmouth, with the same objects in view as those of existing Guilds, but as the suggestion appeared somewhat premature at the time, the idea has laid dormant until recently. Events have since transpired, such as belfry reformation, restoration of peals of bells, increase of change-ringing, etc., which has induced the writer to bring the matter forward again in the columns of "THE BELL NEWS" by way of ventilating the subject.

Mr. Wm. Honeyfield, The Square, Monmouth, has kindly undertaken to act as Hon. Secretary pro tem., to whom all communications may be addressed.

Now the winter is upon us an excellent opportunity exists of completing preliminary arrangements before the close of the year, so that the year A.D. 1891 may see the starting of one more brotherhood. It is believed most of the clergy and churchwardens of the following towers will assist; some have consented, while the head ringers of each would act as useful promoters of the Art in the neighbouring parishes: Caerleon, Newport, Chepstow, Monmouth, each peals of eight bells; also Magor, Matherne, Llangattock, and Raglan, six bells each.

Valuable officers may be found in the Rev. Pitt Eykyn, Magor, F. E. Ward, Esq., and Mr. Davies of Newport, Messrs. Morgan and Smith of Chepstow, Messrs. W. Honeyfield and Jones of Monmouth, all practical men.

Much assistance would be given if the clergy in the country who see these remarks would please write direct to Mr. Honeyfield at once, stating their willingness to enlist with their churchwardens as honorary members; also if the head ringer or foreman of each belfry (where there is a ring of five bells or upwards) would please write and give the names of his men willing to join, particulars of bells, what ringing done, and practice nights.

A General Meeting might well be arranged in the latter half of December, at some convenient centre, when a Committee could be formed, officers elected, suitable steps taken to collect funds, and make the objects wider known.

Apologies are tendered to those advocates who have not been mentioned in these remarks, their co-operation is earnestly asked. All ringers would be eligible for election, provided they be Churchmen of good character. Every tower should be in union; there is room for much improvement even in the old style of ringing now practised in many belfries. Kindness and forbearance towards those, who (for many years subject to neglect and abuse) helped to sustain bell-ringing under great disadvantages, is the quickest and safest means of promoting and extending change-ringing.

THE PRINTERS' PEAL—A PEAL BOARD.

Sunday last was the anniversary of this peal, which was successfully rung at St. Edward's, Romford, on Saturday, November 16th, 1889. It will be remembered the peal was rung by a band of the Essex Association, the whole being engaged in following the various grades of the art introduced to England by Caxton. Since the peal was rung it has been several times suggested that it was worthy of a peal-board, and hopes were entertained that one day it might be possible to adorn the walls of the tower with such an appropriate addition. Recently, upon one of the band going into the tower, a large parcel was found standing at the entrance. Strange to say it also bore the same individual's name, so it was quickly unpacked, and found to be a handsome peal-board, recording the above peal. On Sunday morning it came as a surprise to the local band, everyone admiring the style of calligraphy adopted. The board has since been erected in the tower and proves very attractive. The only information to hand is that the board is the gift of a gentleman who considered the performance by such a band worthy of a board. To such the local band, on behalf of themselves and on behalf of the "printers' band," beg to return their sincere thanks for one of the most elaborate boards to be found in any Essex tower. Upon fixing the board on Monday evening a 504 of Grandsire Triples was rang upon the handbells. B. Keeble, 1-2; A. J. Perkins (conductor), 3-4; M. Myhill, 5-6; A. Copsey, 7-8. Also touches of Oxford and Kent Treble Bob, and Double Court Bob Minor.

ST. ANDREW'S BELLS, NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

In the year 1826 a pamphlet on these bells was published by two of the ringers, dedicated by them to the clergy, churchwardens, overseers, and others. This gave a full account of the inscriptions on the bells, together with the following statement:

"It is generally allowed by professional men that this peal has never been surpassed, and but seldom equalled, in point of musical correctness and harmony of tone, by any other peal that has been cast either before or since that time. Not one bell in the six is in any degree faulty."

The almost extravagant praise given to the tone of these bells in the foregoing paragraph was not exaggerated as the bells then stood, but I am afraid it does not hold good now. A few years ago the tenor (a really beautiful bell, and one of Phelps' best efforts) was cracked, as was also the 4th, by the wretched practice of "clocking." One would have thought that this would have been a warning to the ringers, and that in the future they would be swung in the orthodox manner, but no, if one passes the church on a Sunday evening he can hear the treble, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th being "clocked" for service, and though their tone is sweet, they have a most melancholy effect without the predominant note. The hangings and ropes are still in a fairly good condition. When the bells were first placed in the tower it is evident they were meant for a peal of eight, as there are spaces in which to place two trebles. I have heard a rumour that money was left by Major Anderson, the donor of the clock-bell at the Cathedral, and that the churchwardens have put off getting them all these years, saying that the tower was too insecure to hold more, but the ringers of this district are inclined to think that two light trebles would make very little difference, if any, to a massive square tower such as St. Andrew's is. But perhaps the present Vicar (Rev. J. M. Lister) could enlighten us as to these points.

It is a fact, to the great discredit of the "canny toon" be it said, that within a radius of a mile in this district there are four peals of bells in a perfectly unringable condition, viz.: the Cathedral (8), All Saints (8), St. Mary's, Gateshead (8), and St. Andrew's. As regards the two former, steps are being taken to put them in order, but "the powers that be" at the two latter seem to be in a delightful state of indifference with respect to the condition of so important and valuable a part of their respective churches as the tower and its musical contents.

THE WORCESTERSHIRE AND ADJOINING DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION.

On Saturday, November 15th, a committee and quarterly meeting of the above, was held at St. Martin's Schoolroom, Tipton. The Rev. A. A. Cory, vicar, presiding. There was a good attendance of members from Bromsgrove, Brierley Hill, Belbroughton, Cradley, Dudley, Kidderminster, Netherton, Old Hill, Stourbridge, Stoke Prior, Tipton, Wollaston and Worcester. The chairman, in a neat speech, welcomed the members of the above Association to his centre, and remarked that it was a great pleasure to him to have a peal of bells at his church, and a good band of ringers connected with them, and spoke in great praise of ringers generally. The rev. gentleman also said that he considered ringing the healthiest and safest recreation a person could be engaged in, because it brought into action at one and the same time the mental and muscular powers of the body; and he was pleased to see and know that it was becoming more and more appreciated by the clergy and laity of the church. Several new members were elected, with Mr. J. George of Rugby, as a life member. The usual business being transacted, a vote of thanks to the rev. chairman for presiding, and for the use of the tower and bells, brought the meeting to a close. During the afternoon and evening touches of Grandsire Minor, Plain Bob, Stedman Triples, Plain Bob and Treble Bob Major, were rung, the tower bells, being under the supervision of Mr. W. R. Small, the tower keeper, in good going order. Several courses of Grandsire Triples, &c. were also rang upon the handbells.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"God speed all good friends!"

The effect of all the good news of last week was considerably neutralised by the events which took place at Fulham. Every ringer who has had the slightest acquaintance (either personally or through the press) with the happy state of affairs which has existed in this parish, so far as vicar and ringers were concerned, will sympathise with our brother-strings at All Saints on the loss they are sustaining in the removal of Mr. Fisher from amongst them. In fact, to think about All Saints, Fulham, at all, without its genial vicar, Mr. Fisher, is like seeing a certain well-known play of Shakespeare's with the principal character left out.

Well, it is an old saying (and these old sayings will persist in coming to one's mind) that the best of friends must part sooner or later, however painful severance may be; and in this case there is also the consolation of looking forward to many happy reunions in the future.

The young band at Eynesbury (Hunts) have, after a few months' perseverance, succeeded in ringing some six-scores of Bob Doubles. This is creditable progress, but when we consider the fact that they have been self-taught, or in the words of the paragraph "have overcome the difficulties of change-ringing without an instructor," their performance is doubly praiseworthy. But my young friends, it is scarcely correct to say that you have "overcome the difficulties of change-ringing," and this you will find out as you get along. You have, evidently, surmounted the initial difficulty, which is of no small moment; yet others, and tough ones too, will arise from time to time. At the same time, if only you display the same characteristic of perseverance and energy which has been apparent in your past efforts, you will surmount each difficulty as it arises, and eventually, I doubt not, in the near future, achieve greater things, and prove yourselves worthy scions of the Exercise.

The Eynesbury band commenced young—so much the better for them; Mr. Henry Wyburn, of Bath, had reached fifty-four years before he began to study the intricacies of change-ringing. But he has accomplished his first peal; and I hardly know which to compliment the most, Mr. Wyburn, or his "next man," Thomas Gray, who rang the second in it at the early age of fifteen years; so I will say, good luck to both of you.

I am tempted sometimes, when I see such an array of reports of new rings mounted, or old ones augmented and re-hung, to wish I had been brought up a bell-founder; for they must be having a brisk time of it, for a certainty. Only a fortnight ago, I remarked upon this circumstance, and last week we have several more accounts. Besides these, information of several other "renovations" now in progress have reached me; notably among which is the placing of the well-known ring at Ripon Minster in a new frame, and their meditated augmentation in the shape of two trebles. At Wakefield, also, a correspondent tells me, it is intended to rehang the present ring of ten, of which the citizens are so proud; and that the addition of two trebles is also "on the carpet." So altogether, it appears that not even the Mc

Kinley tariff has had no effect upon our bell-men, and their business, for which, no doubt they are prodigiously thankful.

But here I must conclude for this week; as time is flying quickly as usual, and I have more calls upon my time for the next few days than I shall be able to comply with. So au revoir, a longer chat next week, perhaps.

FREE LANCE.

HOW CHANGE-RINGING IS PROPAGATED.

I have written the following under the above heading in order that those whose read it and have the opportunity may go and do likewise. Some years ago an ardent change-ringer, one whose name appears almost every week in this paper, came to reside in the neighbourhood of Midhurst, a small ancient town in the north-west of Sussex, where there is a very musical ring of six bells, tenor about 12 cwt., and of course (as all ringers should) soon made himself acquainted with the local ringers by visiting their belfry on a practice-night, rounds and call-changes being all that was done at that time, but he finding they were anxious to learn something further of the Art, at once kindly offered his services to instruct them. A new set of handbells were soon procured from Mr. G. Welch, Bankside, Southwark, and each armed with a copy of Rope-Sight, they were soon on the war-path, with the result that a 720 of Bob Minor was soon scored, being the first by all the band and first on the bells. Soon after this a date touch and then a 5040 of Plain Bob, each 720 called differently. This was the maiden peal on the bells, and a peal-board was soon erected in the belfry to record the event. In less than a month another maiden peal was scored on a new peal of six by Taylor and Co., of Loughborough, at Milland, Sussex. After this 720, the following methods were rung: Oxford Bob, College Single, Yorkshire Court, Canterbury Pleasure, Double Oxford, and Oxford and Kent Treble Bob. Some of the band have scored two or three peals in seven different methods. At last circumstances over which they had no control, compelled three of them to leave the place. Almost at the same time they had to set to work again to hunt up fresh recruits, and after a deal of patient labour they were rewarded by seeing two of them score their first 720, and in that tower alone sixteen men have learnt change-ringing, and have all rang their first 720 there. Out of this number ten take in our valuable paper "THE BELL NEWS," and by the assistance from the members of this tower, several more towers in the neighbourhood have made good progress in the Art, and one of them has invented and made and fixed a silent apparatus in the tower, which works admirably, and is of great benefit to the ringers for practice.

Composed by HENRY DAINS and Conducted by GEORGE NEWSON.

Thirty years have elapsed since a peal of Treble Bob Royal was rung on these bells. The composition of the present performance has the 5th nine times home, and the 6th nine times wrong and home, in nine courses, and is now rung for the first time. It was arranged to commemorate the birthday of Messrs. E. F. Cole and B. Foskett, which fell upon the same date, their ringing friends wishing them many happy returns. *First peal in the method upon ten bells.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

A COMPLAINT.

SIR,—In your editorial remarks anent my resolution at the Hull meeting, retring tournament, you somewhat sneeringly remark that only six voted for my motion (no doubt caused by reading the report), which I say was misleading, as it omitted the real facts of the voting. I think it will be generally admitted that I have been treated unfairly all the way through in respect of my motion, as it took me one whole year to get my motion before a meeting, and when at last I got it before the meeting, how was I treated? my motion was placed No. 9 on the agenda. I and many of my friends had to go to Hull by trip on the L. and Y. R., and we were timed to start back at 7.25. I told the secretary and president before the meeting commenced, and asked them to bring it forward as soon as possible, they promised they would do so; judge of my surprise when at ten minutes to seven the president called the two delegates to the "Central," to give their report, I appealed to him to give me a chance; of course he did, and when I rose to speak all my friends who intended voting for me had to hurry off to the station, and I had to go as well without voting.

THOMAS STEAD.

STEDMAN TRIPLES.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to tell Mr. Washbrook that the simple shunt used by him in the peal at Boyne Hill is not the same as that mentioned by Mr. Heywood. The shunt with pairing singles referred to, if applied to Thurstans' four quarter-peals is as follows:—Produce the four following course-ends—456231, 156324, 523416, 532146, with S2 and S14 at the end of the four courses to which these course-ends belong, and the thing will fall into two blocks, then add two sixes to connect the two halves. It is true that the two halves will come together by omitting two singles, in which case the shunting chain will be broken, and the shunt will become of the simplest kind. Many interesting variations of Thurstans' peal may be had, here is one that may interest Mr. Washbrook; produce the four following course-ends—351246, 152436, 254316, 453126, with S2, and S14 to prevent their turning up twice, and the thing will be thrown into two four-part blocks, then add the two connecting singles.

J. J. PARKER.

A PROTEST.

SIR,—Allow me to protest against the way the pages of "THE BELL NEWS" are taken up in recording the ringing of Grandsire Doubles; for what with the repetition of ringers' names in some of the nonsensical performances recorded, and their frequent recurrence, I think your space for such is absolutely wasted. I am always pleased to see any ringers' progress, and where such is the case their doings should, for encouragement, be reported; but too many six-bell ringers have for years contented themselves with Grandsire Doubles and there stopped. One band in your last issue who for years have rang Doubles, and have a good ring of eight, reported their Grandsire Doubles doings on the six bells, most of their names repeated over and over again. Other bands were nearly as bad. Do please check these reports.

Mr. ATTREE'S ANALYSIS.

SIR,—If Mr. Attree will refer to peals rung during the month of August, he will observe there were eight by the Kent County Association, not seven as published, making the total to the end of September forty-five, not forty-four as stated.

R. SIMMONDS.

Maidstone.

THE ANALYSIS OF PEALS.

SIR,—Mr. F. Pitstow evidently believes in the theory of "calling out before he is hurt," for in last week's "BELL NEWS" he informs your readers that he has discovered two errors in my last analysis. First he says "he sees that the Essex Association is credited with one peal of Stedman instead of two," if he looks again and a little more carefully at his "BELL NEWS," he will find that the figure opposite the Essex Association and below the word Stedman is two and not one. Secondly, he complains that the Norwich Association is not credited with any Surprise peal, whereas they scored one at Redenhall. My reply to this is that my analysis is published only to the end of September, so it is somewhat unreasonable of Mr. Pitstow to expect to find a performance which did not take place till the 11th of October included in the analysis of peals for the first nine months of the present year.

GEORGE F. ATTREE.

STEDMAN CATERS AT CHELSEA.

SIR,—Your correspondent's mention of Mr. Newson's short coming-home course (50 changes) from Tittum position, in the peal in question does not seem in dispute. I fancy it was first used in a peal rung at Leatherhead, in which I assisted some years ago. I think, also, it might have been stated that it was the shortest number with its limited calls, but is not the shortest from a 9-7-8 course-end, as I have several shorter. I imagine there can not be more than one shortest possible, and think it ought to be equally interesting to know what it is, and the number of changes to produce it. Until I know to the contrary, having rang it twice, the claimant to the production of the same, if not objected to, will be

JOHN ROGERS.

WALTON-ON-THE-HILL (Lancashire).—On Friday, October 31st, at St. Mary's church, 720 London Single Bob Minor in 25 mins. F. Musker, 1; H. Kelly, 2; R. Hurst, 3; T. R. Somerville, 4; W. Bramley, 5; C. E. Wilson (conductor), 6. This is the first 720 in the method by Messrs. Musker, Kelly, Hurst, and Bramley. Tenor 9 cwt.

Obituary.

RICHARD WILLIAMS.

It is with deep regret that we have to announce the death of the above gentleman, which event took place on Tuesday, November 4th, at his residence 94, South Street, Liverpool, after a short but painful illness, at the ripe old age of seventy-nine. On Wednesday, October 29th, on the occasion of the opening of the new Royal Infirmary by H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, he was engaged doing his duty throughout the day with his fellow-members at the Cathedral church of St. Peter. Shortly after reaching his home, he was suddenly taken ill, but hopes were entertained of his recovery till Sunday, November 2nd, when he was seized with a fit from which he never recovered. On Monday, November 3rd, he was attacked with apoplexy, from which he gradually sank, and expired at 9 p.m. on Tuesday, November 4th, the death-bed being surrounded by his sons and daughter, and relatives. On Saturday, November 8th, the funeral took place at Anfield Cemetery, in his own burial place, and was attended by the members of St. Peter's, St. Nicholas, and St. Luke's; also from Southport, Woolton and Prescott. His body was borne to the grave by Messrs. Hammond, Booth, Brown, and Hislop, being followed to the grave by his two sons Robert and Charles, three grandsons, son-in-law, and a large circle of ringers and friends. The same evening, by the kind permission of Archdeacon Clarke, a muffled date touch of Treble Bob was rung on the bells of Christ Church, Southport. And on Thursday, November 13th, at St. Peter's Cathedral, where he had been a ringer for fifty-five years, touches of Treble Bob, Grandsire and Stedman Caters were rung. He had also been a member of the Ancient Society of College Youths for the last thirty-six years, and was a member of the Lancashire Association. He was born at Madeley, Shropshire, on February 10th, 1811. He always took a keen interest in imparting the art of ringing to young beginners, though he never took to conducting. As a ringer he had taken part in upwards of 100 peals in different methods. On Monday, November 17th, at St. Luke's, Liverpool, a peal of 5040 was rung with the bells deeply muffled.

THOMAS ROBINSON.

The Essex Association has just lost a warm supporter by the death of the above gentleman, who died at Romford after a very brief illness on Thursday, November 6th. Soon after the formation of the Association, without any solicitation, Mr. Robinson became an hon. member, and frequently made inquiries as to the progress of the Association, at the same time proving himself a thorough Churchman by taking an interest in the local band. Coming to Romford from Yorkshire in 18— after occupying a prominent position in the London and County Bank, Mr. Robinson started in business as a bookseller and fancy stationer, and proving himself to be a thorough genuine and upright man of business, he became as a tradesman very successful. His name was well-known throughout the surrounding district, for many miles he was held in general esteem, having won the respect of all classes. For many years he was a member of the Local Board and also the Burial Board, occupations for which he was well fitted for. The funeral took place on Tuesday, November 11th, and was largely attended. The local band regard his death as irretrievable, and as a mark of respect the bells at St. Edward's church were rung half-muffled on Sunday. In the morning a start was made for a quarter-peal of Grandsire Triples, but the start was not made soon enough to complete the attempt. In the afternoon a 720 of Bob Minor was rung. S. James, 1; A. J. Perkins, 2; W. Nash, 3; J. Watson, 4; M. Myhill (conductor), 5; B. Keeble, 6.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

MANCHESTER BRANCH.—The ringing meeting held at St. Paul's church, Walkden, on Saturday, November 15th, was fairly attended with members from Manchester, Eccles, Worsley, Swinton and Pendlebury. Some ringing was done in various Minor methods during the evening. At the meeting held in the belfry, and presided over by the Vicar, the Rev. C. Heath, M.A., it was decided to hold the next meeting at Worsley parish church, on Saturday, December 13th. It also transpired that the local company are desirous of augmenting their present peal of six to one of eight by adding two new trebles, the Vicar being much in favour of this proposal from his own ringers, promising to do his best to obtain them at an early date, providing Mr. William Denner would get two other men trained for the extra ropes, this promise being made. Mr. Barratt, of the Eccles company, offered their services with handbell music, should they get up one or two concerts, with a view to raising the sum of £75 (a sum named by Mr. Ed. Cash, of Swinton, as being about the figure for two trebles of the required weight), for the purchase of the two new bells. The Vicar, responding, said he had had great pleasure in presiding at the meeting, and thanked them all very much for the proposition and suggestions they had made with regard to the bells. One new member was enrolled. Votes of thanks were accorded to the Vicar for presiding and allowing the members the use of the bells, and to Mr. W. Denner for having all in readiness.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

THE ESSEX ASSOCIATION.

ASSINGTON (Suffolk).—On Wednesday, October 1st, the following members of the Sudbury company rang at St. Edmund's church muffled touches of Bob Minor and Treble Bob before and after the funeral of Mr. J. Dyer, who was interred that day. The deceased was one of the leading gentlemen who were the means of having the peal of bells hung in the tower of this church, himself being a large subscriber, and it was with mixed feelings of sorrow and regret that the bells should, only the day after being opened, be sending forth their solemn muffled tones for one who had taken such a prominent part in bringing a new peal of bells to the parish. In the evening a 720 of Kent Treble Bob was rung, with the bells half-muffled, by C. Sillitoe (conductor), 1; W. Cross, 2; W. Bacon, 3; J. Campin, 4; A. Scott, 5; H. Harper, 6. This is the first 720 in the method on the bells. Tenor 10½ cwt.

BRAUGHING, HERTS.

On Wednesday, November 12th, a party drove over to Braughing for a day's ringing on St. Mary's bells. It consisted of Squire Proctor, Canon Wigram (who had been his guest on the previous evening), and the Bennington band—S. Page, Nathan, Jabez, and O. Warner, Joseph and John Titchener, C. Sharnbrook, and L. Chapman. Touches were rung in six different methods, viz.: two courses of Cambridge Surprise, a quarter-peal of Superlative Surprise, 448 Double Norwich Court, 556 Kent Treble Bob, 252 Stedman Triples, and 220 Grandsire Triples.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To Geo. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

XXVI.

THE Q POSITION AS AFFECTED BY H.

BY THE REV. H. EARLE BULWER.

Keeping the diagram appended to the last article before us, a reference to Table S, Pt. II., or to the Synopsis (Table U), will shew that if all the connections of Col. I. to Col. III. be used, all the Qs of Col. I. must, in accordance with "q" set requirements, be plained: and, conversely, if none of those connections are employed, all those Qs must be bobbed. Similarly, if all the connections of Col. II. to Col. III. be made, all the Qs of Col. II. must be plained; or, if the connections be unused, those Qs must be bobbed. Again, if the connections of the groups with one another (to be hereafter known as "inner connections") in either Col. I. or Col. II. be used, half of the Qs of Col. III. must in either case be plained: if none of those inner connections are employed in either column, all the Qs of Col. III. must be bobbed. To secure an equal distribution of bobs at Q it is, therefore, obvious that one only of the two connections to Col. III. must be used in each of Cols. I. and II., and the inner connections of (1) either Col. I. or Col. II.—but not of both; or (2) such a proportion in each as will cause one pair of blocks only in each group of Col. III. to be plained.

Putting aside the consideration of (2) for the present, it will be noticed that in the other supposed cases, or any combination of them, all the groups in each column will be treated alike in H and Q. Under these circumstances, if the groups be filled in, the resultant will be in every case a composition on the five-part plan in one or other of its forms. But in no case of this kind is it possible to work out all the groups of one of the columns in their entirety. Even with the most favourable arrangement, there will be at least the equivalent of one block in each group of one of the columns which will refuse to be worked in by bobs.

The cause of this is usually to be traced to the use of the inner connections in either Col. I. or Col. II. For when these connections are employed, although they furnish a shunt from group to group which may be readily used in one direction, yet they will not admit of a return in the opposite direction, unless some deviation from the regular calling be resorted to to overcome the obstacle. The connection between these groups is, in fact, a double interlacing one, which needs to be interrupted at certain points, if a return through the same connections is to be effected.

In a peal in regular parts, called alike, a deviation of this kind would be inadmissible: therefore the portions of groups which refused to be worked in with the rest have to be formed into a combined block by themselves, and are introduced into the composition between singles. There is never any difficulty in forming such a block, because the unused 'return' connections are available for stringing the detached portions of groups together. The latter may also under certain conditions be introduced separately between singles: but the power of doing this is limited.

In peals constructed on an irregular five-part plan, or by quarter-peals, a deviation from the general run of the calling is allowable: and, indeed, such peals could not well be produced without it, unless additional singles were admitted. The deviation is accomplished by the device known as "extras and omits," and consists in this:—At a carefully chosen opportunity, to prevent the composition coming to a premature end, or running back to a previous change, a position, which by the general calling adopted would have gone plain, is bobbed; thus constituting an "extra": or, if it would have been bobbed, it is plained; constituting an "omit." In either case a shunt is obtained, and the current, so to speak, of the composition is turned, enabling the connections already passed through in one direction to be returned through in the other; thus working in the remaining portions of the groups. The "extras" or "omits," as the case may be, must be used in pairs; the members of a pair being equidistant from each other; and they must be balanced, according to "q set" requirements, in another part of the Triplets in which they occur by "omits" or "extras" respectively. This, of course, further deranges the calling, and, not infrequently, causes the omission of a portion of a group in another part of the composition, which must be afterwards singled in. In compositions consisting of two main blocks in each of which shunts are required, the variation in the calling must be so arranged that the "extras" are called in one block and the "omits" in the other; one of the main blocks in such cases being generally singled in bodily.

Mr. Heywood's two-part table(N), as bearing upon his analysis of Thurstans' masterpiece (Art. xx.) exhibits in an admirable manner the action of "extras and omits" in obtaining the necessary shunts. The beauty of the illustration is due to the fact that the construction of the peal, and that of the table, are so far in accord, that the sub-observation, that is, the working bell undisturbed by the deviations from the regular calling, is the same as that which in the two parts of the table is also undisturbed. If the "extra" were called in any other part of Thurstans' quarter-peal at an analogous point, the result, so far as the shunt is concerned, would be the same; but the phenomenon of the shunting "q set" would not be so apparent, unless the arrangement of the table were altered to correspond with the change of observation. In other words, there are other shunting "q sets" besides those in which the members on either side are numbered alike according to the table; but their virtue will not appear on the surface, unless the arrangement of the table happens to accord with the placing of the "extras and omits." In composing by diagram the action of the shunting "q set" is seen with uniform clearness wherever the "extra" is placed. For there are five points in the quarter-peal in which blocks with the "part-bell" (the 6th) at home (numbered 1 to 10 inclusive) will bob into each other. At any one of those points the "extra" may be called, and it is at once seen that the "current" of the composition is turned.

This digression to the natural history of "extras and omits" has been necessary in order to show how the disability attending the inner connections may be overcome; as well as to clear the way for the consideration of certain definite arrangements of H and Q.

To these we will now proceed.

If no connections are used from Col. I. to Col. III. it follows that all the Qs of Col. I. will be bobbed; and since to escape from group a it is necessary that connection should be made with some other group, it is plain that the inner connections of Col. I. must be used. It is also obvious that, there being no connection between Col. I. and Col. II. by means of bobs, Col. I. must be worked out as a block by itself; and the other Cols. as a block by themselves, and placed between singles. But as has before been shown, it is not possible to work out the groups of Col. I. in their entirety by means of inner connections alone. To complete the working, the device of "extras and omits" must be used. I can call to mind only one peal, which is not a bob-and-single one, in which Col. I. is thus treated, and that is Mr. Washbrook's very fine composition published in its correct form in "THE BELL NEWS" for December 14th, 1889. If we treat Col. II. in the same way, it can be placed in a separate block, between singles, at the commencement of the composition and Cols. I. and III. afterwards worked out together to form the main body of the peal. The result will be Mr. Washbrook's peal reversed, and, as I think, in a preferable form. Only one set of inner connections is used, therefore half the Qs of Col. III. will be bobbed, and half plained. This makes up the full ordinary number of thirty Qs bobbed, therefore both connections of the remaining Col. II. to Col. III. must be employed. But the "omits and extras" if placed, as they should be, at H and Q, will give two more bobbed Qs, making thirty-two altogether—quite an exceptionable number in a peal with only two singles, and due to the adoption of this peculiar arrangement.

Notwithstanding the fact that Thurstan's well-known peal is so constructed, the arrangement by which all the Qs are bobbed in Col. III. and those only, is one that presents great difficulties. Here again the disability which attaches to inner connections, attaches also to the double interlacing connections of Cols. I and II. to Col. III. Short shunting parts of two or three courses are obtainable, as in Thurstan's peal; but attempts to obtain a longer part will generally result in rounds coming up at the first part-end, that is to say, if the requirements of the "q" set, as determined by analogy between group and group, are observed. The difficulties may be modified by suppressing one of the connections, per group, of Col. II. to Col. III.; but even then it is necessary to use mixed calling for the S and L positions, in order to obtain a satisfactory result; which will probably take the form of a nine-course part, leaving the remaining 15 courses to come in as a separate block, which they will do most likely in the form of Thurstan's quarter-peal, either in even-courses, or between singles, or by means of "extras and omits." Examples of both kinds of treatment will be found in Mr. Heywood's No. 6, and my No. 7.

The easiest arrangement of H and Q, is that by which the Qs are bobbed and plained equally in each group, one complete set of inner connections only being used. The result of this is a five-part peal in regular parts, which almost composes itself, so simple is the arrangement. It does not admit, however, of much diversity in treatment, and the peals procurable on the plan are, for the most part, but variants of each other.

In the above cases all the corresponding Hs and Qs of a column are supposed to be treated alike, save for such deviations as may be caused by "extras and omits;" and the results, as we have seen, are compositions presenting the features of the five part plan. It is not, however, necessary to treat groups of any Col. in this uniform way; by departing from it, we may obtain peals on three, two, or one part plans, an example of which, by arrangement (2) will be given.

The method of originating and constructing such peals will be described in the next article.

The following chain of connections forms the skeleton of an unpublished variation on the regular five-part plan. Those readers, who care to do so, will find it a good exercise in this system of composition if they endeavour to fill it in by means of a Diagram.

NEWMARKET (Cambridge).—On Tuesday, November 25th, at All Saints church, a 720 of Bob Minor. R. Cole, 1; A. Bearcock, 2; W. Saddler, 3; W. Taylor, 4; A. Pilgrim (conductor), 5; J. Vail, 6. Rung on the occasion of a meeting of ringers from Newmarket and Ely, who wish to thank the vicar very heartily for his kind hospitality to them.

THE LATE JASPER W. SNOWDON.

An interesting meeting, convened by the Yorkshire Association, in connection with the national memorial to the late Mr. Snowdon, took place at Pudsey on Saturday last. Shortly before four o'clock Messrs. B. T. Copley, Hon. Sec. (Bradford), J. H. Hardcastle, Steward (Bradford), S. Langstaff (Pudsey), W. Bolland (Tong), W. Stainthorpe, Treasurer (Birstall), W. Barraclough, Committeeman (Halifax), Thomas Pollitt (Bradford), and John Haley (Tong), rang at St. Lawrence's church a touch of Treble Bob, in the presence of the Vicar and a numerous assembly of members. At its conclusion,

Mr. W. Snowdon opened the proceedings by stating that in that quiet little meeting they were about to bring to a close the business of a memorial fund in which interest had been taken by almost every ringer throughout the kingdom. It would be remembered that in the printed balance-sheets which were issued to subscribers, and which bore an illustration of the very beautiful stained window placed in Ilkley church, a sum of 3*l.* 9*s.* 6½*d.* remained, out of which the postage of these balance-sheets was to be paid. This postage had amounted to 1*l.* 0*s.* 0½*d.*, leaving 2*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.* unexpended. The executive Committee in this matter (i.e. the Committee of the Yorkshire Association) then felt that a tablet recording the last peal rung by Jasper Snowdon, erected in the belfry where it was performed, would be an interesting relic in time to come. Mr. Charles Jackson, of Hull, thereupon volunteered to make and present the tablet itself, on the Committee defraying the cost of painting. As this course still rendered it possible to send a small contribution to the Johnson Memorial Fund, the double object met with unanimous approval. Thirty shillings had thus been expended on the painting, and the remainder, 1*9s.* 3*d.*, remitted to Mr. Godden, of Birmingham. This completed, he felt certain, in a most satisfactory manner, the work of the committee in connection with the memorial. There was one little point which he could not refrain from mentioning, before concluding his remarks. One of the names upon the tablet was that of a life-long personal friend of his dear brother (Mr. Robert Tuke), who rang with Jasper in his first peal; his longest peal (10,000 of Treble Bob Major at St. James's, Bolton), and his last peal, that which was now so eminently recorded. Both those two friends had passed away, but all the other six remained, and the circumstance was so strong on his mind that he could not help referring to it. Then asking the Vicar to uncover the tablet, reminded him of the great pleasure it always gave ringers to meet their clergy in the belfry, and was convinced that nothing but good could result from these friendly visits.

The Rev. R. Boyle Thompson, M.A., thanked the previous speaker for his kind and interesting remarks; he likewise assured the members present that it was with the greatest pleasure that he gave permission for the erection of the tablet, and it was equally so that he attended there on that occasion for the purpose of uncovering it. Referring to the president's remarks concerning the clergy's duty to their belfries and ringers, he might say that although he perhaps had not visited this belfry as often as he might have done, yet, as his own ringers knew, he was no stranger to it; and besides, he could lay claim to a personal acquaintance with every one of the ringers. Coming to the circumstance which had brought them together, he thought the tablet just erected would reflect honour on their tower, and he hoped its presence there would be an inducement to those who rung the bells to persevere, and have others alongside it bearing their own names, and the record of their own doings. He then pulled away the white cloth covering, and exposed to view the tablet, which read as follows:—

"YORKSHIRE ASSOCIATION OF CHANGE-RINGERS.—On Saturday, November 8, 1884, was rung on these bells a peal of 5024 changes of Kent Treble Bob Major, in 3 hrs., by the following members; J. Angus, 1; J. Naylor, 2; K. Tuke, 3; T. Pollitt, 4; J. Cheetham, 5; J. H. Hardcastle, 6; B. A. Dodson, 7; J. W. Snowdon, 8. Composed by N. J. Pitstow and Conducted by J. H. Hardcastle. Rev. R. B. Thompson, vicar. This tablet to commemorate their 29th and last peal of Jasper W. Snowdon, first President of the Association, is connected with the National Memorial window in Ilkley church."

An inspection of the tablet was followed by expressions of general satisfaction of both design of board and manner of painting, the gold letters on the dark background being neat and effective.

Mr. W. H. Howard (York) proposed, and Mr. W. Stainthorpe (Birstall) seconded, a vote of thanks to the Vicar of Pudsey for his presence and the part he had taken; which was carried unanimously, and responded to by the Vicar.

Mr. H. W. Needham (Leeds) proposed, and Mr. J. H. Hardcastle (Bradford) seconded, a vote of thanks to Mr. Charles Jackson for his valuable services in procuring the tablet, and to the Pudsey members for their kind arrangements, which was also carried unanimously.

Another touch was then rung on the tower bells by Messrs. W. Snowdon, President (Leeds), W. H. Howard, vice-president (York), H. W. Needham, Committeeman (Leeds), James Barraclough (Huddersfield), and others; after which a short adjournment was made, during which the subsidiary statement of accounts mentioned by Mr. Snowdon in the belfry was audited, passed, and signed by W. H. Howard, W. Stainthorpe and B. T. Copley. A move was then made to the belfry, and the following started for a date touch of Kent Treble Bob Major: J. Barraclough (Huddersfield), 1; H. Raistrick (Bradford), 2; S. Langstaff (Pudsey), 3; Thos. Pollitt (Bradford), 4; J. Broadley (Bradford), 5; W. Barraclough (Halifax), 6; J. H. Hardcastle (Bradford, conductor), 7; John Haley (Tong), 8. This touch was completed in 1 hr. 10 mins., after which the bells were kept going by members until about 9 o'clock; the afternoon's proceedings having proved altogether pleasant and interesting.

RETFORD, NOTTS.—OPENING OF A RING OF TEN BELLS.

Wednesday, November 19th, was a memorable day in the history of the ancient borough of Retford, a day which has been for some time looked forward to by the inhabitants of the town generally, but especially by Church people and ringers in particular.

For many years the "go" of the splendid ring of eight bells by Thomas Mears, of London, hung some 50 years ago in the tower of St. Swithin's parish church, had been very bad, owing to the swaying of the old frame and timbers which formerly supported an ancient heavy ring of six bells, then replaced by the above-mentioned eight, of which the tenor in E flat weighs about 24 cwt., the whole ring being of magnificent tone, and having in the locality a wide-spread reputation.

The rehanging of the bells has been postponed for a long time owing to some much needed repairs and alterations in the interior of the church having had first attention by the church authorities; but everything needful there having been done, the vicar, churchwardens, and ringers, by dint of assiduous perseverance, drew the attention of the townspeople at large to the bad state of the bells and the dangerous condition of the bell cage.

At the Easter Vestry meeting in 1889, it was determined that something should be done without unnecessary delay. Accordingly estimates were obtained for the work of completely clearing out the old frame and timbers from the tower, and rehanging the bells with all new gearing and fittings. Although the amount of money required seemed to be an almost inseparable difficulty in the way of having the work done properly, and as all concerned could wish, yet it was determined that the attempt should be made by an appeal to the townspeople at large.

Accordingly a committee was formed, composed of churchmen and members of dissenting bodies, who all united in warmly taking up the unenviable task of collecting subscriptions, and to such an extent were their efforts repaid, that the bell fund then accumulated at the bank soon warranted the committee to entrust the work of rehanging the eight bells to Messrs. Taylor and Sons, of Loughborough, who therefore began work in October last. Meanwhile subscriptions came in freely, so that the attention of the committee having been drawn to the fact that there was room in the tower for two more bells, these latter were ordered from Messrs. Taylor and Sons.

However upon the total removal of the old timbers from the bell-chamber, it was found that the floor was in a rotten state, and required replacing by a new one; also that the walls of the tower must be extensively repaired inside. This unforeseen expense was a cause of grave anxiety to the hard-working bell committee, who had reckoned upon a certain amount of money to cover all expenses.

This anxiety was nevertheless speedily removed by a most generous act of Alderman Curtis (a Wesleyan) the retiring Mayor of the borough, who on the termination of his term of office last week, announced his intention of giving to the parish church one of the new bells. This generous act was likewise accompanied by a similar one on the part of the new Mayor, Mr. Councillor Bescoby, who at the same time presented the church with the other bell to the great gratification of the townspeople.

The ring of ten bells was to have been opened on Thursday, November 13th, but for various reasons, and notably because of the generous acts of the two gentlemen named above, the dedication of the two new bells was postponed until Wednesday, November 19th, so that the Corporation body might be present at the ceremony, which was conducted in beautiful weather by the vicar, the Rev. Canon Ebsworth, the municipal body being present. After the dedication ceremony a peal of 5039 Grand-sire Caters was attempted by a band of ringers from Sheffield, members of the Yorkshire Association, conducted by Thos. Hattersley, but after ringing 2 hrs. and 45 mins., and when everything appeared in good swing and to promise a creditable performance, there was a sudden catastrophe and crash which brought the peal to grief. The peal was listened to with intense delight by the townspeople of Retford, and afterwards the ringers were entertained to tea at the "Vine" inn, in company with the Retford ringers, Mr. J. W. Taylor, and W. A. Tyler from Loughborough. About thirty were present, and "go" was called, and a splendid peal was rung on the knives and forks in 30 mins., the course-ends rolling up beautifully.

The bells have been rehung in massive iron H frames, supported above and below by strong bearers of English oak, all the ten bells hanging on a level, and each being easily accessible on all sides. Everything is new in the bell-chamber with the exception of the original eight bells, all of which have been quarter-turned and fitted with Taylor's clappers, the whole cost being about £500, including the two new bells. The work reflects the highest credit upon the contractors, the "go" of the bells being perfect; and last but not least the splendid ring of ten bells have been opened with a very small debt standing against them, while in order that the local ringers may have every opportunity of doing credit to their bells, Mr. T. Hattersley, of Sheffield, has been engaged by the vicar to instruct them in ringing Caters well, and the plain course was mastered the first night in a fairly creditable manner with the assistance of three Sheffield ringers.

During the day touches of Stedman and Treble Bob Royal were rung, in which Mr. J. W. Taylor and W. A. Tyler took part.

Nottinghamshire now possesses three rings of ten bells, viz., St. Mary's, Nottingham, St. Mary's, Newark, and St. Swithin's, Retford.

REOPENING OF NEW BELLS AT CRANBORNE, DORSET.

Friday, November 7th last, was a somewhat eventful day in the history of Cranborne church, portions of which, according to the annals of Tewkesbury Abbey, can be traced as far back as A.D. 930, in the reign of the first and famous King Athelstan. The present church was completed and dedicated to SS. Mary and Bartholomew on December 6th, 1252 (St. Nicholas' day). The chancel is unquestionably the addition of a later era, and was probably built by Thomas Parker, abbot of Tewkesbury, whose cypher is seen on the pulpit. It has, however, within the last few years been entirely rebuilt by the patron, the Marquis of Salisbury, on the old lines. The tower was built in 1440, by an indulgence of the Bishop of Sarum. On either side of the belfry door is an escutcheon, that on the south side being the arms of Richard Duke of York, who was Lord of the Manor of Cranborne; the one on the north side being the arms of his wife Ceciha, daughter of Ralph Neville, Earl of Westmoreland. The tower is a fine example of a Dorsetshire tower, 75 ft. high, and in a good substantial state of preservation. The history of the bells is rather a chequered one. The old treble (which is now the 5th) has the following inscription in Gothic characters round the crown: "Ave Gracia Plena," the salutation of the blessed Virgin, to whom it was dedicated; it is probably of the date of the early part of the fourteenth century. There was another dated 1608, another with this motto, "Prayse ye the Lord. J. W. 1610." Another, "Clement Tosier cast me in the 12th yere of Queen Anne's raine, 1713. A.D. 1550." The Commissioners appointed to make an inventory of church utensils, etc., returned four bells for this church. It was probable that the largest bell, one ton in weight, was the last placed in the tower after Clement Tosier's bell of 1713, for Dr. Smart says in his book—"There are five bells very much injured," and no doubt these broken bells remained in the tower for years in this dilapidated condition till about the year 1841, when the attention of the late Mr. Brouncker, of Boveridge Park, in this parish, was called to the state of the bells, and he, heading a subscription-list with a substantial donation, the necessary funds were soon raised to provide a ring of six bells in the key of F, but this was done at the loss, unfortunately, of the old tenor. This ring of six has been in the tower for about fifty years, but the state of the old framework caused great anxiety to the parishioners, and especially to the ringers, who unanimously declared they would not ring the bell again unless the necessary repairs were attended to. The diocesan architect and two firms of bellhangers were consulted, and they all corroborated the opinion that no more ringing should be done until the framework was either repaired or a new frame provided. A vestry meeting was called, and it was resolved that a new frame and floor should be provided, and, if sufficient money could be obtained, two new trebles should be added. This the Vicar and Churchwardens agreed to, provided some one would undertake to collect subscriptions. This work was readily taken in hand by Mr. H. F. Brouncker, who was ably assisted by Mr. J. Burton, and both these gentlemen worked hard to get sufficient funds to carry out the work. On Thursday, the 6th instant, the work was finished, and the bells rung for the first time, Mr. Brouncker entertaining the ringers and the employees of Messrs. Warner and Sons to a substantial supper at the Victoria hotel, kept by one of the ringers, Mr. W. Adams. The real opening was on Friday, when Dr. Wordsworth, the Lord Bishop of Salisbury, solemnly dedicated the new bells. His lordship arrived about half-past eleven, and proceeded from the vestry, with his chaplain, singing a processional hymn with the clergy and choir, to the tower, near which were assembled the churchwardens, sidesmen, and others, with the Bournemouth St. Peter's company from Bournemouth. The Bishop offered the prayers of dedication, and Psalm cv. was chanted by the choir. The Cranborne ringers were ready in the ringing-chamber, and as soon as the Bishop uttered the words: "Now the bells will ring," they had the happy privilege of being the first to ring on their newly-augmented peal, which they did with some good rounds. The Bishop, clergy, and choir then reformed into procession, and went to the chancel, where the rite of confirmation was administered. After confirmation was over, the Bournemouth St. Peter's ringers rang several touches of Grandsire Triples, including a 500. A quarter-peal was attempted, but after ringing over 800 changes, it was brought to an end by a violent knocking at the door, which on being opened, discovered a telegraph messenger with a message for one of the bellhangers, who had, however, left an hour before.

The Vicar (Rev. F. H. Fisher) kindly entertained all the ringers at the vicarage throughout the day. In some of the ringing, the Vicar and the Rev. R. Copeman, of St. Mary's, Fordingbridge, took part. In the various touches and attempted quarter-peal the ringers were stationed as follows: A. Grist, 1; J. Bristow, 2; H. Vivash, 3; G. Preston, 4; E. T. Green, 5; J. G. Bennett, 6; J. J. Bristow, 7; T. Belbin and G. Colborne (alternately), 8.

The new frame and bells have been supplied by Messrs. John Warner and Sons, of the Crescent Foundry, Cripplegate, London, and the work has given every satisfaction.

RE-OPENING OF CHURCH BELLS AT ST. MARY'S, HAYES, MIDDLESEX.

The work of re-hanging, etc., consisting of a new elm floor, repairs to under frame, new top frame and brasses, new stocks, wheels, steel gudgeons, and all necessary fittings, have been carried out. The recasting of the first and second bells which were entrusted to Messrs. Warner and Sons, of London, have proved a great success. The bells were re-opened on Thursday, October 9th, the Harvest Thanksgiving being especially arranged for that day. During the afternoon some members of the Oxford Diocesan Guild rang 720 Grandsire Doubles in 26 mins. R. Flaxman, 1; H. Rogers, 2; E. Rogers, 3; G. Stanbrook, 4; J. J. Parker, 5; J. W. Wilkins (conductor), 6. Also 720 Oxford Bob Minor in 25 mins. H. Rogers, 1; J. W. Wilkins, 2; J. J. Parker (conductor), 3; J. Basden, 4; E. Rogers, 5; R. Flaxman, 6. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, etc., by several ladies, and great credit is due to them for their great taste in arranging the same.

The services on Thursday consisted of Holy Communion at 8 a.m. with choral evensong at 7.30 p.m. The church was crowded both on Thursday and Sunday. The clergy and choir entered the church singing the well-known hymn "Come ye thankful people, come." The proper psalms were the 63rd and 103rd. The service was taken by the Rev. R. Andrews; the first lesson being read by the rector, the Rev. J. Godding, and the second by the Rev. D. S. McClean, rector of Hanwell. The anthem was taken from Psalm 104: "O Lord, how manifold are Thy works." The Rev. J. F. V. Lee, B.A., rector of Cranford, was the preacher on Thursday evening, and took for his text the words of the anthem, and his admirable discourse was listened to with rapt attention. After the Blessing the choir left their stalls, and standing before the altar rails sang the Te Deum Laudamus as a special thanksgiving, the effect of which was most impressive.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

MR. STEAD'S COMPLAINT.

SIR,—I should not have troubled you with any rejoinder to Mr. Stead's letter of last week, had he confined his remarks to your editorial, or even limited them within the bounds of actual truth; but as he has inadvisedly made unjust charges against our president and myself, I feel compelled, in common justice both to ourselves and the Association which we have the honour and pleasure to serve, to combat his statements, for which purpose I will call into requisition nothing but real facts. He charges us with unfair treatment in respect to his prize-ringing motion, and I will take the details upon which this charge is built separatim, then your readers will be in a position to judge for themselves where this alleged unfairness comes in. Firstly he asserts that it took him a year to get his motion before a meeting. Now, the first communication which I received from him on the subject bears date May 30th, 1890, which can scarcely be called a year ago. This letter stated that he would be unable to attend the June meeting, in consequence of which he requested me to ask the meeting to allow him to postpone it until the next (i.e., the annual meeting in October); so that by his own shewing, the motion was eventually dealt with on the very occasion, which he himself selected. But, contrary to the terms of his letter, he (as I was pleased to see at the time) attended the meeting at Skipton, and there attempted to put his motion straight off. Now, Mr. Stead knows perfectly well (or if he does not, that is his own fault, for the rules are explicit enough on the matter) that any motion affecting the constitution or finances of the Association must be given notice of in writing at one general meeting, to be brought up for settlement at the next. Mr. Snowden therefore, was faithfully carrying out both law and custom when he ruled thus at the meeting, he also taking the same course with his own motion. Even had this rule not been in existence, it would be manifestly unfair to spring upon any meeting a motion affecting the constitution of the Association, of which reasonable notice had not been given, and thus let the proportionately few who were present bind the whole of the 900 members to a course of which they were ignorant—not to say, diametrically opposed to. So much for his first "grievance." His next one brings us to the Hull meeting. He complains of his motion being placed No. 9 on the agenda paper. This was immediately after the ordinary business, and had I placed it higher on the list I should not only have laid myself open to a well-grounded charge of incongruity, but also of giving undue preference to this motion—a preference which had never been given to any abstract proposition of the kind before in the history of the Association. But his complaint on this score is based on their somewhat inconvenient railway arrangements. Of these I knew nothing whatever. I had previous to the meeting made every possible effort to induce the various railway companies' officials to make their trains suitable to our members, and indeed succeeded beyond my anticipations. More I could not do. He says they were compelled to leave at 7.25, that he informed the secretary and president of that fact before the meeting commenced, who promised to bring his motion forward as soon as possible. The real fact is, that Mr. Stead requested me at the tea table to get the business on as quick as I could, because they had to leave early; this I was busily arranging to do at the time; but the president knew nothing at all about Mr. Stead's arrangements; and thus it is utterly void of truth to say that he promised anything of the sort, or that I myself knew of the time of Mr. Stead's leaving. Then when he announced the fact at the meeting, Mr. Snowden at once postponed other business, and took Mr. Stead's motion straight off. What more could he have done? Finally, he complains that when he rose to speak all his friends who intended voting for him had to hurry to the station, and that he himself had to go without voting. This statement is just on a par with previous ones. His friends did not go when he rose to speak; it was not until he and others had finished speaking that he and his friends (three in number, I believe) left; and even then his own vote was recorded, for the president promised before he left to vote for him, which he did; and thus I consider this concluding statement very shabby on the part of Mr. Stead. Now, where does all this grievance come in? Had Mr. Stead's motion been lost by a very small majority, there might possibly have been some room for him to cavil at the decision; but seeing that this majority was so emphatic it does appear to me unfair on his part to attack officers who have honestly endeavoured to do their duty in the matter just because he lost his motion in so decisive a manner. I venture to hope that my plain statement of facts will have the effect of dispelling any erroneous notions which may have been created by Mr. Stead's letter. And in writing this, I may add that I am sorry on two grounds—first that I have been compelled to write it at all; and second, that I have had to make such a large claim upon your space in doing so. But I trust I may be exonerated on both points, seeing the amount and nature of the charges which I have had to meet.

B. T. COPLEY, Hon. Sec. Yorkshire Association.

A REQUEST.

Letters forwarded for publication, and performances under 5000 changes must reach us not later than Wednesday morning; and the insertion of any communication arriving later than the first Postal delivery on Thursday morning cannot be guaranteed in that week's number. When it is found impossible from want of space to insert all touches forwarded, the earlier ones will have the preference.

All communications respecting advertisements must be addressed to the office of "THE BELL NEWS," Walthamstow, London.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1890.

THE peal reports in the present number are again plentiful, preventing the appearance of our usual editorial comment. A great many reports of touches also, and correspondence, are unavoidably postponed. These matters will appear at the earliest opportunity, and we must beg the forbearance of our friends who may feel disappointed in not seeing their reports in the current number. We hope our readers will be as brief as possible in everything sent for publication.

EYNESBURY (Hunts).—On Friday, November 14th, for practice, four 6-scores of Bob Doubles, called differently. H. Sutton (conductor), 1; S. Hawksford, 2; G. Coleman, 3; G. Irons, 4; C. Chasty, 5; E. Jones, 6. S. Hawksford's longest length with a bob bell. On Wednesday, November 12th, the above members visited the parish church of Eaton Locon, Bedfordshire, and rang two 6-scores of Bob Doubles. S. Hawksford, 1; C. Chasty, 2; G. Coleman, 3; H. Sutton, 4; G. Irons (conductor), 5; E. Jones, 6. Tenor 24 cwt. Although these bells go very badly, the striking was particularly good, and elicited praise from the local band, who only ring call-changes.

WALSALL (Staffordshire).—On Monday, November 10th, at St. Matthew's church, on the occasion of the election of the Mayor, the local company rang some Treble Bob Major, Stedman Triples and Grandsire Major. Also a touch of Grandsire Triples, (840 changes), in 32 mins. W. Griffin, 1; F. Hallsworth, 2; J. Astbury, sen., 3; W. Walker, 4; D. Westley, 5; J. Lawton, 6; J. Astbury, jun. (conductor), 7; E. Lightwood, 8. Also on Wednesday evening, November 12th, for practice, one quarter of Lates' peal of Stedman Triples, in 47 mins. W. Griffin, 1; E. Lightfoot, 2; J. Astbury, sen., 3; W. Walker, 4; D. Wesley, 5; F. Hallsworth, 6; J. Astbury, jun. (conductor), 7; E. Taylor, 8. On Sunday morning, November 16th, for the Mayor and Corporation's Procession to church, a touch of Grandsire Triples (420 changes).

NOTE TO THE NORWICH PEAL.—This peal was rung on the occasion of John Smith's birthday, and is the first peal of Major ever rung on the largest eight bells, and is believed to be the heaviest peal in the method ever rung anywhere on eight bells. An attempt was made in July 1804 to ring a peal of 5040 changes (Bob Major no doubt) with the late John Trowse ringing the tenor alone, which at that time was usually rung by two persons as it did not go so easy at that time of day as now, but after ringing 2500 changes in 2 hrs. and 5 mins. he came so overpowered with heat, that the peal was deferred till cooler weather. It seems as if it was never attempted again till about 1883, when Mr. George Smith, a member of the present company of ringers, rang the tenor alone through a peal of 5088 changes, but two bells changed places in the last part. They rang to the end of it: also some little time after the same man rang the bell to about 4600 of Haley's peal of 5184 changes, when a shift occurred and the ringers stopped. The composition of Mr. Day's peal will be found on page 18 of Snowdon's Treatise on Treble Bob.

THE SOCIETY OF COPLEY SCHOLARS, BRADFORD.

This society held its first "Social" for the winter season on Thursday evening, November 20th, in the Unity Rooms (M.U.), when like as on previous occasions there was a large number of members and friends present. Mr. B. T. Copley, Captain of the society, occupied the chair throughout the proceedings, which included songs by Messrs. A. Bakes and J. Mawson, recitations by Miss Ethel and Master Titterington (the latter a sparkling little fellow of four summers), and Mr. Bakes. Sergeant Hamilton Dobbyn, an accomplished elocutionist, gave three recitals—one English, one Scotch, and one Irish—which added greatly to the pleasure of the evening. Professor Pollitt introduced his electro-galvano apparatus, which caused excessive merriment. Touches of Triples and Major were rung at intervals, and between the vocal items dancing was indulged in, Messrs. James Mawson and G. Titterington officiating as M.Cs., Messrs. James Angus and A. Bakes taking turns at the piano. Cordial votes of thanks were passed to the various performers, likewise to the chairman; and as the town hall clock struck the hour of midnight, the singing of the National Anthem brought to a close another of this society's pleasant gatherings.

THE ST. PETER'S GUILD, WOLVERHAMPTON.

On Saturday, November 15th, a few members of this Guild met to celebrate the birthday of Mr. J. Marsh, one of the local band. A start was made early in the afternoon for a peal of Grandsire Triples, which came to grief about half-way through a change-course. The band was as follows: C. F. Vickers, 1; B. Dalton, 2; W. Pardoe, 3; J. Carter (conductor), 4; J. Jones, 5; J. Marsh, 6; R. Cartwright, 7; J. Pardoe, 8. They afterwards adjourned to the house of Mr. J. Webb, where others were waiting, and sat down to an excellent repast. The cloth being removed, Mr. Cartwright was voted to the chair, and that gentleman, in a few well-chosen remarks, proposed the toast of the evening: "The Health of Mr. Marsh," which was drunk with musical honours. Then followed a duet—"All's Well"—by the brothers C. and T. Marsh, both of whom are ringers. Mr. C. F. Vickers then proposed "The Visitors," which was responded to by Mr. Carter. Mr. Cartwright then gave "The Parson and the Clerk," which was received with loud cheers. It should be stated that had this peal been accomplished, it would have been Mr. Marsh's first peal for over ten years, as he had not rung during that period. It is also worthy of remark that Mr. John Carter rung his first 720 in company with Mr. Marsh.

A UNIQUE COLLECTION OF METHODS.

(Communicated.)

Mr. D. Gridley, of Clare, Suffolk, has just had bound a large collection of methods, all of which are in manuscript. Some idea of the magnitude of the collection can be formed when it is mentioned that there 950 foolscap folio pages of ruled paper, the larger portion of which are already filled up.

Following the title page is a table showing the number of changes and the name by such changes are known, with the average length of time allowed for ringing them from four to twelve bells. Commencing with an explanation by coloured diagram of two bells changing, the book proceeds page after page to give upon the left hand an elaborate drawn coloured diagram of a lead of each method, followed with the remaining plain course, and gives upon the right hand page full instructions for ringing and conducting the particular method. Both even and odd sixes are shown upon three bells. Upon four bells six methods are illustrated. Doubles run to fifty-one methods, while Minor has 161. There are thirty-two illustrations of methods on seven bells, while Major stands at present at fifty. With Major the coloured diagrams cease, but the volume continues with plain figures of five methods in Caters, thirteen in Royal, four in Cinques, and twelve upon twelve bells. Of course the compiler has been careful to leave some blank pages at the end of each particular number of bells. There is therefore room left for more additions that are forthcoming. The volume also contains extracts from the pens of all well-known bell-ringing poets, and the dates of the first performance of each method (as far as is known).

It is made complete (so far as the book itself is complete at present) by a well arranged index in a double form, by which any particular method can be at once found. In a volume of such proportion, a complete index is indispensable, and the example set is one which might have undoubtedly been adopted with advantage to the readers, by the publishers of the recent re-published old ringing works.

Having recently considered it desirable to have the collection bound, Mr. Gridley put himself in communication with Mr. B. Keeble, of Romford, who recommended that the binding should be in a somewhat similar form to a peal book. Mr. Gridley accordingly forwarded the book to Romford, with the result that last week he received back the volume fully bound in the best morocco and in the best style of workmanship. Ringers requiring peal books or MSS. bound, could not do better than communicate with Mr. Keeble, who for the last twelve months has given special attention to this class of work, and given general satisfaction to all those who have entrusted him with their orders. In this instance Mr. Keeble has been successful in turning out a capital specimen of the bookbinder's art, which the MS. well deserved for its excellent style of penmanship.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

No. XXVII.

THE ORIGINATION OF PEALS.

BY THE REV. H. EARLE BULWER.

There are more ways than one of doing most things, and the origination of a peal of Stedman Triples is no exception to the rule. I shall be content in this paper to enumerate some processes, which are, or may be employed, and to give an illustration of the system of composition by diagram, which I have pursued during my own enquiries. In the four preceding articles I have purposely excluded from consideration the modifying effects that may be produced by the free use of singles, and have gone on the assumption that two singles only are admitted for the sole purpose of including in the composition those blocks or portions of blocks, which cannot be drawn in by the use of bobs. So far as a practical proof can be shewn of the impossibility of obtaining a peal by bobs only, the explanations already given afford it. In dealing with the present branch of the subject, I shall still pursue the same course, and exclude from observation all plans which depend for their prosecution upon the free use of singles, reserving the effects these produce for examination in another paper.

The question, how best to start upon the construction of a peal of Stedman Triples, is one which will be answered by each composer, no doubt, in favour of the plan which he himself pursues with most success. I wish to be quite neutral upon the point: and, while noticing those that I have had experience of myself, leave every one to the enjoyment and pursuit of his own fancy.

The first plan that I shall mention is one which is consecrated alike by age and the fact that it has given us by far the best peal, all round, that has yet been produced: I mean, of course, the adoption of shunting blocks, forming larger ones by repetition, which latter are afterwards united by deviations from the standard calling, or by singles, or by both. There is one distinct advantage secured by this mode of proceeding, and that is, that the several parts are called alike, at least in the main blocks, and perhaps as in Thurstans' peal, throughout the composition; but on the other hand, it does not seem to be susceptible of any great amount of variation. It seems possible that some of the older compositions on this plan, if revised by the light of more recent researches, might be restored to favour and regain position in the estimation of conductors.

Another plan is that which has been pursued by Mr. Heywood with so much success and ingenuity. This consists in tabulating the 60 P blocks according to the number of parts into which the composition is to fall. A common distinctive number is attached to each set of aligned blocks, and the composition proceeded with on the presumption of a fixed treatment of certain positions, with such exceptions only as the conditions of the "q" set may render imperative. This is perhaps the briefest and simplest plan for composing in regular parts; it involves, however, the preparation of independent Tables with variable distinctive numbers; and there is no perceptible means of knowing, except by experiment, whether a shunt is obtained from part to part, or not. On this plan the portions to be singled in are left as a residuum from the main operation.

There is an alternative plan to this, by which the process is reversed, and the block to be singled in being first determined, the main body of the peal is deduced from it. I have pursued this plan more often than any other, making use of the Diagram and the universal Table A. The process is simply this: Enter the singled-in block in the group or groups to which it belongs, in brackets; note in the other groups the treatment of the various positions which is enforced, according to "q set" requirements, by the treatment of the bracketed block. These notes will supply a sufficient indication, in the case of three or two-part compositions, of what the part-ends will be, and also to a great extent the general distribution of the groups among the parts. These may be noted down by their distinctive letters in parallel columns, according to the number of the parts. A chain of connections can then be formed to suit this arrangement, and these connections being noted in the Diagram, with the compulsory treatment of Q which they entail, the work is virtually done. For the treatment of Q to a large extent influences the treatment of S and L; and the treatment of either of these latter prescribes the treatment of the other; so that as soon as the treatment of the Q position is known, the remainder of the calling is almost automatic: for of all methods Stedman Triples is perhaps the most rigid and exacting in the matter of composition, and allows but little latitude to the composer after the merest skeleton of a peal has been definitely formed.

There is yet another plan similar in general treatment to the last; but more uncertain, and requiring some little experience and practice for its successful prosecution. It is to originate a chain of connections (as hinted in a former article) by the distinctive letters of the groups, suitable for a peal in any number of main blocks from one to five. The chain being constructed, the subsequent process is as described above. The chain itself, if it be a workable one, will indicate the part ends and distribution of groups; but besides this, as in the former case, after the skeleton is entered on the Diagram, the group or groups which exhibit tokens of the same treatment as that to be pursued in a, will contain the part ends which remain to be found: and the other groups will be sorted by similar indications. It is indeed surprising to find how little is sufficient to indicate and determine these previously "unknown quantities."

I will now proceed to give an example of composition by Diagram on the plan of selecting, first of all, the part-ends, and forming the skeleton of the peal on the indications which the groups containing them give. It may be thought that this plan is not greatly different from that pursued by Mr. Heywood, and, indeed, in its first step—the selection of part-ends—it is the same. But there is this difference in the work of setting out the peal, that any part-ends may be selected without the necessity of transposing the Table to suit them; and a clear view is obtained beforehand of any possibilities of improving the composition by "mixed" calling which may present themselves: there is, moreover, no uncertainty about shunting the parts, since the shunting point reveals itself in forming the skeleton.

Let us say, then, that we wish to compose a peal on the six-or-three-part plan, which shall, as far as possible, contain five whole groups in each part; that is, that the groups shall be as little as possible broken up and dispersed: and that we select as the part-ends Nos. 1, 14, 21 (Table A). Each of these blocks is contained in one of the groups, a, h, k, forming the top row of the Diagram. These groups, therefore, or corresponding parts of them, will occupy similar and parallel positions in the different parts of the peal. The distribution of the remaining twelve groups is discovered in a very simple manner, viz., by marshalling them in three columns, by their distinctive letters, according to the connections they make at H with the several blocks contained in a, h, k. Thus:—

a	h	k	The groups represented by each horizontal row of letters, or corresponding portions of them, will occupy similar and parallel positions in the several parts of the composition.
g	l	d
r	n	p
c	f	t
e	j	m

A chain of connections may now be constructed, which shall provide a shunt from part to part. Let it be as simple as possible, and such as to ensure an equal treatment of Q throughout the groups. By help of the synopsis, Table U, we can find such a chain; thus:—

a-g-j-n-h-f-h— (part-end, No. 14).
h-l-m-p-k-b-k— (part-end, No. 21).
k-d-e-r-a-c-a— (part-end, No. 1).

The block to be singled in will thus be a long one; for it must include all junctions which have not been passed through the reverse way in the main chain, which are:—

a-r-e-d-k-p-m-l-h-n-j-g-a.

It will be seen that groups c, b, f are worked as whole groups, one in each part, thus preserving the shunt which had already been obtained.

The connections at H being noted on the Diagram together with the blocks plained at Q in consequence of them, we are in a position to ascertain the possibilities of employing mixed calling at S and L. It may be observed that the three-part plan does not lend itself readily to the employment of mixed calling, owing to the unsymmetrical distribution of the groups composing the majority of the Triplets. But where the groups of a Triplet occupy parallel positions in the peal, an opportunity for mixed calling often presents itself without so much risk of bringing up a six-bob set being run, as is encountered in the other groups: although it is not always that parallel groups will admit of it. In this instance, for example, there are two Triplets, the groups of each of which will be parallel, viz., a, h, k, and d, l, g; but the first of these shows three connections at H per group: mixed calling of S and L in these groups would, therefore, be tolerably certain to produce six-bob sets. In the case of d, l, g, however, with two connections only per group, it can be managed with advantage. Except in these three groups, therefore, we must adopt a fixed treatment of S and L throughout. Let us decide to bob the L position and plain the S.

Following the chain of connections the first part (A) may now be filled in, and also one third of the singled-in block (in brackets), when the latter will be found to contain 7 courses, while the part outside the singles consists of 13. The position in the main part for the singled-in block alone remains to be determined; and this may be done by the rules and scales already given by Mr. Heywood, when it will be found that after the third course-end, S at 2 will introduce the bracketed portion of the third part. It is not necessary to fill in the Diagram any further, but, in order to facilitate a more complete view of the whole, it is appended in full; the distribution of the groups in the three parts being indicated by the small capitals A, B, C, respectively. The first part is also given in the usual form. It is No. 11 of my peals, and has not previously been published.

Another possible chain from the same part-ends is as follows:

a-r-m-l-f-b-d-e-n-h
h-n-e-d-b-c-g-j-p-k k-p-j-g-c-f-l-m-r-a

Here, owing to the junctions being almost all passed through both ways in the main chain, the singled-in block is very short (f-c-b-f), containing six courses in all. The Diagram formed from this chain contains the reverse of my No. 10 with mixed calling in the first row of groups. Although this mode of composition takes some time to describe, the work is nevertheless, after a little practice, very quickly done.

I regret that the "chain of connections" given in the last article should have been presented in a form so ill adapted to convey a correct impression of this method of noting the skeleton of a peal. What I desired was to show a continuous line of letters joined together by ordinary hyphens, with brackets springing from each other over the letters denoting the shunt from part to part. Unfortunately the printer has been unable to grasp the meaning, and has spaced out the parts, thereby utterly destroying the continuity of the chain.

H. E. B. October 14th, 1889.

THE GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

After an interval of nearly nine years, the members of this Association held their quarterly meeting, for the second time since its formation, at Thornbury, on Monday, November 24th. The day, which was exceedingly fine and bright, had been looked forward to with great pleasure by the members of the Thornbury company; but on the arrival of the 10.15 train it was found that the Bristol members were very conspicuous by their absence—and that after the date being altered at their own request and for their own convenience—only the Rev. H. A. Cockey (Master), Rev. Pitt Eykyn (Hon. Sec.), and Messrs. C. D. Boutflower and C. Tomkins (Bristol), and G. Pope (Cranham), arriving. Other companies came during the day, and proceeding to the parish church (St. Mary's), were met by the local band; and after the usual greetings were made the belfry prayers were read by the Master, and the bells raised in peal, and some unsuccessful attempts at touches of Grandsire Triples were made.

Divine Service was held in the church at 11.15, at which there was a fair attendance. The prayers were read by the Rev. L. H. L. Nichol (curate), the lessons being read by the Vicar (Rev. H. B. Hodgson). The psalms appointed were xlviii. and cxlii., and hymns 224 and 274 A. & M. were sung. In addition to the clergy already mentioned the Revs. J. C. Vernon (Kington) and W. Richmond (Rockhampton), were also present.

The Vicar of Thornbury preached a very eloquent sermon, taking as his text Exodus xxxv. 31, 32. In the course of his remarks he said that no doubt many of them had visited London and other large towns where many specimens of all kinds of art could be seen, but those who were unable to see these could observe the spires and noble towers of our churches, dotted about in every parish, and many of these towers containing fine peals of bells. Change-ringing was an art, and as the Association was formed for the purpose of its promotion, he would like to give them one or two points to carry away. He then asked them to beware of the great sin of pride. Many things were spoilt by persons so filled with pride that they could not bear reproof. Their work of ringing was a work for God, and the bells were instruments of music for His glory.

After service the bells were again handled by mixed bands. Before adjourning to dinner the members took the opportunity kindly given them by E. Stafford, Esq. (hon. member) of seeing the Castle, with its beautiful gardens and conservatories, after which an adjournment was made to the Swan hotel, where an excellent dinner was provided.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Howard, who was supported by the clergy already mentioned, and other officers of the Association. After the repast,

The Chairman proposed the toasts—"Church and Queen," and "The Bishops and Clergy of the Diocese," and in responding to the latter,

The Rev. Pitt Eykyn, while speaking in praise of the Bishop of the diocese, who was president of the Association, said he should like to see a bishop put back to the old See of Bristol, which was robbed of its bishop in 1836.

The toast—"Success to the Association," was coupled with the name of the Master, the Rev. H. A. Cockey. In proposing it the Chairman remembered that some time ago his friend Mr. Cossham was performing a similar duty while he was Mayor of Bath. He made an excellent speech, and at its close the reporter who was present asked him for the manuscript. Mr. Cossham replied, "I have no manuscript, but you will find it all in the encyclopædia." Although he did not pretend to say much upon bell-ringing, yet he enjoyed the bells very much. They were the earliest recollections of his infancy, and Thornbury would not be Thornbury to him without the bells. But he liked to hear them rang well, and that was the reason why he encouraged the Association in their good work. Sometimes he went abroad, and the difference in the ringing of the bells there was so evident that he was glad to be back again to listen to the sweet music of their own church bells.

The Rev. H. A. Cockey responded. He said the Association would help any churches who wished the ringers to improve by sending an instructor to them, and he was glad to say that great progress had been made since the formation of the Association twelve years ago.

Mr. C. D. Boutflower then thanked the vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells and belfry. He said that it shewed the great interest they took in ringing, by the condition of the belfry, which was excellent.

The Vicar, in replying, said that he did take an interest in ringing, but not so much as he should like, his time being taken up with so many other parish matters. With regard to the belfry, he said he must not take the praise of that, as it was partly the work of his predecessor (the Rev. T. Waters) in bringing it to its present condition, and also the ringers themselves, by whom the matting and oil cloth were laid down, at their own expense. It may be added that a subscription of ten shillings was giving by W. S. Stanier, Esq. towards it.

The health of the local secretary (Mr. F. K. Howell) was then drank, and this brought the first part of the proceedings to a close.

The business of the Association was then entered upon, the Rev. H. A. Cockey being voted to the chair. After the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, one honorary and several performing members were then added to the roll.

It was then proposed by Mr. G. Pope and seconded by the Master, that the anniversary meetings be held at Painswick; but it was suggested that the Annual Meetings would be much more preferable if held in the winter instead of summer, country places being more pleasant and easier to get at in the summer than in the winter. After much discussion on the subject it was proposed and seconded as an amendment that Gloucester be the next place of meeting, and carried by a large majority.

The members then divided, the following going to Alveston: Revs. H. A. Cockey and Pitt Eykyn, Messrs. Boutflower, Tomkins, Shepherd, Taylor, Howell, Eddington, Hale, and Alsop. Prayers being read, a 720 of Grandsire Minor was rung in 26 mins. T. Alsop, 1; C. Eddington, 2; C. Tomkins, 3; F. K. Howell, 4; C. D. Boutflower, 5; Rev. H. A. Cockey, 6. And 120 Grandsire Doubles, with E. Hale, 1; and G. Shepherd, 5; whilst the remainder went to Thornbury, where various 6-scores were indulged in.

Returning from Alveston and tea having been partaken of at the Castle hotel, the parish church was again visited, and 504 of Grandsire Triples was rung. W. Davis, 1; C. Eddington, 2; C. D. Boutflower, 3; C. Tomkins, 4; F. K. Howell, 5; T. Alsop, 6; Rev. H. A. Cockey, 7; E. H. Organ, 8. Followed by two short touches, in which E. H. Organ, E. Poulton, G. Shepherd, E. Hale, H. J. Thurston, and G. Stephens took part.

The conducting of the day was ably carried out by the Rev. H. A. Cockey.

The visitors left Thornbury by a special train at 8.15., amid the falling of the bells, after a very pleasant day

THE LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN GUILD.

ON Saturday, November 29th, the monthly meeting was held at Halsall, and forty members attended from the following places: Aughton, Crosby, Crossens, Croston, Ormskirk, Sefton, and Southport, besides the local company. Bells were open for ringing from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m., when service was held in the church and was well attended by the ringers, after which the ringers sat down to a substantial meat tea, provided through the generosity of Canon Blundell, and justice was amply done to the good things provided. The business meeting was afterwards held, at which Mr. J. Martin presided, supported by the Revs. W. T. Bulpit and J. Oliver. The minutes of the last meeting was read by the Rev. W. T. Bulpit and passed, and a communication from the Rev. Canon Blundell was read, in which he said he was sorry at being unable to attend the meeting, as as he was unavoidably detained by business in London.

Mr. Bentham then read a statement showing the prosperous condition of the Guild, and Mr. Martin and the Rev. J. Oliver addressed the ringers at some length, and several items of interest discussed, after which a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding, and to the Rev. Canon Blundell for providing so excellent a tea and for the use of the bells and schoolroom, a very pleasant meeting was brought to a close. Methods rung—Grandsire, Bob and Kent Treble Bob Minor.

ST. JOHN THE DIVINE, BRIXTON, SURREY.

OPENING OF A NEW PEAL OF BELLS.

ON Friday evening, November 14th, eight members of the Waterloo Society of London, at the invitation of the Vicar—the Rev. C. E. Brooke, paid a visit to the above church to open the bells. This church was opened 21 years ago in an incomplete condition, and in honour of Her Majesty's Jubilee it was thought a convenient time to complete it by adding a tower and spire and a peal of bells.

The bells were placed in position about a year ago, and were consecrated by Bishop Corfe on December 19th, 1889. They have not been rung till now, as it was feared the vibration would harm the tower. The peal is the work of Messrs. Mears and Stanbank, and is a very musical ring of eight. They are hung in a good strong oak frame, and are on a level. The ringing-chamber is very roomy and well lighted, there being five Gothic windows, also an electric light.

After looking at the fittings, etc., the band opened the bells with Mr. A. P. Heywood's date touch of Grandsire Triples, 1890 changes, the ringers being placed as follows: W. Coppage, 1; W. Partington, 2; L. G. Davies, 3; A. E. Church, 4; Rev. W. Jephson, 5; F. L. Davies (conductor), 6; W. G. Wild, 7; W. W. Thorne, 8. Time 80 mins. The go of the bells was very satisfactory, with the exception of the tenor, which did not rise well at backstroke; this probably will be all right when she has been rung a little more. Great credit is due to the founders for the way in which the work has been done. The bells are in the key of E flat, and have appropriate Latin inscriptions on them.

The ringers were afterwards entertained to supper by the Rev. C. E. Brooke, whom they wish to thank through the medium of this paper.

MILTON (next Gravesend).—Recently at St. Peter and Paul, a 720 of Grandsire Minor in 26 mins. F. Welland, 1; J. Smith, 2; R. Munn, 3; M. Digby (Swanscombe), 4; P. S. Avis (first 720 in the method), 5; F. Hayes (conductor), 6.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Keep good friends in remembrance.
They are few and precious.

I have been indulging for a few hours in a sort of rumaging expedition among my recent correspondence, which has been quite a pleasant break among my daily business and other cares and anxieties. Few things come with happier effect to the daily toiler than a letter from some warm-hearted friend, particularly if unexpected; and I candidly admit my singular good fortune in this respect. Brother strings whom I have never had the pleasure to shake by the hand, but whom I know, and who know me, by means of the pages of our ever welcome "BELL NEWS," write to me from time to time, through our editor, on various topics, and although we do not always look at things from the same standpoint, or agree in our ideas of right and wrong, yet I have invariably found in the letters a kindly spirit which denotes that although we may disagree on some little matter, we are one in our common anxiety for the general good of the exercise. How much better is this than what we were accustomed to some years ago, when it seemed veritably as if the spirit of jealousy was rampant, and we were more ready to pick holes in one another's coats than to give credit where such was due, and to encourage each other on in our efforts for the general good? This is to me one of the most pleasing signs of the times amongst us, and I hail it with all my heart.

That "quiet little meeting" at Pudsey last Saturday week has at length terminated the business in connection with the Snowdon Memorial, and in devoting the small surplus to erecting the tablet recording Mr. Snowdon's last peal as well as subscribing towards the Johnson Memorial, I have no doubt whatever that all will fully agree with Mr. William Snowdon's expression of opinion that the Committee had thus completed their work in a satisfactory manner. Regarding the stained window in Ilkley church, a friend of mine (not a ringer, by the way) whose round of business journeys takes him occasionally to that Yorkshire health resort, tells me that always when at Ilkley he makes a point of paying a visit to the old parish church and having a look at the two stained windows—one to the memory of Mr. Snowdon, sen., who for nigh upon forty years was vicar of the parish, and the other to his son Jasper, whom my friend knew in their boyhood days. He says the window memorialising his companion of yore seems to grow brighter in colour every time he sees it, and considers it a credit to the whole body of ringers; which is, to say the least, a very pleasing testimony from an outsider.

Last week, pressure of other "copy" prevented my usual appearance. This week, twenty-two peals have compelled our Editor to "take a back seat;" and my verdict is—served him right. I don't know exactly how the occupant of the sanctum relishes his relegation to obscurity pro tem.; perhaps if the truth were known, he rather likes it when reports of peals rung, or other interesting events, overcrowd his letter-box, but at the same time I have reason for saying that his weekly editorial is looked for with as much interest as any other portion of the paper. However, I am not going to flatter him, so, to requisition an old provincialism, we will leave it where it is.

Glancing over this list of twenty-two peals, I am pleased to see the many special characteristics with which it bristles; they are in fact so numerous that I will not attempt to summarise them any further than to compliment William Wakeman, who at nineteen years rung his peal of Double Norwich at Kidderminster, and the good old veteran William Sheldrake, who in his 79th year rang another peal of Major at Alburgh.

Amongst the accounts of "openings" and "re-openings," I am glad to find that the ring at Retford has at length grown into ten. They are very proud of their bells at Retford, I can assure you; and can thus fully understand the "intense delight" with which they listened to the attempted peal of Caters, on the memorable 19th. The praises of the old ring of eight, their marvellous sweetness of tone, et cetera, have been sung in my ears lots of times by a near neighbour who is a native of that town; and now that they have got ten bells in the tower—why there will be little peace in my friend's household till he has been over and heard them. It is also satisfactory to learn that "brother Tom" Hattersley has arranged to coach the Retford band till they can master Caters to the vicar's satisfaction. It would be difficult for them to have found a better man; so I shall be looking out for some practical result of his teaching at no distant date.

"These bells require to go into the melting-pot, as they are a very bad peal, and are out of tune, and go very badly." This is the report from Kidlington (Oxford), and I certainly appreciate the writer's candour. People are too prone to shut their eyes and years, and stoutly maintain the superiority of their own over everybody else's. But I fancy if I lived at Kidlington, this ring of six would get very little used, so far as I was concerned; but my energies should be devoted to consigning them to that melting-pot which it appears is the most suitable place for them. There is a pot at Whitechapel, and at Loughborough, and at Cripplegate, and at Bristol, and at Birmingham and Croydon, either of which would hold the lot; or if you doubt my word, put the Kidlington bells into one of them, and see if I am wrong.

FREE LANCE.

LEEDS AND DISTRICT AMALGAMATED SOCIETY.

The usual monthly ringing meeting of this society was held at Pudsey on Saturday, November 29th. Only a moderate number of members were present, owing probably to the severity of the weather. Representatives however attended from Leeds, Holbeck, Headingley (St. Chad's), Burley, and Pudsey, and these rang some well-struck touches of Kent Treble Bob and Bob Major, and Kent Treble Bob Minor, ringing being kept up until 9.0 p.m. A vote of thanks to the Vicar and churchwardens for the use of the bells, and to the Pudsey ringers for their arrangements, brought the meeting to a close. A new member was admitted at this meeting.

A REMARKABLE INJUNCTION.

The Vicar, churchwardens, and the respectable parishioners of St. John's, Deptford, in the diocese of Rochester, recently determined to erect a peal of eight bells in the tower of that church. Part of the cost was to be met by two gifts of 200l. each, and the balance it was proposed to raise by subscriptions. The tenor of the peal was to weigh a little over 16 cwt., and we believe we are correct in stating that the bells had actually been ordered from the Whitechapel foundry. A faculty for their erection was necessary, and on application being made to the Consistory Court of the diocese to obtain it, it was opposed by six parishioners, and in the end, after hearing the arguments on both sides, the Chancellor refused to grant the faculty prayed for. It is with pleasure that we hear that attempts will be made to reverse this decision on appeal. We shall again allude to the case next week, and publish in full the judgment.

ST. MARGARET'S ABBEY, BARKING, ESSEX.

An interesting service took place on Sunday morning week in the tower of St. Margaret's, the occasion being the dedication of the new ringing-chamber. The service was arranged for 10 o'clock, by which hour the apartment was well filled. Among those present were Messrs. H. W. Knowles, E. A. Davies, and J. A. Weller (churchwardens), H. Berry and A. Carter (sidesmen), members of the ringing company, and others. The Vicar, accompanied by the Rev. G. R. Marshall and the choir, took their places shortly after the time appointed. After a short dedicatory service two hymns were sung.

The Vicar then addressed the ringers:—"The voices of your bells can carry the message of God into places where the preacher's voice can never come. You too, like us clergy, are ministers of God, and your service like ours, is fitly rendered in a consecrated house. Never forget that I have handed over this belfry to your charge and care as a dedicated place."

At the conclusion of the service the Benediction was pronounced, and immediately after the departure of the clergy and choir, the bells, which had been silent for so many weeks, rang out gaily.

The restoration and fitting-up of the new ringing-chamber has been most successfully carried out, and what had hitherto been a lumber-store made into one of the most comfortable and church-like ringing-rooms in the county. The work consists of a new oak frame, also a sound floor placed about 3 ft. beneath the bells, the latter being matchboarded and covered by two thicknesses of roofing felt. The clock, which is raised on a platform about 13 ft. from the floor of the ringing-chamber, has been thoroughly repaired by Messrs. Gillett and Johnston, of Croydon. This is cased in by match-boarding, as is also the weight-case and the east side of the chamber. The underside of the sound-floor and the whole of the new woodwork is stained and varnished. The floor is covered with cocoanut matting, and is fitted up with seats, lavatory, table, chairs, desk, etc.

During the day many members of the congregation visited the belfry, and expressed themselves as much pleased with the manner in which the work has been carried out.

Obituary.

JOSEPH BUTTERWORTH.

It is with deep regret that we announce the death of the above-named ringer, which took place on Tuesday, November 25th, after a short illness, at the advanced age of seventy-two years. Deceased joined the Rochdale society when a young man, and took part in a good many peals. He rang his last peal—Grandsire Triples, Holt's ten-part—at the parish church on January 10th, 1882, ringing the 7th at the age of sixty-three, the late Mr. Thomas Bamford, who was seventy-eight, ringing the 3rd, the peal being conducted by C. J. Butterworth, only son of the deceased; and his last ringing of any note was to commemorate the eighty-second birthday of the late Mr. Thomas Bamford on Sunday, December 20th, 1885, when he again rang the 7th in the first half of Reeves's peal of Grandsire Triples, Mr. Bamford ringing the 3rd. Deceased had been a member of the Ancient Society of College Youths over thirty years, and was highly respected by all who knew him. He leaves a son, Mr. C. J. Butterworth, of Durham, and two daughters, to mourn his loss. His remains were interred at the Heywood cemetery on Friday, November 28th, and was followed by his children, relatives, and friends; also deputations from the Committees of the Conservative Associations, of which he was a member. The bells of the parish church were rung half-muffled for service on Sunday, November 30th, when touches of Grandsire Triples were rung, and again on the Monday night following, when six former ringers at the above church were got together to ring a long touch, assisted by two of the present ringers, but unfortunately owing to the second clapper having too much play, the cap slipped and "stand" was called. All being made right another touch of Grandsire Triples was rung by W. H. Smith, 1; F. Birtwistle, 2; G. Hoyle, 3; W. Siddle (Manchester), 4; A. Hurst, 5; C. J. Butterworth (Durham, conductor), 6; J. Harrison (Heywood), 7; W. Butterworth, 8. The ringers of St. Luke's church, Heywood, also rang a date touch, with the bells half-muffled, to his memory.

Correspondence.

While allowing the utmost freedom for the expression of opinion, it must never be considered that we are in any way bound to statements made by correspondents.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

MR. CARTER'S NEW METHOD: "DARLSTON BOB."

SIR,—A friend of mine sent me a lead of "College Single" asking me how I could compare it with "Darlaston Bob Triples." On carefully looking through it, I was surprised to find that I had been misinformed, as "College Single" is an even bell method, and "Darlaston Bob Triples" is an odd bell method, therefore, I think I am justified in claiming the latter.

J. CARTER.

STEDMAN TRIPLES.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Parker I thank him for his information. But I have known all possible variations of Thurstans' for some years now, and have called most of them. Although he says my "pairing singles" are not the same as mentioned by Mr. Heywood, I say for practical purposes they are one and the same. If you use a S at 2, you are obliged to use one at 14, and vice versa, and as it is possible to throw Thurstans' together with six of these, why use more? Even if you use more, they all have the same effect, and the only advantage gained is to parade a conductor. Using these S's simply do away with two four bob sets, and they happen to be the only two where the 6th is not behind, which is an advantage. If you call the peal on this plan, you ring the only peal possible with the 6th always dodging right at the four bob sets; and I say once more that it was first called by

J. W. WASHBROOK.

STEDMAN CATERS AT CHELSEA.

SIR,—As my name has been mentioned in connection with the above, perhaps it is only right that I should say a few words on the subject. In the first place, I have to thank Mr. Dains for so independently accrediting me with first using the "coming round" in question. In the second place I think my friend Mr. Rogers has failed to grasp the meaning of the paragraph, as Mr. Dains distinctly states that this coming round is adapted to this class of composition; most composers of Stedman Caters know there are other and shorter ways of coming round, but the course-end must be adapted to suit, whereas the peal in question has the 6th in seconds place, and the course-end (viz.—9-7-8) at a quick six, as Mr. Rogers observes, the first peal on this was a 5000, composed and conducted by myself at Leatherhead, on September, 26th, 1885. But I had previously published a 5006 in "THE BELL NEWS," on November 29th, 1884, in which the same coming round was used with calls only at 3 and 8, which was rung at All Saints, Loughborough, on August 22nd, 1888. In conclusion, I can only say, that if Mr. Rogers has a shorter coming round from this position, I shall only be too pleased to give way on the publication thereof.

THE ASSOCIATION SECRETARIES.

SIR,—In last week's "BELL NEWS," you kindly inserted a request from me to the Hon. Secretaries of fourteen County and Diocesan Associations, that they would send me their names and addresses, that I might write to them for information respecting their Association, to enable me to prepare a chapter for the "Official Year Book of the Church of England." Out of the fourteen secretaries only three have replied. My manuscript must be in the publishers' hands next week, so unless I hear from the Secretaries of the unmentioned Associations by Monday next, the name of the Association will, much to my regret, have to be omitted:—Chester Diocesan Guild, Devonshire Guild, East Lincolnshire Association, Eastern Counties' Guild, Hertford College Youths, Lichfield Diocesan Guild, Liverpool Diocesan Guild, North Lincolnshire Association, Salop Association, St. James' Society, London, and The United Counties' Association. THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1890.

THE columns of the Church papers, and in fact many others, week by week teem with accounts of Church Restoration, or under whatever name this recovery or renewal process goes by. In many cases, we are glad to say, these restoration schemes show the great vitality there is in the Church in spite of the periodical onslaughts which are made upon it. Yet, unfortunately, instances sometimes occur where we could have wished that no alteration had taken place. A "restoration" too often means that the bells and their accessories are to be sacrificed for the benefit of that nondescript thing sometimes known as "church architecture." Architects of the present day have a terrible fondness for opening the tower arch, and in nine cases out of ten where this is done, the bells come to grief, and the ringers also.

A case in point has just occurred at Halesworth, in Suffolk, where there is a ring of eight. Extensive alterations have just been made to the church, bringing in its train a revision of the ringing-chamber, with the result that the ringers cannot hear the bells at all! Here is another instance of the ignorance of blundering architects as to the requirements of the belfry and its occupants. We suppose it is of little use saying much more upon the matter. As long as architects are allowed to be masters of the situation in these restoration schemes, our bells will be at their mercy. But it would be well if incumbents generally would decline to bow to the conceit of an architect's dictum.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

My DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN
TRIPLES.

No. XXVIII.

THE USE AND VALUE OF SINGLES.

BY THE REV. H. EARLE BULWER.

Although, for my own part, I am by no means wedded to the plan of freely using Singles for the purpose of building up a peal in any method, yet it must be admitted that for producing particular types of peals, and for taking the place of bobs at H in the method we are more especially considering, the free use is not without a certain value.

I take it to be the true ideal of a composition in any method, that it should be produced by the sole aid of one species of call; and in those methods in which such a result is a proved impossibility, by the employment of only so many, or so few, calls of a second species as are absolutely necessary for the attainment of the regulation number of changes. Apart from all considerations of form, qualities, interesting or beautiful working, and so forth, a method which admitted of the full extent, with tenors together, being reached by means of one kind of call only would have a claim to be considered the most theoretically perfect. In any Triple method it seems to be absolutely certain that at least two singles must be employed in order to complete the full tale of 5040 changes: while the advantages to be obtained by the use of more than two appear to be somewhat limited, and liable to be still further discounted by accompanying features of an undesirable kind.

In considering the use and value of Singles as applied to Stedman Triples, it will be unnecessary to describe afresh the action of this call, or the principles which govern its employment. These points have already been well and fully explained by Mr. Heywood. I propose, therefore, only to supplement his explanations by shewing the universal shunting effects capable of being exercised by Singles, as a means of uniting isolated blocks, and supplying connections which would otherwise be missing between group and group.

In a former Article (XXV) the usefulness of bobs at H for making connections was shown to be limited: there being no direct connection possible by this means between the groups of Col. I. and those of Col. II., and, moreover, no inner connections between the groups of Col. III. Now, by Singles all these missing connections can be made, as well as all the connections that are possible by bobs. So that it would be possible to construct a peal in which all the connections should be made by Singles, and no bobs H used at all, and in which, consequently, all the Qs would be bobbed. The usefulness of the Single as a shunting agent is, therefore, superior to that of the bobs at H, because its capacity is universal instead of being limited; and by its aid obstacles can be surmounted which would otherwise defy the utmost ingenuity of the composer. A free use of Singles, for instance, enables a number of non-shunting blocks to be broken up, distributed throughout a composition, and strung together in detachments by one and the same agency.

An extended Table showing the inner working of Singles throughout the 60 P blocks, it is hardly necessary to give, and would occupy more space than its importance justifies: but it may be summarised conveniently by taking the blocks in divisions of ten each, according to the position of the 6th.

It will be remembered that the effect of a Single, called at any one of the four sixes available for the purpose in any block, is to bring up another block in its inverted form at the point at which the complementary Single would have to be called. Blocks so brought up by a Single from blocks in their direct or "even" form may, for the sake of distinction, be called "Inverts." Thus: a Single called at 2 or 11 on No. 1 will bring up the invert of 25 at its own 14th or 9th six respectively, and conversely, a Single at 14 or 9 on the invert of 25 will bring back the direct form of No. 1 at the point at which it was left at the first Single. Again, a Single at 9 or 14 on No. 1 brings up the invert of 44; and we might have supposed that there would be sufficient reciprocity between these three blocks, 1, 25, 44, to enable a Single at 2 or 11 on the invert of 25 to bring up the direct form of 44. But that is not the case: for such a Single would bring up the direct form of 48 instead. The shunting effect of Singles seems, in fact, to run through a group of six blocks, of which Nos. 1, 10, 25, 30, 44, and 48 may be taken as an example. That is to say, if Singles be called at any proper point of any one or more of these blocks, whether as directs or inverts, the effect will not go beyond this group. There are nine other groups of the same kind, of which the same is, of course, true. This applies to either pairing or non-pairing singles: but it must be remembered that for these two combinations of Singles the internal economy, so to speak, is distinct. In the case of pairing Singles, a block which is left as an "even," or direct block is returned to as a direct block; and it does not necessarily appear at all in its inverted form, or, if at all, only for two or three sixes between bobs. With non-pairing singles, on the other hand, a block which is left by a Single in its direct form must also appear in part as an invert between singles, the invert being left, in its turn, at the balancing Single which picks up the direct form of the invert entered at the first Single.

An example will perhaps make this curious and intricate action clearer than any description. Let us take one from Mr. Parker's No. 8. In the first part of that peal, the direct form of No. 39 is left, three sixes after entry, by a Single at 9, bringing up the proper 11th six of the invert of No. 49. No. 39 does not appear again till the third part, when its invert is brought up by a bob H occurring in one of the singled-in portions of the peal; the rest of No. 39 is now worked out in its inverted form till the proper 2 of the invert is reached, where a Single brings up the 14th six of 49 in its direct form. Thus the blocks in which the Singles are called, and those which the Singles bring up, must of necessity appear partly in their direct form and partly as inverts.

We may now proceed to the tabulation in a concise form of the shunting effects of Singles:—

TABLE W.

Position of 6th.	S at		Connects groups in Columns.	Position of 6th in inverts.

At lead ...	*		II. to I.	4ths place.
" "		*	III. inner connections.	5ths place.
" "		*	III. to I.	2nds "

To ascertain the effect of singling back from the inverts to the direct blocks, read the above table as it stands, merely transposing, in the "Connection" Column, I and II.

The ten groups of six blocks each, in which the workings of Singles may be arranged, are in two divisions according to the relative positions of the 5th and 6th bells; five show the 6th at home, in 4ths, and at lead, two blocks in each position; and the 5th not in those positions at all; and five show the 5th in those positions, and the 6th not in them at all.

When we come to consider the uses of singles in Stedman Triples, we find that they fall under two heads—compulsory and optional. Of the compulsory use it is not necessary to say much. We are all aware that, to obtain the 5040 changes true, singles must be employed to get in the block that refuses to be worked in by bobs. For this purpose the number of singles is, strictly speaking, limited to two: but to obtain the advantage of having the composition in equal parts (three or five) called alike, it is necessary to break up the isolated block and introduce it, by detachments, into each part: this increases the number of singles to two in each part, instead of two for the whole peal. For this particular purpose, the use of the increased number of singles is still compulsory. Under the head of optional we must place that freer use of singles, which has the effect of doubling the number of parts called alike, and, occasionally, of multiplying the isolated blocks. The advantages gained by the freer use of Singles are sound as far as they go; but they are not extensive. In the first place, the composition is divided into equal parts; and the parts, at least in each half, are called alike; though the halves themselves may be called differently. In the next place, it is possible to use some of the Singles to replace bobs at H, and so to reduce the number of consecutive calls.

With the exception of this last result, not much is gained towards the attainment of "musical qualities" by a free use of Singles. Indeed the question of musical qualities, when applied to Triples, seems to be in some danger of being made too much of; and, in considering it, we ought to bear in mind that there are only 5040 changes to be had on seven bells, and therefore, that any peal of Triples in any method, whatever be its composition, must consist of these same 5040 changes and no others. There is no choice. In composing for a higher number of bells there is a very considerable choice: and a composer may resolve to have a certain bell as much as possible in a certain position known to produce musical effects, and to keep it out of certain other positions known to produce unmusical effects. But there is no such picking and choosing open to him in Triples. All the changes possible will come up, whatever they may be, and whatever the method or the composition. The broad general effect of the music is governed by the working of the method; and will differ as the methods differ. But in any one given method the question of musical quality in a composition is reduced to one of arrangement of the order or sequence of the changes, and when looked at impartially does not amount to much; for if a particular change does not come up in one place, it must perforce occur in another: it is not lost. The occurrence at backstroke of as many musical cadences as possible appears, therefore, to be the summum bonum in Triples: and the effect of even this is in danger of being lost, unless, in ringing, the leads are kept well open. In Stedman Triples, the desirability of diminishing the number of consecutive calls, as a means of improving the general effect of the music, has to be kept in view in addition to the securing of cadences. The free use of Singles, as has been shown, may help us to obtain the first of these desiderata. But, with regard to the second, when we consider that with only two singles we can have the 6th at home at twenty course-ends, and at the lead in ten more (which latter means 6-7 home at back-stroke in the 9th six of the course), making ninety 67's at back stroke altogether, and that, in order to obtain a few more, we must multiply Singles with the very probable introduction of 6-bob sets in addition, it becomes evident that the additional effect may be purchased at too dear a price.

On looking over the remarks which accompanied my published peals last year, I find that I undertook to give some explanation of the tendency to 6-bob sets shown by compositions on certain lines. To do this thoroughly would require a number of illustrations for which there is not space in this Article: nor is the matter of sufficient importance to warrant its being separately dealt with. But the reason may be indicated in general terms by saying that this tendency shows itself most frequently in compositions based upon blocks which are intended to be singled-in, when the calling of such blocks is of a nature to cramp the calling of the remaining groups of the Triplets in which the singled-in block is situated. Thus, if the singled-in block has omits at both S and L, it is obvious that in the companion groups of the Triplets concerned the Ls of one and the Ss of the other will be bobbed, and when this happens to be the case in more than one Triplet, a 6-bob set will as a rule be unavoidable. If Diagrams are constructed and worked out on the following singled-in blocks, they will supply good illustrations of this point:—H, repeated (4-part): Q, repeated (4-part): H, SL, twice repeated (3 or 6-part): HQ, HL, four times repeated (10-part).

Having in this and the five preceding articles tracked and reduced to a compact and definite form the inner working of Hudson's 50 P blocks, demonstrating to the best of my ability their relation to, and reaction upon, one another under various conditions of procedure; and having endeavoured to show, though I fear very imperfectly and feebly, the bearing which all these things have upon the construction of peals; the part I undertook to perform in connection with the elucidation of this beautiful method is accomplished. There is still room for much speculation, enquiry, and effort in various directions; but our work on that part to which we have restricted ourselves may be regarded as fairly complete; and the way is clear for the more abstruse calculations on collateral issues which Mr. Thompson may be able to give.

WRAYSBUURY, BUCKS.

On Saturday, November 29th, ten members of the Waterloo Society of London met at Waterloo station to proceed to Wraysbury, at the invitation of the Rev. J. H. Hindson, who is a member of the society. Three o'clock was the time for departure, and the reserved carriage having been found, it was not long before the fine peal of handbells belonging to the society was going to the tune of Grandsire and Stedman Triples, and Kent Treble Bob Major. After arriving at Wraysbury station, it was not long before the church was reached, where the visitors were met by the vicar. After an inspection of the bells, an unsuccessful attempt to ring a peal of Stedman Triples was made by A. E. Church, 1; W. W. Thorne, 2; S. G. Davies, 3; C. E. Malim, 4; W. L. Partington, 5; F. L. Davies (conductor), 6; W. T. Cock-erill, 7; G. Wild, 8. Afterwards some touches of Grandsire Triples, Kent Treble Bob Major, and Stedman Triples were rung, in which the Rev. J. H. Hindson, W. Coppage, R. Flaxman, J. C. Mitchell, and one of the local party took part. The next move was to the vicarage, where fourteen sat down to supper kindly provided by the Vicar, and to which ample justice was done. After the repast, several touches of Stedman and Grandsire Triples were rung by most of the above, Mr. H. L. Davies taking part. A very pleasant evening was spent, and after awarding to the Vicar a cordial vote of thanks for his kind hospitality, the hour of departure drew nigh. London was reached just before 12 o'clock, the homeward journey being enlivened by the vocal efforts of Messrs. Church and Partington, and the handbells.

THE LANCASHIRE ASSOCIATION.

LIVERPOOL DIOCESAN BRANCH.—The usual monthly ringing meeting was held on Saturday, December 6th, at St Thomas's church, St. Helen's. Ringers attended from Prescott, Halewood, and Southport, besides the local company. The Vicar, the Rev. J. Pigott, M.A., presided at the meeting in the schoolroom. After the reading of and passing the minutes of the last meeting, he addressed the members, giving the Association a hearty welcome, and was desirous of becoming a life member. Accordingly himself and four of his ringers were enrolled as members. Mr. Hill (Sec.) briefly addressed the meeting shewing the steady progress of the branch, and the Association in general. The next meeting was fixed to be held at St. Luke's church, Liverpool (eight-bell tower), on Saturday, January 23rd, 1891. The usual vote of thanks was proposed and carried to the vicar for presiding, and for the use of the schoolroom. The rev. gentleman briefly responded, and expressed an hope that the Association would hold another meeting there in due course. Methods rung during the evening: Grandsire Doubles and Bob Minor.

ROCHDALE BRANCH.—A meeting of this branch was held at St. Mark's church, Glodwick, on Saturday last, December 6th. Ringers were present from Rochdale, Heywood, Haughton, Lees, Moorside, Flixton, and Oldham, Touches of Grandsire Triples, Bob Major, and a course of Kent Treble Bob Major was rung. Two new members were elected, and the meeting closed with the usual votes of thanks. The next meeting is to be held at East Crompton church (six bells), on Saturday, January 17th.

BLACKBURN BRANCH.—On Saturday last, a meeting of the above branch was held at Burnley parish church, when representatives attended from Burnley, Blackburn, Church, Colne, Gargrave, and Padiham. M. J. Walker, president of the branch, presided at the meeting, which was held in the tower. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Padiham on the 2nd Saturday in February next. Votes of thanks were accorded to the Vicar, wardens, ringers, and chairman, for their services and the use of the bells respectively. This terminated the business of the meeting, and ringing was afterwards kept up till 9.30 p.m.

SUSSEX COUNTY ASSOCIATION, MIDHURST BRANCH

On Friday, November 7th, on the silent apparatus, a quarter-peal, consisting of touches of Kent and Oxford Treble Bob, College Single, Oxford Single, Plain Bob, and Canterbury Pleasure. This was rung as a birthday touch to the inventor of the apparatus, for whom a peal was arranged, but owing to the death of the vicar, Rev. E. R. Cruickshanks, it was postponed.

The funeral of the above-named rev. gentleman taking place on the following Monday, as the cortege left the church en route for Anglesea (where the interment took place) the usual whole pull and stand was rung with the bells half-muffled. And again in the evening, when 360 of College Single was rung, and a 720 of Kent was lost after 600 had been rung. The following ringers officiated: Messrs. C. C. Soane, T. Ellis, W. H. George (conductor), A. B. Bennett, W. Selby, J. Lee.

HOLY TRINITY CHURCH, LOW MOOR, BRADFORD, YORKS.

It is fifty years since the bells were hung in the tower of this church, and on Saturday last, December 6th, the ringers and friends, numbering about twenty-two, met together in order to celebrate the event. During the afternoon a peal was rung, and in the evening some Kent Treble Bob Minor was performed by the ringers, assisted by one or two of the visitors, and conducted by Luke Illingworth in a very creditable manner. At six o'clock a very substantial knife and ferk tea was provided at the "Chapel House" inn, and a most enjoyable evening was spent with several performances on the handbells, songs, etc., and every one seemed satisfied with the manner in which the Jubilee had been observed.

THE MARKET RASEN SOCIETY.

On Friday evening, November 28th, seven members of the St. Thomas's society, Market Rasen, all being members of the North Lincolnshire Association, visited Wragby, and were successful in ringing the first two 720s on the bells. Messrs. Warner and Sons, of London, have recast two of the bells, and put them all in first-rate order, at a cost of £97, and the general opinion of all is that they go exceedingly well, and are now a very musical peal. Wragby, distant eight miles from Market Rasen, was reached by the visitors at 6.45, and they at once repaired to the steeple, where ringing commenced at 7 o'clock, and was well kept up for about two hours. The first was a 720 of Oxford Bob (nine bobs), by R. Tomlinson, 1; H. Gadd, 2; J. Hackney, 3; T. Steeles, 4; T. Gibbons, 5; H. Burkitt (conductor), 6. Some touches of Kent Treble Bob were likewise rung by the same band; Mr. I. E. Cocking also took the treble in other ringing. The Wragby ringers were taken through Grandsire Doubles, and some short touches, and with a little coaching ought soon to become efficient ringers. A 720 of Bob Minor was then rung, and after partaking of supper, and a pleasant hour at an adjacent inn, the visitors left for home, and finished a pleasant evening at the residence of Cook Houldershaw, Esq., at Lymode, where they were most hospitably entertained, an enjoyable time being spent in handbell ringing, and songs by the party. The handbells at Wragby had also been repaired and tuned by Messrs. Warner, and were tried and found a musical peal by the visitors. A hearty invitation was given for another visit at an early date, which was accepted.

The Market Rasen band arranged to meet on Friday evening last to attempt a 720 of Kent Treble Bob. Mr. T. Gibbons being unavoidably absent, Mr. S. Pile, a new resident, and a member of the College Youths, filled the vacant place, and it was well performed with only one slight hitch, which was immediately remedied. S. Pile, 1; R. Tomlinson, 2; J. Hackney, 3; T. Steeles, 4; H. Gadd, 5; H. Burkitt (conductor), 6. It was well struck considering that it was the first 720 on an inside bell by J. Hackney, and the first 720 in the method by Messrs. Pile, Tomlinson, and Steeles.

BARRINGTON, OXFORDSHIRE.

A large clock and chimes have just been erected in the parish church tower by Messrs. John Smith and Sons, of the Midland Clock Works, Derby. The clock is fitted with all the latest improvements, all the wheels are of gun metal, with machine-cut teeth; there is apparatus to continue the action during winding, and although the chimes play upon the ordinary church bells, the hammers are so arranged that the ringing is not interfered with. This excellent clock will be a valuable adjunct to the church, and a boon to the parishioners of Barrington.

THE REMARKABLE BELL INJUNCTION.

Mr. F. W. Thornton kindly writes to correct the name of the church which the worshipful the Chancellor of the diocese of Rochester has decided shall not have a ring of bells. The church is that of St. Peter, Brockley, not St. John's, Deptford. Brockley is, we believe, a hamlet of the parish of Deptford. below will be found the judgment of the Chancellor. We take this from that influential church paper, The Guardian, and it is worthy of remark that though the same number of that journal has about four pages upon Parnellism and anti-Parnellism, we cannot find any criticism upon such a novel judgment.

In delivering his judgment, the learned Chancellor said:—

"It appears from the evidence of Mr. Lawson, the bell-founder, that this would be a fairly heavy peal of bells, and that as the weight is increased the sound produced by bells grows mellower and less shrill, but on the other hand reaches to a greater distance. At present the church has one bell. St. Peter's church was consecrated in 1867, and it appears that the original plan provided for a spire and a belfry suitable for a peal of bells. It is said that but for lack of funds the belfry would have been built and the bells would have been fixed prior to consecration, and it is argued that inasmuch as if that had been done the bells could not have been interfered with subsequently, I ought not to listen to opponents to a scheme which is really a completion of the original design. I do not follow that argument. If the original design had been carried out, the then parishioners might have approved of the bells, or they might have petitioned the Bishop not to consecrate the church with the bells. The Bishop might have granted such a petition or he might not. I cannot tell what would have resulted from events which did not occur, and I cannot regard the present parishioners of St. Peter's as affected either way by considerations of what their predecessors might perhaps have done, but as a matter of fact did not do. The 15th and 67th canons show that a single bell for tolling before service and for the dead is a necessary part of the fittings or furniture of a parish church, and it has been always so regarded. But a peal of bells is on a different footing. It was indeed argued that a peal of bells is so emphatically appropriate an accessory to public worship that it would be the duty of the court to allow any person with a locus standi to appear here, to erect them even against the will of the whole body of parishioners, the vestry, and the churchwardens. I cannot assent to that view. It is entirely contrary to the practice of the Church courts. In matters permitted but not obligatory the wishes of the parishioners, and especially of the parishioners most concerned, ought to be decisive. Of course, if the parishioners desire something which is illegal, or which in the opinion of the Court would be detrimental to the permanent interests of the parish—as for instance, the needless destruction of valuable architectural antiquities—or if, on the other hand, the parishioners, not now liable for church rates, refuse to repair their church or to allow it to be rescued from dilapidation and ruin by private liberality—it would in any of these cases be the duty of the Court to decline to follow the wishes of the parishioners. But as to mere improvements it is not the mere practice of the Court, and I do not think it would be right, to force them on against the will of those most concerned, even where the fact of their being improvements is indubitable. But the desirability of a peal of bells is a matter of opinion, and of widely divergent opinion. Peals of bells, though not very ancient in England—the first regular peal is said to have been sent in 1456 by Pope Callixtus III. to King's College, Cambridge—have, especially in post-Reformation times, been common throughout the country, and the art of bellringing was formerly, even more than now, a much cultivated and popular amusement. On the other hand, the chiming and ringing of church bells is not universally appreciated. To some it is always disagreeable; probably to all it is sometimes disturbing. It is idle to discuss the reasonableness of such objections. They exist, and their existence must be recognised. I cannot listen, therefore, to the abstract arguments that have been pressed on me. As to the proposed peal, it is said that their weight, and the height at which they will be fixed (the church stands at almost the highest point in the parish), will render the sound so soft and mellow that it will scarcely be heard, and cannot annoy anybody. The answer is that if the bells are inaudible it will be useless to have them, and if they can be heard they may annoy. In Soltau v. De Held (2 Sim., N.S. 141) Vice-Chancellor Kindersley granted an injunction to restrain the ringing of a peal of bells belonging to a Roman Catholic chapel at the suit of a neighbouring resident. His Honour considered that a nuisance was proved. This case is important as showing, first, that the law recognises that a peal of bells may cause a nuisance sufficient to warrant interference by injunction; and secondly, inasmuch as no injunction could be granted against a peal of bells placed in a church by the authority of a faculty, it shows that this Court, when applied to for such a faculty, ought to listen to objections with special care, because when once overruled here, they cannot be raised elsewhere. It seems to me, therefore, that this a matter which must be decided according to the wishes of the parishioners. If they want the bells the Court will be very ready to authorise so suitable and dignified an addition to the parish church, but if they do not want the bells they are not to be compelled to have them. Now what are the materials on which I am to form an opinion as to the wishes of parishioners? First there is the vestry held on May 22nd last. A resolution was then passed by 84 votes to 22 in favour of the bells. A poll was offered but was not accepted by the minority. But then the composition of the vestry has been a good deal criticised. It is admitted that some (I think the vicar said possibly twenty) seatholders who were not parishioners were present, but no attempt has been made by the parties opponent to prove that the result of the vestry was due to their presence, and I have not been asked to order a fresh vestry. I must take it, therefore, that a properly convened vestry decided by a large majority in favour of the bells. But the matter did not end there. Both sides have gone behind the vestry. The petitioners have obtained a memorial in favour of the bells signed by many seatholder parishioners, but have not canvassed the parish generally. The opponents have canvassed the whole parish, and have procured a statement of the views of a great number of the occupiers and also of the owners of the various houses. Now two questions arise—first, Is the vote of vestry final, so that the Court is bound to take it as a definite expression of the opinion of the parish? secondly, if not, can the Court accept such further evidence of that opinion as has been offered in this case; and if accepted, what weight should be attached to that evidence? Now, as to the first point, there is no magic about a vote of vestry. The Court always pays great attention to the views of the parishioners, and a vote of vestry is the usual, and I will add the regular way of eliciting their views. But the Court is not bound by the vestry, and if from circumstances it is satisfied that the vote of vestry does not represent the real opinion of the parish, the Court not only can, but ought to reject the vote of vestry, and to take any better means of gauging parochial opinion which are within its power. As to the second point, I do not think that memorials signed by persons supposed to be interested are strictly evidence at all. Even if the signatures are proved we cannot know fully upon what representations they are obtained; and moreover, they do not furnish the best evidence (which the Court always requires), of the fact they are produced to prove. If a parishioner wishes to bring his views to the attention of the Court he can do it by appearing here either as a party or a witness. Such memorials as these are very frequently brought forward in faculty cases, but they are generally objected to by the other side, and, as far as my experience goes, successfully. In this case, however, each side has its own memorial, and as the price of letting it in was willing to admit the memorial of his adversary. Under these circumstances I did not at the hearing think I ought to object. With regard to the weight to be attached to the memorials when admitted as evidence, I have come to the conclusion that I must regard these memorials as fairly representing the real opinions of the signatories. The vicar had at the vestry undertaken that if the bells were consented to they should be used sparingly, and the canvasser pointed out to the people that this undertaking would not bind the next incumbent, of whom, and of the date of whose succession, they did and could know nothing. On an examination of the memorials of both sides the result is as follows: There are 821 houses in the parish; 41 appear to be empty, so that 780 houses only are occupied. On a combination of the memorials on both sides it appears that 212 occupiers are in favour of the bells, and 241 against the bells. The remaining 327 occupiers have either declared themselves neutral or it has not been found possible to ascertain their views. Taking the area within a radius of one furlong from the church, which would of course be most affected by the bells, there appear to be 248 tenanted houses, containing 131 occupiers who are against the bells and 55 who are in favour of them. Within the same area 44 persons, owners of long leases of 93 houses, object to the bells as in their opinion 'calculated materially to lessen the value' of their property. Now in considering the effect to be given to this informal counting of heads within the parish I think I am bound to bear in mind, first, that this is not a matter which solely or chiefly concerns those who attend or are interested in the parish church and its services. Every one within the sound of the bells, whatever his theological views, must hear them whether he will or no, and the views of all therefore ought to be considered; secondly, it is obvious that those dwelling nearest the church would be most affected by the sound of the bells, and in my opinion special weight must be given to their opinion; thirdly it is conceivable that the rental value of the houses near the church might be prejudiced by the bells, as some of the owners apprehend, and I think, therefore, that they have a locus standi to appear and to be heard in this court in defence of their rights of property, although they are not residents within the parish or entitled to vote in vestry. But although it is perhaps convenient that I should state my opinion on these two last-mentioned points as they have been raised, they are not in my view necessary to the decision of this case. Without going further into figures than this, that in a parish of 780 householders 241 are against the bells, 327 are silent, and 212 have expressed themselves in favour of the bells, and leaving out of consideration all nice questions as to the quantum of weight given to the views of one parishioner as compared with those of another, I come to the conclusion that, in the face of so formidable a body of hostile opinion, I cannot consider that the petitioners, on whom the burden of proof lies, have established the existence of a sufficiently general desire for the bells on the part of the parishioners to warrant the Court in decreeing a faculty. I cannot forget that the petitioners and the opponents occupy very different positions in this matter. The petitioners are seeking what may be called a luxury; the opponents apprehend a nuisance. If the faculty is refused, no parishioner will be the worse: but if the faculty is granted, a great many will be exposed to more or less annoyance. I have no actual precedent to follow—I must except the responsibility of making one and refuse so much of the prayer of the petition as asks for authority to place a peal of bells in the tower of the church. I will add that I have considered whether it would be possible to allow the bells subject to conditions as to the amount and occasions of their use, such as the vicar proposed at the vestry meeting; but I doubt the power of the Court to make any conditions which could be enforced in the future, and therefore, although I should have been glad to assist any arrangement between the parties if they could have agreed to a compromise, as neither side is disposed to come to terms, I think it better in the interests of the parish simply to refuse the faculty. The petitioners were right when they presented their petition. They were then entitled to rely on the vote of vestry, and they could not foresee the result of a canvass of the parish; I therefore make no order as to costs."

THE CHRISTMAS NUMBER

Of this paper will be published on Wednesday, December 24th, instead of the 20th as announced. This is owing to the difficulty of obtaining the copies of the Portraits in time. It will contain two stories—"BELFRY REFORM;" and "THE YOUTHS OF ST. ALOYSIUS;" the last by a new writer. Also a short chapter from the pen of "JOSHUA," entitled, "A PEAL IN A NEW METHOD." A Portrait, with Memoir, of MR. GEORGE DORRINGTON, OF LONDON, will also accompany the number.

"THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD" will be forwarded post free, on the following terms:—

One copy, 12 months	8s.
" 6 "	4s.
" 3 "	2s.

All Subscriptions and Orders for papers must be sent direct to the Publisher E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, London.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1890.

THE judgment recently given by the Chancellor of Rochester diocese, with regard to the placing of a ring of bells in a church within that diocese, will be regarded with more than surprise by many of the laity of the English Church who are not change-ringers. Some will look upon the judgment as a strange innovation in ecclesiastical law; to others it will seem dangerous in the extreme, and likely to lead to further demands of much greater moment to the Church than permission or otherwise to erect a ring of bells.

Whatever latitudinarian proclivities the learned Chancellor may have, they seem to have asserted themselves in this judgment to the very utmost. When he tells the parties before him that people who are not residents within the parish, and have not a right to vote at vestry meetings of the parish, can be heard in opposition to a proposal which arises in the parish to which they are foreign, it looks like going very much out of the way to commend any opposition which may be made by such persons at any time. That an objection to bells do exist and always will exist we are fully aware. There are cases where local circumstances cause the ringing of bells to be the reverse of desirable. But even such instances as these, though plentiful enough, are not so numerous as is thought. To some people the sound of bells is nothing but an abomination even under the most favorable circumstances. And we should imagine that the greater part of those who object to bells in the parish of St. Peter, Brockley, are of this class. The judgment seems to be a sort of pat on the back for such people. When it is considered that nearly one-half of the householders in the parish are silently indifferent upon the matter, and nearly one-third in favor of the Church being provided with bells, the determination arrived at is amazing in the highest degree. We shall expect to hear of injunctions of all sorts and conditions being applied for after this, especially from quarters where an attack upon the Church would meet with favour.

There are agencies at the present day much more annoying and distressing than the sound of bells even in crowded thoroughfares. In suburban London the Sabbath is in many cases made worthless as a day of rest and peace by means of those organisations who travesty religion, and make a practical burlesque upon public worship. Uninstructed and unchastened fanaticism stalking rampant through our thoroughfares inflicts far greater annoyances than bells can ever do. Yet if some one was to move for an injunction to compel the Salvation Army to stay the blowing of their hideous brass instruments—instruments it would seem, only designed for noise—on a Sunday, when parishioners wished for quietness and repose, we don't think the application would meet with the success which the opposition at Brockley has met with.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

Obituary.

ABEL HADFIELD.

We deeply regret to announce the death of the above-named gentleman, who died on Friday, November 28th, and was interred in the Hayfield burial ground. He was carried to his last resting-place by his ringing and other friends. Deceased, who had been in failing health for the last few months was a good ringer, and one who could be relied upon. A course of Grandsire Triples was rung over his grave by his brother-ringers: W. Booth, 1-2; J. Brocklehurst, 3-4; T. Whitehead, 5-6; T. Brocklehurst, 7-8. The bells of St. Matthew's church were deeply muffled on the Wednesday and Sunday following. Mr. Hadfield first learnt to ring some forty years ago, and had for the last ten or eleven years been with the local company as ringer of the fifth bell. Deceased first rang three peals in succession on March 10th, 1863, in honour of the Prince of Wales' wedding. Since that time he has taken part in ringing three 5040's at the above church in seven different Treble Bob Minor methods. The treble ringer who took part in these peals died two years ago; only four is now left to find new friends.

A tablet will be shortly erected in honour of these peals being rung; it is only waiting for repairs done in the belfry. The tablet is in gold gilded letters, and is the workmanship of Mr. Samuel Ashton, a native of Castleton, Derbyshire. It bears the following names who took part in it: J. Vernon, 1; J. Brocklehurst, 2; T. Whitehead, 3; A. Rangeley, 4; A. Hadfield, 5; T. Brocklehurst, 6.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—
My DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PEALS OF STEDMAN TRIPLES.

No. XXIX.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS: NOTE BY MR. THOMPSON.

Before bringing this series of articles to a close with Mr. Thompson's note on the "replacing" sixes, it may be convenient to sum up the results achieved in the course of our enquiry.

After clearing the way to a proper understanding of the subject by tracing the successive advances made in composition by the older composers, and indicating the process they pursued, we arrived at the point at which the old plan of obtaining peals disappeared, to be replaced by the new system of composition by means of twin bobs, inaugurated by William Hudson, of Sheffield, whose peal is the first example known to us of a composition on this system. The superiority of the P over the B block, as a basis for the construction of peals, was so marked, that every subsequent peal of Stedman Triples, of any importance, has been, and in all probability, will continue to be, composed on this system. We soon found that Hudson's set of 60 course-ends, or P blocks, were present in every later twin-bob peal, and were, consequently, inseparable from the (unbroken) twin-bob system. But the subject of composition, even on this system, was still enveloped in haze and uncertainty. Whether the composers of fifty years ago knew of any definite principles to guide them in their work beyond the employment of bobs in pairs: or whether they still adhered to the cumbrous and tedious system of composition and proof described by Shipway, we could not tell. If they knew of any further principles, or a more concise system of proof, they left no record of it, nor was any information to be gleaned from existing works on ringing. Our task was, therefore, to unearth such principles and laws as might underlie the twin-bob system: to clear away entanglements; and, by a process of compression and concentration, to reduce the whole system to so compact a form, that attention to a few clearly defined laws and conditions alone would be required to ensure true and satisfactory results in composition.

We have, or believe we have, accomplished this in the following particulars:—

1.—By discovering that the 60 P blocks are only liable to falseness in the 3rd and 7th; and the 5th and 12th sixes respectively—that a bob at any of these sixes introduces a six alien to the 60 P blocks, which, without risk of falseness elsewhere, will replace the one, proper to them, which would have been false—and that the bob at the next six would in every case restore the thread of the composition within the limits of the 60 P blocks; so that, by eliminating half the above sixes, which would have been false, and replacing them by the same number of alien sixes, the only falseness inherent in the 60 P blocks would be overcome.

2.—By establishing the conditions of the "q" set, by which the certainty of accurate elimination and replacement of false sixes is assured.

3.—By treating the 60 P blocks as so many natural course-ends tabulating them, and affixing to each a distinctive number, the necessity of using rows of figures in composition or proof is abolished.

4.—By adopting distinctive letters for the calling positions, in lieu of the numbers of the sixes, the notation of a composition is simplified, and the confusion consequent upon many bob marks obviated,

5.—Experiments conducted on these principles soon demonstrated the possibility of obtaining true peals in considerable number and on plans, up to that time, unattempted and unknown in the method.

6.—The principles governing the action of Singles have been clearly laid down, and the laws regulating their employment distinctly stated.

7.—By showing that the 60 P blocks are capable of division into 15 independent groups, or families—by assigning to each group a distinctive symbol—by establishing the relations subsisting between those groups, their reaction upon one another and the only way in which they can be connected together by bobs (or singles), the power of compression and concentration has been carried so far, that, by the use of 15 symbols only, intelligible expression can be given to the course and character of any composition.

8.—By tracing the effects of different combinations of connections, the rules by which the character of a composition is formed have been indicated, and a definite guide provided by which the various classes of peals may be projected.

9.—Although we have made no attempt to supply a formal and mathematical proof of the impossibility of obtaining a peal by bobs only, the law has been so far traced as to show that no arrangement of 60 true "q sets" is possible; that at least one "q set" must have all its members either bobbed or plained in order to fit it in with the rest; such a "q set" would, of course, be false in itself.

10.—The proofs which Mr. Thompson has furnished are important contributions to the subject, and will be read with interest; for they clear up certain moot points which might otherwise have remained in doubt.

We are not aware that any contribution to the elucidation of Stedman Triples on any of the above points has ever before been published; or so near an approach made to a full explanation of the principles underlying composition in the method. We have omitted nothing which appeared to us necessary to the attainment of this end. It is possible, we are painfully aware, and even probable, that some of our explanations may not have been given in the best way: and we may, in some instances, through anxiety to be clear, have only succeeded in obscuring an argument by the very means we took to make it plain. That is a common fate of expositors; and we can claim no exemption from it. Still, we have done our best; and would fain hope that we have at least, succeeded in making a contribution to scientific knowledge, which is not without its value.

NOTE BY MR. W. H. THOMPSON. SEE ART. VII. PAR. 2.

On the position in P blocks of such of the sixes, whose Ks are missing from Hudson's set of 60 P blocks, as are capable of being introduced thereto by elimination of duplicates therefrom.

From each of Hudson's 60 course-ends let four leader-circles be formed as the four—

7 6 5 2 3 1 4—(a)
 „ 2 4 3 1—(c)
 „ 4 2 1 3—(d)

are formed from the course-end 2314567.

Thus four sets (a) (b) (c) and (d), of sixty leader-circles each, are formed.

Let the 240 P blocks of which these are leader-circles be formed, and let 7 be the observat on bell throughout, so that a quick six end having 7 at home may be the 14th six end of each P block.

Then Series (a) consists of the 60 P blocks whose 5th six-ends are capable of replacing 5th six-ends of Hudson's set.

But the 60 P blocks of series (a) also have 4th six-ends capable of replacing 3rd six-ends of Hudson's set.

Series (b) consists of the 60 P blocks whose 12th six-ends are capable of replacing 12th six-ends of Hudson's set.

Series (c) consists of the 60 P blocks whose 3rd six-ends are capable of replacing 3rd six ends of Hudson's set, and whose 7th six ends are capable of replacing 7th six ends of Hudson's set.

But the 60 P blocks of series (c) also have 6th six ends capable of replacing 5th six ends of Hudson's set, and also have 12th six ends capable of replacing 7th six ends of Hudson's set.

Series (d) consists of the 60 P blocks whose 7th six ends are capable of replacing 12th six ends of Hudson's set.

The four series (a) (b) (c) and (d) together consist of the 240 P blocks which are necessary and sufficient to show in duplicate the 240 six ends as to which enquiry is being made.

Thus the 240 six ends of which one half must be introduced into Hudson's set to produce a peal can in no case be found in less than 120 P blocks.

W. H. T.

THE KENT COUNTY ASSOCIATION.

The Annual meeting of the Central Committee was held, by permission of the Dean, in the Cathedral Library, on Monday, December 15th, present: Rev. E. W. Carpenter, Hon. Sec., in the chair; Messrs. E. A. Nunn and F. Finn (Ashford District), Mr. A. Foreman (Canterbury), Mr. W. Cooke (Rochester), Rev. T. S. Carteis and Mr. E. Pope (Tonbridge), Rev. F. J. O. Helmore, Dr. Grayling, and Messrs. Graham and Newman. No representative was present from Maidstone district. It was decided to hold the Annual General Meeting on Monday, June 29. The question of booking peals of Triples rung without a cover was considered, and a motion was made by Mr. Helmore, seconded by Dr. Grayling, that such peals should not be entered. An amendment was proposed by Mr. Nunn, seconded by Mr. Finn—"That all peals of Triples rang by members of the Association without a covering bell be entered in the peal-book." After considerable discussion the amendment was lost by three votes to four, the remaining members not voting. Mr. Helmore then asked leave to withdraw his motion, and to propose that the question be referred to the Central Council, and this was seconded by Mr. Newman, and carried unanimously.

It was also proposed and carried that the Hon. Sec. should be empowered to appoint two members of the Association, to give advice as to needed repairs, and to inspect the work of the bellhangers after rehanging bells at any of the towers in the county, and report to the Hon. Sec. This proposal was made on account of the very unsatisfactory condition of some peals which have been hung or rehung of late years; and it is hoped that the authorities, in places where bellhanging is to be done, will be glad to avail themselves of the services of the Association in this way, and that in due time no bellhanging contract will be considered completed until the officers of the Association, whose members will use the bells, shall have "passed" the work.

A proposal to erect a peal-board at Leeds church to commemorate the first peal of Stedman Caters by the Association was adopted. Other matters of general interest were discussed, and a very satisfactory meeting concluded with the usual votes of thanks. A design for a new certificate of membership was to have been submitted to the committee, but the promised design was not forthcoming. The Hon. Sec. was therefore requested to obtain others, which with that mentioned, will be sent by post to members of the committee, in order that their opinion may be taken before a final decision.

ST. MICHAEL'S, HEADINGLEY, LEEDS.

On Thursday afternoon, December 11th, a special service was held in the above church for the purpose of dedicating the new ring of eight bells, six of which have been presented to the parish, and the other two provided with the proceeds of other bells formerly the property of the church. The special form of service, which commenced at 3 o'clock, consisted of shortened Evensong, and a sermon by the Lord Bishop of Richmond. After the sermon, the Bishop, clergy, and choir proceeded to the west end of the church, underneath the belfry, where the Bishop read the dedication prayers, immediately following which the bells were rung round in peal for the first time, for the space of about a minute. A hymn having been sung by the choir, the tenor was rung three whole pulls, this was followed by another hymn, and the bells were again rung round while the Bishop, clergy and choir returned to the chancel, where the Bishop pronounced the benediction. The company selected to open the bells were stationed as follows: J. Whitaker, 1; H. W. Needham, 2; F. G. Robinson, 3; W. Child, 4; A. Naylor, 5; G. Noble, 6; F. Robinson, 7; R. Binns, 8. Messrs. Needham and Binns belong to Leeds; the others to Headingley St. Chad's. It was intended to have rung a date touch of Kent Treble Bob Major after the ceremony, but owing to the numerous contingent of ringers who had assembled to hear and have a pull at the bells, this was abandoned, and only short touches in various methods were rung during the evening. The universal opinion was that the bells were perfect in tune and tone, and the go of them every thing to be desired. They are hung in an iron frame, and are all on one level, the ropes falling into the ringing chamber in a pretty circle. The weight of the tenor is 20 cwt. 1 qr. in the key of F., and the bells have on them the following inscription:—

"To God the Father, God the Son, and God the Spirit Three in One; be Honour, Praise, and Glory given: by all on Earth, and all in Heaven. Rev. Frederick John Wood, M.A., Vicar; C. F. Tetley, M.A. and Joseph Nicholson, Churchwardens."

The work has been carefully and successfully carried out by Messrs. John Tayler and Co., the well-known bellfounders of Loughborough. A new clock has also been presented, and when erected will strike the Cambridge quarters and hours on the bells.

INTERESTING RELICS.

A banking company having purchased St. Andrew's House, Pershore, and the adjoining houses, have built a new wing, made other alterations and additions, and opened them as their business premises. The old disused chapel in the basement, with walls 6ft. thick, and heavy vaulted ceiling, now forms in part the bank strong-room. This curious old structure, says the Builder, was for years a matter of speculation as to its date and the purpose for which it was built. It was generally supposed to date from the fifteenth century, but upon opening out the back of the vault for the insertion of a fire-proof door, it was found to be built with blocks of Perpendicular tracery and Early English moulded arch voussoirs taken from the Benedictine Abbey at the destruction of the nave by Henry VIII. The chapel must, therefore, have been built for the use of the Catholics after the Reformation. It was found that cart-loads of finely-moulded Early English and later work were buried in the foundations, together with bold window tracery of large size. Portions of the western turrets of the nave, of early character, were brought to light, from which the architect, Mr. Lunn, after carefully patching them together, took measured drawings. The whole of the front ground-floor appears to have been a large hall, about 40ft. long, with fine ashlar walls of Painswick stone and huge oak beams. A circular turret staircase, partly destroyed, formed the communication with the chapel. All these interesting relics are preserved with the greatest care.

THE CENTRAL COUNCIL.

The Gloucester and Bristol Association at their last meeting appointed the following gentlemen as their representatives on the Central Council: the Rev. H. A. Cockey, Oldland Vicarage, Bristol; Mr. G. H. Phillott, Cheltenham; and Mr. F. E. Ward, County of Gloucester Bank, Newport, Mon.

In the above peal each of the divisions of three courses is to be called as the standard calling, viz. :

3-4 7-8
3-4-5-6 12-13
5-6

All variations from this are noted at the side. The present form of the composition is merely a transposition of the Original with the singles inserted in a different place.

It is offered to the Exercise as presenting the following advantages:—

The singles occur at the earliest point possible.

The last half of the peal is perfectly symmetrical, and the familiar quarter-peal comes up between the last omit and rounds.

The unpleasant music of the single at the finish is avoided, the bells being in the plain course after the last bobs at 5-6.

The arrangement is simpler for young conductors, as the broken course is more intelligibly placed, as thus:—After the S2 the calling starts with the two last courses of the standard three-course division; then, after nine complete divisions comes the omitted course of the first division, completing the half-peal. At the 14th six of this last course the second single is called, throwing the bells into the third six of the plain course. As, therefore, the course-end from which the following course is derived does not actually come up, it is placed in brackets.

The sole objection to this form of the peal is that the bobs at 3-4 immediately follow the single at 14. The 5th is behind at both the singles, and the 7th makes the 6th's place at the first and the treble at the second. The treble takes the place of the 5th in the original as the bell unaffected by the extras.

To the Editor of "THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD."

STEDMAN TRIPLES.

SIR,—In your issue of the 6th instant, Mr. Washbrook attaches much importance to the fact that he only used six singles in his variation of Thurstans' peal, and says, "Why use more?" I would say—"Why use more than two in such a grand peal?" Now the simple act of using these pairing singles by Mr. Washbrook in February last, is not to be regarded as the first evidence we have of their use, or the existence of a shunt, for in Thurstans' five-part, and next in five-part peals by Mr. Percival Heywood, the Rev. H. Earle Bulwer, and myself, they were used; and I believe it will be found with all these peals, that if the singled-in portion is left out, the part-ends will come in a different order, shewing that the singles cause a shunt. I had shewn in "THE BELL NEWS" of January last that ten 504s could be shunted into a ten-part, with eighteen pairing singles; this is where my claim first comes in to the using of singles for non-shunting blocks, and it is in this part of the investigation that my humble efforts have been appreciated and spoken of so kindly by Mr. Heywood. I will tell Mr. Washbrook that his "oh-I-know-all-that-years-ago" sort of way of receiving information falls very flat, and although there are many features in Mr. Washbrook's ringing career that I have admired, I consider such claims a poor exhibition of his ability.

Mr. STEAD'S REPLY.

SIR,—I was surprised when I read the ill-tempered letter of Mr. Copley's. I have always been treated civilly by ringers until my correspondence in "THE BELL NEWS," and although "Free Lance" and "Yorke Shereman" used adjectives freely, I have never been called untruthful before. Mr. Copley says the first time he saw my motion was the 30th of May. I never said he had seen sooner, I said it took me a year to get it before the meeting. I sent my motion to Mr. Whitaker some time before the October meeting at Pudsey, 1889, but owing to some technicality was not brought before the meeting. At the Halifax meeting I was ill; at Skipton, after I had spoken, the chairman stated that my motion could not be brought on till the next meeting; at Hull it was put before the meeting when I had five minutes given to speak to it. Next Mr. Copley says I spoke to him only at tea-table. I did not see Mr. Copley at tea-table, nor speak to him there. I saw him and spoke to him in the room where the meeting was held, and for anything I know I spoke to Mr. Snowdon as well. Mr. Copley says he did his best to get it on sooner, I say if Mr. Snowdon did not know of it Mr. Copley did not do his duty, as he ought to have told Mr. Snowdon that he was arranging to bring on my motion before the meeting as soon as possible. I forgot to say I did write Mr. Copley before Skipton meeting, and if he will refer to my letter he will see that I was under the impression that the meeting was a week sooner. I might say that I shall not again trouble myself to answer letters which are written in such ill-tempered tones.

RE-OPENING CELEBRATION OF RIPON CATHEDRAL BELLS.

The Ripon Cathedral bell ringers, together with the Cathedral clergy and churchwardens, celebrated the re-opening of the Cathedral bells, on Saturday, December 13th. The re-opening proceedings commenced after the evening services, when the Cathedral ringers and others, conducted by Mr. T. Clark, rang touches of Grandsire Triples, Bob Major, Treble Bob Major and Stedman Triples, in the presence of a distinguished company. The bands were selected from the following:—Messrs. A. H. Clark, A. Pratt, A. Ingleby, jun., J. Flowers, J. Baines, H. Rum-bold, J. Metcalf, T. Clark, and W. Pick (cathedral ringers), T. Langley (Boroughbridge), J. Wrightson (Thirsk), H. Brown (Harrowgate), and J. Hoy (Knaresborough). After having rung for over an hour the party adjourned to the "Royal Oak" hotel, and sat down to a sumptuous dinner provided by Mr. and Mrs. Hewson. Mr. T. Clark presided, and there were also present the Rev. S. Reed, the Rev. J. A. Naylor, the Mayor of Ripon (councillor Smithson) councillor T. Wells, councillor Parkin, Mr. J. Whitham (chapter-clerk), G. Kirkley, J. Castle and others, in addition to the gentlemen named above.

After the loyal toasts had been proposed from the chair, Councillor Pearson submitted the toast of "The Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese," coupled with the names of the Revs. S. Reed and J. A. Naylor. In doing so he spoke very highly of the Bishop, and his position as a preacher and as an ecclesiastic. With reference to the Dean he was one, he said, who had performed high functions in life, and who had for many years worked in connection with Ripon Cathedral especially, and on behalf of his fellow citizens generally. They knew that the Dean always extended the right hand of fellowship in time of need, and was always anxious to do everything that would benefit the Cathedral and the parishioners. The Dean of Ripon, he said, had laboured in many parishes for many years; but more especially in the Cathedral parish, and he believed that in their excellent Dean they had a man who was thoroughly endeared to them all, and that Ripon was centred in his heart. The Dean had intended to be with them that afternoon, he said; but owing to the painful calamity which had occurred in the death of Lord Cottesloe, the Dean had been unable to attend. Lord Cottesloe was a man who, in his time, played an important part in the history of England, and he was perfectly convinced they honoured the name of Fremantle. The Dean, at all times was ever willing to give the clergymen that amount of experience with which he was blessed, and was always anxious that all works in connection with the Cathedral should be carried out in a proper and satisfactory manner. The Dean, although occupying a most dignified position in the Cathedral, never took advantage of it; but on the other hand was always most ready to please the citizens and Chapter generally. Referring to the more social aspect of the toast, Councillor Parkin said they were deeply indebted that night for the kind assistance and presence of the Minor Canon and Vicar of the Cathedral. They were part of their existence, he said, and their whole work was in connection with the Cathedral and its parish, and not only with the Cathedral; but, from his experience, with the Mayor and Corporation of the city also, to whom they were ever willing to offer a ready hand, and give that assistance which their position demanded. They were also greatly indebted for another reason to those gentlemen for their presence, because they were better able to touch upon that grand institution which they all delighted in—that of the Cathedral. The clergymen stood in the light of having been their pastors in the holy condition of life. In connection with the work of the Cathedral, he said it had been his pleasure to visit during the past fifteen months no less than nine Cathedrals; but he always looked with the utmost feelings of respect on the venerable old pile in connection with which they were assembled that night. The clergymen would tell them that they felt proud of the Cathedral, and they were men in whom they could trust and confide their most private concerns, and where the slightest device was needed they would be able to administer it. For over hundreds of years their office was most sacred to them, and they always found that the Cathedral clergymen were always ready and anxious to pay honour to whom honour was due.

Councillor Parkin then alluded to the Cathedral bells, and said there was a slight dislocation when the bells did not ring for their Mayor on his election as had always been the custom. The dislocation, however, was not a painful one; but yet a somewhat marked one in connection with that toast, because the Bishop and Clergy of the diocese were never short in paying a compliment to the Mayor and Corporation of this ancient city which, he said, for one thousand years had held its name and sway.

The Rev. J. A. Naylor responded and thanked Councillor Parkin for the words he had spoken on behalf of the clergy. He felt, he said, that they had been paid a great compliment, and he desired to reciprocate the kindly feelings which had been expressed. The more the feeling of harmony and brotherly-kindness existed between all workers in the Church, and especially in a cathedral like theirs, the better for the welfare of every one concerned. Of course it was impossible for every one of them to occupy the same office, but whatever office they held and performed to the best of their ability, it was one just as good as one in a most dignified position. They wanted more of that spirit. He had been most edified with the ringing that night. He did not think there could be a more healthful recreation for young men than bell-ringing. Some people did not care for bell-ringing, but he hoped and trusted that that feeling would not exist in Ripon, and he trusted that two more bells would soon be added.

The Rev. S. Reed then submitted the toast of "the Health of the bell-ringers." In doing so he referred to the time, 25 years ago, when he joined four clergymen's sons and made a fifth in the peal of five bells; but he was afraid he would be unable to perform that duty now. They might consider bells as preachers, he said, because every time they rang for service, they told them about their duty and privileges, and one of the great duties of the preacher was to remind Christians of their duties and privileges. They ought to look upon bell-ringers as helpers in the work of God, because they did play an important part. Whilst travelling abroad, he said he had taken particular notice of the bells, whether in Switzerland, Athens, or in Russia, where he saw the great bell of Moscow weighing 200 tons, cracked and perfectly useless; but he had never heard such merry peals as were rung in England. The bells of Ripon Cathedral could be heard for many miles round, and he hoped that more young men would be induced to learn that English art, for peal-ringing was an heart peculiar to the Englishman. Mr. Clark was a painstaking teacher, he said, and one who willingly and earnestly went into his work. If they had more ringers in the country like Mr. Clark, they would have an estimable set of men, and he hoped that more young men would be induced to join the bellringers, and trusted that the Cathedral peal would soon be increased to 10.

The Chairman responded, and said they were gathered together that evening to further the improvements in their venerable Cathedral. The want of a new frame for the bells had long been needed, he said, and they, as ringers, had for some considerable time felt the want of such an improvement. He was in a position to state, and it gave him great pleasure in doing so, that the old frame which was erected in 1762 has been replaced by a splendid new iron frame, with the bells rehung thereon, by Messrs. J. Shaw, Son & Co., Bradford. The ringing of the bells that night had proved the stability in the frame and the "go" of the bells to be excellent; therefore it did the firm great credit for having so well carried out such a good and needful improvement. They, as ringers, and he hoped every citizen and others within the sound of the peal of bells, would not be satisfied until the other two bells had been added as trebles, which would not only improve the peal, but also nearly make the bell tower perfect. But, alas! their wants increased as they improved, and he could not let the opportunity pass, he said, without mentioning that the Christmas Chimes ought also to find a place in their improvements. When that improvement was carried out, he thought they should have the clock face cleaned and regilded for Christmas, in order that they might get a brighter glimpse of the ever-passing time.

Mr. Whitman then proposed "The Mayor and Corporation," to which His Worship responded.

The Chairman then proposed "The Wardens of Ripon Cathedral," and Mr. Councillor Parkin, in responding, said it was a great pleasure and a fully reciprocal one to have the honour to be associated with the ringers of that old institution. In referring to the responsibilities of the churchwardens, Mr. Parkin said there was one point upon which they ought to dwell, and that was to work in common and with a full determination of purpose, and to honour those gentlemen who so well occupied the dignified position in connection with their venerable building. The Churchwardens, along with the Mayor and Corporation, were an old institution in the city, and he was perfectly sure that when the time arrived when the clergy of the Cathedral called upon the Churchwardens for assistance, they would be ready and willing to endeavour to assist them at any time and under any circumstances. He was perfectly sure that there was nothing which had concerned the citizens more than the bells not having been rung. He would suggest that if the Dean and Chapter would see their way to provide one of the bells he was perfectly confident the Churchwardens would use their utmost endeavours to try and raise the second one. When the bells of the Cathedral were heard, the call compelled them, as it were, to respond.

Councillor T. Well then proposed "The health of the Visitors." In doing so, he said there was a good deal to be said of the visitors to Ripon, for if it were not for the Venerable old Cathedral and Fountains Abbey, how many visitors would there be to Ripon? Not many, he thought. They ought to be pleased to receive those who had come to take part in the reopening of the new framework of the bells of the Cathedral. They were greatly indebted to Mr. Clark, he continued, for the able manner in which he carried out his duties in connection with Ripon Cathedral, and he hoped that Mr. Clark would be long spared to execute those duties. Mr. Langley responded, and alluded to the pleasure it had always given to him to visit Ripon at any time to assist in the bell-ringing.

The Rev. J. A. Naylor then proposed the "Health of the Chapter Clerk." He said the gentleman who held that position was one worthy of it, and one who was much respected by the citizens. Mr. Witham was always ready to assist them in any work they undertook, and always gave them the benefit of that amount of experience which he possessed and which had distinguished him during the time he had been amongst the citizens. Mr. Witham was well deserving of praise, and had always carried out his duties in a most satisfactory manner, and with not a small amount of ability.

Mr. Witham responded, and referred to the pleasure it always gave him to do anything in connection with the Dean and Chapter. Mr. Witham suggested that it would be well if a campanological society in connection with the bell ringers could be formed in Ripon. Mr. Witham also suggested that it would be advisable for each member to pay a small fee in order to meet expenses, &c., in order that the pleasant and attractive art of bell-ringing might be extended amongst the citizens generally. He hoped that before Christmas next year the number of bell-ringers would be considerably increased. He also thought that a voluntary ringers' meeting now and again would be of value, inasmuch as it would make more perfect the art of ringing.

After the toast of "The Press," the Chairman said he thought the idea of organising a bellringers' association of the immediate belfries would be a very good one. The association could be formed so as to admit those within a radius of about twenty miles, with Ripon as the centre. With the aid of the respective clergy coming forward and being hon. members and paying a small annual subscription, together with the ringing members, he thought such a society would prosper. Meetings could be held, he said, and in that way the science of change-ringing would be greatly promoted and improved. Mr. Clark then read an extract from a speech made by the Bishop of Lincoln, in which he said—"Let the Church be as it should be, and all things in harmony. Let those who ring the bells ring them in such a manner as if it was intended for human beings: for immortal beings who had come there by the love of God and one another to worship God in common."

During the evening the ringers gave several selections on the handbells, which were very favourably received.

PROPOSED LONG PEAL.

A band of the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association of Change-Ringers hope to attempt a long peal of Treble Bob Royal on December 27th, 1890, at St. Mary's Church, Cheltenham. Start at 11.30 a.m.

NOTES—EXPLANATORY.

"Once more unto the breach, my friends, once more."

The readers of this paper will have seen the announcement that a chapter written by me is to appear in the Christmas number. I have actually been favoured with a rough copy of what is to appear, by the courtesy of the Editor's factotum. On receiving this I felt very indignant, and made a purpose journey to the office to protest, as vigorously as I was able, against that mutilation of my contribution which has taken place.

I was, as on a previous occasion, ushered in to the Editor's sanctum sanctorum, and blandly asked to take a seat. I entered with fear—on account of the Editor's favorite companion, a very large collie dog rejoicing in the name of "Rover"—who on a previous occasion seemed to resent my intrusion, or perhaps I fancied so. I heard, however, that the faithful animal had departed this life, and as I afterwards found there was much sorrow expressed for his loss. Let no one read this with lightness, for our Editor has a great weakness for the dumb creation, and he and poor "Rover" were inseparable companions for years. If I could get another four-footed friend to present to him I would, but I have reason to believe no other could occupy entirely the place of the lost one. This, however, by the way, as my superior F.L. would say. Let me to business.

Directly I was seated I desired to see the manuscript I had written for the Christmas number. On this being produced I immediately demanded the reason why my writing had been curtailed. And what answer do my readers think I had? Why that there was not room for all of it! And also that it was considered wise to eliminate some of the tomfoolery it contained!

This was Mr. Factotum's answer. I felt at the moment that I should like to be in a peal, with Mr. Factotum calling, and him to miss a bob. Not a charitable feeling, perhaps, my readers will say. But when you have tried to surpass Dickens or Marryatt, and your efforts have been made void by an understapper, it's—why, its blood-curdling. But it was of no use getting into a heat about it, so I quietly asked if I could be allowed to write a few explanatory notes, to appear this week. Very quietly and graciously, with a little pomposity, but much to my surprise, I received the answer—"If your remarks are not pointless, you may do so."

Permission having been gained, let me at once proceed. "A Peal in a new Method" is the subject of my chapter which appears in next week's supplement to the paper. It is only fair to say I have seen this supplement—it is already printed off—and what with the two stories and my chapter and something else, it is chock full. And be it remembered that when my chapter is read these notes should be at hand also for reference. In the first place, it is not mentioned that when the peal is again attempted, I shall attend to take off the leads, course-ends, part-ends, Queens, Tittums, Whittingtons, and rounds, as they come up. In this case it is necessary that some fully-qualified person is engaged to do this work so that no doubt shall exist hereafter as to its performance. And another important thing is that the members of the company ringing this peal belong to no society or Association whatever, but wish to do so before attempting it. It is suggested therefore to me that I shall attend in time and propose, second, and carry one half of them into the College Youths and the other half into the Royal Cumberlands. Such a step must commend itself to the members of these societies.

I could say more, but that I am afraid of Mr. Factotum. A worthy gentleman of the name of Blake (among others) writes I am told, saying he is anxiously waiting the appearance of my contribution. He is evidently a descendant of the renowned Admiral Blake, and will doubtless live to be honoured by his countrymen, as was his distinguished ancestor.

Here my explanation ends; no one, I am sure, will say that it was unnecessary.

THE CHRISTMAS NUMBER

Of this paper will be published on Wednesday, December 24th, instead of the 20th as announced. This is owing to the difficulty of obtaining the copies of the Portraits in time. It will contain two stories—"BELFRY REFORM;" and "THE YOUTHS OF ST. ALOYSIUS;" the last by a new writer. Also a short chapter from the pen of "JOSHUA," entitled, "A PEAL IN A NEW METHOD." A Portrait, with Memoir, of will also accompany the number.

The price of publication will be 2½d. The Portrait is spoken of as excellent.

"THE BELL NEWS AND RINGERS' RECORD" will be forwarded post free, on the following terms:—

One copy, 12 months	8s.
" 6 "	4s.
" 3 "	2s.

All Subscriptions and Orders for papers must be sent direct to the Publisher E. W. ALLEN, Ave Maria Lane, London.

Everything for insertion in this Journal to be addressed "The Editor of THE BELL NEWS, Walthamstow, London." Letters forwarded for publication, and performances under 5000 changes must reach us not later than Wednesday morning; and the insertion of any communication arriving later than the first Postal delivery on Thursday morning cannot be guaranteed in that week's number. When it is found impossible from want of space to insert all touches forwarded, the earlier ones will have the preference.

All communications respecting advertisements must be addressed to the office of "THE BELL NEWS," Walthamstow, London.

The Bell News & Ringers' Record.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1890.

THE Essays on Stedman Triples which have been appearing for some time in our pages, have now come to an end, at least for the present. While honestly confessing a total want of mental capacity to follow everything that has been so ably and exhaustively set forth respecting this method, it is very gratifying—as it will be also to our readers—to know that the Exercise has among its ranks gentlemen able and willing to devote an immense amount of time, trouble, and application to elucidate some of the many problems with which the Art of Ringing abounds. None but the writers of these papers can tell the amount of research and toil expended in their production, and to these gentlemen, therefore, is the ringing community greatly indebted for such labours. When we look back a few years, to what may be termed the Bell's Life era, and compare it with the present, what a great difference is seen! And who can doubt that the march of improvement has been accelerated by studies like those to which we are referring? Researches like these lift our science, as it were, and places it considerably above mere mechanical pursuits. Let us hope the Exercise will always be found to possess such men as those whom it is now our province to applaud.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

Wilde, 3; J. H. Iliffe, 4; H. Fletcher (conductor), 5; A. Savage, 6. The above are the first 6-scores by the Ilkeston men away from their own tower, also the tenor-man's first 6-score.

Obituary.

JOHN TUCK.

It is with deep regret that we record the death of the above-named gentleman, who departed this life on December 6th, at the age of thirty-nine years, at Eastbourne, having gone there for two weeks to recover from his anxiety after the death of his wife. Deceased had been sexton at the parish church of All Saints, Benhillton, Surrey, for nearly seven years. His remains were brought back on Tuesday, December 9th, and interred in the churchyard of All Saints on Wednesday, in the same grave as his wife had been placed only four weeks previous. They leave no family, as their only child had been buried there a few years before them. He was a man who was greatly respected by all who knew him. As steeple-keeper he had won great respect among the ringers, who as a token of respect rang on December 10th two 720's of Treble Bob Minor in the Oxford and Kent variations, with the bells deeply muffled. G. Trendell, 1; E. Trendell, 2; James Trendell, 3; C. Trendell, 4; F. Trendell, 5; John Trendell (conductor), 6. It may be well to state that these are six brothers.

CROYDON TENOR.—Mr. J. W. Trappitt writes to say that the tenor of St. John's, Croydon was rung single-handed by the late Thomas Bugby, also by the late Joseph Zealey.

H. W. NEEDHAM, Hon. Sec.

Society of Trinity Youths.—The Annual Dinner will take place at the "Prince Albert," Royal Hill, Greenwich, on Saturday, January 10th, at 6.30 p.m. Tickets, 3s. 6d. each, may be obtained of the Dinner Committee as under:—W. G. Davis, 35 London Street, Greenwich; W. Tyack, 1 Nutbrook Street, Peckham; J. Rose, 23 Bolden Street, St. John's, Deptford;

J. Crowder, St. Margaret's rectory, Lee, F. Palmer, 40 Friendly Street, Deptford; W. Weatherstone, 27 Cranham Road, Rotherhithe; F. W. Thornton, 109 King George Street, Greenwich; W. Bedwell, 9 Harvard Road, Lewisham; or of the Secretary, E. E. RICHARDS, 12 Glevorn Street, Woolwich.

It is essential that notices should be forwarded separately, and not on the same sheet of paper with reports of any kind. Reports of peals also should be by themselves. Some of our friends mix up touches, notices and everything else all together. Such practices inevitably lead to disappointment.

Compositions.

All compositions sent for insertion must be accompanied by a fee of Sixpence. If proof of a touch or peal is desired One Shilling additional must accompany such request.

HANDBELLS FOR SALE. Set of eight. T. Parnell, Secretary Wymington Star Handbell ringers, near Higham Ferrers, Northants.

THE ST. MARY'S SOCIETY, SWANAGE, DORSET.

On Monday, December 8th, this Society held its second annual meeting in the belfry, there being present (besides the ringers and steeplekeeper) the Rector, the Rev. T. A. Gurney, Mr. W. White, churchwarden, and the following sidesmen: Messrs. W. Linnington, J. Hayson, F. Parsons, J. Andrews, accompanied by Miss Andrews and F. Burt.

The Rector, after opening the meeting with a hymn and prayer, alluded to the financial position of the Association, shewing there was a deficit of two or three pounds. He thought there would be no difficulty in getting this amount by subscriptions but he would like to see a large amount of funds at the disposal of the Association, and thought if some one apart from himself would undertake to get subscriptions as Secretary, they might get a great deal more, and Mr. Andrews' name had been mentioned respecting it, if he would consent to do it.

Mr. Andrews said he was afraid he could not undertake the office of Secretary, but would willingly act as Treasurer, and would do his best towards getting subscriptions.

Mr. Parsons also kindly offered to do what he could to help Mr. Andrews. The Captain was very pleased to report some progress since last year amongst the ringers, they having rung within the last month three touches of 504 changes each, and one quarter-peal (1260 changes) of Grandsire Triples. He said the public generally did not know how difficult it was to accomplish this, but it might help them to realize it if he stated he believed there was not another band of ringers in the county who could at present do so. He considered the above performances worth recording, and suggested that some cards be printed and one placed in the belfry, which met with approval. He further stated it would be a help if some books on change-ringing were placed in the belfry for the ringers' use, as at present only those had them who had purchased them for themselves. Being asked the cost of them and stating they cost from 2s. to 6s. each, the Rector kindly promised to give one, and he thought he knew of a friend who would give another, and Mr. Andrews generously offered to give four others. Votes of thanks to them and also to those attending the meeting were given. Ringing on the tower bells and handbells was indulged in during the meeting, which closed with the Doxology.

THE ELY DIOCESAN ASSOCIATION.

A meeting was held in Ely on Monday, December 8th, to consider the position of this Association. The chair was taken by the Vicar of St. Mary's (the Rev. J. Franey). The Association, though founded in 1882, and despite the energy of the Secretary (the Rev. K. H. Smith), has practically made no way in the Diocese, scarcely any band outside Ely having shewn any interest in it or doing anything to help on the Association. After discussing various plans it was decided by the meeting to form a district branch for Ely and the neighbourhood, and a Master Mr. A. Pilgrim and Secretary (Rev. J. R. Vincent) and committee were elected. It is hoped by this means to work up this part of the Diocese, more especially by obtaining the services of a regular instructor. Ringers from Ely, Soham, Newmarket, and Stretham were present, and during the day several touches were rung on St. Mary's bells.

"PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

MY DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

DEDICATION OF THE NEW BELL AT THE PARISH CHURCH, HIGH WYCOMBE, BUCKS.

On Tuesday evening, December 9th, the service for the dedication of the new bell, which has just been placed in the belfry of the parish church at High Wycombe, took place in the ringers' chamber of the bell tower. There were about twenty persons present besides the ringers, the clergy, and the choir. The vicar, the Rev. Robert Chilton, M.A., was assisted by his curates, the Rev. A. L. Armitage, and the Rev. J. H. Young. The service opened with the Lord's Prayer, followed by some appropriate responses, and the singing of Psalm cl. Several prayers were then said, amid a death-like silence, every one seeming touched by the solemnity of the scene. Psalm cxii. was then chanted, and after singing of the hymn "In Sinai's dreary waste," which was effectively rendered, the vicar in the course of a short address said they were met together that evening to dedicate to the worship of God a new bell in that tower, and they had done so with praise and thanksgiving and prayer, and now they might take that opportunity of considering the origin and use of church bells. They had already seen that in Jewish times, before our Saviour came, the people were called together for worship or Holy convocation by the sound of trumpets. It was by a command of God that silver trumpets were made and that the priests and Levites should blow them, and that the sound of them should call the people together for the ceremonies and assemblies. They were blown on the Sabbath, at the beginning of every month, at the new moon, and at their sacrifices, to ask God to accept the sacrifice, and that He would be pleased to bless His people Israel. There were no bells in the second and third centuries. They then used pieces of wood, with holes in them, and with plates of iron over them, and these were struck with a hammer and made a noise. In Bigham's "Antiquities" they were first introduced to bells in the ninth century. They were first used in the Greek church, and then they soon found their way into the towers of all Christian churches. The bells were tuned together, and their sound travelled a great distance and they were very harmonious, and a great pleasure was found in hearing them. When people returned from long journeys the sound of bells gladdened them more than anything. The bells called the people to holy worship. They sounded for daily prayer, and it was only proper and right that there should be daily prayer in so great a parish as this. People could not always come to the daily prayer; they were otherwise engaged—and very properly so—with domestic work, but the church was the church of the people, and as they could not always come there the clergy should go there every day and pray for their flocks and for themselves. St. Peter had told them to give themselves continually to prayer and the ministry of the Word. Without prayer and the help of God they could do nothing at all. Every morning they should offer up their prayer for their family and themselves, and he hoped they would think of the necessity of prayer, and at night thank God for His mercy during the day and ask for His help at night. They should remember the seventh day when they heard the early bell ringing them to the Holy Eucharist and go, as they knew the early Christians did by the letter of Pliny to Trajan, early in the morning. When they heard the bells in the morning and evening they should remember that nothing kept up the honor of God in this country like His worship on the seventh day, and no person could come to a Christian country like this without seeing that was so. They could not go to church he knew often in the week-day on account of their work, but they should never be away altogether on a Sunday. Nothing kept up religion in a person's heart more than God's worship on the Lord's day. If they neglected that they might be sure that spiritual religion was declining in their heart. The bells rang at times of rejoicing, such as on the Queen's birthday and days of great national blessing, and it was right and proper that the Church should rejoice with the people; and on local days of happiness they rang those bells, such as when their Mayor was elected to an ancient and honorable position. The Church was the people's Church, and they sympathised with the feelings of the people around them. Then they heard the passing bell when anyone was called away from this world, and they ought then to raise up a prayer to God that when it pleased Him to call our souls from this world they might be accepted by Him as fit for a far higher, brighter, and better world than this; and when they heard the bell toll at a funeral they should pray that their own souls should rest in Paradise, and that their body should lie undisturbed in the grave, in the hope of a sure resurrection in Jesus Christ. He was pleased with the improvement in the belfry, and the improvement of the ringers in their conduct. That was part of the House of God, and their office was a sacred office belonging to the church, and he hoped they would let their conduct become their office and not let any bad words escape their lips, or let any strife come into the sacred spot, but only peace and joy. The other bells had been there since 1711, and would far outlive all those that were there present. How many generations had passed away since then? Bells would stand while many more passed away, and at last be rung for their departure. That was a solemn thought indeed, and he hoped they would be ready when their time came; they knew not when the time would come, and he hoped they would live in the fear of God and the faith of Jesus Christ, so that when God called them they might depart in peace. He prayed earnestly that God would bless our Queen and country, and the Church of England, and make it a blessing to this country, and he would conclude with the words of the 90th Psalm. At the close of the rev. gentleman's touching address many of those present appeared to be deeply moved. The hymn, "Thanks to Thee, O Gracious Lord," was then sung, and the proceedings terminated.

FESTIVITY AT LIVERPOOL.

On Saturday, December 13, several of the ringers belonging to Liverpool and district sat down to a substantial supper at the Falcon Restaurant, Lord Street, provided at the expense of, and to commemorate the ringing of a peal of Grandsire Triples in honour of the birthday of Mr. Wm. James, of the St. Luke's Society. Among those present were Mr. Wm. Davies, St. Nicholas' Society, in the chair, R. Hill (Southport), St. Nicholas' Society, Branch Secretary of the Lancashire Association, R. S. Mann, St. Luke's Society, E. Coley, ditto, J. Aspinwall, ditto, J. Martin, St. Peter's, Thos. Hammond, ditto, J. Brown, ditto, G. Fisher, St. Nicholas' Society, etc. During the evening touches were rung on the handbells in the methods of Plain Bob Royal, Grandsire Triples, and Grandsire Caters. Several toasts were proposed, and a pleasant evening was spent. Songs were ably rendered by members of the company, the part of accompanist being efficiently undertaken by Mr. S. W. Parkhill.

HANDBELL CONTEST.

On Saturday, December 13th, a contest was held upon handbells, at the house of Mr. Esau Baker, "Junction Inn," Batley Carr, Yorkshire, when upwards of £6 10s. 0d. was competed for by the following companies for the best course of Grandsire Triples and Major, upon eight bells, and the best 6-score of Oxford Treble Bob upon six.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN EAST LONDON.—At a time when much thought is being given to this matter, a practical suggestion may be of service. Last year more than £300,000 worth of foreign matches were purchased by inconsiderate consumers in this country, to the great injury of our own working people, so true is it that "evil is wrought by want of thought, as well as want of heart." If all consumers would purchase Bryant and May's matches, that firm would be enabled to pay £1000 a week more in wages.

THE AUSTRALIAN PEAL AND ITS RESULTS.

I must apologise for not sending you the detailed account of the accomplishment of the first peal in the Colonies before, for reasons that will appear in the following particulars.

As I have briefly forwarded the names of ringers, time, and details of bells, I need not again give them, but proceed to enlighten brother-strings of the circumstances under which it was rang, and the subsequent results.

Our first intention last Easter was a visit to Hobart, but owing to ringers in Hobart wishing us to defer our visit till Christmas, we decided at the last moment to go to Sydney again. We experienced great difficulty in obtaining a band, in fact we had only six men to depend on, Collins turning up on the steamer about half an hour before leaving, the Master, Mr. J. Guest, refusing to accompany us unless we could muster a full band of eight change-ringers, and consequently did not go. We all went per S.S. Aramac, on Thursday night before Good Friday, and experienced a most enjoyable trip all the way to Sydney. On or two suffered from that inseparable attendant to a sea voyage, viz., sea sickness, the first day, but declared they were quite old salts before reaching Sydney on the Saturday at 8.0 p.m. The trip up had been uneventful, the sea like the proverbial mill pond, weather glorious. We had many discussions as to the success, in a ringing point of view, of our visit, and finally came to the conclusion that 720 would be the extent. However, on arriving, we struck a line for our apartments, in close proximity to St. Philip's, housed the luggage, and then had a constitutional through the city. On Easter Sunday we attended St. Philip's and rang for morning service two or three 6-scores, with 7-8 behind, being all that was attempted. I need scarcely remark we were cordially welcomed by the members of St. Philip's Society. Arrangements having been made for ringing for the children's monthly afternoon service, Murray and myself went out to Darling Point to endeavour to get Mr. Joyner in to ring the treble and make an attempt at Triples; but, unfortunately, he was away from home on business, and would not return till Tuesday evening. This considerably damped our hopes, and we returned to St. Philip's to impart the bad news. We arrived back just as service was finished, and on our men coming out we were surprised to be introduced to Mr. Horton, with the additional remark, "He's a peal-ringer." We took it as a joke at first, but very soon found out he was a ringer. He was brought up to St. Philip's by Mr. Charles Kilburn, son of the Ballarat Skipper of ringers, who has enjoyed so many pulls amongst us at Melbourne and Ballarat. To say that we were pleased to meet Mr. Horton is but poorly expressing our feelings. We invited him to remain with us to lunch and join in the afternoon's ringing, which he readily agreed to, and we recorded a 504, a result that put us in a far better humour and imbued us with hopes of what might eventually follow. We again rang for evening service, obtaining a 672, conducted by Harry Adams, the bells going remarkably well except the tenor, which was rung in these two touches by Mr. Whitton and Mr. Kilburn respectively. Arrangements having been made by Mr. John Dennis, the jovial Master of St. Philip's Society, for us to have the use of the bells for the whole of Easter Monday, we decided to try for the peal, Charley Kilburn expressing his belief he could take the tenor through, so early Monday morning we were busy adjusting ropes, etc., and seeing everything was safe and snug. About 10.0 a.m. we went into changes, and were just getting warm to our work when the tenor going stiff, dropped right into the middle, causing a jangle, and eventually a collapse at 1570 changes. No time was lost in again making a start, and things were again looking lively, when suddenly we experienced a repetition of our previous disaster, after ringing 1470 changes. It then being lunch time we adjourned and refreshed the inner man, and returned with renewed vigour to the task. After oiling and adjusting the tenor rope we again essayed the feat, with E. A. E. Collins and C. Kilburn on the tenor. This time our hopes ran high; without any apparent hitch we quickly left the leads and bobs behind us, reached the halfway house (bob single) and went steadily on our way for home, two more 504's were left behind; but the end was near, for like the two previous occasions the tenor was all at sea, and we had to stop, for as Mr. Horton remarked, one could not enjoy the ringing with the tenor upside down and in the middle like that. We were thoroughly disappointed, for the hitting had been good right up to the finish, and all seemed thoroughly set. We had rung 3668 changes, thus making 6708 for the day. It is only fair to Charles Kilburn to remark that he had only just recovered from a serious illness, and had not his usual strength. We blamed ourselves that we did not splice a rope to the tenor, which we decided to do if we had another opportunity of trying. On Tuesday we wended our way to that most delightful of spots, Darling Point, and put in the day at St. Mark's (six bells). I have already eulogised the "go" and tone of these bells, so need not repeat. We rang a 720 of Minor in the morning, in 26 mins., the men standing as follows: T. B. Hall, 1; W. Shenton, 2; J. Beechey, 3; W. Albinson, 4; H. Adams (conductor), 5; J. Murray, 6. And in the afternoon a 720 of Minor in 28 mins. T. B. Hall, 1; J. Beechey (conductor), 2; W. Shenton, 3; W. Albinson, 4; J. Murray, 5; H. Adams, 6. Several other small touches were rung by mixed bands, local and visitors, and a 6-score. At the invitation of the vicar we adjourned to the parsonage and partook of refreshments, he wishing us every success, and offering us a cordial welcome whenever we went to Sydney in the future, to Darling Point and St. Mark's. We spent a jolly evening with the local ringers at the residence of Mr. Joyner, songs, recitations, and handbells being intermixed with a few dances.

Wednesday, April 9th, dawned bright and cheery, and meeting Mr. J. Dennis he informed us he had arranged for us to have access to the bells for the morning, but we must not make a day of it. This of course meant one attempt, if a failure, the opportunity would be lost of scoring a peal. After splicing a rope to the tenor and generally attending to ropes and bells, we stripped off and took the ropes a few minutes before 11 a.m., the men standing as reported. At 11 o'clock we went into changes, hands and joints a little sore and stiff, but warming to the work we went merrily along, the tenor behaving herself under the extra pressure and supervision brought to bear upon her. Nothing occurred till the half-way was again reached, when some remark was passed to be careful and not have another smash, which however was instantly "shut up." We were now all thoroughly settled down, and the tenor dropping in so well gave us renewed confidence. The bobs were called clear, and made one after the other, and the last 504 entered and had not got half way through when a knock comes to the door. It startled us, but no response from us; the knocking continued for two or three minutes and then stopped, and we breathed freely again, for the next ten or fifteen minutes would finish the peal. The changes as well as leads were almost countable now, when knocking was again heard and voices demanding admission, but above the din was heard the bob-single, and round they came, and thus was achieved the first peal in Australasia, exactly at 2.15, or 3 hrs. and 15 mins. We had hardly time to stand the bells when the door opened and the Rev. J. D. Langley entered, followed by the locksmith who had picked the lock, and we received a sound rating in no very moderate terms, much to our surprise, and for what we were still to learn. It transpired that some one had been to the incumbent informing him that a friend in close proximity to the church was dangerously ill, in fact on the point of death, and his endeavours to stop the bells had been futile; under these circumstances no wonder the incumbent felt wroth and we eventually reaped the effects. On investigation the supposed case of illness turned out a myth, and was simply an attempt to get the ringers stopped by some unappreciative listener. No complaints were made at the tower to Mr. J. Dennis or the verger, who were present, one or both, the whole of the time, and the fact of the door being found locked was one of pure accident, for when we started the door was left open, but during the progress of the peal the verger happened to come up to the doorway to have a look around, as the Yankees say, and on leaving brushed the door with his sleeve as he passed out, setting it on the move, having a spring lock on the inside, it shut and fastened us in, a circumstance we one and all will remember and appreciate to the end of our days, for to this simple matter is the record of the peal due. Had the door been opened we certainly could not have continued ringing in the face of opposition from the Rev. J. D. Langley on the right side of the door, and once more the opportunity would have been lost.

I am certain brother-strings at home will heartily congratulate us on the achievement when they read these lines, and learn the circumstances under which it was accomplished.

Our trip round the harbour and the subsequent dinner provided by our Sydney brothers has been previously sent to you in detail, which event took place next day, Thursday.

On Friday, the day of our return for home, Mr. Dennis intimated that the Rev. J. D. Langley would like to see us previous to our departure, and upon waiting upon him he tendered us a sincere apology for his hasty words in the tower on Wednesday. Having subsequently learned the true facts of the case, he exonerated us from any blame in the matter, and would have felt very grieved had we not furnished him with an opportunity of personally expressing to us his sorrow for his vigorous onslaught. Upon the success we had obtained he heartily congratulated us, and was proud that we had so honoured his church by our performance, and gave us a hearty welcome should we again journey to Sydney.

He then kindly exhibited to us the chalice and cups with which the first Communion was administered in Australia, presented by King George III. to Chapel Settlement, Sydney, 1803, and on proceeding to the vestry were shown a Common Prayer Book and Bible with the following inscription on the fly-leaf:—

“Botany Bay, December 14th, 1786.

Rev. R. Johnson,

Chaplain of Convict Fleet.”

The Rev. J. D. Langley then read us a chapter out of the old bible opening at chance at that beautiful Psalm, “The Lord is my Shepherd” (xxiii).

There are many old associations connected with St. Philip's church. The first church was opened 1807, and named after Governor Philip, pulled down in 1859, and rebuilt and then named after the Apostle. A stone in the porch under the tower bears the following: “The building of this church was commenced A.D. 1798, and was formally completed 1810.”

This stone was removed from the old church of St. Philip, the foundation stone of which was laid on October 1st, 1800, by Captain P. G. King, R.N. Consecrated on December 25th, 1810, closed for service March 27th, 1856, when the present church was consecrated.

Looking upon these surroundings, it was a fitting tribute that the first peal in the Colonies should be rung at the oldest church.

We heartily thanked the Rev. J. D. Langley for his courtesy and kindness in allowing us the use of the bells, and taking a fond farewell look at the tower made our adieu and received a cordial bon voyage, well pleased with the hour spent.

We now made our way to the wharves to take boat home and again received the congratulations and good wishes of our Sydney brothers, and with waving hats, &c., steamed slowly down the harbour leaving Sydney with St. Philip's on the hill the most prominent feature, and all of us in excellent spirits and anxious to test the abundant supplies the busy stewards were preparing for dinner, a state of things which unhappily did not continue with some of our band, for whilst in the middle of our dinner we passed through the heads, and a few little waves caused the boat to roll right merrily, which result caused our worthy young conductor, Mr. Murray, to come to the conclusion it was time to make “a bob,” which he did in a very speedy fashion, through the first port hole he could reach, and I am sorry to relate he had little respect for persons, for it turned out he had invaded the stewardess's cabin, two of the others also expressed the opinion that the dinner was far from a success and gracefully retired to bunk, and what's more stopped there till Melbourne was reached, where we arrived at 2.0 a.m. Monday evening.

Now brother-strings for the result. On Monday afternoon I received a notice signed by six members of the Society, requesting that a special meeting be called for Tuesday night, which was duly complied with, at which meeting Mr. J. Guest in the chair, said, had been called for the purpose of taking into consideration the want of courtesy shown by those members who visited Sydney, to the Society and to himself, by sneaking away without letting brother-ringers know, and by ringing the peal when they knew he had been trying for so many years to obtain the same for the honour of Victoria, thus disgracing him and themselves. Questions of why we rang it, and why we went, and other absurd things were asked and charges made, which in reply for the men the secretary answered: That our visit was openly made and invitations submitted to all, in the tower, not once, but on several occasions. That our performance instead of being a disgrace was a matter we were proud of, and so would any ringer be with an unprejudiced mind. Would not any ringer in the Society have gladly availed himself of the opportunity that was offered to us, yes and would Mr. Guest if he had been with us, and had called the peal, have been censured for so doing? No, they would all have shook him by the hand, and heartily congratulated him, and it was entirely his own fault he had not gone, for he absolutely refused to go unless we had a team of eight change-ringers.

Warm discussion followed, and terminated with a proposition to disband the Society (in place of the intended one of kicking us out) which was, upon being put, lost by eleven votes to seven.

Unnecessary expressions of petty jealousy were given vent to, which, added to numerous insults heaped upon us, did not tend to improve matters.

Our subsequent attendances for practice and service ringing were made far from pleasurable by the Master, and it eventuated in a special meeting being called to ask Mr. Guest to resign his office, signed by thirteen out of twenty-one ringing members, at which meeting a great muster put in an appearance. Honorary and probationary members were hunted up for the occasion, but not by us, and a matter that entirely concerned the ringers proper was allowed by the Chairman to be voted upon by honorary members who had never been inside the tower before, let alone knowing what a bell was, and by giving probationary members a vote, who, according to our rules, were ineligible to vote. A proposition was declared and carried that the Society be disbanded, exception being taken to the voting. Since that meeting we and our supporters have not been to either tower, and an application by us to be appointed ringers at St. Paul's Cathedral was unsuccessful through undue influence and misstatements made. Thus we are a body of change-ringers without bells, at present; and I regret to say that magnificent peal at St. Paul's occasionally peals out anything but the musical tones the founders and donor intended them to.

Without entering into any further details of our squabble, I feel certain we shall have the sympathies of all our brother-strings at home, for the treatment received, and that the feelings of jealousy by Mr. Guest will not be commended by all right thinking ringers at home, especially when it is taken into consideration that in the last five years, the peal has been attempted on nineteen different occasions, Mr. Guest conducting on every occasion, no one else ever attempting to even call a peal. Of the nineteen attempts the following is a reason of its non-success: 1, 4-5 changed course; 2, a mis-call; 3, too many conductors; 4, ditto; 5, general collapse; 6, bob called wrong; 7, rope broke; 8, change-course; 9, 7th man not fit; 10, 4-5 changed course; 11, 3rd man not fit; 12, change-course; 13, three attempts, no luck; 14, two attempts, change-course; 15, conductor out; 16, 3-4 crossed; 17, tenor stiff; 18, ditto; 19, missed a bob; 20, successful in Sydney.

Why, therefore, has it not been rung before? Something more than want of ringers, while six of our number can go, and comparatively at the first attempt, with a stranger, and a debutant as conductor, are successful, and I leave brother-strings at home to judge for themselves, and I can imagine most of them saying “Very near time they did have a split.”

How long matters will remain as they are is difficult to tell, so brother-strings must not expect any more records for a while, but before closing this narrative I must place on record the esteem we all feel for Mr. Jas. L. Murray, and that we deeply appreciate his initial success as a peal conductor.

A marble tablet commemorating the accomplishment has been prepared, and by the kind permission of the Incumbent and churchwardens is to be erected in St. Philip's belfry, Sydney.

Trusting this epistle, although late in the day, will be acceptable, and thanking you in anticipation for its insertion, with kind regards to self and all brother-strings.

JNO. BEECHY,
Hon. Sec. Victorian Society of Bellringers.

MAISMORE (Gloucestershire).—On Saturday, December 13th, at the parish church, 720 Oxford Treble Bob, and 720 Kent Treble Minor. S. E. Romans, 1; F. E. Hart, 2; W. H. Brunson, 3; H. L. James, 4; J. Austin, 5; W. J. Sevier (conductor), 6. Tenor 12 cwt. in G.

WOMBOURN, STAFFORDSHIRE.

DEDICATION OF NEW BELLS.

Friday, December 19th, was a red letter day in the history of bells and bell-ringing in this parish. The efforts made by the St. Benedict's society have been successful in raising funds to rehang the six old bells, and provide a new frame for four bells, the old top frame being entirely worn out and the bell fittings generally in an unsatisfactory condition. Colonel T. B. Shaw-Hellier, of The Wodehouse, President of the Society, promised to provide two new bells, conditionally that the ringers mastered the art of change-ringing, and use their endeavours to carry out the above work. The change-ringing being satisfactorily mastered, the ringers turned their attention to the question of funds, and social entertainments being held, about £22 were realised. In October 1889 the bells were condemned as unsafe; the vicar and churchwardens made an appeal to the parishioners and friends, with the result that they were able to place the order in the hands of Mr. J. Barwell, of Birmingham, to complete the work as above. Colonel Hellier also entrusted the casting of the bells to their care. The rehangings of the old bells and the founding of the new ones were highly satisfactory.

The St. Paul's society of change-ringers, Burton-on-Trent, kindly undertook to open the bells, and at 11.5 a.m. an attempt was made to ring a peal of Superlative Surprise Major, 5024 changes, the composition of A. P. Heywood, Esq., but after ringing fourteen courses, 2762 changes, in 1 hr. 45 mins., a slight trip caused a total collapse. There was not time to start again, dinner being ready at 2 o'clock at the "Red Lion" inn, a capital spread being placed upon the table by host Keay. There were present Messrs. H. Hill and W. E. Anslow (churchwardens), Col. Hellier, Capt. Day, W. R. Small (Tipton), H. Roden (Penn), W. Devey (Cannock), W. H. Godden (from Mr. Barwell's), and the St. Paul's and St. Benedict's ringers.

After dinner the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were duly honoured. Mr. W. E. Anslow, in proposing the health of Col. Hellier, said the people of Wombourn were always pleased to see him, and thanked him for his generous gift of the new bells.

Col. Hellier replying said he was always ready to do what he could for the parish and the church, and it was pleasing to him to present the two new bells, because the old bells bear the name of his ancestors, and the whole peal now come from one family. With regard to change-ringing he did not know any science more interesting, and he hoped the St. Benedict's society would soon core a peal.

Mr. Hill, in proposing the health of Mr. Rowland Cartwright, said it was mainly due to his perseverance with the ringers, and untiring zeal, that the work had been brought to a satisfactory conclusion, and he hoped Mr. Cartwright would live many years to enjoy the music of the bells.

Mr. Cartwright in responding referred to the time he began to ring first, and the difficulties that had to be surmounted to obtain a good band of ringers and that he had kept the object they had met together that day before him for the last ten years, day by day, and week by week, and intended doing so until the work was completed, and he was pleased the long-looked for day had arrived, but he would have been more pleased had the attempt for the peal in the morning been successful.

Col. Hellier, in proposing the bell founder, coupled it with the name of Mr. W. H. Godden, and said he was pleased with the new bells, and he understood the go of them left nothing to be desired.

Mr. Godden, in responding, thanked Col. Hellier, and said when they tendered for the work, and knowing Mr. Cartwright to be such a good ringer, they were determined to make the new bells as good as it was possible to be, and all the bells to go well, which undoubtedly they did from the beautiful ringing he had heard that morning.

Mr. Hill proposed the "St. Paul's society," and said he did not know anything about ringing, but was sorry the peal was not accomplished.

Mr. William Wakley responded, and said it was an honour to be invited to open a peal of bells, and on such an occasion as this more especially, because Mr. Cartwright had been a member of their company for some years, and they knew he had spared no trouble to complete his labour of love. He was sorry they had not finished the peal, but would be pleased to come again, and he thanked the good people of Wombourn for the hearty reception they had given them.

Mr. Hill proposed "The Visitors," to which Captain Day suitably responded.

The Service of Dedication being fixed for 4.30, a move was made to the church and a touch of Stedman Triples rung before service. The Right Rev. Charles Henry Bromby, (assistant Bishop of Lichfield), kindly came from London for the purpose, and with the vicar, the Rev. W. J. Heale, entered the belfry, which is open to the church, where they were met by Mr. Hill, churchwarden.

The usual form of consecration being gone through, the Bishop took for his text Rev. xxii., 17 verse.—"And the Spirit and the Bride say come, and let him that heareth say come, and let him that is athirst say come, and whosoever will let him take the water of life freely,"—and delivered a appropriate address.

After the service a course of Double Norwich Court Bob Major was rung, the ringers standing as in the attempt for the peal: J. Robinson, 1; R. Cartwright, 2; A. Wakley, 3; H. Wakley, 4; E. I. Stone, 5; P. Meadows, 6; J. Holmes, 7; W. Wakley (conductor) 8. Tenor 10 cwt. 12 lbs. The Burton gentlemen had to return from Wolverhampton at 7.20, so the time was short and the snow four inches thick. The brake turning up at 6.15 the company parted.

On Sunday evening, December 21st, the local company rang three 6-acres of Bob Doubles. G. Little, 1; G. Deans, 2; H. Deans, 3; E. Claridge, 4; R. Cartwright, 5; W. Avelow, 6; A. Tykin, 7; G. Ashley tenor, with 7-6-8 behind.

THE CLOCK AT STRASBOURG.

There is at Strasbourg a celebrated clock, which eclipses all others in complexity of its mechanism. There is one great sphere which revolves on its axis from east to west in 24 hours. Within this sphere are two smaller globes—one to represent the sun, which runs through the signs of the zodiac once every year; and the other the moon, which goes through her lunations in 28 days. The north pole of the heavens is noted by a star made of brass; the zenith is noted by the figure of an angel placed above, and the mechanism which moves the spheres is concealed in the body of a pelican placed under them. Another part of the clock contains two circles, one within another, the inner one eight feet and the outer one nine feet in diameter. The larger one rotates from north to south once a year, and it has two figures attached to it, one of which points to the day of the week, and the other to the day of the week exactly half a year afterwards. The smaller one rotates from south to north once in a hundred years, and has inscribed on it many festivals, such as the year of the world, the year of the Christian era, the leap year, the movable feasts, and dominical letter, all of which are indicated for successive years by index hands. Besides the above features of the clock, there are others of a more fanciful, but less scientific kind. There are four little bells, on which the quarters of the hours are struck, each quarter being accompanied by its own peculiar exhibition. At the first the figure of a little boy comes forward, strikes the first bell with an apple, and passes onward towards the fourth bell; at the second quarter, a second boy strikes two bells with a dart, and passes to the place occupied by the first boy; at the third quarter comes forth an armed man, who strikes three bells with a sword, and then passes to the second bell; at the fourth quarter an old man comes out with a staff, with which he strikes four bells, and then passes to the third bell. At each quarter a figure of Death comes forward and endeavours to catch the boy or man who had struck the bell, but on the other side also comes forward a figure of our Saviour, who drives Death away again. At the last quarter, however, Death is allowed to strike the hour on the large bell with the bone of a skeleton. The four quarters have mutually changed places, so that each one in his turn becomes placed by the side of one of the bells. At the top of the clock is a tower containing chimes, which play at three, seven, and eleven o'clock, each time a different tune; and when the chime has ended, a figure of a cock stretches out his neck, shakes his comb, claps his wings thrice and crows thrice. This description applies to the state of the clock when first put up, and the mechanism in working order.

THE BELLS OF ST. MICHAEL'S, COVENTRY.

In July last I sent you a short article, which you were good enough to publish, on the bells of St. Michael's, Coventry, and the proposed campanile for that celebrated church. At that time I expressed an opinion that it was possible that a noble and massive campanile might be erected in the old churchyard, on a spot where it would group and not detract from the beauty of the existing ancient spires. As there has been from the first a strong opposition in Coventry to the erection of a new bell-tower, it was thought best by the Vicar and Wardens that the conflicting opinion of the citizens should be decided by some independent and competent authority. Accordingly, at the invitation of G. Woodcock, Esq., who has promised at least half the cost of the new tower, Mr. E. Christian, F.R.I.B.A., Mr. Norman Thane, R.A., and Mr. Waterhouse, A.R.A., visited Coventry. After viewing the city from several high and favourable positions, and a close inspection of the church and surroundings, they expressed their unanimous opinion that a properly-designed bell-tower would not only not detract from the beauty and general effect of the present ancient spires, but would add considerably to their present imposing appearance; so that there is a strong probability that the famous peal of ten bells of Coventry, will soon again send forth their tuneful notes. In the restoration of the great and lovely old church this old city has been, during the last generation, to architects, a little heaven below, but so seldom a campanile or bell-tower required in England that the very thought of being privileged to compete, has caused quite a flutter in the dove-cots of the leading architects. Here is an opportunity to quicken the dullest pencils, but it wants none of Nature's journeymen for this work, but one, a master, who can make a mass of masonry that shall not only, like the work of our Saxon and Norman forefathers, be grand and imposing in its bulk and strength, but like the old steeple now standing in Coventry, look alive, for even a bell-tower, as well as being strong and massive, may also be beautiful. But what perhaps will interest many of the readers of this paper, more than the architectural part of the question, is the fact that due provision of every kind will be made for the ringers, including what is most important, a well-lighted ringing chamber.

Mr. Woodcock, besides his noble contribution towards the cost of the campanile, has also promised to present to the church a bell for the clock, to weigh from $3\frac{3}{4}$ to 4 tons. It is understood that the celebrated builder, Mr. John Thompson, of Peterborough, who so successfully restored the ancient steeple and church, is to be the builder of the new tower. The architect is not at present named, and the structure will be completed so that the opening peal may be rung at Christmas, 1892, when in the words of the sweet singer, Kate Bishop, the parishioners of St. Michael's may say

Hark, once again the Christmas bells, their solemn vigils keep,
Which tell, and yet awaken, old feelings from their sleep;
But breathing o'er the city's calm, borne in their joyous swells,
There springs to life, another tale in the message of the bells.

Ding-dong! our sweet song is one of glory,
Long ago, soft and slow, we told another story;
Calling peace, and love's increase, faith and hope and truth,
From where they sleep those memories deep, in the vale of youth.

CAMPANOLOGIST.

PROPOSED LONG PEAL.

A band of the Gloucester and Bristol Diocesan Association of Change-Ringers hope to attempt a long peal of Treble Bob Royal on December 27th, 1890, at St. Mary's Church, Cheltenham. Start at 11.30 a.m.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And never brought to mind?"

My friends; this week-end brings with it the Christmas season for another time, and before we meet again—you and I—the Church's great festival which marks her first opening year will have, like its predecessors, passed into the region of the "past and gone." I would therefore offer my Christmas greetings to one and all. Good wishes can never be inopportune whatever the occasion may be: but most particularly are they well-timed on our grand old English festival of Christmas, which festive season is happily not confined to one day in the year. Since last Christmas time we have all of us had our joys and our sorrows; we have all added to our stock of experience; old friends have been taken from amongst us; new friendships have been made; but we remain to continue the work yet left unfinished; so let us at this our time of rejoicing make the most of our opportunities by cementing more firmly our fraternal relationships, putting aside for ever aught that is calculated to raise a discordant sound, and in the words of the favourite Scotch National song, let us all

"Tak' a cup o' kindness yet

* * * * *

While in the midst of that great festival which doubtless is occupying most of our time and thoughts just now, let me add that it will during the coming week, be once more our privilege to perform that duty which is so characteristic of our native land—"Ring out the false, ring in the true: Ring out the Old Year: in the new." This is an institution amongst us which has ever been a pet theme of poet and painter; which is looked forward to annually by thousands of our countrymen. The sound of our bells in the first moments of the New Year is heralded and welcomed in numberless homes as the signal for rejoicing both as a great adjunct to the many happy reunions and "home comings" of those brothers and sisters who have been absent from each other so long, and as a significant reminder of the flight of time. Let us therefore on Thursday next so send forth those sounds from the louvred windows of our belfries, as we shall on Christmas Eve, so that hearts may warm towards us and the bells we ring.

* * * * *

But while we are thus sending forth the tidings that another year has begun, shall we not ourselves put into practice what we proclaim? Shall we not remember the great characteristic of this period—that of "letting bygones be bygones," where there has been any friction in the course of good friendship, and of starting afresh with old friendships renewed and strengthened? My dear friends, let this feature of our opening year be not overlooked: but if there have been during the past year bickerings, jealousies, or ill-feelings one towards another, blot them out in your book of remembrance, and glue the leaf firmly down that the entry shall be nevermore seen, and your friendships be renewed with increasing firmness, not only in this next year, but the ones to follow.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1890.

AGAIN have we close at hand the festive season of the year—CHRISTMAS. What a multitude of associations does the bare word carry with it; what visions of joy and happiness it foreshadows! And it should indeed be so. The great event which is the origin of our Christmas festival is one, assuredly, which should beget gladness on all sides, and especially with those whose early training has been in a Christian direction. "Goodwill henceforth from Heaven to men" was a happy declaration, and one which has not through the lapse of centuries been in any way impaired. Truly the annual commemoration of the festival should be signalled by profound feelings of joy, tempered with thankfulness.

"Goodwill towards men!" "On earth peace!" Very applicable homilies to us ringers could be preached from these words. We fulfil the duty, many of us, of announcing that the festival of The Nativity has arrived; the commemoration of that grand moment at which the angelic host proclaimed to the affrighted shepherds on Bethlehem's fields that man's deliverance had been accomplished, and that "peace on earth" was then to reign. Is it out of our province to suggest that we should ask ourselves whether we strive to obtain this peace? Is not this peculiarly the season—as the writer of one of our Christmas stories points out—to do so.

Before our next number appears Christmas will be of the past. Many of our readers will peruse these pages shortly before going to take part in the early Christmas touch. There are very few who thus officiate who will not feel while performing this duty greater pleasure than on ordinary occasions. They will strive their best to ring well; their anxiety that the touch will be faultless on this occasion will be greater than usual; their attendance at the tower may be more punctual than it is generally; and their ambition to stand well in the opinion of church-folk be increased. Such desires, however, though commendable so far as they go, should not engross their whole attention. If there is not peace within the company, no one can do wrong in trying to establish it. Christmas is the period above all others for reconciliation ; who stands aloof and refuses it, especially at this time, utterly condemns himself, and deservedly forfeits the respect and esteem of all sensible people.

The morning of Christmas approaches. The bells are ready for the Christmas peal, and many are waiting to hear their molten voices ushering in the festival. The ringers, let us imagine, have assembled, and are busily getting ready. The ropes are grasped in true scientific fashion, and the words—"All ready?" proceeds from the man at the treble. If even at such a juncture one of those assembled steps out from his place and offers the hand of fellowship to another with whom during the past year he has had some unpleasantness, the proceedings which follow will be carried out with greater enjoyment. There will be peace, and harmony, where discord previously had reigned. And in such case the reconciled parties will be more likely to enjoy what we once more wish to all our brethren—"A MERRY CHRISTMAS."

Hardly will the strains of Christmas carols have left our ears, when we shall once again be in that period of the year proverbially noted for the formation of good resolutions. A man once observed that it usually took a couple of months to decide upon the adoption of some creditable action in life, but as usually only a couple of seconds sufficed to upset the whole arrangement. He was not a long distance from the mark, either. We have, all of us, at one time or other (probably many times, in fact), felt ourselves animated with some burning desire to perform some commendable action, or make some change in our habits which appears at the time to result in benefit. All this occurs in our daily life throughout the year ; but during the week between Christmas and the New Year, if common repute or established ideas are to be credited, we are most peculiarly prone to the forming of good resolutions, of which ninety-nine per cent. are likewise averred to have but a very short existence in actual fact. Well, be this as it may, we are not disposed just now to argue the point or dispute the existence of satisfactory grounds in support of this popular notion. We would rather take the existence of this annual wave of good resolution-forming as an actual fact ; for even should only the one per cent. of these resolves be carried out honestly and thoroughly, even that small modicum of good result is better than none at all.

What, then, should be our good resolutions, as members of a brotherhood of ringers in the Church of our fathers ; as men duly recognised and responsible for the proper performance of certain duties for that Church ; as brothers, the peculiar nature of whose work renders it especially and absolutely necessary that the bonds of true fraternity should be strong amongst us? Shall we commence next year without a thought of the morrow, or an aspiration to raise ourselves and those intimately associated with us a little higher, both religiously, morally, and scientifically? Nay, rather should we not adopt "Excelsior!" as our motto throughout the year that is before us, and by shaping our actions accordingly, so pass through the year that at its close we may reflect with happy feelings upon its history, and experience the proud consciousness that we have honestly striven our best both for ourselves and those around us. May this be the experience of all of us twelve months hence. That the year may be to all those who are our readers and also to brethren who are not, happier at its close than at its beginning, is our fervent and sincere desire.

With this number of our journal is issued a supplement of eight pages with a portrait, as announced, of Mr. George Dorrington, of London. As we have published this number on the morning of the 24th, our friends should be able to get their copies the same evening, especially if they have taken the pains to acquaint their newsagents with the fact of the early publication. The recent foggy weather with which the inhabitants of London are favoured with at this time of the year, renders it very bad for photography, and our portraits being taken by a photographic process, thus ensuring a faithful likeness, our artists have not been able on account of the unfavorable weather to keep the supply up to the demand. We are compelled, in order to keep faith with our yearly subscribers, to make up what arrears have been caused in the matter of portraits, and therefore we shall issue next week the portrait, together with memoir, of Captain Moore, of Weybread House, Suffolk, a distinguished and popular member of the Norwich Diocesan Association.

Review.

By "SCRUTATOR."

THE MIDDLESEX ASSOCIATION FIRST ANNUAL REPORT.—In a neatly-printed little pamphlet of sixteen pages is contained a return of the first year's work of this Association; and to give readers the best means of learning how the Middlesex men have prospered during the past twelve months, I cannot do better than give the Committee's own words: "In presenting this first report to members of the Association the Committee are glad to be able to congratulate them on what, considering the Association is still in its infancy, may be called a very successful year's work. Eight peals have been rung, consisting of Grandsire, Union, and Plain Bob Triples, and Plain Bob and Kent Treble Bob Major, and of seven 720s in different methods on six bells. Several quarter-peals of Grandsire and Stedman Triples have also been rung by members of the Association. District meetings have been held during the year at Hackney, Highgate, and Elstree, of which that at Elstree was very thinly attended. The Committee have to report that there is a lack of new members from fresh centres, but this circumstance is no doubt due in part to the fact that the Association is, as yet, to some extent, unorganised. It seems to the Committee that the work of the Association could be best extended by the formation of districts, each having a separate centre and its own secretary. This would in no way interfere with the unity of the Association but would almost certainly increase its efficiency and vitality, and is a plan which, in the opinion of the Committee, is at least worthy of consideration. The number of honorary members is as yet sadly few, and as the educational work of the Association is wholly dependent on funds derived from extraneous sources, the Committee hope that during the coming year each performing member will make an effort to secure at least one annual subscriber of five shillings to the funds or the Association. During the past year no expenses have been incurred beyond what have been necessary to set the Association upon a working basis, and there is now a balance of £6 4s. 6d. in the hands of the treasurer. The Committee hope, however, that during the coming year they may be justified in offering the services of an instructor to some one or more bands who may be desirous of learning the elements of the art of change-ringing; but this must of course depend on the state of the funds at their disposal. The Association at present numbers about sixty members only. It is earnestly hoped that before the next annual general meeting the members may have increased sufficiently to allow of the Association being represented on the Central Council." It will be seen from the foregoing that the Committee are upon the whole satisfied with their first year's experience; at the same time they have not shirked pointing out disappointing features in it, but for all that are evidently hopeful for the future. Their most earnest appeals are—naturally one might say—for more ringing members, so that they can extend their scope of usefulness. In this every one will sympathise with them, and wish success to their efforts. But I fail to see any cause for discouragement in the comparative paucity of their numbers so far. Look at our great Associations, and then call to mind their small beginnings; that should give heart for the future. Turning back to the report, I observe the Association has for its president the Earl of Strafford; as patron, H. G. Stephens, Esq., M.P.; its Hon. Secretary, F. A. Milne, Esq.; its Treasurer, Mr. W. Tubb; and its Committee consists of six members—one representative from each band in union. This looks like a proper constitution—on paper, at any rate; and on seeing the name of a real live lord as president, with a member of the lower house as patron, I thought to myself that the Association was surely fortunate in securing such great guns on its list of officers. Then I turned to the balance sheet, to learn the amount by which these gentlemen had increased the revenue; but judge of my surprise when I found the two names here conspicuous by their absence; I turned back to the list of honorary members, but was equally unsuccessful in finding them there; and this set me pondering. It may look very nice for a society to have a few great names on its list, I thought, but if the owners thereof confine their support to the mere permission of their names being used, I don't think such are worth the trouble of printing. In these cases I very much prefer the rule of the old Quaker, who said—"If thou hast sympathy with any cause, show it by thy purse." But I will say no more on this topic; perhaps these estimable gentlemen are only waiting to see how the Association helps itself in the first instance before they decide upon their handsome donation which shall swell next year's income. May it be so. A perusal of the balance-sheet fully bears out the Committee's statement that "no expenses have been incurred beyond what have been necessary to set the Association upon a working basis." They commenced with £1 4s. 6d. in hand from the North Middlesex Association; their year's subscriptions amount to £5 15s.; while their total expenses, all of them of an evidently necessary character, being only £2 15s., leaving a balance of £6 4s. 6d. to carry forward. That the officers have worked on strictly economical lines there can be no mistake; and though it may naturally be expected that as the Association grows in strength the demands upon its revenue will be greater, yet if this commendable principle be observed in the future there is no reason to doubt that while the Association increases its sphere of usefulness the round sum to its credit in the bank will likewise grow larger, and thus place the Association at no distant future on a most sound financial basis; thus relieving the officers from any anxiety on this score, and encouraging them to prosecute their highly commendable work.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. PEGG.—The matter is totally unsuited for our columns.

GREAT PAUL.—It has never been accurately ascertained.

ANXIOUS.—The Hon. Sec. to the Guild will give you all the necessary information. The person you name has not been successful as an instructor.

CHRISTMAS DAY ON SUNDAY.—This event has occurred during the present century in the years 1803, 1808, 1814, 1825, 1831, 1836, 1842, 1853, 1859, 1864, 1870, 1881, and 1887. Christmas will also fall on a Sunday in the years 1892 and 1898, the interval between being 5, 6, 11, and 6 years respectively. The rule observed is as follows: If Christmas day should fall on a Sunday in leap-year or year succeeding leap year, the interval will be six years. If the year preceding leap-year the interval will be five years, but if as in 1842 it happened two years before leap-year, the interval will be eleven years.

HANDBELLS.—Four Octave Chromatic Peal, nearly new. Cost over £20, with music, etc., £12 10s. A. Law, Buckley Terrace, Rochdale.

NEW CLOCK FOR THE GENERAL POST OFFICE, SYDNEY, N.S.W.

A large clock for the above has just been made by Messrs. Joyce and Co., of Whitchurch, and it is now "going" in their factory, but will be sent out early in the coming year. It is perhaps the most powerful clock in the world except the one at the Houses of Parliament. It strikes the hour on a bell upwards of five tons weight, and the quarters on other bells in proportion of which Messrs. J. Taylor and Co., Loughborough, are the founders, and shews the time upon four dials 15 feet 8 inches in diameter. There is a novelty introduced in the clock: at night when the first blow of the hour is struck, it causes an electric flash from a lantern at the top of the tower of five seconds' duration. It also reports itself several times daily to the observatory.

The same firm have also been entrusted to make the new quarter-clock for Lichfield Cathedral; this is to be of a rather curious construction: by turning a lever the clock can be made to strike either the ordinary ding-dong quarters or the Cambridge quarters.

A CORRECTION.—The treble man in the peal of Bob Major at Baldock, Herts., should read "Thomas Webb," instead of "Thomas West," as published in last week's issue.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

We (Newcastle Daily Journal) have much pleasure in informing our readers that, through the liberality of Mr. John Hall, J.P., a well-known citizen of Newcastle, a new peal of bells will, without delay, be provided for the Cathedral Church of St. Nicholas, Mr. Hall having determined, with his usual generosity, to pay the whole cost over and above the sum voted by the Corporation (£500).

SPECIMEN OF OLD ENGLISH.—The "Treasury of Ancient and Modern Times," 1611, contains the following:—"Saint Augustine saith he knew a man that at all times, when himself pleased, would sweate very abundantly, exciting the expulsive vertue by meere imagination. He declareth also, in the same booke, that another man whom he knew, when he heard a mournfull song, or dolorous sounding voyce, or of one weeping or sobbing, he would apprehend the same with so strange an imagination, as he fell downe in a swonne, lying stone-still without any feeling. And whatsoever men did unto him, pricking him with pinnes, or burning his fingers, yet he appeared not to feele anything. Neverthelesse, he would revive, and come to himselfe againe when some joyfull or pleasing sound came neere him, even as if hee heard it a great way off."

WORTH (Sussex).—On Sunday, December 7th, at the parish church, 720 College Exercise. B. Payne, J. Gasson, 2; F. Streeter, 3; T. Streeter, 4; R. Jordan, 5; E. Streeter (conductor), 6. "PAINLESS AND PERFECT DENTISTRY."

A new Pamphlet, by Dr. GEO. H. JONES, F.K.S.L., F.R.M.S., etc., Surgeon-Dentist, 57, Great Russell Street, facing British Museum entrance, London, containing a list of Diplomas, Gold and Silver Medals, and other Awards, obtained at the great International Exhibitions, forwarded gratis and post free.

Her Majesty's Surgeon-Dentist says:—

My DEAR DOCTOR,—Allow me to express my thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which render my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services you are at liberty to use my name.

S. G. HUTCHINS. By appointment Surgeon-Dentist to Her Majesty the Queen.

To GEO. H. JONES, Esq., D.D.S.

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT.—LABORATORY OF EXPERIMENTAL SCIENCE.

This is to certify:—That I have analysed the Prize Medal Teeth submitted to me, and find them to be composed only of minerals of extreme purity. I have also examined and tested your patented painless system of adjustment, it is quite perfect, and is the most successful application of scientific laws for securing actual wear and comfort yet introduced. Both physically and anatomically, they are a beautiful resemblance to the natural teeth.

MR. GEORGE DORRINGTON, OF LONDON.

[Vide Portrait.]

MR. GEORGE DORRINGTON, whose portrait we publish this week, was born in "Merrie Islington" in 1846, and is therefore but a youngster in the Exercise, the ardent pursuit of which seems to be so conducive to longevity.

Some years of his infant life were spent in Canada, his father having business relations with that great British possession; both on the journey out and home stirring adventures were encountered, nearly ending in two cases in the cutting off of our friend in the flower of his youth. Nearing St. George's Channel their ship was run down by another vessel and sank, the passengers having barely time to escape with their lives, and the same night that they landed in Liverpool the house in which they were sleeping was burned.

Settling at Tottenham, our hero received his education at the famous Grammar School at that pleasant northern suburb of the Metropolis, and was a most diligent attendant for some years at the ancient and picturesque parish church. Here it was, and then, that he was first attacked by the bell-fever, but the band at that date being one of the old order, re hard pullers and harder drinkers, of the most stoney character, it need hardly be said they did very little towards his developement into the change-ringer he was to become.

At Old Hackney Church he frequently put in an appearance, and here, meeting with MR. JAMES PETTIT, he was soon on the sure road to attain the summit of his ambition.

From Old Hackney to Bethnal Green is, so to speak, but a step, and Bethnal Green being then the very heart and centre of Metropolitan scientific ringing, MR. DORRINGTON was very naturally drawn to that centre, and here he came in contact with MATTHEW A. WOOD. That gentleman, ever on the qui vive for rising talent, soon marked him for his own, and it is to MR. WOOD that our subject gratefully acknowledges he owes nearly all his now extensive knowledge of the ringing art.

For nearly twenty-three years the two have been daily companions in business, and as the regular readers of this journal well know have rung a very large number of peals together.

MR. DORRINGTON was made a member of the Ancient Society of College Youths in 1867, and has taken part in about eighty peals on eight, ten, and twelve bells, having rung the 7th in the famous and only peal as yet rung on the heavy bells of St. Paul's Cathedral. He is with MR. GEORGE MASH a Trustee of this company, and was elected to represent it on the initial meeting of the Central Council. This honour however he was reluctantly compelled to forego, owing to illness in his family. He is, moreover, and has been now for ten years, the secretary of the "scruffe," and it is largely owing to his powers of organization that the oft times complex arrangements of the City of London ringing on Church and State festivals, is carried out with precision and punctuality.

On all business questions of importance brought before the College Youths, our friend is generally one of the foremost speakers, and his observations are always received with great favor.

Of a genial and hearty disposition, a faithful friend, and ever ready to extend a helping hand, we trust he may develop, in the words of his favorite song, into a "Fine Old English Gentleman," as he certainly is one of the present time.

C.

BELFRY REFORM.

"THE singers and ringers are the parson's curse," said the Rector, thinking to close with a proverb a conversation which was beginning to ruffle him. But the new curate was not to be put down so easily. "It must be the parson's fault if they are," he replied. "What are we here for at all, unless it is to deal with difficulties of this kind?"

Dr. Thorpe was not used to be contradicted, and his eyes flashed; but he controlled himself and continued: "Take my advice and leave the ringers alone. They are all steady men, and never give me any trouble. As for Stephen Overall, he must go. I am to blame for keeping him so long, but really I don't know how we shall get on without him. When I dismissed him last time, the singing was a wretched failure. And he used to sit down below and look as if he enjoyed it! I hoped we had given him a lesson, but you can never reform an old drunkard. A thousand pities! He's worth ten of the rest, if it were not for that."

"I think, Sir, Miss Cremer would play the organ and manage the choir if we were to get rid of Overall and two others. She has never said so, but of course she will have nothing to do with the business as long as these men remain."

"Well, I hope you may be able to persuade her," said the Rector, "but leave the ringers alone. One trouble at a time is enough."

(OF LONDON)

The intelligent reader may have surmised already that this conversation occurred in the study of a country parson, but some further particulars will be useful by way of introduction to our story.

Forty years ago Dr. Thorpe was a hale, sturdy old gentleman and Rector of Wonford, where he had spent the whole of his clerical life. He had been tutor of a college at Oxford, and had married and taken a living late in life. There were no children, and his habits were still those of an old bachelor and a don. As a clergyman he might seem to be out of his element. He was more like an upright, clear-headed and rather pedantic lawyer. One is apt to connect religion with poetry and sentiment, but religion is many-sided, and it would be wrong to regard Dr. Thorpe as irreligious because he was destitute of gush. If his heart was somewhat cold, and his views somewhat narrow, he was a staunch churchman, and had implicit faith in the value of established religion as a safeguard against revolutionary excess. If he could not be called a good clergyman, he was, at any rate an honest man, and perhaps did more good in his generation than some of his critics would have been inclined to allow.

Frank Halliday, the curate, was of a different temperament. He was a tall, athletic, good-looking fellow, with a happy knack of making himself agreeable in society which had earned him him the nickname of "the popular parson." He was nearly thirty, though he had not been a clergyman for more than a year or two, having previously held an official appointment in the colonies. Circumstances and his own choice had destined him for holy orders, but he had been rusticated from his college for leading a rebellion against the authorities in defence of certain privileges, which the undergraduates made it a point of honour to maintain. After a few years in the tropics he was forced to come home on account of his health, and then completed his University studies, and was ordained. His character and talents seemed to mark him out for promotion, but for success in life he wanted grit. He was impulsive, and too easily disheartened. The Rector was unsympathetic, and morally short-sighted, but what he did, he did well. The Curate was capable of higher things, but seldom accomplished them, failing, as we all do, for want of something which would make us saints or heroes.

Emily Cremer was much nearer to perfection than the two men, but she suffered from a misfortune, rather than a defect, which had caused herself and others much tribulation. Although her behaviour was propriety itself, men would fall in love with her in the most unreasonable manner. She had not the fatal gift of beauty in any striking degree, but she had the more fatal gift of fascination. Her figure and features were decidedly good, but the spell consisted rather in an indescribable air of distinction, which made you aware of her presence in a room full of people, and in a charm of manner which brought them all to her feet. A quantity of fair hair, a bright eye, beautiful teeth, grace and energy in speech and movement, such were the weapons with which she waged incessant war against the susceptible portion of mankind. No young woman could have a greater horror of anything like angling for lovers, but she was full of fire, and was most dangerous when least conscious of self or selfish interests. The Cremers were small farmers, tilling a hundred acres of their own land near Berwick-on-Tweed. Two centuries before, their ancestors, who held much the same position in France, were driven from their native land during the religious persecutions under Louis XIV. They were a clever family, and generally could boast of a preacher or physician of some mark, who had paid his way at school and college by his prizes and scholarships. At the present time Emily's eldest brother was professor in a Colonial University, where he had been intimate with Frank Halliday. She herself had resigned the charge of churns and milk-pans to a younger sister, and had gone out into the world as assistant teacher in a finishing school for young ladies at Edinburgh. Here she soon made herself invaluable by her skill in teaching, and tact in dealing with young people. Among other things she was a great help in the dancing-class. She and her sisters could dance like ballet-girls. Not that they were in the habit of going to parties, for the Cremers hardly ever spent an evening away from home, but their father, who played the violin, liked them to dance for him, and they were born with an instinct for it. Unfortunately, the dancing master in this school, an amiable and most respectable old bachelor, fell desperately in love with his charming assistant, and was near going off his head. Emily behaved as well as possible under these painful circumstances, but the Principal, who had a very good connection, thought it wise to send her away, and found a place for her as governess in one of the best houses in the neighbourhood. Here she was as successful as she had been in the school. Her pupils adored her, and their mother could not make too much of her. After a time, however, the eldest son came home from College to celebrate his coming of age, and at once fell in love with her like his father, mother, and sisters. This was considered quite a different thing, and poor Emily Cremer fell into disgrace, and was eyed askance, as though she had been an adventuress. Having too much spirit to put up with treatment of this sort, she looked out for a position of more independence, and for various reasons preferred to try the experiment, then unusual for persons of her class, undertaking sole charge of the school in a quiet country parish.

Dr. Thorpe's trouble with the singers was of long standing, and, indeed, had been inherited from his predecessor. From time immemorial Wonford had been famous for its church music. The singers sat in a spacious gallery which blocked up the arch opening into the tower. In the centre of the gallery there was a semicircular seat for the musicians who performed upon certain wind and string instruments, to wit, a bassoon, two clarionettes, a flute, a bass viol and two fiddles. Overall played the bass and led the singing with a rich, sonorous voice, such as one rarely hears even in a cathedral. He was a tailor by trade, but preferred to get his living by fiddling at fairs and in public houses. He was by no means without good points in his character, but was ruined by his love of conviviality, and as he grew older could no longer carry the liquor which seemed to have no power over him when he was young and strong. Hence had arisen grave scandals. Two other members of the band, brothers, led the same kind of life, but they were without his redeeming qualities, and had vices from which he was free, though they were too cautious to commit themselves. When Dr. Thorpe made his first attempt to reform the choir, he had boarded over the semi-circular seat, and had turned it into a platform for a small organ fitted with barrels as well as keys, there being no resident organist. Before long Overall and his friends were readmitted to the gallery, and at Christmas and on some of the greater festivals they were permitted to use their instruments, and to execute certain anthems of a highly florid character, which had been composed by a local celebrity in the last century. On these occasions the church was always full to overflowing, and though it was the fashion of the day to despise the old kind of church music, the real merits of the performance, could it be reproduced, would certainly be appreciated by the present generation. Recently Overall had been reinstated as leader of the choir. But it was not in the nature of things that he should continue to conduct himself respectably, and on the Sunday before the conversation which has been recorded, after drinking at fairs during Whitsun week, he appeared in the gallery in such a state, that the churchwarden had to send him away in charge of the policeman.

The Doctor had spoken the last word, but Halliday was not disposed to let the matter rest there. As he walked home across the fields to his lodging in the village, he chafed bitterly against the obstructions which were continually opposed to his schemes for the improvement of the parish, and he wondered how he could do any good among the people if the Rector were to go on thwarting him. Presently his thoughts were diverted by the sound of bells raised singly, and he was reminded that it was the ringers' practice-night. "Well! I will see what they are doing at any rate," he said to himself, "there can be no harm in that." A few steps brought him to the churchyard, and up a turret staircase into the belfry. The sexton was there, and two or three others, waiting for the rest of the band. One man was smoking a short clay pipe, while another had just taken up a great stone bottle, and was putting it to his lips.

"Come, drink fair," said the sexton, "some of us will have to go without presently, if you begin so soon."

"And that will be myself," was the good-humoured reply, "but I'm that dry, threshing oats for Master Mangles, that I couldn't wait no longer for a drop of beer, not if you was to give me a half-crown. Glad to see Mr. Halliday, hope you are well, Sir. Come to have a pull with us this evening?"

"Thank you, no. I can't wait. But I will sit and watch you for a few minutes, if you have no objection."

Then he laid hold of the rope of the tenor and raised her with two or three dozen vigorous strokes, such as he used to pull when he rowed number five oar in the University boat.

"Ah! Sir," said the sexton, "it takes two of us to do that job mostly, though I have done it myself scores of times. You would be a good ringer with practice. Practice makes perfect. No man can do anything without it, be he who he may."

Halliday was not insensible to the compliment, but could no longer refrain from giving vent to what was upon his mind, and as soon as he had recovered his breath began as follows:—

"You know I don't like this smoking and drinking in the belfry. Far be it from me to judge a man because he thinks differently from myself, but surely we ought to remember that we are in the house of God here as much as if we were in the church below, and that we are doing His service when we are ringing. Surely it is a sin to behave here as if we were sitting in the tap-room of an inn. It is a sin for me, at any rate, even if it is not a sin for you, and I cannot be one of your party, while I think so. But apart from the question of right and wrong, don't you think it is worth while to deny ourselves some little comforts and pleasures for the sake of having things done decently and reverently here? When you come into my house you take off your hats, and stand still till I ask you to be seated, and I do the same if I go into your houses. Why do you behave here as if you were in your own club-room? Then this place is more like an old lumber-room than what a belfry should be. Hundreds of pounds have been spent upon the church, inside and out, to make it fit for God's service, but the belfry remains just as it was when serious people were more in the habit of attending chapels and methodist meetings than their parish church. I am very fond of ringing, and should like nothing better than to take a rope with you sometimes, but not unless I see a change here."

While Halliday was speaking the rest of the band entered the belfry, and when he ceased one of the young men deliberately filled a pipe and lighted it at a tallow dip, which was wasting a portion of its substance upon the floor. His example was followed by another, who asserted his independence by taking a pull at the stone bottle. Presently the youth, who had just lighted his pipe, began to speak, while he gazed out of the window as though he were addressing his remarks to space:

"I've heard," he said, "that the belfry a'int no part of the church, leastways not for pupposes o' public worship. When poor old Tom Shingles hanged his self at Plumstead to the rope of the fourth, what he used always to ring, parson wanted to have the Bishop down to consecrate the church, but lawyer Jackson said, no, 'cause the belfry war'nt no part of the church. But you mar'nt hang yourself inside the church, do the Bishop'll have to consecrate it. That's what lawyer Jackson said."

Halliday answered hotly, "It's not a question of ecclesiastical law. It's a question of right feeling and reverent behaviour."

There was an awkward pause for a few moments, and then the sexton took upon himself to reply for the ringers.

"Well, Sir, you know best, no doubt. We are all uneducated men, as you may say, and it is not for us to teach our betters. I should like to see the belfry made more comfortable myself, but you see, Sir, the churchwardens are against spending money here, and want everything to come out of the bell-box, and there's not much to divide at Christmas, as it is, or for an outing in the summer, or a supper, or anything. But we should'nt like not to be able to have our pipes and a drop of beer here. That has always been so time out of mind, and there a'nt no public within half a mile, and to my thinking a man had better have his share of a gallon here, and no more to be had when it is done, than sit at the 'George' calling for half pints till he can't see. That's how we looks at it. And begging your pardon, Sir, the parson don't find no fault with us. Why at our supper last Christmas, says he, 'Thank God! the ringers has always been steady men.' That's what I always look to when I get young hands to join, young men that will do us credit. None of your drinking swearing lot that may be as clever as you please, but bring disgrace upon the church by their goings on. There may be some of that sort elsewhere, but you won't find 'em among the ringers."

A murmur of approval followed this speech. Halliday felt that he had made no impression, and had no desire to continue the argument.

"Good night to you all," he said; "I hope we shall be of one mind about these things some day."

"Good night, Sir, and we are always glad to see you when you please to look in upon us, I'm sure. Come boys, let's go for 350 of Grandsire Triples."

As Halliday left the churchyard his spirit sank within him, and the sweet music of the bells had no charm for him to-night.

"What is personal influence," he asked "himself, and why have I so little of it? The popular parson, indeed! fit to shine at a tea-party, and good for nothing else. These men mind me no more than if I were a schoolboy. They don't take the trouble to quarrel with me, but as for moving them, I might as well talk to the hills. Old Thorpe is a duffer, but they do mind him. Perhaps I shall learn how to do it in time. But, then, there's Miss Cremer. How does she manage to make people work for her in her own way? She has been here no longer than I have, and the school is so changed you wouldn't know it for the same place."

At this point in his soliloquy he perceived a stile on his left from which a path diverged over the fields to a farm-house. He stood for a moment hesitating, looked at his watch, and then, vaulting over the stile, proceeded with a brisker step and more cheerful countenance in the direction which his last thoughts suggested. Arrived at the farm, he asked for Miss Cremer, who in fact lodged there. She was sitting in the parlour with Mrs. Mangles, the farmer's wife, and was giving a lesson to her pupil teacher, Rosa Mangles, a bright-eyed girl of sixteen. Halliday at once stated his business, which was to ascertain if Miss Cremer would undertake the management of the choir, and play the organ, under the circumstances which he explained. Mrs. Mangles, who was busy knitting, observed that Emily jumped at the idea, though with habitual caution she asked for time to think over the proposal. She was not afraid of the additional work, and had been used to play the organ, though she was out of practice now. She added with a smile that she hoped she might be able to do as well as the sexton with the hurdy-gurdy. The management of the choir was rather a more serious undertaking, and would perhaps oblige her to give up the Sunday school. Still she would like to try it, if certain persons retired for good and all.

"You see, Sir," Mrs. Mangles interposed in support of this condition, "it would'nt be right for Miss Cremer to take up the singing if those parties were allowed to come back again. Dr. Thorpe doesn't hear half what we do, or he wouldn't have put up with their goings on as long as he has. When he asked Miss Cremer to join the choir a year ago, I said to her, 'My dear, don't you have anything to do with them.'"

So it was agreed that Miss Cremer would try to make the new duties fit in with her other engagements, which were already sufficiently numerous and burdensome. And then there was a pause in the conversation, and the time seemed to have come for Halliday to take up his hat and go, while Miss Cremer was hoping that he would do so before her conscience forbade her to describe the present hour in her diary as one devoted to the instruction of her pupil-teacher. All at once the ladies were startled by their visitor asking in a tone of suppressed emotion, "Tell me, Miss Cremer, how is it that you can always persuade people to do what you think they should?"

Mrs. Mangles looked up sharply from her knitting, and the little maid was all agog, being reminded of a scene in a delightful story she was reading in the Family Friend. Emily, who was for the moment taken aback by this strange appeal, blushed slightly, and replied, "Oh! indeed, Mr. Halliday, you are altogether mistaken about me. I wish I could get half the things done that I attempt. But I suppose we all think more of our failures than of our successes."

"You see, Mrs. Mangles," continued Halliday, who was now uncomfortably conscious of having betrayed his sentiments towards the young lady, and tried to get out of it by exaggerating the importance of his subject, "you see, I am so vexed that I cannot get the ringers to take a higher view of their duties." And then he proceeded to describe what had just occurred in the belfry.

"Well, Sir," said Mrs. Mangles, "we are old-fashioned people here, and are slow to take to new ways, good or bad. To be sure it would be much more consistent to have things nice and orderly, as you wish. You should see the belfry at Plumstead, where I lived before I married. I went to the dedication service two years ago. There's pictures of David and Miriam on the walls as large as life, playing the harp and the cymbals, and gas-light in the middle, and the new bell-ropes tied up to it, so gay. Dear me! it was different there when I was a girl. But Mr. Compass thinks of nothing but spending money upon the church, and daily services, and incense, and I don't know what all. It's a pity, poor man, he don't get married. People don't like these extreme ways, and a good wife would be a blessing to him and to the parish."

Here Mrs. Mangles' eyes wandered almost inadvertently towards Emily Cremer, who frowned and began to search for Kamschkata in a School Atlas.

Now this Mr. Compass was an ultra-ritualist, and having a good living and some private fortune spent large sums every year upon the gorgeous and excessive ornamentations of his church. His attainments were of a high order, especially in ecclesiastical history and cognate subjects, but somehow they did not much impress his parishioners, who thought him rather mad, while they loved him for his charity and earnest piety. Among other eccentricities he had a nervous dread of any familiarity with the fair sex—in a social way that is—for this peculiarity did not appear when he was on duty. It was however when he was acting in an official capacity and off his guard that his fate overtook him. As Diocesan Inspector he had occasion to visit the Wonford school, and though his conversations with Emily Cremer were few and far between, and on business only, he fell over head and ears in love, and henceforth thought of nothing else night and day, with the result of a radical change in his opinions upon the question of the celibacy of the clergy. But we must return to the farm-house.

At this moment Mr. Mangles entered the room and joined in the talk about the ringers. "Ah! Sir, many a pint have I drunk in that belfry. That was when father was alive. Never had time for ringing since I had the farm in my own hands. I used to send down a gallon of the best ale on practice nights, and I'd say, 'Now boys, let's go for a quarter-peal, and if we don't get it Bill Button shall carry the drink home again.' And poor old Bill would say, 'I'll carry the drink home fast enough, and come for the bottle to-morrow morning.' Then the others would say 'you'll never get home with that load alone. Master Mangles brews too strong. We'll give you a help.' But, dear me, Sir, there's nothing of that sort now. Sexton keeps too tight a hand over them for that. They get their allowance, and not a drop more."

"Oh! I think it is all very wrong," said Mr. Halliday severely, "and I only wish I knew how to get people to take a more serious view of the question. What is your opinion, Miss Cremer?"

"Oh! I quite agree with you, I think. Still it seems to be more a matter of custom than of right and wrong, is it not? If there were real wickedness in the case I suppose we should all be indignant, and good honest men like the sexton would be on our side. Still, I am sure you are right. Now if the belfry were properly furnished perhaps the ringers would come to feel as if they were in the church without anyone saying a word to them. And perhaps we might get some of them to join the choir."

"Well that would be a new thing in Wonford," said Mrs. Mangles with a laugh, "the singers and ringers are always cat and dog here. You may be able to make them friends, my dear, but I'm sure no one else can."

"Oh, what nonsense! I can't believe that such a silly feud will go on for ever. At any rate I will try to get some of them to join, if I have anything to do with the choir. Skinner sang 'It's my delight of a shiny night,' so well at the Harvest Home, and Harry Mason plays the violin as if he had a taste for music, and very likely he has a voice."

A fortnight afterwards Miss Cremer, walking home from the church, where she had been practising on the organ, met Skinner and Mason on their way to the belfry. She stopped them and asked if they would join the choir, and help her to make up the required number. "You can sing, Skinner, I know," she said, "because I have heard you, and I fell sure that you could if you tried, Mason."

The young men looked at each other and laughed, "Oh yes, he can sing, Miss," said Skinner, "but he's so timid he durstn't open his mouth not to save his life, leastways not in public."

"You must not mind that," Miss Cremer said, "I know the feeling very well. When first I used to teach in school I was so miserable that I could not sleep at night. But you soon get over it. And I'm sure that anyone who can risk his life, as you did to pick up that poor child under the waggon, is not afraid of hearing his own voice."

Mason blushed at the compliment, and looked uncomfortable. "People would think it very queer to see us among the singers, Miss," he said, "they hate us and we hate them, and we shall never agree together."

But the discussion did not last long. How could these young fellows resist the blandishments of the siren? When they told their friends in the belfry of the invitation to join the choir, they were well roasted for their softness, but Skinner was an obstinate fellow, and chaffing him only put his back up. As for Mason he always followed Skinner, so the first step towards belfry reform was taken when Miss Cremer became organist and choir-leader. Acting under the same inspiration the curate got up a subscription for re-hanging the bells and furnishing the belfry. Other changes followed. Soon the ringers joined the Diocesan Guild, and had to conform to stricter rules of behaviour, while about the same time a parish club was established near the church, where they could sit by the fire and drink a glass of beer with greater comfort than in the belfry. Dr. Thorpe did not throw so much cold water upon these schemes as might have been expected, and as soon as they were carried out he accepted them heartily, and with gratitude to the promoters, that is to say, to the curate and the schoolmistress.

Something else happened which was more surprising to Dr. Thorpe than to Mrs. Mangles. Bachelors and spinsters are always unconsciously throwing out invisible feelers which are apt to become entangled and cannot be separated without a painful wrench. The school and the choir were departments of parish work which the Rector made over to his curate, and Halliday depended so much upon Miss Cremer's advice in parish politics that at last the psychological moment arrived, when, to use the favourite expression of the Eastern storyteller, their four eyes met. Soon afterwards everyone knew that they were engaged, and would be married as soon as Halliday could get a living. People said that Miss Cremer might have done much better for herself, and that this engagement was the only indiscretion she had ever been guilty of. But for once the gossips were wrong. The Vicar of Plumstead repented his errors respecting the celibacy of the clergy in a series of sermons which greatly exercised his congregation, and, finally announced his secession to the Church of Rome and resignation of the living. The Squire of Plumstead, who was also patron, was not a bad sort of man in some respects, but it would have been very hard to find a clergyman after his own heart. He detested extremes, especially extreme ritualism, distrusted enthusiasm, and despised the absence of it. But if he was a pessimist with respect to the clergy, he was susceptible to the influence of grace and beauty. He had once been invited to give away prizes at Wonford School. He came, saw, and was conquered. Halliday he liked personally, but had no great opinion of his judgment.

"I only wish I could make his future wife Vicar of Plumstead," he said, "but as I can't he shall have the living. Halliday would be a first-rate fellow if he were not a parson. But his wife will keep him out of mischief, and the Vicarage will be an house where one can spend an evening again." The Squire's decisions, like those of some colonial judges, were apt to be sounder than the reasons which he gave for them. Writing forty years after the event we may say that he could not have made a better selection for the incumbency of Plumstead.

WORDS OF COUNSEL (No. 1).—If you want to immortalize your name, you will be sure to do so if you carry into practice the following counsel. Always be last to meet for practice or for a peal. If on the road to the church you view from a distance the ringers waiting for you at the church gates, take care to let them see you coming leisurely along, so as to convey to them the impression that the peal will do next week, or the week after. This plan will be ever so much more effective if it should happen in the middle of winter, with rude Boreas at his mightiest.

THE YOUTHS OF ST. ALOYSIUS.

A CHRISTMAS STORY.

For honor, integrity, and good ringing fame,
The "Youths of St. Aloysius" will still bear the name.—Old Song.

FOR a long time great dissatisfaction had been caused at the condition of ringing affairs at the church of St. Aloysius, in the important town of Westerbury, a place which, as every one knows, is more than 100 miles from the metropolis. The causes of such dissatisfaction we will endeavour to explain.

The church of St. Aloysius in Westerbury possessed a very fair ring of ten bells, with a tenor of about 24 cwt. in the approved key of Eb. There were, as in many other peals of similar weight, one or two of them hardly up to the mark, perhaps, but when the whole were heard in Grandsire Caters, with the back bells in the tittum position, and with either the 5th or 6th behind the 9th, the tale they told was charming and effective. The tower which contained them was a noble square structure at the west end of the church, very commodious, and of that description which while ringing conveys pleasure to the ringer who has a little poetry in his soul. High above all worldly haunts the ringers were located, far beyond the din of traffic of every kind—heavenwards. From the bell-chamber windows could be seen the scenery of many miles—a picture not to be forgotten for a while. Not far off majestically flowed the Queen of English rivers, beyond which was a diversified landscape pleasant to behold, and in the distance a chain of hills, the delight of holiday-makers, tourists, and others. From the summit of the tower could be seen a greater expanse of landscape, fair and pleasing to the beholder, in fact, the picture became noted among artists—people who could write R.A. after their names—as a coign of vantage from which to portray a lovely bit of English landscape. There was a tradition that the old sexton of the church, who had recently retired, had been able from the numerous honorariums of the gentlemen of the pencil to well feather his nest, and make every provision for the comfort of his latter days.

Yet amid all this loveliness, and such a picture of peace, happiness, and repose as the church of St. Aloysius and its surroundings presented, there was one discordant element. Not in the bells, for as has been hinted, they were fairly well in tone and tune. Not even in the relationship of the Church authorities—the Vicar and Churchwardens—to the ringers: for this was, like bells that "go" well, everything to be desired. The real fault lay with the ringers themselves, or it would perhaps be more correct to say, a part of them. If a glance is taken at the composition of this ringing company, we shall be able at once to discern the causes of the dissatisfaction already alluded to.

The Society was exactly twelve in number. The man who was recognised as a kind of leader, was worthy of the position in every way. He was of tall and commanding appearance, of good repute as a skilled mechanic, and highly respected by all classes in the neighbourhood as a worthy citizen. At the time we write he would be about 55 years of age, and he had been a ringer from a boy. He was of a slightly taciturn disposition, which those ringers who were not of his set often remarked upon, but to those who acted with him he could unbend and be a very pleasant companion. His ringing abilities were of the best—while ringing exceptionally safe; a talented bob-caller, the envy of smaller folk, and he had done one or two good things in composition. As a double-handed ringer he could hold his own for 100 or more miles around. The name of this gentleman was Durnford. He has been dead some twenty-five years, but his memory is still kept green by those who knew his worth.

The rest of the company may be dealt with briefly. Seven of them were content to be led by Mr. Durnford. They believed in his abilities, and in his integrity and uprightness. They were in fact proud of him as a leader, and supported him in every way. There were men of talent among these seven members, men who would soon have made their names as conductors, but they preferred to let things remain as they were, and felt content in doing so. The remaining four members constituted the militant element of the band, the conduct of either one or the other of them being the chronic disturbing element. They need particularising a little.

Their names were Fryer, Girling, Timberley and Oldcorn. The last-named was a very good ringer, second only to Mr. Durnford, and his force of character always brought him to the front in that gentleman's temporary absence. He had received a fair education, but like many other youths of the present day had been allowed to have his own way at home, consequently he was very uneasy if he could not have his own way everywhere else. The knowledge that he was often guilty of a breach of the fifth commandment was almost public property, and reports were frequently current of family scenes wherein his conduct was outrageous. He was a noisy turbulent character, but a coward at heart. His standing grievance was wanting to be the sole conductor. If he took part in a peal the success of the attempt was problematical unless he was allowed to call it. Had Mr. Durnford delivered the entire leadership or the whole of the bob-calling up to him he would have been content for a time. As that was not to be he lost no opportunity of villifying that gentleman behind his back. This conduct was frequently met with forcible remonstrance by those who respected the leader of the company, but such rebukes only made Oldcorn the more exasperated. Therefore he was for ever in a state of ferment, and the other three above-named were the only ones of the band who would give the slightest ear to his grumblings.

Timberley was also an excellent ringer, but had never called a bob in his life, nor did his ambition lie that way. His failing was a great volubility of tongue, and an entire absence of modesty. There was in fact no trait of decorum in his composition, and his attempts at superlatively good behaviour when occasion seemed to demand it were ludicrous in the extreme. Had he lived in perpetual dread of the action of his own tongue, he might have become a valued and useful member of the Youths of St. Aloysius.

Of the other two—Fryer and Girling—much need not be said. The deportment of the former while at the rope's-end was wretched, and at times was sufficient to convulse an ordinary spectator with laughter. His abilities as a ringer were very poor, while his intelligence and training were of an exceedingly low type. When it is added that he was conceited enough to believe that he was second to no one living or dead in anything, it will be readily understood how the members of the society were handicapped by his presence. He was practically ignored by Mr. Durnford and the others already referred to, and the periods of his connection with those members appeared to be almost spent in a perpetual "Coventry."

Of Girling the less said the better. Had he possessed brains enough he would have made a good Jesuit. He was just the opposite of Timberley as regards garrulity, and very seldom said much. His mode was to grumble and object in a hole-and-corner fashion, and prevail upon the simplicity and weak-headedness of Fryer to promulgate his grievances, for which the latter generally got the credit. Between Girling and Timberley there was no love lost, the latter generally referring to the former by a very uncomplimentary epithet which it is unnecessary to mention. He was regarded by almost all the band as being a treacherous character—a second Uriah Heep—and circumstances were constantly happening which tended to strengthen such an unfavourable impression. Girling was rather painstaking while ringing, but his striking was very defective.

Having sketched the peculiarities, etc., of this company of ringers, wherein the grounds for the uneasiness and dissatisfaction existing in the minds of the parishioners relative to ringing matters are shown, we will now allude to another incident which tended to aggravate, and did in fact increase the animosity the four last-mentioned individuals bore to the leader of the Society.

The Rector of St. Aloysius (Rev. Charles Eccleshall, M.A.), formerly Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford, was extremely proud of his bells. He was aware they were the only peal of ten in Westerbury—the ancient Abbey not far off only possessing eight, of which only five could be rung. The fact of St. Aloysius being the premier church of the neighbourhood with regard to bells gave him no uncommon satisfaction. He belonged to an aristocratic family somewhat; that you could tell by his appearance and manner. But he was beloved by the poor, to whom he gave largely from his private income, and the beneficence of very small value showed forth the kindly feelings of his nature to the best advantage. The Wardens had the same love for the bells as the Rector. They delighted to hear them ring, not only upon the regular practice-nights, but also on Sunday mornings from 8.0 till 9.30, and on the early mornings of the Church's festivals. The Rector however preferred that for Divine Service the front six should be chimed—the soft cadences from such a process appearing to him more appropriate for the purpose. He had taken counsel with Mr. Durnford with respect to the carrying out of this arrangement, which resulted in the decision that that gentleman and another of the company selected by him should attend, one in the morning and the other in the evening on Sundays for that purpose. It may be added that the bells were chimed "on the swing," clogging or clapping of any sort being considered infra dig. by the ringers of the entire neighbourhood.

This chiming was the bête noir of the dissatisfied ones: Oldcorn, Timberley, Fryer and Girling. Led by the first-named they complained loudly because they could not take a share of this work (which it must be said was liberally paid for). They petitioned the Churchwardens about it, who replied that it was the Rector's concern, not theirs; and then the first three waited upon the Rector, who, after a positive but dignified refusal to alter in the least degree the arrangement, rated them soundly upon their many deficiencies and shortcomings. This was adding fuel to their discontent. Next to having everything his own way in the tower and out of it, Oldcorn's desire was to get money. Any kind of employment he would undertake, some kinds of occupation in fact that would be very repugnant to many people, though the work might be honest enough. He and Fryer were upon ringing days the most eager to be employed, in fact the latter had a great penchant for looking up what is known as "ringing-jobs," and could not see the least impropriety in canvassing people for an order to ring; a course of conduct which was always severely commented upon by Mr. Durnford whenever it occurred.

This was the state of affairs in connection with the members of this company at the time our story opens. Many will be inclined to ask, perhaps, why could not these awkward people be sent adrift, so that they would no longer be able to be a thorn in the side of the rest. But the Rector was for the time averse to such a drastic remedy; he hoped they would improve, and though perhaps he did not labour so much as was expected to bring about a happier condition of affairs, yet whenever an opportunity presented itself he would reason with the refractory members, and counsel them to yield to the inevitable.

But it was not in the nature of Oldcorn to yield. He must be master, or peace would never reign. The rules of the Society were not many, but the one dealing with the use of improper language in the tower was particularly severe, and on a recent practice-night Oldcorn had offended against this particular rule. A meeting was held to take the matter into consideration, the Rector presiding, when the offender was severely reprimanded before the whole company, and ordered to absent himself from the tower for three months. Girling called this a "three months' drill," and would jeer Oldcorn about it whenever they met. This was not the way to reconcile Oldcorn to the purgation he had to undergo, it made him more angry than ever, and his feelings were more and more embittered against the leader of the company, till at length he imparted to Girling, not in the most refined language, his wish for revenge of some kind on that gentleman.

Christmas was close at hand. It was the Rector's custom to invite the ringers to dine at the Rectory on the evening of boxing-day. On this occasion he always made them a present of £5, which was divided equally among the members, and also provided for them an excellent repast. As the three months' suspension of Oldcorn had not expired he could not take part in these benefits this year, and that did not improve his temper, especially as the jeerings of Girling did not cease. Timberley was of opinion that the Rector would be inclined to stretch a point in Oldcorn's favour if he was approached, and he volunteered to wait upon him if Oldcorn and Girling would accompany him. This proposal mollified Oldcorn a little, and he consented. But all in vain. The Rector held that Oldcorn's conduct had met with but mild punishment, and told him so; and would not yield in the least. The result also mortified Girling, who had thought that could the Rector be induced to look over Oldcorn's offence, it would be a good slap in the face for Mr. Durnford and his associates. The disappointment was therefore great for him also. And on his way home, after leaving his colleagues, he resolved to sound Oldcorn about "having sat." (as he called it) upon the company, and especially upon the leader.

The following evening he called upon Oldcorn at his lodgings. All the day he had been considering what means could be devised for a full and satisfactory revenge upon Mr. Durnford and other prominent members of the company. Various schemes had presented themselves to his paltry mind, and he at last hit upon one which he thought could be easily carried out. Arrived at Oldcorn's, after a little preliminary talk, he brought up the question of the boxing-day festivity, and after the manner of a snake hissed into Oldcorn's ear that some mode of revenge was within his reach.

"But," said Oldcorn, "there's no use in getting into trouble over it. I don't want to run my head into a noose through losing a dinner and a few shillings."

"There is no necessity," said Girling. "I have thought upon a plan by which we can prevent Durnford attending on Christmas morning, and when it is known he can't be there, and they can only ring nine (for I shall be absent) there will be no alternative but to send for you."

"How can this be brought about; what is your plan?"

"Never mind that, just yet. What do you say to the idea?"

"Why, if it can be done without any danger, I should like to see it done," said Oldcorn; gratified beyond measure at the prospect of receiving a message to attend.

"Very well. Now for my plans. They are going for a quarter-past of Stedman Caters on Christmas morning, in accordance with the Rector's wishes. You know also that we ring on Christmas Eve. When the bells are pulled up in peal that evening, suppose just as they are going to stand, Durnford's bell should go over. Big man though he is he would not be prepared for such an emergency, and the probability is that he would meet with some injury which would prevent him ringing on the following morning."

This knavish proposal Oldcorn for some time could not agree to, but the end to be gained, viz., a request for him to be in his place, and the effect upon the other members of the company by having to ask him to come after all, was too great a victory to be thrust aside. He accordingly yielded to the suggestions of the tempter, after a little further conversation.

In raising the bells in peal, as was their wont at Westerbury, three or four of the company generally adhered to one bell; and Mr. Durnford was one of these. The knowledge of this fact led Girling to determine which bell should be tampered with. There were upon ordinary practice-nights ambitious "youths," not members of the Society, who would sometimes take part in raising the bells in peal, but on ringing seasons such as Christmas and the like, these young people had been looked coldly upon by Timberley and Fryer, and they therefore generally remained away. This also assisted Girling in his project. In consequence therefore of his voluntary, and Oldcorn's enforced absence, there would only be the bare number of ringers required for the ten bells on Christmas Eve, and from experience Girling imagined he could fix upon the exact bell which would be raised in peal by Mr. Durnford.

On the evening preceding Christmas Eve he proceeded to make the necessary arrangements for carrying out his diabolical intention. With cat-like steps he reached the vicinity of the tower, having made his way thereto through the most unfrequented thoroughfares, in order to avoid recognition. It was a bitter cold night, the ground covered with half-thawed snow, with a biting wind. Here he waited the coming of a well-known character—an assistant at a clockmaker's not far off—who somehow or other had earned the sobriquet of "Tommy Pigeon," for what reason this deponent knoweth not. He was the clock-winder to the parish, and it was his duty every Wednesday evening to wind up the church clock. An individual of very moist temperament, he hesitated not to accept a treat from any one, especially on a night like the one alluded to.

After waiting about ten minutes, Girling's vision was gratified by the approach of this worthy. Upon reaching the tower the latter was astonished to find Girling waiting there. "Hullo!" said he, "Lor! who'd a thought of seeing you out such a night as this?"

"Hush, Tommy," answered Girling, "Don't talk too loud. A friend of mine who is anxious to see our bells, asked me to show them to him, and I agreed to meet him here to-night, but he has not come. It's a bitter night, Tommy, suppose before you go up to wind the clock we run down to the 'Wherry' and have something."

"Ah! all right; very acceptable such a night as this," said Tommy, surprised at such an offer coming from Girling, who was looked upon as the incarnation of meanness; "but," he added, "I would not go right down to the 'Wherry,' let's go over to old Ben Spilsbury's at the 'Herefordshire House,' that's close by and they sell a drop of good stuff."

"No, No; we'll go down to the 'Wherry' or the 'Queen Caroline,' because at either of them I may meet my friend who wants to see the bells."

The landlord of the "Herefordshire House," Old Ben Spilsbury, as Tommy Pigeon rather irreverently termed him, was a good old ringer. Gout and other infirmities had prevented him for some years getting up into the tower, but when the ringers visited him he was pleased to take a pair of bells in three courses ("the old chiv") of Triples or Caters in company with them. The inn over whose destinies he presided was a rather small establishment, but very respectable. The old chap was generally to be seen in his place at church on Sunday morning, with his family, and he was regarded as a very worthy inn-keeper. The St. Aloysius ringers frequented his house, as a body, whenever they went to an inn, and this fact being well known to Tommy Pigeon, he wondered why on earth Girling should propose going to such places as either "The Wherry" or the "Queen Caroline," and even the explanation given did not seem to satisfy him all at once. However, the prospect of something warm, whether partaken of at "The Wherry" or anywhere else, and that something being on the cheap, overcame any scruples and silenced any language of amazement which he may have been tempted to express. "The Wherry" being eventually reached, a cosy corner was found, and the clockwinder was soon regaling himself at Girling's cost with that particular liquid which the celebrated Mr. Stiggins rejoiced in, to wit—"rum." The consumption of this compound was evidently as welcome an occupation with Tommy Pigeon as it was with the renowned character just mentioned, for he disposed of glass after glass with great relish, until he got into that happy (?) condition which in the local parlance of Westerbury was called "market pert." In fact so comfortable was he that clockwinding was totally absent from his mind, which had become a perfect blank to everything outside the comfortable apartment in which he was ensconced, and it was not until Girling referred to it that he had the least notion of the object for which he had left home that evening.

"Finish up, Tommy," said Girling at length, "we will be on the move. I'll come up with you and help to wind up."

"Blow going up there to night," replied he, "I'll get up early in the morning. I don't think I could get up in the tower to-night," he added, as they emerged from the tavern.

"Oh yes you can," answered Girling. "If you find you can't, when you get up to the church, I'll go up and wind for you. Let's get away up there and then you can unlock the door for me and wait till I come down."

Girling had cautiously refrained from having more than one glass, at the same time plying his companion with all he wanted, the result of course being the total obfuscation of the poor clockwinder. This was part of Girling's scheme, so that he could offer to do the duty of winding up the clock, which offer was gratefully accepted by Tommy, and Girling at once ascended the tower. Arrived in the clock-room, he felt somewhat nervous, and almost wished he had never proposed what he had come to undertake. He placed the handle in position and began to wind. The monotonous clicking of the ratchet seemed to add to his fear, and he then thought what a fool he had been in not having persuaded Oldcorn to accompany him, and thus take part of the unpleasantness and responsibility of the undertaking. At this juncture he heard a voice from below. In the greatest consternation he jumped down the two or three steps leading to the clock case and hurried on to the tower steps, only to learn however that the voice belonged to Tommy Pigeon, who a few steps from the bottom was shouting to know whether he had finished. He could not trust himself back to the clock, but darted up to the bells to accomplish the object he had at heart. The howling of the wind through the louvers terrified him not a little, but his satanic promptings held him to his purpose, and striking a match he fixed upon one bell from which he removed the slider. Then getting up out of the pit he hurried down to his companion in a frame of mind more easily imagined than described.

"Done it?" said Tommy.

"Yes, it's all right; here's the keys; shall see you again some evening, and we'll have another glass together. Don't say you've seen me. Good night."

The following evening was that of Christmas Eve. Notices had been sent round to every member of the company to be at the tower at eight o'clock p.m. sharp. True to time ten of them were there, only Girling being absent in addition to Oldcorn. As the church gates were being opened, the ringers were joined by a visitor from a neighbouring town. This man, who was familiarly known as Ned Bragg, was a native of Westbury, and had come to spend the Christmas with his friends. He was a very good ringer, a little headstrong at times perhaps, but a very useful man in a company. He was warmly welcomed by Mr. Durnford and all the rest, and invited to come up and have a pull. He had in fact come for that purpose, and hoped to have a rooo or two of Treble Ten, if not a peal, before he returned home.

The ringing-chamber was reached in due course. The churchwardens had recently had the gas laid on in this apartment, and every one almost was giving vent to his sentiments upon such a grand improvement. At length Mr. Durnford, taking a hasty look around, cried "Now my boys, let's have them up; get to work at once and let's get warm." Turning to the visitor he said, "Now Ned, take your old place, there's no one like you to take the bells up; catch hold of the treble."

"Ah, come on, Ned; lay hold, old fellow; it will put us in mind of old times," remarked another of the company.

"Do you recollect," answered Ned, turning to Mr. Durnford while taking off his coat, "when old Misery used to rise the 9th and always get back-rope for sally?"

"Ah," answered Mr. Durnford, smiling; "and the old Brewer used to do the same thing with the tenor, and then go to sleep afterwards, and wake up just as we were going to fall. But come on, my lads, we'll ring first and talk afterwards. Now Jim, pull up the tenor; get to your places, lads. I'll sit down and look on."

"Now," says Ned, looking around, "are you all ready? off we go." And grasping the treble rope by the sally, with the end coiled up neatly in his left hand, he threw part of his weight upon it, and the first three bells, the best bells in the tower except the noble tenor, began at once to "chirrup." Gradually the others came in one after the other, the back bells when at double clapper rolling up behind in a manner very pleasing indeed to the ear. Of our friends who have been mentioned by name in the course of this veracious story only Timberley and Fryer were ringing, the latter being at the 5th, the former at the 9th. The treble man, Ned Bragg, was one of the best at this kind of thing, and a "good rise" was generally the case when he was at the treble. He was also very sharp in detecting a bad blow, and on this occasion Fryer, whose awkward style and attitude has been already mentioned, came in for a share of Ned's attention. "Closer, 5th; can't you hear? Stand to your work like a man, you seem to have no backbone," were amongst his compliments to Fryer, who at one time pulled and at another checked his bell, till before the bells were frame high he appeared much distressed. At last the bells were got up, and when a few good rounds had been rung Ned shouted out "Stand," but the word had hardly been spoken when poor Fryer was on his back—his bell had gone over, and having a short coil at the end twisted round his hand he had been unable to relinquish the rope quick enough. Consequently he had been dashed against the ceiling—not a very high one—and that, together with his fall, had rendered him insensible. As may be supposed great commotion ensued, and Mr. Durnford sent one for water, another for the nearest physician, Dr. Hill, and extracting a quatern bottle from his overcoat pocket, administered brandy to the prostrate man. The doctor soon arrived, and pronounced his opinion that Fryer had sustained concussion of the brain, and advised his immediate removal to the Infirmary. This was not an easy matter, but willing hands were soon at work and an apparatus for lowering him down to the room beneath was soon improvised. He was at once conveyed to the local Infirmary and placed under the best of medical supervision. This sad event threw a gloom over the whole company, and ringing was not resumed that evening. Mr. Durnford and Timberley with others of the company afterwards called at the Infirmary, and were informed that the patient was progressing as well as could be expected, but that some considerable time would elapse before he would recover, even under conditions the most favorable. Mr. Durnford the same evening paid a visit to the wife of Fryer, and in a kindly manner soothed her to bear the ill news. He promised that until her husband was able to work he would collect a sum of money weekly to supply the needs of herself and family. This was faithfully carried out.

Fryer's illness lasted more than six months, but he never came again to ring. He sent in his resignation, and on its being accepted by the company, Mr. Durnford proposed a grant of £5 out of the funds (for the St. Aloysius company was not a poor body) as a kind of solatium for his accident.

Before he retired to rest that evening, Mr. Durnford, who had thought much about the accident, sought out Timberley, and hinted to him his fears that some foul play had been at work. "I was," said he, "among the bells only two nights ago, and everything was all right then. I should be glad if you would accompany me now to the tower so as to be a witness of anything which may be observed out of place. Ned Bragg will also accompany us, in fact he is very likely waiting at the church now."

"Yes, Mr. Durnford, I'll go willingly," said Timberley. "If either Girling or Oldcorn is at the bottom of this, I'll never have anything more to do with them. I'll come at once with you."

They were soon at the tower, where they found Ned awaiting their arrival. All three ascended at once to the bell-chamber, and with the aid of lanterns examined everything around. They found the slider of the 5th out of its place, but nothing else, and there seemed to be no clue to the enigma. "That could not have been moved without hands," said Timberley. "No, but the question is whose hands were they?" said the leader. "Where's Ned," added he, looking around and not beholding him. "Ned, where are you?"

"Down here," answered Ned; "in the clock room. Just come down and see what you make of this."

They went down, and Ned pointed out to them that the handle which was fixed upon the windlass to wind up the clock had not been removed after winding, as it ought to have been.

"That's old Tommy Pigeon," said Timberley. "But that's no matter, leaving that handle on would'n't cause the slider of the 5th to be removed."

Mr. Durnford appeared wrapt in deep thought. "Well," said he at last, "we have seen nothing out of place but this handle, and we had better think it over. Leave it all to me, Timberley, and I will consider what had better be done. I shall see the rector to-morrow just after service, and I'll mention the matter to him. I suppose we shall see you in the morning, Ned?"

"Yes, I shall come. The usual Christmas morning time, I suppose, 7 o'clock?"

"Yes; in all probability we shall only be just enough with you. We know nothing about Girling; do you Timberley?"

"No; Mr. Durnford. I have very little to do with him, he's one of those quiet uns I can't bear the look of. I like a man to look you straight in the face, but Girling never does that, and these quiet people are never to be depended on."

Wishing one another "good night," they soon afterwards went their way; the leader to ponder over this untoward incident, and to tax his brains to discover by whom such a heinous piece of business was effected, and how the rector would receive the unwelcome intelligence. In the end he determined to call upon the clockwinder on his way to the church the following morning.

Tommy Pigeon had been keeping Christmas the overnight, and thus when Mr. Durnford called in the morning he was fast asleep in bed. Being aroused, and hurried into the presence of that gentleman, it was some time before he could understand the nature of his interrogatories.

"When did you last wind up, Tommy?" said he.

Tommy scratched his head, and after hesitating a long time, said "Pon my soul, Mr. Durnford, I dont recollect. I think it was on Crismas eve."

"Think again, Tommy. We were ringing on Christmas-eve you know."

"Ah I 'member now. It was the evening before. I recollect it because I went to see some friends the same evening."

"How came you to leave the handle on the windlass after winding up?"

"Me leave the handle on! Me. I never done such a thing in my life. Lor! how can you imagine such a thing, Mr. Durnford?"

"Now Tommy, listen. Last night we went up into the tower, three of us, and found the handle left upon the windlass. I think the rector will want to know how that came to be left, and I would advise you as a friend to make a clean breast of it to him when he asks you about it. An accident has happened to one of the ringers through some one removing a slider, and upon examination being made we also find the winding handle left on. I suppose no one will accuse you of entering the bell-chamber, but you will be sure to be called upon for an explanation, and I would strongly advise you as a friend not to equivocate in the least in any statement you may make."

The poor fellow trembled frightfully at the prospect of being called before the rector. With tearful eyes he implored his auditor to save him from being "carpetted," as he called it, and he would tell him all he knew. Mr. Durnford promised he would do his best to shield him unless he was the actual culprit. The story of the visit to "The Wherry" upon the invitation of Girling, and how Girling wound up the clock for him that evening was then related with minute exactness, for Tommy was an adept in describing his own experiences.

"That will do," said Mr. Durnford, who at once grasped the facts of the case. "I'll stand by you as well as I can, but you must not forget that had you disregarded Girling's invitation to drink and attended to your duty, the accident would not have happened. I shall have to see the rector this morning and tell him everything. It is evident that Girling, with malicious intent, removed that slider after he had wound up the clock, and his object in meeting you that evening was to gain admission into the tower for that very purpose. The handle, he forgot to take off after he had finished winding up the clock, and that has led to the discovery of the offender. Good morning, Tommy."

Mr. Durnford pursued his way to the tower and arrived just in time for ringing. The quarter-peal of Stedman Caters was knocked off like clock-work, Ned Bragg making one of the band. After the bells were brought round, he informed the company of his visit to the clockwinder, and Tommy's story of the matter. The company seemed to fathom the whole of the affair immediately. It appeared plain to them that Girling, calculating on the probability that Mr. Durnford would rise the 5th bell in peal, as he generally did, had intended that that gentleman should be the one rendered incapable of ringing during the Christmas at least. We have seen how that was frustrated and who became the victim instead. One of the band stated that he had come across Oldcorn the previous evening and had informed him of the accident, and he (Oldcorn) appeared to be horrified by it.

After service Mr. Durnford waited upon the rector in the vestry and told him everything, and as may be expected he was very indignant. He decided, however, to take no steps in the matter for a day or two, then to send for Girling and demand an explanation from him. This course was followed, but Girling being apprised by Oldcorn of what had happened, decamped, and when the rector sent for him he was informed that he had left the neighbourhood two days before. Afraid of the consequences which were likely to ensue to himself, he had suddenly left without informing any one, and left no trace behind him. A few enquiries were made, and the police were on the alert, but an improvement taking place in the condition of Fryer, it was not considered necessary to make any further search. And Girling's own conduct, it was thought, would bring down sufficient mental punishment upon him.

Our tale now draws to its conclusion, and it only remains for us to dismiss the other characters who have been introduced to our readers. We have related what became of Fryer, and of Girling nothing more was ever heard. Oldcorn soon after fell into dissolute habits, and was in course of time expelled from the society. He got into very bad company, and his mode of life made such havoc with his constitution that he died after a very sharp attack of rheumatic fever, not however till he had confessed Girling's plot to Mr. Durnford, and had received the Holy Sacrament at the hands of the rector. Awed by the results of Girling's project, especially as Oldcorn had confessed that it was intended it should fall upon the leader, Timberley's behaviour improved, and before long he became a useful member of the society, and loyal to its regulations. The clockwinder was suspended entirely, the rector saying that his offence was only one degree less than Girling's, and he ended his days in the poorhouse.

A decade of years followed in which the Youths of St. Aloysius flourished. They came to be respected more and more by the good folk of Westerbury, and they achieved some excellent performances under the conductorship of their leader, and others of the company. The practices were regular and well attended, and the members vied with each other in everything which had for its object the general good.

The bells of St. Aloysius still ring on, though Mr. Durnford and many of the company who lived at the time of our story, and the beloved rector, are gone to their rest. Other incumbents have succeeded who took no interest in the bells or ringers, but it is cheering to know that the present rector is not one of them. Many will read these lines at the very time when the grand old bells of St. Aloysius will be ringing for this blessed Christmas festival, and wonder, perhaps, in what condition the society is at the present day. The elder members of the company, who are still left, will no doubt discern one at least of the characters here portrayed. Ned Bragg is still in the land of the living, and a few others also who were colleagues of Mr. Durnford. They may be well advised to take a lesson from the past. This season is a special one for them to seek peace and ensue it. Nearly nineteen centuries have passed since the words formerly to be seen on the east window of the church of St. Aloysius were spoken: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill towards men." Brethren of St. Aloysius especially, and brethren of the Exercise throughout the world generally, may you for ever enjoy this peace; and at this season also a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year: and "many of 'em."

A PEAL IN A NEW METHOD.

The members of a certain Society, which it is needless to definitely name, some time ago agreed to attempt a peal. They had tried once or twice before to ring one, but as they were about a new method termed "Petticoat Lane Delight," invented by one of their own members, more practice was required than was needed for such simple methods as Double Norwich or Superlative. They had practised this new method close upon two years, and rang several long touches, so that the unsuccessful attempts which they had made for a peal could only be attributed to those numerous accidents which are always militating against success in these affairs.

I have given the name of this powerful method. This was determined upon at a final meeting of the members of the Society, and only agreed to after a very long discussion. Each member came prepared with twelve different proposals, and the inventor of the method with twenty-four. In the end, after six adjournments, the tenor-man's resolution that it be called by the above name was carried.

To describe the principle of this method would take more space than I am afraid Mr. Editor would allow. In fact the method had no principle at all, and very little interest. (That must not be regarded as a joke, by no means.) There was no bell in the hunt, no dodging, and no place-making. The tenor was the treble, and the treble was something else; but what it was I am sorry to say has entirely escaped my memory. It had no bobs or singles. These were dispensed with in order to make the bob-caller's duties less difficult. And certainly when a peal can be rung without it is quite superfluous to have them. That is merely my own opinion. There are some I know will contest this, as they would anything else.

I have said there was no "hunt" in this method. Nor was there; though when a peal was proposed a fox had often been caught. Dodging was entirely tabooed, because the term was said to indicate evasion and artfulness. (I believe this conclusion was arrived at through a recollection of the celebrated Mr. Dawkins, in Oliver Twist.) Why place-making was absent I can't conceive, but no doubt there were equally good reasons, and that is all the explanation I can give of the method for the present.

The last attempt for a peal in this method by the Society was made on the 5th of November last past. It was lost on that occasion through the conductor not ringing the observation-bell (the method having no bobs or singles required a lot of observations). When they broke down there was not the usual recrimination scene which is so often the case after a collapse. One man did not say to another "You missed 3rds place," "You ought to have been in the hunt," or "You missed a dodge;" for there was nothing of this kind in the method, as I have before explained. This method ought to become popular, if on this account alone.

One thing about this ought to be mentioned, though. This company were all deaf and dumb, hence their anxiety to obtain the peal. They looked forward so eagerly to see it recorded in "THE BELL NEWS." The next attempt for this peal is to be made on Christmas morning. But the tower being so close to the church they intend to lash the clappers of the bells fast, so that not a blow will be heard. This is thought to be a very consistent arrangement, and quite in harmony with the surroundings.

Till you hear from me again my dear readers, Adieu! and wishing you all the best compliments of the season, I am, yours very campanulologically,

JOSHUA.
